THE PREFACE,

WHEREIN

The Authors of theſe ANNOTATIONS enſuing, preſent ſome Important Conſiderations of the happy Progreſs of the Goſpel in this Kingdome; together with an account of their undertaking and performance of this Service for the clearing of the Sacred Text, to the underſtanding of the Chriſtian READER.

WE cannot but obſerve and take it to be our duties to acknowledge, if we make any good uſe of our reaſon, (as men) or of our Religion, (as Chriſtians) that for the beſt means of Holy information of our minds, and the ſalvation of our ſouls, and for the moſt free and frequent uſe of ſuch means (beſides many comfortable Accommodations for our bodily welfare) no people of the world hath had more cauſe, to ſet up all memorials of gratitude for the goodneſs of God unto them, than we of this Iſland, who have (for a long time) been as the Inhabitants of the Mountain of the Lord of Hoſts, where he hath made unto his people, a feaſt of fat things, a feaſt of wine * on the Lees, of fat things full of marrow, of wine * on the Lees well refined: as the Prophet Iſaiah 25. verſe 6. elegantly ſetteth forth the fulneſs and delicacy of his Spiritual proviſion.

* Or drawn from the Lees.

For ſince the reformation of Religion, almoſt miraculouſly wrought, (though we profeſs to believe Gods Word, without the pawn of a miracle to make it good) for it prevailed againſt mighty Engines (all the power and policy of the Popiſh party) by weake inſtruments, a (child and a woman) and being begun by him, and (after a red Parentheſis of perſecution) by her brought on toward perfection; toward it, we may ſay, not to it, for God reſerved further advances and nearer approaches to that fair marke; for after-times we have ſince then, (we ſay) enjoyed, a ſuperabundant meaſure of Sacred and ſecular bleſſings, above other Nations, and have had our greateſt ſhare of the beſt of both.*

For what (for the one ſort) more excellent than the Goſpel of Peace, the power and purity of the means of Grace? And what better for the other, than ſuch and ſo long tranquility of Church and State, and plenty withall, (as untill of late) have been continued to us: which if we have not duely valued in their fruition, (while we had them) God may moſt juſtly (as he hath begun to do) make us to know their price by their loſs; and ſo upon our forfeiture of ſo great favours, the ſaying of the Wiſe man may be wofully verified on our part, He that encreaſeth knowledge, encreaſeth ſorrow, Eccleſ. 1. 18.

That ſuch infelicity may not befall, or fallen upon us, may neither encreaſe nor continue, until it quite overwhelm us, it will much concern us, by a ſerious and conſiderate review of the times paſt, to note by what ſteps, and degrees, the good providence of God hath called and conducted us, out of darkneſs into his marvellous light, 1 Pet. 2. 19. which our eyes have ſeen, and to the happy ſtate (for ſpiritual proficiency) which we have had, above that which any of our forefathers have known in former times. For though God being Omnipotent, could do all things as perfectly at once, as in the duration and ſucceſſion of many Ages: yet he is pleaſed, for the moſt part, by gradual acceſſes, to promote his own operations, to the period of their perfect accompliſhment.

Wee ſee this in the work of the viſible World, which he could have furniſhed and finiſhed, ſo ſoon as he began it, the firſt minute of the firſt day, aſwell as the laſt of the ſixth: but he firſt made a groſs darke and confuſed maſs of general matter, out of which, day by day, he drew the ſeverall parts of the enſuing dayes works. He could have made both Light and Firmament, and Sun and Moon, and Stars, and all the reſt in one inſtant; but that we might not with too quicke and tranſient Cogitations paſs over his works, he tooke one day for the Light without the Sun, and another for the Firmament, and another for the garniſhing of it, with thoſe glorious Lamps, which ſhine into the World by day or by night; and man the beſt of his Creatures (diſcernable by ſenſe) he reſerved for the laſt day, and for the laſt work of that day; and then (when man was made) what he had called but good before, he called (in concluſion) very good, Gen. 1. 31, and there ſetting up his reſt, he made no more.

Anſwerabl: hereunto, hath been the progreſſe of his hand-maid, Natures working, from that day to this; as we may trace her in her foot-ſteps, from the ſeed-time of conception of all her children (of what kind ſoever) to the harveſt of their ripe and perfect growth; and we may obſerve the like gradual proceeding towards ſpiritual perfection (to which what we have now ſaid, ſerveth but by way of manuduction:) for evidence whereof, many particulars of moment might be propoſed, but we will ſingle out a few ſuch, as are moſt proper and pertinent to the matter in hand, and thoſe we will reduce to theſe ſeverall heads.

1. The firſt concerning Preachers, and preaching of the Word, and the adminiſtration of the Sacrament of the Lords Supper.

2. The ſecond, the Tranſlation of the Scriptures into a tongue underſtood by vulgar people.

3. The third, of the neceſſity and utility of annotations, for expoſition of difficult places.

4. The fourth, eſpecial conſideration upon ſome Notes and Annotations in particular.

For the firſt, in the beginning of the reign of that renowned Queen, (whoſe zeal and conſtancy to true Religion, hath embalmed her name to perpetual memory) when the abomination of the Maſſe was baniſhed out of the Church, and Idols were demoliſhed rather by general Decree, than by general execution of what was decreed; (for through the doting of ſuperſtitious indulgence, or through the negligence and unfaithfulneſſe of inferiour Officers, ſome of them were reprieved from ruine, and (as it now appeareth) reſerved for a time of more exact reformation) and Idol-Shepherds removed from the Sheep-fold of Chriſt, and others to be choſen for the over-ſight of their Paſtoral charges: there were then ſo few able and Orthodox Divines to be found (in the Land) that there was a neceſſity of admitting many ſuch into the Miniſtery, as were neither Preachers, (by profeſſion) nor Schollers, (by education) but meer reading Proteſtants, ſincerely affected to the truth of Religion.

It may probably be deemed, that there were then ſcarce ſo many well qualified Paſtours throughout this whole land, as might at ſome times of late have been numbred in this City of London. It was then as rare a thing to find a Pulpit with a clapper (to uſe the phraſe of [a] Father Latimers Sermons) as a Bell without one. For the Pulpit (in many places) was as ſeldome uſed, by the unpreaching Clergy of thoſe times, as the Sanctum Sanctorum, by the high Prieſts of old; and they might be called high Prieſts in conformity to them, by reaſon of their locall exaltation of themſelves (about once a year) above the heads of the People.

In reſpect of whoſe famine of the word; ſome thought themſelves provided for (in a competent meaſure) if after many weeks faſting, they might be ſure of a Sermon once a quarter. After that, their proviſion was amended, and an augmentation of Sermons made, (from four to twelve a year) by an order from the higher powers, which more commended the care of the Governors, than the obſervation of it, did the zeal of the Miniſters, who failed of performance, for (that conſtitution notwithſtanding) the people in many places were not ſo conſtantly ſupplyed, with one Sermon every moneth, as in moſt they are now, with two Sermons every Sabbath throughout the whole year: Beſides divers ſetled Lectures, Exerciſes, and other occaſional preachings in the week dayes.

So that in our dayes we ſee God hath ſpoken the word, and great is the company of preachers, (as [b] one Tranſlation rendreth it,) Pſal. 68. 11. and Preachers ſpeak the word, and great is the multitude of Sermons: which have both abounded in number, and alſo excelled in goodneſſe in our Church, ſince we have been removed from the Tyranicall reign of that Arch-hypocrite of Rome, who uſurping the title of principal Biſhop, Paſtor, and Doctor of the Church, doth ſeldom or never perform the principal Office of a Biſhop, Paſtor, and Doctor of the Church: which is (as the Pſeudo-Synod of [c] Trent is forced to confeſſe) to preach the Word of God unto the people.

[c] Concil. Triden. Seſſ. 24. c. 4.

In this reſpect how our ſtock of Spiritual treaſure is increaſed, the Word of God dwelling ſo richly, as the Apoſtle requireth, Coloſ. 3. 16. (both in us, and among us) how much our portion is better, by plenty of the ſincere milk of the Word for the Babes of Chriſt, and ſtrong meat for ſuch as are of more maturity of age, and Judgment; How much more comfortable our Engliſh Communion is, than their Latin Maſſe; and our Lords Table better furniſhed than their Altar, (though gorgeouſly ſet out with gilded or golden pictures) with Bread being ſolid, ſubſtantiall, not meerly ſuperficiall, as their leafe-like wafer; our Wine pure and generous (not embaſed as theirs) with mixture of water, and copiouſly poured out to all the people, (according to the Lords liberal allowance to the communion of Saints) not ſacrilegiouſly withheld; (as an eſpecial priviledge of the Prieſts) how much our condition is amended by ſuch particulars, we may clearly perceive, and ſhould never forget, with thankful hearts, & affectionate expreſſions to acknowledg.

Our ſecond conſideration may be ſet on the Tranſlation of the Scripture into a Language underſtood by unlearned people, that they might ſearch the Scriptures, and by ſearching of them might find in them, what is moſt to be deſired, eternal life; for they are Books not for the Clergy onely, (though for them eſpecially) for which cauſe ſome Councels have decreed, [d] That Biſhops ſhould have them ſo much in their eyes, as not to look beſides them in any books of Gentile learning: And that they and the [e] Gueſts at their Tables ſhould have them at their eares, ſome reading to them while they ſate at meat to prevent idle tales, and to miniſter occaſion of godly diſcourſe; (as [f] Nepotian was wont to do) but for the common people likewiſe, yea for women as well as men: otherwiſe Saint John would not have written one of his [g] Epiſtles to one of that Sex under the title of an elect Lady.

By his example, did that zealous and learned Doctor Hierome write many Epiſtles unto women, wherein he exhorted ſome of them to ſuch a ſetled and ſerious reading of thoſe Sacred writings, as not to lay them down out of their hands, [h] untill being overcome with ſleep, and not able any longer to hold up their heads, they bowed them down, as it were, to ſalute the leaves, below them with a kiſſe: and he gave advice to mothers ([i] before their maids) to catechiſe their daughters, out of the Scriptures, tures, and to ſet them to learn by heart a [k] portion of them for a daily task.

In this Sacred exerciſe, they that with devotion and diligence beſtow themſelves, (beſides many other Spirituall advantages) may find a perfect direction, to their conſciences, for all duties, and infallible reſolution of all doubts in caſes which concern them; yea an unſpeakable conſolation in all croſſes that befall them: whereof Luther, doubtleſſe had a moſt intenſive ſenſe and apprehenſion, when he ſaid, he would not live in Paradiſe without the Word, but with that [l] it vvould be easie for a man to live even in hell it ſelf.

Which words, though they import an hyperbolical emphaſis, or a ſtrong impreſſion of his vehement and vigorous ſpirit, yet without either figure of Rhetorick or paſſion of mind, it may well be ſaid of every Book of the Divine Oracles, ſeverally taken (how much more of the whole Bible which contains them all?) that it is a Iewell of an ineſtimable price, in their account to whom it is propoſed, not locked up in the Cabinet of a ſtrange Tongue, but laid open to evident view, in a true and intelligible Tranſlation thereof.

Not without great cauſe then hath it been held ſo great an happineſs to the Church of God, for children to read their Fathers minde, and good will towards them in their Mother Tongue; that a ſolemne Feaſt hath been ſet up, and celebrated for it; ſuch an one was that of the Germane Proteſtants, which they made for a gratefull remembrance of the Dutch Tranſlation of the Bible among them: for which, though ſome of their Popiſh oppoſites [m] derided them, yet the wiſer ſort of that ſeducing Sect did not diſdain (in part) to follow them, when (not without ſome contradiction to their own received Principles, and former Practiſe) they tranſlated, firſt the New Teſtament at Rhemes, and ſince the Old at Dovvay in the Engliſh Tongue.

It was no doubt their new deliverance from the blindneſſe and bondage of the Romiſh Religion, that made thoſe pious Proteſtants ſo much to take to heart that Light and Liberty. And if our longer enjoyment of a greater Light, have not dazeled our eyes, and our greater Liberty have not made us Libertines, and looſened the bond of gratitude to God, (our moſt gracious Benefactour) we will hold it our part, to entertain the apprehenſion of the like favour, with the like thankefull affections, though our expreſſes proceed not to ſuch a publike ſolemnity. And we muſt conſider it not onely in kinde, but in reſpect of [*] continuance, and degree of excellency; for the Bleſſing; is ſo much ~~more precious as it draweth nearer to perfection~~ in our dayes: whereof we ſhall preſent ~~the Reader with a breife~~ Advertiſement, obſerving the order of the time, and degree of increaſe of ſupernatural light, ſhining more and more, (through the ſeverall Tranſlations of the Word of God, into the language of our Countrey) unto the perfect day, of the preſent Age wherein we live.

The firſt good news of this kind, which came to the notice of the Inhabitants of this Iſland, was in the year 700. or as ſome write, 709. when [n] Adelme Biſhop of [*] Sherborne (for both Biſhopricks and Archbiſhopricks were [o] anciently otherwiſe divided and entituled than now they are) tranſlated the Pſalmes of David, into the Saxon Language, which is thought to have ſuffered ſhipwracke by the Tempeſt of the [p] Daniſh Wars, wherein the Churches (which were the learned Treaſuries, or publique Libraries of thoſe times) were [q] burned.

About twenty, or at the moſt thirty years after, Beda tranſlated the whole Bible into the ſame Tongue, as Maſter Fox obſerveth in his Epiſtle Dedicatory, to Queen Elizabeth, ſet before his Tranſlation of the Goſpels out of the Saxon Tongue, Printed Anno 1571. Yet [*] elſewhere he maketh mention onely of the Tranſlation of S. Johns Goſpel as the laſt labour of his life.

After Beda about two hundred years, King [r] Alfred undertooke the Tranſlation of the Pſalter, happily, either to ſupply the loſſe of that of Adelme, or to better that of Beda's: for [*] Beda's Tranſlation was ſimple without any curioſity of Stile; and of Alfred, it is ſaid of him, that [ſ] none of the Engliſh vvas more acute in conceit, or more elegant in expreſſion than he was: which was the more to be marvelled at, [t] becauſe he was twelve year old, before he knew a letter on the book; but he [*] ended his life well near the beginning of his work, having ſcarce finiſhed the firſt part of it.

The Tranſlation of the Bible of moſt note after theſe, (and whether any came between, we doe not finde) is that of John Wickliffe, which was beſt liked, and moſt uſed by the better ſort of Chriſtians in the reign of King Richard the Second, but ſo much maligned by the Popiſh party, that it was condemned in a Provincial Synod at Oxford, held under [u] Archbiſhop Arundel, Anno 1406. and after he was dead and buried by a Decree of the [*] Counſel of Conſtance, about the yeare 1412. his bones were to be unburied, and his Bookes to be burned: And ſo they were, not onely where the Decree was made, but in Bohemia, where [x] Sub[illegible]cus (Archbiſhop of Prague) making diligent inquiſition after them, found to the number of two hundr[illegible] Volumes of his compoſing, (moſt excellently written, and richly adorned with boſſes of gold, and rich cov[illegible]ings) and burnt them all. And in [y] England, there was a ſtrict Proclamation for aboliſhing of them[illegible]y King Henry the Eight, Anno, 1546.

And though the P[illegible]piſts had an eſpecial ſpight at his Tranſlation of the Bible, both becauſe it was a Tranſlation into the Vulgar Tongue, and ſuch a tranſlation, as they accounted moſt Heretical, yet (by Gods providence) ſome Manuſcript Copies of it (as well as of other of his Books) were preſerved, which are extant to this day, in divers [z] Libraries of this Kingdome, particularly mentioned in the Margent; which is atteſted by a very [*] learned Authour, much verſed in the moſt Authentick Records and Copies of ancient Writers.

Next unto Wickliffes Tranſlations was that of John [a] Treviſa, who undertooke and finiſhed the Tranſlation of the whole Bible in Engliſh, at the intreaty of his Patron the Lord Barkley, Anno, 1397. in the reign of Richard the Second, as * Balæus writeth, though ſome ſay it was in the year 1400. and in the reign of Henry the Fourth.

1527. In the year 1527. " [b] Tyndal firſt tranſlated the New Teſtament; after that, he tooke in hand the " Tranſlation of the Old, finiſhing the five Books of Moſes, with ſundry moſt learned and godly Prologues, " the like alſo he did upon the New Teſtament. When he tranſlated the fifth Book of Moſes called " Duteron. minding to print the Tranſlation at Hamburg, he ſailed thitherward, but by the way (upon " the coaſt of Holland) [c] he ſufferd Shipwrack, whereby he loſt all his Books and Copies, and ſo was compel" led to begin all again anew; when (in another ſhip) he was by the Divine providence ſafely conveyed whi" ther he firſt intended: and [d] where Maſter Coverdale being there before him, tarried for him, who " helped him in the tranſlation of the five Books of Moſes, from Eaſter till December: and it is like he made uſe of his help, if not to compoſe, at leaſt, to reviſe his Tranſlation of the New Teſtament; which ſociety in the ſame ſervice, may be the reaſon that the Tranſlation is ſometimes called Tyndals, ſometimes Coverdales.

But what name ſoever it had, it had an ill name among the Popiſh Prelates, chiefly for Tyndals ſake, " thoſe [e] Spiritual Fathers cried out upon it; bearing men in hand, that there were a thouſand Hereſies in " it; and ſome ſaid it was not poſſible to tranſlate the Scriptures into Engliſh; ſome, that it was not lawfull " for Lay people to have it in their Mother Tongue; ſome, that it would make them all Heretiques.

For prevention whereof, a [f] Proclamation was publiſhed by King Henry the Eighth, bearing date, July " 8. 1546. prohibiting after the firſt of Auguſt, " All perſons to receive, take or keep in his or their " poſſeſſion, the Text of the New Teſtament, of Tyndals or Coverdales Tranſlation in Engliſh or any " bookes in the Engliſh Tongue, under the names of Frith, Tyndal, Wickliffe, Joy, Roy, Baril, Bale, " Barnes, Coverdale, Turner, Tracy. But above all, the name of Tyndal, and his Tranſlation were moſt traduced, which were expoſed to more hate and contempt by means of Sir Thomas More, who uſed his wit (which was as ſharp as his Spleen) to cavil at his Writings, and his power, which was as great as both (being Lord Chancellour of England) to ſuppreſs them, eſpecially his Tranſlation of the Scripture: which that it might the more undoubtedly be done, (beſides the Proclamation fore-mentioned) there was an [g] Act of Parliament paſſed, to aboliſh Tyndals Tranſlation by name, with divers other Engliſh Bookes yet with allowance of other Tranſlations, for private uſe, and with limitation and exception of ſeveral ſorts of perſons to whom they were fordidden.

g 34, 35. of K. H. 8. c. 1. 4. Poltons Collect. p. 746. Edit. 1640.

1551. Notwithſtanding Tyndals Tranſlation was not ſmothered, but came to light, and was more acceptable for the correction of it by Thomas Matthewes, which was publiſhed as his Tranſlation with Annotations, 1552. and printed by ſpecial priviledge of King Edward the Sixth, Anno, 1551. and ſo was that of Coverdales allowed by publicke authoritie, which bore his name, becauſe he made ſome corrections of Tyndals.

And from [h] " the beginning of Edward the Sixth, Anno 1549: towards the twentieth of Queen " Elizabeth, Anno 1577. the Bibles of the Engliſh Tranſlation uſed in Churches, where either Tyn" dals or Coverdales: but that Tyndals was the chief and moſt warranted may thence be collected, for " that the reading of Pſalms are in the Service Books to this day, according to his Tranſlations, (as ſome have obſerved) the Epiſtles and Goſpels are alſo conformable to the ſame Tranſlation. In the year 1560. were the Geneva Interpretations, and Annotations, ſet forth. And Anno 1577. there was an Engliſh Edition of the Bible publiſhed by divers Biſhops in a large Volume yet that from Geneva was generally 1577. more uſed, and more eſteemed than any of thoſe that went before it, untill the year 1612. when the laſt

h Mr. J. S. Obſerv. on the Edition of the Bible in vulgar tongues, p. 9. M S.

There were other Engliſh tranſlations of the Bible, ſome of them very ancient ([i] as the phraſe of them ſheweth) though the time of their publication be not mentioned: as thoſe two in the Kings Library at Saint James, and ſome later: but theſe ſufficiently ſhew, what for this particular we have cauſe to obſerve (with thankeſgiving to God) viz. how much our holy portion is improved to the benefit of common Readers.

i A little ſowre dowe aperieth the whole gobet, 1 Cor. 5. 6. and worſhipers of Mawmets, ver. 11.

At the firſt onely ſome parcels of the Bible were Tranſlated; we have it all, we have it immediately Tranſlated out of the Original by learned men in both Languages; the firſt Tranſlation into Engliſh were for the moſt part taken out of the vulgar Latine, which was ſo falſe, that Iſido. Clarius, a famous Papiſt, (firſt a Frier, afterward a Biſhop) profeſſeth in the Preface of his firſt Edition of that at Venice, Anno 1542. (which in the following Editions is left out) that he found no fewer than [l] 8000. places to be amended.

l Loca ad octomillia Annotat. atque emendat. à nobis ſunt. Iſid. Clarius in Præf. Bibl. Sacroſanct. propoſuerit Præfat. edit. 1542. Venetiis.

In former times though the Bible were tranſlated into Engliſh, yet was it not to be read in [m] Churches, but onely by particular perſons at home, nor by all generally, for * no woman; Artificers, Apprentices, Journey-men, Serving-men, none of the degrees of Yeomen, or Husbandmen, nor Labourers, were permitted ſo much as a private reading thereof. We have generally a free uſe of them both in private and in publique: There hath been a prohibition of Annotations to be printed with the Engliſh Bibles by " Act of Parliament, our Liberty in that reſpect is much enlarged, which is that, which we are more eſpecially to note, and that is the next thing in order, and the third in number, we are now to ſpeake of.

The third thing which improveth the price of our portion in Religion, is the neceſſary uſe and great benefit of Expoſitions and Annotations upon the Bible, to render the right meaning of the words of the Tranſlation, as the Tranſlation doth of the words of the Original: for though the Scriptures may have their uſe, and force upon the affections of ignorant Readers, at firſt ſight, without any ſerious ſearch into their bidden ſenſe, and may have a worke upon the Will to encline it to good, or withdraw it from evil, as it was with [n] Auſtin, in his caſual and ſudden reading of the Apoſtle, Let us walk honeſtly as in the day, not in rioting and drunkenneſſe, nor in chambering and wantonneſſe, not in ſtrife and envying, Rom. 13. 13.) yet what Peter ſaith of his beloved brother Pauls Epiſtles, there are ſome things which are hard to be underſtood, 2 Pet.3.15,16. may be truly ſaid of many other parts of holy Scripture, eſpecially in the books of Geneſis, Job, Canticles, Ezekiel, Daniel, ſome other of the Prophets, and the Revelation.

To which he that ſeriouſly reads them may apply the pathetick admiration of Auſtin. [o] There is a wonderful profoundneſſe in thy words, a wonderful profoundneſſe O my God, a wonderful profoundneſſe: it is a matter of horror to pierce towards the depth of them, an horrour of honour, and terrour of Love: So that if the queſtion were put to moſt of thoſe (who are daily converſant in the reading of the Bible, and read it by courſe, from the one end to the other) which Philip put unto the Eunuch, Underſtandeſt thou what thou readeſt? their Anſwer (for divers Texts) might be the ſame with his; How can I except ſome one ſhould guide me? Act.8. verſ. 30, 31.

The queſtion implyeth, that he that readeth ſhould (if it may be) underſtand what he readeth; and our Saviour his precept enjoyneth an endeavour to that purpoſe, where he ſaith, Who ſo readeth let him underſtand, Matth. 24. 15.

And the Anſwer directeth the Reader to deſire and to ſeek for a guide, and though now there be none to be found whoſe guidance is infallible (for the beſt guide may be ſometimes to ſeek, and ſeeking may be at a loſſe, for the proper ſenſe of ſome obſcure places of the Scripture) yet may he make ſuch a probable interpretation of them, as may prevent a dangerous miſconſtruction of an imprudent, inconſiderate Reader.

It is conceived (by ſome of eminent note) that if Origen had met with a ſound Comment or Marginal Note upon Matth. 19. 12. it might have prevented his [p] Caſtration of himſelf, whereto he was induced, by taking (and thereby miſtaking) the words in the extreameſt rigour of the litteral ſenſe.

But in expounding of Scripture, he was a [q] Doctor to others, almoſt before he was a Diſciple to any, and was ſo indeliberate in his Dictates, and over-indulgent to his wit, that as Eraſmus ſaid of him, he would make a Book, while a man might ſtand on one foot, which made the Books of his making to be numbred no leſſe than [r] ſix thouſand.

Nor had thoſe ridiculous hereſies of [ſ] Peputians, [t] Seleucians, and [u] Aſcites, and ſuch like happily ever been hatched, if the places of Scripture, on which they founded their erroneous opinions, had been fenced with an Orthodox expoſition, againſt miſconſtruction.

Nor had (it may be) ſuch groundleſſe and fond fantaſies, as ſome have ſet abroach, and ſpread abroad, been the fruit of their familiar reading of the Word, of God, if ſome Expoſitors or Annotationers, had been ready at hand, to ſhew them the ſenſe of difficult ſayings; In which reſpect (by the goodneſſe of God) the modern times are more happy, than many Centuries of anciently precedent ages.

Which leads us to our fourth conſideration; And it is concerning ſome Annotations in particular, and (among them) principally to the Marginal notes of the Geneva Bibles, and of our own, which we now preſent to publick view the third time, being diligently reviewed, and much enlarged, were at firſt occaſioned by them.

The Annotations of the Bible of moſt note untill of late, were thoſe of Liranus, Strabus, Vatablus, Junius and Tremelius, and ſince them Piſcators and the Italian and Dutch Annotations, (which we ſhall have occaſion to mention again) have been much approved by the learned, in whom we may obſerve an advantagious proficiency by Succeſſion of time; The latter (they that came after, for the moſt part, making uſe of thoſe that went before) advancing in clearneſſe, and ſoundneſſe of Interpretation, above the former.

In Engliſh thoſe that have been beſt known, and moſt uſed amongſt us, have been the Geneva Annotations, made by our zealous and laborious Countrey-men, who in Queen Maries dayes betook themſelves to that City (as to a City of Refuge from the reach of that perſecution, which raged as hot as fire, while ſhe reigned over this Realm, and the Pope over her.) In the time of their exile there (as they profeſſe in their Prefatory Epiſtle to their brethren of England) they were for the ſpace of two years and more, day and night, with fear and trembling, occupied in the Labour of their Engliſh tranſlation with notes upon it: which when they had finiſhed in the year 1560. they preſented it, with an eſpecial Dedication (bearing Date the ſame year) to the incomparable Princeſſe Queen Elizabeth; which was received with ſuch acceptation of Her Majeſty, and general likeing of Her people; that from that time, untill the edition of the laſt tranſlation of the Bible, it was Printed by Her, and Her rightful and Royal Succeſſours Printers, above thirty times over.

Though it was their miſhap (without any merit) to be noted with a black Coal, as guilty of miſinterpretation, touching the Divinity of Chriſt and his Meſſiah-ſhip, and as Symbolizing with Arrians and Jewes, againſt them both: and this was publickly charged upon them by an Academical Doctor [x] in a ſolemn aſſembly of the Univerſity of Oxford; But of this crime they were more than abſolved by Sir Thomas Bodly (the famous Founder and Furniſher of the publick Library) his Letter written in their defence and praiſe, which was read by the [y] Doctor of the Chair in S. Maries Pulpit, and by his and the Orthodox Governours of the Univerſity ſilencing of the Doctor [z] for his Unorthodox and ſcandalous Sermons: whereby the Church and State were involved in an high and hainous degree of guilt, (if the notes were ſo unſound as he had ſuggeſted) for allowing them to be paſſable, and publique by ſo many Impreſſions: and laſtly by “one of our Aſſociates, who (about that time) wrote a Vindication of them from ſuch infamous imputations, producing ſo many clear atteſtations to Chriſts Divinity, and Meſſiah-ſhip, againſt both Arrians and Jewes, out of their Annotations on the Prophet Eſay onely, as if they had been forewarned of, and meant to be fore-armed againſt, the aſſault of ſuch Satanical ſlanders.

Yet were not the Notes (for all that) admitted to the Margine of the Reformed and Refined Edition of of the Bible, ſo that though that by correction of the errours of precedent Tranſlators, the light was ſnuffed, and ſo burned clearer than before, yet the people complained, that they could not ſee into the ſenſe of the Scripture, ſo well as formerly they did, by the Geneva Bibles, becauſe their ſpectacles of Annotations were not fitted to the underſtanding of the new Text, nor any other ſupplyed in their ſtead.

Hence were divers of the Stationers and Printers of London induced to petition the Committee of the Honourable Houſe of Commons, for Licence to Print the Geneva Notes upon the Bible, or that ſome Notes might be fitted to the new Tranſlation: which was accordingly granted, with an order for review and correction of thoſe of the Geneva edition, by leaving out ſuch of them as there was cauſe to diſlike, by clearing thoſe that were doubtful, and by ſupplying ſuch as were defective.

For which purpoſe Letters were directed to ſome of Us from the Chaire of the Committee for Religion, and perſonal invitations to others, to undertake and divide the Task among Us, and ſo cometh in our part, whereof we ſhall give the World a true and juſt account in that which followeth.

Firſt, as we had no thoughts of ſuch a ſervice, untill by Authority we were ſo called unto it, ſo ſince we have accepted of it, we have thought of nothing ſo much, as how we might diſcharge it, with beſt advantage to the glory of God, and the inſtruction of his people, and therefore we have put our ſelves to much more pains (for many moneths) in conſulting with many more Authours, in ſeveral Languages, than at firſt we thought of, that (for the propriety of the Originall Text, for pertinent and profitable variety of verſions, for conſonancy of parallel Scriptures, and for perſpicuity in clearing of the darkeſt places) we might bring in ſuch Obſervations, as might not only ſerve to edifie the ordinary Reader, but might likewiſe gratifie our Brethren of the Miniſtery, at leaſt ſuch among them, as have not the means to purchaſe, or leiſure to peruſe, ſo many books, as (by order of the Committee) we were furniſhed with all, for the finiſhing of the Work, committed to our hands.

Among which (as we were directed, by thoſe who gave us our charge) we have made uſe of the Italian Annotations of Deodat, and of the Dutch Bibles, the one lately again ſet forth at Geneva, the other in Holland, by Order of the States; yet ſo, that if we have borrowed ought of either, as they have done of thoſe, who did precede them, in the like obſervations, we ſhall deſire but to take it to uſury, and to make our return of what we receive, farre above the rate of ordinary intereſt: And in this holy buſineſſe we have none other ambition than to give better ſatisfaction to an apprehenſive Reader, for the ſenſe of the whole Bible, than (in this kind) we have met withall, in any one Work of what Authours ſoever.

And therefore though we hold the Geneva Annotations, to be in the main points of Religion, Sound and Orthodox in Doctrine; and guilty of no errour, which may not be incident to Learned, Godly, and well-meaning men, (and taking them for ſuch as, for thoſe times wherein they were made, were very worthy of praiſe for their profitable uſe, for then they were the beſt that were extant in Engliſh) we conceive for our ſelves, that we ſhall better diſcharge the truſt that is repoſed in us, and do more anſwerably to the intention of thoſe who ſet us on work, and better ſatisfie the expectation of ſuch others, as ſet obſervant eyes upon our aſſiduous and ſociable purſuance of the ſervice impoſed on us, if (being as repayrers of buildings to rip into an old houſe) we rather took it quite down, and built a new one, than patched it up, with here and there a new piece of our own putting in, which would not be decently ſuitable to the other parts, nor any way anſwerable, either in meaſure or manner of Structure, to ſuch a Model (as conſidering the advantage of the preſent age, for helps and means to exceed the precedent) ſome apprehenſive men have already prefigured to our performance.

Whereof though we fail (as what ability or induſtry can reach to the extent of an active fancy?) not onely in falling ſhort of their conceits, or of our own deſires of what we would and ſhould do, but of acceptance of what we could, and have done, we ſhall have recourſe (for our comfort) to the ſincerity of our hearts (whereto we may atteſt the Divine Omniſcience, and with warrant from both, may be allowed to profeſſe (with the bleſſed Apoſtle Paul) that we are not of thoſe that corrupt the Word of God, 2 Cor. 2. 17. or who handle it deceitfully, Chap. 4. 2. or who wreſt any part of it, to the patronage of any errour of what denomination ſoever. Nor have we added to it any of our own preconceived opinions, to imprint a partiality on our Expoſitions; nor taken from it, or ſmothered the leaſt tittle of Sacred truth contained in it; Nor yet have we either ſlightly, or ſubtilly paſſed over any difficult place with ſilence, as if it had no need of an Annotation to clear it.

But believing that to belong to all Scripture of Divine inſpiration, 2 Tim. 3. which is ſpoken of under the title of Prophecie, viz. that none of it is of private interpretation, 2 Pet. 1. 20, we have not (notwithſtanding our moſt intentive enquiries after the true and genuine meaning of it) reſted in any ſingle conceit or conſtruction of our own, nor in any at all, as meerly human; but (according to that of the Apoſtle, The Spirits of the Prophets are ſubject to the Prophets, 1 Cor. 14. 32.) have ſubmitted our private Dictates to the cenſure and correction of our Colleagues in this ſervice dayly aſſembled together, for the peruſal of every ones part.

And what doubts we met withal, which we thought (for the preſent) too hard to be eaſily reſolved, we put into a particular Catalogue, and adjourned their reſolution to a day of more deliberate Diſcuſſion, when our readings were done, which could not without inconvenience be interrupted, by any long debate of difficulties coming in our way. And becauſe we well knew it was Gods proper worke, to reveal the ſecrets of his own Word not onely in our ſingle and ſeverall Studies, and Meditations upon it, but in our joynt examinations of each particular portion (beſides our ſevered Devotion) we joyntly when we came together, implored the preſence and aſſiſtance of Gods Holy Spirit, ſo to guide our minds and tongues, and hands in the proſecution of this Sacred imployment, that Gods Word being our rule, we might not ſwerve from it by any crooked lines of erroneous digreſſion; much more, that we might beware of making any foul blots of Heretical pravity, upon ſo fair and glorious a ground-work, of piling up upon that golden foundation, either wood, or hay, or ſtubble, fitter for burning, than for ſuch a building.

Whereof as we are not conſcious to our ſelves in the leaſt point, ſo are we confident in the Candor of all truely religious Readers, (of Learned Divines eſpecially) that (apprehending the imperfection of all humane knowledge, in this life, which the Apoſtle (notwithſtanding the abundance of his revelations, 2 Cor. 12.) confeſſeth for himſelf, as well as for others, 1 Cor. 13. together with the difficulty of ſome paſſages of the Divine Oracles, (as we touched before) that they will look upon our aberrations, where they find them, with pity and pardon, and where they ſhew us, that we have erred (as men) they ſhall ſee that as Chriſtians, it was not our want of love to the truth, but want of light to diſcover it, that hath miſled us from it

And for the cenſures of ſuch as would ſeem, y learned, by captious exception at other mens Dictates, and contrary to the charitable Caveat, and counſel of Hierom (are deſirous z to raiſe reputation to themſelves, out of the reproach of others performances, (which for the moſt part are paſſed upon abſent parties, and ſo are ſecrets to them, which ſhould moſt know them) we ſhall deſire no better ſecurity from them, than this wherein he reſted, a The Sentence of the Tribunal of God, and the Chair or Stool of Whiſperers in Corners, is not the ſame.

And to that Tribunal, we may (with more confidence) make our appeal, while with good conſcience, as in the preſence of an omniſcient Judge; we dare profeſſe as b Saint Auguſtine once did, that what we have done, we have done with good fidelity, without any diſpoſition, either to contend with any, who have written before us, or to prejudice the more elaborate pains of any that ſhall come after us, in this kind.

☞ Thus much then may ſuffice to have been ſpoken concerning the firſt undertaking of this Task, and the manner of our joynt proceeding therein: Somewhat remaineth to be added concerning the preſent third Edition, which in divers parts of it at leaſt may well go for a new work.

That is moſt true, (as by daily experience and due obſervation in all works of humane induſtry concerning matters either civil or ſacred appears) which was at the very entry into this narrative before intimated, that * nothing of moment is both begun and conſummated at once. Nor is it leſs true, that after conſiderations and emergent occurrences give occaſion oft of new models and courſes, either beſide or beyond what was intended at firſt. That it hath ſo fallen out in no ſmall part of this work, will eaſily and evidently appear unto any one that ſhall compare it in the pieces now enlarged with the ſame in the former; yea the very bulk of the Book now ſwolne up unto two large Volumes, will ſufficiently evince.

The principal reaſon of ſuch diverſity for matter of dimenſion between the preſent Edition and the former, is this: Theſe Annotations were at firſt intended, as thoſe before in the Geneva Verſion, for Marginal Notes onely affixed to the Text. To which purpoſe, in the directions then delivered unto us, it was required, that they ſhould be much of the ſame ſize with them. To this ſcantling being ſtinted, (nor indeed might they fitly, ſo confined, much exceed ſuch a pattern, leſt the border ſhould be larger than the ſkirt of the coat, and the verge of the page than the body of the main Book,) our endeavour was to be as brief and conciſe, as we well might, and we were therefore conſtrained, being ſo ſtreitned, to let paſſe many things not unworthy otherwiſe of due obſervation and large diſcuſſion, that our Notes having onely a narrow by-place aſſigned them on the out-ſide of the leaf, might not in undue and undecent manner ſo enlarge their quarter, as to encroach beyond juſt proportion upon the ſpaces that were to be reſerved for the context. Hence came it to paſſe, when the work came abroad, that divers notes ſeemed not ſo full, nor ſo clear, to meaner capacities eſpecially, while " endeavour of brevity bred, as is uſual, ſome obſcurity; and much was miſſed by many, being indeed purpoſely omitted, which well might, and would have been the greateſt part of it inſerted, had the liſts and limits preſcribed us, afforded room with any fitneſſe to receive it.

Howbeit, when afterwards upon ſome ſecond thoughts and further conſideration, it ſeemed good unto thoſe, who had put us upon this work, to alter their courſe at firſt propounded, and to publiſh the Annotations apart by themſelves; the grounds of that former limitation and confinement both of Us and Them being now removed; ſome of thoſe, who having gone far beyond the bounds formerly fixed, had by mutuall advice and agreement reſolved to abridge, were then requeſted to lay that labour aſide, and to let their Parts go entire as they were: as alſo ſome other of them, who had held cloſe to the former directions, would not have been unwilling accordingly to have enlarged, had they been timely made acquainted with the new courſe then pitched upon, and ſufficient reſpite afforded for a freſh review and further ſupply of what might ſeem fit to adde unto the former.

* Nihil ſimul et inchoatum et conſummatum eſt. Cicer. de præclar Orat.

* ---brevis eſſe laboro: Obſcurus fio. Flacc. Art.

But, what could not then in this kind be effected, the Work being already entred upon at the Preſſe, and begun there with the parts of ſome that had kept within the forementioned compaſſe, that, it is hoped any diligent and intelligent Reader, will ſoon perceive to be now, in the preſent Edition, by a very conſiderable and advantagious addition, peformed: when he ſhall therein find, the termes and formes in the Originals from their firſt roots and riſes unfolded, * ſo pregnant for notion many of them, as could not in few words eaſily, or without ſome injury, be compriſed and expreſt; the variety of verſions and interpretations, in moſt Writers of note, as well Jewiſh as Chriſtian, repreſented, and, where juſt occaſion, put to triall; ſuch Senſes as ſeemed genuine, culled out from the reſt and confirmed; where more than one equally probable, referred to the further diſquiſition and deciſion of the Learned; the grounds diſcovered of ſundry miſtakes, that had formerly paſt for currant, from hand to hand without triall: places of difficulty more than ordinary, diligently diſcuſſed, with endeavour to remove rubs and doubts moved about them; paſſages of Story in the Writings of the Prophets collected with the relations of ancient Heathen Writers; the Text in divers places, either rendred or expounded, beſide the common, general ſometime, current of Interpreters, upon ſuch grounds, and for ſuch reaſons, as is ſuppoſed may give good ſatisfaction to the Learned and Judicious; and laſtly, ſuch matter of obſervation, by few, if any at all, formerly taken notice of here and there occaſionally inſerted, as may very much conduce to the right underſtanding of Scripture: a great part whereof ſuccinct Marginals would not admit. So that the Work as now it is, (the premiſes well weighed) may not unduly be deemed An entire Commentary upon the whole Body of the Bible; and that ſuch (it may with good warrant be averred) as hath not at any time appeared in our Language before.

* Significatum eſt aliquid unius verbi proprietate: non habeo quo id efferam, & dum, quæro implere ſententiam, longo ambitu vix brevis via ſpatia conſummo. Hieron. ad Pammach.

Wherein if our labours (which in regard of years and weakneſſe have been very painfull to ſome of us, ſhall prove uſeful and beneficial to Gods people among us, into whoſe hands they ſhall come, (as through his bleſſing we preſume they may, if they ſhall not be wanting to themſelves,) our onely deſire and earneſt requeſt unto ſuch is, firſt that the glory of all, and praiſe for all, be entirely returned unto our good God and gracious Father in Chriſt, who out of his meer mercy and goodneſſe, hath enabled us his weak and unworthy ſervants to goe thorough with this great Work; and next, that we may obtain from them (ſo many of us as ſhall be yet continuing in theſe our crumbling Cotages, when this work ſhall come abroad) their frequent and fervent addreſſes unto the ſame our Soveraign Lord of us all in our behalf, for a gracious ſupport of us in all occaſions, while we abide here, and a comfortable cloſe of thoſe few dayes, that we have yet to paſs whenſoever he ſhall be pleaſed to call any of us hence.

Now the Father of Lights, the Author of Truth, the Giver of Grace, enlighten the mind of the Reader, that he may diſtinguiſh the Truth of God, from all the errours and miſtakings of men, encline his heart to embrace it, as a beam ſtreaming from the Sun of Righteouſneſſe, whereſoever it ſhineth; (whether in the Divine Text, or Humane Annotations) and having ſuch a light and guide, the Lord, grant that he may, as a Child of light, in a conſtant courſe of Holineſſe, until it bring him to the happineſſe, which God the Father, for the Merits of his Son, by the Sanctification of the Holy Ghoſt, hath prepared for thoſe, who truely know him, and ſincerely ſerve him to their lives end. To that God, ever to be worſhipped in Unity of Eſſence and Trinity of Perſons, all honour and glory, might and Majeſty, be aſcribed both now and for evermore Amen.

An advertiſement upon a certain clauſe in an Epiſtle prefixed before the Annotations of Mr. Diodati on the Bible: which clauſe is this,

The moſt reall confirmation of the uſefulneſs of the Annotations of Mr. John Diodati, upon the Holy Bible, is the High eſteem thoſe Reverend Divines have had thereof, viz. Dr. Gouge, Mr. Gataker, Mr. Downame, Mr. Ley, Mr. Reading, Mr. Taylor, Mr. Pemerton, and Dr. Fearly, who each of them taking a ſeveral part of the Bible to make Annotations thereon, and Printed them together, 1645. they all ſo highly approved of Diodati's Annotations, that any one, who ſhall pleaſe to compare thoſe ſeveral Notes of theirs, with the firſt Impreſſion of this in Engliſh, ſhall find many thouſands of this our Author inſerted: but eſpecially in Ezekiel, Daniel, and all the minor Prophets, &c.

Chriſtian Reader,

It hath been an ancient practiſe, (a practiſe that ſavoureth rank of pride, and envy,) to raiſe up praiſe and glory to ſome, by falſe aſperſions, and unjuſt imputations on others.

To omit all other inſtances, A certain Epiſtler, who ſubſcribes himſelf R. G. hath taken upon him to commend a worke far above his commendation, The Pious Annotations of a Iudicious Divine, Mr. John Diodati upon all the Sacred Scripture.

This he ſeeks to do by a falſ and ſlandrous calumny on ſundry Divines, eight of whom he nameth, & layes to the charge of every one of them, that they have inſerted many thouſands of Diodati's Annotations into their own. For Seven of the Eight, whom he names, let his own rule be obſerved; namely, their Notes compared with Diodati's, and the many thouſands will not be found one. It may be that in ſome places they may agree with Tremellius, and Junius, with Piſcator, and other Learned and Orthodox Annotators on the Old and New Teſtament, whom Diodati hath much traced, and thereupon all agree in the ſame Truth: but from thence to infer, that the Seven Engliſh Annotators have inſerted Diodati's Notes into theirs, is ſo falſe an inference, as any Sophiſter would ſay, non ſequitur.

The Annotations of the foreſaid Divines were finiſhed, and given up to the Stationers the year before the firſt Edition of Diodati's Annotations, tranſlated into Engliſh, were publiſhed: ſo as they could have no help from that Engliſh Tranſlation.

As for the Italian, in which Language, Diodati's Annotations were firſt compoſed, many of the foreſaid Divines underſtood not that Tongue: nor had any tranſlation thereof for their help.

But further, to demonſtrate that it was not Diodati's ſtaff that they leaned upon, in many Chapters which Diodati hath either wholly paſſed over without any Note at all, or onely here, and there made a bie, and ſhort Note, our Divines have made many learned and uſefull Annotations: And alſo have fully cleared ſundry difficulties, which Diodati hath paſſed over in ſilence, or profeſſed, that, * This difficulty is not to be reſolved: and it is likely that there is ſome alteration hapned in theſe accompts. Doth not this Suppoſall of alteration in the Sacred Accompts impeach the authentique authority of the Hebrew Text?

But granting that in the firſt Edition of theſe Annotations, there was ſomewhat of that kind, that might juſtly be excepted againſt; yet ſeeing that it doth not at all concern either the former, ſecond; or this, third Edition, which have been ſo carefully renewed and enlarged, as by the very bulk may appear: We ſhall not need further, to inſiſt upon it, not doubting but the judicious Reader will reſt very well ſatisfied with this account that hath been given him of the buſineſs; but more when he ſhall enter upon the Work it ſelf; reade, and compare, and conſider. Where we leave him, wiſhing that all may redound to the Glory of Almighty God, and the good of his Church.

ANNOTATIONS

PENTATEUCH Or FIVE BOOKS of MOSES,

On the firſt of them, called,
GENESIS.

The ARGUMENT.

THE five Books of Moſes are ſometimes contained under one Title, and ſo from the moſt obſervable matter delivered in them, and diſperſed through them they are called Thorah, that is, the Law: and from their number, and juncture, the Title given them by the Greeks, is the Pentateuch, or fivefold Volume, for all five anciently made but one Book, as did the twelve ſmaller Prophets; and thence it is that the Books of Exodus, Leviticus, and Numbers, begin with words of Coherence which carry on the ſubſequent matter as by way of orderly contexture, and connexion with what was ſaid before.

Of theſe, the firſt Book in particular is called by the Hebrewes, Bereſhith, from the initial words of it; after which manner they gave names to divers other Books: the Greeks call it, Geneſis, becauſe it delivereth the Story of the worlds Original, the Creation of Adam and Eve, their lapſe and Off ſpring in their degenerated condition, the multiplying of ſin in their multiplyed poſterity, whereupon followed the univerſal flood that overwhelmed all living creatures of the Air & Earth, except a very few of each ſort, which were reſerved as a ſtock for a new plantation in the next age; with other memorable matters of the Patriarks, eſpecially of Noah, Abraham, Iſaac, Jacob, and Joſeph, with whoſe death Geneſis endeth; which was in the year of the world, 2368. or 2369, as they bring in the accompt, who have made it upon diligent peruſal, and comparing of particulars.

Object. All this time, and about 56 or 65 or as ſome make the account 72, and ſome beyond that, 80 years more were expired before Moſes was born; how then had he the knowledg of things done and paſt ſo many Centuries preceding his birth?

Anſw. He might hear much by Tradition from the ſons or nephews of Joſeph, as they from Jacob, he from Iſaac, Iſaac from Abraham, Abraham from Sem, Sem from Noah, Noah from Methuſelah, and he from Adam: but the way of tradition was ſubject to corruption, and at long running the ſtream of that channel carryeth with it many dregs of erroneous additions: wherefore, though Moſes might receive ſome Hiſtorical reports from ſome eminent perſons of the precedent ages, his pen was guided by the unerring Spirit of God, while he wrote this, and the four Books following: whereof though Euſebius, lib 7. cap. 2. de præpar. evang. ſuppoſed the Book of Geneſis was compoſed while he kept the flock of his father in law in the land of Midian; yet it is rather to be believed, that that, as well as the reſt, was indicted by him, not when he was a private, but a publick perſon, inſpired and inſtructed by God for that purpoſe: but whether he received revelations from God for the contents of this, and the reſt of the Pentateuch, when he called him into the Mount Exo. 24. 12 Or, whether writing many things in the manner of a Diary (in all but the firſt) he had his informations in ſuch particulars daily communicated to him by the Spirit of God, it is not to be determined by any reſolution of man: yet this is moſt certain, whereon we may reſt, that the Spirit of God, which to other Prophets revealed things to come (and ſome ſuch to him alſo, both for matters neer hand, and far off) inſpired him, with the Revelation for things already done, which is equally infallible in the knowledg of fore-paſſed and future perſons matters, words, acts, or events, at what diſtance ſoever.

CHAP. I.

Verſ. 1. IN the beginning] That is, when God began to give being to the world, it was made in the manner and order following. Moſes in this beginning of his *S*tory, ſhutteth out the conceit of the eternity of the world, (which the Chaldæan and Egyptian Aſtronomers, and ſome other natural Philoſophers, (as Plin. Nat. Hiſt. lib. 1. cap. 1) at leaſt for the firſt matter of it, have conceived to be co-eternal with the Creator, an errour repugnant both to true Religion and right reaſon; though we take the truth (which is contradictory to it) rather for an Article of faith, [Heb 11.3.] then for a maxime in Philoſophy, and do acknowledg God had from all eternity the ſame power of Creation, which now firſt of all he put into act and execution. What time of the year the world began, ſee on Exod. 12. 2.

God] Of and by himſelf, without any either ſociable or ſubordinate agent, Iſai. 44. 24. made the world, wherein conſiſteth the chief difference betwixt Creation and Providence, in that, God only worketh; in this, the Creatures are ſubſervient to his power and pleaſure, be they never ſo glorious as chap. 32. 1, 2. never ſo contemptible; as Exod 8. 17. 21.

God created] In the Hebrew the word for God is Elohim, of the plural number, which ſignifieth, ſtrong, potent, mighty (ſee Ann. on Exo. 32. 4.) & for [created,] the Hebrew word is Bara of the ſingular number; whence ſome learned and pious Expoſitors have deduced the Doctrine of the Trinity of Perſons in the Unity of the Divine Eſſence. Others (among whom are divers, who are likewiſe learned and religious, (to ſay nothing of the Jewiſh, Photinian, Arian, and *S*ocinian Hereticks, who denying the faith of that myſterious truth, deny all proof produced for it out of Scripture) conceive the words will not warrant any ſuch deduction; not becauſe this plurality may be underſtood of Angels (as ſome Hereticks ſuggeſt) for they were not Creators with God, but Creatures of God; nor, according to the ſtile Royal, when Kings ſay, We and Us, in a word of plurality, not meaning any communication of their prerogatives to others; for that Courtly phraſe is ſo much younger then the beginning of all things, that it was not taken up until the Tyranny of one perſon becoming odious to the people, ſucceeding Kings to gaine the good will of their ſubjects, made ſhew of moderating their Soveraign Authority, by ruling rather by others counſel then by their owne ſelf-wills; nor becauſe the word Elohim, hath no ſingular number (as ſome have ſaid) for it hath one, viz. Eloah, and if it had not, there be other names of God, which are in their ſignification ſingular; But the proof of the Trinity from this place is denyed by them; becauſe, firſt, the phraſe of joyning words of different numbers is an Hebraiſm, or manner of ſpeech uſed by the Hebrewes, not only in conſtruction of a Verb in the ſingular number, with a Noun of the Plural number; but of a Noun of the ſingular number, with a Verb of the plural number; and of an Adjective ſingular with a Noun or Participle plural. Secondly, The words, (though indefinitely, they may import a plurality) do not preciſely and determinatively note or deſign a Trinity. Thirdly, The word Elohim, with a Verb of the ſingular number, is aſcribed to ſtrange gods, Exod. 20.3. according to the Hebrew; though that numerical difference in Engliſh be not obſerved; nor can be expreſſed, as in the Latin, non erit tibi Elohim alieni. Fourthly, the word Elohim, is uſed ſometimes of a particular perſon in the Trinity, as of the Holy Ghoſt, ver.2. of this Chapter, and Pſal. 45.6. it is uſed of the Son, and yet there is but one Son, one Holy Ghoſt. Fifthly, thoſe ancient Fathers, who were moſt skilful in the Hebrew Tongue, make no myſterious Expoſition of the words Elohim Bara. For theſe reaſons this place is no good proof of the Trinity, againſt the Anti-trinitarians, eſpecially if it be taken alone, or ſet in the fore-front of any conflict with them. Notwithſtanding, it may be probably conceived to be the meaning of Moſes to inſinuate the Trinity by this expreſſion of the Noun and the Verb in a different number. Becauſe, 1. He was not ignorant of the Doctrine of the Trinity. 2. He well knew, that God the Father made the world, as it is, 1 Cor.8.6. 3. That God the Son alſo made the world, as it is, Prov 8.24,27,28. Joh. 1.3. Eph.3.9. Col.1.16. and he expreſly nameth the Spirit or third perſon (ver.2.) as concurrent in the work of Creation; as alſo, Pſal.104.30. Job 33.4. It being true then that Moſes believed a Trinity of Perſons in the Unity of the Godhead, it is moſt like, that by this phraſe he meant here to mind the Jewes (for whoſe information he firſt intended and penned this holy Hiſtory) of this high point of Doctrine. And though the word Elohim be ſometimes given to Creatures and falſe gods in the holy Scripture, yet when it is applied to the true God, it is uſually joyned to a Verb, Noun or Pronoun of the ſingular number; uſually, I ſay, not alwaies: for Gen.20.13. and chap.35.7. & 2 Sam 7.23. we find it otherwiſe; when to the Creatures or falſe gods, it is commonly joyned with words of the plural number; or, if with a word of the ſingular number, as Exod.20.3. it is to be taken figuratively by a Syllepſis; as, there ſhall not be unto thee any of the ſtrange gods; whereas applyed to the true God, it hath a proper conſtruction, as joyning one God and three Perſons together: ſo in this place; yet ſo alſo, that it muſt not be unſeaſonably, or indiſcreetly uſed againſt an Anti-trinitarian adverſary, nor made an occaſion of uncharitable conteſtation among ſuch learned and godly men, as are found in the Doctrine of the Trinity, though of different opinions about the phraſe in this Text. See more on ver. 26. of this Chapter.

created] The Hebrew word, Bara, tranſlated Created, is a word in its proper ſenſe, proper and peculiar to God, and therefore ſhould not be attributed to men, how great ſoever; yet it is a familiar phraſe in the ſtile of the Court to ſay, Such a one was Created Earl, or Marqueſs, or Duke of &c. wherein, as the Paraſites of ſecular Princes make them like God in power and greatneſs, ſo their Preachers and Chaplains ſhould do their endeavor that they may reſemble their Maker in Juſtice and Goodneſs. See Annot. on ver 21.

heaven and the earth] Theſe words may be a ſummary propoſition, compriſing briefly the whole Creation; as Exod.20.11. diſtributed into ſeveral dayes works afterwards: for all of it had its Original from God alone, without any concurring power, or fore-going matter, but that which himſelf made the firſt day as the common ſtock, out of which were deduced the enſuing dayes works.

heaven] Thereby may be meant all the higher part of the world, from the earth upward. But the heaven, (as perfectly diſtinguiſhed from the nether world,) was not made until the ſecond day, ver.7.8. Some take heaven here, for the higheſt heaven, the place of Gods greateſt glory, and of the angels habitation, with which it is thought by divers learned Divines, that they were made, and were a part of the firſt dayes work; for proof of which opinion as probable (not as certain) they alledg Job 38. ver.6,7.

V.2. Earth] That is, that great material maſſe made up of the two heavieſt Elements, earth and water, with all the creatures on, or in them both: but the earth, as diſtinctly ſevered from other parts of the world, was not made until the third day, ver.10.

without form and void] Without any proper and particular form; and void and empty of that diſtinct nature, vertue, and vigour; and of that comely order which afterward God gave unto it, when he ſeparated the earth from the waters, diſtinguiſhed it into hills and plains, furniſhed it with fruits, clothed it with graſs, and garniſhed it with flowers.

darkneſſe] The light not yet being made, darkneſs (which is nothing but the abſence or want of light) covered that confuſed heap, which was of an exceeding great compaſs and depth in waters, and other materials contained in it: and it was ſo confuſed, not out of any defect of wiſdom or power in God to make the world diſtinctly and perfectly complete at the firſt, for he could have done that in a moment: but he was pleaſed to do his work by degrees, and gradually to proceed from leſſe perfect to more perfect works, and to be doing that in ſeveral dayes which he could have finiſhed in a minute; to give the rational creature occaſion more deliberately to meditate on the parts and paſſages of the Creation.

the Spirit of God] The works of the Trinity which are external upon the Creatures are undivided, ſo that where one Perſon only is named as Creator, all three muſt be conceived to work together in the production of the Creature. The firſt Perſon is called the Father, not only in relation to the Son the ſecond Perſon; but to the Creatures who are all produced from his power and vertue; in which reſpect in the Genealogy laid down by Luke, and proceeding by way of aſcent to the beginning of all things, Adam as created by God, is called his ſon, Luke 3.laſt; and in this reſpect the Son may be called a Father; as Iſai. 9.6. for he alſo made the world, Joh.1.3. Col 1.16. and here the Holy Ghoſt is eſpecially mentioned as an Agent in the firſt Original of all things. Whence he is concluded to be God, comparing this place with other Scriptures; as 1 Joh.5.7. Mat.28.19. Job 26.13. Act.5.3,4. 1 Cor. 12,4.2. 2 Cor.13.14.

moved] The word Merahhepheth, in the Original, rendred here moved, properly ſignifieth a hovering of a bird over her young to cheriſh and preſerve them, according to that of the Eagle, Deut.32.11. She ſtirreth up her neſt, fluttereth over her young, ſpreadeth abroad her wings, and it importeth, the effectual quickning power of the Holy Ghoſt, which upheld, ſuſtained, and gave vertue to that great and general heap, which thereby was formed into particular works in the manner and order ſet down in the reſt of the Chapter.

face of] That is, the outward part, which, if there had been light to diſcern it, had been moſt viſible, as the face of a man is eminently conſpicuous above his other parts; ſo the open sky, which is obvious to the eye, is called in the Hebrew phraſe, the face of the Firmament, ver.20 And the ſhew-bread, (which was ſet upon the Table to open view of ſuch as came where it ſtood) is according to the Hebrew, the bread of faces, Exod.25 30.

the waters] Which were in great depth ſpread over the other materials, or common ſtock of the firſt creation, whereby they were covered as with a garment, Pſal.104.6. as all earthly creatures of the nether world were covered by the flood in Noahs time; and the waters were uppermoſt as being moſt fit and ready for the future generation: for the thicker part was moſt meet to concur to the making of ſolid creatures below, and the thinner moſt eaſily rarified into aire, which was to be above, and to fill up the ſpace from the earth upward, to the place of the loweſt Planet, and (as ſome think) to that alſo of the fixed Stars; for they hold, that the Planets move in the air, as fiſhes in the water.

V.3. God ſaid] God is ſaid by his Word to make not only the light but the whole world, Heb.11.3. Not that he did uſe any articulate or audible ſpeech, as we do; for ſo he ſaid not, becauſe he is a pure Spirit, and not a bodily ſubſtance, as we are: but to note, firſt, the facility of the work to him, who could make it without any toyle at all; as eaſily, as quickly, as a word may be ſpoken, Pſal.33.9. Secondly, the Authority of the Work-maſter over the creature, Pſal.105.34. as a King over his ſubject, according to that of Solomon, Where the word of a King is, there is power, Eccleſ.8.4. and to that of the Centurion, Mat.8.9. but with a ſupereminent degree of vigour above all created Agents; for, he calleth the things that be not as though they were, Rom.4.17. and by this call he giveth them a being, which before had none, and can reſtore the being which before they had, and for the preſent have not, as Joh.11.43. Thirdly, the words, God ſaid, import a potent efficacy, or an efficacious decree for the preſent exiſtence of the work. Fourthly they intimate the liberty of the Creator (for they that are endowed with the faculty of ſpeech, do exerciſe it without conſtraint, or natural neceſſity) who made the world by his own free-will, and not by a neceſſary emanation of Power from his divine nature, (as ſome Naturaliſts have thought, and thence have inſerted the eternity of the World againſt the truth of Scripture and the light of reaſon.)

light] This light was not any ſhining upon the nether world from the Heaven called Empyreum, (the higheſt and moſt glorious place of the bleſſed) which many have conceived to be made firſt of all the creatures, and to be underſtood by heaven in the firſt verſe of this Chapter; for (beſides that, that interpretation is not ſo probable as the interpretation upon the firſt verſe) that heaven in their conceit (who underſtand this light to be derived from it) was made before the dark lump of the firſt matter. Secondly, neither was it the element of fire, (for if there be ſuch an element, which ſome confidently deny, and ſome affirm to be placed under the Orb of the Moon) it is more like it was made not the firſt, but the ſecond day with the Firmament. Thirdly, neither was it the light of the Sun, or the Moon, or Stars: for this light was made the firſt day verſ 5. and they had not any diſtinct being, or appearing until the fourth day. ver.19. Fourthly, but it was a bright quality immediately created by God, and (not as the Papiſts pretend, an accident without a ſubject) but inherent in ſome meet ſubject, as the light of the Pillar of fire, Exod.13 21. and of the bright cloud, Matth.17.5. Fifthly, or it might be ſome extraordinary brightneſſe on the upper part of the waters, receiving and reflecting light like a looking-glaſs, for which purpoſe that Element hath a fitneſſe above any other.

Ver.4. God ſaw] This is often after mentioned, as verſ.10,18,21, 25,31. and is alwayes to be underſtood, as a condeſcending in phraſe and expreſſion to the manner of men, who when they have effected or obtained, or obſerved any good thing, upon ſight or experience, approve the profit of it, which God knew well enough without ſight; for that is properly a ſenſitive and corporal faculty, which is not in God, being a pure Spirit; and before the creature was made, he knew the

goodneſſe of it, as well as afterward; therefore God uſing this dialect (formally) humane when he ſpeaketh of himſelf, meant to ſhew us, how uſeful and acceptable light and other creatures are; and hereby alſo he ratified their uſefulneſs to the good of others, eſpecially of man.

divided] The light is divided, or ſeparated from the darkneſſe, not in name only, as Abenezra thinks, but by a natural repugnancy between them, ſo that they have no communion together, 2 Cor. 6.14. but where the one is, the other cannot be, (at leaſt in an eminent degree; in a remiſs they may be for a while at leaſt, as in the morning and evening twilight) for they drive out, and ſucceed each other, and make night and day in ſeveral parts of the world by alternate turns: ſo it was by the motion of this new created light, which carried about by the vigour of that Spirit (which moved upon the face of the waters) from one part of the world to the other, made the diſtinction and meaſure of the three firſt dayes, as the revolution of the Sun hath done ever ſince. What became of it when the other lights, Sun, Moon and Stars were made, is uncertain. God might incorporate it into the body of ſome of thoſe ſetled Lights, or otherwiſe diſpoſe of it, as his wiſdom thought moſt meet; though how in particular, Gods Word hath no where revealed, nor may humane wit preſume to reſolve.

V.5. God called] Or, decreed it to be ſo called: for contrary things muſt be called by contrary names, Iſai.5.20.

the light, Day] The word Day, in the former part of the verſe, noteth the day artificial from morning till night, Exod. 16. 12, 13. which is the time of light, meaſured out to twelve houres, Joh.11.9. Matth.20.3,6. which were not more nor fewer, but longer or ſhorter according to the different proportion of the days in Summer and Winter: the firſt began with the Sun-riſing, and the laſt ended with the Sun-ſetting; which diviſion was in uſe, not only with the Jewes, but with the Romanes, Cal. Rhodig. lib.2. Antiq. Lection, chap.9. but in the latter part of the verſe, the word Day, is taken for the day natural, conſiſting of twenty four houres, which is meaſured moſt uſually from the Sun-riſing to the Sun-riſing; or, from the Sun-ſetting to the Sun-ſetting: for the uſe of the word Day in this ſenſe, compare Exod.12.29 with Numb.3,13. & 8.17.

the firſt day] In the Hebrew, it is one day in number, not expreſly the firſt in order; the like expreſſion we find Gen. 8.5. Numb. 29. 1. and it is followed in the Greek, Matth. 28.1. Joh.20,1. 1 Cor.16.2. This firſt day conſiſting of twenty four hours had (as ſome think) for the firſt half of it the precedent darkneſſe, and for the other the light newly created: the night they take to be meant by evening a part of it, and the day by the morning, which is part of it alſo: and according to this the Sabbath, (being as large a day as any of the reſt, and ſo containing twenty four houres) is meaſured from even to even, Levit. 23.32. the Romans, and other Weſtern Nations, reckon the twenty four hours from mid-night to mid-night; the Egyptians contrariwiſe from mid-day to mid-day. Yet it may be with good probability, thought that at the firſt (according to the Chaldean account, which is quite contrary to that of the Jewes fore-cited, meaſuring the day from Sun-riſing to Sun-riſing) the day natural began with the light: for Even is the declining light of the fore-going day; and the Morning may as well be called the end of the night paſt, as the beginning of the day following: and ſo divers of the Learned by the Evening underſtand the day, as the end thereof, and by Morning the night, at which time it is at an end: for denominations are many times taken from the end, becauſe thereby the thing is made complete; ſo the whole week is called by the name, Sabbath, Levit. 23.15. and Luke 18.12. becauſe with it the week is wholy made up and fully finiſhed.

V.6. Firmament] The word in Hebrew is Rakiah, of the maſculine Gender without a plural number, and it ſignifieth a thing ſpread out, or extended like a Curtain, Iſai.40.22. Pſal. 104. 2. Or, like melted metals, which (though with heat they become as like water in ſoftneſſe, moiſtneſſe and fluid motion, (whereby they ſpread abroad, (if they be not bounded by ſome other thing) as they are unlike water in its coldneſſe, do ſettle in a firm ſolidity, when the heat is ſpent: Or like metals that are beaten out into bredth and length by the hammer; in that ſenſe the word Firmament, may be attributed to the Orbs of the Stars and Planets, which may therefore be called the firmament, if not for ſuch a ſolid firmneſs, as is in metals, yet in regard of their durable natures, not ſubject to corruption, as inferiour bodies are, until the final diſſolution of the world, 2 Pet.3.12. But the word, Rakiah, ſignifieth properly and immediately an expanſion, or ſpreading out: and the word Firmament, is anſwerable to the Greek word Stereoma, which importeth firmneſſe, rather then to the Hebrew word Rakiah which ſignifieth expanſion, extenſion or ſpreading out: and therefore though the earth in regard of its firmneſſe and ſtability, might be called, Firmament, the word Rakiah is applyed unto it, not in reſpect of its firmeneſſe or ſtabilitie, but in reſpect of its extention or ſpreading out, Iſai.42.5 and 44.24. for which cauſe it may be alſo applyed to the Region of the Aire, as in this place; though elſewhere ſuch an acceptation or application of it, be not very obvious in, the Scriptures.

V.7. Which were] In the Hebrew there is neither were, nor are but thus. [the waters which under the Firmament, from the waters which above the firmament] but if a word be put in for the ſupplement to the ſenſe, it ſhould be rather are then were; for to ſay, were above, preſuppoſeth the diviſion made already, whereas this out-ſpread thing, called firmament, was made that they might be divided; and by it was the diviſion made: So that according to the ſenſe of the place (though the Original will bear both readings alike) the words ſhould be read thus, The waters which are under the firmament, from the waters which are above the firmament; meaning by the firmament, the over-ſpread air from the earth to the clouds; and by the waters above it, the rain bound up in clouds, Job 26.8. Pſal.18.11.

V.8. Heaven] That is, the Region of the Aire, and all that is above us, which is called by the name of Heaven; as firſt, the fowles of heaven, ver.30 of this chap. and Pſal.79.2. Secondly, the clouds of heaven, Pſal.147.8. Matth.24.30. to which properly belongeth the word Shamajim in this ver. ſignifying there waters, for the clouds powr out waters, Pſal.77,17. Thirdly, and the ſtars of heaven, Gen.22.7 And fourthly, that which is above all theſe, the place of eternal happineſſe, called, Paradiſe, and the third Heaven, 2 Cor.12.2. (reckoning the whole region of the air to the Moon, for the firſt heaven; and from thence to the higheſt Stars incluſively, for the ſecond) called by Solomon, the heaven of heavens, 1 King.8.27. and by a greater then Solomon, our bleſſed Saviour, his Fathers houſe, Joh.14.2.

V 9. Gathered] Or, flow together: The Hebrew word, Jikkavu, derived from Kavah, importing expectation, notes a fit place for their reception, as if it were ſo ready for them, as to expect their coming thither and (according to its affinity with the conjugate word Kau, which ſignifieth a line) it noteth the natural diſpoſition of the waters to run to it (as by a ſtrait line) the next way. See Pſal.33.7.

one place] Their place may be called one, in reſpect of their principal gathering together in the Sea, which is as a main body (in compariſon whereof, other waters are but as arms or limbs) whence they run and whither they have their recourſe again, Eccleſ.1 7. as God directeth their motion, and ſetteth their bounds, Job 38.8,10,11. Pſal.104. 8,9,10. Prov.8.28. Jer 5.22.

dry land appear] For before it was for the moſt part covered with waters: it is like the earth at this time was, as 2 Pet.3.5. ſtanding out of the water, and in the water: part out of it, and the greateſt part under it, yet ſome part out of it, and above it; for there was a diſtance and diviſion betwixt the upper waters in the clouds, and thoſe below, which could not be at this time, if the whole earth were wholly covered; for there are ſome hills (as ſome ſay) higher then ſome rainy clouds, unleſſe we ſay, that hils had not their eminent exiſtence until the earth was wholy uncovered; but ſo the ſaying of Peter is not ſo fairly cleared. See An.on c.7.v.20.

V.10. Earth] Though the earth be firme and ſtable in it ſelf, yet ſome derive the Hebrew word Erets from ruts, which ſignifieth to run, becauſe being made dry, it was meet for living creatures to run upon it: ſome derive it from Ratſon, ſignifying good pleaſure; and ſo it importeth, that not by any natural neceſſity or operation was this ſeparation made, but by Gods free will and good pleaſure to make both elements more beneficial and pleaſant to the creatures of ſeveral kinds.

Seas] The word here firſt brought in in the plural number (as it is elſewhere) is uſed many times alſo in the ſingular, as Gen.12.7. Hoſ. 11.10. Mic.7.12. Pſal.8.10. (where alſo it is uſed in the plural number) and though in every place where there is water, if it be but a baſon-ful, there be a collection of waters, which is made up of many drops, as one loaf of many graines; yet it is applyed only, or for the moſt part, to a copious collection of waters. And it may well be uſed in the plural nnmber, becauſe of the plurality of ſignifications, natural, artificial, and figurative: Natural, as for the ſeveral ſorts of ſeas, the great ſea, Joſh.23.4. or Mediterranean ſea, called alſo the occidental or Weſtern ſea; becauſe in reſpect of Jeruſalem, that ſea is weſtward; the Red Sea, called Mare Suph, or the ſedgie ſea through which the Iſraelites paſſed, and in which the Egyptians were after drowned, Exod. 14. 22. 26,27. the Salt Sea, Numb.34.3,12, called by Joſephus, the Lake Aſphaltis, or Aſphaltites, whereof he makes a memorable and admirable deſcription, in his ſtory of the Wars of the Jewes, l.5.c.5. the Sea Chinnereth, Numb.34.11. called uſually, the Lake of Genneſereth, Luke 5.1. and the Sea of Galilee, and of Tiberias, John 6.1. which (as Pliny meaſureth it) is ſixteen miles long, and ſix miles broad, *Nat.Hiſt.lib. 5.cap.*15. And there is a plurality of ſeas yet further varied according to the Countries on which they border, as the Arabian, Perſian, Spaniſh, Britiſh Sea, &c.

Again, the word is applyed to an artificial collection of waters; for that great braſen veſſel, 1 Kin.7.26. was called a Sea, 2 Chron.4 6. for the hugeneſs thereof Joſeph. Antiq.l.8 c 2. It was made (ſaith he) after the manner of an Hemiſphere, or half Globe; and it was ten cubits broad from the one brim to the other, 1 Kin.7.23. and an hand-bredth thick, and five cubits high, 2 Chron.4.2. wherein the Prieſts were to waſh themſelves, 2 Chron.4 6.

Laſtly, By a figure, a multitude of men meeting together as drops in the ſea, is called a Sea, Jer.51.42. and by waters according to the interpretation of the Spirit, are ſometimes underſtood, multitudes Nations and Tongues, Revel.17.15. But that acceptation which is proper to this place, is neither figurative nor artificial, but natural; natural in reſpect of the condition of the creature ſince the Creation, but miraculous and divine, in reſpect of the firſt ſeparation of the waters from the earth and the collection of them into ſeas.

God ſaw] The ſeparation of waters was but begun the ſecond day, but perfected on this third day: wherefore the approbation is not mentioned in the concluſion of the ſecond dayes work, but reſerved till now, that it was perfectly made. So God made the out-ſpread thing called the Firmament the ſecond day, verſ.6.8. but he adjourned and put off the approbation of the work till the fourth day, when it was made perfect by addition of the Sun,Moon and Stars,from ver. 14. to verſ. 19.

Ver.12. Brought forth] There was both a kindly Spring in the growing of Graſs, and Herbs, and Trees, and a mature Autumne in ripe and perfect fruits, as appears Chap.3.6. though yet the earth received neither warmth, or any other influence from Sun, or Moone, or Stars, for yet they were not made; which ſheweth that Gods power depends not upon any means, but all means upon it: ſo that the godly, though they have no pawne of precedent proviſion, nor any ſurety of the aſſiſtance of the Creatures for future increaſe, may confidently rely upon his promiſe for neceſſary ſupply, Pſal.37.19. *Hab.*3.17,18.

whoſe ſeed was in it ſelf] That is,either in the root, or in the fruit, or in the leaf,or in the branch,or in the bud; ſo that it hath a vertue to bring forth its like for the conſervation of the kind, without borrowing of any help from conjunction with any creature, as in the mixture of male and female; which difference of ſex, in propriety of ſpeech,is not in Plants, but in living Creatures only.

God ſaw that] This ſentence is often repeated,as verſ.4, 10, 18,21, 25,31. to make a deep impreſſion in mens minds of the goodneſſe of the Maker, and of the Creatures made for the glory of God,and the benefit of man; and to note, that they prove bad only by ſin, and unto ſinners: yet by the goodneſs of God,and his mercy in Chriſt, (in whom the Elect have a right reſtored to the things created, 1 Cor.3. 21, 22, 23.) even the worſt ſort of them may be of good uſe,for poiſon may be ſo tempered as to be turned into Medicine, (and to ſome Creatures poiſonous herbs and plants yeild ſome nouriſhment) for recovery of health to man-kind, whether good or bad,though not for the bad, but for the godlies ſake.

V. 4.Let there be lights] In the Hebrew,the Verb is of the ſingular number, the Noun of the Plural: So alſo Exod.8.17. So there were lice; in the Hebrew,There was lice,Lat. fuit pediculi: the like Enallage of number elſwhere.

to divide the day from the night] Heb. to divide between the day, and between the night. By day is meant the artificial day, from the Sunriſing to the going down of it; though in the concluding approbation of each dayes work,be but for a day natural conſiſting of twenty four hours.

ſignes] Of the weather; as the Sunne when it ſetteth with a red skie, fore-ſheweth a fair day to follow, Matth.16.2. and the Moone, according to the variety of its colour and figure, ſignifieth a difference of weather; and both of them by their Eclipſes betoken the temper of the enſuing ſeaſon, at leaſt for ſome natural qualities and events; and ſtars ſhining clear in winter ſignifie froſts. *Plin.Nat.Hiſt.lib.*18.cap, 35. By their natural and ordinary operation, and by an extraordinary and ſupernatural, ſometimes they import terrible Comminations to the nether world, as Luke 21. verſe 25, 26. Acts 2. 19, 20. whereas the wicked throughout the world, Pſal.65.8. not the godly, Jer.10.2. Luke 21.28. may be afraid; which yet giveth no warrant to the preſumption of Prognoſticators, or judiciary Aſtrologers to foretel the fortunes of men, or fates of Civil States by the Stars; or to make any prediction of any other ſupernatural events from the face of the heavens, or the impreſſion of the Planets, or from the temper, figure, colour, or poſture of the Celeſtial Bodies; for ſuch Arts of Divination are condemned by the Word of God,Deut.18, 10. Iſai.47.10.

and for ſeaſons] Chiefly thoſe ſpecified, Gen. ~~8.22. but withal~~ they conduce for diſtinction of times,when to work, and when to reſt; when to ſow, and when to plant, and prune, and reap; and when to do other affairs with beſt conveniency and advantage, both for Natural and Civil good; and they ſerved alſo for the difference of ſacred ſeaſons; as for the Sabbath, the Feaſt of Pentecoſt, New Moons,&c.

V.16. Two great Lights] To wit, the Sun and the Moon; the Sun great indeed,for it is one hundred ſixty and ſix times greater then the Earth (as Aſtronomers reſolve, though rather upon probable conjecture then any certain demonſtration.) Amongſt the Celeſtial Lights the Moon in appearance ſeems the greateſt next the Sun, and is called a great Light, as the Sun is (without any difference) when it is thirty nine times leſſe then the Earth, and is the leaſt but one (that is Mercury) of all the Planets, and of far narrower compaſſe then the fixed Stars, for ſome of them, as Aſtronomers affirme, are an hundred and ſeven times greater then the earth, though they ſeem much leſſe; Neverthleſſe the Moon being the loweſt of theſe ſhining Bodies, and ſo neerer to the earth, as it appeareth to be bigger in quantity, ſo it miniſtreth more light to mans uſe, then any of the ſingle Stars of the greateſt magnitude, yea, then all of them together, when it is at the full;yet this fulneſſe of light, is, for a great part of it, but a borrowed brightneſs from the body of the Sun,which the Moon receiveth and reflecteth like a Looking-glaſs.

To rule] The Sun, Moon, and Stars, by their motions, light and influences under God, Jer 31.35. ſerve much, not only for diſtinction of times, and for qualification of the Creatures for natural operations, (whereof ſee Deut.33-14. Hoſ.2.21. Job 38.31) but for ordering of Civil and Eccleſiaſtical matters with moſt conveniency, both for the doing and forbearing of them: In this rule, their commiſſion and power depends upon the Almighties pleaſure; for when he will have it ſo,the Moon ſhall not give her light,and the Stars ſhall fall from heaven, Matth.24 29. See alſo Joel 2.31. Act.2.20.

V.17. God ſet them] He did not firſt create them, and after place them there, as he made man out of Paradiſe, and afterwards put him into it, Chap.2. Verſ.15. but made and placed them both at once; as it is ſaid of the ſoul, that it is at the ſame time created and infuſed, infuſed and created.

V.18. To divide] The time betwixt light and darkneſs, by their preſence and with drawment; and by alternate courſe or turnes to make their diſtinction betwixt night, which without light is dark; and the day,when the light baniſheth darkneſs, into the other Hemiſphere,or part of the world.

V.20 Moving Creature] Heb.Creeping thing. The fiſhes are called creeping things, (for ſo the Original word, Sherets importeth) becauſe as creeping things on the earth move with their bellies cloſe to the Element they live on, ſo do fiſhes in the water. The difference betwixt creeping and going creatures is properly in the feet, though if they be ſuch ſhort feet as bring their breſts or bellies neer the ground,they are ſaid to creep, (as a Lizard or Neut; and ſo we ſay of ſome other Creatures,whoſe legs do lift them up but a little way above the ground they go on;) now becauſe commonly ſuch things as creep do move but ſlowly, and fiſhes move very ſwiftly in the water; we commonly call their motion not creeping, but ſwimming, rather according to what we perceive by ſenſe, then what the Original word doth ſignifie. There are ſome ſwimming Creatures called amphibia, that have their abode partly on the Land, partly on the water, as the Crocodile,and the fiſh called the Sea-horſe; but though they have feet and uſe them on the land, yet in the water they move with their bellies on the water, and uſe their feet but as Oares to ſwim withal, as do Swans and ſuch like. There be many other kinds of creeping things of which, ſee Annot on ver.24.

V.21. And every winged fowl] According to our Tranſlation,and the Vulgar Latine, the fowles and fiſhes ſeeme to have had the ſame Original, ver.20. & 22. and indeed it is probable they were rather made the fifth day with the fiſhes, then the ſixth with the beaſts, becauſe the fowles and fiſhes are thrice mentioned in the fifth dayes work together, and no mention of the making them on the ſixth day among the beaſts; and though they be brought in among the beaſts, Chap 2.19. it is but occaſionally, to wit, that they might be named by Adam, as the fiſhes were not: But yet it may be they were made rather of the earth then of the water, though they were made the fifth day, becauſe it is ſaid, Let fowles multiply in the earth, ver.22 of this Chapter; and though ſome of them live much in the water,and of what they get out of the water, the moſt of them flying in the air, have their conſiſtence upon the earth, or ſome ſolid body reſting upon the earth. And yet there may be a third opinion as probable as either of the former, which is, that the fowles, as they live, ſo they were formed in the aire, and of it, other elements neceſſary to conſtitute mixt bodies (by divine Power) being tempered with it. Of which three opinions there is none either demonſtratively true, or dangerouſly falſe,if untrue.

created] To create in property of ſpeech (as is noted before in the Annot.on ver.1.) is to make a thing out of meer nothing, as the word Bara is uſed ver.1. The ſame word is uſed of the making of Whales though they had their being from precedent matter,becauſe that matter was originally nothing; and ſuch as it was, ſo unapt for ſuch a work, that without an infinite creating power it could never have been formed into a Whale.

great Whales] The Hebrew word Tanninim, rendred Whales, is taken in general for all great creatures,whether of the earth,or of the water; Plin.Nat Hiſt.lib 32.cap.11. writes that there are one hundred ſeventy ſix kinds that live in the watery region, and he ſetteth them down in an Alphabetical order,among which the Whales are the greateſt, being like moving Mountains in the Seas; for ſome of them,(as he giveth in the meaſure in the ſame Book, and the firſt Chapter) are ſix hundred foot long, and three hundred ſixty foot broad; they may then well be called great Whales, as the Sun and Moon, great lights, ver.16. yet as great as they were, they could not make themſelves,no more then the little Gnat or Piſmire could give a being to it ſelf. Of this creature much is ſaid in the Book of Job under the name of Leviathan, ſo is he called Chap.41. which name in the Original is a compound of two words,Lavah, which is to couple, and Thabnin, a Serpent or Dragon; becauſe by his bigneſſe he ſeems not one ſingle creature, but a coupling of divers together; or becauſe his ſcales are cloſed, or ſtraitly compacted together.

V.22 Bleſſed] That is, by the vertue of his Word he gave them power to ingender, beget, and bring forth their like in kind; for that is a bleſſing,Gen.8.17 and 9.1. and 24.60. Pſal.127.4,5. & 128.3 and therefore,(as ſome obſerve)God is not ſaid to bleſſe the Sun, or Moon, or Stars, or any other Creature that hath not life, becauſe they are not to increaſe and multiply like living creatures, which were made male and female for that purpoſe: This bleſſing of the fiſhes and fowles is not ſo expreſly mentioned as conferred upon the beaſts of the earth, nor omitted concerning them,becauſe (as ſome Jewes imagine) the Serpent is among them; but premiſed in the former bleſſing, or preſuppoſed in the difference of Sexe, whereby they multiply, which is their bleſſing.

V.24 Earth bring forth] This bringing forth was meerly miraculous, and ſo extraordinary, that the like was never after this time; God having ever ſince ſet the Creatures, which have difference of ſexe in a regular way of multiplication of their kind of procreation. How many of each ſort of fiſhes, fowles or beaſts, were formed at the firſt, and whether in the like number wherein they were received and reſerved in the Ark, Gen.7.2. God hath not revealed in his Word, and what he is not pleaſed to teach in ſuch points, we muſt not be curious to learn, much leſs peremptorily take upon us to reſolve.

living creature] The Creatures now made in the general are living Creatures, and are diſtinguiſhed into two kinds, going and creeping things; the going again are of two ſorts, Cattel and the beaſts of the earth; the word for Cattel in the Original is Behemah, which in the general acceptation may ſignifie any living creature, eſpecially great, wild or tame; and in particular, ſome take it for the greater ſort of beaſts, and therefore render it in the plural number by Pecora: and ſome for the leſſer ſort, and tranſlate it by Pecudes: But the moſt underſtand by it ſuch as are uſeful to man, either for his food or cloathing drawing, or burden-bearing, and therefore in Latine have their name from help, for the word is Jumentum, as it were Juvamentum: and Hhajiah, which is rendred beaſt, when it is put in the ſame ſentence with Behemah, it is taken (as ſome learned Hebrewes obſerve) for a wild beaſt, ſuch a one as Jacob thought had devoured Joſeph, Gen.37.20.

creeping things] Some creeping things had their original from the waters, ver.20. ſome from the earth, as here; and though now ſome of them be generated by corruption, all of them had their firſt original by creation, at leaſt the principal kinds of them: and for others, they might ſince be multiplied ſeveral ways, yet by vertue of the principles of the firſt production or creation of all things. And though many of them may ſeem to be of little or no uſe, yet they ſerve by compariſon to ſet forth the excellency of other Creatures, and to ſhew the power of God as well as the greateſt; by them was God much glorified in the miraculous conteſtation betwixt Moſes and the Enchanters of Egypt, Exod.8.19. and in his judgement upon the Egyptians, and upon other wicked perſons, who are ſometimes devoured by crawling and contemptible vermin; ſo was *Pherecydes. Ælian.Var.Hiſt.lib.5.cap.*28 See alſo Plutarch in the life of Sylla.

V.26. Let us make] This is ſpoken after the manner of men, as by way of deliberation and advice for a work of great weight and moment: but beſides, this word of plurality [us] may intimate the Trinity, diſtinctly noted in the firſt Epiſtle of John, Chap.5.7. In this manner (that is, plurally) God ſpeaketh of himſelf four times in Scripture, as beſides this place, of this Book, Chap.3.22. and Chap.11.7 and Iſai.6.8. and in divers of them, not by way of deliberation or advice, (as here) but ſo as to mind us of the myſtery of the three Perſons in one Godhead; and in this place God the Father ſeemeth to ſpeak as communicating by way of conſultation with God the Son, and God the Holy Ghoſt, concerning the creation of man. See Annot. the ſecond on ver.1. of this Chapter.

make man] Man is made on the laſt of Gods work-dayes, and the laſt work of that day; and as the laſt, ſo the beſt: what is expreſly mentioned, as part of the firſt dayes work, was moſt imperfect, not that God increaſed in skill by continuance in working, nor that he could not have wrought up his handy-work to perfection the firſt moment of Creation; but he meant by his example to teach us both patience in the expectation of proficiency, and diligence and perſeverance to bring it on by degrees, from good to better, and beſt of all; and withal he ſhewed his fatherly beneficence and providence to his eldeſt ſon Adam, Luke 3.laſt, in furniſhing the world, and making all things ready for his entertainment before he put him into it.

man] The word Adam, (put for man in the Hebrew, ſtanding for the whole ſpecies of mankind, as Chap 9 6.) ſignifieth (as Joſephus rendreth it) Ruddy, and he giveth this reaſon of that name, Becauſe (ſaith he) he was made of earth, tempered with red or yellow: for the earth which is Elementary, is of that colour, *Joſeph. Antiq. lib.*1. *cap.*2. This name is given by God to man, Gen.5.2. rather then to other creatures, though they were of earth alſo, becauſe he was in danger of pride by his preheminence, and becauſe he was capable (as they were not) of an humble and holy conſideration of his mean Original, being made of that Element on which every creature may ſet his foot, and lay his dung.

Image] Chap.5.1. & 9.6. 1 Cor.11.7. Col.3.10. The Image of God in man conſiſted not in any bodily ſhape, (as ſome hereticks have thought, and ſome ſimple people too eaſily believe; which errour is nouriſhed by Popiſh pictures of God, ſet forth in the reſemblance of man, contrary to Deut. 4.15,16) but in the nature of the ſoul, as it is a ſpiritual and immortal ſubſtance, and endued with three faculties underſtanding, will, and memory, as the Deity hath three Perſons, Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt; and in the now ſupernatural endowments of divine knowledge, righteouſneſſe and true holineſſe, Eccleſ.7 29. Epheſ.4. ver. 24. and laſtly, in authority and government of the creatures, in which reſpect are Governors chiefly called Gods, Exod.22.28.

likeneſſe] Image and likeneſſe are not two divers things, but the ſame more fully and clearly expreſſed in two words then in one; and that after the Hebrew manner in two Subſtantives, whereof the one is of an Adjective conſtruction. So, Let us make man after our own image after our likeneſſe, is in effect thus much, Let us make man after our Image, very like unto us: the like Hebraiſme may be obſerved, in Jer.29.11.

Let them] The word man, or, the Hebrew Adam, taken not perſonally or individually for one ſingle perſon, but collectively in this verſe comprehendeth both male and female of mankind: and ſo it may well be ſaid, not let him, but let them have dominion; which if it be conſidered negatively, as not extended to the ruling of the Ayr, Meteors, or Stars above him, (for he hath no power at all over them) it may admoniſh him of reverence and obedience to his Maker, to whoſe power and government alone they are reſerved, and ſo are not ſubject unto man, but (are as fellow-ſubjects) unto God.

Dominion] The Dominion which man had over all the creatures (the Fiſhes, even the great Whales and Fowles not accepted) was at firſt like that which the Centurion ſaith of his military Command over his ſouldiers, Luke 7.8. For they were obedient to him with readineſſe and reverence, ready to come or go at his command; but this obedience to man was forfeited by his diſobedience to God; and mans rebellion againſt his Maker is puniſhed with the creatures rebellion againſt him, even to his ruine, Ezek.14.21. Though here be no mention of Dominion among mankind over one another, but only over the other creatures, yet it is moſt like that Parents ſhould have authority over their children, which as it would have been exerciſed without any rigour, ſo it would have been obeyed without repining, or grudging. Of the Dominion of man over the ceeatures, ſee farther Annot. on Gen 9.2.

V.27. Male and female] Mat.19.4. Mark 10.6. Not at once, or in one perſon, but ſeverally; that is, though he united them in participation of his image, he diſtinguiſhed them into two ſexes, male and female, for the increaſe of their kind: their conformity in participation of Gods Image, is clearly manifeſt by many particulars, for in moſt of the reſpects fore-mentioned, Annot.3. in ver.26. the Image of God is equally communicated to them both, and Eve was ſo like to Adam (except the difference of ſexe which is no part of the divine Image) in the particulars fore-mentioned, that in them, as ſhe was made after the image of Adam, ſhe was alſo made after the image of God: as if one meaſure be made according to the ſtandard, an hundred made according to that, agree with the ſtandard as well as it.

V.28. Be fruitful] Theſe words are rather a benediction, as ver. 22. then an injunction for procreation; yet that alſo, ſo far as man was bound to do his part for multiplication of mankind: how far this agreeth to the condition of man ſince his fall into ſin, may be gathered by the words of our Saviour, Mat.19.10,11. and of the Apoſtle, 1 Cor.8.9, whereby all are allowed, and thoſe neceſſarily required to marry, (who have not the gift to continue in chaſtity without that remedy) whether they be Civil or Eccleſiaſtical perſons, ſince the difference of callings makes no difference of natural inclinations; and that marriage is honourable in all, Heb.13 4. without diſtinction or exception.

ſubdue it] Not by a conqueſt, as if it were rebellious from its creation; but by ſubduing is meant a keeping of it in a ſtate of ſubjection and ſervice to man, as if he had gotten the maſtery of it by force, Jer.34.11.

V.29. Bearing Seed] See Annot. on ver.12. Whether there were any fleſh eaten by the Fathers before the Flood or no, See Annot. on Gen.9.3.

V.30. And to every beaſt of the earth] Pſal.104 14. Though now divers ſorts both of beaſts and birds do live on fleſh, ſo as it ſeems natural to them, yet at the firſt it is probable there was no ſuch antipathy betwixt the creatures, nor ſuch an appetite to devour one another, as ſince the fall, which cauſed not only a falling out betwixt God and man, but betwixt man and man, man and the creatures, one creature and another; and the ſame creatures which now live upon fleſh, are obſerved in want of it, to feed on figs and cheſnuts, as Aug. ſheweth, *De Civ. Dei. lib.*15. Chap. laſt; and no doubt in the like defect they might, and do make uſe of other things which grow out of the earth, which in the beginning, before ſin had brought a curſe upon the creatures, were both more nutritive, and more delightful to the appetite of every creature, ſo they needed not to deſire any other diet.

V.31. Very good] Every particular creature was good, taken by it ſelf; good as from God; for as from his mouth proceedeth not evil and good, Lam.3.38. ſo from his hand proceedeth no evil at all, either of ſin or of pain, but good only, though ſince the corruption, the evil of pain be his work, Amos 3.6. as the evil of ſin was mans, Eccleſ.7.29. Secondly, Good in their qualities and effects, without any either guilt or hurt: But now taken all together, they are very good; and very good, becauſe their goodneſſe is diffuſive, and mutually communicated all over the world: and the more good, becauſe man, the moſt excellent of all Gods viſible works, was made, who only among them knowes the goodneſſe of the other creatures, and how to make good uſe of them all: and without knowledge and uſe they could not be ſo good either in eſtimation or in deed, as with them both: and God might call them good, and very good, becauſe of his own complacency in the creatures, Pſal.104.31.

In all this Hiſtory of the Creation, there is no mention of the creation of Angels, whence ſome have ſuppoſed them to be eternal; but againſt that may be alledged, Col.1.16,17. Some, that though they had a beginning, yet it was long before the Creation recorded in this Chapter; but in the ſame place of the Apoſtle, all things in heaven and in earth, viſible and inviſible, are wrapped up in one Original, and that diſtinguiſhed from the eternal duration of the Creator, who was before all things, and by whom all things conſiſt; and this according to the judgement of the foundeſt Divines in all ages. For the time of their making, this is certain, they were made before man fell; but on what day is uncertain, whether the firſt day with the higheſt heavens, (as ſome conceive: ſee Annot. laſt, on ver.1. of this Chap.) or the ſecond day (as others think) when the Firmament was made, by which they underſtand all the three heavens, whereof one is the habitation of Angels: or the fourth day, when ſome hold, that as the viſible heavens were garniſhed with Stars, ſo the inviſible were furniſhed with Angels; which might be the more probable, but that it ſeems the Angels were made before the ſtars; for, the Sons of God, by which are meant the Angels, are ſaid to ſhout for joy, at the firſt appearing of the morning ſtars, Job 38.7. In this diverſity of opinions for the time of the Creation, we conceive, that in the ſix dayes ſpace, and before the laſt day, there is no error of danger, which way ſoever we take it. If it be asked, why their creation was not more punctually expreſſed? the anſwer may be, not as commonly it is, that the Jewes were too dull to be informed of ſpiritual beings, for the myſtery of the Trinity is divers times inſinuated in this Book of Geneſis, and Cherubims are mentioned, Chap.3.24. and afterwards we read of Angels, Gen.19 1,15. and Chap 28.12. and 32.1. But becauſe this firſt Hiſtory was purpoſely and principally for information concerning the viſible world, the inviſible whereof we know but in part, being reſerved for the knowledg of a better life, 1 Cor. 13.9.

CHAP. II.

Verſ. 1. Thus the Heaven] This verſe might more fitly have been made the cloſe of the precedent Chapter, then the beginning of the preſent: for it ſummarily containeth what is particularly ſet downe in the firſt Chapter; as alſo that (all Gods ſpecifical works finiſhed on the ſixth day) he reſted on the ſeventh. The like inconvenient diviſion of Chapters may be obſerved betwixt 1 Cor.12. and ch.13. where the laſt verſe of the 12 Chap. might well have been made the firſt of the 13. and the laſt verſe of Acts 21 the firſt of Acts 22. Which incongruity is not to be charged upon the Word of God, which originally was not ſo divided into chapters and verſes, as now it is both in the Greek and Hebrew Text; and in the Tranſlations out of them.

all the hoſte of them] Pſal 33.6. All the creatures in heaven and on earth, in number, order, power, and ſervice are unto God, and under God that made them, as a great Hoſte and Army of ſouldiers under a General, Iſai.40.26. & 45.12. and of this Hoſte the Angels are a chief part; as Gen.32.1,2. Numb.22.31. Joſh.5.13. 2 Kings 19.35. Mat. 26.53. and the weakeſt kind of all his works (if muſtered to war by his command) will make a puiſſant Army, and will prevail againſt the proudeſt Tyrant. See Exod.8. And in ſuch ſervice the inanimate creatures (thoſe which have no life) upon an impreſſion of his power and pleaſure, will do the Office of valiant Warriours. See Judg.5.20.

V.2. On the ſeventh] Not incluſively, or including the ſeventh day among the number of work-dayes; but excluſively as ending, or having ended all his works on the ſix dayes, and then beginning his ceſſation on the ſeventh; which was not out of wearineſſe to work any more; for, he giveth power to the faint, and to them that have no might, he increaſeth ſtrength, Iſai. 40.29 therefore he neither fainteth, nor is weary, ver 28 not weary of his own works, which are all done without difficulty or pains to him, though he be ſaid in a figurative ſenſe to be weary of our works, Iſai.1.14. and Chap.7.13. and 43.24. Jer. 15.6. Mal.2.17. After the Greek Tranſlation of the ſeventy Interpreters, it is on the ſixth day for the ſeventh; but the Original Text muſt not be miſ-tranſlated, but rightly interpreted: a like expreſſion and meaning is in the Book of Eſther concerning the Jews ſlaughter of their enemies and their reſting from ſlaughter, Eſth.9.15,16,17.

ended his work] So that that day he wrought not as before; or the words may be read, He had ended his work; for the Hebrewes have but one Preter-tenſe, which comprehends the ſenſe of the Preterperfect and Preterpluperfect Tenſes.

reſted] He reſted from making any more kinds of Creatures; for all kinds were either actually or vertually made already, but he reſted not from concurring in operation for production or making of individuals or ſingular creatures; nor from creation of the ſouls of mankind, nor from the orderly Government of the world (already made) by his continual providence, which never ceaſeth, John 5.17. nor did he ſo ſtint himſelf by his ſix dayes work, but that when he pleaſed, he would work new works of wonder, above or againſt the ordinary operations of nature.

V.3. Bleſſed it] That is, ordained it for a day of thankful remembrance of his bleſſing in the abundance and variety of uſeful creatures made in the precedent ſix dayes; and for a day of bleſſing to the ſoul of man by the ſpiritual exerciſes of that day, which well obſerved, bringeth with it a great portion of bleſſing, not only in ſpiritual, but in temporal things, Iſai.58 14 as the profanation of it is the cauſe of a curſe, Neh.13.17,18. Jer 17.24,25,26,27.

ſanctified it] That is, appointed it to be kept holy by holy meditation of God, and of his works, with reference to him, and holy intercourſe with him in performance of all holy duties of devotion to him, in the acts of Charity and Mercy to man, which are as Sacrifices preſented to God, Heb.13.16.

it] That is, not only that ſeventh day, wherein God reſted, after all his works in ſix dayes were finiſhed, and which was the firſt Sabbath of the world, but a ſeventh day in weekly recourſe, according to that which was 2544 years after written in the fourth Commandment.

becauſe] This ſheweth, that the Sabbath is not here mentioned by anticipation, as a thing not in being from the beginning, but deſtined to be in time to come; for the Creation of the world in ſix dayes, and Gods reſting the ſeventh, being the cauſe of the Sabbaths inſtitution, the obſervation of it was not to be put off until the time of the gathering of Manna, Exod.16. where (after this place) it is firſt ſpoken of by Moſes; for that were to caſt the effect 2544 years behind the cauſe, and to begin the memorial that the world was made (which moſt concerned the people of the firſt ages of the world to remember and regard) not until 888 years (or thereabouts) after it was marr'd, for ſo many years after the Flood was the raining of Manna, and the ſtrict charge concerning the keeping of the Sabbath occaſioned thereby.

V.4. Generations] (Mat.1.1) That is, the ſtory of the generation, original or beginning of the heavens and the earth, and of all the creatures contained in them both.

in the day] The day is not here taken (as in the firſt Chapter, and in the beginning of this) for a ſeventh part of the week, but with more latitude for a time in general wherein a thing is done, or to be done; as ver.17. and Luk.19 42. 2 Cor.6.2. Ruth 4.5.

the Lord God] The Name God, hath been mentioned from the beginning of Geneſis to this verſe thirty three times or thereabouts; but he is not called Jehovah, before now the Creation was perfect; yet as if he were not ſo called now it is ſaid, Exod.6.3. By my name Jehovah was I not known. See Annot. on that place.

V.5. Before] The meaning is not that plants and herbs were firſt made, and then put into the earth, (as man was firſt made, and then placed in Paradiſe) but that God made the plants which before were not in the earth, nor could have been, but by his fore-going and fore-given power to produce them. See Gen.1.12.

rain] The fruitfulneſſe of the earth came not by the ordinary concourſe of ſecond cauſes, as rain from heaven, nor by humane labour on the ground.

V.6. But] Some for But a miſt, read, Or a miſt; ſome, Nor a miſt, continuing the negative of the precedent verſe; and ſo the fruitfulneſs of the earth was by Gods immediate power, without any other meanes natural or artificial from above, or from below.

but a miſt] Which went up, and came down in a dew whereby the earth was ſoftned, and diſpoſed to let out the ſeminal vertue, whereby God hath endowed it, for putting forth plants and fruits; and whereby thoſe that were already brought forth, were cheriſhed: and if they were not produced and perfected in an inſtant, (which God might eaſily do) they might have a further degree of proceeding to perfection, by means of this miſt.

V.7. Duſt] This mean original of mans body, though it ſerve to exalt the Power and Wiſdom of the Creator, who out of ſuch indiſpoſed materials could make ſuch a curious work, yet it ſerves to humble man in regard of the baſeneſſe of his beginning: and in regard of his now tranſitory condition, which is like to duſt before the wind, Pſal. 18. 42. not durable as Marble, or the rocks againſt which the winds blowing and waves beating cannot prevail, Mat.7.25. See Gen.3.19. and chap.18. ver.27.

formed] The word Jatſar in Hebrew, ſignifieth the act of a Potter, when he formeth ſomewhat out of clay. See Iſai.64.8. Jer.18. from ver.1. to ver.6. and Rom.9.20,21.

breathed] The Lord animated or inſpired him with a living and reaſonable ſoul or ſpirit, which preſently appeared by breath at his noſtrils; for the ſoul of man is not educed, derived or fetched out of any power in the matter of the body, nor made of any matter at all, as the body is, but as it is a ſpirit immaterial, and immortal, ſo it had its immediate Original from the Father of ſpirits, Heb.12.9. See Numb.16.22. and Chap.27.16. Job 27.3. Chap.33.4. Eccleſ.12.9 Zach.12.1.

breath of life] (Chap.7.22. Job 27.3. Iſai.2.22.) Heb. breath of lives. For man hath a vegetative life with trees and plants, a ſenſitive life with beaſts; and above them both, an intellectual or reaſonable life with Angels, though theirs be of a more excellent degree then his: there is alſo a life of grace and of glory to which Adam was created, and his poſterity reſtored by faith in Chriſt.

a living ſoul] That is, a living man, by a Synecdoche of the part (commonly the better part) put for the whole. See Annot. on Gen.12.5.

V.8. A garden] Though the whole earth was pleaſant and fruitful, and Garden-like, in reſpect of what it hath been ſince the fall, yet God was ſo good and kind to Adam, that he planted him a Paradiſe, choicely furniſhed with excellent plants and fruits, wherein we might live in a condition of dignity and delight. See Gen. 13.10. Ezek. 28.13. in which reſpect it was a figure of heaven, Luke 23.43. 2 Cor. 12.4. and into this Paradiſe he put him, having formed him before in ſome other place. This Paradiſe, though mentioned after the ſeventh day, was made before, viz. the third day, as man was the ſixth day, though his creation be particularly reported after the ſeventh day, by a figure called Hyſterologia, whereby that is ſet down after another thing which in ſtrictneſs of order ſhould be mentioned before it. Or, it may be ſaid, that the matter of the creation, or the material parts or ſeveral kinds of creatures were delivered in the firſt Chapter, and the manner of ſome particular works (more eminent then the reſt) recorded in the ſecond Chapter, and ſo there is no inverſion of order; or if there were, God is not tyed to Logical rules either for the courſe of his working, or for the diſcourſe and hiſtory of his works.

Eaſtward] From Canaan and Arabia petrea, where Moſes is thought to have been when he wrote this ſtory; ſo was Meſopotamia ſituate, (whereof in the next Note) ſee Numb. 23. 7. compared with Deut. 23.4. and Gen.28.from ver.2.to ver.8. incluſively compared with Chap. 29.1. See on chap.13.11.

Eden] The Hebrew word Ghneden, ſignifieth pleaſure or delight; whence it is like the Greek word Hedone (which ſignifieth the ſame) is derived, and ſo it may be an appellative not a proper name, and may be taken for a very pleaſant Garden or Orchard, without any particular deſignation of place, where it was planted. But it is more congruous to the holy Text, (and thereto the beſt Expoſitors agree) to take it here for a proper name of a place, as Gen.4.16. 2 King. 19.12. Iſai. 37.12. Ezek.27.23. and Chap.28.13. There were two Edens of eſpecial note, the one a Province in Syria, called Celoſyria, the other is that Region which firſt named Eden, was afterwards called Aram-fluviorum, or Aram Naharaim, Pſal.60.tit. Or, Meſopotamia, Gen.24.10. in the lower part of this Eden, (as we may probably conceive) was the Orchard or Garden of pleaſure here ſpoken of: probably, I ſay, for certainly none can tell: nor by reaſon of the great change of the world, both for the earth and water, the change of Rivers in their courſe, and names, was not haply knowne in Moſes time, except by revelation from God.

V.9. Tree of life] (Prov.3.18. Rev.2.7. and 22.2.) So called either becauſe it was of uſe, and had the force and vertue of ſupporting food, to nouriſh and cheriſh mans nature; and of preventing Phyſick, to preſerve it from diſeaſes and decay; and conſequently, (if man had not ſinned) to prolong his life alſo to many hundreds of years: (but whether Adam were to uſe it as his daily dyet is uncertain) Or, becauſe it Sacramentally ſignified, that if a man perſiſted in obedience to God, he ſhould continue in perfect health and ſtrength in that place, and ſtate, until thence (without diſeaſe or death) he were taken up to the place and ſtate of everlaſting life in the Paradiſe above, as Enoch was, Gen.5.24. and Eliah, 2 King.2.11. and (God, who gave it the name, fore-ſeeing both mans miſery, and his remedy by redemption of Chriſt) it might be ſo called as a type or figure of him, who brought life and immortality (to thoſe whom ſin had killed) by belief in his merits to obtain Gods mercy, vvhence he might (as he is) be named the tree of life, Rev.22.2.

in the midſt] Not Mathematically, as if it were preciſely and punctually in the midſt as in the center of Paradiſe, (for the tree of knovvledg of good and evil vvas there alſo) but [in the midſt] in the Hebrevv phraſe, is, among others, as Exod.3.20.Deut.11.3. 1 Sam.16.13.

tree of knowledg] Not ſo called in reſpect of God, as if thereby he ſhould experimentally know ſomewhat of the diſpoſition of Adam and Eve, which he did not fore-ſee; but from the event in reſpect of them, who by taſting of it againſt the revealed will of God, would learne and know by woful experience a vaſt difference betwixt the good of obedience, and the evil of diſobedience, thereafter as they kept or brake the Commandment given unto them. By this prohibition God witneſſed his own original right to diſpoſe of his creatures, both for uſe and forbearance, and put them to the practice of ſubmiſſion to their Maker in indifferent things; ſo far is God from allowing man to live lawleſſe in any ſtate, that he would have him to be under law in the ſtate of Innocency. What tree this was for kind, whether a fig-tree (as ſome think, becauſe fig-leaves were ſo ready to cover their nakedneſs, Chap. 3, 7) which is not like, becauſe a fig is not a fruit ſo pleaſant to the eyes, as that is ſaid to be chap.3.ver.6. or an apple-tree, for which ſome alledg, Cant. 8.5. but with little ground or proof; or whether of this tree or the former, there were only one or more of the ſame kind, we need not enquire, nor can we determine, ſince the Scripture is ſilent: the only fruit we can reap of this tree, is a leſſon of Caution againſt too much deſire of denyed, or forbidden knowledg.

V.10. Out of Eden] The Garden being in the lower part of the Countrey of Eden, a River ran down out of Eden to water it. Rev. 22 1.

four heads] From the Garden, the River was branched out into four ſtreams; the Original of theſe four ſtreames or rivers, here meeting together, and afterwards parted, ver.11. is now not known or found in any part of the earth: and no marvel, there having been ſo great mutations of things, both by the flood, and ſince by earth-quakes, which have changed the courſe of waters, and the names of Rivers; and divers of them, as the Rivers Alpheus, Arethuſa, Ana, and ſome others, running a great way under ground, ſeem to have their Original in ſeveral places; whence if the deſcriptions of places and rivers in latter times agree not with this of Moſes, we ſhould not conceive any contradiction to the truth of this ſtory, ſince as it is moſt ancient, ſo it is moſt infallibly true though in all points it appear not ſo to humane reaſon, or experimental obſervation of the degenerated world. Joſephus Antiq. lib. 1. cap. 2. makes theſe four heads to be four famous Rivers. Firſt, Ganges the greateſt River in India. Second, Nilus which runneth through Egypt. The third, Tigris, a great River in Armenia the greater. Fourth, Euphrates, another renowned River of the ſame Country. But theſe Rivers, eſpecially the three firſt, are ſo far diſtant, that there can be no ſuch affinity in their ſtreames as here is implyed; beſides, if all theſe four rivers ſhould be ſuppoſed to be in Eden, it would make the portion of land much larger, then either out of Scripture, or other Authors, whether Hiſtorians or Geographers, can be collected or ſuppoſed.

V.11. Piſon] The main River being ſuppoſed to be Euphrates, the firſt channel here noted is Piſon, or Piſchon, which the Greeks call by the name of a kingly River; this falls into Tigris, and gives the name of Paſitigris or Piſotigris to the concurrent ſtreams.

the land of Havilah] So called, (as ſome think) from Havilah the ſon of Cuſh, of the poſterity of Cham, Gen. 10. 7. but by obſervation of Hiſtory, it is more probable, that it was ſo called of Havilah of the poſterity of Shem, Gen.10.29. This Land of Havilah is thought to be in Eaſt India, the Geographers call it Suſiana, See chap.25.18. 1 Sam 15.7.

V.12. Gold is good] Yet commonly where there is gold below, there is the barreneſt ſoyl above: the earth therein is no hypocrite, with the beſt ſide outward: and yet (as many uſe the matter) gold how good ſoever in it ſelf, is not good for them; for whereas God hath placed it below their feet, they make it the Idol of their hearts, as Achan did, Joſh 7.21 which they would not do, if they conſidered, that for the moſt part thoſe Countries which are furniſhed with gold, are deſtitute of better proviſion both temporal and ſpiritual; and that the people who inhabit the place where it abounds, are ſlaves to the covetous, as the Indians to the Spaniards, who are ſlaves to this yellow Idol, taking gold for their god; a weak and unworthy god, which in time of famine would not be ſo much ſet by as a morſel of bread, and a cup of water.

Bdelium] Heb. Bedolahh is a clear gum, ſweet to ſmell to, but bitter in taſte, iſſuing out of a tree in colour black, and of the bigneſſe of an Olive tree, with leaves like an Oak, and fruit reſembling the wild fig. *Plin.Hiſt.lib.*12. *cap.*9. To the colour of this Gumme is Manna likened, Numb.11.7. and Manna, (though in figure it were like Coriander ſeed, which is black, or of a dark colour,) was in colour white, Exod. 16.31. wherefore ſome take the word Bdelium, not only for a yellow gumme like Amber, but for a white gumme, like Chryſtal; yet the beſt kind of Bdelium was yellow, as Pliny affirmeth in the place fore-mentioned.

Onyx ſtone] Of that ſee Exod.28.20.

V.13 Gihon, or Gibbon] The ſecond river or channel, which is deſcribed by the Countrey which it watereth.

Ethiopia] The Land of Cuſh, (ſo it is in the Hebrew) and that land is a part of Arabia, neer unto Meſopotamia, which fell to the inheritance of Cuſh the ſon of Cain: this is the Weſtern Ethiopia, ſo called for diſtinction from another Ethiopia neer unto Canaan.

V.14. Hiddekell] The third river or channel, called with ſome conformity, though with too much deflection from the Original, Diglito, *Plin lib.6.cap.*27 for Hidclito (as ſome think) hath its name from the ſwiftneſs of the ſtream.

Euphrates] So called by a Synecdoche of the whole for a part: the Hebrew name of Euphrates is Perath, from Pera, which ſignifieth to fructifie or make fruitful, becauſe (after the manner of the River Nilus) by over-flowing its banks, it waters the fields and meadowes. *Plin. Hiſt.lib.*5. cap 26. It is called the great River Euphrates, Deut. 1. 7. and Job 1. 4. not for that it was the greateſt of thoſe that were known to the Jewes, but becauſe of its broad ſpreading, when it overflowed the channels, wherein it exceeded the River Nilus; the ſpring-head of it, is ſaid to be Niphale, an hill in Armenia, whence it floweth through the midſt of Babylon, and at laſt runneth into the red Sea.

V.15. To dreſſe it] Notwithſtandiug the dignity of Adam's excellent condition, the variety and plenty of proviſion he had without any coſt or paines of his own, he was not to live an idle life, but to exerciſe his body in the work of a Gardener, to prune and dreſſe the trees and herbs of the Garden; and to keep it from the breaking in of Beaſts that were without it, and from the annoyance of thoſe that were within; for it is like that ſome Beaſts were conſtantly in it, or at leaſt had ſometimes admittance to it, for there they were when Adam gave names unto them, ver.19,20. and there was the Serpent that tempted Eve, Chap. 3.1. and the preſence of other creatures ſerved both for addition to his delight, and for augmentation to his knowledge, and for exerciſe of his duty in honouring his Creator, and of his dominion over the Creature; for which it may be the awfulneſſe of his preſence, but certainly a vvord or a beck vvas ſufficient. Novv though he vvere to vvork in the vveek dayes, it vvas not vvith vvearineſſe and ſvveat, (vvhich came upon him as a curſe aftervvard, upon the commiſſion of his ſin, Chap.3.19. and yet on the Sabbath (by Gods example, if not by his command) he vvas to reſt from that vvork, to give himſelf more intentively to the vvorſhip of God, and communion vvith God, vvhich he could not ſo vvell do, if he did any thing elſe at the ſame time.

V.16. The Lord commanded] The vvords next follovving are a precept in form, but in effect a permiſſion, or indulgence rather, as is that of the Apoſtle, 1 Cor 10.25,27. and yet in every intimation of the mind of God, there is a vertual command for man to be, and to do according to Gods revealed will therein, whether it be for duty, or for liberty; and where he alloweth the uſe of any thing, there he forbiddeth a ſuperſtitious forbearance of it; as Col.2.21. See on Chap.9.3.

V.17. Thou ſhalt not] An Enallage of number, putting the ſingular number for the plural; for it appeareth, Chap.3 1,2. that the prohibition was given to Eve as well as to Adam; unleſſe we diſtinguiſh of, the manner of giving, and ſay, that it was given to Adam immediately, and to Eve mediately by Adam; as Chriſt is ſaid to baptize, not immediately himſelf, but mediately by his Diſciples, Joh.4.1,2.

in the day that thou eateſt thereof, thou ſhalt ſurely dye] Which ſeemeth to be contradicted by the deferring of Adams death, and the reprieve of his life until he was nine hundred and thirty years old: (for he lived to that age, and then dyed, Gen.5.5) But the meaning of theſe words is, as if God had ſaid to him, So ſoon as thou takeſt and taſteſt of the forbidden fruit, thou ſhalt ſurely come down to a condition of mortality, thy body ſhall be ſubject to be ſeiſed on by ſuch diſeaſes and harmes, as will deliver thee up to death, and thy ſoul (ſtained and wounded by ſin) (when thy body is dead, unleſſe my mercy upon thy repentance pardon it) ſhall periſh by a perpetual ſeparation from the grace and glory of my preſence, which is another death much worſe then the former. Adam then was not abſolutely immortal, and without all poſſibility of dying; for ſo to be immortal is peculiar to God alone, 1 Tim.6.16. becauſe he only is incorruptible, and man corruptible, Rom.1.23. For God is a moſt pure and ſimple Eſſence, and man is compounded many ways. Secondly, Nor was he immortal by any freedom from death, flowing from the principles of his nature, as the Angels are, who are ſpiritual Creatures, not conſiſting of any material ſubſtance at all; and ſo the ſoul of man alſo is immortal, Mat.10 28. Thirdly he was not immortal only by ſingular or ſpecial grace and favour, as Enoch, Gen: 5.24. Hebr.11.5. and Elijah, 2 King.2.11. Fourthly, nor was he immortal as thoſe who are raiſed from the dead ſhall be, for they in their bodies, as well as in their ſouls, become immortal by divine ordination and ſupport, ſo that they cannot dye, having neither need nor uſe of meats, 1 Cor.6,13. though Chriſt to aſſure his Diſciples of the certainty of his Reſurrection did eat, Luke 24 43. as the Angels did, Gen.18.8. that they might be known to have bodies indeed, and not in appearance only, and might not yet appear to be others then men as their ſhape ſhewed them. Fifthly, but his immortality was a condition ſafe from ſickneſſe and death, (if he had not ſinned, Rom.5.12) until God ſaw it good to advance him from earth to heaven: ſo he had a power not to have dyed, but after the Reſurrection from the dead, death ſhall have no more power over the bodies of men, then over their ſouls; which in that reſpect, beſides others, may be called Spiritual bodies, as 1 Cor. 15.44. this Commination of death was given by God (though not, ſo taken by man) as a caveat againſt ſin: for as in the ſtate of innocency, there was uſe of a law for exerciſe of obedience, and for a tribute of duty unto the Creator, ſo was there cauſe and uſe for threats unto the creature (though in his moſt holy and excellent condition) to keep him from ſinne: how much more needful are both in our degenerate ſtate, for reſtraint of our corruptions, and the repulſe of temptations, from which the grace of the Goſpel doth not free us; for the members have no priviledg which the head hath not. See Mat. 4. from ver.1. to the tenth.

V.18. It is not good] (Ruth 3.1.) That is, firſt, not ſo profitable for increaſe: Secondly, Not ſo comfortable for a mans ſelf, Eccleſ 4.9, 10, 11,12. Thirdly, not ſo conformable to the community of living creatures, who as male and female ſort together for the increaſe of their kind: Fourthly, nor ſo honourable for the Creator, for his ſervice wil be more and more ſolemn by company, then by any one alone: yet in times of perſecution it may be better to be ſingle, then to be yoaked in marriage, as the Apoſtle reſolveth, 1 Cor.8.26,28. To this purpoſe, ſee alſo Jer.16.2 meet for him] As graceful in his ſight above other creatures, and grateful to him, both as a companion in the comforts of life, and as a partner for the propagation and increaſe of mankind.

V.19. Fowl of the ayr] See Annot.on Chap.1.21.

And brought] By moving them to come and preſent themſelves to Adam as their Lord, to whom they were to be in ſubjection, Pſal.8 6,7 8 So they came to Noah to be kept in the Ark, Gen.7.9. by Gods appointment, Chap.6.20.

to ſee] Not that God was doubtful what prudence was in Adam, nor how he would make uſe of it in this particular: but after the manner of men God ſpeaketh here; as Chap.18 21 whereby he putteth him to give evidence of his wiſdom, in giving the creatures names according to their natures; or otherwiſe as in diſcretion they might moſt fitly be diſtinguiſhed.

that was the name] The giving of names to the creatures, is an act of authority over them, and the acceptation of thoſe names is an acknowledgment of that Authority. See Gen.5.2,3. and Chap.17.5,15. Luke 1,63. and Chap.2.21.

one of his ribs] Not a bare bone, but a rib with fleſh on it, ver.23. It was not ſuperfluous nor monſtrous, if he had one rib more then ordinary put into his ſide for ſuch a purpoſe; and if it were one of the ordinary number which goeth to the compoſition of mans body God might ſoon make him another by his multiplying power; as Luk 9. ver.13, 4. Or he might harden the fleſh to the ſtrength of a bone, as the gums of ſuch as have loſt their teeth are ſometimes ſo hardned, as to be able to chew the hardeſt meat: and it muſt needs be eaſie to him to uphold the ſtrength of Adam, though he wanted the rib, who could put ſuch vigour into the haires of Samſon, Judg.16 17.

V.22. The rib] Womans original was not ſo high as the head, nor ſo low as the foot, becauſe ſhe neither was to be her husbands Miſtreſſ nor his ſlave, but betwixt both: and it was neer unto the heart, th his authority might reliſh more of loving reſpect, then of rigorous power: and that her obſervance of him, might be rather heartily then grudgingly performed: her making is mentioned now after the Sabbath, though ſhe were formed the ſixth day, Gen. 1.27. as well as Adam, becauſe in the firſt Chapter their creation in the general was noted with other creatures, but in regard of the excellency of mankind above them all, God is pleaſed to make a more particular relation of the manner of their making, firſt of the man, ver,7. and here of the woman.

woman] 1 Cor.11.8.

brought her] God brought the woman to the man, as a wife to her husband, and joyned her to him as an helper, and thereby ſhewed the ſanctity and dignity of marriage, being ordained, and the firſt marriage made by God himſelf in the beſt and holieſt eſtate that ever man enjoyed upon earth woman] Or, Manneſſe, (as in the Hebrew Iſh is man, and Iſhah woman) that is ſo neer of kin to man, being bone of his bone, and fleſh of his fleſh, that he cannot contemn her, but he muſt diſhonour himſelfe.

V.23. This now is] How knew Adam this, he being in a deep ſleep while the rib was taken out of his ſide, ver.21. of which ſhe was made? It was an abſurd as well as ſinful compact of the Prieſts and Elders, that the ſouldiers ſhould ſay, the Diſciples of our Saviour ſtole him out of the grave while they ſlept Mat.28.12,13. for if they were aſleep, how could they tell he was ſtollen? But for Adam, though it be ſaid he was aſleep until the rib was taken out, and the fleſh cloſed up, it is not ſaid, he was aſleep while the woman was made; or if he were, he might know her original by him that made her. Some hence infer, That at the Reſurrection of the dead, the knowledg and acquaintance of friends ſhall be renewed; which if it be true, cannot yet be concluded from this example.

V.24. Leave] Pſal.45.10. Whether theſe words be the words of God, or of Adam, or of Moſes, is ſomewhat doubtful; but it ſeemes moſt probable that they are the words of Moſes, applying the duty of cohabitation, and bond of union betwixt man and wife, as fit to be preferred before the cohabitation and union of parents and children, whether the parents be kind or unkind unto them; as Gen.31.14. though the duties of theſe relations (ſo far as they may conſiſt with the neceſſity of matrimonial intereſts) muſt not be omitted, or ſlightly performed.

one fleſh] (Mat.19.5. Mark 10.8. 1 Cor.6 16. Epheſ.5.31. Mat. 14.15.) The man is to be as chary of his wives body, as if it were his own, Epheſ.5.28,29. and the woman of his, as if it were her own; and both, ſo peculiarly and properly their yoak-fellows, as not to account their own bodies at their own diſpoſal, 1 Cor.7.4 and in the production and procreation of children, they be ſo one fleſh, that it cannot be diſtinguiſhed in the children, which part is the mans, and which the womans; and conſequently in ſundry reſpects they are as one perſon.

V 25. Not aſhamed] Shamefac'dneſs is not properly a vertue, but a perturbation of the mind, ariſing out of the apprehenſion of an ignominious or diſgraceful evil, Ariſt Eth l.4.c.9. and out of fear of a juſt reprehenſion for it, Gell.Noct. Attic.l.19.c.16. yet they are commonly moſt vitious who are leaſt apt to bluſh, or to be aſhamed of what is ſaid or done amiſs, as we may obſerve by the aggravation of ſin ſet down by the Prophet Jeremiah, Chap.6.15. and 8.12. Before ſin, all things were honeſt and comely, ſo that there was no cauſe of ſhame to Adam or Eve, either before God, or betwixt themſelves; their bodies as Gods handy-work were perfect and glorious pieces, to which before their fall, the braveſt apparel would have been as a cloud ſpread over the Sun, or as a black mask over a beautiful face; but having ſinned they felt an inward guilt, which made them aſhamed; and yet when ſin is utterly aboliſhed, the primitive naked beauty and boldneſs will be reſtored, and be glorious again in all thoſe, who by the ſecond Adam have redemption and deliverance from all the evil that came upon them by the firſt Adam. See 1 Cor.15.43. 2 Cor.5 3. Rev.3.18.

CHAP. III.

Verſ. 1. S*Erpent*] There is a great difference of Serpents noted in Natural Hiſtory, Plin.Hiſt l.8.c.14. for ſome are very little, ſome exceeding great; ſome (according to the ſignification of the Latine word) creep and ſome flye: the flying Serpents are called Dragons; and the Divel having the malignity of both, is called both a Serpent and Dragon, Rev.12.9. and 20.2. and ſome are in the mixture of colours very ſpecious and delightful to the eye; and ſuch a Serpent it is like the Divel uſed when he tempted Eve, to tranſgreſſe Gods prohibition of the fruit of the Tree of knowledg of good and evil.

ſubtil] (Gen 49 17. Pſal.58.5.) The word Nabhaſh here uſed, in the Original importeth a ſearching, obſerving and knowing by experience, Gen.30.27. in which kind of knowledge (ſo far as the ſenſible creature was capable) the Serpent excelled others, that were not endowed with reaſon, as man is: this ſubtilty is noted by our Saviour, Mark 10.16. and by the Apoſtle, 2 Cor.11.3. whereto Natural Hiſtorians give witneſſe, as Plin.Hiſt l.8.c.27. By this Creature the Divel tempted and deceived Eve; as by an Aſſe an Angel reproved Balaam, Numb.22.28. 2 Pet.2 16. For he was a murderer from the beginning, John 8.44. and he began his murder by ſubtil deceiving, thereby bringing Adam and Eve under the doom of death, Gen. 2.17. And as a murderer deſirous to wound deeply, that he may ſtrike deadly, will look that his weapon be ſharp; ſo the divel chuſeth the ſharpeſt and ſubtileſt wits for his inſtruments of miſchief, that having ſeduced them, he may by them prevail the more for ſeducement of others.

and he ſaid unto the woman] In beginning with the woman, he ſhewed his ſubtilty, for by her he had a double advantage; the one was, in that ſhe was of the weaker ſexe, and ſo the eaſier to be overcome; the other, in that ſhe was alone; for where two are, there is help, Eccleſ. 4.10. Yet Eve had been better alone, then with the Serpent, and Adam better alone, then with tempting Eve; it is not company ſimply, but good company, which is good for man or woman. Some inquire, how it came to paſſe ſhe was not with her husband? it might be that walking in the garden, and gazing on the variety of plants and fruits, and flowers, her eye and fancy ſetled upon ſome pleaſing object, which Adam paſſing by with leſſe liking or looking on, got ſo far before her, as that he left her behind, whereby ſhe was overtaken by the Serpent.

Yea, hath God] If this were the beginning of his ſpeech to the woman, it was very abrupt, and ſo might the more aſtoniſh her, eſpecially putting her ſo ſtrange a queſtion on the ſudden: but ſome think the words preſuppoſe a precedent parley, wherein he made his entrance into the matter in a more rhetorical manner; and there is no doubt but he uſed all his art, both in the propoſal and purſuit of his plot; and his aim was in this interrogation to weaken the authority of Gods Word, and to wreſt the ſword of the Spirit out of her hand, or to blunt the edge of it; which, if it had been held and weilded as it ſhould have been, would have put Satan to flight, as he was by the ſame weapon by our Saviour, Mat.4.10.

V.2. And the woman] The knowledg of Eve was very great the firſt day of her being, much more of Adam, which appeared by his giving of meet names unto the Creatures, Chap. 2. 19, 20. yet in ſome things it was to increaſe by experience; and it may be this was one thing wherein Eve was ignorant, viz. whether the Serpent could naturally ſpeak or no: for ſhe confeſſeth ſhe was beguiled by the Serpent, ver.13. which might be by making her believe that ſpeech was natural to that Creature; or if not, that it was no evil Spirit that ſpake by him; (for it is not like ſhe knew any thing yet of the fall of Angels, though what good thing it was that made uſe of him ſhe could not tell) otherwiſe it would have aſtoniſhed her (and it may be, it did ſo at the firſt, for a while at leaſt) to hear ſuch diſcourſe from ſuch a creature; againſt which ſhe ſhould have done, as the Pſalmiſt ſaith of the deaf Adder, which is, that he ſtoppeth his ear, and will not hearken to the voice of the charmer, charm he never ſo wiſely, Pſal.58.4. or if ſhe would give him the hearing, ſhe ſhould have made him no anſwer, at leaſt have given no conſent before ſhe had conſulted with Adam; and if they both had been of one mind, ſhe ſhould againſt both have pleaded the prohibition of God, and grounding her ſelf on that, ſhould have reſolutely perſiſted in refuſal of the motion, which was ſubtilly firſt made unto her, 2 Cor. 11.3. as being more weak to reſiſt the temptation then Adam was, and yet ſtrong enough to blow the ſparks which were kindled in her heart to enflame his affections to the ſame offence. It is not ſafe for any man, much leſſe for any of the weaker ſexe, to lend an ear to a ſeducing tongue.

V.3. Touch it] This ſeems to be an addition to the Divine prohibition, for only eating of it is forbidden, Chap.2.ver.17. as leſt ye dy in this third verſe, a diminution from the word of God; for the commination was peremptory, beyond peradventure, thou ſhalt ſurely dye, Chap.2. verſ.17. This adding to, and taking from the Word of God, is that ſin which is doomed to a fearful curſe, Revel. 22.18,19. Some think ſhe made this addition with a good intention, and if that were good, the addition for all that was naught: It is not lawful to do evil that good may come thereof, Rom.3.8.

V.4. Not ſurely dye] Heb. Not dying dye. That is, certainly ye ſhall not dye; or ye ſhall not dye at all. The woman diminiſhed the Divine Commination, making that danger doubtful, ver.3. which God denounced in words of certainty and aſſurance, Chap.2. ver.17. the divel wholly denyed it, and was as confident in his ſlighting the ſentence of death, as God was ſerious and ſevere in threatning it before; ſetting Eve free from fear, that ſhe might be free to ſin.

V.5. For God] As if God had put this prohibition upon them out of envy, (the divels proper ſin) or fear, leſt by eating thereof man ſhould become as wiſe as himſelf; the devil thus abuſing the name of the Tree of Knowledg (for he would make the woman believe it would give intelligence of all things) he makes the Tree much better then it was, or could be, that God might be thought as bad, and they might become as miſerable as himſelf, by ambitious affectation of a Deity, which was not poſſible to be obtained any way; or if it could be at all, it was moſt improbable it ſhould be that way.

as gods] (Not as Angels, as the Chald. Paraph. hath it) We have a Trinity of Perſons in one Godhead (as before hath been noted) but no plurality of gods, till the Divel taught it: and here is his firſt broaching of that Idolatrous Doctrine, which ſince this time hath multiplied to an innumerable rabble of falſe gods; for in China there are no fewer then an hundred thouſand Idols.

good and evil] Good by the loſſe of it, evil by the ſenſe of it.

V.6. Saw] Her curious gazing on this goodly fruit, made her liquoriſh to taſte of it; her pride, upon her hope to be a goddeſſe, incited her to a preſent ſatisfaction of her deſires, wherein concurred the three grand cauſes of ſin mentioned by Saint John, 1 Joh.2.16. her eares before were as open doors to lying detraction againſt God; now her eyes are as glaſs-windowes to convey the ſpecies of a lovely object to the concupiſcence of the palate: ſin is a ſpeedy graduate, quickly paſſing from one ſenſe to another, from one faculty to another; and the Devil drives it on like Jehu with a furious pace, 2 Kings 9.20. It were well we had ſhuts to all our ſenſes, as we have to our eyes, and that we would make a covenant with them againſt inticing objects, as Job did, Job 31.1. and that we would keep aloof from the occaſions of ſin, wherein Satan ſets his bait: It is not ſafe to be at his meſſe, though our ſpoon be never ſo long.

V.7. The eyes of] The Divel promiſed the opening of their eyes, as an addition of divine knowledg, which yet they had not, ver. 5. but he ſpake ambiguouſly and deceitfully, meaning, to make them know by experience both ſin and miſery, of both which their ſtate of Innocency was happily ignorant: and whereas God ſaith, ver. 22. Behold, the man is become as one of us, it is no atteſtation to Satans promiſe, but an ironical deriſion of mans miſerable condition for his ambitious preſumption.

of them both] What diſtance there was betwixt Eves eating and Adams, or whether Adam came in while Eve was taſting, is uncertain: it appears, that until he had eaten, ſhe was not apprehenſive either of ſin or of ſhame, and ſorrow that belonged to it; haply becauſe her ſin was not complete, until (by ſeducing her husband to ſociety in it) it had begotten or brought forth another in its owne image or likeneſs.

were opened] The opening of the eyes, in Scripture, ſignifieth, either firſt a cure, or recovery of blindneſs, as Joh. 9.10. 2 King.6.20. Or ſecondly, the diſcovery of an object not yet diſcerned, as Luke 24.31 Gen.21.19. Numb.22.31. Or thirdly, an intentive looking on, marking, or minding of a thing; and ſo it is applyed ſometimes to God, Dan.9.18. The opening here ſpoken of was different from all theſe; for here was not only a new act of diſcerning, but a new object to be diſcerned, which before had no being: they were naked before, and they knew that they were ſo; yet until they had ſinned, they apprehended no corruption in their natures, no ſenſe of concupiſcence, no rebellion in their fleſh againſt the law of their mind, no indecorum or uncomelineſs in any of the parts, though naked; which now on the ſudden, upon commiſſion of ſin, had both exiſtence and appearance.

knew that] (Revel.3.17) They now apprehended their nakedneſſe, with the guilt of ſin, as a ground of ſhame; and knew alſo by woful experience, that Gods words were true, and the tempters falſe.

ſewed] That is, faſtned them together with thornes or ſtalks of flowers or fruits; for there was no artificial ſewing, nor inſtruments to ſew withal at that time.

fig-leaves] Which were broad, and haply nigh at hand: to ſuch poor ſhifts they betook themſelves to cover their ſhame, when they ſhould have confeſſed, and craved pardon for their ſin, Job 31.33. but we read not a word either of confeſſion of a fault, or deprecation of puniſhment; yet before God left them, it is like he brought them to both; and thereupon to comfort them, he made the gracious promiſe, ver.15.

aprons] Some Tranſlators ſay breeches; aprons are now moſt uſed by women, and breeches by men; but the original ſignifieth properly neither the one nor the other, but things to gird, or bind about.

V.8. Voice] Walking, and local motion, and voice here aſcribed to God, and heard by Adam and Eve, have occaſioned ſome to conceive, that our Saviour at this time appeared to them in an humane form; which may be ſo, though there be no proof in Scripture that it was ſo: and both ſpeech and motion might be heard without any ſuch corporal or perſonal apparition unto them; for God could eaſily form articulate words in the aire, and make a ſound, as if ſome body walked neer unto them.

cool of the day] Heb. Wind of the day. That is, toward the evening when the aire uſeth to move with a refreſhing gale of wind, eſpecially where there is any vicinity or neerneſs of trees and waters, as in Paradiſe there was: then when luſt had conceived and brought forth ſin, and ſin was finiſhed and brought forth death, Jam. 1. 15. at leaſt in deſert, God came as a juſt Judge to a ſolemn tryal and doom againſt all the offenders: his ear and eye were open to hear and ſee all the paſſages of this wicked conſpiracy againſt himſelf; but his ſilence and patience were no diſpenſation for ſin, but rather a preparation for puniſhment, that ſin going before, he may purſue it with ſorrow and ſhame afterwards; and ſo by his own juſtice he may make himſelf amends for mans diſobedience.

hid themſelves] The ſinful conſcience ſeeketh to ſhun Gods preſence with as much folly as faultineſs; for he that formed the eye, ſhall he not ſee? Pſal.94.9. See alſo Pſal.139.7. Beſides, unleſs they would run away from themſelves, they could have little comfort; for the guilt of their ſouls will go along with them whither ſoever they go; and if ſo, they are but as the fiſh that ſwimmeth to the length of the line with an hook in the mouth.

V.9. Where art thou?] God asketh this queſtion, not needing Adams anſwer for his information, for, there is not any creature that is not manifeſt in his ſight, Heb.4.13. See 2 Chron.16.9. Pſal.139.1,2,4. but becauſe he meant judicially to proceed againſt him, he would not condemn him before he heard him.

V.10. Naked] His hypocriſie here appeareth, imputing his hiding to his nakedneſs; for before ſin they were both naked, and were not aſhamed, Chap.2.25 whereas he ſhould have ſaid, I have ſinned, and therefore as a guilty perſon,am aſhamed and afraid to appear in the preſence of a powerful and righteous Judg. See Annot. on Exod 32.25.

V.11. Who told thee? ——Haſt thou,&c?] By theſe queſtions he ſhould have been guided to a free and unfained confeſſion of his ſin, and to a deprecation of Gods diſpleaſure; but he ſought to hide his iniquity,Job 31.33. and when that could not be, he ſought to ſhift off his fault from himſelf, to his fellow or aſſociate in ſin.

V.12. The woman whom thou gaveſt] By this he makes as if it were Gods fault in giving him the woman,rather then his own,in taking from her hand the forbidden fruit, and eating of it againſt the expreſſe prohibition received from God; as if he were more juſt then God, more pure then his Maker,Job 4.17. A great aggravation of his precedent ſin,and a juſt ground of the ſeverity of the puniſhment which God brought upon him afterwards; yet the Apoſtle ſeems to acquit him from fault, where he ſaith, Adam was not deceived, but the woman being deceived, was in the tranſgreſſion,1 Tim.2.14. but though Eve did not deceitfully ſeduce him, as her ſelf was deceived, 2 Cor.11.3. and therefore he ſaith not(by way of excuſe) the woman deceived me, yet it was his great fault ſo to take up the ſin at the ſecond hand, as he did, when he ſhould rather have rebuked her boldneſs,then followed her in it.

V.13 The Serpent] She confeſſeth the fact, ſaying, ſhe did eat, but denyeth the fault, imputing that to the Serpents deceit, rather then to her own ambitious mind, and rebellious appetite. Thus Adam and Eve make woful work for themſelves and their unhappy poſterity; ſhe tempteth him to diſobey God, he teacheth her by his example to delude God by ſhifting evaſions, which were but like their figleaves,too narrow to cover their ſin, too thin to ward off the ſtroke of God juſtice.

V.14. Becauſe] God queſtioneth and conferreth with Adam and Eve, becauſe he meant to bring them to repentance; but he putteth no queſtion to the Serpent, or rather to the Divel in the Serpent, becauſe he would ſhew him no mercy; for that he ſinned of himſelf, without any to ſeduce him, and againſt a greater meaſure of light, and ſtronger obligation of love, and with hatred to God, with blaſphemous ſlanders of his goodneſs, and out of deſperate envy that mans condition was better then his,and that he was to poſſeſs the happineſs which to him was unrecoverably loſt; hence is his miſery left without all help or hope of remedy.

thou art curſed] This curſe was denounced againſt the Serpent, not as guilty of ſin, (for the Law was given to man, not to him, and where there is no law, there is no tranſgreſſion, Rom.4.15.) but to ſhew Gods hatred, and to ſtir up deteſtation of ſin, by divine ſeverity ſhewed againſt the inſtruments of it, as Exod.32.20. Lev.20.15,16.

upon thy belly] The Serpents poſture, though before his curſe it was not upright, like unto mans, yet it might be lifted up by legs ſome diſtance above the ground, as in Geeſe and other fowl; ſuch Serpents are mentioned by Pliny, Nat. Hiſt.lib 11. *c.*46. or by the artifice of Satan who poſſeſſed him, he might be erected ſo, that he might with more decorum confer and converſe with the woman; and this ſeems the more probable, becauſe chap.3.1. he is ſorted to the beaſts of the field, which are diſtinguiſhed in kind from creeping things, Chap. 1. 25. But upon his ſervice to Satan, in this ſeducement to pride of the Spirit, and concupiſcence of the palate, he might be brought down to creep and crawl upon the earth; or if he crept on the earth before, that motion might from henceforth be a pain to him, though before it were not; as Adams labor before ſin was enjoyned as an exerciſe, Chap.2.15. but after it was impoſed as a penalty,Chap.3.19.

duſt ſhalt thou eat] That is ſaid of the Serpent, Iſai.65.laſt. and Mic. 7.17. Deut.32.24. which if it be not his ordinary dyet according to the letter, yet his moving and crawling in the duſt, raiſeth duſt up to his mouth; and having his food where every foot doth tread, it cannot but have much duſt, or other filth upon it, or ſticking to it. In this curſe of the Serpent,the Divel hath his ſhare,and in a figurative ſenſe the worſt part; for he is much more debaſed then the ſerpent, for the Serpents place is the ſuperficies or ſurface of the earth, the divels a great way below it, even in the nethermoſt hell: and as the Serpents food is vile and filthy, ſo is the divels much worſe,for if there be any thing which is to him as meat is to the hungry, it is the impiety of blaſphemers, the impurity and pollution of ſuch ſinners, as are like filthy dogs licking up their own vomit, and as ſwine wallowing in the mire, 2 Pet. 2. 22. which is much more vile then any duſt or dirt, whereby either man or beaſt may be defiled.

V.15 Enmity] (Matth.23.13. Joh.8.44. Acts 13.10. Prov.29. 27. 1 Epiſt. Joh 3.8.) The brood of Serpents, and the generation of mankind are irreconcileable enemies to each other. See *Plin. lib.*2. cap. 20. & *lib.*2.*cap.*63. but the greateſt and ſharpeſt hoſtility is betwixt the godly ſeed of the woman, and the wicked ſeed of the ſpiritual Serpent Satan; who, ſo far as he is diſcovered to be what he is indeed, is hated and abhorred of mankind in general,as he hates all mankind without exception, though he be ſo crafty(in concealing his cruel wrath,and putting on appearances of good will to man,as here to Eve) that over a great part of the world by the power of his Impoſtures,he ruleth as a God,2 Cor.4. 4. This enmity had here its beginning,but it is never to have an end,neither in this world, nor in the world to come.

it ſhall bruiſe] The word in the Hebrew Hu,and in our Bible tranſlated [it,]is of the maſculine Gender; that is,He, (if applyed to a perſon) not [Hi] which is ſhe in the feminine; and Zera, which is ſeed in the Hebrew of the maſculine gender alſo: So is the Verb Jeſhuphecha,(ſhall break) all concurring to confine the promiſe to Chriſt the promiſed Seed; and confuting the Tranſlation which putteth ſhe, for it or he,and giveth the glory of our Saviour to her, who was ſaved by his vertue and victory as well as others,Luk.1.47. Yet in a ſecondary ſenſe,not only ſhe,but all the members of Chriſts myſtical body ſhall partake of his tryumph,for by him ſhall Satan be trodden under their feet, Rom.6.20. and ſo ſhall all thoſe that are of Satan (as the godly are of Chriſt) be trodden down with him.

thy head] The life of a Serpent reſts moſt in his head,and his head,by creeping on the ground,is neer the feet of his enemies, and ſo ready to be trodden on and cruſhed in pieces: the Divel the moſt dangerous Serpent is in the like danger from Chriſt,and true Chriſtians, as it is in the forecited place,Rom.16.20.

his heel] The Serpent hath but one head,but the Seed of the woman hath two heels, ſo that the one may be ſome help while the other is hurt, as is wittily obſerved by a late learned Divine. Beſides, an hurt in the heel, is far from the head and heart, and though it may be painful, it is not mortal: ſuch are the afflictions and perſecutions of the godly by the Divel and his agents, from whom whatſoever harm they receive in their bodies, goods or good names, is in compariſon of their better part, (which they, whether men or Divels, cannot reach) but as a bruiſe in the heel,which cannot indanger the ſpiritual life of their ſouls,Mat.10.28. and the ſafety of them will, by conſequence, bring in the recovery of the body from any wound or hurt, yea, from death,and the cloſeſt priſon of the grave or coffin.

V.16. And thy conception] The multiplying of Conception ſoundeth like a comfort, but the meaning may be, (as is before noted of the Hebrew phraſe, uſing two Subſtantives for a Subſtantive and an Adjective, as chap.1. verſ.26. Annot.5.) that he will multiply her ſorrowful conceptions, which ſhall be many,by often abortions, or untimely births; whereas, but for ſin, ſhe might by one conception, have been a happy mother of many together, as we ſee by experience in other kinds, (and ſometimes in women kind) and that without pain, whereas now a womans child-breeding and child-bearing, is more grievous, then to the females of any other kind, *Ariſt.hiſt. Animal.l.*7. *c.*9. which (though it proceed of a natural cauſe) God would have ſo ordered and over-ruled, as to have made, not only ſafe,but eaſie alſo, but for precedent ſin, without which death had never way-laid the child, nor mother, in the paſſage into the world, nor ſent any out of the world afterward, nor had there been any pain, either at the firſt appearing in it, or final parting from it.

rule over thee] The ſubjection of the woman to her husband, was not repugnant to the ſtate of Innocency; but then as the authority of the man would have been uſed with juſtice and kindneſſe,ſo the obedience of the woman would have been pleaſant and cheerful; whereas now for holding a conſpiracy with Satan,and abuſing her familiarity with her husband, ſhe was like to find leſs comfort in her communion with him; for by ſin conjugal kindneſs is turned to auſterity, juſtice to injury, willing obedience to reluctancy and frowardneſs; and ſo the yoak which would alwayes have been ſweet and eaſie, becometh many times (eſpecially if any be unequally yoaked in reſpect of their conditions) hard and bitter to be borne, yet born it muſt be, 1 Cor.14.34. Tit.2.5. 1 Pet.3.6.

V.17. Curſed] The earth was deprived of its former fruitfulneſſe, yeelding neither ſo much fruit, nor ſo good fruit, nor with ſo much eaſe as before it did: ſince which there was need of the help of husbandry with toyl to till it,though of it ſelf without tillage,it abounded with hurtful increaſe. Of the curſe on the creature,ſee Iſai.24.5,6. Rom.8.20,22.

V.18. Thornes] If thornes were the natural fruits of the earth before the fall,which ſome affirm,ſome deny (ſaying the Roſe was before, the thorny hedg only ſince): yet by ſin they were ſharpned and converted to a curſe in their ſuperabundance,and growing where they ſhould not, and tearing mans fleſh ſometimes caſually,and ſometimes inſtrumentally and purpoſely (as Gideon threatned the men of Succoth,Judg.8.7.) which but for ſin ſhould never have been.

herb] Under this word is comprehended corn of ſeveral kinds,as wel of ſuch things as growing out of the earth are uſually called herbs by way of diſtinction from corn; of ſuch he muſt now take his diet,which were neither ſo pleaſant nor ſo wholſom, nor ſo eaſie to be had,as his proviſion in Paradiſe, out of which God purpoſed to expel him, and to put him to a larger paſture, but to ſo much poorer commons, as the common field is worſe furniſhed in proviſion then a pleaſant garden.

V.19. Sweat] By the ſweat of the face is underſtood all manner ~~as~~ of labour,whether of the body or brain,Eccl.1.13. as alſo whatſoever it grievous to man in this life,either to do,or to ſuffer; yet the Prieſts in their miniſtrations were to take heed of ſweat, and therefore they might not ſo gird them,either up to the arm-pits, or below towards the loyns, as might occaſion it, Ezek.44.18. which was a part of their ceremonial purity,figuring that which was moral and ſpiritual.

to duſt return] Pſal.103.14. Job 34.15. Not by any neceſſity of his created nature,but becauſe he had ſinned,God threatneth to make his end as baſe as his beginning; whereas otherwiſe decay,or ſickneſs,caſual miſhap or violence,ſhould not by death have brought down his dignity, who had rule over the birds of the air,Gen.1.28.to be ſubject to be devoured by the wormes of the earth. Sin is the wicket that let death into the world, Rom.5.12.and hath given it ſo much advantage and victory over human nature,that the kernel of a raiſon,yea an hair in milk hath choaked and killed a man, *Plin.Nat.Hiſt.l.*7. *c.*7. and laid him lower then the beaſts of the earth,for they lye upon the ground while he is laid under it.

becauſe ſhe was] Adam gave her her name, but Moſes gave the reaſon of it; for when ſhe was ſo named by Adam, ſhe was not a mother at all, but ſhe was the mother of all, both before and ſince Moſes his time; and if Adam gave the reaſon, it was a Propheſie that ſhe ſhould be, ſignified (for more aſſurance) in the Preter tenſe, which is uſual in Prophetick ſpeeches; yet becauſe ſhe was the cauſe of a natural death to all that live, ſome take the words in a ſpiritual ſenſe, as implying the birth of him, (among her poſterity) who ſhould be the authour of a better life, both to her and them.

V.21. Did the Lord God make] Immediately by himſelf, or by the miniſtry of Angels, or gave them knowledg how to make them.

coats of skins] What skins they were is not ſet down; it may be they were ſheep and goat-skins, Heb. 11.37. their firſt covering was by their own proviſion of leaves, which would do them little ſervice, and but for a while: God provides better for their ſecurity againſt the offence of heat and cold, and is, (notwithſtanding their ſin) ſo reſpective of their welfare, as to kill, or permit other Creatures to be killed that they may be cloathed: when God put this livery upon their backs, it is like he gave them inſtruction to ſerve him by *S*acrifice of ſlain beaſts; for their children learned that from them, which they practiced, Chap.4.4. and they from God; and the *S*acrifice fore-tokening the death of Chriſt, the skin might (as ſome of the Ancients note) ſignifie their covering in the Robe of his Righteouſneſs, and might alſo mind them not only of Gods benignity, but alſo of their own mortality, ſince they could not be covered with the skin of any beaſt that was not killed. But the original of rayment, though ſo long ago, ſhould never be forgotten by the ſons of Adam, but be remembred as a check to the vanity and pride of apparel; which, whatſoever it is, it carrieth with it a character of reproach to him that weares it, and an implicite confeſſion of guilt and ſhame; whereof we have no more cauſe to be proud, then of a plaiſter of maſtick, worn to ſtay the rheume from annoying the eyes or teeth, or a ſcarf about the arm, when it is put out of joynt, or a pair of Spectacles to help the dimneſs of the ſight.

V.22. As one of us] That is, one of the Trinity, God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghoſt. See the firſt Annot. on Chap. 1. v. 26. which is ſpoken in the ſenſe of that flouting figure called an Irony or Sarcaſmus, like that of Elijah, 1 King 18.27. and of the Preacher, Eccleſ.11 9. whereby God declareth his high indignation and diſdain of their impious preſumption, and affectation of an impoſſible preheminence.

live for ever] Having ſinned, it is not like that by ſuch a meanes his happineſſe ſhould be recovered, or that he thereby ſhould be made immortal, (though haply he might think ſo;) this ſpeech therefore may wel be thought another Ironical taunt, as that in the precedent part of this verſe; yet he might ſeriouſly be debarred of the uſe of that Sacramental tree, having by his ſin croſſed the end of it, defrauded himſelf of the hope of that benefit he might have had by it. See the fore-noted Annot. on Chap.2.ver.9.

V.24. Drove out] In the precedent verſe it is ſaid, God ſent him forth; Here, he drove him forth. It is like, at firſt God bade him go, and then ſhewing himſelf unwilling, and begging that he might abide there ſtill, God, with ſome evidence of wrath, denying him, drave him out: on what day this was done, whether the ſame day of his Creation, or the next day after, or that day ſeven-night in which he was made, or on the thirteenth day, (as many Popiſh Chronologers hold) or fourty dayes after (as ſome have imagined) is not revealed by God, nor can it be ſafely reſolved by man: though of theſe ſeveral conceits, that which ſets his fall upon the Sabbath day, and that which adjourneth it until the fortieth day, are moſt improbable, and of them all that which ſeems the likelieſt in the judgement of many learned and ſound Divines is, that man fell the firſt day of his Creation, for which they cite, Pſal 49. 12, 20. where they take the Hebrew word Adam, for the particular name of the firſt man, not for the name of man in common; which is the more probable, becauſe if Adam and Eve had lodged in Paradiſe one night, his firſt child had not been begotten in his own likeneſſe (that is, in the ſtate of corruption into which he fell) as he was, Chap.5.3. Object. Againſt this is objected, that man was made the laſt of all the Creatures, on the laſt day of the week, and that there were too many particulars betwixt his creation and excluſion out of Paradiſe, to have their paſſage in a piece of a day, as all that we read, from Chap.2.25. to the end of this Chapter. Anſw. But firſt, excepting the giving of Names to the Creatures, which was done before the woman was made, Chap. 2. 20. and done ſo much the ſooner, as Adam was the wiſer, (and his wiſdom and knowledge of the creatures was very great at the firſt) all the other things mentioned, had an orderly connexion one with another, and would eaſily follow one another; and conſidering that the Devil was watchful to take the firſt and fitteſt opportunity to tempt, which was when Eve had leaſt experience of the world; and that concupiſcence of a Deity kindled, would be very quick and active to obtain it; and that God, for his part, could make as much haſte with his juſtice, as the tempter or tempted with their ſin; it might be probable enough, that all might be done to their caſting out of Paradiſe the firſt day, of which eight or nine hours might be allowed for all the occurrences betwixt their beginning and baniſhment. Some are very punctual, both for the day of the month, and of the week, and for the hour of the day, affirming that it was on Friday the twenty ſeventh of March, the ninth hour of the day; ſo in the Manuſcript Annals of Eutychus Patriarch of Alexandria cited by Mr. J. S. Chap. 8. pag.44, 45. of his book Of the civil year and Calender of the Jewiſh Church; but no man is bound to believe that which no man can prove by any Record, that is competent teſtimony in ſuch a caſe.

Cherubims] Angels, ſo called (as ſome conceive) of knowledge; the fitter to be deſigned to that ſervice, under that name, becauſe the ſin of Adam and Eve, was an ambitious deſire and endeavour to equal God in Omniſcience and univerſal knowledg. Of their figure or ſhape, ſee Annot. on Exod.25 ver.18.

a flaming ſword] Or, Swords; For the word Cherubim is of the plural number, and if there were more then one Cherub, it is like there was more then one ſword: it is called a flaming ſword, becauſe it was bright and clear, ſhining like a flame of fire; or becauſe it was fire, in the form and faſhion of a ſword; for Angels are Gods Miniſters, and his Miniſters come ſomtimes with flames of fire, Heb.1.7. and with the ſword, Numb. 22.23. Joſh.5.13. 1 Chron.21.16. Either fire or ſword coming ſingle, is terrible, both together much more, and moſt of all by motion every way, which might make them more penitently apprehenſive of their hainous ſin againſt the Majeſty of God, and of their notorious folly againſt the felicity of man, who ſo ſoon, and for ſo ſmall a matter loſt ſo happy an eſtate, which once loſt could never be recovered.

turning every way] Or, two edged; To terrifie Adam (and, as ſome conceive, the divels alſo) from returning to the place from which he was driven; which ſome myſtically apply to the excluſion of the wicked from Chriſt the tree of life, Rev.22.2. and from the Celeſtial Paradiſe, or garden of that tree, the Kingdom of heaven, Rev.2.7.

CHAP. IIII.

Ver.1. KNew] A modeſt expreſſion; the like whereof is, Numb.31.17 Mat.1 25 Luke 1 34. See on ch.49.10. Ann.5. According to this phraſe, the Hebrews call a Virgin Halma, or Ghnalma, that is, unknown, or hidden, and ſo were virgins uſually vailed, that they might not be eaſily ſeen: as Rebekah, Gen.24 65.

I have gotten] Obtained, or poſſeſſed a man; for Kana (whence the name Cain, or Kain is derived) ſignifies a poſſeſſion.

from the Lord] That is, as his gift, by ratifying his bleſſing of multiplication, Chap.1.28. to her in particular. See Gen. Chap.33. verſ.5. and Pſal. 127.3. And not only bleſſing her conception of a child, but her child-birth alſo without the aſſiſtance of a Midwife, or of any ſuch helps as neceſſity ſought, and ingenuity found out in after-times.

V.2. Again bare] Becauſe her bearing again is mentioned, but not her conceiving before it, as ver.1. it might be thought that Cain and Abel were twins; ſave that the name Abel (ſignifying vanity) may imply, that upon ſome ſad experience of the vanity of the world betwixt the birth of her two ſons, ſhe called the later of them by that name: yet might it be, that at the beginning, births might be double, both in number and in Sexe, for the more ſpeedy and copious increaſe of mankind.

Abel] Heb. Hebel. There is a double writing of this name; the one with Aleph, (as Joſephus writes it) ſignifying mourning, as he expounds it Antiq.lib.1.cap.2. The other with He, Hebel, ſignifying, vanity, Eccl.1.2. Wherein, as it carried a memoranudm of Hiſtory, (as in the precedent Note) ſo it might point by way of prophecie to the untimely end which afterward befel him.

V.3. In proceſs of time] Heb. at the end of dayes. The like phraſe we find, Gen 41.1. at the end of two full years; and Ezek.3.16. At the end of ſeven dayes. By [At the end of dayes] here, may be meant the Sabbath, for that is the end of the dayes of the week, and being a day eſpecially ſanctified from the beginning, Chap.2.ver.2. for the honour of the Creator, it might be ſeaſonable on it to offer ſacrifice of the creatures, as a tribute due to the Lord of all: but uſually the words are taken for a diſtance of time of greater extent then the compaſſe of a week; yet might it be a certain time either by conſtitution or cuſtom, which now being complete, and run up to the period of the accompt, they both made their Oblations to God, as followeth.

Cain brought] It is not ſaid to whom, or what; whether to Adam, as the Prieſt of the family, or to the place (which, it is like, was certain) where the Sacrifices were to be offered up unto God; for though in after-time the father of the family was the Prieſt to the Church in his houſe, and in his ſtead the firſt-born had the Prieſt-hood as a part of his birth-right; yet it may be at this time indifferently ſuppoſed, either that both brought their Sacrifice to their father on earth to be offered to their Father in heaven, or that each of them did by himſelf offer up his owne oblation.

fruit of the ground] Cain was an husbandman, and his employment was to till the ground; yet he muſt not ſo mind the earth, as to forget his duty of devotion to his Maker in heaven.

V.4. Firſtlings of the flock] Which were firſt killed, and then offered up unto God by fire; the flame whereof aſcended up towards heaven, while the offerer by the elevation of his ſoul towards God, either did, or ought to do the like: and thereby he made an implicite confeſſion of his ſin, as deſerving death, (a ſevere and painful death by burning) and a profeſſion of his faith in Chriſt as a Redeemer from death; by this faith Abel offered a more acceptable *S*acrifice then Cain, Heb. 11. 4. and it was of the firſtlings of the flock, which he offered, (whether of ſheep or goats, the Hebrew Text diſtinguiſheth not, for the words will ſerve for either) becauſe it was fit that God ſhould have the firſt-fruits of his own increaſe: what was here in practice, (and it may be by precept alſo,though not here expreſſed) was afterwards preſcribed by an expreſs Law, Exod.13.2. Numb 3 13.

and of the fat thereof] Here again is the practice of that for which we may in ſome ſort or other preſuppoſe a precept, (for ſacrifice is worſhip, and without a precept it is wil-worſhip, condemned by God) which in Moſes time was expreſly delivered, Exod.29. 13,22. Levit.3.3. but withal the meaning may be, that Abel did not ſacrifice like thoſe profane niggards, who thought any thing good enough for God, Mal.1.13. but he gave him of the beſt and faireſt of his flock: for that which is beſt in any kind, is commended under the title of fatneſſe, as Gen. 45.18. and chap.49.20. Nehem.8.10. They that ſuppoſe there was no feeding on the living creatures until the flood, conceive here was offered only the wool of the Sheep, and the milk of the Cow, the beſt of the milk, which they call the fatteſt, (though the fat of the milk be properly the butter) but that ſuppoſition will hardly be made good, if turned to a poſition, for it is more probable that the eating of fleſh was allowed and in uſe before the flood, then the contrary. See Annot. on Chap.9.3.

had reſpect unto Abel] And firſt to Abel juſtified by faith, Heb.11.4. and then to his Sacrifice as a fruit of that faith: this reſpect appeared by ſome viſible ſign from heaven, eſpecially by fire falling upon the Sacrifice to burn it, as Lev 9.24. Judg.6.21. 1 King.18.38. 1 Chron.21.26 2 Chron.7.1,3.

V.5. Not reſpect] Not ſuch to Cain as to Abel, and to his ſacrifice, through his want of faith and ſincerity in Gods ſervice, or no reſpect at all, for he would have a naughty or vile perſon contemptible in the eyes of ſuch as are good, Pſal.15 4. See 2 King.3.14.

Very wroth] At God and Abel both: At God, as Mat. 20.15. his eye was evil becauſe Gods was good: and at Abel, becauſe being his younger brother, he got the bleſſing of his heavenly Father from him: and if (as ſome Divines conceive) this Sacrifice were tendred for election and conſecration of one of the two upon divine choice and acceptance, to be head of the holy race, by whom Gods Church was to be extended to after ages, it was the more diſpleaſing to Cain to be refuſed, by how much more honour it had been to be received.

countenance fell] From a cheerful to a churliſh look; from an upright, to a down-caſt aſpect, which bewrayed the malignity of his mind for the countenance, which (in propriety of ſpeech) is only in man, (as the Otatour well ſaith, lib. de legibus, p.325) is formed and varied according to the mind, from whence it hath its mould, Tuſc. q. lib. 3. p.353. and therefore though it alone be obvious to the eye, it makes diſcovery of that which is out of ſight; ſo that it is a good witneſſe againſt the wicked, Iſai 3 9. for that bewrayeth ſometimes their pride, Pſal.10.4. ſometimes their fear, Dan. 5. 6. ſometimes their envy and grudge againſt the good, as here, and chap.31 2,5. ſometimes their fury, Dan.3 19.

V.7. Doſt well] In the outward act of offering unto God, they both might do well, and much alike; yet there was this difference of their oblations; Cains Sacrifice ſeemed rather gratulatory, as looking back to Gods beneficence for the year before, then propitiatory, as looking forward to reconciliation to be made by Chriſt in time to come, which was better typified by the bloudy Sacrifice of Abel, then by the unbloody ſacrifice of Cain, which might be of ears of corn, as Lev. 2.14. But there was more difference betwixt them for inward acts of faith and love, then for outward acts of ſacrifice: the former ſort is meant by doing well in this place.

ſhalt thou not be accepted?] Or, Is there not forgiveneſſe? Or, Shalt thou not receive? Or, Shalt thou not have the excellency? Or, a lifting up? So many wayes are the words rendred, becauſe of the ambiguity of the Hebrew word Seeth; and of Naſa, from whence it is deduced; according to this variety the ſenſe is various. 1. Shalt thou not be accepted? The words are interrogative, but vehemently aſſertive or affirmative in ſenſe; and their meaning is this, thou ſhalt ſurely be accepted if thou doſt well, both thou and thy Sacrifice. 2. Is there not forgiveneſſe? Yes, if thou wilt repent and amend. 3 Shalt thou not receive? Yes, thou ſhalt receive an evidence of mine acceptance as thy brother did: I will not be partial, if thou offer with as good a mind as Abel did, my favour ſhall come upon thy ſacrifice in a celeſtial flame, and it ſhall aſcend unto me in a ſweet ſmelling fume as his did. 4 Shalt thou not have the excellency, or, lifting up? Yes, the right of primogeniture, and the pre-eminence of the Prieſthood ſhall be thine, and thou ſhalt lift up thy countenance with cheerfulneſs in the affiance and fruition of my favour.

ſin lyeth at] Some take theſe words for a commination either of the revealing of his ſecret ſin, ſo as that it ſhould not ſtill lurk and lye hid in the boſom, cloſet or chamber, but be made ſo manifeſt, as if it were laid at the doot for every eye to look upon it; Or of the puniſhment of his ſin by inward vexation of ſpirit, and pangs of conſcience, which (though for a time it lye aſleep like a Maſtive-dog at the door) will not reſt long: for at the door where there is much paſſing, often knocking, opening and ſhutting, the dog wil ſoon be awakened; ſo wil the conſcience, and when it is awake, it will bark moſt clamorouſly, and bite moſt furiouſly, ſo that none can bear it, Prov.18.14. Or, by outward vengeance, which wil (as it were) lye in wait for him at the door, when he ſteppeth either in or out to ſet upon him.

unto thee ſhall be his deſire] Or, its deſire; That is, (as ſome take it) the deſire of ſin, to enter into thee to poſſeſſe thee, and prevail with thee, and rule over thee; but thou contrariwiſe muſt ſtrive to ſuppreſſe it and bring it under thy ſubjection; and by grace (not by the power of free-will) thou maiſt ſo far overcome the dominion of it, that it ſhall not tyrannize over thee, but at laſt by mine aſſiſtance thou ſhalt have the maſtery and perfect victory over it: and in ſpecial in this ſenſe of the words, he is admoniſhed of his duty to keep under, and to beat down the indignation and envy he had raiſed up againſt God and his brother. But in our laſt Tranſlation anſwerable to the Original, it is perſonal, unto thee ſhall be his deſire; and thou ſhalt rule over him, as Gen. 3.16 wherein from Arguments of pacification of his incenſed ſpirit in general God cometh down to a removal of the cauſe of his indignation in particular, which, by the words here uſed, may ſeem to be a conceit that his younger brother ſo much in Gods favour would be like to deprive him of the dignity of his birth-right, and God taketh off that conceit by ſpeaking to him to this effect; Though thou haſt forfeited the pre-eminence of thy primogeniture by thine evil heart towards me and thy brother, yet upon thy repentance and amendment thou maiſt ſtill enjoy it; and thy brother, againſt whom thou art ſo much incenſed, ſhall have a deſire to pleaſe thee, and to be ruled by thee, if thou rule and govern thine affections by Religion and reaſon, as thou oughteſt to do.

V.8. And Cain talked] What talk paſſed between them, whether it were chiding with Abel, becauſe for his ſake he was chidden by God; or whether by ſome ſimulation of favour and love he allured him to walk with him into the field, it is uncertain.

When they were in the field] Whither Cain had drawn Abel for fitter opportunity to effect his wicked deſign, for there he might act it out of ſight and noiſe, and ſo none was like to reſcue his godly brother out of his bloody hands. Whether there, (though not before he walked out) he picked a quarrel with him or no, or whether there were any words of offence at all betwixt them, it doth not appear in the ſacred Story, much leſſe what words paſſed betwixt them before his malice came to blowes: and it may be he was as crafty as cruel, and ſo gave Abel no warning by words of what miſchief he meditated to commit with his hands.

roſe up] Not as having taken a fall by Abels ſtriving with him before (as ſome have ſuppoſed) for the phraſe imports but the beginning, preparing, or preſent addreſſing of a mans ſelf to any act or buſineſs, as Deut. 13.1. Judg.4.9. and in many other places.

and ſlew him] Had God rejected his Sacrifice becauſe it was not bloody, ver.3. as Abels was, ver.4. he could have done no worſe, if he meant both to mock and anger him for the choice and refuſal of their oblations. How he ſlew him, it appears not in the Text; but negatively that it was not by ſtrangling, becauſe his bloud was ſhed, verſ. 11 Popiſh Painters ſetting out this ſtory to the eye, fain the inſtrument of murder to be the jaw-bone of ſome bruit creature; but it might be rather ſome Inſtrument of Husbandry wherewith Cain was accuſtomed to walk, or a ſtone which might be taken up without ſuſpicion on Abels part, and ſo ſuddenly throwne, or driven at him, that he could not avoid it.

V.9. Where] God queſtioneth with Cain here, and ver. 6. as with Adam, Chap.3 ver.9,11. and he putteth the like interrogatories to his Creatures elſewhere: not as needing any information from them, (for he knoweth more of any man then his own heart can tell him, 1 John 3.20.) but to convince them by their owne anſwers, and to ſet a pattern for humane Juſtice, which ſhould not condemn any before they be called in queſtion, and have liberty to anſwer for themſelves. See Act. 25.16.

I know not; Am I] By this anſwer he ſheweth himſelf not only to be of that wicked one, 1 John 3.12. who was a murderer from the beginning, but as ancient a Lyar as a Murtherer, Joh.8.44. for he murdered by lying, Gen.3.4. and he addes to theſe ſins high contempt againſt God, making as if he had asked him an impertinent queſtion; or had put upon him an office not belonging to him; he thought it was not his duty to be his brothers keeper; but thinks it was not againſt all duty to God and man to be his excutioner, without any deſert of death, or any precedent ſentence from an authorized Judge; and this with as much madneſs as malice, (for the divel, the god of this world, 2 Cor.4.4. had blinded his eyes, as well as hardned his heart) he thinks he can blind the eyes of the God of truth with his lyes, and eſcape his conviction with his frivolous evaſions bloud] Heb. Blouds; Becauſe it iſſueth out by many drops, or when it is ſhed by violence and malice, it is let out by many wounds, which make ſo many ſeveral ſtreams of blood: thence a cruel man is called a man of blouds, Pſal.5.6. according to the Hebrew, and David prayeth to be delivered from blood-guiltineſs: Heb. from blouds, Pſal 51 14.

V. 10. What haſt thou done?] God not only makes inquiſition for bloud, Pſal.9.12. but purſueth it, and will require it to requite it, 2 Chron.24.22.

cryeth] It is crying blood here, and ſpeaking bloud, Heb.12.24. A voyce and crying is aſcribed to bloud as to the ſtone out of the wall, and beam out of the timber, Hab. 2.11,12. and as the valleyes are ſaid to ſhout for joy and to ſing, Pſalm 65. 13. all by a figurative ſpeech; and the meaning here is, that blood-guiltineſſe cannot be concealed, but that God will take notice of it, though no man ſee it, or ſay any thing of it; as though the ground that had received the bloud that was ſhed, uttered a voice, and put up a clamorous accuſation, and petition for vengeance againſt the murderer, as Rev. 6.10.

Ver.11. Curſed from] From the earth (whither thy brothers blood ſunk, being ſucked in by the pores thereof, and ſo as it were buried in a grave) ſhall ſpring up a curſe to thee for thy cruel act; whereof in the next verſe.

V.12. When thou tilleſt] This was a ſecond curſe, whereby the earth became worſe for Cains ſin, then it was for Adams; which if it were not general, might be a particular curſe upon Cains portion whereſoever he was; ſo that when he tilled it as an husbandman, it might upbraid him as a murderer.

a fugitive] Caſt out from communion with his kindred and former friends and acquaintance, excommunicated from the Church, the ſociety of the faithful profeſſors and ſincere Sacrificers, and through guilt of conſcience, having his heart moved as the trees of the wood with the wind, Iſa 7.2.

V.13. My puniſhment] Heb. Mine iniquity; as Gen.19.15. Pſal. 69.27. Prov. 12.21. in which places ſin or iniquity is put for the puniſhment of ſin, by a Metonymie of the efficient for the effect; for ſin is the natural parent of puniſhment. In ſaying, his puniſhment is greater then he can bear, he bewrayeth the wrathfulneſſe of his ſpirit, which before made him a murmurer againſt God, and a murderer of his brother; he could not then forbear ſin, and now he cannot bear what is due to him for his ſin. If we take the words after the other reading, [mine iniquity is greater then can be forgiven,] they ſhew his deſperate diſtruſt of pardon for his ſin, and therein he becometh as injurious to Gods mercy by his diffidence, as to his juſtice by his impatience.

V.14. From the face of the earth] He ſeemeth by this ſpeech out of fear to ſpeak now (as out of wrath and envy he acted his part before) like a diſtracted man; for how was he to be driven from the face of the earth, when he was to be a vagabond upon it? ver.12. and how could he be hid from the face of God, who ſaw into the ſecret corruptions of his heart? But if his words have any ſound ſenſe in them, it is this, from the face of the earth, that is, from the place of my birth, and abode hitherto; or from the face of that earth (as the word Haadhamah will bear) on which I have dwelled until now: Or, from the face of the earth; that is, from the ſociety with the Inhabitants of the earth, as Pſal.33.8. who will abhor my company, and I ſhall be afraid and aſhamed to come in their ſight, or to look them in the face.

and from thy face] That is, from thy favourable countenance; ſo that thou wilt not vouchſafe a gracious glance towards me, nor accept any oblation from me. Some think there is an Hypallage in the words, that is, a kind of miſtake, as if he would, or ſhould have ſaid, I ſhall hide my face from God, as not daring to come before him to offer up any ſacrifice unto him; for otherwiſe there is indeed no hiding from God, nor flying from him, Pſal.94.9. and 139.7.

every one that] Though hitherto we have read but of four perſons in the world, Adam and Eve, Cain and Abel, this being about one hundred and thirty yeers from the Creation, (as Chronologers account it) there might be now many, of whom he might ſtand in bodily fear; or if there had been none of his own kind to avenge the bloud of his innocent brother, his guilty conſcience might raiſe fearful apprehenſions of death from the beaſts of the earth.

ſlay me] Being more carnally then ſpiritually minded, he feareth more for his body then for his ſoul; and his own wickedneſſe makes him imagine he ſhall meet with a murderer in every place; ſelfe-guiltineſſe in ſome, is the chief motive to ſuſpicion of others, Pſal 50.21.

V.15. Seven fold] That is, (as the Chaldee Paraphraſe hath it) unto the ſeventh generation; or, he ſhall have manifold puniſhments. a certain number uſed for an uncertain: as Lev.26.28. Job 5.19. Pſal. 79.12. Prov.24.16. and Chap.26.25. Jer.15.9. and this God ſaith not for any love he bare to Cain, to whom life with the guilt of ſuch a ſin, and ſenſe of the divine wrath, was worſe then a temporal death; but becauſe he would have him live to be a living memento, or warning againſt murder, which with the death of the Malefactor is commonly buried in oblivion as Pſal.59.11. Eccleſ.9.5.

mark] There are many, and ſome fooliſh conjectures of this mark: It is moſt like it was a trembling, not only of his heart, but of his head and other parts, with a ghaſtly countenance importing guilt and terror in him, and imprinting it ſo far in others, that they durſt not do by him, as he did by his brother.

V.16. From the preſence] Some think theſe words are fitted to Cains conceit, who now Atheiſt-like, thought he could get out of the reach of Gods revenging hand: but it is more probable, that by his going from the preſence of the Lord, is meant his going from the place where God gave evidence of his preſence in his conference with him. See Jonah 1.3. Or, from his preſence, that is, from that part or quarter of the world where God had his Church, which is the place of his ſpecial preſence: and ſo the phraſe intimates Cains baniſhment from his native habitation, and his excommunication from the houſe of God: for the place of his eſpecial preſence may be called an houſe, though it be not made with walls and windowes, and roof, as ours are. See Annot. on Chap.28.17.

Nod] So called here by the figure Prolepſis, or anticipation, in reſpect of the order of things; for it was called the land of Nod, not before, but after; and that by occaſion of Cains coming thither, and dwelling there upon his fugitive and vagabond condition: Nod is derived from an Hebrew root ſignifying to wander or to be a vagabond; and ver. 12. God doometh him.

V.17. Builded a City] After he had wandred about from place to place ſuch a time as God thought meet, for the puniſhment he impoſed on him, he ſuffered him to ſet up his reſt in a City which he built; and he built the City (as ſome compute the time) in the one hundred and fifth, (as others) in the three hundred, or four hundred year of his age, by which time his poſterity might become ſo populous, as not only to build, but to people a City with Inhabitants: and he built the City for ſociety and ſecurity to himſelf and his progeny, and (as Joſephus conjectures) that he might be more able to exerciſe rapine and tyranny upon others.

after the name of his ſon, Enoch] Rather after his ſons name then his own, becauſe his own was odious and infamous; and rather in his ſon Enochs name then any other of his children, becauſe by this it appears, he loved him better then the reſt; haply becauſe he was worſe then his brethren, in being liker in manners and diſpoſition to his father then any of them all; yet for all this earthly glory ſwelling up to the magnitude of a City, the name of the other Enoch, of the Line of Seth, who walked with God, chap.5, ver.24. and had no City, is more honourable then the name of this Enoch of the race of Cain with his City, though the ſtructure of it were never ſo magnificent. See Pſal.49.

V. 19. Two wives] This is the firſt man that had more wives then one at once; a Cainite by deſcent, and a man as fleſhly as Cain was bloudy; ſinning by luſt, as he did by hate: by this duality of women he broke looſe from the firſt inſtitution, which was that two, and no more, ſhould by marriage be made one, Gen.2.24. Mal.2.15.

V. 20. Of ſuch] Or, Of them that dwell. Heb. Of him that dwelleth By an Enallage of number; for by this him, not one alone, but many are meant.

V.21. Jubal] See on Lev.25.10.

Organ] That is, the inventer of Muſical Inſtruments, By Organ is not meant ſuch an Inſtrument as in our age hath been moſt commonly noted by that name; for that was not found out or made up until ſome thouſands of years afterwards: the ſame word here rendred, Organ, is found in the Book of Job, Chap.21.12. and Chap 30.31. and Pſal.150 4. in this ſenſe: whatſoever the form of it was, the word importeth loveline ſſe and delight, for men naturally love and delight in muſick. See Pſalm. 81.2. where we ſee that for ſuch things as conduce to the comfort of an humane life, as ordering of Cattel, manual Arts, the building of Cities, the wicked by divine providence was made ſerviceable to the good.

V. 22. Tubal-Cain] From this name (as ſundry Commentators obſerve) might the name Vulcan the heathen god of Smiths be taken; as the name Jove from Jehovah; and as Adonis from Adonai [Lord] often uſed in the Old Teſtament, (as ſome learned men conceive: though others derive it from the Greek word, Aeido, which ſignifieth to ſing, or, from Hedone in the ſame Language, ſignifying pleaſure.

inſtructer] Heb. Whetter. Which may imply a ſharpneſſe of wit, piercing into the minds of thoſe that receive inſtruction from him; and withal, an incitement or whetting of the affections to put ſuch Arts into practice.

V.23. I have ſlain a man] The words are very difficult, both to tranſlate, and to expound: they are rendred two wayes; firſt, as in the Text, ſecondly, as in the Margine of our laſt Tranſlation: the former reading is either affirmative, or interrogative: According to the firſt, the ſenſe is twofold; the one that Lamech makes boaſt of his valour, in that he had ſlaine a man, yea, a young man in the prime of his ſtrength and youth; or it may be, (as the words will alſo bear) two men whereof the one was eminently younger then the other: To my wounding, that is, by an Hebraiſm, (as ſome take it) by my wounding or hurting of him,; or though I have been fighting to my wounding or my hurt, I have gotten the better of it, for I have ſlaine thoſe that fought with me. The ſecond is, that he ſpeaks of theſe ſlaughters as fore-dooming himſelf to a worſe condition then Cain, and ſo deſerving far greater puniſhment then he did, becauſe Cains was but a ſingle ſlaughter Lamechs a double one: Taking the words interrogatively, they ſeem in effect an emphatical anſwer to ſome ſuſpicion his wives had of him, with a mind to depart from him, as thinking God would curſe the family and poſterity of ſuch a wicked man as he was; againſt which he pleads his own innocency, and Cains impunity: Have I ſlain a man to the wounding and hurting of my conſcience, as Cain did? If I had; yet you ſee Cain, though he had killed his brother, and ſtubbornly ſtood out aginſt his Maker, had yet a mark of protection ſet upon him, that no man might kill him; and if he that ſhould kill Cain was to be puniſhed ſeven fold, he that ſhall kill Lamech (who had committed no ſuch crimes) ſhall be puniſhed much more. The other reading, (which ſome think fitter to be placed in the Text then in the Margine) is, I would ſlay a man in my wound, and a young man in my hurt: according unto this the meaning may be, that his wives fearing, leſt being hated for his cruelty, ſome would take heart to kill him, he meaning to over-awe them, both to keep them obſervant of himſelf, and quiet among themſelves, tells them in a bragging manner, that he had ſo much might and manhood in him, that he durſt undertake any enemy, yea to ſlay a man, a young and luſty man, though he had received a wound or hurt before; (for the words, (as the Marginal reading hath it) may be rendred, in my wound, in my hurt) This Expoſition is moſt received by many of the moſt learned Expoſitors; yet ſome rather think that theſe words of Lamech are a paſſionate and penitent confeſſion of his cruel raſhneſſe; as if he had ſaid, that I have ſlaine a man in my wrath, it is to the wounding of my heart, and to my great hurt, for the grief of that fact is a ſad affliction to my ſoul; and thereupon the next words threaten a greater puniſhment to him that ſhould kill Lamech, then to the killer of Cain.

V.24. Seventy and ſeven fold] Some take the words for ſeventy times ſeven, which make up four hundred and ninety times; but it is ſeventy times and ſeven times, as Gen.7.2. According to the Hebrew the words are, of every clean beaſt thou ſhalt take thee ſeven ſeven, that is, not ſeven times ſeven, nor two ſevens, though the word be doubled; but it is, (as it is well rendred in our Tranſlation) by ſevens; ſo Mark 6. ver.7. when our Saviour ſent out the twelve by two and two, he ſent them not by foures, but by ſeveral twos. The meaning of Lamechs words may ſeem to be this, that Cains impunity might be his ſecurity, ſince though he had had his hand in blood, it was not in the bloud of his natural brother, nor with contumacy againſt God after the manner of Cain; and therefore if any one ſhould kill him, he ſhould be puniſhed much more, ſeventy and ſeven fold; a certain number put for an uncertain, as ver.15. See the Annot. there. Thus a wicked man turns the divine patience into humane preſumption.

V.26. Then men began to call, &c.] Some Hebrew Rabbins tranſlate the word, Then men profaned, or profanely called upon the name of the Lord, as if in the time of Enoſh Idolatry were taken up: but there is an error in the Grammatical conſtruction of the word, Hubhal, which in the conjugation Kal, (beſides other acceptions) ſignifieth to profane: but in the conjugation Hophal, as here, it ſignifieth, they began, or men began: beſides, for Grammatical conſtruction, when the word is followed with a Noun, it ſignifies to profane, as Numb.30.3. Ezek.39.7. but when it is followed with a Verb of the Infinitive Mood, (as here) it ſignifieth to begin, as Gen.6.1. and 41.54. and 2 Chron.3.1. and ſo the ſenſe is, then began men, that is, in the time of Enoſh men began, not to ſet up the profeſſion of a Monaſtical life, (as ſome Papiſts would have it) or ſome ſpecial Sect of profeſſions called Enoſhei, or by contraction Eſſeni, or Eſſæi, (as ſome others); or that then men firſt began to call upon God by the name Jehovah, (whereas before they called upon him by the Name Elohim or Adonai) but then God moved mens hearts more ſincerely to ſeparate from the profane ſociety of the wicked, (ſuch as were the poſterity of Cain) to ſerve God, not as before, in private families only, but in more publick ſocieties, and that in a more ſolemn manner, and with more zeal and boldneſs then in former times; and ſo to entitle themſelves unto the Lord with eſpecial relation and devotion, as Chap.6.4. And theſe for the moſt part who did this, were the poſterity of Seth, who was born in ſtead of Abel, not only as a ſon to his parents, but as a Prieſt to Gods Church.

CHAP. V.

Verſ.1. T*He Book*] The Hebrew word Sepher, a Book, is derived from the word Saphar, importing number; and it noteth here a catalogue or number of perſons deſcended by generation one from another; and therefore it is called the book of the Generations. So Matth.1.1.

likeneſs of God] See Annot. on Chap.1.26.

V.2. Their name Adam] Adam is ſometimes taken for the firſt man, as Chap.2 23. Sometimes collectively for the ſpecies of mankind, male and female, as Chap.3.24. Sometimes indefinitely for any man, Gen. 9.6. Pſalm 49.20. And by this communion of name is ſhewed not only the union of both Sexes in nature, but their communion both in duties and priviledges, Gal.3.28. here Adam is taken in the ſecond acception.

V.3. In his own likeneſſe] Here ſeemeth to be an oppoſition betwixt Gods Image and mans: God by creation made man in his Image, but man by procreation begets one not in Gods, but in his own Image; that is, not only like him in condition as a man, but in his corruption as a ſinner, Job 14.4. for generation in the fleſh, and regeneration in the Spirit, proceed from different principles, that being humane, this divine; nor ſo in his own likeneſs, as that his ſoul was begotten by Adam as well as his body; for as at firſt the ſoul had a different Original from that of the body, which was not deduced out of the matter of which it conſiſted, but infuſed into the body afterwards; ſo hath it been in the generation ever ſince: wherefore the fathers of our fleſh, and the fathers of our ſpirit are expreſly diſtinguiſhed, Heb. 12.9. See Num. 16 22.

V.4. Sons and daughters] Some take upon them to tell how many, as Philo the Jew, and Epiphanius a Chriſtian; the firſt aſſignes him twelve ſons, the ſecond thirty, and as many daughters: but how could either of them make proof of their number, for there were no Regiſters in Adams dayes?

V.6. Seth lived] Though Cain were elder then Seth, Moſes draweth the deſcent from Adam by the Line of Seth, and ſo ſheweth the progreſſe of the Church, rather then the race of a meer carnal generation: for the true Church had its ſucceſſion in the poſterity of Seth, though in an unequal degree both of piety and appearance or viſibility.

V.24. Walked with God] This expreſſion imports a brief deſcription of a truly religious man, who is not idle, ſtands not ſtill, but makes a progreſſe forward as they that walk: and he walks not inordinately, but by a rule, Gal.6 16. And his walking with God ſheweth his ſincerity, in ordering his life not ſo much for applauſe and approbation of men, as for acceptation with God.

And he was not] Not dead, (as is ſaid of the end of all the reſt that are mentioned in this Chapter) or, Heb. and, Not he, that is, not he dyed, or it was not with him as with others, by the common courſe of mortality; or he appeared not in the ſight and ſociety of men. So Heb.11.5. the like phraſe you may ſee Gen.42.36 and Jer.31.15.

for God took him] God tranſlated him body and ſoul from this life to a better, from earth to heaven, that he might not ſee death, Heb. 11. 5. that is, not come under the expectation of death by ſickneſſe or decay, or under the power of it by parting his ſoul from his body.

V.27. Dayes of Methuſelah] We find no Regiſter of any one who out-lived Methuſelah ſince the creation of the world, or who lived nine hundred ſixty nine yeers, as he did; yet ſome would make Adam of a longer life then he by equivalence, adding ſo many dayes to his age, as paſſed in Methuſelahs before he came to the ripeneſſe and perfection of his growth and ſtrength, (which from his birth they account to be about ſixty years) theſe added to Adams age, will make him twenty one yeers elder then Methuſelah: but that is a conceit of much curioſity, and little certainty. It is more conſiderable, that neither of them, nor any other by their long lives could make any preſcription of time againſt the doom of diſſolution into duſt, Chap.3.ver.19. and their death is ſo often remembred in this Chapter, to put the Reader in mind how God made good his commination of mortality, Chap.2.17. and 3.19. whereof we (who in compariſon of the long-lived Patriarchs are but dwarfs in yeers) ſhould be mindful every moment, ſince we are neerer our graves at our births, then they when they had meaſured our ſeventy years (allotted to our lives, Pſal.90.10) ſeven times over.

V. 29. And he called] That is, Lamech: not he of the poſterity of Cain, of whom ſee Gen.4.23. but another Lamech deſcended of Seth.

ſhall comfort us] The name Noah, if it be derived from Nahham, ſignifieth comfort: if from Nuahh, it importeth reſt; and ſo it may note comfort derived from reſt, or reſt derived from comfort: but what manner of comfort is here meant, ſee the Note following.

toyle of our hands] Lamech here uttereth a hopeful preſage concerning Noah, by whom he foretelleth ſome comfort to come to mankind, wherein if he were guided by the Spirit of Prophecy, (as the moſt Learned conceive he was) he might foreſee not only that Noah would prove a good man, for whoſe ſake God would be good to others, as Gen.18.26. &c. But ſecondly, That by Noah would be found out ſome more ready and eaſie way of tilling the ground; and it might be, that before his time the earth was broken up, and tillage made with mans handy-labour, uſing Spades or other ſuch like Inſtruments: and Noah might invent the Plough and Harrow, and the drawing of them by Oxen or other beaſts.

V.32. Five hundred yeers old] Heb. a ſon of five hundred yeers, Not complete, but current; that is, now living on towards the end of the five hundreth year ſince he was firſt a ſon to his father, as when a Levite entred upon his ſervice of the Tabernacle, being a ſon of thirty years, Num.4.3. the meaning is, that his age paſſeth on towards the end of thirty yeers.

Noah begat] That is, began to beget: for he had not all three in one yeer, nor now firſt of all; for it is not like he continued five hundred yeers ſingle, but that he was a father before this time, though his former children (it is like) were dead before the flood. See on chap.11.26.

Shem, Ham, &c.] See on Joſ.24.4.

CHAP. VI.

Verſ. 1. M*En began*] Heb. Man began. Enallage of number.

began to multiply] To a very great number, for they multiplyed from the beginning, ever ſince the firſt benediction, be fruitful and multiply, was pronounced upon them, Gen.1. 28. but now the increaſe of mankind began to be very great, haply by Lamechs practiſe of Polygamie, or having many wives together, Gen.4.19. which from the Cainites might become a cuſtome among the ſons of Seth.

daughters were born] The mentioning of daughters doth not exclude or deny the generation of ſons, any more then the mentioning only of ſons of Adam, excludeth or denyeth the generation of daughters; but here the children of that ſexe are particularly ſpoken of, the other being preſuppoſed or implyed, becauſe they were the occaſion, both of the corruption and calamity, ſet forth in the enſuing ſtory.

V.2. That the ſons of God] The moſt received ſenſe of the word is, that by ſons of God is meant, not any of the Angelical nature (though Angels be ſometimes called the ſons of God, as Job 1.6. and though the ſuppoſititious propheſie of Enoch expound this place of them.) but rational creatures of humane kind; yet in this place diſtinguiſhed from the daughters of men, not only by their ſexe, but by their qualities, or by their relations: by their qualities, as perſons of ſome eminent endowments, or eſtimation above others (as what is excellent, is in the Scripture phraſe, eſpecially intituled unto God, as the garden of God, Ezek.28.13. and Chap.31.verſ.8,9. the hill of God, Pſal. 68.15.) Or by their relations, as ſuch as deſcending from Seth and Enoſh profeſſed the true worſhip of the true God, and ſo became capable of the title of the ſons of God, Deut.14.1. 2 Cor.6.18. as on the contrary the wicked are called the children of a ſtrange God, theſe being ſuch as deſcended from Seth and Enos, but more remiſs in Religion then their godly Anceſtors, fell from their zeal for God, and againſt ſin, and ſinful perſons, and ſo they were not only willing to converſe with the wicked, but ſo far fell in love with them, as to take their daughters to be their wives.

daughters of men] Heb.Of man, by Enallage of number; ſee the note on verſ.1. By daughters of men, are meant thoſe that came of the corrupt race of wicked and accurſed Cain; who are called the daughters of men, as having little of the Image of God in their minds or manners; and though there be mention only of daughters, it is like they made mongrel marriages of the daughters of God with the ſons of men, the women chuſing as wicked husbands, as the men did wives. See on Exod. 1.22. and on 2 Sam.11.2.

that they were fair] They had no reſpect to ſpiritual, either beauty or deformity; but a fond and fleſhly affection to outward comelineſs of perſon.

which they choſe] They choſe them for wives whom their affections had choſen to be their bed-fellowes, without any reſpect to that fitneſs which is requiſite in marriage; whereof ſee 2 Cor.6.14. or any care or fear of being corrupted by unequal and wicked yoak-fellows, Exod.34.16. 1 Kings 11.2,3. or any regard of ſcandal to their profeſſion, or grief to the godly. See Gen.16.laſt.

V.3. My Spirit] That is, the Spirit of God, or of Chriſt, in thoſe few good men who lived in that corrupt and incorrigible age, by which Spirit they oppoſed the evil minds and manners of the wicked; and the ſame Spirit ſuggeſted good motions to the ſouls and conſciences of ſinful men, which they reſiſted and rejected.

not alwayes ſtrive] As before by Noahs preaching, admoniſhing, reproving, proteſting againſt the wickedneſſe of the times, and ſtriving with the ſtubbornneſſe of the world, 1 Pet.3.18,19. and by the inward operations of Gods Spirit urging the conſcience to repentance for ſin, and reformation of life: thus for God not to ſtrive, is a judgement; as not to chaſtiſe and correct for amendment, Iſai. 1.ver. 5. Hoſ.4.4. and this he here threatneth, being weary of their rebellious obſtinacy, which moves him to make a final reſolution for their utter ruine: yet ſometimes he profeſſeth he will not ſtrive, in mercy to mankind, Iſai.57.16.

he alſo] If the word, alſo, be not completive, (as ſome words are alſo in the Greek and Latine) it may imply a diverſity of perſon, with a conformity of offence; as if not only the wicked ſtock of Cain were here accuſed of corruption, but that he alſo; that is, the poſterity of Sem did partake in their prevarication.

is fleſh] That is, (for the moſt part, if not altogether) fleſhly, and reliſhing little or nothing of the Spirit, but with diſlike and reſiſtance. See Gal.5.17. Joh.3.6. Rom.8.5.

An hundred and twenty years] By this God makes not the limits of mans life; as appears by many examples of men living much longer, Gen.11. and a good while after the flood Abraham lived 175 years, Gen. 25.7. Iſaac, one hundred eighty, Chap.35.28. and Jacob, one hundred fourty ſeven years, Gen.47.28. and Jehojada, whoſe time was one thouſand five hundred years after this, lived to one hundred thirty yeers, 2 Chron. 24.15. but by theſe words God giveth an hundred and twenty yeers ſpace of repentance to the world, Noah the while preaching and preparing the Ark, and thereby warning the wicked of their approaching peril, if they did not by repentance prevent it. See 1 Pet.3.20.

V.4. Giants] Our Engliſh word Giant, cometh of the Greek word, Gigas, and that ſignifieth one borne of the earth, ſo fabulous antiquity reporteth of a ſort of mighty men monſtrons in their manners and making war againſt heaven, Macrob. Saturn. lib. 1.*cap.*20. For particular Gyants by name, we read of Goliah and his greatneſſe, 1 Sam. 17.1,4,5. Of Og of the race of ancient Gyants, Deut.3.11. who is ſaid to remaine of the remnaut of the Gyants before the flood, (as the Jews faine) that what with his own height, and the height of an hill, he was ſaved from drowning in the Deluge: but he was a mighty Tyrant of a later riſe and race, as of wicked Cham; and he is ſaid to be left as a remnant in that Country where all but himſelf were deſtroyed, or driven out; Of Iſhbibenob, 2 Sam.21.16. who is ſaid to be the ſon of the Gyant, or Rapha, as in the Margine, (whence are the Rephaims, Gen.14.5.) which ſignifieth to cure, as ſome reader it, who will have a Gyant to be ſo called by the contrary; as in Latine, mons à non movendo, a mountain; lucus à non lucendo, a grove; bellum quaſi minime bellum, war; but it ſignifieth ſound, alſo ſtrong, potent, boyſterous: the word here uſed is nephilim, which ſome take in a good ſenſe, and make the nephilim to be men of honourable note and renown: it is derived of the radix naphal, which ſignifieth, he hath fallen; and ſo we may take them for men of ſtature, mighty in power, fierce of nature, Apoſtates from God, fallen from true Religion, and falling upon ſuch as were weaker then themſelves, with Tyrannical violence and oppreſſion. See Job 16.14.

of renown] To be renowned, is to be named again; ſo that men of renown are thoſe whoſe names are iterated, who are often mentioned, or much ſpoken of: ſo are ſuch perſons, who are either notable or notorious for any eminent difference from ordinary men.

V.5. Every imagination] See alſo Chap.8.21. imagination of the thoughts, or, every figment; or all the cogitations, (as ſome render the original.) The figment of the thought is what the mind faſhioneth or frameth by thinking within it ſelf: the Hebrew word Jetſer, ſignifieth not only the imagination, but alſo the purpoſe and deſire of man, and hereby is meant that internal taint of corrupt nature, which makes a mint of evil imaginations in the head, a ſink of inordinate affections in the heart, uſeth the memory, as a cloſet or ſtore-houſe of ſinful fancies and impure impreſſions.

V.6. It repenteth] This is ſpoken of God by a figure called Anthropopathia, whereby humane paſſions, for mans better apprehenſion, are aſcribed to God; and whereby we are to underſtand that as man when he repenteth changeth his act, ſo God when he changeth his act, is ſaid to repent, the cauſe by a Metonymie being put for the effect: for repentance being properly a trouble of mind or conſcience for ſome fault, over-ſight or impotence to effect what one would, cannot conſiſt with the infinite goodneſſe, and wiſdom, and power of God, who is not as man that he ſhould repent in a proper ſenſe, Numb.23.19. 1 Sam. 15. 29. in whom there is no variableneſſe, nor ſhadow of change, Jam.1.17. ſince there is no frailty or fickleneſſe in him; no error in his counſels, no deceiving of his expectations, no diſappointment of his purpoſe; and though there be in him a will many times to change his own act, yet is there not at any time in him a change of his will. See Amos 7.3.

grieved him at his heart] In property of ſpeech, God hath neither heart, nor grief; for he is a moſt pure and uncompounded Spirit, impoſſible to ſuffer any thing that can afflict: this therefore is a continuation of the former figure. See the precedent Annotation. See on Exod 31.18.

V.7. Both man and beaſt] Heb.from man unto beaſt. The puniſhment beginneth at man, who did deſerve it, and goeth on to beaſts, which for his ſake are puniſhed, as well as for his ſake they were created. See Annot.on ver.17.

V.9. Juſt and perfect] Noah was juſt and perfect, not ſimply, but in his generation; that is, compared with thoſe of his time: or, he was juſt and perfect, that is, ſincere in his profeſſion of Religion without hypocriſie; but not perfect, that is, free from all ſin: ſo that it was of grace, not of right, that God accepted him, ver.8. and he was juſtified, not by works, but by faith before God, Heb.11.7.

V.10. Sem] See Annot.on Chap.5. laſt.

V.11. The earth was corrupt] That is, all people and nations of the earth were corrupted with ſin, as an infected body with putrified ſores, Iſai.1.6. with all ſorts of ſin, eſpecially with luſt, violence and idolatry; though God by his abſolute power might mar all creatures that he had made, for he may do with his own as he liſteth, as the Potter may do with his veſſel, yet he that made man without his help, wil not deſtroy man without his fault: So that his wickedneſſe makes Apology for Gods juſtice, though nothing in man be meritorious of mercy, and he hath none to charge with his calamity but himſelf, Hoſ.13.9. Iſai.1.19.

V.12. All fleſh] That is, of all the living creatures that live not in the waters, eſpecially man, ſo called chiefly in regard of the oppoſition in man of the fleſh to the ſpirit, againſt which it luſteth. See Annot.on ver.5. and Pſal.14. verſ.1,2,3. and Rom. 3. from the tenth verſe to the 18. and this corruption being general in all fleſh, is a ready preparation and provocation on mans part, for a general perdition from the juſtice of God.

V.13. Before me] I have reſolved upon the ruine of all fleſh, it is ſo before me, or in my view, that I will not look beſides it, until my Decree of deſtruction be put in execution.

through them] That is, the ſons of men, or the people of the earth, called before by the name of fleſh.

I will deſtroy] Or, Am corrupting, or, ready to deſtroy or corrupt.

with the earth] Or, from the earth. The ſubſtance of the earth was not deſtroyed by water, as it ſhall be by fire, 2 Pet.3.10. and it may be many of the ſtrongeſt buildings (and perhaps ſome plants alſo) might remain unruined, or not wholly demoliſhed; but the richeſt fruits were ſo overwhelmed, that they were for the moſt part utterly deſtroyed.

an Ark] Though it were to do the office of a ſhip, it had the form of an Ark or Cheſt, plain below, on each ſide, and almoſt above alſo, ſave that towards the top, it had a little riſing up like the cover of a coffin; and this riſing was about the meaſure of a cubite, ver.16. which was made ridge-wiſe, as the ſloped roof of an houſe, that rain might rather ſlide down from it, then reſt upon it; this cubite was above the meaſure of thirty cubits, which was the altitude or height of the Ark.

Gopher wood] This word is uſed but once in the Scripture; ſome take it to be a Pine tree, ſome a Fir-tree, ſome a Cedar-tree, the Fir-tree would ſerve for boards and planks, Cedars for Maſts, Ezek. 27.5. and it may be any of them, or in general any tree that yeelds gum or Roſin, and ſo it is of neer ſound and ſignification with the word Gopher, which ſignifies bituminous or roſinous, that is, of brimſtone or roſin, and ſuch wood is both of good ſent and of long continuance.

Pitch it] Not only for cloſeneſſe, but for better and wholſomer ſent.

V.15. Three hundred cubits] The length is ten times the height of it, for ten times thirty is three hundred; and ſix times the breadth of it, for ſix times fifty is three hundred, which ſome conceive to be in proportion of mans body rightly framed, meaſured from head to foot for the length, from the right ſide to the left for the breadth, and from the outſide of the breſt, to the outſide of the back for the depth of it. The Ark may ſeem greater or leſſer, according to the difference of cubits, which was of three degrees: 1. The common cubit, containing fyve palms of four fingers breadth; 2. The cubit of the Sanctuary, which is one palm more, Ezek.40.5. And the third is the Geometrical cubit, ſix times as great as the common cubit. If the firſt or ſecond ſort of cubits be too little for capacity for all the creatures with their proviſion, which were to be lodged in it, from the beginning until the ceaſing of the flood, the laſt will be ſufficient and to ſpare.

V.16. A window] This was ſome eſpecial window towards the top of the Ark, by which light may be derived into the rooms, which it is like had other windowes beſides this, though (as ſome think) the lowest room had none at all, for that they ſuppoſe moſt of it was ſunk into the waters; which yet might be otherwiſe, for the Ark being flat below, not ridged as a ſhip, it might float upon the ſurface of the water, for which purpoſe it had that figure; however God might eaſily keep it up for the better uſe of the creatures within it. The windowes might have ſome tranſparent cover to keep out wind or rain, as of glaſſe or horn, or ſome other thing by which light might be let in; for either the ancient Patriarks might, by the experience of their long lives, find out many excellent helps to any purpoſe; or to ſuch a one as this, revelation might make out what obſervation or invention could not deviſe to do.

finiſh it above] The Ark, not the window; (for that meaſure would be too little) which ſhall be raiſed in the roof of it a cubit. See 1 note on ver 14.

a door] Which was wide enough, and high enough to receive an Elephant or a Camel; of the capacity of the Ark moſt doubt, many diſpute, and ſome deny that it could contain ſo many creatures with neceſſary proviſion for them all, for ſo long a time as the flood prevailed: but if there were more in the matter then is conſonant to common reaſon, there was ſo much miraculous in this deſtructive judgement, and preſervative prudence of God, that faith may go on where reaſon is at a ſtand; yet reaſon may reach it ſo far, as to evict it not only poſſible, but probable; but the word of God doth make the truth of it infallible.

V.17. I, even I] An emphatical doubling of the perſon, importing both the propriety of the Authour, and certainty of the act, as Gen.9.9. Exod.14.17. Lev.26.28, Num.3.12. Ezek.5.8. and chap.6.3.& 34.11 and Hoſ.5.14. in theſe places God uſeth the repetition of himſelf: the like is uſed ſometimes by men as by Elijah, 1 Kin.18.22. by Artaxerxes, Ezra 7.21. by Daniel, Dan.8.15.

do bring] The commination of judgement to come, is ſet down in the preſent tenſe, to expreſs aſſurance of event; as being as ſure to be done, as if it were now in doing; for the ſame end propheſies are many times ſet down in the Pretertenſe, as if they were already come to paſſe, becauſe they ſhall aſſuredly be fulfilled, Rev. 18.2. and many other places.

every thing ſhall dye.] Death is the reward of ſin, Gen. 2. 17. Rom. 6.23. and this a proportionable reward; for as ſin was general, ver.12. ſo is death in this place: yet here the puniſhment goeth farther then the guilt, for thoſe muſt dye that never ſinned, becauſe they that ſinned deſerved the curſe, not only in their own perſons, but their appurtenances, Gen.3.19. and 6.7. and 8. 21. Pſal. 107. 34. Micah 3 12.

V.18. My covenant] Becauſe Noah was now not only by word, but by a ſtrange work, to forewarn a whole world of wicked ones of imminent deſtruction, and therefore was like from men to receive much diſcouragement by deriſion, both of his commination of danger, and preparation againſt it: God, to confirm him in that great enterprize, maketh a covenant with him, that his faith might not fail, and ſo he might be aſſured both that he who made the world, could mar it if he pleaſed, and that he who was able both to make and mar it, could ſave whom he pleaſed from perdition.

and thy ſons] Ham as well as Sem and Japhet, bad children, if they have good parents, are partakers of ſome temporal favours for their parents ſake, 1 Kin.11.12,13. none beſides theſe, no not the Carpenters that made the Ark had any entertainment in the Ark. They wrought, it ſeems, as Noahs work-men for their hire, not apprehending their work as a ſervice to Gods providence, in preſervation of a ſeed-plot for a ſecond world: It may be ſo with ſome Preachers, who preach others into the Church, and live themſelves out of it; ſo it falleth out with them, as Paul feared of himſelf, 1 Cor.9.27.

V.19. Of every livingthing] That lived in the aire and earth; for fiſhes and ſuch other creatures, as lived in their element, would be as ſafe in the water, as thoſe that were preſerved in the Ark.

V.20. Of fowles] In probability the fowles firſt entered, and were placed higheſt, next below them were the beaſts, and loweſt of all, according to their natural habitation, were the creeping creatures; all which came in to Noah by a divine inſtinct, or by the Miniſtry of Angels, as they came before Adam to receive their names. Chap.2.19. ſo that he needed neither to go on hunting for the beaſts, nor on hawking for the birds.

V.21. All food] Such as was ſuitable to the nature of every living creature; therefore fleſh for the Lion, who feeds moſt on it, wherein (as there was need) God inſtructed Noah both in the quality and quantity, which was proportioned to their continuance in the Ark (the time whereof was known by God only) and to the time of the earths barrenneſſe afterward; for after Noahs return to land, and his ſowing of the ground, there muſt be time to ripen the corn before reaping in harveſt. In all this, God ſerves his own providence by humane meanes, without which he could have eaſily ſaved man either from the water, on the water, or in the water.

V.22. According to all] So alſo Chap.7.5. he obeyed Gods command in all the particulars preſcribed, without adding or diminiſhing; yea without doubting or diſputing: and though many things were ſtrange, and full of difficulty to be done, (the attempt whereof was like to be entertained with oppoſition and deriſion of the whole world) yet by his faith he overcame them all, Heb.11.7. for faith is a victorious grace, victorious over the world, 1 Joh.5.4.

CHAP. VII.

Ver.1. COme thou] When the Ark was ready, and the proviſion for thoſe that were to be received into it, brought in, and the hundred and twenty years run out, Chap.6.3. and Gods patience abuſed, and Noah's preaching of repentance, and forewarning the world of approaching peril by preparing the Ark for ſafety contemned, then was Noah to enter into the Ark.

and all thy houſe] Thy family, all the perſons of thy houſe, ſpecified ver.13. to wit, himſelf, his wife, his three ſons, and their three wives: he had divers ſervants, no doubt, but they were neither within the Ark, nor within the Covenant, which is made, as the promiſe is, to the faithful, and to their children, Gen.6.18. Act.2.39. Though ſaving grace deſcend not by generation from the parents to their children, many temporal bleſſings are beſtowed on them for their ſakes, Gen. 17.20. and Chap.19.12.

into the Ark] Though God could have ſaved Noah and his family, either upon the water, or in it, as well as the fiſhes, yet he is pleaſed to preſcribe a likely means of ſafety; and the means preſcribed muſt be uſed, though he could ſave without it, as well as with it. See on ch. 40.14.

before me] His ſervice to God was not an eye-ſervice, to be ſeen of men, or applauded by them; what he did, was ſo done, that it might be accepted and approved by God, who likes that goodneſſe moſt which is leaſt in ſight; and that others may do the like, they may obſerve in this example how happily ſincerity and ſafety meet together. See Prov.10.9.

in this generation] The race of man in Noahs time, called by S.Peter, the world of the ungodly, 2 Pet.2.5. was generally ſo degenerated from God, ſo wide out of the way of Enoch's holy walking with him, that Noah was among them as a Lilly among the thornes, Cant. 2.2. which rarity doth not only ſet forth his ſincerity, but whets the edg of his zeal, to be ſo much more faithful and ſerviceable unto God, as to make ſome ſupply for others failing.

V.2. Of every clean beaſt] The diſtinction of cleane and uncleane creatures before the flood, was principally obſerved in reſpect of Sacrifices to God; yet in reſpect of ſuſtenance of man, there was difference alſo, for ſome of them were of wholſom nouriſhment, ſome not; but of thoſe that were wholſome in themſelves, ſome kinds were after the flood forbidden to the Jewes, Lev.11. which upon the union of converts of the Jewes and Gentiles into one Church, were allowed as a part of Chriſtian liberty, Act.10.12,13. 1 Tim.4.4. Tit.1.15. and of Gods liberality, which was more to man then to himſelf in this reſpect, that he would be ſerved but with a few kinds of creatures; as of beaſts, only with Kine, Oxen, Sheep and Goats; and of Birds, with Doves or Pigeons, Turtles, Sparrowes. See Lev.1.3,10,14. & chap.14.4.& 22.19. whereas he allowed man more variety of good creatures, not only for his neceſſity, but for his delight, and gave him the greateſt ſtore of thoſe which are of moſt uſe; and to make them more uſeful, he made them familiar to him, and ſociable among themſelves; the contrary diſpoſition among ſavage creatures, is of the merciful diſpenſation of God, for both their averſneſs from cohabitation with man, and their diſ-union among themſelves, (ranging rather alone, like ſingle theeves or ſpoylers, then in great herds like armies) make much for the ſafety both of mankind, and of the creatures moſt ſerviceable to him.

by ſevens] Heb. Seven ſevens. The Hebrewes expreſſe diſtribution by duplication of the ſame word. So Chap.32.16. Numb.7.11 and chap.29.10. So do the Greeks, (though not ſo frequently) as Mark 6.7,39,40.

by ſevens] That is, one for Sacrifice, as Chap. 8. 20. and the reſt, partly for food, and partly for breed to preſerve the kind: therefore they were fewer of the unclean, becauſe they were taken into the Ark only for increaſe, that the kind might not periſh; and whereas it is ſaid, Chap. 6.20. that two of every ſort muſt be taken into the Ark, the meaning is, that they ſhould be taken by couples, one of each ſexe; but here beſides the difference of ſexe, the diſtinct number is ſet down, which is more of the clean then of the unclean, that there might be moſt increaſe of thoſe which were of moſt uſe and comfort to mankind: and therefore God hath ſo ordered their number and habitation, that the wild and leſſe profitable creatures do not ſo abound, as the tame and more profitable; or God ſo diſpoſeth the abode of ſuch as are ſavage and cruel, that the deſire to live apart from the ſociety of man, and to keep as much as may be out of his walk and ſight. See Job 37.7,8. Pſal.104.20.

the male and his female] Heb. Iſch, Veiſchto, that is, the man and his wife;the diſtinction made in terms belonging to the nobleſt kind,and by a figure called catachreſis, applyed to the ſeveral ſexes of other kinds ; ſo are they ſaid to have families. See Annot. on Chap.8.19.

V.3. Of fowles alſo] As the beaſts that were to be taken in by ſevens were clean beaſts,ſo are the fowls that are of clean kinds, to be taken in by ſevens alſo.

V.4. Yet ſeven days]God yet ſhewed mercy when he executed judgment, in that he ſent it down by a gradual increaſe, that it might warn them of the danger,and work upon them for repentance, whereby ſome might be ſaved from the fire of hel, though none eſcaped the flood of water that were not in the Ark : and it is not unlike,that ſome reſerved in the Ark were damned,as well as ſome ſaved that were overwhelmed in the flood.

yet ſeven dayes] Heb. to yet ſeven days. That is, the ſeventh day from hence or after this. So ver.10. compare Text and Margine ; the like expreſſion is of the ſame conſtruction, 2 Chro. 10.5. which Gen.40.13. is rendred within ; as,within three dayes ſhall Pharaoh lift up thine head.

I will cauſe it to rain] To ſend or with-hold rain, whether in mercy or judgment, is an act of power peculiar to God,Gen.2.5. Job 28 25,26, 28. Iſai.5.6.Amos 4.7. and therefore though Elijah ſaid there ſhould be neither dew nor rain but according to his word,1 Kin.17.1.and according to his word it was reſtrained for three years, and ſix months, and afterwards according to his word reſtored ; yet that was not by a word of command, but a word of prayer, Jam.5.17. he prevailed with God by a petition, elſe he could not have either kept back, or ſent down one drop upon the earth.

V.5. According to all] All Gods commands are juſt in themſelves,and juſtly commanded unto men : nothing ſo great which he bids,but we are bound to do it ; nothing ſo ſmal,that we may be allowed to ſlight it,when the ſtamp of divine Authority is upon it : then what-ever it is, there is weight and worth in it to make it regarded ; and he that obeys not God in all things, as Noah here, and David,Pſa.119.6. Act 13.22. but with choice and exception, obeys him not at all, Jam.2.10,11. See Annot. on Chap.6.ver.laſt.

V.6. Six hundred years old.] Heb. A ſon of ſix hundred years : as ch. 5.32. ſix hundred yeers were paſt ſince the time he was firſt a ſon, and born into the world. That this was ſix hundred years current not compleat,appeareth chap.8.13.

V.7. And his ſons,&c.] None but they ; which confutes the account of the ſeventy Interpreters, which extend the age of Methuſelah beyond the flood, which cannot be true, becauſe he was none of thoſe that were preſerved in the Ark ; and it is not like he periſhed in the flood, therefore it is moſt probable he died before it came upon all fleſh.

becauſe of the waters] Heb. from the face of the waters.

V.9 There went in two and two.] They came in not by any pains or compulſion of Noah, nor by any ſkil or art of hunting or hawking, for that would not ſerve to bring together ſo many ſorts in ſo ſhort a time ; but by ſuch an inward motive or inſtinct from God as brought the creatures before Adam to receive their names, Chap.2.19.

as God had commanded Noah] The Lord ſignified his command to Noah, when he told him they ſhould come unto him, cha.6.19,20. and when they offered themſelves unto him, Gods command was, that he ſhould take them in,and diſpoſe of them fitly in their cels and cabines.

V.10. And it came to paſs] Gods promiſes,how fair ſoever,his threatnings, how fierce ſoever,never fail of an anſwerable effect, becauſe he is immutable in his counſel and purpoſe,Heb.6.17. and unreſiſtible in his power,Job 9. from ver.4. to the tenth : But they who are led more by ſenſe, then by faith or reaſon, will not believe it until they feel it ; and when they are foretold it,with confidence and rage they reject the premonition,Prov.14.16. and paſs on to their puniſhment,Prov.22.3.

V.11. Second month] The months before the captivity of Babylon had their diſtinction (as ſome think) only by number and order,as the firſt, ſecond,&c. after the return from Babylon they had more particular appellations. Carol.Sig.de Rep.Heb. lib.3. cap.2. But that they had them much ſooner,is manifeſt (at leaſt for ſome of them) by Scripture, as

1	Abib,	Exod.13.4. & 23.15. & 34.18. Deut.16.1.	March.
2	Zif,	1 Kings 6.1,37.	April.
8	Bul,	1 King.6.38.	October.

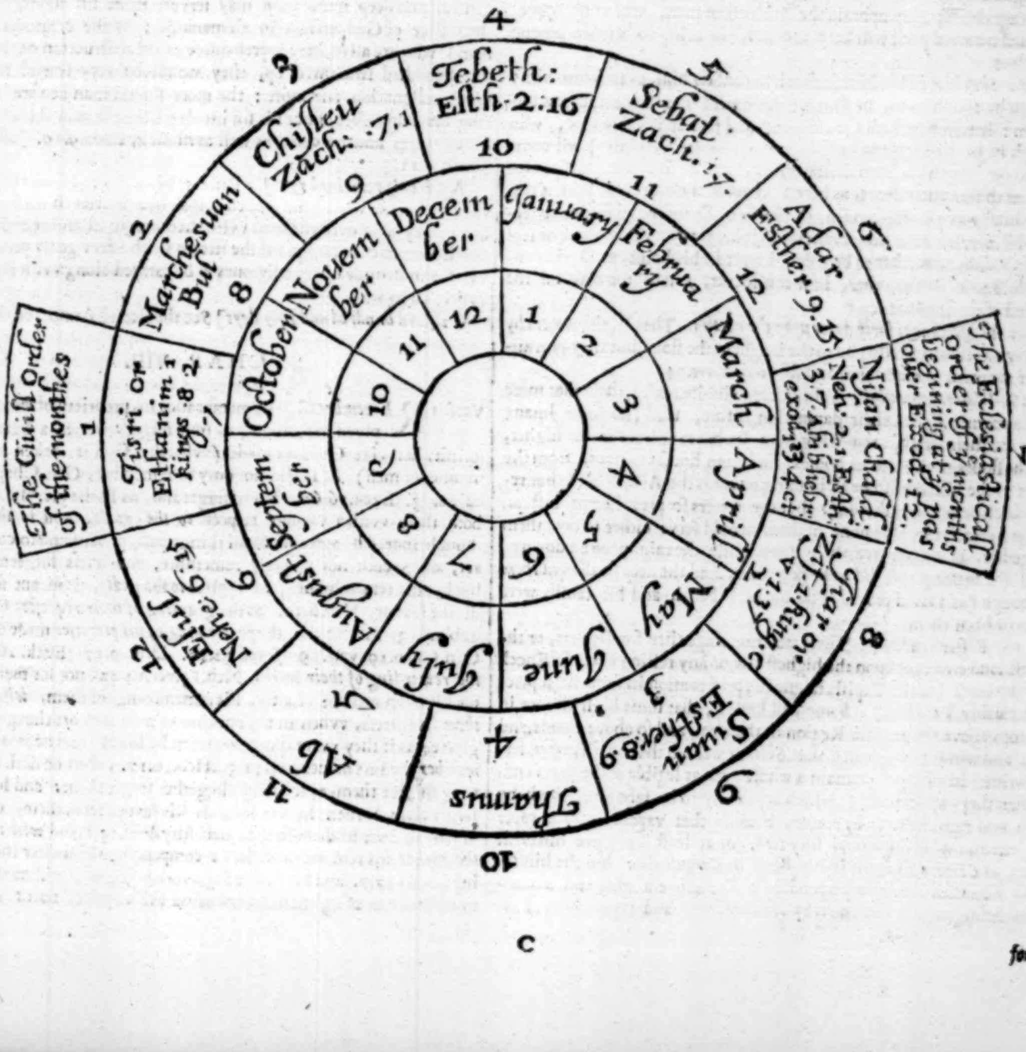
Although in exact correſpondence Niſan or Abib, the firſt month, anſwereth rather to part of March and part of April ; and Jiar or Zif, the ſecond month,anſwereth to part of April,and part of May,&c. This reckoning of months was Eccleſiaſtical, obſerved for the ordering and celebrating of the Feaſts; ſee Exo.12.1.but there was another account of the yeer for Civil affairs,& that began at the month Tiſri or Ethanim,which was part of September, and part of October ; and ſo the ſecond month was part of October, and part of November. This ſecond month ſome take according to the Civil account, for till after the dayes of Noah the Eccleſiaſtical account was not obſerved : ſome take it rather according to the Eccleſiaſtical account, becauſe Moſes (by anticipation,in reſpect of the contexture of ſtory) writes according to what was in uſe in his own age ; and ſo the ſecond month may be the Month Jiar, which contained part of April, and part of May, the pleaſanteſt time in the whole yeer, a time (no doubt) of moſt ſecurity to the world, and of much hope of an happy yeer to enſue. How they differed in their order (both agreeing in the number of twelve) and what correſpondence is betwixt their account and ours, may be repreſented in this Figure.



fountaines of the great deep] Both the waters of the earth, and under it, did overflow, ſwelling up, and finding iſſue out by a miraculous operation of divine power; and alſo the clouds made return of ſhowres for vapours received in the ayre, and there formed into water; ſo that ſinful man is betwixt them both, the one above, the other below, as Pharaoh and his hoſte betwixt the waves of the red Sea, which ſtood ſevered to receive them, and meet again to drown them, Exod.14.28.

Windowes of heaven] Or, The flood-gates of heaven. We find the like phraſe, Chap 8.2. and 2 Kings 7.2.19. Pſal 78.23. Iſai.24 18. Mal 3.10. though in propriety of ſpeech there be neither windowes nor flood-gates in heaven: the meaning is, that the waters bound up in the clouds, which now were extraordinary big and black, were let looſe into continual rain, in ſuch an extraordinary manner & meaſure, that it might appear to men to be a judgment from God; which (as ſome conceive) came not down in drops, but as from ſpouts in ſtreams: or that the clouds did not diſtil down water as ſweat through the pores of the skin, but as it were, vomited out a great meaſure of waters at once; howſoever the rain came down ſo faſt, and in ſuch abundance, as brought the deluge to the higheſt cubit within the ſpace prefixed: to this height or depth of waters ſome conceive there was no need of any new creation, but of a condenſation of aire, which from waters returned to aire again by rarefaction of the wind ſent for that purpoſe, Chap.8.1.

V.12. Forty dayes, and forty nights] The pity and patience of God appear in this ſoft and ſlow pace of his judgements, compared with the work of his goodneſs and power in making the world, which in ſix daies ſpace he perfectly finiſhed, but he took forty daies ſpace when he meant to deſtroy it, after he had given an hundred and twenty years warning, Gen. 6.3. So when he threatned the Ninevites, he premoniſhed them of their peril forty dayes before it was to fall upon them, Jonah 3. 4. who took warning by words, and ſo Gods diſpleaſure againſt them went not on unto deeds, Jonah 3.10.

V.13. In the ſelf ſame day] Viz. When the rain began to fall. Heb. In the bone, body, ſubſtance, or ſtrength of the day. So Gen.17.23. Lev. 23.14. Joſh.10.27. when it was clear day, and while the day was in its ſtrength, ſo that it was certainly the ſelf-ſame day, and not a morning or evening twilight, which might ſeem to belong to the day before, or the day following.

V.14. every ſort] The Hebrew phraſe, Of every wing, imports a difference of fowles by their wings; and ſo there is, for moſt have wings of feathers, yet ſome have skinny or griſtly wings without feathers, ſo have bats.

V.15. Two of all fleſh] That is, of every ſexe one of all kinds, not only of the tame creatures, but of the wild, even thoſe which were at greateſt antipathy or hoſtility each to other, were (out of a natural deſire to eſcape danger) content to lay all quarrels aſide, and quietly to come and continue together, (as Iſai.11.6,7 &c. and Chap.65.25) where they might be preſerved from deſtruction: wherein the wiſdom of brute and ſavage beaſts may upbraid the madneſs of men, whom no apprehenſion of outward peril will keep in peace, or bring to a truce among themſelves.

V 16. Shut him in] Not ſo much to confine him, as to ſecure him; for when he ſhut him in, he ſhut out the waters, that they might not follow him: herein how doth God honour and favour his ſervants, who (though he be the high and lofty one who inhabiteth eternity) wil come down to dwell with the humble, Iſai.57.15. and do ſuch mean offices for them, as to ſhut their doors, as here; to make their bed, as Pſal. 41,3. and (which was a condeſcending of the ſame Deity in the form of a ſervant, Phil.2.7.) to waſh his ſervants feet, Joh.13.5? What office or ſervice of God then, whether to be a door keeper in his houſe, as David deſired, Pſal.84.10. or any other, how low ſoever, can be too baſe for the worthieſt of the ſons of men?

V.17. The floud was forty dayes upon the earth] That is, the waters by the forty dayes rain ſwelled up to the height of the flood, but they prevailed over the earth one hundred and fifty dayes, ver.24.

V.18. Waters prevailed] When they daily increaſed, thoſe that more feared drowning then their damnation before, uſed (no doubt) many means for their ſafety, removing from the lower roomes to the higher, from the floors to the tops of houſes, and from houſes to trees, from the valleys to the hills, and ſome ſwimming towards the Ark, deſired that refuge which before they derided: but the waters ſo prevailed againſt all their preſervatives, that none of them would ſerve either to ſave them all together, or to reprieve their lives while the rain powred downe; and ſo the water floods did over-flow them, and the deep ſwallowed them up, though (as David prayed, Pſal.69.15) Noah and his family were preſerved from them.

V.20. Fifteen cubits] There was no refuge then for Gyants, or the greateſt land creatures upon the higheſt hils, or any reſting place for Enoch upon the earth (as the Papiſts feigne his preſervation in ſome high place of the earthly Paradiſe.) Some will have it, that ſome high hils are in their tops above the middle Region of the aire, and ſo above clouds, and raine, and winds; inſomuch that Solinus writeth that on Olympus, letters written in aſhes will remain a whole year, as legible at the years end, as when they were made; which appeareth to be fabulous, both by reaſon and experience; by reaſon, becauſe that vapours which cauſe both rain and wind do aſcend fifty two, or at leaſt forty five miles in height, as Clavius ſheweth in his Book de Crepuſculis: but the hill Olympus aſcendeth not in a perpendicular line above a mile and a quarter, as the dimenſion was taken by Anaxagoras, and reported by Plutarch, in the life of Paulus Æmilius, ſo that if the mountains, Athos, Atlas, Caucaſus, Caſius, Pelion, Oſſa, Teneriffa, and divers others had been ſet one upon another, and all upon Olympus, it would not have afforded a ſafe repoſe for Enoch, or any elſe, the flood ſwelling up fifteen cubits above the higheſt mountaines: and for experience, Franciſc. Philelphus, a learned Knight of Italy, aſcended the hill Olympus to know the truth of that of Solinus, and found the relation to be falſe, as Ludov. Vives hath reported on Auguſt. de Civ. Dei, lib.15. cap. ult. yet (how high ſoever the flood ſwelled) the Papiſts will have it, that Enoch was ſecured from drowning in ſome part of Paradiſe; and for that purpoſe the waters (ſay ſome of the Learnedſt of that ſide) ſtood above the hill, and about the place where Enoch was; as Exod.12.22.

V.22. The breath of life] Heb. The breath of ſpirit. By this it is thought that fiſhes are excepted, becauſe they breath not; and they are ſaid not to breath, becauſe they have no lungs, and live in the water where aire cannot come; yet Pliny ſaith, that fiſhes breath, Nat.Hiſt. lib.9.cap 7.

died] There is no doubt of the death of thoſe that were drowned, but a great queſtion whether all that were drowned were alſo damned: Some are for the Affirmative, 1. Becauſe they were generally corrupt and cruel, Gen.6.11. 2. Becauſe the preaching of Noah, and preparing the Ark for one hundred and twenty yeers together, wrought no repentance in them. 3. Becauſe the Ark was a figure of the Church, 1 Pet.3. 20,21. out of which there is no ſalvation. 4. For that they that were drowned, were called the world of the ungodly, 2 Pet 2.5. Notwithſtanding, as all were not ſaved that were within the Ark, ſo it is probable that all were not damned that were out of it; for there were millions of infants, of whom ſome might belong unto God by his decree of Election; and though moſt were ſo hardned in their ſin as to dye in it, and be damned for it, yet the danger coming upon them by degrees, might work upon ſome of them to ſalvation of their ſouls, though they miſcarried by the drowning of their bodies; as Eli, though he brake his neck, 1 Sam.4.18. did not loſe his ſoul, as judicious and godly Divines have judged of him.

V.23. Every living ſubſtance] Except the fiſhes which periſhed not; for the judgement being inflicted for the ſin of man thoſe creatures were deſtroyed, who lived on and in the ſame element with him; that is, thoſe of the earth and aire, and with which he had moſt to do, and not the fiſhes, who lived out of all communion with him in that element out of which they could not, and in which man could not live: unleſſe then the flood had been made up of ſuch rain as fell upon Sodom and Gomorrah (as ſome Jewes fain ſomewhat like it, viz. that it was a raine of ſcalding water,) they might ſurvive the deſtruction of other creatures. And of thoſe that were deſtroyed, the firſt were men, women, and children; then beaſts, and birds laſt of all, who might flye above that danger, when they could neither by going (though it were climbing) nor by ſwimming defer their drowning any longer. This general and deep inundation may ſerve to make ſin abominable, and the juſtice of God terrible to all mankind; if the creatures (beſides man) who are alive, were apprehenſive of the deſtruction of thoſe which the flood had ſwallowed up, they would be very fearful to provoke Gods indignation any more: the more ſhould man beware of incurring his diſpleaſure, ſince his ſin involveth the unreaſonable and inſenſible creatures under a curſe, as well as himſelf, Exod.9.19. Joſh.7.24,25 Jonah 4.11.

Noah only remained &c.] 2 Pet.2.5. Now it was evident to the ſurviving part of the world (and that they that were overtaken with the waters, before they were overwhelmed vvith them, might ſee and acknovvledg it) that it vvas ſafer to go againſt the ſtream vvith a fevv godly perſons, then vvith a multitude of ungodly ones to be carryed along vvith it, and overvvhelmed by it.

V.24. An hundred and fifty days] See the ſecond Annot. on ch.8. v.14.

CHAP. VIII.

Verſ. 1. R*Emembred*] Remembrance in propriety of ſpeech, is applyed to ſuch only as may forget: yet by a figure of conformity betvvixt God and man, (vvhereby God is ſpoken of after the manner of men) he is ſaid not only to remember, Gen.Chap.9.15. Exod 32.13. Ezek.16 60. but to forget alſo, as Pſal.13.1. Iſa.49.14. and both theſe vvith a various reſpect to the godly, and to the wicked; though indeed he apprehends all things paſt, preſent and to come, at one act, and ſo doth not properly remember, much leſs forget any thing: but by his remembrance, as applied to the godly, is meant ſome act of divine favour, Heb.6.10. as the granting of their requeſts, Gen.30.22. Job 14.13. Pſal.132.1. the performing of his promiſes made unto them, Gen.Chap.19. verſ.29 Exod.32.13. Deut.9.27. Ezek. 16.60. and the rewarding of their works, Neh.13.ver.14 22. not for their merit, but for his ovvn mercy: Laſtly, his remembring of them, is his relieving them in diſtreſs, vvhen in the opinion of men they are thought to be neglected, as if they vvere quite forgotten by him; and he is ſaid not to remember the ſins of ſuch, Jer.31 34. Heb.10.17. vvhen he doth ſo freely & fully forgive them, as if he did altogether forget them: and he is ſaid to forget them vvhen he vvith-holds his favour from them, or deferreth to ſend ſuccour to them in their neceſſity, Pſal.13.1. and with reference to the wicked, his remembrance is a recompencing them after their miſ-doings, Pſa.137.7. and his forgetting a forbearing of puniſhment, as if they vvere both out of ſight, and out of mind vvith him, Pſ.10.11. and novv it was ſeaſonable for God to manifeſt his remembrance of Noah, who had been many months in a ſtate of ſadneſs, though of ſafety, and might well by this time be weary of his cloſe priſon, his unſteady dwelling, and of his cohabitation with brute creatures, unfit (ſave in caſe of great neceſſity) to lodg with him under the ſame roof.

a wind to paſſe] The wind, as God pleaſeth to employ it, either driveth away rain, or bringeth it; ſee Prov. 25. 23. Text and Margine; ſo it ſometimes maketh a flood to ſwell bigger, Pſal. 107. 25. Jonah 1. 4. and ſometimes (and that moſt uſually) it dryeth up ſmall waters, and leſſeneth or abateth the depth of great ones, though it ruffle them up into boiſterous waves: but in the ſlacking and aſſwaging of this great flood, there was (beſides the natural operation of the wind) a ſupernatural and miraculous power to make this high tide to fall to an ebbe; as in the drying up of the Sea by the Eaſt-wind, Exod.14. verſ. 21.

V.2. Fountains of the deep] To make the flood there was, as it were, a ſecret conſpiracy and concurrence of waters under ground, with the Rivers and Seas above; betwixt theſe there is ſuch commerce and communion that from the Sea the Rivers run, and to it they make their return again, Eccleſ.1.7. yet whether the Sea made any augmentation of the waters on the earth, it is uncertain; and though ſome affirm it, others deny it upon this reaſon, for that the ſea was to ſwel higher, as well as the waters on the Land; but now with the paſſage of this wind, and Gods powerfull co-operation with it, that paſſage of ſecret confluence of, and entercourſe betwixt the waters was ſtopped to make the flood to aſſwage, which before was opened to make it ſwel. reſtrained] The rain was of Gods ſending, Chap.6. verſ.17 Chap. 7. ver 4. and the reſtraint of it was of his making; ſecond cauſes are ſo ſtinted and confined in their operations, that they cauſe not contraries, unleſs by accident; as the fire burns the hotter, when the aire about it is the colder, and the middle Region of the air is ſo much the colder, as that on both ſides it is the hotter; but the firſt cauſe equally produceth the moſt repugnant effects; as in the general good and evil, Job 2. 10. good without exception, evil with diſtinction; for the evil of ſin is from man or Satan, the evil of pain or puniſhment from God; of this evil the words of Job are to be underſtood, and of Amos, Chap. 3.6. and in particular, in the creatures that bring forth he cauſeth fruitfulneſs, Gen.1.28. Mal.3.10,11. and barrenneſs, Deut.28.38,39,40. Joel 1.10,11,12. in living creatures health and ſickneſs, Exod. 9.9,10, 11. life and death, 1 Sam. 2.6. to men he diſpenſeth as he pleaſeth, riches and poverty, advancement and debaſement, 1 Sam. 2. 7. peace and war, Iſai.45.7. in the air he maketh light and darkneſs, Gen.1.2, 3. Iſai.45.7. in the water calm and tempeſt by his word, Matth. 8.26. Jon.1.4,15. and he hath them all ſo ſubject unto him, that, as the Centurion ſaid of his ſouldiers, Matth. 8.9. they go at his command, and come at his call: if then we deſire any good thing, let us addreſſe our devotions to him from whom is every good and perfect gift, Jam.1.17.

V.3. Returned continually] Heb. Going and returning. That is, with all ſpeed, running and recoyling to their proper place and channels, from whence they were gathered to make up the flood; which ſheweth their readineſſe to obey the command of the Creator; an obedience obſervable throughout the whole Creation from the winged Seraphims, Iſai. 6.2. the flying Angel, Revel.8.13. to the crawling vermin, Exod. 8.17,18. Act.12.23. Pſal. 148.10. Only men, betwixt both, and contrary unto both, are diſobedient and rebellious to their Maker, who ſhould follow the example of the one ſort, as expecting hereafter to be their partners in glory, and go beyond the other, as much as they are behind man, or below him in faculties and favours from God, both to enable them for, and encourage them in his ſervice.

after the end of the hundred and fifty dayes] That is, from the beginning of the flood (ſo long the waters prevailed, Chap.7. ver.24.) and after that time they began to be abated.

V 4. Seventh month] Not from the beginning of the flood, but from the beginning of the year, 1656. wherein the flood was ſent upon the world; and this not according to the Eccleſiaſtical account, which was not in uſe before Moſes time, (for ſo the ſeventh month was Tiſri, September) but according to the Civil account which began at September, and from thence the ſeventh month was Niſan (as the Chald. and Hebrews call it) Eſth 3.7. Abib, (as the Hebr.) Exod.13.4. that month anſwering to part of March, and part of April.

mountains of Ararat] Upon one of thoſe Mountains called Ararat, the higheſt ſort of hills, over which the flood prevailed. Gen Chap 7. verſ.19. There is a Kingdom called Ararat, Jer.51.27. (whither the ſones of Senacharib fled, when they had ſlain their father, 2 King. 19.37.) Iſai.37.38. where the word in the Hebrew Text is Ararat, but in the Engliſh Tranſlation Armenia in both places; and by Armenia is meant Armenia the greater, ſituate neer unto the Caſpian Sea: ſome take it to be the ſame with Aram, and that Hebrew word the Vulgar Latin renders Meſopotamia, which borders upon Armenia. Theſe Mountains of Ararat are called by Curtius and by Beroſus the Chaldean, *Cordian Mountains Epiphan. hæreſ.*66. which Ptolomy placeth in that part of Armenia the greater, that looketh toward Aſſyria. Nicholaus Damaſcenus, cited by *Joſeph. Antiq. l.*1, *cap.*4. calls the Mountain Baris; but howſoever there be difference in the name, the moſt agree of the place, that theſe hils are an hilly tract of ground in the Countrey of Armenia the greater.

V.4. Decreaſed continually until the tenth month] The Ark reſted on the mountain of Ararat while the waters covered it; for at the firſt the Mount was felt, but not ſeen, yet the waters then were ſo much abated, and did day by day ſo abate, that whereas before they ſtood above the Mountains, Pſal. 104. verſ. 6. yea, fifteen cubits above all high hills, Chap 7. verſ. 19, 20. within ſeventy three dayes ſpace (from the firſt repoſe the Ark had upon Ararat) not only that, but the tops of other lower hills were ſeen, the waters partly being ſunk down and ſwallowed up by the hollow places of the earth, and partly drawn up and rarified into ayre: this God could have done in a moment, but he works by degrees, that we may not too ſuddenly paſſe over the acts of his power, juſtice or goodneſs, but may exerciſe our faith in a deliberate waiting on his will without precipitation, or too much haſte, Iſa. 28. 16. There be ſome who preciſely ſet down the gradual abatement of the waters; and they ſay, that while they were above the mountains they abated but one cubit in four dayes, but that afterwards they aſſwaged more ſwiftly: if it were certain how deep the Ark deſcended into the waters, whether (according to the phraſe of ſhip-men) it drew water eleven, (as ſome ſay) or thirteen cubits, (as others) we might better reſolve the doubt at the firſt dayes decreaſe; for the ſeventeenth day of the ſeventh month was the firſt day of the waters abatement; for from the beginning of the flood, till this ſeventeenth day, are but one hundred fifty one dayes; and of them for one hundred fifty dayes the waters prevailed, Chap.7. verſ.24. whence it will follow, that the Ark drew water thirteen cubits, that the waters abated two cubits in one day; for that the ſeventeenth day it touched and reſted on Mount Ararat, and when at the higheſt it was above it but fifteen cubits, but if it drew water but eleven cubits, it fel four cubits the firſt day: theſe conjectures are both doubtful, neither dangerous.

V.6. At the end of forty dayes] Making the account from the firſt appearance of the dry land upon the mountain tops, which was the firſt day of the tenth month, the end of theſe forty days was the eleventh day of the eleventh month called Sebat, the ſame which we call January.

V 7. To and fro] Heb. Going forth and returning. Not into the Ark, but fluttering about the Ark, and reſting on the top of the Ark; for the Raven accuſtomed to live at large, was weary of the ſtraitneſſe of her cage, and finding many bodies dead, but not devoured by the fiſhes, ſhe was ravenous after ſuch prey, and would no more be confined to the Ark neither for diet nor lodging.

until] This doth not ſignifie that ſhe returned when the waters were dryed up, but that ſhe returned not before they were dryed up, ſo the ſenſe is negative to the term particularly mentioned, not poſitive for the time afterwards; as 2 Sam.6. laſt. Pſal.110.ver.1. Mat.1.25.

V.8. Dove] The Dove was ſent out the ſeventh day after the Raven, as verſ.10. ſheweth; Noah was very deſirous, and hopeful alſo to receive ſome good newes by ſuch meſſengers, though they were mute; and he hoped the failing of the Raven would be recompenced by the faithfulneſſe of the Dove, who by the manner of her flight lower and longer then that of the Raven, would make a better diſcovery of the ſtate of the earth; and being more wonted to humane habitation, and ſociety (but eſpecially out of love to her mate left behind) would return again, and bring with her ſome token of good tydings, if there were any.

V 9. Found no reſt] For though the mountain tops were bare, it may be they were muddy, or far off, and not within the compaſſe of the courſe ſhe took; beſides Doves (as was noted before, Annot. on verſ. 8) flie low, and therefore may be called the Doves of the valleyes, Ezek. 7.16. as the Ravens are called the Ravens of the valleyes, Prov.30.17. becauſe they feed on the carcaſſes, which are moſt frequently found on the lower grounds, for in ſuch eſpecially are battles pitched, and the greateſt ſlaughters made.

pulled her in unto him] Heb. Cauſed her to come by opening a window. And it may be, ſhewing her mate, and ſo inviting her to the place where ſhe had been before, and where ſhe might be with more comfort, until the world were better: and when ſhe came within the reach, he took her in his hand, to try whether her wings or legs were beſmeered with dirt or mud, which might ſignifie the aſſwaging of the flood.

V.10 Other ſeven dayes] That is, fourteen dayes after the ſending forth of the Raven; for he waited ſo many dayes in expectation of her return, and when ſeven of them were expired, and the Raven not returned, he ſent forth the Dove the firſt time, and after ſhe came back, he ſtaid other ſeven dayes, and ſent her forth again.

V.11. In the evening] Having ſolaced her ſelf in flying abroad, and reſting upon trees, the tops whereof did now appear, ſhe returned to the Ark, the place of her reſt and repaſt, for there was better diet and lodging for her then yet ſhe could find any where abroad.

olive leaf pluckt off] Not a looſe leaf floating on the water, but a little tender ſprig, ſuch a Dove with her bil might break off, which now was the eaſier to be done, becauſe it was ſoftned and weakned by being long in the water; and the Olive branch was the more likely to remain, becauſe it is green all the yeer, Plin. Nat. Hiſt. l 16. *c.*20. yet it was an eſpecial providence alſo in preſerving it, together with the ſeminal virtue of other Plants and Herbs, for the repleniſhing of the world with theſe kinds of creatures, whereof we do not read there was any ſeed reſerved in the Ark.

V.12. Yet other ſeven dayes] Some make a myſtical obſervation of the number ſeven, with reference to the Sabbath, and ſuppoſe that Noah on that day, performed his moſt ſolemn devotion to God with prayers, for good newes to be brought him, concerning the ceaſing of the flood; and by this third ſending, and his intermiſſion between, we may obſerve, not only his great deſire of removal of the curſe from the earth, but his patient waiting on Gods time, for obtainment of the thing deſired. See Jam.5.7.

returned not] Which might be by going ſo far, as to loſe her way back again: but it was rather by finding (that which before ſhe did not, verſ.9.) a reſting-place for the ſole of her foot, and food for her ſuſtenance, which together with a more free ayr and liberty then before ſhe could have, made her neglect both her mate and her Maſter, yet priſoners in the Ark.

V.13. In the firſt month, the firſt day of the month] Heb. In the firſt the firſt of the month. Where after the former firſt, the word month is underſtood, after the latter the word day; the words month and day are expreſly mentioned before, verſ.4. and after, verſ.14. yet ſometimes the Subſtantive of time is omitted, and virtually comprehended under the Adjective of number and order, as Matth.26.17. in the Greek, the firſt of the feaſt, the word day is left out; but Mark 14.12. it is ſupplied, and the ſpeech made full thus, the firſt day of unleavened bread. This was the firſt month, according to the ſacred account, to wit the month Niſan anſwering to March; ſee the Annot. on Chap.7. verſ. 11. and the firſt day of that month.

removed the covering of the Ark] That is, took up a board or two in the top or roof of the Ark to look round about him, for through the window he could not ſee ſo far every way.

the face of the ground] The ground is ſaid to have a face as the waters, Chap.1.2. and the firmament a face, verſ.20. of that Chapter, by which is meant the open and moſt viſible part, called the ſuperficies, or ſurface, which is moſt obvious to the view, as the face of a man is more viſible then his other parts, which are commonly covered, when the face is commonly bare.

was dry] That is, the ground which before was quite covered with waters (except the hilly part) was now generally bare, ſo that it appeared all earth; yet it was not ſo dry, but that it was ſoft and muddy; and ſo not firm enough to afford a ſolid ſubſtance to hard and heavy bodies, as in the twenty ſeventh day of the next month it did, ver.14. until which Noah kept in the Ark, notwithſtanding the dryneſs of the earth in the ſenſe fore-mentioned.

V.14. In the ſecond month] The month Jiar, that is, the month which anſwereth to part of April, and part of May.

ſeven and twentieth day] Hence we may make the complete account of the continuance of the flood; which, if the months and dayes were reckoned according to the courſe of the Sun, make up a whole Solar year and ten dayes; whereof the rain continued forty dayes, the flood in its full height, one hundred and fifty dayes, in its diminution or decreaſe one hundred twenty nine dayes; in the end whereof the earth was bare all over, but muddy, ſo that Noah continued after that fifty ſix dayes; which caſt up into a total ſum, make up the number of three hundred ſeventy five dayes, that is ten dayes above the Solar year, conſiſting of three hundred ſixty five dayes. For this account compare, Gen.7. ver. 11,13. with the firſt and fourth of that Chapter, and the firſt of this. But it is to be noted, that accordiug to an account uſual among the Hebrews, ſix of the months of the year had thirty dayes, and the other ſix had twenty nine dayes apiece, which put into one ſum, make three hundred fifty four dayes, to which adding the eleven dayes, (viz. from the ſeventeenth, till the twenty ſeventh of the ſecond month incluſively) the whole will be a Solar year, after our ordinary reckoning, to wit, three hundred ſixty five dayes.

V.15. God ſpake unto Noah] Whether by a dream, or viſion, or ſecret motion of his Spirit, or by aſſumption of an humane ſhape, it is not ſaid here, nor Chap.6.13. nor Chap.7.1. but which way ſoever it was, it was evident to Noah, not only what it was he was to do, but who it was that made it known unto him; ſo that he did not miſtake the Authour of the revelation, as young Samuel did, 1 Sam.3.5,6,7,8.

V.16. Go forth of the Ark] At Gods command he came into the Ark, Gen.Chap.7. verſ.1. and by his command he is to go forth again; in time of danger he ſhut him up like a priſoner, but it was to preſerve him; Gods reſtraints are mercies, not in this caſe alone; ſee Iſai.26.20. and now the danger is paſt, and liberty ſafe, he is ſet free to go abroad; he continued his confinement until the Lord enlarged him: It is good to have his warrant for our movings to and fro, our coming in, and going out, and walking in ſuch wayes, as we may comfortably expect to have Angels to attend our ſteps, Pſal.91. ver.11. And if we take the Ark for a type or figure of the Church, (as Divines uſe to do, and may well agree with Saint Peters compariſon, 1 Pet.3.20,21.) it may point us to a duty of importance in our Chriſtian practiſe, viz. that none muſt be admitted into the Church, or excommunicated out of it, but for cauſes, and in a manner warrantable by the Word of God.

V.17. Breed abundantly on the earth] In the Ark was the ſtock and ſtore both of mankind, and of other creatures, for repleniſhing the whole earth; not that all places ſhould breed all kind of creatures, for in America there are yet (as ſome write) no Lyons, Bears, Tygers: and though ſome parts of the earth be ſeparated from others by great waters, and by the main Sea, ſuch creatures as could not by ſwimming paſſe from one to another, might by Navigation be tranſported; for from Noahs Ark the uſe of ſhips might be occaſioned; and that they were ancient, may be collected from Gen.49.13. Deut.28.68. See on Chap.9.1.

V.19. After their kinds] That is, they went out, not confuſedly, but in order, (as they came in,) and ſorted themſelves together according to their kinds; that is, men and their wives together, ver.16. the male and his female, the clean beaſts, and birds by themſelves, the unclean by themſelves, as they were ſorted, Gen.7.ver.2,3. The Hebrew (rendred After their kinds) is, After their families: whereof ſee the laſt Note on Chap.7.ver.2.

V.20. Builded an Altar] We find no mention of an Altar until now, yet it is not unlike but that the Sacrifices of Cain and Abel, Gen.4. were offered on an Altar. This is the firſt thing that Noah did after his deliverance from danger, and inlargement from his long reſtraint; religious gratitude muſt be performed upon the firſt opportunity that may be taken; God would have the thankful memorial of the worlds creation in ſix dayes, ſolemnly obſerved the next day after, Geneſ.2.2. by whoſe exemplary direction, the faithful have been very forward to make remembrances of his mercies, and to teſtifie their thankfulneſſe by their offering in tribute to him ſome part of his own, as to the Lord of all. This was Abrahams practice, Gen.12.7,8. and Chap.13.18. and 22. and Iſaac's, Gen.26.25. and Jacob's, Chap.35.7. Of Moſes, Exod.17.15. and of others; and in ſuch ſervices they profeſſed their faith in Chriſt; and expreſſed it by works in their grateful oblations to God.

burnt offerings] Thoſe Offerings were uſually called burnt-Offerings which were wholly burnt, no part reſerved for food to any; and thoſe being of every kind of clean creature, it ſheweth Noahs religious and liberal heart to God, who of ſo ſmall ſtore was willing to offer unto him ſo great a ſacrifice.

V.21. Smelled] This is a figurative ſpeech, whereby that is applyed unto God, which in propriety of phraſe is not found in him, but in man, and the other creatures; for this ſmelling is the exerciſe of a ſenſe which requires a material organ or inſtrument, which cannot be in God who is a pure Spirit; yet for mans inſtruction, the expreſſions of God are thus brought down to his capacity. See Annot. on chap.6.6.

ſweet ſavour] So Exod.29.18. The ſavour of broyled or burned fleſh and fat is not very ſweet in it ſelf: and ſo this ſeemeth to be as the Commination of the Prophet, Iſai.3.24. a ſtink for a perfume; but the Ordinances of God are not to be cenſured by carnal ſenſe, for ſo circumciſion would be rather a contemptible then an honourable ſeal of mans Covenant with God; nor would the Sacraments of the New Teſtament be much ſet by, if we ſhould value them by what our ſenſes diſcern of them; for, for the one, what is more common or more weak then water? for the other, how little worth is a bit of bread, or a ſip of wine, if our ſight or taſte be Judges of them? but yet, as the Ordinances of God, and the repreſentations of the grace and vertue of Chriſt, and our reconciliation with God thereby, they are ſweet and ſavoury, not only to men, but to God himſelf, for in him he is well pleaſed, Mat.3.17. Iſai.42.1. and in him, and for his ſake is the ſacrifice of a very ſweet ſavour, Epheſ.5.2. though in it ſelf it were never ſo unſavoury to humane ſenſe: in Hebrew, it is a ſavour of reſt, for that which affecteth with much delight, ſtayeth and ſettleth the mind and heart upon it, and if there were any offenſive agitations before, it quiets them, and makes them to reſt and ceaſe.

The Lord ſaid in his heart] This is alſo ſpoken figuratively, as before: ſee Annot. on the word ſmelled. The meaning is, that God had decreed and reſolved with himſelf, that he will not again curſe the ground, &c. and this he ſaid heartily and ſincerely, for all the ſayings of God are hearty, none feigned or hypocritical; for ſuch are abominable to God in men, and ſo impoſſible to be in God towards men, 1 Sam.15.29. Or the words may be rendred, God ſaid to his heart, that is, God ſpake this comfort to the heart of Noah by his Spirit, to encourage him in his godly courſe.

I will not again curſe the ground any more] He doth not here cancel the general curſe inflicted for the ſin of man, Gen.3.17. nor give ſecurity againſt burning of the world, whereof Saint Peter propheſyeth, 2 Pet.3.10,11. nor promiſe that particular places ſhall not be drowned, but that there ſhall be no ſuch general flood as this was any more.

for the imagination] The like reaſon is rendred why God will bring a flood upon the earth, Gen.6.5,6. as here why he will not: if we read the words, though the imagination, (as the Original will bear) &c. there is no appearance of repugnancy that is not eaſily anſwered; and if we read, for the imagination, there is ſo much difference betwixt the reaſon, as it is rendred there, and here, as excludeth contradiction: for there he is moved to wrath by a general aggravation of ſin in all perſons, parts and faculties, ver.5,12. and by ſome hainous ſins of particular kinds, as Apoſtaſie in the families of the godly, luſtful affecting of marriages with the wicked, Chap.6.2. and horrible cruelty wherewith the earth was filled, ver.11. and all this with a Gyant-like and ſturdy contempt of God, which was a juſt ground for a general judgment, there being ſo many who did evil with both hands earneſtly, Mic.7.3. But here God moveth himſelf to mercy by conſideration of mans native corruption even from his child-hood, as Pſal.103.13. Like as a father pitieth his children, ſo the Lord pitieth them that fear him; and in his next words, for he knoweth our frame, and remembreth that we are but duſt, ver.14. So he knoweth that even the beſt are ſhapen in iniquity, and conceived in ſin, Pſalm 51.5. And hence he will take occaſion to ſhew mercy to mankind; for if he ſhould ſend general judgements whenſoever there is a generality of ſin, he ſhould do nothing but marre what he hath made; and yet as the wicked ſhall deſerve, and his wiſdome think meet, he will have wayes enough to be meet with them. Beſides, now his Juſtice being glorified in the deſtruction of the old world, his mercy in regard of mans nature, and unavoidable corruption was ſeaſonably promiſed, eſpecially being now reconciled to the new world by the Sacrifice of Noah; and this moves him to bring in that as a motive of mercy, which in juſtice he might aggravate to ſeverity. See the like pleading, Iſai.48 8,9.

while the earth remaineth] Heb. All the dayes of the earth. It is a queſtion whether the ſubſtance of the earth ſhall not remain, when the uſe of ſeed-time and harveſt is ceaſed, which will be at the end of the world, when Saint Peters fiery Prophecy is come to paſſe, 2 Pet.3.10. yet God makes it certain by his Decree, that while he is pleaſed to continue mankind and earth together, there ſhall be ſuch difference of ſeaſons as are after mentioned.

ſeed time and harveſt] God maketh this Decree for the general, but not ſo but that he may curſe ſome places in particular; ſo that there be neither ſeed-time nor harveſt in their ſeaſon; as in 1 King. 17.1.

day and night] The meaning is not, that there was not day and night during the flood, for it appeareth there was, by Noahs numbring of the dayes, ver. 10. but that both in the preparation of the flood by dark black clouds, as 1 King.18 45. Joel 2.2. Zeph.1.15. and ſtormy weather, Acts 27.20. and by continual rain the day was darkned, and Noah ſhut up, and ſuſpended from the works both appertaining to the unreaſonable creatures, and to humane commerce, was as it were benighted; for when night cometh, no man can work, Joh. 9.4. and that ſuch and ſo long darkneſs and ceſſation from their labors of the day by ſuch a reſtraint, by black clouds, long rain, and a deep and general flood for ſo long a time, ſhall be no more.

CHAP. IX.

Verſ.1. BE fruitful and multiply] (As Chap.1.28. and 8.17. and ver.7. of this Chapter) Though we read not that Noah had any children after the flood, the bleſſing of fruitfulneſſe in his iſſue was a bleſſing to him, Pſal. 128.6. for grand-children are children in whom the Grand-father lives, and whom he loves as well as thoſe that are his by immediate deſcent, Gen.31.28. and Chap.48. 15,16.

repleniſh the earth] Theſe words as the former, are in form a command, in effect a bleſſing, wherein Gods word and his work go together, as Gen.1.3,7,11. and though it be ſpoken expreſly of mankind alone, yet herein is implyed alſo Gods bleſſing upon other creatures; for not only mankind, but beaſts and birds were to increaſe, and by their fruitfulneſs to repleniſh the earth and the air. It is much doubted, how all kind of creatures could be brought from the place where Noah landed his carriage in the Ark, all over the earth to overſpread it, (as verſ.19.) eſpecially into the remote parts, as America? Anſw. 1. It is not neceſſary that all kind of creatures ſhould breed in all parts of the earth, as in the Ilands Cuba, Margarita & Dominica, there be no Lyons, Bears, nor Tygers, as many Countreys have no breed of Elephants or Camels. Secondly, they might go very far by land, and from one Land to another, by ſome narrow paſſage of water which they might ſwim over: or they might be carried in ſhips from one countrey to another; and by that time they were multiplyed ſo, as to be too many for that Continent on which they were firſt landed, from Noahs Ark the Art of making Ships, and of Navigation might be invented; for though we find no mention of Ships until the Benediction of dying Jacob, Gen.49. 13. which was ſix hundred yeers after this general flood; yet there might be uſe of them long before: for it is not neceſſary, nor uſual in the Scripture, that all things be mentioned that are done, much leſſe that their original ſhould be preciſely noted, for in ſix ſhort Chapters (the firſt ſix of the Book of Geneſis) we have the compendium of the ſtory of the world from the Creation to the Flood, containing the terme of one thouſand ſix hundred fifty ſix yeers; wherein it muſt needs be that many more matters are omitted, then are mentioned.

V.2. The fear of you] (Gen.35.5.) The dominion of man ſince ſin, is not like that of Adam over the Creatures at the firſt, (for their obedience to him was in proportion ſuch as his to his God, free and unforced, and rather out of love then out of fear) but by prevailing of force and art, as now it is; yet neither can he ſubdue the nature of the wilder ſort, for as it is in the thirty ninth of Job, Will the Unicorn be willing to ſerve thee, or abide by thy crib? ver 9. Canſt thou bind the Unicorn with his band in the furrow? or will he harrow the valleys for thee? verſ.10. which words though they be an interrogation in form, are in effect a vehement negation: But Noah and his ſons (with whom the unreaſonable creatures were In-mates in the Ark, and by whom they were governed and ſuccoured as a part of their family) might have more power over them, and more obedience from them then his poſterity in after times; for it is like they were more at command whileſt they were afraid of the flood, and confined in the Ark, then afterwards; and yet man (eſpecially the Elect, as in Chriſt) hath a general dominion over the unreaſonable creatures, compare Pſalm 8.6. with 1 Cor.15.27. even to the taming, or over-awing of the wildeſt of what ſort ſoever, Jam. 3.7. as of Lions, Leopards, Tygers and Elephants, as we may ſee in *Plin. Nat.Hiſt.l.*8. *c.*16,17,18. whereof the Elephant is the greateſt, *Ibid.l.*8. *c.*7. which have been brought ſo far under the yoak, as to be yoaked together to draw a Chariot, *Ibid.c.*2. and in ſome places to draw the Plough, *Ib.c.*1,2. and to the taking of the ſubtilleſt; and for thoſe that are not tamed nor taken, the dread of man is upon them, ſo that they ſhun his preſence as much as they can, Pſal.104.20,21,22,23. And this is true, as well of the birds of the Ayre (as experience proveth) whereof ſee Plin l 10.*c.*8 as of the beaſts of the earth; yea, and of the fiſhes of the water; for in the fiſh-pooles of Cæſar, ſome fiſhes were ſo tamed, that they would come at the calling of their name, Plin. Nat. Hiſt. lib. 18. cap. 70. and the greateſt of them, the Whales, God hath ſubjected to the power and prudence of man in great meaſure, though ſomtimes for mans rebellion againſt his God, the creatures be in rebellion againſt him to his ruine; as God threatneth, Levit. 26. 22. and hath ſometimes executed, as 1 Kings 13. 24. 2 Kings 2. 24. and he can take a great revenge by the leaſt and weakeſt creatures, as by frogs, and flyes, and lice, Exod.8.5,17,24. and by wormes, Act.12.23. See on Chap.1.26 Annot.7.

V.3. Every moving thing] Or, creeping thing. That which creepeth moveth, but not contrariwiſe, all that moveth creepeth; for man, and beaſts, and birds do move, but do not creep, therefore the Original word is well rendred moveth, which is a word of a larger extent then the word creepeth, and ſo more meet to expreſſe the beneficence of God in this conceſſion of ſuſtenance to man.

that liveth] That is, that dyeth not of it ſelf, Lev.22.8. but being alive is killed by your hand, and not found dead already, as that which is torn by beaſts in the field, which is to be caſt to dogs, Exod. 22.31. for many of the ceremonial Lawes given to Moſes from God, and by him to the Jewes, were in uſe long before. See the Annot.on Gen.7.2. Object. But many living things are not mans meat, as Lyons, Bears, Tygers; and many Birds, as Hawks or Kites; and many fiſhes, as the Whale and others; but for creeping things, many of them are not only loathſom to man, but very unwholſome, and ſome of them no better then plain poyſon, as Toads, Scorpions, Spiders: for anſwer hereto, ſee the next Note.

ſhall be meat] As by bread in the Lords Prayer is meant not only bread it ſelf, but all neceſſary food and Phyſick, which is of uſe to preſerve or recover the health of man, and to prolong his life; ſo here many of the Creatures by way of ordinary diet, and ſome of them by a phyſical vertue ſhall ſerve to ſuſtain the life of man, even Vipers, and Scorpions, and Lice, and the excrements both of men and beaſts have their uſe in Phyſick for mans good, whereof ſee abundant inſtance in the Preface to the Sanctuary of a troubled ſoul: Here is the firſt mention of mans feeding upon the living creatures, and the firſt grant of that liberty, as divers learned Commentators conceive, which yet might be in uſe before, as corn, and bread, and drink, though they be not ſpoken of before; and as the Rain-bow was from the beginning, though not mentioned until after the floud. And here was eſpecial cauſe to mention the allowance of eating the living creatures, both becauſe herbs and fruits were ſpoyled with the flood, and for that God would by this grant, the more oblige them to forbearance of blood, ver.4. as he did the more bind Adam to abſtinence from the fruit of one tree, by his liberal beneficence and allowance to eat freely of all other fruits that grew in the Garden of Eden: and this not by command, for though it be given in a term of command, Gen.2.16. is in effect but a conceſſion or permiſſion, as Lev.11 3. See alſo, and compare Mat.19.7. with Mark 10 4. where what is called a commandment in the former Evangeliſt, is ſaid to be a ſuffering or tolerating in the other; and of this permiſſion the godly, it is like, made uſe as well as the wicked; for it is not probable that Abel being a keeper of ſheep, kept them only for the wool, or milk, and left their fleſh (being as pleaſant and as wholſome then as ſince) to be devoured of wild beaſts, or to rot either above or under ground; and it is very probable, that generally before the flood there was rather an exceiſe in the uſe of lawful meats, becauſe our Saviour, Mat. 24.38. noteth the old world for their eating and drinking, that is, for being too much addicted to delicacy, variety and plenty of proviſion for the fleſh at the time when the overflowing ſcourge came upon them; yet a moderate uſe was then allowed and taken into practiſe, which might be put into an expreſs permiſſion or conceſſion now, not only with reſpect to the refreſhing of man, but withal for a religious conſideration referring to the glory of God, viz. for reſtraint of Idolatry, or worſhipping or honouring the creature more then the Creator, againſt which the killing and eating of them for ordinary dyet, was a practical preſervative; and it was not without need in reſpect of mans proneneſs to Idolatry; whereof ſee Pſal.106.19,20. Rom.1.23. nor without fruit; for though ſome did ſo abuſe themſelves and other creatures alſo, as to make gods of ſuch things as they did eat, yet to thoſe who made uſe of their reaſon, it was a great conviction of the vanity of ſuch Idols, that they might be ſo devoured, and turned as well to excrement as to nouriſhment; and therefore did Moſes enjoyn the drinking of the water wherein the powder of the golden Calf was put, as a potion for the peoples cure of that brutiſh Idolatry, Exod.32.20.

as the green herb] That is, as freely as the green herb, Chap. 1.29.

V.4. But fleſh with the life] That is, living fleſh with the bloud in the veins: or the bloud let out of the veines, wherewith the life and ſoul of the creature is powred out; for the ſoul of a beaſt, or fiſh, or fowl, hath no exiſtence without the body, (as the ſoul of man hath) being rather a vital faculty, then a ſubſtance; and the life is called the blood, and the blood the life, becauſe the ſpirits which are the livelieſt parts of the creature, are produced of the pureſt part of the blood, and with it diffuſed throughout the whole body, by the operation and activity whereof, the members are lively and active, and without which there is no bodily life in man or beaſt, though the bloud continue in the body, as in creatures ſtrangled. By this in Gods intention is, firſt, morally forbidden all cruelty, not only to man, but to other creatures. Secondly, the eating of the fleſh and bloud together, or either of them raw, whereby men might become (by degrees) to feed upon mans fleſh, as thoſe who for ſuch a barbarous manner are called Anthropophagi, that is, men-eaters, Plin. Nat.Hiſt. lib.6 cap. 30. Thirdly, afterwards the eating of all manner of blood was expreſly forbidden, Lev.7 2. and Chap.17.10. and that not only becauſe the blood is the life of the fleſh, as here, and Lev.17.14. or the life of the fleſh is in the blood, as the reaſon is expreſſed, Lev. 17. 11. but there is a reaſon myſtical againſt the eating of bloud in the ſame verſe, and that is, becauſe in Sacrifices the blood was to be let out and ſprinkled, to ſignifie that the life of man by ſin is forfeited to God, and to be offered to him, as the Author from whom at firſt it was derived, and to whom at laſt it is to be preſented, and for that mans life was to be redeemed by the blood of Chriſt. To theſe two ſome add a third, viz a Phyſical cauſe of forbearance of blood, which may ſerve for all times, and it is becauſe the blood of beaſts is ſomewhat groſs, and yeeldeth not very wholeſome nouriſhment to the body of man; and therefore the beaſts which were to ſerve for food, were not to be ſtrangled, but to be killed, that the blood might be let out and parted from the fleſh. And from this prohibition of blood in this Chapter, before the ceremonial law was ordained, and the decree of the Apoſtles for forbearance of things ſtrangled and of bloud, *Act.*15.20. after the obligation of it was expired, ſome infer a perpetuity of prohibition of all ſuch meats, eſpecially ſince in the Apoſtles decree, pollution of Idols, ſo ver. 20. or, meats offered to Idols, ver.29. and fornication are forbidden, and all in one tenour, as neceſſary things to be forborn, ver.28. ſo that to this day they hold it unlawful to eat any thing made of bloud, though mingled with other materials, and broyled and dreſſed as other meats are: and therefore the Chriſtian Greeks finde fault with the Latines, for uſing their Chriſtian Liberty herein, as Theodorus Balſamon on the 63. Canon of thoſe ſuppoſititious Canons which are intituled to the Apoſtles.

But firſt for anſwer to the Poſition, it may be alledged, that all meats which are wholeſome (though ſome be more wholeſome and nutritive then others, and to ſome ſtomacks and conſtitutions groſſer meats may be more ſutable then fine) are by evangelical liberty lawful to be eaten; for that ſee Mat.15.ver.11. Act.10 from ver.10. to the 16. 1 Cor.8.1,8. & chap.10.25. Tit.1.15.

Secondly, This prohibitian of the Apoſtles touching the eating of meats ſtrangled, and blood, was occaſional, and in caſe of ſcandal, that the converted Gentiles ſhould not be offended with the converted Jewes for their forbearance of ſuch meats, nor offend them by their uſe.

Thirdly, For the forbidding of bloud, beſides the preſent reaſon concerning the ſtate of the Church, and the antiquity of the abſtinency, preſcribed ſoon after the flood; there might be a reaſon of it from the future, viz. a ſlander of the Chriſtians for bloody and inhumane banquets of humane fleſh, ſuch as are reported of the Tyrant Phalaris, Ariſt.Ethic. lib 7.cap 6. and are ſometimes threatned and inflicted by God as a curſe; whereof ſee Deut.28.56,57. 2 Kings 6.28,29. Lam.2.20. and Chap.4.10. which the Holy Ghoſt foreſaw would be charged upon them, and meant to meet with it by this decree, and the obſervation of it for a time, out of which the Primitive Chriſtians made their Apology, convincing their accuſers of falſehood, and acquitting themſelves from all juſt ſuſpicion of ſuch a crime by their forbearance of all uſe of blood in what kind ſoever, as we find their defence ſet down in the writings of *Minutius Fœlix, Euſeb.Eccleſ.Hiſt.lib.*5. *cap.*1. *Tert. Apolog.cap.*9.

Fourthly, For the ſorting of this prohibition of bloud and things ſtrangled, with forbearance of meats ſacrificed to Idols, and fornication, it followeth not that they ſhould be alike lawful or unlawful; for the ſame puniſhment, much more the ſame prohibition, may be ſet upon things of a very different nature; as death is the penalty of murder, Gen. 9.6. and of having leavened bread, Exod.12.15,19. yet the one is forbidden by a moral, the other by a ceremonial precept; yet for the ſin of fornication, divers of the Gentiles held it but for a thing indifferent.

Fifthly, For calling of them neceſſary things, they were ſo, and alwayes will be, ſo far as the obligation is from a moral precept, as the caution againſt Idolatry and Fornication; and for thoſe things which are in their own nature indifferent, as the abſtinence from things ſtrangled, and from blood, the forbearance of them was neceſſary for a time, in caſe of ſcandal to any believing Chriſtian, 1 Cor.8.13.

V.5. I will require] That is, the Magiſtrate, my Deputy, ſhal require blood for blood; or if he do not know or puniſh homicide or manſlaughter, ſome hand of violence like that of the man-ſlayer ſhall repay him like for like; or mine eye ſhall diſcover it, and mine own immediate hand avenge it. See Exod.21.12. Lev.24.17. Num.35. from ver.16. to the 19. Deut.19 21. Ezek.35.6. Mat.26.52. Rev.13.10. See alſo *Joſeph. Antiq.lib.*1.*cap.*4. but eſpecially *Philip Lonicerus Theat. Hiſt pag.*392. *ad pag.*513.

at the hand of every beaſt] A man commonly when he killeth another, uſeth his hand to that wicked work, ſo that which other creatures uſe in ſtead of an hand is figuratively called by that name; ſo the Spider is ſaid to take hold with her hands, Prov.30.28. and the beaſt muſt be put to death, to put a fear of murder upon man, as the Dog beaten before the Lion to make him afraid. See Exod.21.28.

at the hand of every mans brother.] The former prohibition is a preparative to this, the moderation towards beaſts that were to be killed by abſtinence from their bloud preſcribed by God, Lev.17.14. was to be a reſtraint of cruelty towards man, whoſe life was more precious, ſince he was made after the Image of God. See ver.6. and this an univerſal Law, inforced with an impartial penalty, death for death, blood for blood, whoſoever he be that ſheddeth it without juſt cauſe and lawful warrant.

V.6. By man] Murder or killing is to be puniſhed with death, like for like, Exod.21.12. Lev.24.17. Mat.26.57. Which is to be underſtood of witting and wilful murder, Numb. 35.31. for if one had killed another at unawares, there was a City of Refuge for the ſlayer, to ſave him from the hand of the purſuer, ver.11. otherwiſe, he that ſheddeth mans blood, by man ſhall his bloud be ſhed. Some read the words, Whoſoever ſheddeth the blood of man in man, and the Original Text, dam baad am baadam, will allow it, which may be rendred, The bloud of man in man, and ſo the ſenſe may be, Whoſo letteth that blood out of man, which is and ſhould remain in man, his bloud ſhall be ſhed. But the firſt letter Beth, in the latter word, ſignifieth variouſly, according to the ſenſe of the place, either in, or with, or for, or by; and that inſtrumentally, as in this place both the conſtruction of the words, and the Hebrew accent Zakeph Katon, do import; ſo that we may read the word, as our laſt Tranſlation doth, By man, that is, ordinarily by the Magiſtrate, to whom is committed the ſword of Juſtice for that purpoſe eſpecially, Rom.13.4. and extraordinarily God in his juſtice uſeth the hand of one murderer to do execution upon another, when humane juſtice (as either blind or lame, either wanting eyes to ſee it, or hands to puniſh it) doth paſſe murder over with impunity; or ſome way or other he ſhortens the life of the bloody man, ſo that he liveth not out half his dayes, Pſal.55.23. It is queſtioned by ſome, whether murder or any other crime were puniſhed otherwiſe then by excommunication, (or caſting out of the ſociety of men) whether Sacred or Civil, before the flood; but eſpecially whether death were inflicted on any Offendor, before Noah his return to Land again. The chief cauſe of the doubt is, the reprieve of the firſt Murderer by God himſelf, though guilty of the greateſt cruelty againſt man, and of the ſtouteſt contumacy againſt God of any profeſſing ſervice to him (as he did by Sacrifice) in the Scripture, on whom God ſet an eſpecial mark that man might not meddle with him, Chap.4.15. But this caſe of reſervation was extraordinary (as was his Crime) too high and heinous to be rewarded with the ſword of Juſtice, ſomewhat worſe then death, a wretched life (which for his greater puniſhment was prolonged) was a more meet recompence for ſuch a tranſcendent malefactor; yet many times it might be otherwiſe. If it be ſaid, we find neither any Ordinance or example of the inflicting of capital puniſhment on any offendor before that of this chapter: It may be anſwered, that many things might be in uſe before the flood, though not recorded in the foregoing Chapters, whereof ſee the ſecond Annot. on ver.1. of this Chapter: and though there were no ſuch political power, as was exerciſed after the flood, when Nimrod had raiſed himſelf to the height of Monarchy, whoſe ambition and tyranny hath been followed ever ſince in many parts of the world, yet it ſeems there was an œconomical or domeſtical power of life and death in particular families, as appeareth by the ſtory of Judah and Thamar, Gen. 38.24. The Anabaptiſts (who deny the legal and military uſe of the ſword, yet ſometimes uſe it againſt thoſe who favour not their fancies: ſee *Philip. Lonicer. Theat.Hiſt.pag.*107,108.) will have the Text for puniſhing offenders, to be taken not preceptively, but prophetically, becauſe they are phraſed in the future tenſe, and ſo they ſhal imply not a command, but a bare commination; whereas if ſo, being general they would contain an untruth, for many bloody Malefactors often do eſcape the ſword they have deſerved: beſides, it is uſual in the Hebrew, to put the Future tenſe for the Imperative mood: as Exod.20. 13. and elſewhere: and this and ſuch like Texts, do not only juſtifie the uſe of the Magiſtrates ſword as lawful, but require it as a duty; and in ſuch a caſe mercy to a bloody man may become cruelty to many innocent perſons; as where pardons for murders are eaſily granted, there murders are exceedingly multiplyed: as in France in ten years ſpace, no fewer then ſix thouſand Gentlemen have been ſlaughtered, and the bloud-guilty ſheltered from ſuffering juſtice by the Kings indulgence, as appeareth by the Court Roll of the Kings pardons: againſt which merciful cruelty (for there be cruel mercies, Prov.12.10.) the Chaplaines of Kings ſhould often remember them of the ſtory of Ahab and Benhadad, and the Prophets commination againſt Ahabs remiſneſs, 1 King 20.42. and of the Law, Deut.21. from ver.1. to the ninth.

for in the image of God] Therefore to commit murder or man-ſlaughter is not only an injury and cruelty to man, but an impiety againſt God; and though it be greater ſin to kill a good man as Cain did, Gen. 4. 8. then a bad, as the ſervants of Abſolom by his command did when they killed inceſtuous Amnon, 2 Sam.13.29. yet ſince a bad man hath ſome remainders of the Image of God in him, God is diſhonoured if he be killed any other way then is warrantable by his Authority. And by adding this reaſon, for in the image of God, he meant to put a greater awe upon the minds of men, againſt the ſin of murder; as if he had ſaid, if common humanity will not work upon you, to with-hold your hands from ſhedding of blood, let my Majeſty, the reverence of my Image in man, make you afraid to lay violent hands on any; for the contempt of mine Image, I ſhall take as contempt to my ſelf, and ſhall accordingly puniſh it. By this Argument did Macedonius diſſwade the Emperor Theodoſius from a ſlaughter of the Antiochians which he intended againſt them, for pulling down an Image of the Empreſs Placillaes, and dragging it contumeliouſly about the ſtreets. Theodor. lib 5 Hiſt. Eccleſ. cap.9. for the living Image of God was of much more eſtimation, then the liveleſſe Image of the Empreſſe, See Annot. 4. on chap.1.26.

V. 7. Be fruitful] See Chap,1.28. Chap. 8.17. ver. 1. of this Chapter.

V.9. My Covenant] Mine, that is, Gods, not mans; for man neither brought that flood, nor can keep off ſuch an other, if he pleaſe to ſend it. By this Covenant, as by an Oath, God giveth aſſurance unto man, that the world ſhall no more be deſtroyed by an univerſal deluge, as of late it was, Iſai.54.9.

your ſeed after you] This Covenant is not like that, Cha.6.18. for that was but for a few: this is general both for the preſent age and for poſterity; but this is but for a temporal bleſſing: the ſpiritual Covenant likewiſe, if the conditions be kept, is hereditary, made to believers and to their children, Act 2.39.

V.10. Every living creature that is with you, of the fowl] Though they were not capable of the Covenant for their part, yet God for his part maketh the promiſe for their preſervation for mans ſake, for whom they were made at the firſt, and afterwards upon his provocation of God, for his ſake deſtroyed: and this Covenant is the more comfortable. becauſe it is general for the kinds and individuals or particular creatures, and perpetual for time, comprehending both the preſent ſtock and future increaſe throughout all generations. Some alledg this place againſt the Anabaptiſts, and thus it may ſerve to refute their fancy, viz. that the Covenant of God may be made with, and the Seal of the Covenant applyed to Creatures that have not the uſe of reaſon; which they deny, in denying the Adminiſtration of Baptiſm to Infants.

V. 13. My bow] The rain-bow was now firſt made, as ſome affirm; others (and that more commonly and more probably) conceive, that from the beginning it was in its cauſes, which are clouds, and the ſhining of the Sun; and thoſe cauſes did ſometimes produce that effect before this time, and ſo it is like the rain-bow was often ſeen before the flood; but now God made choice of it for a ſign of his Covenant with the world, that there ſhould be no more an univerſal flood as before there was: this was no natural, but an inſtituted ſign, and therefore it may ſeal the aſſurance of the promiſe, though there were no correſpondency betwixt it and the thing ſignified; and yet it was the fitter to be a ſign of ſecurity from a future flood, Firſt, becauſe of the place, which is in the clouds of heaven, whence came the rain that drowned the world before. Secondly, Becauſe the bowe is bended upward towards God, not towards the creature below; as when it is taken in hand to ſhoot at a mark, nor is there in the bow any arrow which is ſaid to be made ready upon the ſtring when hurt is intended, Pſal. 11. 2. Thirdly, becauſe the Rain-bow appeareth commonly with rain and ſo where men might begin to fear the Judgment, there they may take comfort againſt it, in that it is a ſign of Gods Covenant for ſafety. Fourthly, becauſe the Rain-bow appears not but when there is a clearneſs and brightneſs in ſome part of the sky, but at the general flood it was all black with rain. See the Annot. on Chap.8.22. To which ſome add a fifth reaſon, which is, that in the Rain-bow conſiſting of divers colours (to the admiration of ſome of the wiſeſt heathens) by the water colour is repreſented the overwhelming rain paſt, and not to return, and by the fiery colour, is prefigured, the deſtruction of the world by the element of fire, as it is foretold by Saint Peter, 2Pet.3.10. And ſome by theſe colours make a myſtical intimation of the two Sacraments of the New Teſtament with reference to that of, 1 Joh.5.6. And yet a ſixth reaſon, becauſe the Rainbow where it toucheth upon any ſhrubs, leaveth a very ſweet and fragrant ſmell behind, Plin. Nat. Hiſt. lib.12. cap. 24. which anſwereth to that pleaſant acceptation of God, obſerved before. See Annot. on Chap.4.v.21. Laſtly, though this Rain-bow here be a ſign of a temporal covenant, in the general extent of it to all creatures, yet the godly may look upon it with reference to Chriſt, in whom all promiſes of what ſort ſoever are yea and Amen, and who is repreſented ſitting in his Throne compaſſed with a Rain-bow, in ſight like unto an Emerauld, Rev.4.ver.3 ſee alſo Rev.10.ver.1.

V. 14 When I bring a cloud] Not whenſoever I bring a cloud, for it may ſuffice that it is ſeen at ſometimes to make it remembred at all times.

V.16. I will look upon it, that I may ſee it and remember] God needeth not any tokens or marks of remembrance for performance of his promiſe, becauſe he cannot poſſibly forget any thing of how ſmall moment, or how long date ſoever it be: this therefore is ſpoken after the manner of men, for their better apprehenſion of the firmneſſe and ſtedfaſtneſs of God in his Covenant; for this remembrance imports a real and aſſured ratification of his promiſe; and hereby may men call to minde what he hath covenanted, and with undoubted confidence relye upon it, for his faithfulneſſe will make good what his favour hath ſaid. See Exod.28.12,29. and Annot. on Chap. 8. verſ.21.

V.17. This is the ſign of the Covenant] Gods often repeating of his Covenant, is for further confirmation of faith, and for intimation of mans dulneſſe duly to remember and conſider of his juſtice and mercy to man, and of mans both diſobedience and duty toward God.

V.19. The whole earth overſpread] The habitable part of it was peopled by Noahs poſterity, a very plentiful increaſe of a very poor ſtock; this manifold multiplication of mankind from ſo few as eight perſons, is a manifeſt evidence of the vertue of the Divine Benediction, Gen 1. 28. and ver.1. & 7. of this Chapter.

V.20. Began to be an husbandman] It is not unlike but he uſed husbandry before as a ſon of Adam, Gen. 3. 19. but all that was at an end, his husbandry was drowned in the flood; now in the new world he was a new beginner, and ſo of thoſe vines which (preſerved by the divine providence) he could meet with diſperſed here and there, (as the earth brought them forth) with diligence and induſtry he planted a vineyard, and preſſed the grapes to make drink of them, which before (as ſome hold) were eaten only as they grew in cluſters.

V.21. Was drunken] Whether through ignorance of the ſtrength of the juyce of the Grape, or through weakneſſe, being accuſtomed to drink water before the flood, or whether through intemperance of appetite, or weakneſs of brain, or to cheer up his heart againſt the ſadneſſe whereto by the deſolate condition of the world he was diſpoſed; what ever the cauſe was, we are ſure of the effect, he was drunk, he who in the midſt of a moſt wicked world was a juſt and upright man, and walked with God, Chap.6.9. (and therefore eſcaped the flood) is laid along drowned with wine, and ſhamefully uncovered; the report hereof is committed to record, not for contempt of Noah, but for caution to his poſterity, that by his example thoſe that ſtand may take heed leſt they fall, 1 Cor.10.12. and for the comfort of thoſe that fall into groſſe ſins, that they may riſe again by repentance and find acceptance with God, (as Noah did) notwithſtanding their fall; and to teach us, that the righteouſneſſe of Noah was not a righteouſneſſe of works, but of faith; and laſtly, to note the impartiality of Scripture ſtory, which concealeth not the fouleſt faults of thoſe it praiſeth moſt, as we may obſerve in the ſtory of Abraham, Gen. 12.19. and 20.2. of Moſes, Exod 41. 10, 12. Numb 20.24. and Deut. 32. 51. of David, 2 Sam. 11. 2. &c. and 2 Sam. 24. 10. of Job, Chap 3.3. &c. of Jeremy, Chap. 20. 14. of Peter, Matth. 26. 70, 72, 74. and others, which may be warrant for a friendly freedom in reproof of the faults of the beſt, and may diſpoſe the beſt patiently to hear the worſt that truly may be objected to them.

uncovered] The manner of theſe times and people haply was, as in after ages, for men, as well as women, to wear long and looſe garments without breeches; and ſo by wind, or careleſs compoſure of the body, the covering might light beſides the place it was to hide; thence might Michal take occaſion to deride David when he danced before the Ark, more cordially and zealouſly, then curiouſly or artificially, for ſo his looſe garment by the various and vehement agitation of his body, might leave ſome places bare, which uſually were covered, 2 Sam. 6. 20. Againſt the like inconvenience it was ordered by God himſelf, that the Prieſts when they were to miniſter were to put on linnen breeches, Exod.28.42. Ezek. 44. 18, 19. ſo obſervant is the Lord of modeſty and decency; whereof Noah being not now apprehenſive, as at other times, ſomewhat was undecently diſcovered, which both piety and prudence, (had they beene awake) would have charily concealed; now though Noah were no drunkard (for one action is not enough to give a denomination to the actor, and he was drunk but once;) we may hence be warned againſt truſting a drunkard with a ſecret, for a drunkard is as like to tell all when he is awake, as to ſhew all when he is aſleep.

told his two brethren] Ham was now by computation about one hundred years old, and therefore his miſcarriage towards his father, was no childiſh error: by his ſin Noah (when he was awake) might take notice of a part of Gods juſtice, or (as to the good) of his Paternal correction, in chaſtiſing one ſinner with his own, or vvith anothers ſin, as 2 Sam. 12.11,12. yet though God here vvere juſt tovvards his ſervant, Ham vvas moſt injurious tovvards his father, vvhoſe fault ſhould have affected him vvith pity and ſhame, vvhich would rather have fetched a mantle to cover him, then have called for company to note his nakedneſs, and to ſcoff at him, as it ſeemeth he did: ſuch ſons are they vvho uncover the nakedneſs of thoſe, that in age and gifts they ſhould account their fathers; eſpecially, vvhen they are aſleep, and aſleep, as Lazarus vvas, John 11.ver.11. and ſo ſhut up in ſilence, that they cannot anſvver for themſelves.

V.23. And went backward] Shem and Japhet not vvilling to ſee their fathers ſhame, by their modeſty condemn (as by a legal teſtimony of tvvo vvitneſſes) the impudence of Ham; here vvas ſome comfort to Noah at his avvaking out of his ſleep, to ſee he had tvvo good ſons, for one bad one: and in them vve have an excellent pattern of ſhamefacedneſſe and reverence in children tovvards their natural parents, fit for imitation alſo tovvards parents ſpiritual, yea for brethren alſo, vvhen any ſuch a one is overtaken vvith a fault, Gal.6. yet in this there is a difference betvvixt private and publick perſons, thoſe may conceal vvhat theſe may not; and therefore it may be doubted, vvhether Conſtantines reſolution, to caſt his robe over an adulterous Biſhop, if he took him in the evil act, as Theodoret vvrites of him, Eccleſ.Hiſt.lib.1. cap.11. did not fail in juſtice, as vvell as abound in mercy.

V. 24. knew what his younger ſonne] That is, Ham or Canaan (for ſome think he was called the younger ſon, as Othniel is called Calebs brother, being the ſon of his brother, Judg. Chap. 1. 13.) had done unto him; Noah finding the garment upon him, which before he had not, he might inquire, and did finde out what was done, both by his bad ſon Ham, and by his two good ſonnes Shem and Japhet : Good offices are not loſt, though they be not alwayes obſerved while they are acted; and many times when they are offenſive in the act they produce a good effect afterward: For this, ſee Prov. 28. 23.

V. 25. Curſed be Canaan] Canaan was the ſonne of Ham, verſ. 18. and ſhall the ſonne bear the iniquity of the Father? contrary to that of the Lord by the Prophet, Ezek. Chap. 18. v. 20. eſpecially, if (as ſome think) he was yet unborn; for he was none of the eight perſons that were preſerved in the Arke. Anſw. It is more probable that he was now born, and of a competent age, both to know his duty to his grand-father, and to deſerve a curſe for his contempt; and the rather, if he firſt ſaw the uncomely nakedneſſe of Noah, and deriding him alone, called his Father to bear him company in that contempt, which made him more worthy of the curſe by Noah pronounced againſt him. But why was not Ham rather curſed then Canaan, ſince his ſinne is evident; and his duty obliged him more to honour his father, as more neer in relation, and more mature in diſcretion? Anſw. By naming of Canaan, Ham is not paſſed over with patience and impunity, but his curſe, both preſuppoſed and aggravated; preſuppoſed, becauſe he was the principal offender; and aggravated, in that parents wiſh well to their children, eſpecially, if they be like them; and they are more tender and chary of them many times, then of themſelves; as then Joſeph is ſaid to be bleſſed in Jacobs bleſſing of his children, Gen. 48. verſ. 15, 16. ſo is Ham curſed in his ſon Canaan, and the curſe intailed to his poſterity; and the rather is his name and perſon mentioned, and the curſe intitled to it (though Ham have four ſons named in the next Chapter, of which, as he is ranked, he ſemeth to be the youngeſt, Chap. 10. 6.) becauſe God intended to make the curſe hereditary to the name and Nation of the Canaanites; And he may juſtly puniſh the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, not only to the third and fourth generation of them that hate him, as Exod. 20 5. but to a thouſand generations, if they continue in the ſame ſin; and if thy be partners in the ſame ſins, he may make them partakers in the ſame plagues, not only temporally but eternally; but in reſpect of humane Juſtice, God hath given another rule (which man is bound unto, though God be free to do with his creatures as he pleaſeth) and that is, that the parents ſhall not be put to death for the children, nor the children for the parents, Deut. 24. 16. ſee 2 King. 14. 6. Jer. 31. 29, 30. But ſhould not Noah rather have prayed for his ſon and grandchild, then have curſed them both? It was not with Noah, as we read in Juſt. Martyr. Dialog cum Tryph. that inflamed with wine and wrath he was too haſty with his curſe; for his ſleep no doubt had ſettled his brain in a right temper; and now awakened out of it, he uttered but that which the ſpirit of God ſuggeſted unto him; for both his curſe and bleſſing were prophetical, and ratified by God himſelf, ſo that here is no warrant for parents to be bitter to their children, as paſſionately to pour out curſes againſt them, eſpecially without, or upon a very ſmal cauſe; and though in ſuch a caſe the cauſeleſſe curſe do not often come to paſs, Prov. 26. 2. ſometimes notwithſtanding it may have a temporal ratification of God for their puniſhment, who raſhly utter it; whereof there are many examples in humane ſtories and therefore it is the childrens part to take heed they provoke not their parents, eſpecially as Ham and Canaan, by deriding of them; for againſt ſuch there is a particular curſe upon record, Prov. 30. 17. and the parents duty to take heed of ſuch precipitation of ſpirit as makes them ready to denounce a curſe when they ſhould pronounce a bleſſing.

a ſervant of ſervants] That is, a moſt vile ſlave; for the Hebrew phraſe expreſſeth the ſuperlative degree by ſuch a duplication: as Eccleſ. 1. 2. ſee on Levit. 2. 3. Hoſ. 10 15. The condition of ſervitude fals upon ſome by povertie of eſtate, weakeneſſe of reaſon, or the prevailing power of war; but upon ſome it cometh as a particular curſe, as in this caſe where the Canaanites are fore-doomed to a moſt ſlaviſh eſtate. Object. This prediction in part took place in the Gibeonites, who were Canaanites; ſee Joſh. 9. but it may ſeem to fail of effect, becauſe it took not place in Ham nor Canaan, nor in the deſcendants from Ham or Canaan to the third and fourth generation, according to the commination of God, Exod. 20. 5. for the poſteritie of Ham were Kings, and the firſt Monarch Nimrod was of his race; nor came the Canaanites under ſubjection to the Iſraelites until four hundred and thirty years after the promiſe made to Abraham. Reſp. But firſt, the principal part of the curſe upon Ham and Canaan and their iſſue was ſpiritual, which made them ſlaves to ſin, and ſo juſtly excommunicate from God, and contemptible as the vileſt ſlaves unto the godly. Secondly, though God profeſſe himſelf more prone to mercy then to revenge, (when he mentioneth the third and fourth generation in viſiting the iniquitie of the fathers upon the children,) he doth not thereby bind himſelf either to begin his puniſhment ſoo ſoon, or to end it there: and whereas in this prediction there is no ſet time choſen for accompliſhment, the curſe may come at what age or time, and begin with what perſon he pleaſeth; as in the time of Joſhua with the Gibeonites, Joſh 9. 21. Gods forbearance of the Canaanites was not in favour, but that they might fill up the meaſure of their iniquity to the full; ſee Gen. 15. 16. and ſo receive a full and final reward according to their wickedneſſe, wherein the delay was recompenſed with a degree of vengeance ſo much the more ſevere, as it was more ſlow and long in coming; yet was not this curſe ſo intailed upon the Canaanites, but that ſome of them might become proſelytes and converts to the covenant of Iſrael, as Araunah the Jebuſite. 2 Sam. 24. 18.

unto his brethren] They are called brethren as united in the brotherhood of Shem, Ham, and Japhet.

V. 26. Bleſſed be the Lord God of Shem] Though God be named, Shem is bleſſed; for bleſſed are the people whoſe God is Jehovah, Pſal. 144. 15. and ſo Shem is bleſſed, in that God is ſtyled his God, and that before any other in particular; and though Japhet be joyned with him in that modeſt ſuccour to his fathers credit, yet he rather then Japhet may be mentioned, as he is uſually named before him, as being firſt in the courſe taken to cover their fathers ſhame, and as the progenitor of Abraham, and of Chriſt, who came from his Line, and not from Japhets; and yet God is bleſſed alſo, that is, praiſed (for the modeſty and piety of Shem) as the author of every good thing whether in parents or in children.

his ſervant] Or, Servant to them. That is, to Shem and Japhet; the poſterity of Canaan was ſervant to Shem, when thoſe that deſcended from him, had dominion over them, as over the Gibeonites, Joſh. 9. And they were ſervants to Japhet, when the Chriſtian Emperours of Europe had the Soveraignty over the Nations among whom were the remnant of the Canaanites; and yet the Prophecy might take effect before this time, when Alexander the Great, of the poſterity of Japhet, overcame the Tyrians and Sidonians, who by their parentage were Canaanites.

V. 27. God inlarge Japhet] Or, Perſwade Japhet, (for ſo the Original may be rendred) Wherein is a pleaſant Paranomaſia, or a verbal alluſion, Japht Elohim Lejepheth, that is, God inlarge the inlarged, or, perſwade the perſwaſible. After the former reading, the word inlarge imports a temporal bleſſing upon Japhet, for the increaſe of his poſterity, and an inlargement of their territories; for the European Gentiles, eſpecially the Romanes of the poſterity of Japhet, extended their temporal Empire ſo far as to account themſelves Lords of the world. According to the latter reading, God perſwade Japhet, the meaning of the bleſſing, prayer, or prophecy (for it is all) is, that the Gentiles who came of Japhet, and were ſeparated in Religion from the Church, ſhould by converſion be joyned to it, Epheſ. 2. 13. and that this converſion ſhould be wrought by the powerful perſwaſion of the Word and Spirit of God, and not by humane Oratory, though never ſo eloquent.

tents of Shem] By the tents of Shem is meant the Church of Chriſt. But ſhould it not rather be called the tents of Japhet (if thoſe of his poſterity were the moſt renouned Chriſtians) then the tents of Shem? Anſw. No, becauſe firſt the Church was ſettled, and moſt continued in the Line of Shem. Secondly, Becauſe Chriſt, the head of the Chriſtian Church, deſcended from Shem according to the fleſh. And the Church is called a Tent or Tabernacle, rather then a Palace, becauſe of the moveable condition of it; as when the members of it perſecuted in one place, are fain to flye to another. See Heb. 11. 9. 13, 37. & Heb. 13. 14.

V. 29. All the dayes of Noah were nine hundred and fifty years.] Whereof three hundred and fifty years were after the flood, which expired about the year of the world, 2006, twenty two yeers, (as ſome reckon) but two yeers (as others) before the birth of Abraham, as may appear by the Genealogy and computation in Chap. 11.

and he dyed] Among the many obſervations of Noah, ſome make him parallel to Adam in many particulars, wherewith we may fitly conclude his ſtory; they were alike in honour, and diſhonour; in honour, for they were both of them publick and common fathers of the world, Adam of the old world before the flood, Noah of the new world after it; they both were abſolute Monarchs of the whole Earth, none had a foot of land but under them, and by a derivative right from them; they both were honoured by the unreaſonable creatures; to Adam they came to receive their names, to Noah they came to be received for ſafety. And they were alike in diſhonour, in ſin and in ſhame; both ſinned by the palate, Adam by an unlawful act in taſting of the forbidden fruit, Noah by exceeding meaſure in that which was lawful: And for ſhame, they were both ſhamefully naked, and were charitably covered, Adam by God, Noah by his ſons; to which may be added, that both having ſlept, they both knew, when they awaked, what was done unto them.

CHAP. X.

Verſ. 1. THeſe are the generations of the ſons of Noah] Of all the ſons of Noah, now the fifth time named, and in number no more then three; Beroſus and Nauclerus Gener. 11. make an augmentation of this number, ſuppoſing that the bleſſing of multiplication, chap. 9. verſ. 1. was actually and litterally verified in Noah after the flood, as well as in his ſons; but (as hath been noted on that verſe) the parents are bleſſed in the fruitfulneſs of their children, and ſince the ſons of Noah are ſo often named, and never numbred above three, we muſt not preſume to father any more upon him, as thoſe Authors do, taking the boldneſſe to name a fourth ſon of Noah, whom they call Tuiſco, and make him the Founder of the German Nation.

Shem, Ham, and Japhet] Of the order of their naming, ſee Annot. on verſ. 2. and verſ. 21. of this Chapter, and of their order of birth and age; ſee Annot. on Chap. 11. ver. 10. Joſeph. Antiq. lib. 1. cap 7. divides the world among the three ſons of Noah, thus, Japhet with the progeny (ſaith he) poſſeſſed all Europe to the Gades, and in Aſia (wherein was Egypt and a part of Syria) all from the mountains Taurus and Amanis to Tanais, to the Arabick Sea, and even to Babylon, Euphrates and Tygris, and of him were the Medes, who lived beyond thoſe rivers towards the North; Shem and his poſterity poſſeſſed Eaſtern Aſia, from the River Euphrates to the Indian Ocean; the Sons of Cham poſſeſſed Syria, and all the Region that bordereth on the mountains of Amanus and Libanus, extending their territories toward the Sea. Some give in a ſhorter account, ſaying, Shem peopled the Eaſt, Cham the South, Japhet the North.

unto them were ſons born] To wit, thoſe which are after named; but not thoſe only, but ſome more renowned then the reſt, who gave denominations to divers Nations; at leaſt they were the firſt Inhabitants of ſeveral Countries, to whom the original of the people is referred: but particularly to reduce the Nations that now are, to cognation or kindred with the names and perſons here ſet down, is a matter of more difficulty then uſe, depending upon meer conjecture, wherein many ſhew more preſumption then prudence; ſince for many of them, the relation is brought in upon no better grounds then ſcarce probable conjecture, and ſometimes upon a meer preſumption and groundleſſe fancy; wherefore what is here affirmed from the Nations, as deſcendents from theſe Patriarchs, muſt be taken for the moſt part, not as undoubtedly, but as probably true, though every particular be not mentioned with ſuch a qualifying addition.

V.2. The ſons of Japhet] The Genealogy of Japhet is ſet down before that of Ham, becauſe he was in himſelf, and in his poſterity, better then Ham and his poſterity: and Moſes bringeth in Shem and his offſpring laſt, becauſe he meant moſt to inſiſt on them, drawing down the continuance of the Church, and the Hiſtory of the Patriarchs by his Line; and therefore he diſpoſed and diſpatched the pedigree of Japhet and Ham, that having begun the ſtory of Shem, he might not be occaſioned unſeaſonably to break it off to bring in theirs; and of Ham and Shem he ſaith the more, and bringeth their genealogy neerer together, becauſe of Ham came the Canaanites, of Shem the Hebrews, of which two Nations Moſes hath moſt to ſay, not only in Geneſis, but in the other four Books written by him.

Gomer] Of him are ſaid to be deſcended the Gomerites (called by ſome Cimmerians, by other Cimbrians, a Northern Nation of Europe, which ſome make the ſame with the Danes) and that people of the Weſt, whoſe Countrey the Gallogræcians afterward inhabited. See Ezek. 38.6.

Magog] Of the Land of Magog mention is made, Ezek. 38 2. againſt which God threatneth a fire Ezek. 39.6. thoſe are now called Getæ, Meſſagetæ, Scythians, and Sarmatians, and Tartarians, are conceived to come from this Magog.

Madai] After the diſperſion of Babel, Madai went into the Countrey, which from him and his poſterity was called Media, Iſai. 21.2. and the Inhabitants Medes, of whom mention is made, Iſa. 13.17. Jer. 51 11. Dan. 5.28.

Javan] From him came the Grecians. See Iſa. 66.19. who with ſome little alluſions to his name are called Ionians, and Greece, Ionia. See Iſa. 66.19.

Tubal] From him came the Thobeli, otherwiſe called Iberi; of which there are two ſorts of Nations, the one inhabiting Aſia neer the Euxine ſea; the other an European people, moſt commonly known by the name Spaniards. See Exod. 27 13. & 32.26. & 38.2,3.

Meſhech] To him by ſome is referred the original of the Cappadocians, or (which is more like by the neerneſs of the name, and their northern habitation) the Muſcovites. See Ezek. 38.2,3.

Tiras] The Tyrians may ſeem to be derived from him, but more generally the Thracians are taken for his Off-ſpring. Of theſe by ſecond derivations came other people, and ſometimes by Merchandize, Wars, and Colonies were people diſperſed and diſtinguiſhed by their kindred and country, which needed not be particularly mentioned; and haply cannot be truly ſet down: wherefore many of theſe that follow, may be paſſed over in ſilence, only giving a touch of ſuch as are more conſiderable for their clearneſs and pertinency to Hiſtory or Doctrine.

V.3. Aſhkenaz] (Jer. 51.27) The progenitor of the people of Pontus and Bithinia, Countries in Aſia the leſs: the Jewes confidently refer to him the Originals of the Germans.

Riphath] (1 Chr. 1.6) Of him the Paphlagonians a people of Aſia the leſſe are thought to be deſcended, their ancient names Riphatees, or Riphees import ſo much.

Togarmah] (Ezek. 27.14) The Chaldee Paraphraſe of Togarmah makes Germany, and taking away To, garmah ſoundeth ſomewhat neerer it; ſome take the deſcendents of Togarmah to be the people of Armenia the leſs; the Jews wil have them to be the Turks; all that is certain is that they are a Northern Nation, Ezek. 38.6. though yet it be not known diſtinctly who they be.

V.4. Eliſha] (Ezek. 27.7.) Of him came the Eolians, a people of Aſia the leſſe, called now Natolia.

Tarſhiſh] (Ezek. 27.12. Jon. 1.3) The Cilicians are ſaid to ſpring from his ſtock: Cilicia is ſituate upon the South part of Anatolia, the chief City whereof was Tarſus, the birth-place of Paul, Act. 22.3.

Kittim] (Num. 24.24. Dan. 11.30. Iſa. 23.1. Jer. 2.10.) The conceits and conjectures of the progeny of Kittim are ſo various and uncertain, that it is better to ſay nothing, then ſo many things, without any proof of Scripture or reaſon.

Dodanim] (1 Chr. 1.7.) Some read Rodanim, varying the word from the ſimilitude of two Hebrew letters, Daleth and Reſh; the deſcendents of theſe alſo are various and uncertain.

V.5. By theſe were the Iles] The Hebrews call all theſe Countries Iles, to which out of their own Country they cannot paſſe but by ſhips, whether they be properly Iles (that is ſurrounded with water) or not, Jer. 25.23. In this name are comprehended all the Provinces of Europe compaſſed or divided by the Mediterranean Sea.

divided] The poſterity of Noah for divers years continned together as the people of one kindred or country, and were of one language, till many of them tranſplanted themſelves into the Plain of Shinar, chap. 11 ver. 2 but upon the confuſion at Babel whereby their Language was divided, the Sons of Japhet were divided as ſeveral Colonies in the moſt Countries of Europe.

after his tongue] As it fell out afterwards in the diviſion of Tongues, the ſtory whereof is particularly related in the next Chapter.

V.6. Cuſh] His poſterity in their own Language call themſelves Cuſhians; their more uſual name is Ethiopians, and their Country Ethiopia; but in Scripture we find a twofold Ethiopia, the one in the Eaſt neer the Arabian Sea, inhabited by the Cuſhites; the other is in the Weſt of Africa, which is vulgarly called Ethiopia, without any addition or term of diſtinction. See the Note on ver, 7.

Mizraim] Of him came the Egyptians; in the Old Teſtament Egypt and the Egyptians are uſually called Mizraim; in the New, the name Egypt is ſtill uſed; the Arabians and Turks call Egypt, Meſra or Maſra, which hath neer cognation with this name of the ſecond ſon of Ham.

Phut] By this name was his poſterity and country called, Ezek. 27.10 and in Ezek. 38.5. our Tranſlation turneth Phut in the Original into Lybia, (noting Phut in the margin) and that name Lybia is uſual in humane Writers See Jer. 46.9.

Canaan] The infamous Father of the odious Canaanites; from him deſcended eleven ſons, and people which poſſeſſed the land of Canaan, which are reckoned, ver. 15, &c.

V.7. Seba] In the ſame verſe there is another of the ſons of Cuſh, which in ſome verſions of the Bible is called Seba alſo; but in the Hebrew there is this difference, the former is written with Samech, the latter with Schin; the former Sebu, and his iſſue inhabited a part of the African Ethiopia, bending towards Egypt, (whereof mention is made, Iſai. 43.3) From this Seba, the Abiſſines in Africa are thought to take their original, whoſe chief City and Court is Seba, whence it is ſuppoſed the Queen took a journy unto Solomon, 1 Kin. 10.1,4 Ezek. 27.22 Mat 12.42. Act. 8.27. The other, Sheba, is thought by ſome to be the father of thoſe Arabick Sabeans, whoſe Country abounds with Frankincenſe, ſee Ezek. 27.22. but ſome thinking it too much honour for one of Hams wicked race to be intitled to ſo good a Country (and yet Sodom was a very good land, and the Sodomites extreme bad people) aſcribe that Land rather to a ſon of Abraham by Keturah of that name; Gen. 25.3.

Dedan] Ezek. 27.15. & chap. 38.13.

V.8 Cuſh begat Nimrod] Moſes reſerved the mention of Nimrod for the laſt place, among the ſons of Cuſh, becauſe he meant to ſpeak more of him, then of any of the reſt.

began to be a mighty one] The word Nimrod, ſignifieth a Rebel, for ſuch as are moſt ſtubborn toward their ſuperiours, are moſt tyrannical over their inferiors: this Nimrod is thought to be the ſame, whom ſecular ſtories call Belus, and ſet him forth as the founder of the Babylonian Monarchy, from whoſe name many Idols (as that of Belial, Baal-Peor, Beelzebub) are derived.

V.9. A mighty hunter] Both of beaſts (though not for Sacrifices, as divers Jewiſh Doctors make the gloſſe upon his title) and of men, for the one hunting many times is a preludium or preparative to the other, as Ariſtotle obſerveth, lib. 1. Polit. cap 8. But here his hunting of men is principally meant, he was the firſt that after the flood ſet up an abſolute Arbitrary, and violent domination over men, purſuing them (who would not willingly come under his command) with no more reſpect or pity, then hunters ſhew to beaſts whom they hunt to death, and therefore is tyranny in Scripture ſet forth by hunting, Jer. 16.16. Lam. 4.18.

before the Lord] That is, though he were ſometimes crafty, as well as cruel, God ſets his obſervant eye upon all his greedy and bloody plots and practiſes; ſo that none of them (how cunningly ſoever they were contrived) could eſcape his view. Or he was a mighty hunter before the Lord, that is, he was ſo deſperately bold in his boyſterous and violent tyranny, that he was not afraid to act it before the Lord.

wherefore it is ſaid] His cruelty and tyranny was ſo notorious, that it became a Proverb of reproach; as if one ſhould ſay, of another naughty man of his haughty ſpirit, He is a very Nimrod. ſuch an hunter as he was.

V.10. And the beginning of his Kingdom was Babel] Or, Babylon, Rev. 17.5. The meaning is, either that Babylon was the Palace or Royal Seat of his power; or that from thence he got ſtrength to invade and conquer other Potentates, to raiſe himſelf a Monarchy out of their ruins. The City was called Babel, from the confuſion of tongues, whereof ſee Gen. 11.9. in which, and with which, the Aſſyrian Monarchy was firſt ſet up by Nimrod, though afterward the ſeat of that Monarchy was tranſlated into Aſſyria; and Babel, or Babylon, being the beginning of this Kingdom, the report of profane Authours, whether Hiſtorians or Poets, is not true, which makes Semiramis the wife of Ninus (ſon to this Nimrod, or Belus) foundreſſe of this City; ſhe might repair it, inlarge it, and adorn it, but Nimrod firſt built it; and though after Nimrods time the ſeat of that Monarchy (which began with him) was changed from Babylon to Aſſyria, which might occaſion the diſtinction betwixt the land of Nimrod, and the land of Aſſyria, Mic.5.6. yet many years after, Babylon being by wars, or ſome other miſhaps demoliſhed or defaced, was re-edified by Nebuchadnezzar (whereof he proudly boaſteth, Dan.4.30) ſo *Joſephus lib.*10.*Antiq.cap.*11. out of Beroſus and Euſebius, lib.9.cap.4. de præparatione Evangelica.

land of Shinar] So is that whole circuit of land called which encompaſſeth Babylon; ſo that it comhrehends Meſopotamia, a part of Arabia, Perſia and Syria; but ſome more ſtrictly take it for that land which is ſituate betwixt two Rivers, Euphrates and Tygris, and therefore called in Greek Meſopotamia. See Annot.on Gen.11.2.

V.11.Out of that land went forth Aſhur] Or, Out of the land he, that is, Nimrod went forth into Aſhur, or Aſſyria, a Country lying neer to Shinar, having the name of Aſhur, his ambition would not ſuffer him to abide at home, though never ſo well or commodiouſly ſeated, but made him to paſſe from place to place to enlarge his dominions. Some take the name of Aſhur for a ſon of Shem, ſo named, v. 22. but here ſpoken of by occaſion of Nimrod, for Nimrod having ſeized on Chaldea, which belonged unto Aſhur, he, as neither by patience able to bear, nor by power to over-bear that uſurping Tyrant, went out of that land, the land of Shinar, and planted himſelf beyond the River Tygris, where he founded the Monarchy of Aſſyria, and built the City of Nineveh. Some will have this Aſhur not to be he who was the ſon of Shem, but another Aſhur, of the race of Ham, and there might be one of that name, and of Hams progeny; but which ſoever it was, he ſeems to have been ſo eminent as to give denomination both to the Aſſyrian Monarchy and Country. Some conceive this Aſhur to be Ninus the ſon of Belus, called Aſhur by anticipation, becauſe afterwards he was Monarch of Aſſyria. This conſtruction of the words having the laſt place, and the leaſt ground, either of the former may have approbation before it.

and the City Rehoboth] Or, Rehhoboth, or, the ſtreets of the City, ſo the word ſignifieth in an appellative ſenſe; it cometh of Rahhab, which ſignifieth to inlarge, and ſo ſome take it as an explication of Nineveh, by the ſpaciouſneſs or largeneſs of the ſtreets. Some take it for the name of another City diſtinct from Nineveh, whereof mention is made, Gen.36.37. 1 Chro.1.48. which yet might have its name from the length or breadth of the ſtreets of it, as well as Nineveh.

V.12. The ſame is a great City] That is (not Calah laſt ſpoken of, but) Nineveh, for there is an hyſteroſis in the words, which in ſenſe muſt be made up thus; and he built Rezen between Calah and Niniveh, the ſame, that is, Nineveh is a great City, ſo called by God himſelf, Jon. 1.2. and chap.3.2. and chap 4.ver.laſt. But how great it was at this time, it is hard to know; in the Prophet Jonah his days, it was a City of three dayes journey, Jon.3.3. which would take up three dayes to go through the ſtreets, or to compaſs the wals of it about; and the number of Inhabitants was evidence of the greatneſs of it, for it had in it an hundred and twenty thouſand Infants which knew not the right hand from the left, Jon. 4.laſt. And it is probable that the dimenſions of it varied with the ages through vvhich it paſſed; for great Cities, if vvars or fires do not leſſen them, commonly grovv greater and greater.

V.13 Ludim] (Lud, Iſa.66.19, &c.) the off-ſpring of ſuch as are here named, are for the moſt part unknown; yet ſome ſay the Lybians came of Ludim; but others refer them to Lehabim; ſome more ſutably to the ſound of the word ſay, Ludim was the father of the Lydians; if ſo, there muſt be other Lydians then thoſe which inhabited Aſia the leſſe, for they are noted under another original.

V.14.Pathruſim] His poſterity inhabited Egypt, eſpecially that part where the City Pathros (Iſa.11.11.) was built.

out of whom came Philiſthim] Either as deſcended from the ſtock of Caſluhim, or coming from dwelling among that people (whereof he was progenitor) as a part of a promiſcuous multitude, (ſuch as went with the Iſraelites out of Egypt, Exod.12.38.) and changing their dwelling; for though the Philiſtims were not the off-ſpring of Canaan, they made themſelves room, and an habitation in the land of the Canaanites, by driving out the ancient Inhabitants.

V.15. Canaan begat Sidon] Heb. Tſidon, who built the City Sidon or Zidon in Phœnicia, Joſh.11.8. and 19.28. whence it may be, that by the name of Canaanites, the Sidonians ſhould be underſtood, at leaſt that they be principally comprehended in the name of Canaanites, which are diverſified under ſeveral titles, ſometimes more, and ſometimes fewer; ſometimes the general name is taken for a particular, and ſometimes contrarily; ſometimes the ſame under divers particular names, that it is very difficult to make a perfect diſtinction of their titles and portions; but the beſt is, the matter is of no great uſe.

Heth] From whom came the Hittites, Gen. Chap.23. verſ. 3, 5, 7, 10.

V.18. The Semarite] So 1 Chro.1.16. where the Genealogy of this Chapter is repeated: ſome conceive that Samaria and the Samaritans had their name from hence, but the contrary is manifeſt, 1 Kings 16.24.

V.19. The border of the Canaanites] Which Moſes more exactly ſetteth down, becauſe the land of Canaan was promiſed to the poſterity of Abraham, Gen.15.18,19. which portion was afterwards enlarged to the Iſraelites by the addition of two kingdoms beyond Jordan.

Gaza] Heb.Ghnazza.

V.20. Theſe are the ſons of Ham] There are more in the number of deſcendents from him, then the iſſue either of Shem or of Japhet; and about twice ſo many as are reckoned of Japhets linage, notwithſtanding the bleſſing and promiſe of his inlargement, Chap.9.27. and notwithſtanding that Japhet had ſeven ſons to begin his progeny withal, ver.2. and Ham had but four, ver.6. Fleſhly fruitfulneſs is none of the beſt bleſſings of the Father of Spirits, nor any good evidence of prelation, either in mankind or other creatures: for Sarah was a wife many yeers, and yet barren, when Hagar her hand-maid, and her husbands Concubine conceived quickly after her admiſſion to her miſtreſſes bed: and among the increaſe of Creatures, the moſt contemptible, as Mice, are moſt numerous, one bringing forth one hundred and twenty upon one generation, *Plin Nat.Hiſt.lib.*10.*cap.*65. while the Elephant, a more noble creature, both in reſpect of his ſtature and ſtrength, as alſo in reſpect of his faculties, and docility, goeth two yeers at leaſt, and as ſome conceive, ten years with young, and hath but one birth during life, though he live (as ſome write of him) two or three hundred yeers, *Plin.Nat. Hiſt.lib.*8.*cap.*10.

V.21. Unto Shem] Why Shem, though the beſt of the ſons of Noah, is with his iſſue brought at laſt, ſee Annot.on ver.2.

the father of all the children of Eber] He was great grand-father to Eber; yet he is called a father of Ebers children, to note the reference of poſterity to progenitors, though at far diſtance, which may be matter of hope and fear to their iſſue for many deſcents, thereafter as their anceſtors have been either in favour with God, as Iſai.45.4. or under the offence and indignation of God, Jer.15.4.

of Eber] He was the father of all the ſons of Aram and his iſſue, as well as of Arphaxad and his poſterity, whoſe grand-child was Eber. Why then is he not called the Father of ſome other of that Line, as well as of Eber? Anſw. Eber is mentioned for honour and favour to Shem and Eber both; as Canaan the ſon of Ham is named by way of diſpleaſure to, and diſgrace of his Father and himſelf in the curſe, Chap.9. 25. For in the Line of Eber continued the language ſpoken by Adam, the true Religion and worſhip of God, though Jocktan, one of his two ſons named, chap.10. ver.25. (Peleg was the other) made defection from it; and God in his good providence, continued his life longer then any of thoſe that were born after the flood. See chap.11.ver.16,17. From him therefore have the people of God been called Ebrewes. The word Eber, ſignifieth beyond, whence ſome have thought Shem to be called the father of them, who dwelled beyond the River Tygris; but it is rather to be taken here for a proper name, which might yet be given unto Eber by his father, upon ſome occaſion of removal of his family, or paſſage to another place: ſome conceive they are called Ebrewes, or rather Ebræi, as it were Abrahæi, becauſe they were the poſterity of Abraham, but the former notation of the name is more natural, and by the more judicious Writers more generally received.

the brother of Japheth the elder] Heb. the great. For the Hebrew language hath no comparative degree, but uſeth the prepoſition Min, or the article Ha for emphatical expreſſion, as in the word Haggadhol, Gadhol, ſignifying great, not greater; and the Hebrew wanting ſuch difference of termination in caſes, as the Greeks and Latines have; the word here uſed, and properly Engliſhed great, and commonly greater, may be rendred either in the Genitive caſe, and ſo it maketh Japheth the elder; or in the Ablative caſe, and ſo it maketh Shem the elder: and from this ambiguity in the Original, ariſeth diverſity of opinions concerning the ſeniority of theſe three ſons; for ſome from hence rendring the Adjective in the Ablative caſe, and ſo in conſtruction agreeing with Shem, and from the ordinary rehearſal of them in the Scripture (wherein Shem is placed the firſt in order) take him to be the eldeſt; others, becauſe the Original Text will alſo admit of the Adjective to be taken in the Genitive caſe, and ſo joyned with Japhet, make him the elder: and this expoſition may have the prerogative of an elder brother to be preferred before the other, which may be proved thus; 1. Cham was not the eldeſt, for he is called, Noahs younger ſon, Chap.9. 24. according to the Hebrew, his little ſon. 2. Shem was not the eldeſt; for 1 Noah begat (that is, began to beget) his three ſons, when he was five hundred yeers of age, Chap.5.32. 2. And in the ſix hundreth yeer of Noah, the ſecond month of that yeer, and the ſeventeenth day of that month came the flood, chap.7.11. 3. And two years after the flood Shem (when he begat Arphaxad) was an hundred years old, Chap.11.10. therefore Shem was begotten in the five hundred and ſecond year of Noah. 4. And if Noah began his fruitfulneſs in the year five hundred, and begat one of his three ſons that yeer, (as hath been noted out of Gen. Chap. 5.32) it muſt needs be Japhet, and ſo he muſt be elder then either Shem or Cham; yet Shem might be uſually named before them both, becauſe he had the honour to be Patriarch of the National Church of the Hebrewes, ſo much honoured and favoured by God himſelf, according to the precedent Annot. ſo that his precedency before Japhet, is by order of dignity, Chap. 9. 26, 27. not of Nature; and ſo is Abraham ſet before Nahor and Haran, Geneſ.11.26. and Jacob before Eſau, Geneſ.28. 5. and Ephraim before Manaſſeh, Gen. 48.20. though neither Abraham, nor Jacob, nor Ephraim were elder then their brethren before whom they are named. See Annot. on Chap. 11.ver.27.

V.22. Elam] From him came the Elamites or Perſians, mentioned, Act.2.9.

Arphaxad] The Chaldeans are thought to be his off-ſpring; upon what ground it doth not appear.

Lud] From him ſome will have it, that the Lydians are deſcended; others derive them from Ludim of the race of Ham; ſee ver. 13.

Aram] To him the original of the Aramæans, or Aramites, is referred, which peopled divers Regions, eſpecially Armenia; the Hebrewes commonly called Syria by the name of Aram, but with addition, and diſtinction of the ſeveral parts of that Country, as Padan-Aram, is the Syrian Meſopotamia, Chap. 25. 20. and elſewhere, Aram Naharaim that is, Aram of two Rivers, or ſituate betwixt two Rivers, as ch. 24 10 1 Chron. 19. 6. Pſal. 60. tit. Aram Dammeſec, that is, Syria of Damaſcus, 2 Sam. 8 5.

V. 23. Uz] (Job 1. 1.) In the land of Uz dwelt the people of Edom or the Idumeans, Lam. 4. 21. who in probability might be the progeny of this Uz.

Maſh] Or, Meſhech, 1 Chr. 1 17. Of him it may be the people of Myſia were deſcended.

V. 25. Unto Eber] 1 Chr. 1. 19.

the name of one was Peleg] Which imports diviſion; for Palag in Hebrew ſignifieth to divide, and in his dayes was the earth divided; and the diviſion (as Joſephus Antiq. lib. 1. cap. 4. ſheweth, and many Authors hold with him) was twofold, the one by Noah, as it were by wil and Teſtament aſſigning to his three ſons the three parts of the world, Africa, Aſia and Europe, and this is thought to be about the birth of Peleg, afterwards upon the confuſion of Babel, there was a real diviſion, or an actual occupation or poſſeſſion of the ſeveral parts of the earth, whereto they were preſently compelled by a kind of imperious neceſſity, ſince with ſuch diverſity of tongues (which ſome take upon them to reduce to a certain number, as they do the nations of that diſperſion) it was not convenient for them to live together: and this diviſion alſo fell out in Pelegs time, and to him was that name given, as a memento of that diviſion, wherein concurred the high provoking pride of man, and the admirable juſtice and prudence of God; which may mind us what need we have of nominal, as here, and ſometimes real memorials of Gods memorable acts, as Num, 38. 40. whether of favour or of anger; for we are naturally prone to oblivion of ſuch works as ſhould make a very deep and durable impreſſion in our minds; whereof ſee Pſal. 106. 13.

But for the name Peleg in particular, and for the reaſon of that name forementioned, how fitly may it be a pattern for our unhappy times! How great cauſe have we to call the children that are born in theſe diſmal dayes by the name of Peleg? for how are we divided, not in tongues alone, as at Babel, but in heads, and hearts, and hands! What diviſions are there not only of Reuben, Judg. 5. 15. but of all the Tribes of our Iſrael! and were we but divided, our caſe were leſſe lamentable, but we are ſub-divided into many factions, in the State, and ſnipt out into many ſchiſmes in the Church: and what hateful and horrid hoſtilities are reciprocated betwixt thoſe who are brethren by nature, Nation, and profeſſion of Religion! How might we fill our Regiſters with the name of Peleg, if we ſhould take to heart the woful breaches that are made among us, as the parents of this Peleg did the diviſion in their dayes! O when will it be that the noiſe of our moſt unnatural war ſhal be huſht, that the manifold ruptures of our ſacred and civil peace ſhall be cemented up, that our condition be not ſtill a cauſe of ſighing to all good Chriſtians, and true Patriots, and of inſulting to the enemies both of our Church and State? O when wil it be that the pathetick perſwaſion of the Apoſtle ſhal take place with us? Now I beſeech you brethren, by the name of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that ye all ſpeak the ſame thing, and that there be no diviſion, among you, but that ye be perfectly joyned together in the ſame mind, and in the ſame judgment! 1 Cor. 1. 10. Give leave, good Reader, to the oppreſſed ſpirit of the Writer, to give ſome vent unto his grief of heart. It may be a memorandum of our miſery here, and of the ſad condition of three Kingdoms, at once all involved in moſt bloody and woful confuſion, and may mind a godly and prudent Chriſtian of the danger of abuſe of a long continued peace, and of the ſevere chaſtiſement of God upon the Churches and States, which rather profeſs the form, then practiſe the power of Evangelical piety; and it may preach and preſs the duty of repentance, and real reformation with more preciſe caution againſt ſpiritual relapſes; and may ſtir up the hearts of ſuch as are pious and compaſſionate to betake themſelves more frequently to private ſupplication, and to perform both that and the publick with more ſincerity and fervency of affection; that the God of peace may be pleaſed to put an end to our wars, ſuch wars as may ſteep our victories as well in the tears of the victors, as in the blood of the vanquiſhed, ſince whoſoever gains, the Kingdom loſeth many loyal ſubjects, the Church many Chriſtian Proteſtants, and divers of them no worſe (as we may wel hope) then ſuch as have been redeemed by the precious blood of our Lord and Saviour: and laſtly, it may be we may (by the mercy of God to his people, and his juſtice on their enemies) ſee the reſult of all this rage redound to the ruin of the Antichriſtian combination, who firſt kindled, and have ever ſince fomented theſe fearful combuſtions; and that Pererius his application of the Prophecy concerning the adjourning of the judgment of God againſt the Amorites to the Proteſtant State in England (Tom. 3. in Gen. Diſp 8. pag. 576) may be made good upon the wicked of the Popiſh party: The words of that Jeſuite rendred in Engliſh are theſe: If any begin to wonder why God ſuffers the Engliſh Principality to execute ſuch a cruel perſecution on the Catholicks, and yet to flouriſh and prevail, he will leave off to wonder, if he bethink himſelf of Gods toleration of the Amorites for this reaſon, becauſe their iniquities were not yet made up to the full, Gen. 15. 16. but they will come at the length to their full growth and accompliſhment; there will come a time of divine vengeance, too late for us perhaps, but for the diſpenſation of the divine prudence and providence ſeaſonable and ſoon enough; which time (ſaith he) if any man think to be neer at hand (ſince that Nation (he meaneth the Engliſh) hath now ſo far proceeded in raging perſecution) he ſhall not much miſſe of the truth, as I ſuppoſe. So far this Authour: which prædiction (upon the like grounds) may juſtly be retorted upon the Romiſh Church, and on the pretended (but miſ-called) Catholicks, whoſe rage hath been of late more rampant then ever, and therefore there is a great hope the time is drawing on that they may be made couchant under Chriſts Iron Mace who would not be brought to bow under the ſway of his golden Scepter.

Jocktan] The diviſion of the earth into different Languages, and people, is noted by the name of Peleg: but here ſome obſerve another diviſion of the family of Heber; for Jocktan (ſay they) divided himſelf from the true Religion of his fathers houſe: which cannot be proved by Scripture; for he is mentioned but in this Chapter, and in 1 Chron. 1. and in neither of theſe places is any ſuch thing recorded of him. From him is ſuppoſed to deſcend the people of the Eaſt Indies, and of America alſo, where ſome ſay are remaining marks of that name: but in ſuch particulars we cannot be certain, nor muſt we be either over-curious or peremptory.

V. 29. Havilah] From whom it is thought the Land of the Iſmaelites and Amalekites was named Havilah, Gen. 25. 18. 1 Sam. 15. 7 There was another Havilah deſcended of Cham, ver. 7. See Annot. on Chap. 2. 11.

V. 30. Their dwelling was from Meſha] Theſe names are not cleared by any other place of Scripture, and they are unknown to the ancient Geographers, much more to thoſe of later times, and therefore we muſt leave this Text without any other Note but our ignorance of the termes contained in it.

CHAP. XI.

Verſ. 1. THe earth] The earth is put for the Inhabitants of the earth in the uſual phraſe of Scripture, Gen. 6. 11. 1 Chr. 16. 23. Pſal 33 8. and elſewhere.

one language] Heb. one lip.

one ſpeech] Heb. one words; That is, one ſort of words, as many think the tongue which Adam ſpake, and which was uſed in all the world about the ſpace of one thouſand ſeven hundred and fifty years, viz. until about 93 or 94 yeers after the flood, which hapned anno mundi 1656. this is thought to be the Hebrew tongue, by the Etymologies of Adam, Eve, Cain and others, though ſome fond men have given the Seniority to other Languages many ages younger then the Hebrew.

V. 2. They journeyed] To wit, Nimrod and his company.

from the Eaſt] That is, not immediately from Ararat or Armenia, (where the Ark reſted) which is not eaſtward from Chaldea, but from ſome other place (which was Eaſt-ward in reſpect of the ſituation of Chaldea) whither they removed, either becauſe the place wherein they were was not large enough, or not ſo commodious and comfortable for their habitation as they deſired.

plain of Shinar] Which was not the name of it at that time, for that was given to it afterward; it was a ſpacious and fertile plain, ſince called Shinar, and now Meſopotamia; ſome ſay it was afterward called Chaldea, Aſſyria and Babylon: Of Shinar, ſee chap. 10. 10.

V. 3. They ſaid] Heb. a man ſaid to his neighbour.

burn them] Heb. burn them to a burning.

brick for ſtone] They would (if the place would have afforded it) have built their tower of ſtone, (as if they had had good mortar they would not have uſed ſlime) but in that place they were not furniſhed with ſtone for ſuch a purpoſe.

V. 4. Build us a City] They were moved with pride and ambition, preferring their own glory before Gods honour.

whoſe top may reach up to heaven] An Hyperbole, that is, a ſpeech uſed to expreſſe things in an high and incredible degree, as Deut. 1. 28. and 9 1. Pſal. 107. 26. Mat. 11. 23. wherein too much is ſaid that enough may be believed. The height of this Tower, as ancient Writers have given the meaſure of it) was four thouſand paces; by ſuch a Tower ſome (as the prime promoters of the building, for it would not receive many at the top) might hope to ſave themſelves from another flood, if another came, and might the better hold up a tyrannical dominion; and by that they expected to be united, and to prevent their ſcattering and diſperſion upon the earth, which they might apprehend from their increaſe, too populous for the place wherein they were, which might occaſion their diſtribution into colonies; and if it were ſo, they hoped to retain an honorable memorial of their former cohabitation, whereby they expected not to be caſt into confuſion, and ſo diſperſed both ſooner and in a worſe way then they apprehended.

make us a name] By erecting ſuch an high and huge monument of their power and coſt, as ſhould make them famous in after times.

V. 5. Came down] The Scripture cometh down to the capacity of men, ſpeaking after the manner of great men in high place, who when they mean to take a particular view of things below their ſtate, come down for ſpecial notice of them, with a purpoſe to take ſuch a courſe with them, as ſhal be requiſite; though in propriety of ſpeech, God neither aſcends nor deſcends, for he is every where, Pſ. 139. 7. and needeth not come neerer to any thing then he is to all things, to know it better then he doth, Pſ. 139. 2.

V. 6. Behold the people is one] God ſpeaketh this in deriſion (as Gen. 3. 22.) becauſe of their fooliſh perſwaſion and preſumption in their enterprize.

V. 7. Let us go down] He ſpeaketh as if he took counſel of his owne wiſdome and power, to wit, with the Son and the Holy Ghoſt. See the Note on Gen. 1 26.

confound their Language] The City or Tower was to be built by their hands, and God hinders their work, not by maiming them in any of their limbs, but by confounding their ſpeech, ſo that they did nor underſtand one anothers words, God having ſtricken them with oblivion of their former language, and put into their mind a new Dictionary of words; which though underſtood by the Speaker, was altogether ſtrange and unknown to the hearer: hence for one Tongue (as many collect from this Chapter) there were ſeventy two Languages, according to the number of the Nations deſcended from Noah's three ſons; ſome think there were as many tongues as ſeveral kindreds or families; but the number of them cannot be certainly taken: but by this confuſion God gave an illuſtrious evidence of his owne wiſdom and power, and expoſed their folly and impotence to the more ſcorn. See Iſai.46.9.

V.8. Scattered] Their intendment in their building was to prevent their diſperſion or ſcattering, ver.4. and God making their puniſhment anſwerable to their ſin (which was to ſtrengthen themſelves in their proud project by keeping together) ſcattereth them aſunder, by dividing their Languages; according to that of Solomon, The fear of the wicked ſhall come upon him, Prov.10.24.

V.9. Babel] That is, Confuſion, [becauſe there God confounded their Language. Some think it was called Babel, from Balbel, abating the letter l for better ſound; Druſ.obſer.ſacr. l.11.c.23.p.275. Babel is according to the Chaldee Dialect, for Balal the Hebrew word, ſignifying, he hath mingled or confounded. Schindl.Pentag.col.201.

V.10. Generations of Shem] He returneth to the Genealogy of Shem, to come to the hiſtory of Abraham; wherein the Church of God is deſcribed, which is Moſes principal purpoſe. Of the ſeniority of Noahs ſons, ſee Annot.on chap.10:21.

V.12. Arphaxad —— begat Selah] Betwixt Selah and Arphaxad the ſeventy Interpreters interpoſe Cainan, and according to their Catalogue of names, doth Luke draw up the Genealogy of Chriſt from Joſeph to Adam; the reconciliation of which difference belongeth to the third of Luke, ver.36. as to its proper place.

V.25. Nahor lived after] Nahor was the firſt of the Patriarks that fell to Idolatry: The lives of men after the floud were far ſhorter then before, to keep them from exceſſe of ſin, whereof the long lived before the flood was a great cauſe; and Nahor lived but an hundred forty and eight yeers, which is not much more then half the life of his predeceſſors. See Annot.on Gen.31.53.

V.26. Begat Abraham, Nahor and Haran] That is, began to beget, for they were not all of a year; the like we have noted of the ſons of Noah.Gen.5.32.

V.27. Begat Abram] Though Abram be named firſt among the ſons of Terah, he was not the eldeſt, (no more then Shem the eldeſt ſon of Noah, though uſually firſt named) yet he is firſt mentioned, becauſe he is the prime man, eſpecially in reſpect of his ſpiritual prerogative in the Church, on whom, and his poſterity, the principal part of the ſtory of the Book of Geneſis is beſtowed; for Abram, when he went out of Haran, was ſeventy five years of age, Chap. 12. 4,5. before which time Terah was dead, verſ.32. of this Chapter, whoſe age is ſummed up to two hundred and five years in the ſame place; out of which deduct the age of Abram at the time of his departing out of Haran, which preſently followeth the death of his father, and his birth will fall out to be about the one hundredth and thirtieth yeer of Terah's age. And for the order of Terah's ſons, it is probable that Haran was the eldeſt, though named laſt, Nahor the ſecond, and Abram the youngeſt, though named firſt; for Sarai Abrams wife, the daughter of Haran, was but ten yeers younger then Abram, Chap.17.17. and ſuppoſing her father was not leſſe then twenty yeers elder then ſhe (which is probable enough) he muſt be ten yeers elder then Abram. Others conceive Abram to have been the eldeſt, as born in the ſeventieth year of Terah, according to this Text, and that he departed out of Haran into Canaan, while his father yet lived; but having there no ſetled poſſeſſion of any part of that Land till after the deceaſe of Terah, when he purchaſed a burying place of the ſons of Heth, Gen.23. ver.17,18. which being done by the divine diſpoſition, Stephen ſpeaketh of his dwelling there according to the date of that particular, Act.7.4. So by way of purchaſe he had a portion there, as any ſtranger might have, though not by way of inheritance, which is the meaning of Stephen, Act.7.5.

V.29. Iſcah] Some think that this Iſcah was Sarai mentioned in the next verſe: for Haran the eldeſt ſon of Terah had two daughters, Milcah, who married her Uncle Nahor, and Iſcah, or Sarai, (if the ſame woman had two names) who married her Uncle Abram, and therefore is called Terahs daughter in Law, verſ.31. Such marriages were not yet forbidden, Exod.6.20. though afterwards they were, Lev.18.14.

V.31. Terah took Abram] Albeit the Oracle of direction came to Abram, yet this honour of execution is given to Terah, to wit, to be named as the leader of the company, becauſe he was Abrams father, who being admoniſhed of Gods Will by his ſon, conſented to it both in approbation and practiſe.

* Ur of the Chaldees] (* Neh.9 7. Act.7.4.) Some read, out of the fire of the Chaldees, for Ur, in Hebrew, ſignifieth, a valley, light, or fire, See Iſai.24.15. Text and Margine; and according to that they find or feigne a ſtory, that Abram was caſt into the fire by the Chaldeans, becauſe he would not worſhip the Fire their Idol, but was miraculouſly delivered from that danger; yet it is certaine that the Chaldeans were Idolatrous, and probable that fire was a chief Idol among them, and that this City might have its name from that Idol.

Haran] Which was a City of Meſopotamia bordering upon Canaan. So in the Geneva Annot. and ſo Adricom. Delph. Theatr-Terr. Sanc. in the Tribe of Manaſſeh, pag.86.col.2. & 96.col.2. which ſeemeth to be contradicted by that of Stephen, Act. 7. 2,3. where he ſaith, that God appeared to Abraham while he was in Meſopotamia, before he dwelt in Charran or Haran, ſo that when he went to Charran, he went rather out of Meſopotamia, then to a City of Meſopotamia. To which doubt, the anſwer is, That Meſopotamia is ſometimes taken in a general acception, and ſo Saint Luke takes it for a large compaſſe of Land (beyond Euphrates in reſpect of Canaan) comprehending both Meſopotamia properly ſo called, and Chaldea; which (as Topographers deſcribe it) borders upon it on the Eaſt-ſide; and ſo Babylon the Metropolis of Chaldea, is reckoned as in Meſopotamia by Pliny, lib.6. cap. 26. Now Abram being called while he was in Ur of Chaldea, the Eaſtern part of Meſopotamia, taken in a general ſenſe, went with his father into Charran a City of Meſopotamia properly ſo called, and diſtinct from Chaldea, though called ſometimes (as here by Stephen) by the ſame name, ver.2,4.

CHAP. XII.

Verſ.1. THe LORD had ſaid] This oraculous appointment of God, came to Abram (as is probably conceived) while he was in Ur of the Chaldees (where he was born) while his father lived, and whereupon they departed from Ur, to go towards the Land of Canaan, as is ſaid Chap.11. ver.31. and in the way thitherward they ſtayed a time at Charran or Haran, where Terah dyed; after that by vertue of the ſame call he went onward to Canaan with Lot.

out of thy Country] That is, Chaldea, where he had his call from God.

from thy kindred] If they had rather remain behind thee, then remove with thee.

into a land] In appointing no certain place, he proveth ſo much the more his faith and obedience; for he went from his place of birth, and wonted abode, to go from place to place, he yet knew not whither. See Heb.11.8.

V.2. Thou ſhalt be a bleſſing] That is, more then, thou ſhalt have a bleſſing, for in this bleſſing is virtually compriſed the happineſs of both worlds, and of all that are truly bleſſed in all ages: whereof though God be the only Author, Abraham is honoured to be a principal meanes under him to bring it to paſſe, in being the Progenitour of the promiſed Seed, and ſetting ſuch an example of belief, as might qualifie him to be ſtiled father of the faithful, Rom. 4. 11,12. The world ſhall receive by thy ſeed, which is Chriſt, the bleſſing which it loſt in Adam. This Covenant in Chriſt was four hundred and thirty years before the Law, and therefore cannot be diſannulled by the Law, coming ſo long after it, as the Apoſtle argueth, Gal.3.16,17.

Ver. 3. * And in thee ſhall] * Gen.18.18. and 22.18. Act. 3.26. Gal.3.8.

V.4. As the LORD ſpake] Some think Abraham was now called the ſecond time; firſt in Ur of Chaldea, his birth-place, whereupon he went with his father Terah to Charran; and again in Charran, whereupon he departed thence towards Canaan: but neither here, nor Act.7. is there mentioned two callings of him, and it is like he went on in the vertue of his firſt call, though by degrees, reſting at Charran till the death of his father Terah, and from thence taking his journey towards Canaan, verſ. 4,5.

V.5. Souls] Souls are put for perſons, becauſe the ſoul is the better part; and ſo by an ordinary figure called Synecdoche, it is taken very oft in Scripture for the whole perſon, Exod.1.5. and elſewhere. See cha. 14. verſ.21.

which he had gotten] Not begotten as a father, but taken as a Conqueror, or hired as a Maſter, or purchaſed as a Merchant upon a price, as ſlaves were bought and ſold in ancient times out of many Nations, but eſpecially the Canaanites, who of all others were deſigned to that baſe condition, Gen.9. ver.25,26,27.

Canaan] So called, becauſe the poſterity of Canaan, the ſon of Cham, poſſeſſed it.

V.6. Abram paſſed] He wandred to and fro in the Land, before he could find a ſettling place: thus God exerciſeth the faith of his children.

Sichem] Heb. Shechem, ſo called when Moſes wrote; but in Abrahams it had its name from an Oake: ſome ſuppoſe it the ſame with Mamre, Chap 13.17. which others doubt of, and in our Saviours time it was called Sichar, a City of Samaria, Joh.4.5. See Annot.on chap. 13.18. It was ſituate in the middle part of the Land of Canaan, in the mountainous part of the Tribe of Ephraim, Joſh. 21, 21. Judg.8.31. 1 Chron.6.67.

the Canaanite] Properly ſo called for diſtinction from the Hivites, Jebuſites, Perizzites, &c. which was a cruel and fierce Nation, by whom God kept his people in continual exerciſe.

in the land] That is, in the plaine of Moreth, next before ſpoken of.

V.7 Builded an Altar] So did Noah, chap.8.20 for though the principal part of mans devotion to God conſiſt in his heart, yet there muſt be ſome evidence of it by external ſervice, whereby it may appear to others, that we account God worthy of open worſhip, and his mercies and favor worthy of monuments of remembrance.

called h: upon the name] See Annot on Chap.4.26.

V.8. Removed from thence] Becauſe of the troubles he had among that wicked people, for that he ſerved the true God, and renounced Idolatry, not changing his Religion with the place; but every where ſerving the ſame God in the ſame manner.

Bethel] Called at this time Luz, not Bethel until afterwards, Gen. 28. 19.

on the Weſt] See Annot. on Geneſ. Chap. 1. verſ.10. and on Deut 11.24. See alſo Gen.13.14. & 28.14. Numb.3.23. and Deut. 3.27.

Hai on the Eaſt] Called Ai, Joſh.7.2. Jer.49.3. and Ajah, Iſa.10 28. a fair City of Canaan, ſituate on the mountainous part of the land, which fell to the lot of the Tribe of Benjamin.

V.9. Journeyed going] Heb. In going and journeying. The beſt of Gods children may be reſtleſs in their outward condition, and fain to ſhift from place to place: which may make them more deſirous of heaven, where there is perpetual repoſe, without either toyl or change, Heb.11.10.

V.10. A famine] This was a new tryal of Abrahams faith, whereby we are taught to expect at the end of one affliction, to meet with another.

V.11. Egypt] By the Prophet uſually called Mitſrajim from the ſon of Cham of that name, Chap 10.6. on the the Eaſt-ſide is bounded with the red Sea, and part of Arabia, on the Weſt with Cyrene a part of Africk, on the South with Ethiopia ſuperior, called by ſome Habaſſia, or Abaſine.

thou art fair] When Abraham came with his family to Egypt Sarai was about ſixty yeers of age, yet then ſhe was ſo beautiful, not onely in compariſon of the Egyptians (who were not of a very lovely colour, or complexion) but abſolutely, as Abram judged of her. And her beauty might hold out, though threeſcore years old, both becauſe it was not impaired by breeding, or bearing of children, (being barren) and for that God might preſerve it in eſpecial manner, as an occaſion for the working and obſerving of his providence, which followed thereupon; yet here we ſee that beauty is a double ſnare, both to them that have it, and them that love it.

V.13 Say thou art my ſiſter] Wherein in ſome ſenſe he ſpake truth; yet by the name of ſiſter he intended to make them to believe a lye, to wit, that ſhe was not his wife. An example not of imitation, but of caution, whereby the beſt may be warned againſt the uſing of ill means to good ends; and may learn not to put others in danger to ſave themſelves. Albeit it may be that Abram feared not ſo much death, as that if he ſhould dye without iſſue, Gods promiſe ſhould not have taken place; wherein appeareth a frailty of faith at this time, though for other things and at other times, his faith was more firm. See Chap.20.12.

V.15. Into Pharaohs houſe] With a purpoſe to make her his wife or concubine, v.19.

V.17. Pharaoh] Pharaoh was an uſual name among the Kings of Egypt, until the Greeks prevailed over it, and then they were commonly called Ptolomees; haply for ſome eminent King of that name; as the Emperors of Rome and Germany are called Cæſars from Julius or Auguſtus Cæſars. Or they might be called Pharaohs, becauſe the word Pharaoh ſignifieth in Hebrew, liberty from ſervitude; and Kings are ſervants to none but God: and in the Chaldean Dialect, revenge, or puniſhment, as having a pre-eminence of power for the puniſhment of the wicked, as well as for the protection of the good, Rom.13.4. See on. chap.41.44.

the Lord plagued Pharaoh] Though Kings have great power for doing, Eccl.8.4. and more protection from ſuffering then other men in the guard of their perſons, yet they may not do what they will with whom they will; for ſome are ſuch Favourites of the King of Kings, as to be accepted as his annointed, and under that title to be ſecured from the tyranny of Kings, Pſal.105.14,15. 1 Chr.16.21,22. which places have an eſpecial application to this ſtory of Abraham and Pharaoh, in whoſe example Kings muſt be admoniſhed of their ſubordination to God, Eccl. 5.8. and of Gods tender care of godly perſons, whom he will not, though they be ſtrangers and friendleſſe, give up to the oppreſſion of Potentates though never ſo great.

and his houſe] Great mens ſins are dangerous, not only to themſelvs, but to others that belong unto them. It is not ſafe to dwell in the houſe with ſuch as are wicked. See Pſal.101. ver.6,7.

with great plagues] Great men when they offend are ſo much more plagued by God then others, as his benefits more oblige them to obedience, and their greatneſs frees them from humane puniſhment, when they deſerve it by their diſobedience.

V.18. VVhy didſt thou not tell me, that ſhe was thy wife?] Yet he knew her not to be his wife, until by plagues he was made apprehenſive of divine diſpleaſure, which might occaſion an humble inquiry into the cauſe; whereupon God was pleaſed ſome way to reveal it unto him, either by Sarai, or ſome other way: but he was puniſhed before he was advertiſed of it; and therefore ignorance of ſin is no priviledg for impunity, nor protection againſt puniſhment; and it is not unlike that the King was too much ſwayed by his carnal appetite, that he made ſo much haſte to take her for her beauty, and for that he might be puniſhed the more.

V.20. commanded] Not onely diſmiſſed him without harm or damage, but for his ſecurity laid a charge upon his people to let him paſſe where he pleaſed without any harm,

CHAP. XIII.

Verſ. 1. WEnt up] Canaan was higher then Egypt; and the ſituation of Egypt being lower, was the fitter to be made fruitful by the overflowing of Nilus.

into the South] That is, the Southern part of Canaan, Chap.12.9. from whence he went into Egypt, Ch.12.9. for otherwiſe the whole Country of Canaan, in reſpect of Egypt, is ſituated Northward.

V.2. Very rich] Great riches, and great goodneſs may meet together in one man, Job 1. 1, 3.

V.3. Bethel] The place is here called by that name, which it had long before Moſes time, though not at this time, when Abrahm travelled towards it. See Annot. on Chap 12. 8.

V.4. place of the altar. Chap.12. 8.

V.6. to bear them] They wanted convenient ſpace for diſtinction and paſture of their flocks; the Canaanites, an harſh natured people, having poſſeſſion of the land, ſo that they could not be well accommodated for their company and eſtates neer together. See on Chap.36. 7.

they could not dwell together] Though men account that happineſs conſiſts in riches; there is this unhappineſs in them, that they do not onely ſeparate men from friendly ſociety, but oftentimes are occaſions of contentions between them.

V.7. a ſtrife between] Good, and quiet maſters may have contentious ſervants, therefore the one muſt not be condemned for the other.

the Canaanite, and the Perizzite] For Canaanites and Perizzites, as Chap. 12. 6. and Angel for Angels, Pſal. 34. 7. and ſo (as divers learned Divines expound) Rev 2. 8, 12, 18. & Chap. 3. 1, 7, 14. and Inhabitant for Inhabitants, 2 Sam.5. 6. Quail for Quails, Pſalm.105. 40 Frog for Frogs, Pſal. 78. 45. Tree for Trees, Pſal.105. 33. And the Perizzites dwelling in the Land of Canaan were Canaanites, but upon ſome eſpecial reaſon, they had an eſpecial name given them, by which they were diſtinguiſhed from the reſt of the Canaanites; and among them that dwelt in the Land, ſome might have the name of Canaanites by an eminence and more ordinary uſe, *S*ee Annotations on Chap.15.21. *S*o names are ſometimes of a more large, and ſometimes of a more ſtrict acception. See the Note on Chap.11. 31. Now their dwelling in the Land is brought in by occaſion of the diſſention betwixt the Herd-men of Abram and Lot, becauſe the Land was ſo populous by the number of theſe inhabitants, that there could not be allowed room ſufficient for the increaſe of their cattel, which might be a cauſe of future contention more then at the preſent, betwixt the emulous ſervants of their amicable maſters; and quarrels betwixt two ſuch worthy perſons would be very ſcandalous before ſuch Infidel Idolaters as the Canaanites and Perizzites were.

V.8. Abram ſaid to Lot] Abram the elder, and the worthier perſon, both in reſpect of Grace, and of Nature alſo, (for he was Uncle unto Lot) craves peace of his inferior. It is no diſparagement to be the firſt in ſeeking reconcilement, for ſo was God in atonement with man, Iſa.65. 1. 2.Cor.5. 20.

brethren] That is, neer kinſmen of the ſame fleſh and bloud, Rom. 9. 3. Or, brethren of the ſame belief, and profeſſion of Religion; otherwiſe in propriety of ſpeech, Abram was not his brother, but his uncle, for Lot was his brothers ſon, Gen. 12. verſ.5. See Annot. on Chap.14. 14.

V.9. If thou wilt take] Abram reſigneth his own right to buy peace; yet he was not poſſeſſed of a foot of the Land of Canaan, Act. 7. 5. as his own right, and by virtue of promiſe; therefore what he injoyed there, it was either by the preſuppoſed, or purchaſed conſent of the Canaanites, to whom he might make himſelf acceptable both by his great wiſdome, goodneſs, riches, and beneficence. See his carriage toward, and acceptation with Ephron, and the children of Heth: Ch. 23. of whom he would not take ſo much as a burial place, but he would pay the worth of it, Gen.23. 11, 12, 13. and for Lot, Abram gave him no title to the Land, but ſuch an uſe of it, as upon fair and reaſonable terms he might obtain and enjoy.

left hand] By the left hand, ſome Expoſitors conceive he underſtood the North; and by the right, the South: and this according to the Chaldee, which preſuppoſeth an uſual phraſe of local diſtinction among the Hebrews: the Philoſophers ſince Ariſtotle make the Eaſt to be the right hand, and the Weſt the left.

V.10. as the garden of the Lord] So are things called that are eminently great and goodly, as the Hoſt of God, 1 Chron.12. 22. the City of God, Pſal. 46.4. the Cedars of God, Pſal.80. 10. See Annot. on Chap. 23. 6. and Chap. 30. 8. and ſo it may be in this place. Or it may be a particular compariſon with the Garden of Eden, Gen. 2. 10. *S*ee Iſa.51. 3. Ezek.28. 13. and Chap.31. 8.

land of Egypt] Made fruitful by the overflowings of the River Nilus, eſpecially that part of the land, in the plain of Jordan, which is the way from Bethel to the little City, afterwards called Zoar, but in former time, and at this time, Bela, Chap.14. 2. Abricom. Delph. Theatr. terr. Sanct in Trib. Judah. page 54.

V.11. journeyed Eaſt] Or, Eaſtward; as Gen. 2. 8. From the Eaſt, ſo the Geneva: and Arias Montan. but Bethel (where Abram and Lot were when they concluded to ſeparate) was Weſtward in reſpect of Sodome, whither Lot went, and going thither he went towards the Eaſt, not from the Eaſt, ſo it is better (as to the ſenſe of the place) to read, Lot journeyed Eaſt, or Eaſtward; and this conſtruction the Original word here uſed will bear, as well as the other (from the Eaſt) and ſo it is taken, Gen.2. 8. God planted a garden Eaſtward in Eden.

one from the other] Which was done by Gods eſpecial providence, that only Abram and his ſeed might dwell in the Land of Canaan

V. 13. the men of Sodome were wicked] Lot thinking to get Paradiſe, found Hell; the land was very good, the Inhabitants extremely bad: they are called ſinners before the Lord exceedingly, becauſe their ſins were ſuch as drew his eye eſpecially to be upon them, with a purpoſe to puniſh them. See Chap. 10. 9.

V. 14. Lift up now thine eyes] The Lord comforted him, leſt he ſhould have taken thought for the departure of his Nephew.

look from the place] (Deut. 34 1. Mat.4 8.) The promiſe was made for a larger compaſs, then the eye of man could particularly view; but God might ſupply that defect either by diſcourſing of the particular places in each tract, Eaſt, Weſt, North, and South, as Abram had his proſpect; or by ſome other Revelation or repreſentation, as himſelf thought fitteſt to make him apprehenſive of his liberal promiſe. The Devil did ſomething in this kind, Mat.4.8. & Luk.4.5. by Gods permiſſion; but God doubtleſs had a better and a clearer way to manifeſt the compaſſe of his bounty unto Abram. Though Abram himſelf were not actually poſſeſſed of the land of Canaan, as in his own right; (whereof ſee the Annotations on ver. 9.) yet is the promiſe made to him, becauſe of Gods eſpecial favour to him, for whoſe ſake he was ſo graciouſly affected to his poſterity, in whom their progenitors are bleſſed in a joyful apprehenſion, that they ſhall be bleſſed, as in good-will to them, and for their ſakes; See the Annot. on Chap. 9. 25.

V.15. To thee and to thy ſeed] (Chap. 12.7. & 26.4. Deut 34.4.) That is, to thy ſeed, and for thy ſake.

for ever] Upon preſuppoſal of their obedience, and keping covenant with God, otherwiſe not, Levit.18. 28. Deut.4. 25, 26. Iſa.48. 18, 19. and to ſuch as ſhould prove faithful in their adherence to God, here is a promiſe of an everlaſting poſſeſſion of the heavenly Canaan, whereof the earthly was a Type: And concerning temporal poſſeſſion, the words for ever, reach to the coming of the Meſſiah, which is the period of ſuch promiſes for the Old Teſtament: from thence begins a date of new bleſſings to the ſpiritual children of faithful Abram, which will hold out, until they attain an everlaſting happineſſe, Heb. 11. 10.

V. 16. number the duſt of the earth] That is, by way of compariſon; for as no man can number the duſt of the earth, Gen.32. 12. the grains of it are ſo many; ſo the ſeed of Abram, whether by the fleſh, or faith of Abram (for they that believe as he did, are his children) ſhall be ſo many, as that to men they ſhall be innumerable. See on Chap. 15. 5 Heb.11. 12. Rev.7. 9.

V. 17. walk through the Land] By this God doth not command Abram to make an exact ſurveigh of it, but offers unto his choyce the ſatisfaction of himſelf by his own view of it.

the length and breadth] See on ver.14.

V. 18. plain of Mamre] Heb. plains. Or, the oak, or, grove of oaks of Mamre: for the Hebrew word Elon, ſignifieth an oak: the Plain it is like, was ſet with oak trees, and it is called the plain of Mamre, from the man who either planted or poſſeſſed it, who was an Amorite dwelling in Hebron, Chap.14. 13, 24. See on Ch.12. 6.

built an altar] Abram is conſtant in his holy courſe of true Religion, ſtill building an Altar where he abode; not, as the Heathens, to many falſe gods, but to the one and onely true God.

CHAP. XIV.

Verſ. 1. IN the dayes] This was in the year of the world, 2092. four hundred thirty ſix yeares after the floud, in the eighty fourth year of Abram's age: This is the firſt War mentioned in any ſtory, as ſome ſay, yet Joſephus writes (and it may be true) that there was a precedent War before this, whereby Chedorlaomer brought theſe people of the five Cities under ſubjection, from which thy revolted into rebellion.

Amraphel King of Shinar] This is thought to be Nimrod King of Elam, or Perſia, or Babylon.

Shinar] or Sennaar, (as Joſephus cals it, Antiq. lib.1. cap.5.) a ſpacious Plain in the Region of Babylon, put here for Babylon where Nimrod laid the foundation of his Monarchy. Some hold that this Amraphel was King of Aſſyria, the ſeat of whoſe Kingdome was not Babylon, but Nineveh; but becauſe in the beginning one man (who ſome ſay vas Ninus) had the dominion both of the Babylonians and Aſſyrians, the ſame King is often indifferently called King of Babylon and of Aſſyria.

nations] The word Gojim in the Original ſome take for a City, or Country ſo called: but it ſignifieth Nations, and it may be this King had ſeveral Nations under his command, or was Captain of a company of ſeveral Nations; or Ruler of ſome City of great Merchandize, frequented by the people of divers Countreyes; as for the ſame reaſon Galilee was called Galilee of the Nations, or Gentiles, Iſa 9. 1. Mat.4. 15. becauſe frequented by Arabians, Egyptians, and other Neighbour Nations, being of a fruitful ſoyl, and commodious with Ports and Havens. Strabo, lib.16.

Zoar] Or, Zoghnar. So called upon Lots requeſt, and refuge thither for his ſafety, Gen.19. 20, 22. But before it was named Bela, of the Land of Canaan; theſe five Cities, ſituate in the Plain of Jordan, were (all but Zoar) about five years afterward conſumed by fire and brimſtone, Gen.19. 20. &c. Deut.29. 23. ſee on Joſ.12. 23.

V.3. Siddim] Hath its name of a plainneſſe coming by beating of the clods, to lay the ground level: and ſo was this vale fitter for the conflict of the adverſe armies: but after the deſtruction of the City of Sodome, and her ſinful ſiſters, it was turned into the Lake Aſphaltites, or ſalt Sea. Joſephus ſaith, it was neer the Land of Sodome, and Gomorrah.

ſalt Sea] Called alſo the Lake Aſphaltites, neer Sodome and Gomorrah, which was not a ſalt ſea, or lake at the time of the battel, for that had been no fit place for ſuch a purpoſe, but (as ſome write) it had formerly been a pleaſant valley furniſhed with trees, untill by Gods judgment for the ſins of the Sodomites it was turned into that Lake, of the accurſed water powred out upon it, which is ſo filthy and groſſe that no fiſhes can live in it, nor (as ſome write) birds fly over it without taking deadly infection from the exhalations which ariſe out of it, wherefore it is called alſo the dead ſea, of which many ſtrange things are reported by Pliny, Nat. Hiſtor. lib. 5. cap. 16. Juſtine the Hiſtor. lib. 36. cap. 3. Joſephus of the Warres of the Jewes, libr. 5. cap. 5. Adrichom. Delph. in his Theater of the holy Land, pag. 52. in the Tribe of Judah.

V.4. Chedorlaomer] Though Amraphel who is ſuppoſed to be the ſon of Ninus the King of Aſſyria be named firſt, verſ. 1. and others before Chedorlaomer might be more ancient Kings, or Kings of places of more honour and account then Chedorlaomer; yet in this expedition he was chief, as appeareth by this, and the next verſe; for the cauſe of the war was a defection from, or a rebellion againſt the government of Chedorlaomer, to whoſe aſſiſtance the other Kings joyned themſelves, as for recovery of his right, with expectation, and it may be alſo with capitulation for the like aid, if it ſhould be their lot to be ſo deſerted, or reſiſted by their ſubjects.

rebelled] After twelve years ſubjection, eſpecially if they ſubmitted to Chedorlaomer upon covenant and oath, their rebellion was unlawful, for they ſhould have continued their obedience in lawful things. See Ezek.17. 15

V. 5. Rephaims] The word Rephaim, Deut.2. 11. is uſed for Giants; but here, as Chap.15. 20. it ſeemes to be taken for a ſtrong and fierce people dwelling in Canaan; as the Hittites and Perizzites; the people mentioned in this and the two following verſes, were ſet upon by the four Kings, perhaps as confederates with the Sodomites and the reſt, or that they might not aid them, they were firſt aſſaulted. Of the Rephaims, ſee Annot. on Chap.6. 4.

Emims] See Annot. on Deut.2. 10.

V. 6. Horites] See Annot. on Gen.36. 20. & on Deut.2. 12.

Elparan] Heb. the plain, or, oak of Paran. Of Paran, ſee Annot. on Num. Chap. 10. 12. & on Deut. 33. 2.

V. 7. which is Kadeſh] So called in Moſes his time; (though more anciently it had the name of Enmiſhpat) it was ſituate in the deſert of Zin, Num. Chap. 20. 1, 14, 16, 22. Of this Kadeſh, ſee Annot. on Numb 20. 16.

Amalekites] That was their name when Moſes wrote this, but not at the time of the war; for Amalek was the grandchild of Eſau; Gen.36.12. the ſon of Iſaac, the ſon of Abram, but Abram at this time had no child, neither by Sarai nor by Hagar; here then is an anticipation in reſpect of the ſtory, (for the Amalekites were not yet a people) though not in reſpect of the time of Moſes his writing of it, for in his time, and before, they were a people, and poſſeſſed a particular Countrey.

V. 10. vale of Siddim] Which afterwards was overwhelmed with water, and ſo called the ſalt ſea: ſee annot. on verſ.3.

ſlime-pits] Heb. pits pits. The doubling of the word importeth plurality, becauſe there were many pits there: ſo in the ſecond of King.3. 16. the words in Engliſh are, make this valley full of ditches; but in the Hebrew, make this valley ditches ditches.

fell there] Flying from their enemies they fell into the pits, (whereof there were many in that place) and there they found at once both their death and burial: the five Kings choſe that place of purpoſe for the battel, becauſe thoſe pits were not ſo well known to their enemies as to themſelves. Here the Kings of Sodome and Gomorrah are ſaid to fall, but that is to be underſtood rather of the ruine of their armies, then of their perſons; for the King of Sodom met Abram coming from the victory afterwards, ver. 17. Some think thoſe that fell there, fell not into the pits caſually, but that purpoſely they caſt themſelves into the pits, as chooſing rather to be drowned, then to be mangled with the ſword of their enemy, or to fall into their hands as captives and ſlaves.

V.12. took Lot] The godly are plagued many times with the wicked, therefore their company is dangerous, Num.16. 26. Rev.18. 4.

V. 13. the Hebrew] Abram was ſo called not from Eber, (as ſome think) becauſe there were five progenitors of Abram which came between him and Eber; but rather from the Hebrew word Ghneber, ſignifying paſſage, becauſe he paſſed over the River Euphrates, coming out of Chaldea into Canaan: yet others ſuppoſe Abram had his name of Eber, and he rather then any of his Anceſtors of the poſterity of Eber was called an Ebrew, becauſe thoſe who deſcended from him, kept the ancient Language, and true Religion of Eber.

confederate] Heb. lords or, maſters of the covenant. The word Baal, though moſt frequently uſed for an Idol, or falſe god, in the Scripture, (in which acception it occurreth about fifty ſeven times) yet in the general and grammatical ſenſe it ſignifieth a Lord, or Maſter; and many times alſo it imports emphatically a great affection or diſpoſition to a thing, or a faculty, skill, or fitneſs for a thing: ſo Joſeph, who in our Engliſh Verſion is called a dreamer, Gen.37. 19. in the Hebrew is called lord, or, maſter of dreames; and cunning and skilful Archers are called maſters of arrowes. ſee Annot.on.Chap.49. 23. and ſo Elijah addicted to the wearing of an hairy garment, or nouriſhing the hair of his head and beard, wearing it long, was called an hairy man, ſo in our Engliſh Bibles, 2King.1. 8. but according to the Hebrew it is lord, or maſter of hair.

confederate] God moved them to joyn with Abram, and preſerved him from their Idolatry and Superſtition; the proſperity of Gods people make thoſe that obſerve it deſirous to be in league with them: upon that ground did Abimelech and Phichol deſire to enter Covenant with Abraham, Gen. 21. 22, 23. and the like motion for the ſame reaſon was tendered to Iſaac his ſon, Gen.26. 27, 28, 29. and though afterward it were forbidden to make a Covenant with the Canaanite, Exod.34. 15. Deut.7. 2. and Jehoſaphat was reproved and threatned for his aſſociation, in aſſiſtance of the wicked King of Iſrael, 2Chr. 19. 2, yet without the caſe of eſpecial prohibition, it is not unlawful to make leagues of peace or war, or commerce with Infidels in caſe of neceſſity, with due care taken that there be no content in any thing that is ſinful, or prejudicial to the truth of Religion, nor any appearance of approbation of what is unlawful, as either againſt the true faith, or good manners.

V. 14. brother] Here, and verſ. 16. Lot is called Abrams brother (for ſo are they ſometimes called in Scripture, who are of neere kindred, or affinity) though the proper or particular relation of Abram and Lot, was of an Uncle and Nephew, for Lot was Abrams brothers ſon, ver. 12 ſee Annot. on Chap.13. 8. and compare 2King.10.13. with 2Chr.22. 8 where is the like uſe and meaning of the word brother.

trained] That is, bred and brought up, and diſciplined in his family, and it may be alſo trained in a military ſenſe; that is, exerciſed in arms; for he knew he might meet with many and great enimies, and therefore his wiſdome would dictate unto him the beſt way of due defence for himſelf and his friends.

three hundred and eighteen] As he was a man of great eſtate, Chap. 13. 2. ſo he had a great family, and in reſpect of both the children of Heth called him a mighty Prince, Chap.23. 6. An excellent pattern for ſuch as are ſo rich and great as he was, to be good and gracious like him.

Dan.] A place on the Northern part of Canaan, anciently called Leſhem and Laiſh, until it was won by the Danites, whereupon they called it Dan. Joſh.19. 47. ſee on Judg.18. 7. 29. 2Sa.24. 6.

V. 15. divided] A Military policy, to make ſhew of a great Army diſperſed divers wayes, and to prevent the eſcape of the enemy.

V. 16. And he brought back, &c.] Religion is no impediment to Military courage and prudence, Abram had a better cauſe of quarrel then the rebel Kings, for (not being ſubject to Chedorlaomer, but in right, and by Gods promiſe King of Canaan) his charity, and piety to his Nephew unjuſtly ſpoyled, and taken captive, was better warrant for the war, then they had; and no doubt he had Divine direction for what he attempted, as well as Divine aſſiſtance for what he effected, ver. 20.

V. 17. Kings dale] That is, King Melchizedeks, (as ſome take it) or it might be ſo called for the pleaſantneſs which might delight a King; as Chap.49. 20. It was not ſo called when this ſtory was in action, but afterwards: it is like, it was the valley named, 2Sam, 18. 18. where Abſolom ſet up a pillar, in ſtead of a ſon, to keep his name in remembrance.

V. 18. Melchizedek] Moſt of the Jewiſh Rabbines, and many learned Chriſtians, take this Melchizedek to de Shem; and for the time of their living it is probable enough, for Melchizedek lived ſeventy five years after Abrahams coming into Canaan: but other learned, both Jewiſh and Chriſtian Writers, conceive he was a Prince, and Prieſt of another kindred from that of Abraham, Heb.7. 6. extraordinarily raiſed up by God, of the Canaanites, and brought in without mention of parents, Original, or end, without any predeceſſor, or ſucceſſour in the Prieſthood, as a Type of the Royal, and eternal Prieſthood of Chriſt, Heb.7. 17, 21 which cannot be ſaid of Shem, whoſe Genealogy is ſet down in Scripture.

King] Here, and Heb.7. 1. he is called, and was alſo both a King, and a Prieſt; two callings rarely, and by extraordinary inſtances, concurring in one perſon.

of Salem] Called alſo Jebus, and after Hieruſalem, and ſince that ſometimes Salem, Pſal.76. 2. Some take it for that Salem mentioned Joh.3. 23. Of which (though there be no certainty for either) the firſt is more probable.

brought forth] For Abrahams and his ſouldiers refection, and as a preſent of gratulation, and not to offer ſacrifice, ſee Deut.23. 4. Judg 8. ver. 5, 6, 16.

of the moſt high God] Though the poſterity of Abram were Gods viſible Church, there were ſome without it, who were not without the knowledge and worſhip of the true God.

V. 19. bleſſed him] In that Melchizedek was bountifull to Abraham, and his Army, he declared himſelf to repreſent a King: in that he bleſſed him, the high-Prieſt, Heb.7. 6. and in both he was a type, or figure of Chriſt.

V. 20. And bleſſed be the moſt high God, &c.] This was a gratulatory ſacrifice of praiſe; but no expiatory ſacrifice did he offer at all, for that requireth bloud-ſhed, Heb.9. 22.

which he hath delivered] Man makes the adventure, but God gives the victory in battel.

he gave him tithes of all] Abraham gave tythes to Melchizedek, Heb. 7. 2. The payment of tythes is ancienter then the Levitical Law. See Chap.28. 22. and being payd to Melchizedek a type of Chriſt, they are not aboliſhed by the Goſpel, but may be continued as an Evangelica revenue for the maintenance of thoſe, who exhibite Sacramental bread and wine (the materials of Melchizedeks beneficence) to the people, and bleſſe them in the Name of God, as Melchizedek did Abraham.

V. 21. the perſons] In Hebrew it is, the ſouls; for the ſoul is both here, and in many other places, put for the whole man; to teach us to give the ſoul the preheminence above the body, both in eſtimation of it and care for it.

V. 22. I have lifted up my hand] An outward geſture uſed at the taking of an oath, Deut.32 40. Ezek. 20. 15. Dan. 12. 7. Rev 10. 56. Signifying, that God above knoweth the truth of what we ſwear, and invoking his juſtice, if we ſwear untruly. Abram it ſeemeth had made a vow to God, before he ſet forth, that he would have no part of the ſpoyl.

V. 23. that I will not take] In Hebrew it is, If I take from, &c. A ſuſpenſive, and paſſionate ſpeech, importing a ſtrong denyal above the utterance of words; as Pſal. 95. 11. compared with Heb. 3. 11, 18. and withal the ſpeaker intimateth a curſe, but forbeareth the expreſſions of the words, either out of fear or unwillingneſſe to mention it in particular, or as yeelding to any curſe in general, if they do otherwiſe then he profeſſeth. See on ch. 21. 23.

from a thread] A thread, ſhoe latchet, are things of ſmalleſt value, even to a ſhoe Lachet: a proverbial ſpeech importing a reſolute and univerſal refuſal of gain, or advantage by the preſent buſineſſe. See Annot. on Gen.31. 34. & 24. 50.

leſt] Abraham withholdeth his hands from the ſpoyl, as the Jews did, Eſth. 9. 15, 16. that it might appear that his charity, not covetouſneſſe, drew him to the Warr; and that having his riches from the eſpecial bleſſing of God, he would not have it thought he was enriched by man, eſpecially by any ſo wicked as the Sodomites were.

V. 24. young men] That is, the Souldiers, who for the moſt part were of the younger ſort.

portion of the men] He would not that his liberty ſhould be hurtful to others.

CHAP. XV.

Verſ. 1. THeſe things] Or, words. Spoken by Abraham to the King of Sodome in the former Chapter: the Original word ſignifieth firſt [words], then things, celebrated or ſpoken of by words, Schindl. Pent. col. 358. as Lev.5. 2. Deut. 17. 5. and in other places; for in good things, he that ſpeaketh a word, ſhould make it good by his deed; and in evil, he that ſpeaketh ill, hath a mind to do as ill as he ſpeaketh.

a viſion] Properly is a divine repreſentation of things ſhewed to ſuch as are awake; ſuch were the viſions of the Prophets in the Old, and of Zachary; Peter, Paul, and John, in the New Teſtament, diſtinguiſhed from revelation by dreames to men aſleep. Numb. 12. 6.

fear not.] Viſions at their firſt apprehenſion affect the party to whom they are preſented with fear. So Dan. 10. 8. Luk. 2. 9. but before the viſion, Abraham might haply fear a new aſſault of his enemies, or the envy of the wicked at his proſperity, and in reſpect of ſuch fear, God calls himſelf his Buckler, Pſal. 18. 30. Prov.30. 5. 2Sam. 22. 31. or may be he feared lack of iſſue.

I am thy ſhield] To protect thee from hurt, Pſal. 5. 12. and thy reward, to beſtow on thee good; yea I will beſtow my ſelf upon thee, and be thy portion, Pſal. 15. 6.

thy exceeding great reward] A reward above all pretence of merit; a reward to ſuch eſpecially as do not reſpect the rewards of men, as Abraham did not, when he refuſed the offer of the King of Sodome; and they may be cheerful in their work, ſince they ſhall be ſure of a reward, Pſal.58. 11. of an exceeding great reward, great beyond all meaſur; exceeding, far above mans merit: for God is their reward, and he is infinite, and therefore ſuch a reward as nothing in man can purchaſe upon equal price.

V. 2. I go childleſſe] Heb. and I going: Some render the words, ſince I go on, or perſevere, or am going away; that is, ſince my age goeth on towards mine end, and I am yet not come to the poſſeſſion of thy promiſe, and mine expectation.

ſeeing I go childleſſe] Abraham deſired a ſon above any worldly thing that God could give him: yet his fear was not onely leſt he ſhould not have children, but leſt the promiſe of the bleſſed ſeed ſhould not be accompliſhed in him; and he makes it his complaint to God, in whoſe power it was to make him a father, Pſal. 127. 3. as well as to promiſe him a plenteous poſterity, Chap. 13. 16.

Damaſcus] Whoſe name is Damaſcus the ſon of Eliezer, or whoſe Anceſtors were of Damaſcus, though he were born in Abrahams houſe, hee was the eldeſt ſervant of his Family, chap. 24. 2. and from a ſervant (as ſome conceive) became ſo great a Lord, as to be the founder of the faireſt City of Syria, called Damaſcus, after his name. See. on 24. 2.

V. 3. mine heir] If he had no child of his own, (his Nephew Lot having none but daughters) it was in his thoughts to make his chief and moſt faithful ſervant his heir; or if Abraham were dead, having all under his charge, his ſervant might make himſelf heir of his Maſters eſtate.

V. 5. Look now toward heaven, and tell the ſtars] The Stars, though it were day, might be repreſented in a viſion, or the entercourſe betwixt God and Abraham might be continued until night, from the time when it began.

number them] Though ſome ancient Aſtronomers have taken upon them to number the Stars to 1022. and ſome later Writers have increaſed the number to 1322. Alſted. Uranoſcop. part. 1. cap. 13. Tom. 1.

Encycl. col.2020. Yet as there hath been a difference of the earth in regard of diſcovery, in which reſpect one part hath been a long time called the Southern unknown part of the world; ſo the wiſer ſort of Chriſtian Aſtrologers, eſpecially, have diſtinguiſhed the Stars into numerable and innumerable, Magir, Phyſ. lib. 2. cap.5. which will be a true diſtinction to the worlds end, not only betwixt the Stars, but betwixt God that made them, and men that obſerve them; for while to men they are innumerable, to God they are exactly known both for their number and their names. Pſal.147. 4.

ſo ſhall thy ſeed bee] the promiſe of multiplication of Abrahams ſeed is made by a compariſon; ſometimes to the duſt of the earth, chap.13. 16. ſometimes to the Stars of heaven, as here in prophecy, and we have it in hiſtory, Deut.1. 10. where neither by duſt in their humiliation, nor by the Stars is their exaltation intended, but their multiplication in both; and this is meant not only of Abrahams children according to the fleſh, but according alſo to the Faith. ſee 1 Chr.27. 23.

V. 6. and hee believed in the Lord] He believed the Lord, not only for the multiplication of his ſeed, but in particular for the principal ſeed, the promiſed Meſſiah, in whom all the nations of the world ſhould be bleſſed, Chap 12. 3.

righteouſneſſe] Righteouſneſs by imputation, or juſtification by Faith without works, is no new doctrine, but as old as Abraham. ſee Gal,3. 8, Rom 4. 3. The Faith of a Believer in Chriſt, is like that of Abraham touching the ſeed; for as this was not grounded on any thing in nature, for ſo both Abraham and Sarah were too old to be parents) ſo hath the faith of a true believer nothing of nature, but more grace to ſupport it, Rom.4 17, 18.

V. 8. whereby ſhall I know] This was a ſpeciall motion of Gods Spirit; therefore it is not lawfull for all to do the like in asking ſigns, but was permitted to ſome by a peculiar favour, as to Gideon, and Hezekiah; which they did not ſo much out of incredulity, as out of a deſire to be fortified againſt humane infirmity. See Judg.6.17,37. 2King.20.8. Luk.1.18. Or, he asked this queſtion, not ſo much doubting of the thing promiſed, as deſiring to know ſomewhat more particularly of the manner of performance.

V. 9. Take me an heifer] God entring into eſpecial Covenant with Abraham, will have it confirmed by ſacrifice, as Pſal.50. 5 in ſacrifice and oblations what is here required, was afterward by the Levitical Law eſtabliſhed, Levit.1. verſ.2, 10, 14.

V. 10. divided] The beaſts were divided, and the parts ſo placed, that the parties covenanting might paſs betwixt them, Jer.34. 18. the meaning whereof was, that as part anſwered to part (for they were ſo to be laid, that the parts might be anſwerable to each other) ſo the minds of the Covenanters ſhould be ſet in a mutual correſpondence; and withal there was an implicite imprecation of the like diſſection, to the party that brake the Covenant; but in this place was alſo prefigured the diſtreſſes, and diſtraction of Abrahams ſeed, and withal, their joyning together again, to which purpoſe the parts were ſo orderly diſpoſed. See Ezek.37. 7.

the birds] Were not divided, becauſe they appertained not to the confirmation of the Covenant, but were to ſerve for ſacrifices, Levit.1. 15, 17. Or, becauſe they were little, and each laid whole againſt the other were anſwerable to the other parts that were divided; and by theſe might be intimated the innocency, and ſimplicity of Gods people, eſpecially in their making, and keeping of Covenant. For Doves and Pigions, mentioned in the precedent verſe, and meant in this, are noted for their innocence, Math 10. 16. and the Turtle Dove is commended for an example of keeping the covenant of marriage.

V. 11. the fowles] Ravenous birds reſemble wicked men, who are ready to make a prey of Gods holy portion, and to diſturbe holy perſons in their beſt actions. See Ezek.17. 3.

V. 12. an horror of great darkneſs] The condition of Gods people in this life is very various, Abraham hath favourable viſions, and frightful dreams: promiſes of a numerous iſſue, and of them predictions of grievous diſtreſſes, like diſmal darkneſs, which put him into a diſtemper of horrour, and this followed with preſages of light-ſome liberty to ſucceed it.

V. 13. ſerve them] That is, the owners, or Lords of the land wherein they are ſtrangers four hundred years] Or four hundred and five, for in a great ſumme ſo ſmall a number cometh under no particular accompt, as the Interpreters of the Old Teſtament out of Hebrew into Greek were ſeventy two, but they are commonly called the ſeventy, not ſeventy two Interpreters; and this accompt is to begin at the birth of Iſaac; but from the giving of the promiſe to Abram to the deliverance of the Iſraelites out of Egypt, and the giving of the Law were four hundred and thirty years, Exod.12. 40. Gal. 3. 13. of which neither four hundred and five, nor four hundred, much leſſe the whole of four hundred and thirty was ſpent under Egyptian perſecution, for though the account end with their parting thence, it did not begin with their coming thither, as it is ſaid of Terah that his dayes in Charran were two hundred and five years Gen 11. 32. where he ſpent not all that time (and it may be alſo not the moſt part of it) but ended it; but ſo much of the time was run up before Jacobs coming thither, and ſo much after that peaceably paſſed on until the death of Joſeph, that ſome rate the time of their rigid ſervitude, but to one hundred and fourty years, and ſome, but to one hundred twenty one at the moſt, which may appear from this computation following. The ſum of four hundred and thirty years equally divided, the one half of them was ſpent before their going into Egypt, the other half in their abiding there. Two hundred and fifteen years paſſed before their paſſage into Egypt, which may be reckoned thus; from the promiſe given to Abram to the birth of Iſaac twenty five years, compare, Gen.12. 4. with Gen.21. 5. from the birth of Iſaac to the birth of Jacob threeſcore years, Gen.25, 26. from thence to Jacobs coming into Egypt, an hundred and thirty years, Gen. 47. verſ.9. which made up into one total ſumme, amount to two hundred and fifteen years, the other two hundred and fifteen were taken up in their ſojourning in Egypt, namely, ninety foure before the death of Levi, who ſurvived all the eleven Patriarchs his brethren, and an hundred twenty one, betwixt his death and the peoples deliverance out of Egypt: for Levi and Joſeph were both born in the ſeven years of Jacobs ſecond ſervice under his Uncle Laban, Gen. 29. & 30. Levi in the fourth, and Joſeph in the ſeventh, ſo that there were about three years between them: Now Ioſeph, when his father, and brethren came down into Egypt, was thirty nine years old, compare, Gen.41 46.51. & 45.6. and then was Levi fourty three or thereabout; and Levi lived one hundred thirty and ſeven years, Exod.6. 16. out of which thoſe fourty three being deducted, which he had ſpent before the Iſraelites comming into Egypt, it appeareth they were in Egypt, ninety four years before his death, and thoſe ninety four (in which they were wel intreated for Ioſephs ſake) being deducted out of the two hundred and fifteen (which they ſpent in that land) it remaineth that there were one hundred twenty one years from his death, to their redemption out of bondage; the moſt of which time after there aroſe another Pharaoh, that knew not Ioſeph, Exod.1. 8. was ſpent in heavy ſervitude, which moved the Lord, by the mighty and miraculous power, to wreſt his own people out of the hands of the proud and perſecuting Tyrant. But that the words of the Text may not be thought to contradict this limitation of time, for the afflicted ſtate of the poſterity of Jacob, they are to be read with a parentheſis, thus, Thy ſeed ſhall be a ſtranger in a land that is not theirs (and ſhall ſerve them, and they ſhall afflict them) four hundred years, ſo that their affliction ſhall fall out within thoſe four hundred years, not hold out all the time of their ſojourning.

V. 15. to thy fathers] Not meaning the particular place where the ſouls of Terah and Nahor were, but to the general condition of the dead, whereto his forefathers led him the way.

V. 16. fourth generation] That is, in the four hundreth year, or ſomewhat above, which for evenneſs of number is not reckoned, as of the ſeventy Interpreters of the Bible hath been obſerved on the thirteenth verſe: Or, by generation is meant betwixt the geniture, or birth of the father, and the ſon; ſo the fourth generation is to be reckoned from the deſcent of the ſons of Jacob into Egypt, to their entrance into Canaan, as in the Tribe of Judah, from Judah to Phares, from Phares to Heſron, from Heſron to Caleb, of Levi, Levi, Kohath, Amram, Moſes.

hither] That is, into Canaan, where Abraham was when God made his Covenant with him.

iniquity of the Amorites] And of the Canaanites, as appears by Levit.18. Deut. 6. & 12. and their iniquities were chiefly of three kinds, all very heinous; one was Idolatry of a moſt execrable ſort, ſacrificing their ſonnes and daughters unto Devils; another was grievous oppreſſion of the poor and ſtranger; the third was prodigious luſt, not onely by inceſtuous uncleanneſs with their neereſt kindreds, but even by Sodomy and beaſtiality.

is not yet full] There is a fulneſs of ſin, which groweth by degrees to a juſt meaſure of merit of extraordinary vengeance from above. See Ier.51. 13. Dan.8. 23. Matth. 23. 32. Dan.11. 36. Which may be a preſervative of patience, at the proſperity of the wicked, ſince the reward of their wickedneſs is ſure, though it be ſlow.

V. 17. a ſmoaking furnace and a burning lampe] The ſmoaking furnace, and burning lampe, or lampe of fire paſſing betwixt the parts, ſignified Gods aſſent to the Covenant, after the manner noted, verſ 10. for God is compared to fire, Heb.12. verſ.laſt. and makes apparitions by fire, Exod.3. 2. & 20, 18. And Chriſt, who is God, appeared to Daniel and Iohn, with eyes like a flame, Dan.10. 6. Revel.1. 14. and the ſmoaking furnace, whoſe fire is not ſeen, may note that God himſelf is inviſible, though he ſhew a burning lampe as a glimpſe of his glory. Beſides, the ſmoaking furnace may note the great affliction of the Iſraelites in Egypt, Exod.1. verſ.11, 18. See Pſal.21.9. Lam.5. 10. Ma 4. 1. but eſpecially, Deut. 4. 20. Jer.11. 4. and the burning lampe, deliverance from it, or ſalvation out of it; as Iſai.62. 1. and that in this order, firſt, the furnace of affliction, and then the lampe of ſalvation.

V. 18. have I given] Gods promiſes for the future, are oftentimes ſet down, as already performed, by reaſon of his faithfulneſs, and infallibility; from the river] Which ſome expound to be from the fountain of Euphrates the fall; moſt take it for the River Nilus, or for a branch of it, running betwixt Peluſium and Rhinocorura, or Rhinocolura, ſo named, from the ſeverity of an Egyptian King, cutting off the noſes of notorious theeves and malefactors, and baniſhing them to that place, Diodor. Sic. lib. 2. cap.1. Some derive this River from the mountains of Kedar, and ſome affirm it hath not its Original and ſupply from the earth, but from heaven by rain, and therefore it is called by ſuch a name in Latine, as ſignifieth a Brook, which ſometimes may be dry; howſoever, it bordereth on the South part of Paleſtine, or the Land of Canaan. The uſual limits of the Land of Canaan, are noted for the Longitude to be from Dan, (a northerne City, ſituate at the foot of Mount Lebanon) to Berſheba (a Southern City in the Tribe of Simeon) that is, about an hundred and ſixty miles in length, and the latitude or breadth from Jordan in the Eaſt, to the great Sea Weſtward, which is about eighteen miles, Adrichom. Delph. Epiſt. Prefixt. Theatr. terr. Sanct. and in the 34. of Numbers where the parts of the Land of Canaan were moſt exactly deſcribed, it is confined far ſhort of the extent here ſet down; but we are to conceive, that this promiſe was not made perſonally to Abram, but for his poſterity, and to be made good by degrees: for all that the Iſraelites poſſeſſed they had not at once, Exod.23. 29. nor in the ſame manner and tenure, for they had the Land of Canaan in poſſeſſion, afterwards the ſeed of Abram had the dominion of other Countries, according to the amplitude of the promiſe in this place, as we ſee, 1.King.4. 21. or if they had not, the cauſe was in their breach of Covenant with God, not in Gods with them.

great River] (Joſ.1.4.) The River Euphrates was called the great River, not that of it ſelf it was greater then any other, but for that by the falling of Tygris into it, it ſwelled beyond the breadth of other rivers.

V.19. The Kenites] Are thought to be the ſame with the Midianites, Judg.1. 16. compared with Exod.3.1. Here are reckoned ten ſorts of people in Canaan, which by mixture, or diminution of ſome of them, afterwards were reduced to ſeven, as they are diſtinctly named, and definitely numbred, Deut.7.1. See on Joſ.3. 10.

the Kenezites] Theſe are thought to be the off-ſpring of Kenaz a Duke of Eſaus race, Gen.36. 15, 42. and more uſually ſtyled Idumeans: and though thoſe that dwelt in Mount Seir might not be meddled with, (God having made an expreſſe prohibition even to a foot of ground, Deut.2. 4, 5.) yet this ſeemeth not to be general in regard of perſons, nor of times, for the Edomites that deſcended from Eſau, and bare his name (for one of his names was Edom) were all of them ſubdued by David, and brought under ſervitude, 2Sam.8. 14.

V.21. Canaanites] That name is ſometime taken generally for any one of the Land of Canaan, and ſometime ſpecially, as here, and Deut.7. 1. for a particular ſort of Canaanites, who for ſomething notable above the reſt retained the name of the whole Nation. See Annot. on Chap.13. 7. and Exod.3. 8.

CHAP. XVI.

Verſ.1. S*Arai bare him no children*] Thoſe whom God moſt favoureth, are not alwayes moſt fruitful, though the fruit of the womb be his reward, Pſal.127. 3. See verſ. 10.

V.2. reſtrained] She religiouſly acknowledgeth the reſtraint of her fruitfulneſſe to be from God, but faileth in binding Gods power to the common order of nature, as though he could not give her children in her old age.

V.3. her maid] Her bondwoman, Gal.4. 22. whom ſhe made choice of, rather then of a freewoman, becauſe of ſuch a one the iſſue ſhould be as hers, as Rachel ſaid of her hand-maid Bilhah, Gen.30. 3. Of ſuch adopted iſſue, ſee 2Sam.21. 8. Eſth. 2. 7.

gave her] Abraham ſet no affection upon her as a bed-fellow, before Sarai offered her for a wife; it was not then unlawfull luſt, but a deſire both of Abraham and Sarai, that he might be the father, though ſhe were not the mother of the promiſed ſeed; and this was practiſed by the Patriarchs in that time, though the firſt inſtitution were otherwiſe, Gen.2. 24. Mal.2. 15.

to be his wife] That is, in ſtead of a wife, as touching ſociety in the bed, but otherwiſe ſhe was inferior to a wife. See Annot. on Chap. 25. ver. 1.

V.4. And he went] The firſt promiſe God made to him, was for multiplication of his progeny, but he told him not how, and he ſeemed after long expectation to conceive, that it muſt be fulfilled by an adopted heir, Chap.15. 3. God tells him, ver.4. that he ſhould have an heir of his own loynes, and having no ſuch promiſe for Sarai, nor any hope by her contemned barrenneſſe, to have iſſue by her, he takes her offer for her maid, wherein they both failed through infirmity of faith.

deſpiſed] This puniſhment declareth what they gain, who attempt any thing againſt the Word of God; evill counſel proveth worſt to thoſe that give it; and for Hagar, we ſee in her a note of an ill condition, which is to be proud, and ſcornful, when ſhe ſhould have been more humble, and thankful. See Prov.30. 21.

V.5. My wrong bee upon thee] I ſuffer wrong by the inſolency of my handmaid, who hath ill requited my kindneſſe to thee, and her, and I muſt lay the blame upon thee, who ſhouldeſt make her to be of better behaviour towards me; or her wrong of me will be a wrong upon thee, ſince being one fleſh with thee by marriage, her contempt of one muſt needs turn to the diſparagement of both. Some take the words not ſo much for a complaint, as for a commination, as if Sarai ſhould threaten to be-meet with him, and to recompence his wrong with ſome ill requital; howſoever herein ſhe bewrayes more paſſion then either Religion or judgement, as the Iſraelites, Exod.5. 21. and the wife of Moſes, Exod.4. 26.

V.6. in thine hand] To correct her for her fault; though Sarai ſhewed too much wrath to her maid, and too little reverence to her huſband, yet he gives her the reſpect of a wife, and the authority of a miſtreſſe, without any return of intemperance, or contumely towards her.

hardly] Geneva, roughly. Heb. afflicted her. Correction given in anger, hath uſually more of rigour, then of right.

V.7. Angel] Which is Chriſt, as appeareth by verſ.10, 13. who is called an Angel, Exod.14. 19. & Chap.23. 20, 21, 23. Iſa.63. 9. Mal.3. 1. and who deſcended to the meaneſt in their miſeries, to adviſe and comfort them.

to Shur] that was a City in the way from Canaan to Egypt, Hagars native Countrey, according to her name which ſignifieth flying, Schindl. Pentaglot. Col.422. ſhe played the fugitive from her miſtreſſe, her pride, and impatience of correction made her ſet light by the beſt family in the world, and ſo in effect to excommunicate her ſelf from it, and in likelihood from Religion, to her Egyptian Idolatry.

V.9. Return] She ſhould not have left her place for the diſpleaſure of her miſtreſſe, Eccleſ.10. 4. nor have run away with her maſters child; but have ſubmitted to the correction which ſhe deſerved, 1Pet.2. 18. and that is the counſel which the Angel giveth her.

V.11. Iſhmael] His name was given him by an Angel, and it ſignifieth as ſome render it, the Lord ſhall hear; as others, the Lord hath heard; which is more agreeable to the reaſon rendred by the Angel for it, viz. becauſe the Lord hath heard thy affliction.

V.12. a wilde man] Or according to the Hebrew, a wilde aſſe man; That is, fierce and unruly, as a wilde aſſe among men; ſee Job.11. 12. & 39. 5, 8. Jer.2. 24. Hoſ.8. 9. A contentious man is like a wilde aſſe, without either wit, or manners; this is the condition of the Saracens the poſterity of the Iſhmaelites, who have their name from Saric, which in the Arabian Tongue ſignifieth a thief, *S*chindl. col. 423. Such eſpecially have their hands againſt every one for booty, and every ones hand againſt them for ſafety.

his hand will be] He will be a very quarrelſome man, ſhewing himſelf an enemy to many, and provoking many to be his enemies.

dwell in the preſence of all his Bretheren] So did Iſhmael, who is named with Iſaac, ch. 25. 9. as in a brotherly ſociety coming to the funeral of his father, Gen.25. 9. and dyed in the preſence of all his brethren, Gen. 25. 18. And for the Iſhmaelites (his poſterity) the meaning is, that they ſhall multiply, and inlarge their habitations about the borders of their brethren; who were ſome of them his brethren by the fathers ſide, as the ſons of Keturah the Midianites, and others his neer kinſmen, as the Idumeans, Ammonites, and Moabites.

V.13. have I alſo here looked] To have a Viſion of God, or revelation from God in her holy maſters family was no ſuch great marvell, as that here in the wilderneſſe God would vouchſafe ſo much grace to ſo unworthy an handmaid, ſo inſolent a ſervant to ſo gracious a miſtreſſe, ſo tranſported firſt with pride of her favour, and then with impatience of deſerved correction.

Looked after] That is, have I (after a viſion of God, who ſees me, and hath talked with me) power to look, and live? for the apparance of God, or of an Angel, was conceived to be a fore-runner of death: therefore theſe be words of wonder, that after that entercourſe betwixt God and her, ſhe yet liveth, which muſt ariſe by compariſon of mans ſinful frailty, with Gods omnipotent purity. See Gen.32. 30. Exod.24. 11. & 10. 1. & 33. 20. Deut.4. 33. & 5. 24. Jud.6. 22, 23. & Chap.13. 22. Eſay.6. 5. Luc.5. 8. Dan.10. 7, 8. Matth.17. 6. Hebr.12. 21.

V.14. Beer-lahai-roy] (i.) the well of the living that ſeeth me: Either becauſe the Angel of the living God ſaw her; or becauſe ſhe ſaw the Angel of the Lord, and yet lived: but the former Interpretation is rather to be received.

CHAP. XVII.

Verſ. 1. A*Lmighty*] The word is Shaddai, ſignifying Almighty; for God can do any thing, Job42. 2. The Geneva renders it alſufficient, and ſo muſt he needs be, who is Almighty; this is a good ground of Abrahams belief of all the promiſes of God, though in things above nature, or againſt it.

Before me] (Gen.48. 15. Pſal. 116. 9. 1 King.8. 25.) That is, whitherſoever thou goeſt, have me ſtill in thy thought to believe what I tell thee, and to do what I bid thee. See 1King.2. 4. & Chap.3. 6. 2 King.20. 3.

Be perfect] Or, upright and ſincere. The way to perfection is ſo to live with men, as to conſider God a looker on for all a man doth, and ſo to converſe with God, as if men were ſpectators of his moſt private actions. See Annot. in Chap. 6. 9.

V.2. Make my Covenant] That is, renew it, or eſtabliſh it, being made, as ver.7. Lev.9. 24. Ezek.3. 23. Dan.8. 17.

V.3. Fell on his face] Proſtrate adoration is not unſuitable to gratulation, or rejoycing. See ver. 17.

V.4. many nations] Heb. a multitude of Nations.

V.5. thy name ſhall be Abraham] (Ab ſignifieth Father; ram, high; ſo that Abram ſignifieth high Father: and the letter [he] inſerted, maketh the name to end in ham, and Ham is the firſt ſyllable of Hamon, ſignifying a multitude, and that multitude includeth many Nations, Rom.4. 17. the Gentiles, as well as the Iſraelites, and thoſe not only his natural iſſue, as the Iſhmaelites, Midianites, and Idumeans, but all true believers of what Nation ſoever, who are Abrahams children, Rom.4. 11, 12. So his name now ſignifieth a high Father of a multitude: yet is not this name ſo given him, that it ſhould be altogether unlawful to uſe the other, for we ſee the contrary, Nehem.9. 7. but it rather noteth Gods eſpecial favour, then preſcribeth a neceſſary rule for that appellation. Some take the giving of a new name, to note a Sacramental renovation in the new ſenſe of Circumciſion, which now was firſt added to the Covenant, and thence hath it been the practice of ſuch as profeſſe Religion, to give names to their children at their circumciſion. See Luk.1. 59. & Chap.2. v. 2.

V.7. God unto thee] I will exerciſe my perfections with eſpecial reſpect to thy protection, and comfort; and for thy ſake, to thy ſeed after thee. See Heb.8. 10. Revel.21. 3.

V. 8. unto thee] See Annot. in Chap.35. verſ.12.

everlaſting poſſeſſion] So Eſa.60.21. yet this was but upon condition of the peoples part of the Covenant, which is faith, and obedience, which broken by them, they enjoyed the Land but a little while, Eſa. 63.18. but to the repentant beleever, the promiſe is made good by an eternal inheritance, Heb.9. 15. 1 Pet.1. 4.

V. 10. Covenant] Circumciſion is called the Covenant, becauſe it is appointed by God as a Seal of the Covenant, and hath the promiſe of Grace joyned unto it; which is common to all Sacraments. See Exod. 12. 11. Matth. 26 18. Luk.22. 20. Col.2. 12. and as it is performed as a condition of the Covenant enjoyned by God, it is a Moral obedience; as exerciſed through faith in Gods promiſe, it is Sacramental.

V.11. man-child] Male-children were onely circumciſed, becauſe the beginning of generation is from that ſex, and ſo the original of corruption by generation, was rather male then female; yet ſerved it for a ſigne of that covenant to the female ſex, becauſe the woman is of the man, as the Apoſtle ſaith, 1 Cor.11. 8. and the females were accompted (as to this Sacrament) with reference to their fathers, or to their huſbands; ſo that to them (if they did believe and aſſent unto the Covenant, as God ordained it) may be applyed the ſaying of the Apoſtle, 1 Cor.7. 19. Gal.6. 15.

foreskin] To wit, of the genital part, which ſo ſoon as ſinne appeared, was for ſhame kept out of ſight, and which is not onely corrupt in it ſelf, but the means to conveigh corruption to another, which yet God can dignifie with an holy uſe, in a Sacramental ſenſe, and hereby upon this diſhonourable part he hath ſet ſo much honour, according to that of the of the Apoſtle, 1 Cor.12. 23. that many Nations have willingly taken up circumciſion, as an honour to themſelves; and the want of it, hath been ſometimes upbraided by way of contempt, as 1 Sam. 17. 36. The uſes of circumciſion were, partly, to diſtinguiſh Gods people from other nations, and to ſeparate them from them; ſo that unleſſe they would yeeld to that, they were to have little communion with them, Gen. 34. 15. Partly, to ſignifie the cutting off of concupiſcence, and the extirpation of ſin, Deut.10 16. & 30. 6. Jer.4. 4. Rom.2. 29. & 4. 11. Philip.3. 3. Col.2. 11. which cometh by that part, in propagation from man to man. And partly, to betoken the purity of the promiſed ſeed, who was to have mans nature, but without any corruption, which in ordinary generation is derived from it; and withal, not onely to be a ſigne of Gods Covenant with Abraham, and his ſeed, eſpecially the godly, but to be a Seal of the righteouſneſs of faith, Rom.4. 11. and remiſſion of ſins by the blood-ſhedding of the promiſed ſeed, Heb.9. 22. Some add, that it is a type of Baptiſm.

V. 12. he that is eight dayes old] Heb. a ſonne of eight dayes. Yet if the child were too weak to beare circumciſion, it might bee forborne till it were ſtronger; See Joſh. 5 verſ.5. 6. but ſooner then the eighth day the child was not to be circumciſed, leſt it ſhould be too weak to endure the pain; nor were young cattel to be offered until they had been nouriſhed ſeven dayes with the damme, Levit.22. 27. And it was better for the mother, who, by that time, might be in better caſe to beare her part of the ſeverity of that Sacrament, (viz. her motherly compaſſion for the pain of her child.) ſee on Levit 12. 3. Here is ground for Baptiſm of Infants; for Baptiſm ſucceedeth in the place of Circumciſion, as the Sacrament of admiſſion, or entrance into the Church Col.2. 12.

V. 13. He that is born in thy houſe] All the Males of Abrahams family, whether natives or ſtrangers, bond or free, muſt needs be circumciſed, ſo are the words of this verſe; which is to be underſtood of the children of ſtrangers, for none of them, if of age to conſent or diſſent, was to be compelled to be circumciſed, for Circumciſion was to be uſed but as a token of the Covenant, verſ.11. and he that was out of the Covenant (as all thoſe, who were not of Abrahams ſeed by the free-woman, were, unleſs they were Proſelites, and willingly betook themſelves to the profeſſion of the Religion of Abraham, and then they were Abrahams ſpiritual, though not his carnal poſterity) was kept out from Circumciſion alſo: upon this ground it is probably conceived, that neither Iſhmael nor Eſau, if they had been out of the families of their fathers, had been bound to receive Circumciſion.

everlaſting] The word Olam, or Ghnolam, in the Original, is ſometimes referred to the time paſt, as Deut.32. 7. remember the dayes of old. Remove not the ancient land marke, Prov.22. 28. The word rendred old, and ancient, is Olam, or Ghnolam in both places. Sometimes it is taken for the time to come, and that either for term of life, as Deut.15. 17. or for ſome long duration, determined by ſome notable change, or alteration of things; as the doors of the Temple are called everlaſting doors, Pſal.24. 9. by which the King of glory, that is, the Ark, with Gods eſpecial preſence between the Cherubims, 1 Sam.4. 4. was to enter; yet thoſe doors were deſtroyed with the Temple, and in the ruine of it, after the coming of Chriſt, was Circumciſion, and other ordinances of the old Prieſthood at an end; ſee Heb.7. 12. Chap. 8. verſ.9, 10. and the Covenant may be ſaid to be everlaſting, in reſpect of the ſpiritual part, for which Circumciſion was ordained; and in reſpect of the long continuance of the outward ceremony.

V. 14. cut off from his people] Which cutting off, may be conceived to be of three kinds; 1. By capital puniſhment by the Magiſtrate, on ſuch as were bound unto it, and did contemn it: 2. By excommunication of them, as not appertaining to the people of God. 3. By Divine judgement, where the former means were not, or could not with conveniency be uſed. But howſoever it fell out with offenders of full age, (for it is doubtful how this cutting off ſhould be underſtood) yet it cannot be meant of Infants; for though the Septuagint add to child [eight dayes old] that is not in the Hebrew Text, nor can they be ſaid to break the Covenant, who can do nothing that belongeth to the keeping of it; and the words from the original may be read thus, The male that doth not circumciſe the foreskin of his fleſh: that is, who could do it himſelf, or actually conſent to the doing of it by another, and would not: they then by whoſe default Circumciſion is omitted here, are threatned; and ſo we ſee that Moſes who ſhould have circumciſed his child, was in danger to be killed, not the child it ſelf, Exod.4 verſ.24, 25. Beſides, that the want of Circumciſion (except in caſe of contempt, or wilful neglect) was not ſo perillous and penal, (as to be puniſhed with cutting off) may appear by the omiſſion of it for fourty years in the wilderneſs, Joſh.5. 7. which is not yet reproved in the Scripture; and the Paſſeover preſcribed to bee kept the fourteenth day of the firſt moneth upon the ſame terms, as an Ordinance for ever, Exod.12. 14, 16. and on the ſame penalty, verſ. 15. might yet upon extraordinary occaſion, be put off until the fourteenth day of the ſecound moneth. Num.9. 10, 11. and was omitted, for the moſt part, during the Iſraelites journeying in the wilderniſs; for it was celebrated but once in fourty years, nor was to be eaten by any that was not circumciſed. There was then no ſuch neceſſity to ſalvation either of the one, or the other, as that damnation ſhould be the puniſhment of a mere omiſſion, eſpecially in Infants not capable, either of the command, or contempt; yet if any not circumciſed in his childhood, ſhould, when he were come to ripeneſs of years, refuſe the Sacrament, he would become guilty of the contempt of God in it, and ſo would deſerve to be cut off, either by the hand of the Magiſtrate, or by excommunication out of the Church, or by the Juſtice of God, as in the caſe of Moſes before mentioned; and if he continued in that contumacy, he deſerved to be cut off from all communion of the Saints, both on earth, and in heaven: The like commination is made for the breach of other temporary ordinances, as Exod.12. 15. & Chap. 32. 14. Levit.7. 20. & Chap 10. 6, 7, 9.

V.15. but Sarah] That name Sarai (as ſome expound it) ſignifieth my Lady, or Princeſſe, or in the plural number, my Princeſſes: they that gave her that name wiſht her much honor, and with her name, at leaſt in their affection, propheſied of it; but that name, having a term of reſtriction, my, is not ſo honourable, as that which is given her by God: For now as her huſbands name was changed, to note the multiplicity of his ſeed, ſo is hers for the ſame reaſon, I changed into H, the firſt letter of Hamon ſignifying multitude, for ſhe was to be a fruitful mother of much people, by the ſpreading of Iſaac's poſterity, her natural ſon; and by multiplying ſpiritual daughters, 1 Pet.3. 6. ſo that though ſhe was but a Lady of a particular family now, ſhe was to have a female preeminence of much larger extent and compaſs.

laughed] (Pſal.126. 2.) This laughing is of admiration at Gods favour, not of diſtruſt in his power, Rom.4. 19. 20. having hitherto found an indiſpoſition in his body to beget a child, and having been ſo long without, he could not but entertain the promiſe, by way of wonder and rejoycing; and in this rejoycing, his faith might reach as far as the joy of the Meſſiah, Luk.2. 10. for our Saviour ſaith, he ſaw his day and rejoyced in it, Joh.8. 56. and it might be ſtrange to him, that Sarah, whoſe preſent condition was paſt hope of conception, ſhould now bring forth; and that himſelf, having ſo long been onely an husband, ſhould now, and not before, begin to be a father, and that they both ſhould be fruitful in age, who in youth had been barren.

an hundred years old] His years at that age of the world ſeem not in themſelves to be any great impediment to procreation of children; and wee read long after this, that Cato the famous Cenſor was Father of a child at 80 years of age; and King Maſſiniſſa at 86 years, Plin. Nat. Hiſt.lib.7. cap. 14. But there was ſomewhat more in Abrahams caſe then meer age, to make the promiſe more admired, and that was, That he found an indiſpoſition of body to beget, as if (as to that purpoſe) it were dead, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, Rom.4. 19. If it be ſaid, that 37 years after this, when Sarah was dead and buried, his body was not ſo dead, but that he married again, and had ſix children by Keturah, Gen.25. 1, 2. It is true, and therein God might ſhew his power, in renewing his vigor as the youth of an Eagle, Pſal.103. 5. ſee on Chap.18. 11.

And ſhall Sarah] The matter was more ſtrange that Sarah now ſhould be a mother, then that Abraham ſhould be a father, (though the ſame reaſon be rendred for it, that is, the barrenneſſe of both, Rom.4. 19) for as females are marriageable ſooner then males, and ſo may be mothers younger then the male kind are fathers; ſo the virtue and power of conception in them ceaſeth ſooner then that of generation in men, as when they are about 50 years old, Plin. Nat. Hiſt. lib.7. cap.14. whereas it is uſual with men after that age to be fathers of children.

V.18. O that Iſhmael] His affection to Iſhmael, whom he knew, makes him leſſe glad of Iſaac, whom yet he knw not. Ignorance of better, makes many take up their content with the worſe; ſo, many embrace the preſent world with little longing after the future, though much more worthy both of deſire and endeavour, becauſe they have no acquaintance with it: yet Abraham ſheweth himſelf a pious and an indulgent Father, wiſhing that Iſhmael might live in Gods ſight, that is, in his favour, as in the light of his countenence, Pſal.4. 6. for favour is ſignified by ſight, as diſpleaſure by hiding of the eyes, Iſa.59. 2.

V. 19. call his name Iſaac] Which ſignifieth laughter, from his laughing, not from hers; for yet ſhe had not laughed at the promiſe: Or, he might have his name of laughter, for the joy that both of them might have by the birth of ſo hopeful a ſon.

everlaſting] See Annot. on v.13.

V.20. Twelve Princes] Gen.25. 16.

Verſ. 21. But my covenant] He promiſeth to Iſhmael a numerous and noble progeny of twelve Princes, ver.20. but his Principal bleſſing which is ſpiritual, he will ſettle upon Iſaac by ſolemn covenant.

V. 22. went up] He withdrew the demonſtrations of his eſpecial preſence; as Gen.35. 13. Judg.13.20.

V. 23. the ſelf ſame day] They were well inſtructed which ſo readily obeyed to be circumciſed without reſiſtance; Which thing declareth, that maſters in their houſes, ought to be as Preachers to their Families, that from the higheſt to the loweſt they may obey the Will of God. And it declareth likewiſe, that this Sacrament was at firſt eſtabliſhed by undoubted aſſurance of Divine Revelation; for if by any authority inferiour to that it had been propoſed, it would have been rejected with indignation and diſdain, as a thing both ſhameful and painful, and in reſpect of tender infants ſinful: no wiſe Father, nor tender-hearted mother, would ever have given conſent to ſhed the bloud of their little infant but of eight dayes old; but the majeſty of the Lord ſo appeared with the appointment, that Abraham and his Family were ſoon perſwaded to it.

V.24. ninety years old and nine] The age of Abraham is ſix ſeveral times exactly noted in the Scripture, Gen.12. 4. & 16. 3. and 21. 5. and 25.7. with the variations of increaſe; which ſheweth Gods vigilant providence over the perſons and paſſages of the faithful, and the eſtimation he hath of them in preſerving their memory, Pſal.112. 6. whereas the name of the wicked ſhall rot, Prov.10. 7.

V.25. thirteen years old] Hence the Arabians, as the poſterity of Iſhmael, going rather by example, then by rule, uſe Circumciſion, not the eighth day, but at the thirteenth year, Joſephus Antiq. lib. 1. at the end of Chap. 12. in ſome Editions, and at the beginning of the 13. in others.

V.26. was Abraham circumciſed] The circumciſion of Abraham and Iſhmael is eſpecially noted, as the chief of that great family: to ſhew, that thoſe, who are firſt in honour and preeminence, ſhould be moſt forward in obedience to Gods Ordinance, how difficult, or diſtaſtful ſoever it be.

V. 27. circumciſed with him] It is not ſaid by whom, it is not like that Abraham alone did circumciſe them all in one day, though (no doubt) he bore the principall part in that performance, both for the Sacrament it ſelf, and the religious inſtruction, and prayer belonging to it. The Modern Jews uſe Chirurgions in that ſervice, and ſome are eſpecially imployed therein, as Midwives for child-birth, who are known by the long and ſharpned nayles of their thumbs. Of the whole manner of Circumciſion, ſee Bux. Synag. Judæor. c.2. p.71, &c. two general circumciſions wee read of, and but two; this, and that, Joſ.5.

V.2. hee left up his eyes and looked, and loe.] See one Joſ.5. 13. and on Ezek 9. 1.

three men] That is, three Angels in mens ſhape, ſo they ſeemed to him, and as ſuch he entertained them; and ſo (though he knew it not) he had Angels for his gueſts, Heb.13. 2. and among them Chriſt, for he aſſuming an humane ſhape as the other two did, made one among them, and was the chief of them, as the title given to him, ver.3. 17. ſheweth: and he is called an Angel alſo, Mal.3. 1.

V. 2. towards the ground] He did them humble reverence after the manner of the Eaſtern Countreys.

V.3. Lord] Speaking to one of them, in whom appeared to be moſt majeſty, he calleth him Lord, and that truly; for he is indeed the Lord not only of men, but of Angels, Heb.1. 6.

V. 4. waſh your feet] For men uſed becauſe of the great heat to go bare-footed in thoſe parts, either altogether bare, or with ſandals which had ſoles below, but were open above, and faſtned to the foot with a buckle or lace: therefore it is noted by the Apoſtle for an act of charity to waſh the Saints feet, 1.Tim.5. 10.

V.5. a morſell of bread] He ſpeaks ſparingly, but intertains bountifully, verſ.6, 7. It is good to have our deeds exceed our words.

therefore are ye come] (Chap.19. 8. & 33. 10.) As directed to me by the ſpecial providence of God, to give me occaſion and opportunity to expreſſe my reſpect, and to do offices of charitable obſervance unto you. See Chap.19. 8. & 33. 10.

V. 6. unto Sarah] Though Sarah were a great woman, ſo great, as to be ſtyled Lady, or Princeſſe, having at leaſt three hundred and eighteen ſervants under her, yet ſhe is bidden to make ready meal, knead and bake cakes of it; and if ſhe did it not with her own hands, ſhe was (at leaſt) to overſee the doing of it in due manner, and with good diſpatch: A good example for great Ladies, that they do not think themſelves too great or too good to play the good huſwives. See Prov.31. from verſ.10. to the 24. and on 2.Sam.13. 6.

three meaſures] The leaſt meaſure among the Hebrewes, was of the quantity of an Hens egge, whereof twenty four make a Cab, and ſix Cabs are thought to be one of theſe meaſures.

fine meal] Well and curiouſly ſifted for the ſeparation of brans, and all the groſſer part of the corn when it cometh from the Mill.

V. 7. ran] This hoſpitality of Abraham is very commendable, not onely for the plenty of proviſion, and choyce of the beſt, but for the ſpeedy preparation.

V.8. eat] As God gave them bodies for a time, ſo he gave them the faculties thereof, to walk, to ſpeak, to eat, and drink, and ſuch like; yet what was let into the body in an extraordinary manner, might afterwards be reſolved into ayr; and what they did might not be ſo much by any natural faculties of thoſe bodies they aſſumed, as by a ſupernaturall application of thoſe parts they had to what they did; and though our Saviour ſay, Luke 24. 37, 38, 39. that a Spirit hath no ſuch parts as man hath, and therefore gives them ſenſible ſatisfaction by handling that he was no ſpirit, yet ſpirits might, and ſometimes did aſſume humane ſhapes.

V.9. Where is Sarah] This queſtion is moved not out of ignorance, but to take an occaſion by it for what was after to be ſaid, as Gen. 4. 9, 10.

V. 10. I will certainly return] Heb. returning I will return. By a viſitation of performance, as now of promiſe.

according to the time of life] (2King.4. 16. Rom 9. 9.) Some refer this to the Angel, as if he ſhould ſay; If I live, &c. but then it muſt be taken after the manner of men, for Angels die not. Or, according to the time of life, may import as much aſſurance of the thing, as of the life of an Angel, who is immortal; or, when the child ſhall come into this life by thy conception and delivery, wherein was an implicite promiſe both of the mothers and of the childs life alſo, this God could have effected preſently, but the would not haſten the pace of production before the ordinary time of bringing into life.

Sarah heard it in the tent door, which was behind him] It ſeemes by this time he was neerer the Tent then Abraham was, and ſtanding with his face towards Abraham without it, Sarah was at his back; being in the door of the Tent.

V. 11. well ſtricken in age] Though Abraham, being 99. years of age, was paſt the prime of his ſtrength, and ſo in a declining ſtate of body, and in reſpect of fruit as a dead tree in his own conceit, Rom.4. 19. (eſpecially, having continued childleſſe until this time) yet living to the age of 175 years, he was not ſo far decayed, as to be altogether unapt for the begetting of a ſon. See Annot. on Chap.17. 17.

manner of women] Who have helps to conception, which after that age do uſually ceaſe with that ſexe, though ſometimes they may continue longer, and ſome now and then conceive without them. Ariſt. hiſt. animal. lib 7.cap.2. and it is reported by Pliny, of one that bare a child at ſixty two years of age, *Plin. Nat. Hiſt. lib.7. cap.*14. Howſoever Sarah being of this age, and ſtate of body, the prediction of her childbearing, muſt needs be of Divine revelation, and the accompliſhment of it by a divine virtue.

V.12. laughed] Not as Abraham, did out of joy and admiration, Chap.17. 7. not as the wicked, by way of deriſion; but out of ſome diffidence, mingled perhaps with ſome degree of irreverence, by reaſon of her own defect of Faith, for ſhe rather had reſpect to the order of nature, then believed the promiſe of God: but this was at the firſt apprehenſion of the news, which then ſeemed to be more ſtrange, then true, but afterwards ſhe recollected her religious thoughts of God, and believed that which at firſt ſhe but admired, rather then believed. See Heb.11. 11.

within her ſelf] Secretly, which gave her confidence to deny what ſhe did, but that was ſoon turned into fear, when ſhe ſaw ſhe had to do with one that could diſcover what unto men was moſt concealed.

my Lord] Though ſhe failed of Faith in the promiſe, ſhe was not wanting in her due reſpect to her husband, whom in her heart ſhe honoured as her Lord, and not only termed him ſo in outward ſpeech, 1Pet.3. 6.

V. 14. too hard] See the Annot. on Chap. 17. 1. and Jer. 32. 17. Zach.8. 6. Luk.1. 37.

V. 15. ſhe was afraid] To her weakneſſe of Faith, ſhe addeth the telling of an untruth; and fearing to receive a rebuke, ſhe is not afraid to deſerve it by denying what ſhe did. Such failings of the godly are noted not for imitation, but for caution.

V. 16.* bring them on the way] *Act.20. 38. Rom.15. 24. 1Cor.16. 6, 11. Tit 3. 13.

V. 17. Lord] Jehovah, the Hebrew word ſheweth, that this Angel was Chriſt; for this word is onely applyed to God.

hide] As it is a part of friendſhip to have the ſame friends, and the ſame enemies, and to communicate in ſecret counſels, ſo God ſheweth that he taketh Abraham for his friend, 2Chro.20. 7. in both; for the former, ſee Gen. 12. 3. and for the later, this place is ſufficient evidence, where it appeareth, that God ſheweth himſelf as a familiar friend to his faithful and obedient ſervants, communicating unto them his ſecret counſels, Gen.6. 13. Pſal.25. 14. Amos 3. 7. Joh. 15. 15. They then, being ſo inſtructed of God, may well be wiſer then other men, Pſal.119. 98, 99. This Iudgment was the more meet to be revealed unto Abraham becauſe he was as to a chief member of the Church, and might and would thence give good documents, and inſtructions to his Church. Whereof God giveth him a very good teſtimony, v.19. and it was alſo to give him occaſion to exerciſe his charity and devotion in praying for the Sodomites.

V.19. I know] God knoweth not only what a man is, but what he ſhall be; not only what he doth, but what he will do; therefore we muſt not meaſure his dealings with men by mens rules or examples, who know no further then for the preſent.

he will command] (Gen.28.1. Deut.32.46. Prov.6.20) That which is here ſaid of Abraham, ſhould be done by every father of a family; who is ſo religiouſly to order his houſhold, as to make it like unto a Church: ſo it is like Philemon did, ver.2. Though the Church in his houſe might be alſo the Aſſembly of Chriſtians in the Primitive and perſecuting times of the Goſpel.

after him] The godly precepts of parents, and maſters, bind their children and ſervants to obedience when they are dead. See Jer.35 ver.16,19.

that the Lord may bring] Mans obedience is no meritorious cauſe, though it be a condition of Gods beneficence; his love is the root, the goodneſſe and good things of his children the fruit of it, Deut.4.37.

upon Abraham] The happy condition of poſterity redounds to the honour, and to the comfort of their progenitors; and ſo on the contrary, parents may be ſaid to ſuffer in their children, Mat.15.22.

V.20. The cry] The notice that God takes of ſin is figuratively ſet out by a great cry or noyſe that cannot but be heard; be the ſin never ſo ſecret or ſilent, he knowes it as well as that which is moſt open and clamorous. See chap.4.10. Exod.3 7. and 22.23,27 Jer.5.4.

Sodome and Gomorrah] There were two Cities more deſtroyed with fire and brimſtone, but he nameth only theſe two, as being more notable for eſtate and greatneſs, and more notorious for lewdneſs: they were guilty of other ſins beſides theſe expreſſed in this ſtory. See Ezek.16.49.

V.21. I will go down] (Gen.11.5. Exod.3.8. Mic.1.3.) God ſpeaketh after the manner of men, to let them know, that he taketh eſpecial notice of notorious ſinners, and will take a courſe to puniſh them; and to ſet them an example to enter into Judgment with good advice, as Job ſaith of himſelf, The cauſe which I knew not, I ſearched out, Job 29.16. But God knoweth all things preſently, without ſearching, though never ſo ſecret; certainly, without erring, though never ſo doubtful, in reſpect of men. See Chap.2.19.

cry] Our ſins cry for vengeance, though none accuſe: it is a figurative phraſe, importing that God is much provoked before he puniſh, Jon.1.2. See Annot. on ver.20.

V.22. Stood yet before] Abraham by this time knew him, whom he talked with, to be God, to whom he ſueth, as to the Judg of all the world; and he taketh it upon him, and anſwereth, as having the power of God to ſave, and to deſtroy; when the other two, that were with him, were gone before toward Sodom.

V.23. The righteous] (Ezek.9. and Chap.21.3.) That is, ſuch as his Nephew Lot, or others who were not guilty either by act, or approbation of thoſe hainous crimes, which called for vengeance upon that ſinful City.

V.25. Shall not the Judge] And in this negative queſtion is emphatically implyed an Affirmative poſition, which is, that God, above all others, muſt and will do right, becauſe from his judgement there is none appeal. See Job 8.3. and 34.17. Rom.3.6.

V.27. Duſt and aſhes] Duſt, by the baſeneſſe of his original, and end, for his bodily part, Gen.3.19. and aſhes, as deſerving to be burned to aſhes, if God ſhould deal with him rather in juſtice then in mercy: of this he is the more apprehenſive, by his neerer approach unto God. See Iſai.6.5. Luk.5.8.

V.32. This once] If God refuſed not the prayer for the wicked Sodomites, even to the ſixth requeſt, how much more will he hear the prayers of the godly for the afflicted Church? In this interceſſion of Abraham, his charity, his humility, his modeſty, his fervency and importunity, excellent qualifications for a petitioner to God, are worthy to be obſerved and uſed in prayer. It is to be noted, that he prayeth not for Lot in particular, not doubting but God would ſet him in ſafety from puniſhment, as well as he had kept him from ſociety in ſ[illegible]. See ver.23.

ten] He ſpeaks of Sodom only, (and in Sodom (as ſome conceive) with eſpecial reſpect to Lots family) which had moſt provoked God to wrath, and which for Lots ſake he deſired moſt to be ſpared. God decla[illegible]h that his judgements were done in great mercy, for as much as all were ſo corrupt, that not only not fifty, but not ten righteous men could be found there, and alſo that the wicked are ſpared for the righteous ſake. See Gen.12.3. Jer.5.1. Iſai.65.8. yet theſe be acts of eſpecial grace, granted to great Favourites, as Abraham was; but are not to be drawn into a general rule, Ezek.14.18. and 21.8. the favour here to Sodom, is denyed to Jeruſalem.

CHAP. XIX.

Verſ. 1. T*Wo Angels*] Two of the three which were with Abraham wherein we ſee Gods provident care in preſerving his, albeit he reveal not himſelf to all alike; for Lot had but two Angels, Abraham three that appeared unto him, and were entertained by him, Gen.18.2. of which three, one was God, or the Son of God, called an Angel, Mal.3.1. though in the reſemblance of man; who ſtayed with Abraham, while the other two went toward Sodom, Chap.18.22. to deſtroy it, ver.13. of this Chapter.

in the gate] As Abraham at his Tent door, Chap.18.1. where he might beſt obſerve who were the meeteſt objects for charitable entertainement, eſpecially ſtrangers, who at this time of the day (that is, evening) were either to take up their lodgings, or to abide in the ſtreets all night.

V.3. Preſſed upon them greatly.] That is, prayed them inſtantly.

turned in] In the precedent verſe they ſaid they would abide in the ſtreet all night; and they meant ſincerely ſo to have done, if Lots importunity had not preſſed them to turn in to him; for a ſlight invitation may be ſeriouſly refuſed, and that which is ſerious and urgent accepted afterwards, and that without either hypocriſie in the one, or levity in the other. See the like, Luke 24.28,29.

eat] See the Annot. on Chap.18.8.

V.4. Old and young] All the people; nothing is more dangerous, then to dwell where ſin reigneth, for it corrupteth all: See Exod.16.2. Jer.9.4. and 32.32. Ezek.14.5. Nah.3.1. therefore it is better to ſtay all night in the ſtreets as the Angels ſpake, ver.2. then to take up a lodging with ſuch lewd hoſtes as the Sodomites were. And here we ſee that community in conſent, is no good argument of a good cauſe, for the whole City is aſſembled for a moſt wicked purpoſe againſt godly Lot, and his heavenly gueſts.

V.5. Know them] The Scripture in this word, knowing, modeſtly intimateth a moſt immodeſt meaning, not fit to be mentioned in plain terms, See Gen.4.1. Numb.31.17. Judg.19.22. This ſin is from theſe men (men in ſhape, though worſe then beaſts in their luſts, as the angels in humane appearance were better then men) called Sodomy, (as the buying of ſpiritual things from Simon Magus his offer, Act.8.18. is called Simony) and it is an abuſe of either ſexe againſt Nature: ſee Levit.18.22. and 20.13. Rom.1.23,24. wherein the Sodomites were moſt impudent, Iſa.3.9. and to their impudence was added violence, as by thoſe ſons of Belial, Judg.19.22.

V.7. Brethren] Not by blood, or affinity, nor by profeſſion of Religion; but by community of nature, and vicinity of dwelling. In this courteous compellation, and ſubmiſſive ſupplication to thoſe, who were diſpoſed to do the fowleſt deeds that could be, he ſhewed his patience and his prudence; when many are vehemently bent againſt one, ſmooth words muſt ſerve in ſtead of rough reſiſtance; this is according to the Apoſtles counſel, 2 Tim.2.25.

V.8. Daughters] He deſerveth praiſe in defending his holy and honourable gueſts from diſhonourable violence, and violation of their purity; but he is to be blamed for ſeeking unlawful means: for we may not do evil that good may come thereof, Rom.3.8. and it was the more evil, becauſe his daughters were betrothed, and in a manner married, ver.14. though yet virgins, ver.8. and howſoever it had been more ſhame in the Sodomites to offer that abuſe to his gueſts, it was more ſinne in Lot to offer to proſtitute his daughters to their brutiſh and boundleſs luſts. Some think he made this motion, making account that ſuch an offer would qualifie them ſo, as to take them off from both; as if one ſhould pacifie an enraged man againſt a third perſon, by offering a dagger to kill himſelf, to ſpare the other; or as Reuben, Chap.42.37. See Judg.19.24.

for therefore] That I ſhould preſerve them from all injury; that was Lots intent in his invitation, and thereto they yeelded their conſent, as if they came of purpoſe to put themſelves under his protection.

V.9. Judge] When the godly do but their duty, the wicked impute unto them uſurpation above right, Exod.2.14. 2 Chron.25.16.

Worſe] The wicked become worſe by that which ſhould make them better, and from ſhameleſs impudence, proceed to fearleſſe violence.

V.11. With blindneſs] Which though it were univerſal as the ſin was, yet it was not total; for it ſeems they could diſcern the houſe, but not the door, as the Aramites, who had but a dim or confuſed ſight, when they followed the Prophet they knew not whither, 2 Kings 6.18. The ſame word that is here uſed for blindneſs, (or blindneſſes in the plural number, becauſe of the number of thoſe that were blind, or the extraordinary manner of the blindneſs it ſelf) is uſed but once more in the Scripture, that is 2 Kings 6.18. for the blindneſſe of the Aramites, who had ſuch a glimmering of ſight, that they could follow the Prophet, though they did not diſtinctly diſcern who he was, or the way they went, or the City where they were: See Mark 8.24. Luke 24.16. Act.13.11. See on Eccleſ.5.7. And the blindneſſe might be occaſioned by the Angels repreſentation of the door as a continued wall, or of another figure than appeared before, or by thickning and darkning the air, that it could not clearly convey the ſpecies to the eye, or by weakning the eye ſight, or troubling the common ſenſe, that it could not plainly diſtinguiſh of the objects preſented unto it, which ſometimes we may diſcern in drunkards, who have their eyes open, and yet do not diſtinctly diſcern what is ſet before them. The Sodomites eyes being before (as Saint Peter ſpeaketh) full of adultery, 2 Pet.2.14. that cannot ceaſe from ſin, but ſtill luſtfully gazing after beauty without diſtinction of male or female, were juſtly and ſutably puniſhed in this ſort.

V.12 Sons in law, or ſons] They mention theſe ſeveral titles, to note how gracious Lot was, that for his ſake thoſe that pertained to him, under what relation ſoever, ſhould be preſerved, if they would be warned of the danger; but it ſeemeth Lot had no ſons of his own, elſe he would have ſpoken to them as well as to his ſons in law, verſ.14. whether he had other daughters then thoſe two, whom he offered to the Sodomites as pure virgins, ver.8. may be doubted; if he had not, theſe ſons in law were not yet eſpouſed to them, becauſe they were virgins,and the word [married] ver.14. may according to the Original be rendred [taking his daughters] that is, about to take, as well as had taken them to wife, or ſhould marry (as ſome Tranſlations vary the reading) See Deut.22. verſ.23,24. and Gen 38.11,14. and Mat.1. ver.18,19,20 & 25. and theſe eſpouſals were uſeful and commendable preparatives before the conſummation of marriage.

V.15. VVhich are here] Which phraſe doth not neceſſarily imply that Lot had other daughters elſewhere, for which are here, or found, is according to the Hebrew word,no more then which.

iniquity] Or, puniſhment. So neer of kin are ſin and puniſhment,that the one followeth the other, as the effect doth the cauſe, and that one name may ſerve to ſignifie both: ſee Gen.4.7,13.

V.16.Laid hold] The mercy of God ſtriveth to overcome mans ſlowneſs in following his calling. See Joh.6.44.

V.17. He ſaid] That is, neither of the other two Angels, but he who ſtaid behind with Abraham, while they went toward Sodom, Chap.18.22. who now in their return met them, and made himſelf known to Lot, as the paſſage betwixt them in the enſuing verſes ſhews.

look not behind] (Matth. 24.18. Luke 9.62.) The words though particularly ſpoken to Lot, were (as the event ſheweth, verſ. 26.) directed to the reſt, who were ſo far to renounce the delights, and to deteſt the lewdneſs of Sodom,and to make ſo much haſte from it, as not to vouchſafe a look towards it.

eſcape,leſt] Humane means is not to be contemned, though the deliverance be of divine grace. See ver.12. and Rev.18.4.

Ver.18.Not ſo] (Act.10.14.)Lots infirmity of faith,and his fearfulneſs here appears,which makes him ſpeak as if he ſaw a better way of ſecurity to himſelf then God had ſhewed him.

V.19. I cannot eſcape.] See Annot.on v.22.

V.20. A little one] A place for the ſmalneſs of it of no great importance, but to be made an example of vengeance. The name of the City, Zoar, or Tſoar, ver.22. ſignifieth little; and being ſo, it is like there was the leſſe ſin,and the more ſafety;and it was but a little way off, and ſo Lot might be ſooner there then at the mountain.

V.22.I cannot]Becauſe Gods commandment was to deſtroy the Cities, and ſave Lot; it was thus decreed by God, and thus it needs muſt come to paſſe; wherein appears how much the wicked are beholding to the godly for their company, and how much the godly are bound to God for his benignity. See Iſai.65.8.

Zoar] Which before was called Bela,Chap.14.2.

V.24. Sodom and Gomorrah] And the neighbour Cities, Jer. 49.18. to wit, Admah and Zeboim; mentioned as examples of Gods wrath,Hoſ. 11.8. all four are named together as partners in the ſame puniſhment, Deut.29.23.

brimſtone and fire] A fit puniſhment for ſo horrible a ſin; the ſtink of brimſtone,and the heat of fire, anſwering to the noyſomneſs and burning of ſuch uncleanneſs; ſee Rom.1,27. a ſin ſo contrary to God and man, that nature here ſeems to be inverted to puniſh it, and the pains of hell to come down from heaven, fire, contrary to its nature, deſcending, and rain,contrary to its nature,not quenching, but burning where it fell.

from the Lord] That is, from himſelf, after the Hebrew phraſe, putting the Noun for the Pronoun, as Gen.1.27. and 2 Chron. 7.2. and this ſhewing that this fierce vengeance came not from any inferiour, but from the ſupreme cauſe, even God himſelf. They who underſtand this place ſo, that the Lord raining from the Lord, ſhould be meant of God the Son, raining from God the Father, ſhew an attentive mind to the doctrine of the Trinity; but hence to argue for that point againſt the Jewes, or Anti-trinitarians is not ſo proper, ſince they may alledge, there is an Hebraiſm in the phraſe, whereby the Noun is uſed for the Pronoun, (as hath been ſaid and ſhewn out of Scripture:) therefore the Syrmian Councel, which anathematizeth thoſe that deny this place for a proof of the Trinity, was rather raſh then truly Religious. See Caranz. Sum. Concil.f.9. p.b. in duodecimo. See Zech.3,2.

V.25. And all the plain] Which had five Cities in it, Sodom, and Gomorrah, Admah, and Zeboim, and Zoar, whereof all, but the laſt and the leaſt, were conſumed by the miraculous judgement, ver.21. See Deut.19.23. which made the Lake Aſphaltites, called the dead Sea, becauſe no living creature is nouriſhed in it, or the Salt Sea, ſee Annot. on chap.14.3.This Lake or Sea is in breadth,about five or ſix miles; in length, about four or five dayes journey; of which memorable and horrible things are reported by Joſephus de Bello Judaico, lib.5. cap.5. Juſtine the Hiſtorian, lib.36.cap.3. Plin. Nat. Hiſt. lib.5. cap.16. and Adrich.Delph.Theatr. ter. Sanct. in the Tribe of Judah, pag.52. num.186. pag.44.num.66, and in particular, he reporteth that there are trees bearing fruit, faire without, and but with a touch falling into aſhes; the like is teſtified by Solinus, *cap.*48. and by Joſephus in the place fore-cited. So doth God turne a fruitful land into barrenneſſe for the wickedneſſe of them that dwell therein, Pſal. 107.24.

V.26. Looked back] As too much minding the wicked City,or too little heeding the prohibition of God, who was to be obeyed to a glance or look of the eye, though that glance would have ſaved thoſe Cities.

Pillar of Salt] That place is noted for ſalt, as well as for brimſtone Gen.14.3. and Deut.29.23. This change was made as touching her bodyonly; ſome think ſhe was ſtruck dead with lightning, and that her body was hardned, and fixed in the place where it ſtood, and that it was of a ſalt and brackiſh ſmell, and therefore was called a Pillar of ſalt. But Joſephus, according to the letter of the Text, ſaith, ſhe was turned into a pillar of ſalt. Antiq.lib.1. cap.12. and that he hath ſeen it, and that it remained unto the day wherein he writ the report of it: and Plin.Nat.Hiſt.lib.31.cap.17. maketh mention of ſalt ſo hard, as to ſerve for ſlate for the building of houſes, and to hold out againſt all meanes of melting. Howſoever this change was a notable monument of Gods vengeance (to all that paſſed that way) for perpetual memory thereof; for ſalt preſerveth things from periſhing and putrefaction, therefore a perpetual Covenant is called a Covenant of ſalt, Num.18.19. 2 Chron.13.5. and we muſt keep this judgment in memory, for a caveat againſt Apoſtaſie in the leaſt degree, by vertue of our Saviours memorandum,Luk.17.32.

V.29. Remembred Abraham] It is not unlike that Abraham made particular interceſſion for Lot, at leaſt, that he had him in his mind when he prayed for Sodom; the prayer of one faithful perſon availes much for another,Philem.22. And Lot had the more need of Abrahams prayer, becauſe, for his living among the wicked, (when he might have done otherwiſe) he deſerved to be made partaker of the temporal puniſhment.

V.30. Mountain] He was bidden before, verſ. 17. to flye to the mountain, but refuſed, and made choice of Zoar as more ſafe; now he is afraid of Zoar, and flyeth for refuge to the mountaine. Want of faith in God, and obedience to God, makes us fickle and unſtable,as Jam.1.8.

feared to dwell in Zoar, and dwelt in a cave] His fear might be, leſt Zoar might be guilty of the ſame ſins for which Sodom was conſumed; or, that he as a noted oppoſite to the Sodomites, ſhould be accuſed as ſome cauſe of their calamity; for the wicked are very forward in criminal charges againſt the godly; witneſs the complaints of the Heathens againſt the ancient Chriſtians, to whom was imputed whatſoever miſery, whether from the hand of God or man, befel mankind. See chap.19.9.

V.31. Not a man] Meaning in the Country which the Lord had now deſtroyed; being ſhut up in a cave, they expected no acceſs of others unto them, elſe from the mountain they might diſcern Zoar remaining, and might (but that their minds were troubled) have thought of their Uncle Abraham, and his numerous family, who lived out of the compaſs of this terrible deſolation, though not very far from the places that were deſtroyed. See ver.28.

V.32. Drunk] For Lot would never have done that abominable act if he had not been overcome with wine, which might make him forget what was become of his wife, and ſo cauſe him not to doubt but that ſhe was in his bed.

V.33. Perceived not] Drunkenneſs drowns both the underſtanding, ſenſe and conſcience. See ver.35.

V.34. This night alſo] Lot offended againſt the chaſtity of both his daughters, in offering them up unto the Sodomites, and they now conſpire againſt his chaſtity; ſo is he puniſhed in the ſame kind,wherein he offended; which is juſt as from God, though evil in them; ſee Judg.1. 7. 1 Sam.15.33. 1 King.20.19.

V.36. VVith child] Thus God permitteth him to fall moſt horribly in the ſolitary mountaines, whom the wickedneſs of Sodom could not overcome; God ſuffers ſuch commixtions to take effect, whiles he makes more lawful conjunction fruitleſs, for the greater ſhame of the fact.

V.37. Moab] Signifieth of the father,or,according to the meaning, a ſon begotten by my father. See Annot on ver.38

Moabites] Who, as they were borne of horrible inceſt, ſo were they and their poſterity vile and wicked: ſee Numb. 21, 29. and Chap. 25. verſ. 1,2,3. yet of them came virtuous Ruth, Ruth 3. 11. and of her was our bleſſed Saviour lineally deſcended, Mat.1.5. So can God out of the corrupteſt ſtock produce the moſt pleaſant and wholeſom fruit.

V.38 Ben-ammi] That is, Son of my people: ſignifying by this, and the former name Moab, verſ.37. that they rather rejoyced in their ſin, then repented for it: Or, rather in their fruitfulneſſe then in their offence, for they minded not carnal pleaſure ſo much as the propagation of poſterity, and to preſerve ſeed of their religious father: In whoſe example we ſee many proofs of humane infirmity, as his inconſiderate offer of his daughters to the Sodomites, his feeble faith touching his ſafety, firſt in the mountain, then in Zoar, his drunkenneſs and inceſt, though without his knowledg, which are recorded for Caution againſt preſumption; for in many things we ſin all, ſaith Saint James, Jam.2.8. and againſt indiſcreet imitation of the examples of the beſt, which we muſt take but with limitation, 1 Cor.1.11. and for conſolation of thoſe that offend of frailty; for notwithſtanding his diſtruſt, and in part diſobedience, his ſuit was accepted, ver.21. and after the worſt of all this, the Holy Spirit maketh this honourable mention of him,God delivered juſt Lot,vexed with the filthy converſation of the wicked,2 Pet.2.7.

CHAP. XX.

Verſ.1. THence] That is, from the Plain of Mamre, where he entertained the Angels,Chap.18.1. and where he had abode above fourteen yeers; he removed thence,haply becauſe the aire was leſſe wholeſome, being neer that noiſom ſulphurious Lake, which was a memorial of Gods vengeance on thoſe wicked Cities deſtroyed by fire and brimſtone. The diſtance betwixt the two places, is meaſured to ſix leagues

Kadiſh and Shur] Two deſarts. See chap.16.7,14.

Gerar] The name both of a Country and City of the Philiſtines, bordering upon the Southern part of Canaan.

V.2. Said of Sarah] That is, to thoſe that asked of him.

my ſiſter] Abraham had now twice fallen into this fault; ſuch is mans frailty, that the beſt may fall into the ſame fault more then once. So Jehoſaphat, though reproved by Jehu for joyning in league with wicked Ahab, 2 Chron.19.2. did again do the like in his confederacy with Ahaziah, and was again reproved by another Prophet, 2 Chron.20.37. See Annot. on Chap. 12.13.

Abimelech] A name uſual among the Kings of Paleſtine, as Pharaoh with the Kings of Egypt; it is compounded of benignity and authority, ſignifying a Father and a King; for Rulers (and among them Kings are the chief) are Fathers to ſuch as are ſubordinate to them, as 2 Kings 5.18. Job 29.16. and under that title they are to be honoured by the fifth Commandment; and hereby is implyed that they muſt rule with indulgence, as Fathers; and their ſubjects obey with benevolence, as children.

V.3. Dream] Dreams for the moſt part, proceed of multitude of buſineſſe, or thoughts of the day, Eccleſ. 5.3. Or from the temperament of the body, or diſpoſition of the mind; but ſometimes they are ſent of God, though very rarely; and when they are ſo, they are for the moſt part imparted to holy perſons, and for holy and weighty reaſons; and they bring their evidence and aſſurance with them, that they are no illuſions of Satan, or of vain fancy or fiction, as thoſe reproved by the Prophet Jeremiah, Chap 23. ver.25,27. And hereby God hath a pre-eminence above all humane teachers, for they can teach only ſuch as are awake, whereas he can inſtruct ſuch as are aſleep in their dreams, and thereby he can work both the conviction and converſion of a ſinner See Chap.20.3.

dead] This was ſaid to him, when Gods hand was upon him in the plagues he ſent upon him and his houſhold, which were not deadly; but now to prevent the accompliſhment of his purpoſe, and the further puniſhment due unto it, God cometh upon him with this commination; which ſheweth how greatly God doth deteſt the breach of marriage: This death was deſerved by that he had done already, and purpoſed to do; and had been certainely inflicted, if he had perfected his ſin. See ver.7,8. ſee alſo Chap.2.17. and Joh.3.v.18. Exod. 12.33.

V.4. Not come neer] He was kept at a modeſt diſtance from her by Gods reſtraining power, ver.6.

righteous Nation] Here he confeſſeth that God would not puniſh, but upon juſt cauſe, and conceiveth that the plague which his family felt, was for his ſake inflicted upon his other ſubjects, as well as on them: and in both theſe he judgeth rightly, for God never puniſheth, but provoked by precedent ſin, and when he is provoked, many times he makes the ſubjects ſmart for the ſins of the Rulers: whereof there is example, not only in the Scripture, as here, and Chap. 34.24. and 2 Sam.24.17. but in humane ſtories, and yet he accounts himſelfe and his people righteous, becauſe they knew not Sarah to be a wife.

V. 5. Integrity of my heart] As one falling by ignorance, and not doing evil of purpoſe, nor thinking to any one any harme; or not meaning to enjoy her otherwiſe then as his lawful wife, though he had one before, ver.17. for Polygamy was not taken for a ſin in thoſe dayes.

V 6. I with-held thee] God maketh the reſtraint of ſinne, Geneſ. 31.7. and 1 Sam.25.26. and the hearts of Kings are in his hand, Prov. 21.1. and he doth it ſometimes by ſecret inſtinct, ſometimes by open inſtruction, and ſometimes by divine correction, as in this place.

from ſinning] If Abimelech had lyen with Sarah, though he knew not that ſhe had an husband, he had ſinned; for ignorance, though it be an excuſe in part, doth not excuſe from the whole, Luke 12.48.

againſt me] Though the ſin were immediately againſt Abraham's right, and Sarah's chaſtity, yet God having forbidden all unlawful actions, he cannot ſin againſt man, but he muſt ſin againſt God. See Gen.39 9. Lev.6 2. Pſal.51.4.

V.7. Reſtore] Reſtitution of that which is unlawfully taken, muſt be made before ſin be remitted, or puniſhment removed. See Lev. 6.4,7.

a Prophet] That is, one to whom God revealeth himſelf familiarly; and by the Spirit of Propheſie he did foreſee Chriſt many hundred years before he was borne, Joh. 8.56. and no doubt as a true Prophet did foretell and inſtruct others concerning his coming in the fleſh, therefore do him no harm, Pſal.105.15. He reproveth Kings for their ſakes, ſaith the Pſalmiſt, alluding to this of Abimelech and Abraham and thou ſhalt live.] A godly mans prayer is a ſoveraign cure of the Kings Evil, 1 King.13.6. whereby the pooreſt Chriſtian may gratifie the greateſt King.

all that are thine] One ſin of one man, eſpecially of a publick perſon, may raiſe Gods wrath to the ruine of many, 2 Sam. 24.17. wherein (though as from God they may juſtly ſuffer for their own ſins) their ſuperiours are puniſhed, in regard of their intereſt in them, and participation with them.

V.9. Offended thee] To bring one to ſin is rather an act of grudge, then of reſpect and love. See Rev.2.14.

On my kingdom] See Annot. on ver.7.

V.11. Fear of God] He ſheweth that no honeſty can be hoped for where the fear of God is not. See Geneſ.42.18. and Prov. 16.6.

V.12. My ſiſter] By ſiſter he meaneth his neer kinſwoman; for ſo the Hebrews uſe theſe words, ſee Gen.13.8. and ſhe is thought to be the ſame with Iſcah, the daughter of Haran, Abrahams brother, Gen. 11.28,29 Of ſuch marriages, ſee Annot. on Chap. 11. 29. and on Lev.18.14.

the daughters of, &c.] That is, my fathers grand-child (for grand-children are reputed as ſons and daughters, Chap. 31. 28. Exod. 2. 18.) but not the grand-child of my mother, becauſe it is like, his brother Haran and he had divers mothers, though the ſame father.

V.16. A covering of the eyes] Moſt Commentators complain of the difficulty of this place, which is covered or vailed over with ambiguity of the Pronoun Hu, and of the Noun Cheſeph; the former word is rendred as, referring to the gift of a King, or to the perſon of Abraham; and the word Cheſeph, is tranſlated (by the beſt Hebricians) pieces of ſilver; and thoſe pieces ſome will have to be very little pieces of ſilver, ſome half a ſhekel, ſome a whole ſhekel; hence the ſenſe may be, referring Hu to the gift, that with that money (if it were a ſmal price like the Spaniſh Marevedines) whereof forty make up the price of a Roman penny, Marian. de ponderibus & menſuris, cap.23. p, 119) ſhe might buy her a veile; as it it were half a ſhekel or a whole one, it might buy her many veiles from time to time, as ſhe ſhould have occaſion to uſe variety or new ſupply; and it is probable it might be ſhekels, (or ſome coyn of value) both becauſe he was a King that beſtowed the gift, who was like to be more leberal then another man; and becauſe the obſervation of ſome concerning the word Cheſeph, (which ſignifieth ſilver) is, that when it is named alone it ſtands for a ſhekel; as Numb.7.86. as where ſhekel is ſet down, and the metal not expreſſed, it is meant of ſilver, and not of any other metal; as Exod. 30. ver.13,15. compared with Exod. 38.25,26. and ſo this with the ſheep, oxen, men-ſervants, and maid-ſervants given to Abraham by Abimelech, with liberty to live where he liked in his Land, was as well a royal munificence, as a reaſonable recompence for the wrong done unto him. Of ſhekels, ſee Annot. on Chap. 23.15. And the uſe of the veile ſome conceive to be to conceal her beauty, (that others might not be tempted by it:) others, that by wearing of a veile ſhe ſhould profeſſe her ſelf a married woman, (as Rebekah, Chap. 24. 65. See 1 Cor.11.10. and ſo might not be miſtaken and ſolicited as a ſingle woman, as now ſhe was thought to be by Abimelech, ver. 5. and by Pharaoh before, Chap.12.ver.15) Others, ſhamefaſtly to cover her ſelf, becauſe her deceit was now detected. Others, to make her ſo brave and glorious, as to caſt a kind of awful fear on beholders, that they might not, (at leaſt any of the vulgar ſort) preſume to violate her chaſtity. Of theſe the two firſt Expoſitions are worthy of the firſt place, for probability and appearance of truth, and pertinency to the words of Abimelech; But if we refer the word Hu, to the perſon, it importeth, that by owning and acknowledging ſo worthy a man for her husband, the reverent regard of him ſhould ſtand betwixt her, and the eyes of wantons; ſo that ſhe ſhould be thereby as veyled, or covered as with a veyl, that they could not ſee her, at leaſt they would not luſtfully look upon her with any hope to enjoy her.

Unto all that are with thee, and with all] There is no more in the Hebrew Text; therefore for ſupplement of the ſenſe the word other, or elſewhere is to be added; the meaning is, that ſhe muſt make uſe of her veyle in their company with whom ſhe commonly converſeth, that they may not have ſuch a full view of her beauty as may invite their concupiſcence to deſire it; and when ſhe goeth abroad where ſhe is not known, ſhe muſt put on her veyl, where ſhe may neither be luſtfully looked on, nor others deceived, as Abimelech was.

reproved] God cauſed this heathen King to reprove her, becauſe ſhe diſſembled, ſeeing God had given her an husband as a veyl and defence; and ſhe was reproved, not only by words, but by deeds; for his integrity compared with her deceitful and dangerous enſnaring of her ſelf and him, makes her the worthier of rebuke; eſpecially if he be conſidered as an heathen King, ſhe as a profeſſor of the right faith and religion, and the wife of a Prophet.

V.18. Cloſed up] So that (as many obſerve) ſuch as were not with child could not conceive, and they that were with child could not bring forth; but there was ſomewhat more in this plague then this; for if that were all, it could not ſo ſoon be obſerved as a common chaſtiſement; and this was ſo both to male and female, for it was upon Abimelech, as well as upon his wife, or other women, verſ. 17. It is like then thoſe paſſages of nature which appertain to generation and conception, were ſo ſhut up, that men and women could not but with pain, and without hope of iſſue company together. Thus is barrenneſs ſometimes the puniſhment of incontinency, whereof there is a memorable example in Solomon, whoſe thouſand female bed-fellows left him but one ſon, Rehoboam, to reign in his ſtead, and him ſuch a one as was nothing like his father, either in prudence or proſperity.

CHAP. XXI.

Verſ. 1. VIſited] Viſiting is ſometimes taken for ſome actual evidence of Gods gracious promiſe, or providence to thoſe he loveth. See Exod.4 31. Ruth 1.6. as the Lord viſited Hannah, ſo that ſhe conceived and bare three ſons, 1 Sam 2.21. And as for production, ſo for preſervation, Thou haſt granted me life, and favour, and thy viſitation hath preſerved my ſpirit, Job 10.12. And it is uſed not only of temporal, but of ſpiritual favours, as of that moſt gracious miſſion of the Meſſiah our bleſſed Saviour, of which it is ſaid in the Song of Zachariah He hath viſited and redeemed his people, Luke 1.68. And it is alſo uſed in a ſenſe of ſevere juſtice; as in the ſecond Commandment, Exod. 20. 5. and Deut.5.9. and in many other places: But here Gods viſiting of Sarah, is the juſt performance of his gracious promiſe for her fruitfulneſs at the time prefixed, ver. 2. foretold, Chap. 18. ver. 10. Promiſes being as a ſending to ſome one that is abſent by another, and performing being as the viſiting of a friend by perſonal preſence.

V.3. Iſaac] God gave him that name when he propheſied of his birth, Geneſ. 17.19. and it ſignifieth Laughter, becauſe Abraham and Sarah laughed at the newes of their promiſed fruitfulneſſe in their old age, Gen.17.17. and 18.12. But his laughter was of admiration, hers of ſuſpicion or miſtruſt of the promiſe, for which ſhe is reproved, Chap. 18.13,14. wherein ſhe was now reformed, and laughed without offence verſ. 6. and conceived that all that heard of his birth would laugh with her, as partakers and approvers of her joy. See Iſai.54.1. of giving names, ſee on chap.38.3.

V.4. Eight dayes old] See Annot. on Chap.17.12.

V.6. Made me to laugh] She laughed before, and was blamed for it; ſee Annot. on Chap.18.12. now ſhe will laugh for another cauſe, in another manner; not, as before, with doubt or irreverence, but with joyful aſſurance.

V.7. Who would have ſaid] It was more then nature could effect, or natural reaſon could conjecture: for women commonly give over childbearing after fifty yeers of age, Plin. Nat. Hiſt. lib. 7. cap. 14. And hence was the commendation of her faith, for though at firſt ſhe doubted, ſoone after ſhe believed, and thereupon conceived, Heb. 11.11.

That Sarah ſhould have given children ſuck] Which may be meant by an Enallage of number, the plural for the ſingular, as Geneſ. 46.23. or becauſe though yet ſhe had but one, by the ſame power that made her the mother of one, ſhe might be mother of more; or becauſe of the abundance of her milk, which was enough for divers children; and ſo they that abound in milk give an almes of their ſuperfluity, as Nurſes to thoſe Infants to whom they are no mothers.

Suck] Sarahs practice may ſerve for a pattern to all women, whom God hath enabled to give ſuck, as well as to bring forth, that when God hath made them mothers, they make themſelves nurſes; for the bleſſing of bearing and nouriſhing in nature are joyned together, Pſal. 22.9. as the miſcarrying womb, and dry breſts are threatned together as a curſe, Hoſ.9.14. a wilful curſe to thoſe that againſt the courſe of nature dry up their milk, and will not beſtow it, as God and nature ordained it, for the bringing up of the child they have brought forth; their greatneſs will not excuſe their neglect, for Sarah was wife to a very great man, reputed a mighty Prince, Gen.23.6. highly eſteemed, and ſought unto by Kings for favour and confederacy, Gen.20.14,15. and verſ.22 and 23. of this Chapter; and ſhe was Miſtreſs of three hundred and eighteen men-ſervants, beſides hand-maids in her family, the government whereof might require a great deal of attendance; beſides ſhe was aged: but neither greatneſſe, nor buſineſſe, nor agedneſſe keeps her from this motherly duty; which is indeed to be preferred before the outward acts of publick piety; and therefore Hannah became a mother, and reſolved as a nurſe to tarry at home from the Temple until the weaning of her child; and that reſolution was confirmed by the conſent of her husband, 1 Sam.1.23.

V.8. weaned] It is not ſaid at what age, nor is the weaning of children to be ſtinted to a certain time, (as ſome do to two years, ſome to three, as in the ſecond of Maccab.7.27. ſome to five, becauſe when the life of man was longer, his infancy was proportionably longer, and ſo ſome conceive Iſaac's weaning to be the fifth yeare of his age) but according to the health and ſtrength of the child to digeſt ſtronger meat then milk, it is to be proportioned; this difference of diet and growth, is applyed to ſpiritual proficiency, Heb.5. 12,13,14.

Feaſt] The making of a Feaſt at the birth of a child (ſee 1 Sam.1. 23) is not ſo ſeaſonable, for then the mother is weak; nor at the Circumciſion (as the Jewes do, Buxtorf. cap.2. Synagog Judæor. miſapplying this example of Abraham to their practice) but when the child hath eſcaped the greateſt danger of his nurſing, and groweth on to good hope of health and ſtrength, then it is convenient by a Feaſt of rejoycing among men, to profeſſe thankſgiving to God, who hath given the occaſion of ſuch gratulation, and meanes, and liberty for a liberal enjoyment of the creatures with cheerfulneſſe; for he hath given not only bread for mans ſuſtenance but wine to make glad his heart, and oyl to make him have a ſhining countenance, Pſal.104.15. See 1 Sam.1.24,25 And if it be true, (as ſome Hebrewes obſerve) that all the while the child ſuckt, the husband and wife did forbear familiar ſociety, then this rejoycing and ſolemnity might be as a Feaſt for a new marriage. See on Chap.40.20.

V.9. Mocking] The word Metſahhek is properly rendred laughing, but here and elſewhere it is taken for mocking, as Gen.19.14. Or deriſion, or laughing to ſcorn; as Ezek.23.32. which may be ſo uſed, as to be counted a perſecution, as this was, Gal.4.29. See Neh.2.19. and Chap.4 1. What the manner was, whether in words, or geſtures, or both, and what the cauſe, whether becauſe of his heirſhip, or by reaſon of ſome childiſh miſcarriage, the Text ſaith nothing: ſome think that Iſhmaels mocking was an inviting of him to Idolatry by way of ſport and play, according to that in Exod.32.6. but Sarah who obſerved it, apprehended it as ſome bitter and malignant ſcorn, which raiſed her wrath to a great height, as the next verſe ſheweth. With this mocking of the Egyptian womans ſon (as ſome conceive) began the four hundred years of Egyptian affliction; but for that, ſee Annotat. on Chap.15. ver.13.

V.10. Caſt out] (Gal.4.30) Of this the Apoſtle, Gal.4.24. maketh an Allegory; which (ſo far as concerneth conformity to this Text) a late godly Preacher now with God, in his Book Of Prototypes, hath briefly noted thus. Here be two mothers, a bond-woman and a free-woman; two Covenants, the Covenant of Works and of Grace; two manners of begetting, by promiſe and by faith; and after the fleſh, or by nature; two kinds of children, bond-men and free-men; and the bond-men perſecuting the free: at this perſecution Sarah (though otherwiſe a good woman) breaketh out into paſſion: Caſt out, &c. yet there might be reaſon why ſhe deſired their removal out of the family, both in reſpect of Hagar, and of her ſon; for now Sarah was a mother, ſhe could not, as before, endure her partnerſhip in her husbands bed; and Abrahams dear affection to Iſhmael, expreſſed Gen.17.18. might make both the mother and the ſon leſſe reſpective both of Sarah and Iſaac; and by Iſhmael as Iſaac was mocked now, ſo he might be corrupted in his manners, becauſe he was wicked; beſides, the honour of his holy Pedegree would not be preſerved ſo pure without mixture and confuſion, as if they had their dwellings at a diſtance: and therefore ſome conceive that Sarahs rejection of the ſon of the bond-woman was not only paſſionate, but Prophetical, as foreſeeing and foreſpeaking the ſeparation of the holy Seed from the profane, whereof Abraham, through his fond affection to Iſhmael, was not at that time ſo apprehenſive as Sarah was; nor did either of them perhaps ſo underſtand or lay to heart as they ſhould have done their corrupt choice of an evil courſe for accompliſhment of the divine Promiſe, as if God would not keep his word unleſſe they betook themſelves to ſuch a ſinful ſupply by Hagar the Egyptian, a daughter or deſcendent of the race of Cham, who derided his own father; and this might juſtly occaſion the diſturbance of their houſhold peace, as before in the pride and contempt of a ſervant towards her miſtreſs, ſo here of a brother towards his brother.

V.11. Becauſe of his ſon] Not becauſe of Hagar: which ſheweth that ſhe was not his wife; for if ſo, he ſhould have preferred her before his ſon: nor would he ſo far have given her over to the correction of Sarah, as he did, Geneſ. 16.6. had ſhe been his wife; ſo that he had authority over her, not as a wife, but only as a ſervant.

V.12. hearken unto her] Sometimes the Superiour muſt yield to the Inferiour, eſpecially betwixt man and wife, who ſhould never be angry both at once, but one bear with the others paſſion, and for a time give way unto it: there is alſo a diſcreet condeſcending ſometimes of Kings to their Subjects, which maketh them afterwards more to be beloved and better obeyed. See 1 King 12.7. 2 Sam.18.4. Here though God biddeth Abraham hearken unto Sarah in all that ſhe hath ſaid, he giveth not away the authority of the husband to the will of the wife; but for this particular caſe God ratifieth her words, whereto Abraham yields, not as in obedience to her paſſionate appointment, but in his own diſcretion and duty to God.

in Iſaac] (Rom. 9.7, 8. Heb. 11.18.) The promiſed ſeed ſhall be counted from Iſaac, and not from Iſhmael; and the ſpiritual prerogative ſhall be intailed to him, who by a ſupernatural bleſſing is born unto thee.

V.13. a nation] (Chap.17.20. & ver.18. of this Chapter.) The Iſhmaelites ſhall come of him.

V.14. early] Before, while Sarah required the caſting out of Hagar and Iſhmael, it was grievous in his ſight, becauſe of his ſon; now having Gods command for it, he is very forward to perform it.

Bread] By Bread may be underſtood other neceſſaries for humane ſuſtenance, as in the Lords Prayer, and Mar.6.36. compared with Mat.14.15. yet being no more then Hagar could carry on her ſhoulder, it was ſtrange that ſo rich, ſo good and kind a man as Abraham, would ſend them away ſo ſlenderly furniſhed with proviſion. It is not unlike that he meant to ſend after them other ſupply; or that God ſo ordered their departure, to exerciſe his own providence in the particular paſſages that followed afterwards.

And the child] Iſhmael at this time was about eighteene years of age, which hath troubled many in the expoſition of this Text, ſuppoſing the Text ſaith, that the bread, and bottle, and child, were all laid on Hagars ſhoulder; but the word child, is to be conſtrued with the Verb took, going before, not with the Verb put; and the words are to be read with a parentheſis, (as our laſt Tranſlation hath it) thus, And Abraham roſe up early in the morning, and took bread and a bottle of water, and gave it unto Hagar (putting it on her ſhoulder) and the child; and ſo the ſenſe is clear, and the abſurdity of ſuch an importable burden ſhunned. The like ſpeech is in Exod. 29.3. thou ſhalt bring them, (that is, the unleavened cakes) (in a basket) with the bullock and the two rams; where the words, in a basket, muſt be put in a parentheſis, elſe they will run as if the bullock and the rams were put in the basket with the cakes.

ſent her away] True faith renounceth all natural affections, to obey Gods commandment: this is further manifeſted by Abrahams readineſs to offer up Iſaac in Sacrifice, Chap. 22.3.

the wilderneſs of Beerſheba] So called, not when this ſtory was acted, but afterwards, ver. 31.

V. 15. Caſt the child] Theſe words are not to be underſtood, as if the child had been laid on her ſhoulders, for ſhe might do ſo if he were led in her hand, being almoſt ſpent with drought and thirſt in the wilderneſs, and unable to go any further; or fainting in the way ſhe might ſit down, and ſet him on her lap, and thence being hopeleſſe of life, might in a pang of paſſion caſt him from her; and this expoſition is further cleared, ver 18 where Hagar is bidden to lift up the lad, and hold him in her hand; not lay him on her ſhoulder, or bear him in her armes.

V. 17. God heard.] God hath a merciful ear to the voice of miſery. See Gen. 16 11. Exod. 22.23, 27. 2 Kings 13.4. and that every where, in the wilderneſs (as here) as well as in the City. and therefore every where, men ſhould lift up pure hands in prayer, without doubting, 1 Tim. 2.8.

where he is] Gods preſence and providence are not fixed or confined to any place; whereſoever miſery is, there is not only his preſence, but his power and pity to give relief.

V. 19. Opened her eyes] Except God open our eyes, we can neither ſee, nor uſe the means before us: yet was ſhe not blind before, but either her mind was paſſionately diſturbed, that ſhe did not mark what was before her, or her eye-ſight, as touching that object, was miraculouſly reſtrained, as the eyes of the two Diſciples going to Emmaus were withheld ſo that they knew not our Saviour when they talked with him Luk. 24.16. ſee Numb. 22.31. Or, her much weeping might for a time cauſe a dimneſs of her ſight; but whatſoever was the impediment to her perceiving of the well, it was now removed.

V. 20. VVith the child] As touching outward things, God cauſed him to proſper, Gen 17.20.

V. 21. The wilderneſs of Paran] A great wilderneſſe by which the Iſraelites paſſed from Egypt to Canaan, of which Adrichom. Delph. ſaith it is ſuch an horrid wilderneſs, ſo deſtitute both of meat and water, that neither man nor beaſt, nor bird live in it, Adrich. Delp. Theatr. Ter Sanct. p. 116. Object How then could Iſhmael dwell there? Anſ. The Deſert is ſaid by that Author to be eleven days journey over the length of it; and though the moſt part of it be extremely barren, all is not ſo; and Iſhmael being a wild man, Gen. 16.12. he was fitter to live in the wilderneſs, then in any civil ſociety; and there is a part of that wilderneſs called Kedar, from one of Iſhmaels ſons of that name, Chap. 25.13. or the Region of the Iſhmaelites or Hagarens, Pſal. 83.6. ſituate toward Egypt where they lived in Tents, and maintained themſelves by prey and pillage: the wilderneſs of Judea, likewiſe was partly deſart, and parly inhabited, Matth. 3.1.

his mother took him] (Gen. 24.4. and 28.2. Judg. 14.2.) It is the right of parents to diſpoſe of their children in marriage; for they are in Gods ſtead, and have as juſt a title to them, as to any goods they have; ſo that without wrong, they cannot (but by their conſent, much leſſe againſt their good will) be alienated from them, and transferred to another family. See on Chap. 3. 26. and Joſh. 15.16.

V. 22. At that time] Not at the time of Iſhmaels marriage laſt mentioned, but at the time of Iſaac's weaning, which was celebrated with a ſolemn feaſt, ver. 8.

Abimelech and Phicol] Abimelech a King, and Phicol a Captain, ſeek for friendſhip with Abraham: for God can eaſily make the godly gracious with the greateſt men, Neh. 2.6. Dan. 3.30. and Chap. 6.2. Gen. 41.37, 38.

V. 23 Swear that thou wilt not deal falſely with me] (1 Sam. 30.15) Heb. If thou ſhalt lye unto me. That is, thou ſhalt not lye unto me: the ſpeech is ſuſpenſive or imperfect, concealing a curſe, which is to be underſtood as imprecated againſt the party that takes the oath, and doth not keep it. See on Chap. 14.23.

V. 24. I will ſwear] It is a lawful thing to take an oath in matters of importance, to teſtifie the truth, and aſſure others of our ſincerity, and to put an end to a controverſie, Heb. 6.16. Queſt. But was it lawful for Abraham, being by Gods free-gift Lord of Canaan, to acknowledge a King in that Country, and to promiſe peace to him and to his heires? Some Rabbins ſay, it was Abrahams ſin to make a covenant for enjoyment of any right in the Land of Canaan, and that God puniſhed him for it many wayes. Anſw. Firſt, though he had a right for the future, by virtue of the promiſe, he had yet no preſent poſſeſſion of any part of it; for he lived there rather as a ſojourner, then a rightful Inhabitant. Secondly, he promiſed but for himſelf, not for his poſterity, though to Abimelech and his poſterity. Thirdly, the oath was but againſt falſe dealing, which Abraham might keep without any prejudice to the right of himſelf, or his ſeed.

V. 25. Abraham reproved Abimelech] Concerning a Well which Abimelechs ſervants had taken from his ſervants, as touching its propriety and uſe: before he entred covenant with him, he freely diſcovered the exception he had againſt him, that all occaſion of grudge removed, their friendſhip might be ſurely grounded in ſincerity of affection, without diſſimulation.

V. 26. Neither heard I] Wicked ſervants do many evils unknown to their maſters, though done in their maſters names, as in their right, or for their uſe: ſo did Gehazi bely his good maſter Eliſha, and abuſe Naaman the Syrian, 2 King. 5.22.

V. 27. Abraham took ſheep and oxen and gave them unto Abimelech] Abimelech gave Abraham ſheep and oxen, men-ſervants, and maid-ſervants, when he diſmiſſed him, Chap. 20. 14. Now Abraham preſents him with the gifts for the cattel: ſome think they were a return of the ſame, leſt Abimelech ſhould ſay, I have made Abraham rich, as he ſaid when he refuſed the gifts of the King of Sodom, Chap. 14. 22, 23. which he did not ſo well think of when he received them, as upon a ſecond conſideration afterwards; but it is more probable that Abraham being rich in Cattel, gave the King a preſent out of his own ſtore; and Kings, though they have no need, receive ſuch tokens of reſpect from their inferiours, and ſometimes the omiſſion of them is branded with reproach, as being a ſign of contempt of Royal Majeſty, 1 Sam. 10. 27. And Abraham might give it him out of ingenuous gratitude for favors formerly received, or out of a generous diſpoſition as a Covenanter with the King at this time, to be upon even termes with him; for in ſuch a capitulation as this, the covenanters, as they are Covenanters (whatſoever other diſparities are betwixt them, are equal. Or Abraham might by ſuch a teſtimony of tranſaction betwixt them the better preſerve the memory of his intereſt to the well he had digged, and which by the violence of Abimelechs ſervants, was taken from him; but for the formal ratification of his right, the ſeven ewe Lambs were tendered, whereof in the next verſe.

V. 30. That they may be witneſſe] That is, that they may be memorandums, ſerving for tokens of atteſtation to the truth: ſo an heap of ſtones is made a witneſſe betwixt Jacob and Laban, Gen. 31. 46. 48.

Ver. 31. Beerſheba] There were two places of that name, the one in the Tribe of Zabulon, ſituate betwixt upper and neather Galilee, Adrichom. Delph. p. 137, which Joſephus, with other places, fortified for repulſe of the Romans, Joſeph. of the Wars of the Jews, lib. 2. cap. 25. The other place called Beerſheba, was in the Southern part of the Tribe of Judah, Joſh. 15.21, 28. 1 King. 19.3. though afterwards it was allowed to be a part of the Inheritance of the Tribe of Simeon, Joſh. 19.2. and there was a Well called Beerſheba, and a City of the ſame name. The name is compounded of Beer, a well, and Shebang, which with a point on the left hand of the letter Sin, ſignifieth ſatiety and abundance, and ſo the meaning may be, that this well was a fountain yeelding water in abundance; but with a point on the right hand of the letter Schin, it ſignifieth an oath, and the number of ſeven, which in this ſtory do well agree together, for at the Covenant-making for the Well, Abraham gave to Abimelech ſeven Ewe Lambs, ver. 30. and ſome Jewiſh Cabaliſts ſay, that an oath is called Shebang, ſeven, becauſe they that ſwear, did bind themſelves by an oath to refuſe ſeven things if they brake it: The ſame name was renewed, (which haply had been buried when the wells were ſtopped up, until Iſaac opened them again, Chap. 26.18.) upon his renewing of the Covenant with Abimelech, according to that which was made here by Abraham his father; though Iſaac's oath was not confirmed with ſeven Lambs as his fathers was, yet ſome will have it to have ſome reference to the number of ſeven, either becauſe that number is a number of perfection, or, becauſe it was the ſeventh Well that Iſaac had digged: neither of which reaſons have any ground in the Scripture, therefore in that place, as in this, it was called the VVel, rather of the Oath, or ſwearing then of ſeven: yet in both reſpects it is a fit memorial of the Covenant made there. See on Chap. 29. 33. and 46.1. and Joſh. 19.2.

V. 32. Covenant.] Thus we ſee that the godly, as touching outward things, may make peace with the wicked that know not God.

V. 33. Grove] Abraham did dwel before in the plain of Mamre, under the ſhadow of trees, Gen. 18.4, 8. and it may be he took an eſpecial pleaſure to be in the open air, and under the ſhade; but he uſed it to a religious purpoſe, for there he called upon the name of the Lord the everlaſting God; which is thought to be a place by him ſet apart for performance of the exerciſes of piety, prayer and ſacrifice, and from whence he might have wood for ſacrifice: and it ſeems there was ſome ſpecial choice to be made of wood (as there was a ſpecial fire, for kindling of the Sacrifices afterwards, ſee Annot. on Lev. 9. 24.) for when he was to ſacrifice his ſon Iſaac, he carried wood with him three dayes journey, Gen. 22.3, 4. though it is not like but in or neere the place where the ſacrifice was to be made, there was wood enough for that purpoſe. From Abrahams example it is like men took up the manner to exciſe their Religion in Groves; and from thence the Divels took occaſion to abuſe it to ſerve Idols there, Deut. 12.2. Judg. 3.7. 2 King. 17.10. Iſa. 1 29. and 57.5. Jer. 17.2. Am 8.14. which were therefore peremptorily prohibited as hateful unto God, Deut. 16.21.

CHAP. XXII.

Verſ. 1. After theſe things] How long after, it appears not by the Text, ſave only that Iſaac was then of ſufficient age and ſtrength to carry a burden of wood for ſacrifice, ver 6. which is probably conceived to be about the 25 year of his age, Joſeph. Antiq. l. 1. c. 14.

tempt Abraham] The word Naſah, neceſſarily ſignifieth no more then to try or to prove: but becauſe that is uſually done by the Divel, and the wicked to ſeduce unto ſin, and that mans corruption works that way of it ſelf, Jam.1.14. and is further wrought upon by the divel and the world to that evil, in the ſame way the word Tempt is moſt commonly taken in an ill ſenſe, for ſolicitation to ſin; as Mat.4.1. and elſewhere; but ſo God tempteth no man, Jam. 1.13. But his tempting is a proof or tryal of a man for his diſcovery (not to God, who by his omniſcience knowes him ſo perfectly, that hee needs no experience of him) but to himſelf or others; and this, as it is alwayes good in him, ſo is it alwayes done to a good end, as Deut. 8.16. Chap. 13. 3. Jam.1. 12. 1 Cor.10.13. The temptations of Abraham were many, ſome reckon them to ten, which are various in their kinds; as firſt, concerning his habitations: ſecondly, concerning the perſons that were dear unto him; and thirdly, concerning himſelf. Firſt, for his habitations, he was thrice to change them, twice upon command. See Act.7.3,4. Gen.12.1. and once upon neceſſity, Gen.12.10. Secondly, concerning the perſons that were dear unto him, and that either within his family, or without; within his family, and ſo he was tempted four times; twice by occaſion of Sarah her taking away; Gen.12.15. and Chap.20. once by reaſon of the diſcord betwixt Sarah and Hagar, when ſhe was with child; Gen.16.5. laſtly at the ejection of Iſhmael and his mother, Gen.21.11. And without his family, when he was to betake himſelf to war for the reſcue of his kinſman Lot taken captive, Gen 14.14. Thirdly, concerning himſelf, firſt, when he apprehended an horrour of great darkneſſe, Gen. 15. 12. and ſecondly, when he received the Covenant of Circumciſion. Chap.17.

V.2. Take thy ſon] This is (as ſome reckon) the tenth time that Abraham was tryed, and proved by occaſions of diſcovery of what goodneſſe, weakneſſe, or wickedneſſe was in him; when he was called to come forth of his Country he knew not whither, his faith, and obedience were both tryed and ſhewed; when he was driven by famine to flye for ſuccour to Egypt; his faith and patience were proved in the ſtriſe betwixt Lots herdſmen and his: and in the houſhold jars betwixt Sarah and Hagar, his humility, patience and benignity were tryed, and made known divers times: by the taking away of his wife twice, his cowardiſe and weak faith were tryed and diſcovered; and by the Captivity of Lot, and his reſcue of him, his wiſdom, and prudence, and courage were tryed: when at ninety nine years old the Sacrament of Circumciſion was impoſed upon him, and after that, his ſon Iſhmael ſent away from him; and now laſt, and moſt of all, his better ſon Iſaac to be offered up by him, his faith and obedience even to ſelf-denyal in the higheſt degree were tryed as gold in the fire, and glorioully manifeſted.

onely ſon] Thy only ſon that is remaining in thy family; for Iſhmael was gone; or thy legitimate ſon, as oppoſed to a baſtard, Heb.12. 8. as was Iſhmael, begotten of the bond-woman.

whom thou loveſt] With an eſpecial dearneſſe, as being the ſon of thine old age and of thy wives miraculous conception, above the courſe and force of nature, and a ſon worthy to be beloved for his piety and obedience.

Moriah] In this Land there were two eminent Mountains, Sion and Moriah, upon which the Temple was built by Solomon, 2 Chron.3.1. this is here meant, from which the whole Countrey had its name, though it had not that name until afterwards. See ver.14.

burnt offering] In this Command, all that was in Abraham, as a man, a father, an husband, a believer, a profeſſor of Religion, were put to tryal. As a man, it was againſt humanity, to ſlay the Innocent, though but a ſervant or a ſtranger: As a father, it was unnatural to kil his own child, though he had never ſo many; but having but one, and that one ſo worthy of all fatherly affection, it was much more like to be abhorred: As an husband, how could he ever expect any peace, or comfort in his wife, if he ſhould ſhed his bloud, againſt whom ſhe could not endure either a ſcoff or a flout? As a Believer, or profeſſor of Religion, he might be diſpoſed to diſobey, becauſe Iſaac was the ſon of the promiſe, Gen.21.12. and to kil ſuch a ſon, would make Infidels blaſpheme his God and Religion for ſuch a fact. There was yet more tryal in this Command, for if it might have been done ſuddenly, or ſecretly, or by ſome more eaſie kind of death, it would have ſtirred up the leſſe reluctancy; but it muſt be adviſedly done, upon three dayes deliberation, openly upon an high hill, cruelly by cutting his throat, ripping up his bowels, and burning his quarters in the fire upon the Altar; and what if Iſaac being a luſty young man, upon his offer ſhould reſiſt, and by his example be tempted to return upon him with the like bloody violence? Againſt all theſe mighty objections his faith ſtandeth up, and his piety to God prevaileth ſo, that he readily ſetteth upon the ſervice.

V.3. Roſe up early] (Gen.21.14.) It ſeems he had the command given by divine revelation that night; and though it were ſo, yet he was well aſſured it came from God; for though ſometimes men may think they have a divine revelation, when it is but an illuſion (as one may think he hears a drum or a bell, when it is ſome humming of wind in his head, or ſome other ſound without) yet when there is a divine revelation indeed, it uſually brings with it not onely the matter revealed, but certain evidence and aſſurance, that it is a divine revelation, as a Bell rung, or a Drum beaten cloſe to the ear, whereof there can be no doubt at all; and as he knew the command was from God, ſo his faith told him that God was all-ſufficient, Gen. 17.1. and able to ſecure him from all evil conſequences of his command, and to reſtore Iſaac to life again, though he were dead, Heb.11.9. his faith and obedience, both for the ſacrifice it ſelf, and for the expedition to perform it, are to be remembred for a ſingular example of ſelf-denyal.

V.4. The third day] From Gerar, not from the City Gerar, but from the Countrey, for he dwelt in Beerſheba, as may be collected out of Chap.21.31. and after the ſacrifice he returned to Beerſheba, ver.19. of this Chap. Now Mount Moriah from that place was but one dayes journey with ordinary expedition: but he proceeded very lieſurely, and with much deliberation, having a matter of the greateſt moment in hand that ever was impoſed on him, or any one elſe: yet Adrichom. Delph. ſaith the diſtance was twenty leagues, each of them an hours journey.

Saw the place] God having given him ſome ſign whereby he might know it.

V.5. The lad] The Original word Naghnar, (properly ſignifying one in his minority for age and growth, and therefore uſually rendered lad, or boy) is many times taken for one of maturity both for time and ſtature, as ver.6. Chap.34.19. and 41.12. Exod 33.11. 2 Sam. 18.29.

and come again] That Abraham might not be thought to lye, it is conceived, that for Iſaac's return, he meant it by a divine reſurrection after ſacrifice, as Heb. 11. 19. Or, that by the Spirit of Prophecy (though he knew it not) he foretold his preſervation from ſacrifice.

V.8. God will provide] The only way to overcome all temptations, is to reſt upon Gods providence.

V.9. Bound Iſaac] It is like his father had declared to him Gods commandment, whereunto he ſhewed himſelfe obedient, and this obedience is as rare an example for a ſon, as that of Abraham for a father: and in this reſpect the more admirable, becauſe Abraham had Gods word for his act, but Iſaac only his fathers word for his obedience: and herein, as he was the only Son of his father, a good ſon, obedient to bear the wood, and to ſubmit unto death; he was a type of Chriſt, who was the only Son of God his Father, and was bound, Mar. 15. 1. and made to bear his croſſe, Joh. 19. 17. and was obedient unto death Phil.2.8.

V.11. The Angel] The Angel of the Covenant, that is, Chriſt; as his own words ſhew, ver. 12,16.

out of heaven] Gen.21.17.

Abraham, Abraham] The word is doubled, and the doubling of it imports the greatneſs of the peril, and the urgent neceſſity of preſent prohibition.

V.12. Lay not thine hand] God, though he love obedience even unto death, delights not in ſacrifices of mans blood; that is of too great a price to be offered as a Type, becauſe he is the Image of God; too cheap, being but the Image, and now corrupted, to ſerve for a propitiatory Sacrifice; therefore the Divel abuſed the Jews and Gentiles to make Sacrifices by this example; wherein they ſhould obſerve as well Gods prohibition of the thing, accepting the will for the deed, (See 2 Cor.8.12.) as the promptneſs of Abraham to do it. Thus again was Iſaac a type of Chriſt, viz. of his Reſurrection, riſing up from the Altar on which he was bound for a ſacrifice.

now I know] This is ſpoken after the manner of men; for God knowes all things by one act of intelligence, without experience. Or, the meaning may be, that God now made his faith and forwardneſs known by this extraordinary act of ſelf-denyal and obedience; ſo what God already knew, Pſal.139.1,2. David deſireth him to know, to ſearch and to try, ver.23. it may be to draw it out into ſome open evidence diſcernable by others.

thou feareſt God] His fear is mentioned rather then his love, though both concurred in his obedience, becauſe in his ſervice he eſpecially requireth a filial fear, Pſal.2.11.

behind] That way it is like the voice of the Angel ſounded, and by the voice behind him, Iſa.30.21. he was to look back, and looking back he ſaw the Ram.

V.13. A Ram] Ver.7. Iſaac asketh, where is the lamb, and verſ.8. Abraham anſwered, God will provide a lamb; and here it is ſaid that Abraham ſaw a Ram, and did offer him up in ſacrifice; yet no contradiction, for a young he-lamb of a quarter old may have horns which may be entangled in a buſh, and may be called a Ram.

Caught in a thicket] The Ram was a Type of Chriſt, as in the thicket held by the head, for Chriſt was crowned with a crown of thorns; but eſpecially as ſacrificed on the Altar. Some obſerve, that as the Ram was equivalently Iſaac, though he was not offered, becauſe he was offered in his ſtead; ſo the offering of Chriſts humanity had the value and virtue of his Divinity in it, (though that could not be ſacrificed) becauſe of the neer relation of the one to the other.

V.14. Called the name of the place, Jehovah-Jireh] The ſame letters with variation of the pricks, will make either an active ſenſe, The Lord wil ſee: or a paſſive ſenſe, The Lord will be ſeen. The name is added, to note, that God doth both ſee and provide ſecretly for his, and ſo evidently is ſeen coming to their ſuccour in their greateſt neceſſities: and this phraſe became a proverbial ſaying among the Jewes to that purpoſe.

V.16. By my ſelf have I ſworn] Man when he ſweareth, muſt ſwear by a greater then himſelf, and God, becauſe there is no greater then himſelf, ſweareth by himſelf, Heb.6.13. and therefore himſelf is meant, when ſwearing by his Name Jer.44.26. by his Soul, Jer.51.14. Text and Marg. or, by his holineſs, Am.4.2. is mentioned.

becauſe] Abraham did not hereby merit the promiſe of a multiplyed poſterity, for God promiſed this before, Gen.12.2. and Chap.13.16. but it is again repeated to encourage him, and others by his example, to prompt obedience of the moſt difficult commands, See Rom. 4. 13,14. and on chap.26 5.

V.17 thy ſeed] The Apoſtle, Gal 3.16. applieth this to Chriſt in the ſingular number, in whom they who believe, of what Nation ſoever they be, ſhal be bleſſed, as children raiſed up unto Abraham : for true believers be reckoned for his children, Gal 3.7.

ſhall poſſeſſe the gate] The gates of Cities were the places where the Wiſe men aſſembled for conſultation, and the Magiſtrates for doing of Juſtice, Deut. 21.19. and 22.15. Amos 5.12,15. Zach.8. 16 Prov.31.23 and withal there were the ſtrongeſt fortifications for defence, and the ſtore of Artillery for repulſe of an enemy, Judg. 5.8. Pſal.147.13. Iſai.22 7. Ezek.21.22. So that the poſſeſſion of the gate is the prevailing of the whole, for the gate is ſometimes put for the whole City, Deut.12.15. and for all the Cities of a Nation, Jer.14.2. See on Gen.24.6.

V.21 Huz and Buz] Of the former name there were two others of different parentage, whereof the one is mentioned, Chap.10.23. the other, Chap.36 28. For the other, he is ſuppoſed to be the progenitor of Elihu the Buzite, Job 32.2.

V.24. His Concubine] A Concubine differed from a wife, in that ſhe was not ſolemnly betrothed, nor was partner with the husband in the government of the family, as the wife was, to whom the Concubine was ſubject, Gen 16.6,9. nor were her children to inherit, but to be put off with the portions, Gen.25.5,6. And from an whore ſhe differed, in that ſhe was confined to one man, and being in that reſpect like unto a wife, the name is oftentimes taken in good part, and the concubine ſometimes called by the name of a wife, Gen. 37.2. yet according to her Hebrew title Philegeſh, compounded of Palag, which ſignifieth to divide, and Iſhah, Manneſſe or woman, that is, a divided wife, or half a wife and half a ſervant, or a dividing woman, making diviſion betwixt the husband and wife (properly ſo called) as Hagar did betwixt Abraham and Sarah; Chap.16.5. ſee on chap.37.2.

Maachah] Here is the name of a man, but 1 King.15.12. it is the name of a woman, ſo are divers other names of the common of two Genders, as Philip, Frances, Timothy, &c.

CHAP. XXIII.

Verſ. 1. These were the yeares] Or ſo long lived ſhe; it is noted as a ſpecial honour to Sarah, that her age is ſo exactly ſet down in the Scripture, as is not obſerved of any other woman.

V.2. Kiriath-arba] This City had three names, the ancienteſt was Mamre, Gen.13.18. and ver.19. of this Chapter, after that Kiriath-arba in this place, ſo called from Arba, a great man among the Anakims, Joſh.14.15. and laſt of all Hebron, which name Moſes might give it by the Spirit of Prophecy, if (as ſome think) that were from Hebron, Chalebs Nephew, 1 Chron.2 42. but this is uncertain, and may be untrue. See Paræus on the place. Or it might be added by him who penned a great part of, if not all the laſt Chapter of Deuteronomy.

came to mourn] That may be, began or addreſſed himſelf to mourning for the death of Sarah ; or the phraſe may ſignifie that he came from his own Tent into Sarahs, for they had their Tents apart, Gen.24.67. Beſides, it may note great or ſolemn mourning as for a perſon much eſteemed, 2 Sam.1.17. 2 Chron.35.24. Act.8.2. and this was lawful, if done without diſtruſt in God, or too much affection or confidence in man. See Joh.11.35,36. Some by Abraham his coming to mourn, underſtand, that Sarah died from home (to wit, in Hebron) whither from Beerſheba he went to bewail her death, and to take order for her burial, and therefore he contracts for a burial place, which in the place of his accuſtomed abode he needed not to bargan for with any man.

V.3. Stood up] After his mourning, which was uſually done by the corps, or at the grave of the dead, Joh.11.31. and that in ſome lower poſture then ſtanding is : but the exceſs of mourning is to be reproved as hurtful to the living, or diſhonourable to the dead ; as if they were hopeleſſe, 1 Theſſ.4 13. nor doth it argue more love, but leſſe wit or grace to be immoderate in mourning : for the Egyptians mourned for Jacob ſeventy dayes ; but Joſpeh, who in wiſdom, religion and true love, far exceeded them, mourned but forty ſeven dayes, Chap. 50.3,10

V.4. Burying place] (Gen.47.30) Separate from other inhabitants of the Land, becauſe they were Infidels without belief, or hope of the Reſurrection of the dead.

V.6. A mighty Prince] Heb. A Prince of God. The Hebrewes ſpeak ſo of all things that are notable, Pſal 46.4. becauſe all excellency cometh of God. See on chap.13.10. 1 Chron. 12. 22. But the ſons of Heth were Heathens, and they called him a Prince, not by an Hebraiſm, but becauſe of the greatneſs of his family, and eſtate ; and if they called him a Prince of God, it was becauſe they might obſerve that God was with him in all that he did, as Abimelech ſaid, Gen.21.22.

V 7. Stood up] That is, addreſſed himſelf, for the phraſe (as the word came, ver.2.) may be ſo taken ; and it is ſaid before, ver.3. that he ſtood up, or having ſate and treated with the Hittites before, now he ſtood up, that he might bow down unto them who ſo kindly condeſcended unto him.

V.9. Cave of Machpelah] That is a double cave, either one for men, another for women, or one within another.

for a poſſeſſion] They offered him the free uſe of their burial places, verſ.6. ſaying, None of us ſhall with-hold from thee his ſepulchre, but that thou maiſt bury thy dead, but he had rather pay for a propriety, then hold ſuch a community with them ; for he was deſirous in burial to be ſeparated from them, who did not believe the Reſurrection with him.

V.13. I will give] Ephron and Abraham ſtrive to gratifie one another ; a good example of kindneſſe among friends and of Juſtice among bargainers ; the like kind of conteſtation is betwixt David and Araunah, 2 Sam.23.22,23,24.

V.15. Shekels of ſilver] There are very different opinions concerning the ſhekel ; ſome make three ſorts, the royal ſhekel valued to fifteen pence, the ſhekel of the Sanctuary twice as much, and the common ſhekel betwixt them both, valued at five groats ; yet the learned more generally reſolve, that the ſhekel of the Sanctuary was the common ſhekel, valued at two ſhillings ſix pence, Joſeph. Antiq.l.3. cap.9. but called the ſhekel of the Sanctuary, becauſe the exact meaſure by which other ſhekels were to be examined, and to which as the ſtandard they were to be reduced, was kept in the Sanctuary.

V.16 Abraham weighed] Money was paid in thoſe times, not by tale but by weight. See Gen.43.21. and Jer.32.10. thence is this Coyn called ſhekel of Schakal, to weigh.

current money] Not only juſt in quantity, but in quality, pure and not adulterate, ſuch as Merchants who are cunning in Coyns, will receive and return in any Country. In this bargain the ſeller doth not ask too much, nor the buyer bid too little, only one price is pitched, and paid; and ſo Abraham as a purchaſer, had ſome Land in Canaan, but not as poſſeſſed of it by Gods gift, and ſo Saint Stephen is to be underſtood, Act.7.5.

V.17. Machpelah] See Annot. on ver.9. chap.49.30.

V.20. Made ſure] By witneſſes without any interchangeable Indentures or Writings betwixt them, for ought we read of, ſuch was the ſimplicity and ſincerity of thoſe times : afterwards men became more cunning to deceive, and more bold to deny the bargains they had made, and then there was need of writing. See Jer.32.12. Now in our age, craft and falſhood is ſo increaſed, that it requireth great skil and caution to make a ſure bargain, though with writings ; a great ſin and ſhame, that in ſuch light of the Goſpel men ſhould ſo addict themſelves to deeds of darkneſs.

for a poſſeſſion] This Cave was the repoſitory or reſting place of the bodies of Sarah, ver.19. and of Abraham afterwards, Chap.25.9. after them of Iſaac, and Rebekah, Jacob and Leah, Gen.49.31. and though Jacob dyed in Egypt, he gave order, and took an oath of his ſon Joſeph, for his burial at that place, Gen.49.29,30. and 50.5. as profeſſing their faith for the performance of Gods promiſe of Canaan to their poſterity ; and withal, as deſirous to ſleep with thoſe in the bed of duſt, with whom they hope to awake to eternal reſt.

CHAP. XXIV.

Ver.1. WEll ſtricken in age] Heb Gone into dayes. When a man is in his declining age, he muſt meaſure his life rather by the inch of dayes, then by the ell of yeers ; about this time he was 140 yeers old, compare Chap.21.5. with Chap.25.20. which in compariſon of the livers before the flood, was but young ; for Sem the ſon of Noah lived 600 yeers, but of thoſe that lived after the time of Abraham very few were ſo aged, and moſt ever ſince dyed younger ; his ſon Iſaac indeed lived five yeers longer, but his old age was not ſo vigorous as Abrahams was.

in all things] For beſides his ſpiritual welfare by his holy wiſdom, and gracious acceptation with God, his length of dayes, and health of body, the long enjoyment of a good and godly wife, and by her a towardly ſon conceived by the peculiar and miraculous bleſſing of Almighty God, (where there was no hope of iſſue by the courſe of nature) and beſides, his great eſtate, and happy victory in war, and his great reputation with thoſe that knew him ; his croſſes were ſanctified unto him, and converted unto bleſſings. A good encouragement to follow his ſteps in faithfulneſſe and obedience; whereby a man may be bleſſed in both worlds, as he was.

V.2. His eldeſt ſervant] It is like it was that Eliezer of Damaſcus, mentioned Cha.15.2. who by this Hiſtory is ſhewed to be both wiſe and religious, as well as grave and ancient ; he ſends not Iſaac, though at this time forty years of age, that the choice of his wife might be made rather by religious diſcretion, then ſenſual affection ; yet Iſaac no doubt was acquainted with the buſineſs, and as a dutiful ſon gave conſent to that his father had ſaid ; without whoſe liking the marriage could not be conſummate by a proxie or deputy (as ſome hence collect) for the ſervant could but make the eſpouſals, and ſhe became not a wife until Iſaac accepted of her, ver.67.

under my thigh] Which Ceremony declareth the ſervants obedience to his Maſter, and the Maſters power over the ſervant ; and ſo the ſubjection and obedience of the ſon to the father may be ſignified ; for Jacob required his ſon Joſeph to take an oath with the ſame Ceremony, Gen.47.29. See 1 Chr.29.24. Text and Margin ; with the Jews to this day (from that cuſtom) he that requires an oath of another, ſits upon his hand. The Ancients make a myſtery of it, looking ſome of them backward to the precedent Covenant of Circumciſion, and ſome forward to the faithful expectation of the promiſed Seed, Chriſt Jeſus, to come by lineal deſcent from Abrahams loynes, or thigh, (for ſo it is in the Heb. Gen.46.26. the ſouls, that is, the perſons, which came out of Jacobs thigh,) Which is the more probable, becauſe the Patriarchs uſed this Ceremony but to believers; nor did they uſe this only, (and it may be not frequently) for Abraham makes mention of lifting up of his hand in taking an oath, againſt taking any thing of the King of Sodom, Gen.14.22.and the Angel ſwearing,is ſaid to lift up his hand toward heaven,Rev. 10.5,6. The cuſtom of ſeveral Countries and Religions,is very various in this point; yet moſt agree in the adding of ſome outward atteſtation of action,or geſture to words in taking of an oath; to make it better remembred and more regarded,then bare words of aſſeveration, promiſe or imprecation.

V.3. Swear] It ſeemeth that there was ſome precedent diſcourſe before the propoſal of this oath, as that having made him Ruler over all he had, ver.2. he would have him to be an Overſeer to his ſon, with an eſpecial care over him for the choice of a wife, he being now mature for the ſtate of marriage; this was a matter of great weight, and in weighty matters only is an oath to be taken; as for ratification of covenants and promiſes of importance, as here, and Gen.32.53. for removal of ſuſpition,Num 5.21. Exod.22.11. for ſtinting of ſtrife,Heb.6.16. ſecurity of life,1 Sam.30.15.

by the LORD] Fear, and ſervice, and ſwearing by the Name of God, are ſet down as ſociable duties, Deut.6.13. and to ſwear by them that are no Gods is condemned as a deteſtable,and almoſt impardonable ſin, Jer.5.7. And ſo it is in ſerious ſwearing,but in vain and inconſiderate ſwearing it may be a leſs fault to abuſe the name of the creature,then of God.

* daughters of the Canaanites] (* Gen.6.2.& 27 46.& 28.2) He would not communicate in burial with them, much leſſe in marriages, becauſe they deſcended from curſed Cham, whoſe poſterity was extremely corrupted with Idolatrary and other vices, and deſigned to deſtruction for their abominable wickedneſſe; therefore were Gods people forbidden to make any Covenant with them, or to ſhew mercy unto them, Deuter. 7. 2. It was not meet for Abraham's poſterity to be mingled in bloud with them, whoſe bloud they muſt ſhed without pity in perſecuting of them; and this was eſpecially forbidden, ver. 3. for fear of corruption, and Gods wrath, and their ruine to follow upon it, ver.4. See Gen.28.1. and Neh.13. from ver.23.to 27. See Annot. on Chap.41.45.

V.4. To my Country] Which his ſervant it ſeems was acquainted with in particular,and is named the City Nahor in Meſopotamia, ver.10. Meſopotamia is ſometimes taken largely for the Region beyond Euphrates (in reſpect of Canaan,which was on the other ſide of it) and ſo it comprehendeth Chaldea, where is Ur, in which Abraham was born,Gen.11.28. And the City of Nahor, that is, Charran, (as it is called, Act.7.2.) or Haran, Gen.28.10. and Chap.29. ver.45. where Nachor, though now dead, had a long time lived: it was ſituate in the confines of Chaldea; here was the abode of Abraham's kindred, and the trueſt worſhip of the true God (though much corrupted) except in Abraham's family. See on chap.25. 20.

and to my kindred] To Haran where Nahor dwelt, which was about ſeven or eight dayes journey diſtant from the dwelling of Abraham. Marriage within neerer degrees of kindred was allowed at this time, then afterwards by the Law given in Moſes time; for Abraham married his Neece, and Jacob two ſiſters, which after the Law might not be done: but if they were not too neer of kin to marry,were they not too far off in Religion? For did not Terah Abraham's and Nahor's father ſerve other gods? Joſh.24.2. and though Abraham renounced his place, and the Religion of his father, Nachor did not ſo. Laban alſo Rebekahs brother was an Idolater, Gen.31.30. and after Jacobs marriage, and departure from his father in laws houſe, there were Idolaters, and Idols of that race in his family, Geneſ. 35. 23. yet was not their progeny ſo impious, nor their Idolatry ſo groſſe; nor their deſtruction ſo decreed, as the Canaanites was; and it appears in this Chapter, there was ſome piety among them, ver.31,50,51. and much humanity, ver.18 19,20,31. and from 53 to the 60. Beſides, it is not unlike, that Abraham,ſo dear a favourite of God, conſulted with him about it, and had his warrant for it,yea and his promiſe for his guidance in it, ver.7,40. and ſo much was conceived by Laban and Bethuel, ver.50.

Beware] For fear of Idolatry, and becauſe Abraham took poſſeſſion of the Land not for himſelf alone, but for his off-ſpring alſo, Chap.12.1. who were by faith and patience to poſſeſſe it, and not by living out of it, to ſeem either not to believe the promiſe, or to ſlight it.

V.6. Bring not my ſon] Iſaac was now forty years old, and therefore though under the obedience of his father,not at the command of a ſervant to diſpoſe of him at his pleaſure; this is meant then in reſpect of perſwaſion: for an old, wiſe and godly ſervant of ſo great credit with his Maſter, might by advice and counſel prevail much with him in what he thought fit to propoſe unto him.

thither again] The ſervant,ver.5. forecaſting a doubt of preſent conſent, concerning the motion of marrying, if Iſaac were not with him, demandeth of his maſter,What if the woman wil not come with me,muſt I needs bring him thither again? Abraham in anſwer to that,forbiddeth this bringing thither again, in ver.8. yet Iſaac was never there before. Anſw. That again may refer to the return of the ſervant, as that in his return again, he ſhould not bring Iſaac thither with him; or if it be applyed to Iſaac,it is to be underſtood of his being there before in the loyns of Abraham his father, as the Iſraelites in the fourth generation, are ſaid to return to Canaan again, Gen.15.16. who had never been there before, (being born and kept in Egypt) but as virtually included in their progenitors; and Abraham is againſt Iſaac's going thither, both becauſe of the promiſe of the Land of Canaan intailed upon him and his ſeed, and for fear leſt his Idolatrous kindred there ſhould more prevail to corrupt him,then ſtrangers (though worſe) from whom he had eſpecial directions to be eſtranged.

V.7. his Angel] Both for direction in doubts, and protection in dangers. See chap.48.16 Exod.14.19. and 23.20.

ten Camels of the Camels.] Abraham, it is like,by this, had many more then ten, for though they be rare with us, ſome Countries abound with ſuch beaſts: as the Iſraelites overcoming the Haggarens, took as a part of their prey from them, fifty thouſand Camels, 1 Chron. 5. 21. Our Merchants (ſaith Scaliger) call them Dromodaries, and he commends them for ſuch ſwiftneſſe, that they will travel an hundred miles a day; and for ſtrength, to bear ſeven hundred, or a thouſand weight, and for enduring to be without drink fifteen dayes together. Jul.Scalig. Exercit. adverſ. Scalig. Exercit. 209.*nu.*23.pag 635. So many ſuch beaſts of burden, with their lading and company to man them, argued the great eſtate of Abraham, and the truſt and credit of his ſervant.

to Meſopotamia, unto the City of Nachor] See Annot. on ver.4.

V.11. Camels kneel down] As they do for eaſe and reſt; and to load and unload: wherein he ſheweth himſelfe a faithful ſervant having care of his Maſters cattel, though out of ſight, and fear of him; and there is a compaſſion to be ſhewed to the dumb beaſt,Gen.33.13,14. Prov.12.10.

V.12. God of my Maſter] He doth not deny him to be his own God; but intitles him to Abraham in reſpect of Gods greater familiarity and ſolemn Covenant with him,and more gracious promiſes to him,for whoſe ſake he hopes for better ſucceſs,then for his own.

I pray thee] Marriage, though it be not a Sacrament, is not to be managed in a mere carnal or politick,but in a religious manner, 1 Tim. 4.3,4.

I pray thee ſend me good ſpeed] He ſheweth herein both his fidelity to his Maſter, in bearing a faithful, and affectionate heart to the affair he had in hand; and his piety to God, in begging a bleſſing upon it from above.Of the uſe and benefit of prayer, ſee Phil.4.6. 1 Theſ. 3.11,12.

V.14. Let it come to paſſe] The ſervant, moved by Gods Spirit, deſired to be aſſured by a ſign, whether God proſpered his journey, or no. It is like this godly man had ſome ſecret inſtinct of God for his requeſt, or a prediction from his Maſter,who foretold him that God would ſend his Angel before him, ver.7. if not, it was too much boldneſs to limit God to ſuch a condition; howſoever,it is a ſingular example, as that of Gideon, Judg.6. from ver.36. to the end of the Chapter, and not to be drawn into a rule of imitation.

V.15. Before he had done ſpeaking] God giveth good ſuceeſſe to all things that are undertaken for the glory of his name,and according to his will; and he is ſometimes ſo gracious in granting the deſires of ſincere hearts, as to yeild to their weakneſſe. See Geneſ.19.21. yea to their curioſity, Judg.6.36. and to be more ſpeedy in giving, then they can be in craving, Iſai.65.24. Dan.9.23. ſweet allurements to draw us to his ſervice.

pitcher upon her ſhoulder] A rich mans daughter, and a Match for a Princes ſon (for ſo was Iſaac, Gen.23.6.) fair to look upon, ver.16. did not in thoſe times of godly ſimplicity eat the bread of idleneſs, Prov. 31.27. nor diſdain honeſt though vulgar ſervices, Chap.18.6. ver.19,20 of this Chapter,and Chap.29.9,19,20. and Exod.2.16. Which may be a rebuke to the nice and mincing daughters of Sion,Iſa.3.16.who through pride and nicety live in the houſe as idle as the Lilies in the field, that neither labor nor ſpin,Mat.6.28. they will be content to wear Rebekahs Jewels, ver.22. but they will neither lay their hands nor ſhoulders to her work. See on Chap.25,29.

V.21.Wondring]He might wonder to ſee ſo much courteſie in a ſtranger,and ſo much humble, and laborious officiouſneſs (and ſo beautiful a virgin) to a ſtranger,ver.18,19,20.and it gave him occaſion to conſider, and to wonder at Gods providence giving ſuch ſpeed (as he might well hope) unto his prayer.

V.22. A golden ear-ring] Having firſt asked her, whoſe daughter ſhe was, (for ſo he ſaith, ver.47. repeating the paſſages betwixt them) he put upon her an habiliment, or Jewel of Gold; the word ſometimes ſignifieth an ear-ring, Gen.35.4. ſometimes a Noſe-jewel, as ſome render it in this place. In the wanton Wardrope of the daughters of Sion we find Noſe-jewels, mentioned, Iſa 3.21. which ſome people hang at their noſes, though they may be called noſe-jewels becauſe they hung down from the forehead to the noſe; ſometimes an ornament of the forehead,Ezek.16.12. Hence there is warrant for the godly to wear gold,and precious things; for being Gods goods, and gifts, his children have a good title to them as from him; but withal, firſt, they muſt have a good title to them in reſpect of men; by gift, inheritance, or purchaſe with their owne paines or coſt: ſecondly, they muſt be ordered with ſutableneſſe to their calling and condition in the Civil ſtate: thirdly, they muſt not be coſtly above their ability; fourthly, they muſt not alwayes uſe of them, eſpecially if grave Matrons, as Sarah, 1 Pet. 3. 3,6. Fifthly, they muſt neither be fond of them, to buy them at dear rates, nor proud of them, nor think the better of themſelves for them. Sixthly, in caſes of great neceſſity they muſt be willing to part with them. Seventhly, While they uſe them, they muſt have an eſpecial care to be adorned inwardly with ſpiritual graces, with faith, which is much more precious then gold, 1 Pet.1.7. and with a meek ſpirit, which in the ſight of God is of high price, 1 Pet.3.4. and to ſet their minds upon the golden glory, and precious Jewels of the new Jeruſalem, Rev.21.

half a ſhekel] The common ſhekel weighed 160 graines of Barley, the ſhekel of the Sanctuary was double to it; (as ſome conceive of it) ſome ſay it was not double to that, but to the ſhekel called the Royal ſhekel, which was in value about fifteen pence; but what was the juſt weight of the ſhekel in Abraham's time is uncertain, See Annot. on Chap.23.15.

V.24. Son of Milcah] Which ſheweth that Bethuel the father of Rebekah, who was Nahors ſon, had not a concubine, but a lawful wife unto his mother. See Chap.22.23,24.

V.26. Worſhiped the Lord] He gave thanks to God for the kindneſs offered, and further expected from the hand of man.

V.27. Lord,—who hath not left] He boaſteth not of his good fortune or good ſervice, but acknowledgeth that God hath dealt mercifully with his Maſter, in performing the promiſe made unto him.

V.28. Her mothers houſe] The women had lodgings apart from the men, both in houſes, as here; and in Tents, as in ver.67. of this chapter, and cha. 31.33.

He ungirded] To wit, Laban, whereby we ſee the gentle entertainment of ſtrangers uſed by the better ſort of people in thoſe times; which example may ſerve either for imitation or conviction of future ages.

V.32. To waſh] See Annot. on Chap.18.4.

V.33. Not eat until] The fidelity that ſervants owe to their Maſters, cauſeth them to prefer their Maſters buſineſſe before their own neceſſity, and this is not only in their Maſters ſight, but in their abſence alſo, and at great diſtance. See Epheſ.6. ver.5.6,7,8.

V.35. The Lord hath bleſſed] Gods bleſſing maketh man rich, Prov. 10.22.

and hath given him] Great godlineſs and great riches may ſometimes meet together in the ſame perſon. See Annot. on Chap.13.2.

V.37. Canaanites] See Annot. on ver.3.

V.45. In mine heart] The devotion of the heart, though not ſet down in words, prevaileth with God; a comfort to thoſe whoſe affections are better then their expreſſions; ſighs and groans that cannot be uttered, are the beſt Oratory with Almighty God. Rom.8.16.

V.47. Upon her face] Any Jewel that might be worn in the ear, was called an ear-ring, though ſome ſuch were ſometimes worn on the forehead, Ezek.16 12. and hanged down towards the noſe, therefore they were called noſe-jewels, Iſa.3 21. See Annot. on ver.22.

V.49. Deal kindly and truly] That is, if you will freely, and faithfully give your daughter to my Maſters ſon.

To the right hand or to the left] That is, that I may provide elſewhere. A proverbial ſpeech of doubting or indifferency, when it is affirmative; and of juſtice and uprightneſs, when it is negative.

V.50. Laban and Bethuel] Laban Bethuels ſon is ſet before Bethuel his father; ſome think there was another Bethuel that was Labans younger brother; if it be Bethuel Rebekahs father, mentioned, Gen. 22. 23. and in this Chapter, ver.15,24,47. then it is like that he being aged, committed the care of all to Laban, who having ſpoken firſt, what he ſaid might be ratified by his father, and by the counſel and perſwaſion of his ſon, who (it ſeemeth) with his mother had more to do in this matter then his father had; or meddled more in it then his father would. See ver.55.

bad or good] (Chap.31.ver.24,29.) That is, we can ſay nothing at all againſt it; no evil againſt the motion, no good reaſon why we ſhould not yeild unto it, ſince it is of God; or we can uſe neither fair means, nor fowle to hinder the motion.

V 51. As the Lord hath ſpoken] That is, as he hath expreſſed his pleaſure, by giving a ſign according to the prayer of his ſervant.

V.52. Bowing himſelf] (Verſ.26,48.) And in this his geſture of humility his devotion is noted, wherein it ſeems he had learned of his holy and humble Maſter, who though he were accepted by God as a friend, familiarity bred in him no contempt, Gen.17.3. but rather a deeper degree both of devotion and dejection; a fit example to upbraid and correct the ſurly or ſtately religion of ſome, who wil not bow when they beg for Gods beneficence, but ſit at prayer, as if they came to parley with God, as their fellow, upon even termes.

V.55. A few dayes] Heb. dayes, or a decad; that is ten dayes, ſome ſay ten months; a proportion of time fit to furniſh the bride for another family, and to take a ſolemn farewel of her fathers houſe.

V.57. At her mouth] That is, for her conſent; this ſheweth that parents have not authority to marry their children without the conſent of the parties; as the children have no power, to diſpoſe of themſelves in marriage, without the conſent of their parents. See Annot. on Gen. 21 21.

V 59. Her nurſe] Her name, Deborah, and burial is noted, Gen.35 8. her Rebekah took with her as a ſecond mother both in office and affection as her condition was capable of them; for when mothers forſake the duty of mothers, and turne their children over to be nouriſhed by other breſts then their own, they turn over the affection of their children to them alſo, which breedeth a natural dearneſs and tenderneſs, betwixt them; the tenderneſs of a nurſing father is noted, Num.11.12. and of a nurſing mother, 1 Theſ.2.7. and the reciprocal reſpect of their nurſe-children, is experimentally manifeſt very often: but though in Bethuels family a mother and a nurſe were two perſons; in Abraham's it was not ſo; there Sarah's example would be a better pattern for Rebekah, then her own mothers.

V.60. Poſſeſs the gate] That is, let it be victorious over its enemies: which bleſſing is fully accompliſhed in Jeſus Chriſt. See Annot. on Chap.22.17.

V.62. The well Lahai-roi] The name of the well that refreſhed fainting Iſhmael, ſee Gen.16.14. the word ſignifieth, the well of him that liveth, that ſeeth me. See chap.16.14.

he dwelt] Not apart from his Father, but with him; and it is like it was now at Beerſheba, whither Abraham's ſervant returned with the Bride, whence there might be ſome convenient walk towards the Well fore-mentioned.

V.63 To meditate] Or, to pray. The word in the Original ſignifieth both; and they ſort well together, for meditation is a meet preparative to prayer, and prayer a good concluſion, or ſhutting up of meditation.

at even tide] The latter part of the day is as fit for exerciſes of holineſs as the former; why then ſhould not the afternoon of the Sabbath be ſpent in Religious duties, as well as the forenoon.

V.64 She lighted off the Camel] See Joſ.15.18. 1 Sam.25.23.

V.65. A vail] The cuſtome was for the Spouſe to be brought to her husband, her head being covered, in token of her ſhamefaſtneſs and chaſtity. Some note a fourfold uſe of covering the head and face. Firſt, of grief, as in Davids mourning for Abſolom. Secondly, of indignation, as Hamans head was covered, when the Kings anger was kindled againſt him, Eſth. 7.8. Thirdly, of reverence; as Elijah covered his face, when he talked with God in Horeb, 1 King. 19. 13. Fourthly of ſhamefaſtneſs and modeſty, as this of Rebekah, wherein ſome have been ſo ſtrict, as to allow but liberty for one eye to ſee withal, and ſo rigorous, as to reject a wife for being ſeen abroad without a vail; to which we may add a fifth, the covering of ſubjection, 1 Cor.11.10. Theſe two laſt are moſt obſervable by the female Sexe; which with ſome of late hath been ſo fat out of uſe, as if they meant a great part to become Adamites, baring their breſts, backs, and arms, further then modeſty wil admit of.

V.67. Sarahs tent] It was the manner for women to have their tents apart from the men, eſpecially in great families, See Annot. on ve.28. and chap.23.2. and 31.33. and this was the means to prevent trouble to the men, and to preſerve modeſty in the women; for cohabitation of different ſexes, (except they be ſuch as are married together) may be dangerous on both ſides. As we ſee in the example of Lot, and his two daughters, living in the Cave. It ſeemeth Sarahs tent and furniture was reſerved for Iſaacs wife; for though Abraham meant to marry again, his mind was not that his ſecond wife, but his ſons wife (ſince he was his ſon by miracle, and his heir by promiſe) ſhould ſucceed his holy and worthy mother in her propriety and priviledges.

loved her] The buſineſſe of marriage beginneth with Iſaac in filial obedience, but it goeth on with a conjugal or husbandly benevolence, See Eph.5.25.

comforted after his mothers death] Which was three yeers before; now though his ſorrow for her were by this time well qualified, he had now and then ſad thoughts of her requiring a Comforter, which ſhewes a deep and durable affection towards her.

CHAP. XXV.

Verſ. 1. WIfe.] Whether ſhe were taken in Sarahs life time (as ſome hold) is uncertain, ſhe is called here a wife, but ver 6. ſhe is implicitely, and in 1 Chr.1.32. expreſly called a concubine, and Hagar is called a wife, chap.16.3. and it may be ſhe being an handmaid of Abrahams family, and Sarah dead, and Hagar diſmiſt, if not dead alſo, was taken to wife; and therein her condition was better then Hagars, for the wife (whether firſt or ſecond) was taken with more ſolemnity of marriage, and might not be caſt off as the Concubine; but ſhe was called a Concubine, becauſe her iſſue could not inherit, as the Concubines could not. See Annot. on Gen 22.24. and becauſe if taken during the life of the firſt wife, ſhe was not Lady or Miſtreſſe of the family, as the husband was Maſter.

And her name was Keturah] This Keturah is not the ſame woman with Hagar, (her name changed) for Hagars name is continued, ver. 12 nor is it likely that Abraham would make a bond-woman heir to her Miſtreſs (for the right of his perſon) whom he dearly loved, and honoured, who would not endure either her or her ſon to dwell in his family; and though Sarah were not dead, and could not make any quarrel of the matter as before; yet he would not give ſuch an occaſion of diſcontent to Iſaac, who could not but take the return of Hagar to his fathers bed with offence; nor is it like that Hagar being now about 80 years old, that he would take her for a wife, who married for the increaſe of his poſterity; nor that ſhe ſhould (being ſo old) be the mother of ſix ſons, as Keturah was, ver.2. nor is it probable that Keturah was taken to wife while Sarah lived, ſince there is no mention of her at all til after her death; and it is probable, not till three years after, for Abraham was no doubt as mindful of his wife, as Iſaac of his mother, and as mournful, and ſo would not marry before him; and (according to the order of the ſtory) it is moſt like, that he married afterwards; and it was convenient, that Iſaac a young man, and mature for marriage, (being now forty years of age, Gen. 25. 20.) ſhould have one wife, before his old father had two.

V. 2. ſhe bare him] It is no marvell that Keturah ſhould bear ſix ſons, for we read not ſhe was old, and by her preſent fruitfulneſſe, we may conceive ſhe was young; but that Abraham, who fourty years before (that is, before Iſaac was born) was held too old to be the father of a child, his body (not Sarahs onely) being then as dead, Rom. 4. 19. in reſpect of impotency to procreate, ſhould be the father of ſo many children, is very ſtrange, and in appearance improbable. Anſw. It was not by virtue of Abrahams natural ability, which a good while before was dead, but by a new ſtrength given him by God, who had promiſed him a multiplyed poſterity, Gen. 17. 5. (Which had a ratification not onely in Sarahs iſſue, but in Keturahs alſo) and was able to make his promiſe good, as well in old as in young Abraham, either by continuing or renewing the maſculine vigor (reſtored to him at the begetting of Iſaac) in his conjugall ſociety with Keturah: and his bleſſing was the more apparent, by how much, by the courſe of nature, Abraham was more impotent.

V. 4. the ſons of Midian] Were five, the founders of ſo many royal families, whence it is that five Kings of Midian are reckoned, Num. 31. 18. of which five, four are mentioned Judg. 7. 25. & Chap. 8. 5.

V. 5. all to Iſaac] That is, all the eſtate he had at the time of his death; for before that he had given portions to the ſons of his concubines and ſent them away; and that was ſo little in reſpect of his main eſtate, that Iſaac had (in a manner) all given to him, as it is ſaid, Chap. 24. 36. before his marriage with Rebekah.

V. 6. Concubines] See Annot. on ver. 1. and on Chap. 22. 24.

ſent them away] Becauſe Iſaac's poſterity was to inherit the Land of Canaan, and that would be too little for the numerous progeny of all Abraham's children.

Eaſt countrey] That is, in reſpect of the Land of Canaan, as Arabia, Syria, and other places of like ſituation. See Judg. 6. 3. & Chap 7. 12. Job 1. 3.

V. 8. in a good old age] (Gen. 15. 15. Judg. 8. 32.) when he was 175 years old. See the Annot. on Chap. 24. 1.

full] (1 Chr. 29. 28. Job 42. 17.) The Original hath no more; for ſometimes the word is left out in the Hebrew, which by the ſenſe is eaſily ſupplyed; as Pſal. 73. 10. Waters of a full are wrung out unto them, that is, waters of a full cup, or veſſell. So here Abraham was full, that is, of dayes, or yeares; or full in the fulfilling of his deſires for this life, not much caring for any more of the world.

gathered to his people] The like phraſe is uſed of Iſhmael, verſ. 17. and hereby the ancients ſignified, that man by death periſhed not wholly, but as the ſoules of the godly lived after in perpetual joy, ſo the ſoules of the wicked in perpetual pain; and though the godly ſoul departing hence, be ſeparated from humane ſociety, it is not deſtitute of very good company. See Heb. 12. 23, 24.

V. 9. Iſaac and Iſhmael] Iſhmael was elder, but Iſaac is ſet before him, as being a better man, and better born, for his mother was a free-woman, Iſhmaels a bond-woman; and he was born in a better ſtate, for he was born of a lawful wife, Iſhmael of a concubine; and to a better eſtate, for he was heir of the principal promiſe of God made to Abraham, Iſhmael though hee were not again received into Abraham's family, dwelt not at ſo great diſtance, but that he might hear of his death, and ſo come to his burial.

bleſſed Iſaac] As he was the ſeed rather of faithfull belief then of fleſhly ability, Rom. 4. 19. So the bleſſing was rather ſpiritual, then temporal; for Iſaac was an husband twenty yeares before he was a father; whereas Iſhmael was a father ſooner, and that of twelve Princes, ver. 19. according to the promiſe of God to Abraham, Chap. 17. 20.

V. 13. generations] Or genealogy, as their pedegree hath been ſet down in Regiſters and Records.

V. 14. Dumah] Of this Dumah the ſon of Iſhmael, the Idumeans are thought by ſome to have deſcended; by others the Idumeans are held to be the poſterity of Eſau or Edom, called Idumeans or Edomeans.

V. 15. Tema] Of whom was the Countrey and City of Tema or Teman, bordering upon the South of Idumea, of which Countrey was Job's friend Eliphaz, Job. 2. 11. and ſome ſay King alſo.

V. 16. townes and] By the places where they ſorted together for cohabitation or dwelling, and their Caſtles or ſtrong holds againſt their enemies, which haply bare the name of ſome eminent perſon of their family or kindred.

V. 17. gathered to his people] From which place the Hebrews collect the repentance and ſalvation of Iſhmael. See the Annot. on ver. 8.

V. 18. Havilah] An ample Region of Arabia, reaching from the Perſian gulph to the red Sea, and to Egypt, whereof mention is made, Chap. 2. 8. not that Havilah of India, or any Region in Africa.

died in the preſence of all his Brethren] His brethren all ſurviving him, and by their vicinity, if not preſent at his death, yet taking notice of it; the Hebrew word Naphal, ſignifying to fall, is referred by ſome to a lot, that is, ſo they take the ſenſe to be the allotting of his portion in the preſence of his brethren, Chap. 16. 12. See the Annot. on that verſe.

V. 20. Padan Aram] The name not of the City of Bethuel, for that was Charran or Haran, but of the countrey called alſo Syria, where that City ſtood, which Syria in Hebrew is called Aram, from Aram the Son of Sem, Gen. 10. 22. whence ſome Tranſlations have the words Aram and Aramites, whereas others uſe the words Syria and Syrians; both names ſignifie the ſame country and people; it is ſometimes called Aram-Naharaim, Pſ. 60. title. That is, Aram of two Rivers, for Naharaim is the dual number of Nahar a River; and Padan in the Chaldee and Syriak tongue ſignifieth a couple: thence it is called Padan-Aram, becauſe it is ſituate betwixt a couple of Rivers, Tigris and Euphrates; and for the ſame reaſon it is called Meſopotamia in Greek, which word ſignifieth in the middeſt of Rivers; Bethuel is here called a Syrian of Padan Aram, for diſtinction from the other Syria, called Syriah Zobah, or Aram Zobah, Pſal. 60 tit. Adrich. Delph. Theatr. Ter. Sanct. pag. 94. 95.

V. 21. Iſaac intreated the Lord] The Lord had promiſed to make good the promiſes made to Abraham in Iſaac, Gen. 21. 12. yet Iſaac prayeth to God, and continued to pray unto him many years, and at laſt was heard in that he prayed for; of whom we are to learn neither to preſume upon Gods promiſes, without doing our duties, nor to be weary of praying, if God be not ſpeedy in granting what we pray for; For being without a child for twenty years after he was married, v. 20, 26. ſo ſoon as he conceived that Rebekah was barren, not ſeeking a more fruitful Bed-fellow, nor the offering any ſuch unto his choice, he often, and a long time importuned God to make her the mother, as he hoped himſelf ſhould be the father, of many Nations.

For his wife] Heb. againſt his wife Becauſe (as ſome take it) ſhe had no mind to be a mother, or, becauſe of the pains of childbirth which were againſt her; but the meaning may be, that they prayed in ſuch a poſture, as that one was placed over againſt the other. Or againſt his wife, that is, as David prayed againſt Achitophel, that is, not againſt his perſon, but againſt his policy, ſo Iſaac prayed not againſt the perſon of Rebekah, but againſt her barrenneſs.

barren] It is noted of many worthy women, that their fruitfulneſs hath been reſtrained for a long time, as Sarah, Rebekah, Rachel, Hannah the mother of Samuel, in the Old Teſtament, and Elizabeth the mother of John Baptiſt in the New; whoſe long waiting hath been recompenſed (at laſt) with an happy birth of a worthy perſon. In ſuch examples God ſheweth his power over nature to make it fruitleſs, or fruitful, as he pleaſeth; and thereby tempereth the affection, that it may not be too much ſet upon a beautiful perſon, as Rebekah was, Chap. 24. 16. and increaſeth the devotion of prayer for the bleſſing.

V. 22. Children ſtruggled] It is not ſtrange for a woman with child with twins, to feel ſome painful ſprunings of them within her, eſpecially towards the birth, when each ſtriveth firſt to come forth: but this was more then ordinary, and therefore it was not onely a miſery to her, which ſhe could not bear without complaint, but a myſtery alſo, figuring the conflicts of two Nations, ver. 23.

to inquire of the Lord] She went apart to ſome private place by prayer, to intreat the Lord to acquaint her with the cauſe of ſuch extraordinary commotion within her.

V. 23. two Nations] That is, two perſons virtually including two Nations, as in their root, and original, as all mankind was radically contained in Adam, becauſe all proceeded from his loyns: theſe two Nations are thoſe which in after time were called Iſraelites, and Edomites or Idumeans; of theſe the people deſcended from the younger brother ſhall prevail above the poſterity of the elder; and the Iſraelites which are (if true Iſraelites) the true Church Militant, ſhall be the Triumphant Church above the malignant Idumeans.

the elder ſhall ſerve the younger] Upon this place the Apoſtle grounds the Doctrine of Free-Grace in the election of ſome, and reprobation of others, before the doing of good, or evil, Rom. 9. 12, 13. ſee on Mal. 1. 2, 3. But for clearer explication of this place, we muſt note that the words may be taken either in reſpect of the perſons of theſe contending twins, or in reſpect of their poſterities; in reſpect of their perſons, the preeminence of Jacob the younger above Eſau the elder, conſiſted 1. In the prerogative of the birthright, (which gave him authority over his brethren and the reſt of the houſhold under his father) devolved from Eſau to him. 2. In the promiſe of the Land of Canaan. 3. In the holy Covenant of Religion with God, whereby his Church was propagated in Jacob's poſterity, not in Eſau's, and to that Church humble ſubjection is propheſied, Eſa. 49. 23. See alſo, Gal. 4. 25, 26. Rev. 3. 9. But otherwiſe in reſpect of temporal preeminence Jacob might be ſaid to ſerve Eſau, for he called himſelf his ſervant. Gen. 32. 18, 20. and Eſau his Lord, Gen. 33. 8, 13 14. and did him homage, bowing himſelf to the ground many times before him, Gen. 33 3. yet did the poſterity of Jacob ſubdue the poſterity of Eſau, when in David's time the Idumeans or Edomites that came of Eſau (who was called Edom, v. 30.) were ſubdued by the Iſraelites, (who deſcended of Jacob, and bare his name, for he was alſo Iſrael, Gen. 32. 28.) and were brought under their ſubjection, 2. Sam. 8. 14. and though for their ſins afterwards the Edomites broke their yoke, as Iſaac propheſied, Gen. 27. 40. yet the Iſraelites never ſerved the Idumeans, or Edomites. See the Annot. on Gen. 27. 40.

V. 15. red like an hairy garment] With red hair all over his body: a ſtrange and extraordinary birth, importing that Eſau would prove a cholerick, cruel, and brutiſh man, and of monſtrous ill manners; in whoſe perſon God prefigured the bloudy and barbarous diſpoſition of ſuch as perſecute his Church and Children, Ezek. 35. 5 Obad. 10.

Eſau] The word ſignifieth either made, or, perfect, by which was meant the ſtrength of his conſtitution, as if he were already rear'd, or nurſt, and rather like a man with a beard, then a new born babe without teeth; and that name might be given him, with a purpoſe to pleaſe the mother, who being a beautifull woman, would be apt to take diſcontent at a deformed or unhandſome child, as Eſau was, being very hairy, as Jacob ſaid of him, my brother is an hairy man. See Chapter 17. verſ.11.

V.26. took hold] A Divine preſage that Jacob ſhould ſupplant him, and bring down his head, as by tripping up his heels; which came to paſs in his getting of the preeminence of the birth-right, and in other matters, whereof ſee Annot. on ver.23.

Jacob] Heb. Jaghnakob. His name beares the remembrance of the act, for it ſignifieth a ſupplanter or taker up of the heel, from Ghnakeb, which in Hebrew ſignifieth the heel, or the ſole of the foot, or from Ghnakab, which ſignifieth to deceive by ſupplanting, or taking hold of the ſole of the foot

V.17. hunter] The different diſpoſition of the godly and the wicked is figured in theſe two ſons: the one like Nimrod, Gen 10. 9. are of harſh, rough and fierce natures, and give themſelves to exerciſes of violence, as Eſau did; the other more diſpoſed to civel ſociety and benignity, as Jacob was.

V.28. Iſaac loved Eſau] Iſaac loved Eſau better then Jacob, as Rebekah loved Jacob better then Eſau; and he loved him becauſe he did eat of his veniſon; it was then a fleſhly love, and ſo an infirmity in Iſaac; but withal, Eſau being cunning, not only in hunting for the prey, verſ.27. but otherwiſe, might inſinuate into the affections of his Father; and by being very officious to pleaſe his palate, might make himſelf as great a Favourite with Iſaac, as Jacob was with Rebekah.

V.29. Jacob ſod pottage] Houſhold ſervices in thoſe dayes were not ſo diſtinguiſhed as now they be, ſo that the ſons might dreſſe meat, as well as the daughters; and the daughters carry upon their ſhoulders as Rebekah did, Chap.24. 15. as well as the ſonnes.

V.30. with that ſame red pottage] Heb. with that red, with that red. Red by ſome herbs, as lentiles, whereof they were made, ſee ver.34. or, by ſomewhat put into them which might give them that colour, as Saffron. The word red, is doubled, becauſe the pottage was red, as the good good, Judg.11. 25. emphatically ſignifieth very good, and naught naught, Prov. 20. 14. very naught.

therefore was his name called Edom] For that ſignifieth red; and that name might be given him not onely becauſe he was greedy of this red pottage, doubling the word red, as it appeared to his ſenſe, and omitting the word pottage, but alſo becauſe he was red in complexion and colour of his body, verſ. 25. being overgrown with red hair. And it is to be noted, that by the better ſort he was more commonly called by his worſe name Edom, then by his better name Eſau, (which ſignifieth made, or perfect) and rather from the redneſſe of the pottage whereabout he offended, then the redneſſe of his body which was without his fault. He had (as ſome think) a third name, which was Seir, from his haurineſſe; for Seir ſignifieth hairy; but in the Scripture it is not given him as a proper name, as Edom and Eſau were, but as an appellative, or a common name, or title; for he was hairy Eſau, as his Father was blind Iſaac, whoſe proper name was Iſaac, and blind, an appellative title added to it.

V.31. ſell me this day thy birth-right] The birthright contained a fatherly preeminence over the brethren, the Office of the Prieſt-hood, before the Law written, and a double portion of the fathers eſtate, Deut.21. 17. but for the Prieſthood it was otherwiſe before the Law of Moſes then afterward, for before Moſes time the Prieſthood was not limited to the elder brother, for Abel offered ſacrifice as well as Cain, and the father of the family while he lived, was ordinarily the Prieſt, and when he dyed, his eldeſt ſon ſucceded in that office, as well as in the government of the family; but in Moſes time there was a law for the firſtborn of man and beaſts, the one as a Prieſt to offer, the other as a ſacrifice to be offered, Exod.13. 2. In denying Eſau relief in his hunger, except upon ſuch hard termes, Jacob ſeemeth to have ſhewed himſelf an uncharitable man, and a very unkind brother; but it is like his mother, who received the propehcy of his preeminence, verſ.23. directed her younger ſon (as by an eſpecial providence of God) how to deal with the elder. See on verſ. 33.

V.32. at the point to dye] Heb. going to dye. No great danger of death, but this was an expreſſion noting the greedineſs of his appetite, and greatneſſe of his paſſion.

V.33. ſwear] An oath is more then a promiſe, and ſo much as may oblige the conſcience of a profane perſon, who cares not to violate or break his word, if he be no further bound.

this day] It is probable that this was not the firſt time that Eſau and Jacob had parley about the primogeniture; Eſau was not a man fitly qualified for it, becauſe he had more mind to be among unreaſonable creatures in the field, then reaſonable men in the family: for the Prieſthood he was too profane, and under that title he is taxed, Heb.12. 16. and here it is ſaid, that he deſpiſed it, verſ.34. and for the double portion the priviledge of the firſt-born, Deut.21. 17. he had no need of it, for he could carve himſelf a competent maintenance with his ſword, as his father foretold of him, Chap.27.48. therefore having often, as it is like, made light of it, and promiſed to give it up unto his brother, he now took advantage of his preſent hunger, to make a firm and final bargain for it to be ratified with an oath: wherein he did unkindly in denying relief to his brother in neceſſity, unjuſtly in requiring too great a price of that he ſold, and impiouſly in tempting him to ſo profane a contempt, if he had not ſome ſecret inſtinct, or ſome revelation (by his mother conſulting with God, or ſome other way) for the carriage of the contract in this ſort; howſoever the great wiſdome of God can order ſmal occaſions, as this was, to great purpoſes, and can convert the weakneſs, and wickedneſs of men to his own glory: yet this muſt not embolden any to do as Jacob did, unleſs upon ſuch warrant as Jacob had.

V.34. deſpiſed his birthright] Neither before nor after the ſale of his birthright did he think or care how bad his bargain was by ſelling ſo precious a thing for ſo poor a price, but did eat and drink and go away without any repentance for what he had done. See Heb.12. 16. Yet he might have a purpoſe to recover that again by force, which he conceived was gotten by fraud.

CHAP. XXVI.

Verſ.1. IN the land] That is, of Canaan; though it were a fruitful Land, Gods curſe for mans ſin made it unable to feed the Inhabitants, Pſal.107. 34.

beſides the firſt] Whereof Chap. 21. Deliverance from afflictions is no aſſurance that they ſhall not return; if men renew their ſins, God may and will recal his plagues, and puniſh them again. See Lev.26.15. &c. Pſal.78.

Abimelech King] See Annot. on ver.26.

V.2. Go not down into Egypt] Gods providence alwayes watcheth to direct the wayes of his children, and to ſee them provided for in the hardeſt times, Pſal.37. 19. Though Egypt were a very fruitful place, and Iſaac might have a mind to ſojourn there as did his father before him, yet he is eſpecially forbidden ſo to do, becauſe now God had revealed the captivity of Abraham's poſterity in that Land, which then he had not done; and that he would have him guided rather by his own words, then by his fathers example, though that in many things was a good pattern for his practice, as it is propoſed to him, ver.5.

V. 3. I will be with thee] As God made the promiſe of his free mercy; ſo doth the confirmation thereof proceed from the ſame fountain.

unto thee] To thee as a ſojourner, to thy poſterity as owners by way of propriety, poſſeſſion, and hereditary right.

V.5 Becauſe that Abraham obeyed] He commendeth Abraham's obedience, becauſe Iſaac ſhould be more ready to follow him in the like.

becauſe] God makes good his Promiſe and Covenant out of the ſame goodneſſe that moves him to make it, and that is his own pure grace, not mans merit, Rom.4. 4. & Chap.3. 28. yet on mans part there are conditions required, and by the aſſiſtance of divine grace performed, and graciouſly accepted, and mentioned as if there were ſome cauſalitie in them for Gods acceptance; not to make man confident in himſelf, but diligent in his duty to his Maker, So Chap.22. 16.

obeyed my voice and kept my charge, &c.] This variety of expreſſion commends Abraham's promptneſs, in obeying God in what way ſoever he was pleaſed to reveal his Will unto him.

V.7. ſhe is my ſiſter] In this Iſaac followeth the example of his Father, Gen. 12. 13. not unknown, though unſeen, how needful it is for parents to take heed of ſetting an ill example before their children, how apt they are to follow them, rather in evil, then in good; for Abraham's obedience is commended, ver. 5. and the firſt imitation of him that is noted, is in that wherein he ſhould have ſhunned his example: yet by way, not of defence, (for there was untruth in their intent) but of extenuation; the phraſe of the time may be alledged, which called even ſtrangers by the name of brethren. See Gen.29. 4.

feared to ſay] Whereby we ſee that fear and diſtruſt is found in the beſt, not as a barren ſin which begets not another, but as a parent of lying: ſo the terrour of the wrack may be the ſhipwrack of truth, though uſed to extort a confeſſion of the truth.

V.8. looked out] This was not ſhortly, but a good while after they came to Gerar; and it was in the day time, haply in ſome Garden, where the King having high, and free proſpect every way, might ſee them, as David did Bathſheba, when ſhe was bathing of her ſelf, 2Sam. 11. ver.2.

ſporting] Shewing ſome familiar ſign of love, whereby it might be known, or probably ſuppoſed ſhe was his wife: the word here uſed for ſporting in the Original, is neer of kin to the name of Iſaac, ſignifying laughter, Gen.21.3. and the very ſame which is uſed of Iſhmaels mocking of him, ch.21. v.9. of the ſame Chapter; for the ſame act may (according to the diſpoſition of the mind) be taken in a good or bad ſenſe; and for the carriage of Iſaac, it was ſome ſignification of pleaſing familiarity, which might be allowed betwixt man and wife, Deut.24. 5. Prov.5. 18. but not betwixt a brother and a ſiſter, (though it were not ſuch as was proper for the bed, or for the night, for Iſaac and Rebekah had both more grace and modeſty, then ſo to behave themſelves in the day, where the King might ſee them) which made Abimelech ſo confident that ſhe was his wife, and not his ſiſter; as is ſhewed in the next verſe.

V.10. VVhat is this that] Abimelech paſſionately expoſtulateth with Iſaac concerning the denial of his wife; which ſheweth how adultery and diſſimulation were condemned even by heathen morality, and ſhameth the wantonneſſe and wickedneſſe of ſuch as profeſſing true Religion, make no ſcruple or conſcience to commit ſuch ſins.

guiltineſſe upon us] The act of ſin committed by one may bring a guilt upon others; a guilt with the puniſhment due unto it. See Annot. on Chap.20.9. In all ages men were perſwaded that Gods vengeance ſhould light upon wedlock-breakers, V.11. He that toucheth] (Ver.29. and Joſh.9.19. Ruth 2.9.) that is, he that hurteth or wrongeth them, Pſal.105.15 eſpecially that wrongeth either of them by any immodeſt or unlawful touching of his wife. See Gen.20.6. Prov.6 29. 1 Cor.7.1.

V.12. ſowed in that land] Not any as his own poſſeſſion, but either hired for his uſe, or not uſed by others becauſe barren and waſte.

V.12. an hundred fold] An hundred grains for one, or an hundred meaſures for one; the Septuagint ſpecifie the grain, ſaying, it was an hundred meaſures of barley, haply miſtaken by reaſon of the vicinity of the word Shegnarim, ſignifying meaſures, and Shegnorim, ſignifying Barley, which differ little in the Hebrew letters: the greateſt increaſe which our Saviour mentioneth in the Parable of the ſeed, Matth.13. 8. is an hundred fold, and though in ſome extraordinary fruitful ſoiles the return be noted to one hundred and fifty, three hundred, yea four hundred for one, *Plin. lib.*18. *cap.*10. yet in ſuch a ſoil as Iſaac tilled, eſpecially in a time of famine, it might be accounted a miraculous fruitfulneſſe to receive an hundred for one.

The Lord bleſſed him] See how, verſ.13, 14, 15. and therewithall, that of Solomon fulfilled; The bleſſing of the Lord maketh rich, Prov.10. ver.22.

V.14. Servants] Or, husbandry; as in the Margine; that is, much ground for tillage, and many ſervants to manure it.

envied him] The proſperity of the godly is an affliction to the wicked, Pſal.112. 10. by their envie at it, for envie ſlayeth the ſilly one, Job.5. 2.

V.15. the Philiſtims ſtopped] The hatred of the Religious, and breaking covenant with them by the wicked, is very ancient; yet to defend and plead for breach of faith with the faithful under the name of Hereticks, is an heretical practice, both new and naught.

V.17. the valley of Gerar] The Hebrew word ſignifieth a Flud, or valley, where water at any time runneth; but becauſe by the confluence of waters in ſuch low places, eſpecially after rain, or ſnow, the waters run muddy, there was need of Wels, whence it might be drawn more cleer, and better for uſe, both of man and beaſt.

V.18. digged again] Becauſe he was ſure there was water there, and that he had a right unto it, and in renewing that right he renewed the gratefull memory of his gracious father.

V.20. ours] Becauſe it was digged in their ground, yet not theirs in right, becauſe it was digged with the conſent of the owners.

V.23. thence to Beerſheba] The famine being ended, he returned to the place whence famine had driven him.

V.24. God of Abraham] God aſſureth Iſaac againſt all fear by rehearſing the promiſe made to Abraham, to whom with ſingular favour he entitles his Godhead, as if he were his God more then any ones; and in that he is called the God of Abraham after the burial of his body, it is an Argument that he liveth in ſoul, for God is not the God of the dead, but of the living, Mat.22. 32.

V.25. Altar there] (Gen.13. 18.) To ſignifie that he would ſerve no other God, but the God of his father Abraham.

V.26. Abimelech —— and Phicol] The ſame name we read of, Gen. 21. 22. but whether they be the ſame men, that there made the Covenant with Abraham is uncertain, they might be the ſame ſuppoſing them to be about an hundred years of age. But then it is ſomewhat ſtrange, that in this entercourſe there is no mention of the accord with Abraham in former times, and that a man ſo well minded as that Abimelech ſeemed to be (if he were the ſame) by his good dealing, firſt with Abraham, Chap.20. and ſince with Iſaac, ver.10, 11. of this Chapter, ſhould deal ſo unjuſtly with him, as to with-hold the uſe of thoſe Wels from his heir, which by a ſolemn Covenant were his, unleſs envie at his proſperity (which was ſuch, that he deſired Iſaac's departing from him, ver.16. and which Iſaac interpretes as a teſtimony of hatred, ver. 27.) ſhould make him become injurious to him; or unleſs wrong were done by his ſervants without his knowledge, as before is noted in the ſtory of Abraham, Gen.21. 26. it may therefore be another; Abimelech (ſignifying my father the King) might be an hereditary Title of the Kings of Gerar, as the name Pharaoh was of the Kings of Egypt; and the word Phicol compounded of two Hebrew words, Phi, or Phe, a mouth, or face; and Col, all, the mouth of all, might be a name of office; for a man of publick power, and authority, was as it were the mouth of all by his ſpeaking in the publick affaires, wherein all were concerned and concluded; or the face on whom every one caſt his eyes, as expecting from him counſel, command, or conduct.

went to him] Not out of love, for they hated him, ver.27. but in craft to ſet upon him, if they ſaw him too feeble for them; and if not, to treat with him upon termes of friendſhip.

V.28. with thee] See Annot. on ver.3.

V.29. that thou wilt] Heb. if thou ſhalt, &c. The Hebrews in ſwearing begin commonly with If, and underſtand the reſt, that is, that God ſhall puniſh him that breaks the Oath; as if he that ſweareth ſhould ſay, I ſwear to do thus, and thus, and if I falſifie my Oath, let the puniſhment or judgement of God light upon me. See Annot. on Gen.14. 23.

do us no hurt] Here the wicked ſhew, that they are afraid, leſt that come upon them, which they would do to others.

V.31. betimes] Peace is to be embraced with cheerfulneſſe and expedition, and oathes of agreement chiefly to be made freſh and faſting with all reverence and ſobriety.

V.33. Beerſheba] See Annot. on Chap. 21. 31.

V.34. Judith] Eſaus wives, and their Fathers, had ſeverall names, Gen.36. 2. (for he had no more wives of the Canaanites but two) as himſelf had; for he was called Eſau, Edom, and Seir. See Annot. on Chap.25. 25, 30.

Hittite] Eſau married, as his father did, at the age of fourty; but he did not like him in following his Fathers mind in the choyce of a wife, for he took two for one, two Hittites the worſt ſort of Canaanites, Ezek.16 3. whereas his holy grandfather took a ſolemn oath of his ſervant to provide a wife for his ſon among his own kindred, without the Land of Canaan, Gen 24. 3. ſo that his marriage was not onely without his parents conſent, but againſt their mind, which is leſſe reſpect to both, then Iſhmael ſhewed to one, and that one of the weaker ſexe; and in condition much more unworthy then either of them.

V.35. a grief] See Annot. on Chap.27. verſ. laſt.

CHAP. XXVII.

Verſ.1. OLd] Viz. One hundred thirty ſeven yeares of age, which ſome Chronological Accountants by collation of ſeveral places of Scripture make up thus; Jacob was born in the ſixtieth year of Iſaac, Chap.25. 26. and being now ſeventy ſeven years old, Iſaac muſt be one hundred thirtie ſeven: And that at his flight to his Uncle Laban (which preſently followed the getting of the bleſſing) he was ſeventy ſeven years of age, appears thus; from the time of his coming thither, he ſerved Laban twenty years, Chap.31. 38, and in the begining of the fourteenth year of his ſervitude Joſeph was borne, Chap.30. 25. 26. in the fourtieth year of Joſephs age Jacob went into Egypt; compare Chap.41. 46. with 45. 6. and Jacob went thither in the one hundred and thirtyeth year of his age, Chap.47.9. out of which, deduct the fourty years of Joſephs age, and the thirteen years ſpent in ſervice before he was born, and there will remain ſeventy ſeven.

his eyes were dimme] (Gen 48. 10. 1 Sam.32) It is ſaid of Moſes when he was but ſeventeen yeares younger, viz. one hundred and twenty years old, that his ſight was not dimme, Deut.34. 7. but that is noted of him as a thing extraordinary.

V. 2. I knew not] This reaſon is not to be referred to the meat, but to the bleſſing, which was moſt ſeaſonable when it was pronounced, as the laſt act of a Fathers office, with a farewell to the world.

I know not the day of my death] Uncertanty of the day of death, ſhould make us wiſe to order the time of life with a double providence; the one for others in this world, the other for our ſelves in the next; and ſo to ſet our ſelves in preſent expectation of our parting, or our Maſters coming, Mat.13. 5. but for ſuch preparation no man ſhall dye the ſooner, for Iſaac after this lived 40 yeares, even to one hundred eighty years, Gen.35. 28, 29.

V. 4. meat] For ſuch as are of full bodies, and good ſtrength, faſting may be a good preparation to ſpiritual duties; but for ſuch as are weak, and in a declining ſtate, as Iſaac was, meat may chear up their ſpirits, and make them more vigorous in devotion: ſo it may be better for ſome to receive the Sacrament of the Lords Supper faſting; for others, after ſome refreſhing.

my ſoul may bleſſe] The carnal affection that he had to his ſon Eſau, made him forget that which God ſpake to his wife, Chap.25. 23. See verſ. 28. of that Chapter, and the Annot. upon it.

My ſoul] That I may bleſs thee with all my heart.

bleſſe thee] (Chap.28. 3, 4. & 48. verſ.15, 19, 20. & 49. 26, 27.) The Prieſts, Gen.14. 19. & Num.6. from verſ.23. to the end of the Chapter, did (in the name of the Lord, and by warrant from him) bleſſe the people; ſo did the Patriarchs, (who were Prieſts in their families, and ſome of them Prophets) bleſs their children; Chap.28. 3, 4. and 48. 5. 16. 20. & 49. 26, 28. wherein if they followed the guidance of Gods Spirit, rather then their own affections it took effect, otherwiſe the bleſſing followed rather the faith of the receiver, then of the bleſſer; thence it was that ſome did bleſs, others were bleſſed better then others, Gen.49. 26. Heb.12. 17. Now for Iſaac, is ſeems, he either did not underſtand, or not remember the Oracle of God concerning the prelation of the younger brother before the elder, or elſe it went againſt his heart or ſoul to pronounce the bleſſing according to it.

V.7. before the Lord] That is, in his preſence, and with his allowance, who by his gracious act will ratifie my word, and intent.

V.9. two good kids] Two Kids ſeem too much for one diſh of meat, but out of both ſhee might take the choyceſt parts, to make it dainty, and the juyce of the reſt might ſerve for ſauce, or for the reſt of the Family, which was not ſmall.

V. 11. Jacob ſaid] His mother, it ſemeth, (though it be not ſo expreſſed) had adviſed him not only to bring his fathers diſh of meat, but to preſent it as in the name and perſon of his brother Eſau.

ſeem to him as a deceiver] Jacob is ſaid to be a plain man, chap.25. 27. Yet now he muſt play the ſubtle perſon; and the more ſubtle, becauſe he had more mind to ſeem ſo, then to be ſo. The plain dealing of the godly is out of their love to ſincerity, not out of ſimplicity, or ſillineſſe, for they could play the Polititians, as well as others, if their wits were not over-ruled in their working by their conſciences: the like may be obſerved in Rebekahs carriage of the whole project.

V.12. I ſhall bring a curſe] Deceit, though uſed for advantage or defence, is dangerous; and it is eſpecially both prohibited and threatned, if it be a deceit of the blind; Deut.26. 18. And in matter of religiouſly gion, Jer.48. 10. Mal.1. 14. This was both, and therefore Jacobs fear was not without cauſe.

V.13. upon me be thy curſe] Her confidence was great, and made up of vehement affection to her ſon, of a ſtrange opinion of the ſucceſſe of her device, but eſpecially of a belief that God would eſtabliſh the bleſſing on Jacobs perſon, for which it is like ſhe had a reſolution from God upon her conſultation with him, Gen.25. 22, 23. Though this deceitful way was of her own deviſing, not of Gods direction.

V.15. goodly raiment] Heb. deſireable. A ſuit of Eſaus laid up, not to be worn every day, but upon ſome extraordinary occaſion, as this was; ſome think it was a holy robe made for the firſt-born to uſe in holy miniſtrations, and therefore rather kept in the cuſtody of Eſau's mother, then of his wives. But there is no ground for that in Scripture; it might be a better ſuit then ordinary kept by his mother for ſhift, when he came to his Father.

V.16. skins of kidds of the goats upon his hands] To reſemble Eſau, who was all over like an hairy garment, Gen.25. 25. And his hands and neck were thus diſguiſed, not his face; for by this time his face might be rough with a beard, as well as Eſaus, (though his hands and neck were ſmooth) for he was as old as Eſau, within a very little, they being twins; and Eſau now was married, and he was not married, until he was fourty yeares of age, Gen.26. 34.

V.19. I am Eſau] Though Jacob was aſſured of the Bleſſing by Faith, yet he did evil to ſeek it by lyes; and the more, becauſe he abuſeth Gods Name thereunto, verſ. 20. Some ſay, it was not a lye, but a myſtery; others, that it was a literal truth, for he was the firſt-born by the right of purchaſe, but he was not Eſau that ſold it, but Jacob that bought it, and he calleth himſelf by the name of Eſau, as our Saviour called John Baptiſt, Elias, Mat.11. 14. but he called John, Elias, not in perſon, but in office; and they to whom he ſpake, underſtood it not of Elias perſonal preſence, but by way of alluſion, or reſemblance, whereas Jacob meant, and was underſtood of Eſaus perſon, both in this verſe, and verſ.24. Beſides, he diſſembled, and ſpake untruly, in ſaying in this verſe, he had done as his father bad him; and calling his meat Veniſon, and in anſwering, the Lord had brought it to his hands, ver.20. as if he had made his hunting ſucceſſeful ſooner, then at other times.

V.22. the voyce of Jacob] This (as alſo verſ.23.) declareth that he ſuſpected ſomething, yet God would not have his Decree altered.

V.23. he diſcerned him not] His eyes were dim, by them he could not judge: his hearing was better; but upon his touching, finding him rough like Eſau, he gave as much credit to his hands as to his ears; the voice is Jacobs voyce, but the hands are the hands of Eſau, verſ.22. and being in doubt what to think, his other two ſenſes, his taſting and ſmelling, verſ.25, 27. bare falſe witneſs according to Jacobs words, and ſo he reſolved that Jacob was Eſau, and gave him the bleſſing. The Spirit which aſſiſted him in the benediction of Jacob and Eſau, and the prediction of Events concerning both, did not diſcover the deceit of his wife and ſon; for the illumination was by particular acts, not by way of habit imparted to him.

V. 27. as the ſmell of a field] Thoſe parts where Eſau lived abounded with aromatick, or ſweet-ſmelling odours, or ſpices, wherewith it might be the manner to perfume the clothes that were laid up, and not wonted to daily wearing; or the skins of the Kids might preſent a ſmell (by ſome artifice of Rebekah) which might be pleaſing to the ſent of Iſaac; he compares it to the ſmell of a field which the Lord hath bleſſed, with flowers, and fruits, and vines; for, ſaith Solomon, the vines with the tender grape give a good ſmell, Cant.2. 13. and husbandmen ſay, that ſome grounds when they are broken up with the Plough, yeeld a very pleaſing ſmell to him that tilleth them.

fatneſſe of the earth] By this may be underſtood the Land of Canaan, called a fat Land, becauſe it was plentifully furniſhed with all good things; as Wells digged, Vineyards, Oliveyards, and fruitful trees in abundance, Deut.6. 10, 11.

corn and wine] (Deut.33. 28.) By theſe temporal particulars, were ſhadowed out bleſſings of a better quality: for this fruitful Land of Canaan was a type of heaven, and the plenty of ſpiritual graces is ſignified by a feaſt of fat things, Iſa.25. 6.

V.29. let people ſerve thee] From Jacob came Judah, and of him came the chief Rulers, 1Chr.5. 2. and the Scepter by Jacobs prophecy continued in his Line until the coming of Shiloh, that is, the Meſſiah, Jeſus Chriſt. See Annot on ch.49. 10. And for this Prophecy, it was particularly fulfilled when the Idumeans, Philiſtims, and Moabites were brought under ſubjection to David, Solomon, and the Aſmonean Governours.

curſed be] (Chap.9. 25. & 12. 3.) Curſed of God, who takes the injuries done unto his Church, as done to himſelf. See Act.9. 4.

V. 33. trembled] Heb. was aſtoniſhed: at the ſtrangeneſſe of the act, and event, contrary to his intention: the deceit, and diſguiſe of Jacob ſo cunningly carried, and his purpoſe to Eſau ſo ſtrangely diſappointed, (by Gods over-ruling providence) put him for a time into wondring and trembling aſtoniſhment; and the rather, becauſe now he might perceive that by his carnal affection to Eſau, he had run croſſe to Gods prediction Gen 25. 23.

have bleſſed him] Though his intention was to have bleſſed Eſau, the effect of his benediction, God (by his promiſe, and Jacobs Faith) ſettles upon him; quite croſſe to the conceit of the Papiſts, who make the efficacy of the Sacrament to depend upon the intention of the Miniſter; ſo that it ſhall be fruitleſſe, and in vain to the receiver, if there want a good intention in the giver.

yea, and he ſhall be bleſſed] Being convinced now of his erroneous intent touching the bleſſing of Eſau, he ratifieth the Bleſſing upon Jacob, and now doth that out of Faith, which before he did with miſ-guided fancy, and affection; and ſo his bleſſing is recorded by the Apoſtle, ſaying, By faith Iſaac bleſſed Jacob and Eſau, touching things to come, Heb.11. 20.

V. 34. bitter cry] Becauſe now his fathers ſolemn bleſſing upon Jacob had irrecoverably ſetled his birth-right upon him: in this example we ſee that thoſe that make no account of precious things while they have them, may be made bitterly to bewail the want of them, when they have loſt them; though Eſau were an hardy hunter, a man of the ſword, verſ.40. of this Chapter, God can make him weep like a woman. See the 1Sam.30. 4.

V.35. thy bleſſing] That is, which appertained to Eſau as the firſt-born.

V. 36. rightly called Jacob] That is, a ſupplanter. He was called Jacob, from a word ſignifying the heel, becauſe at the birth of Eſau he held him by the heel. See Annot. on.Gen.25.26. Schindl. Pentagl. col.1373. But by a metaphor it ſignifieth crafty, and deceitful, Ibid. Eſau taketh it in that ſenſe, when he calleth him a ſupplanter, as if his name were not given him for nought, ſupplanting him two times, wherein there is a Paranomaſia. This ſheweth his tears were not tears of true repentance, for then he would rather have blamed himſelf, then his brother, concerning his birth-right.

took away my birth-right] He wrongeth Jacob in this charge, for he took it not from him, but Eſau lightly eſteeming it, or rather deſpiſing it, ſold it to him. See on Chap.25. 34.

my bleſſing] Not his then, when the birth-right was none of his.

V.37. thy Lord] (Verſ.29.) Iſaac did this as he was the Miniſter and Prophet of God; and though Eſau cry never ſo much, he cannot recover what he hath loſt; there is no place for repentance, though ſought with tears, Heb.12. 17. that is, Iſaac will not repent, cannot retract what he hath done, though Eſau lift up a bitter cry for the Bleſſing; becauſe the prerogative of the bleſſed ſeed cannot be divided, nor imparted to a wicked progeny; the ſons of the world are repreſented in Eſau, as the faithfull in Jacob.

V.39. the fatneſſe] Iſaacks bleſſing on Jacob was both ſpiritual and temporal; on Eſau only temporal: and in this Jacob had the preeminence; for though he name the fatneſſe of the Earth, and dew of Heaven in both; and though ſome parts of Idumea, Eſaus Countrey, were very fruitful, yet generally it was not comparable to the Land of Canaan, aſſigned to the poſterity of Jocob. Some make a difference betwixt Eſaus having of Temporal good things, and Gods giving of good things unto Iſaac, as if having were but an intereſt of common providence; giving, a title of eſpecial favour; but that diſtinction may be confuted by Hoſ.2. 8. & Chap.13. 11. and many other places.

V.40. by thy ſword] A trade of life profeſſed, for the moſt part, by the worſt ſort of men; to whom may be well applyed the words of Shimei, though ill applyed to David, 2.Sam.16. 7. for they are bloudy men, are men of Belial, as Eſau was.

ſerve thy brother] This bleſſing, viz. the bleſſing in the dominion of Jacob (called afterwards Iſrael, Chap.32. 29.) is glorioully ſet out in the 33. of Deut. verſ.29. See the ſecond Annot. on Gen.25. 23.

when thou ſhalt have the dominion, thou ſhalt break his yoak from off thy neck] The word in the Original is rendred by ſome learned Hebricians, when thou ſhalt have mourned: or, neerer to the ſenſe of our Tranſlation, When thou ſhalt get ſtrength; and ſo the ſentence will not ſound like a tautology. The Edomites after they had been ſubjects to the Iſraelites about one hundred and fifteen yeares, in the dayes of Joram the ſon of Jehoſaphat, revolted from under the hand of Judah, and made a King over themſelves, 2King.8. 20. See Annot. on Chap.25, 23. and as ſome reckon the time for eight hundred and ten yeares, (viz. until the time of Hyrcanus) they continued in their freedome, at leaſt from the dominion of Jacobs iſſue; and after that, Herod an Idumean put a yoke upon them, for he obtained to be King of the Jews, which ſheweth that the Dominion of Jacobs poſterity was to be underſtood chiefly in a ſpiritual ſenſe, for the prevailing of Religion; and for the literal ſenſe; though there were time enough to make good the promiſe according to the letter, yet it was but upon condition of their good behaviour.

V.41. the dayes of mourning for my father] Not to him, for he would not be ſo tender-hearted to his Father, as to weep for him, who was ſo hard-hearted to his brother, as to reſolve to murther him at ſuch a time.

are at hand] In his decree, (and it may be hope alſo) not in Gods determination, for he lived after this above 40. yeares, God diſappointeth the expectation of the wicked, by prolonging the life of the godly; whereof as he onely maketh the meaſure, ſo he onely knoweth the end, as well as the beginning.

V.42. were told Rebekah] Verſ.41. He ſaid thoſe words in his heart, but his heart was ſo full of hate and envy, that it thruſt out ſome words, which came to Rebekahs ears, and diſcovered his deadly malice againſt his brother.

comfort himſelf] He hath great hope to receive his birth-right by killing of thee. A wicked heart that can make a comfort of ſuch a miſchievous act; yet there is a comfort for a time in taking revenge of a wrong, but that comfort is but like a draught of wine to one in a Fever, which allayeth the diſeaſe for a while, but occaſioneth a greater diſtemper afterwards:

wards: ſo in man; but in God, taking comfort in his revenge of the wicked, the caſe is far otherwiſe, Iſa. 1.24. Ezek. 5.13.

V.44. A few dayes] It proved to be about twenty yeers: ſo was Rebekah miſtaken in the time of Jacobs abſence, as well as Eſau in the time of his fathers death.

fury turn away] Prudent Rebekah feared the dayes of mourning would come upon her by the death of Jacob, while Iſaac lived; the ſpirit of Eſau was ſo enraged againſt him, that ſhe doubted he would not forbear him until his fathers death; yet ſhe hoped, that by time and abſence it would be aſſwaged.

V.45. Both in one day] Becauſe by fighting they might kill each other; or if one were killed, the other by the ſentence of Almighty God, was to dye for it by the hand of man, Gen. 9.6. or if he ſhould eſcape that, ſhe might juſtly fear the Juſtice of God would not ſuffer ſuch a murderer to live, as Act. 28.4. or the guilt of ſo hainous a fact would make his own parents ſo to be eſtranged from him, as if he were not at all, or none of theirs,

V.46. Said to Iſaac] That Iſaac might not be troubled with the deadly diſcord of his ſons, nor Jacob endangered by keeping within the reach of Eſaus wrath, like a prudent woman ſhe preſents to Iſaacs care another cauſe of Jacobs journeying to Charran, viz. A caution againſt ſuch ungodly marriages, as Eſau made with the daughters of the Cananites.

what good ſhall my life] Eſaus marriage was a grief of mind both to Iſaac and Rebekah, Gen. 26.35. But now fear of a double danger makes her more paſſionate then her husband; for ſhe fears leſt Jacob ſhould take a Canaanite to wife, and leſt his marriage ſhould be prevented by an untimely death, an unnatural murder; the example of Eſau made her more apprehenſive of the one, and the ſtory of Cain and Abel might further her fear of the other: thoſe that have no children are happily freed from ſuch fears; and they that have, muſt forecaſt for the worſt, and pray and hope for the beſt.

CHAP. XXVIII.

Ver. 1. Bleſſed him] This ſecond bleſſing is to confirm Jacobs faith, and to aſſure him that he was conſtant to his firſt benediction, Chap. 27.33. though when his tongue bleſſed him, his mind was upon Eſau; and that though it were on his part procured by craft, yet God did now by his fatherly authority ratifie it unto him.

of the daughters of Canaan] See on Chap. 24.3.

V.2. Ariſe, go] Though Iſaac himſelf was not ſent to fetch him a wife from his fathers kindred, yet Jacob is to go in his own perſon; for it was not ſafe for him, for fear of Eſaus bloody threats, to ſtay at home, (though this were a reaſon rather to Rebekah then to Iſaac) and there was leſſe doubt of his return then of Iſaacs, if he had gone, becauſe there was more invitation to Jacobs wife to accompany him back to his Countrey, ſince there were ſome of her fathers family, and of neerer kindred there already, then when Rebekah was married.

V.3. God Almighty] See the Annot. on Gen. 17.1.

V.4. The bleſſing of Abraham] He had his fathers bleſſing already, and now he bleſſeth him in his grand-fathers name, who had the original grant of eſpecial grace to deſcend upon his ſeed; by this his faith might be further confirmed, and his courage and comfort the better ſupported in his ſolitary journey.

ſtranger] The godly Fathers were put in mind continually, that they were but ſtrangers in this world, to the intent that they ſhould lift up their eyes to the heavens, where they ſhould have a ſure dwelling, Heb. 11 9,10. Pſal. 39.12.

which God gave to Abraham] By promiſe, for he had not the poſſeſſion of it himſelf; yet it might be ſaid to be given to him, becauſe it was given to his poſterity for his ſake.

V.5. The Syrian] See the Annot on Gen. 25. 20.

V.9. To Iſhmael] That is, to the family of Iſhmael, for he was now dead whoſe age of 137 years, and his death is ſet down, Gen. 25.17.

Mahalath] Called alſo Baſhemath, Gen. 36.3.

the daughter of Iſhmael] His fathers brother; ſo now Eſau had three wives, for he had two before, Gen. 26.34. By this third marriage, he thought to make amends for the two firſt, & to pleaſe his father better then before; but that choice made him a worſe husband by multiplication of wives, and not the better ſon, for being the ſon of a free man, he ſhould not have matched himſelf with the iſſue of a bond-woman, a ſtranger from the Covenant. The changes of the wicked are not from evil to good, but from one evil to another.

ſiſter of Nebaioth] The eldeſt ſon of Iſhmael, and now, his father being dead, the chief of his family.

V.10. Towards Haran] Or, Charran, as it is called, Act. 7.2. It is conceived by ſome to be ſituate from Beerſheba (whence Jacob came) five hundred Engliſh miles; certainly it was very far off, for Jacob flying from Laban, would make as much haſte as he could to get out of his reach, and Laban purſuing him as faſt as he could, to recover his ſtollen gods from him, overtook him not until the ſeventh dayes journey, Gen. 31.23. and after that, he had a good way to go to the place of his abode.

V.11. Stones —— for pillows] The Sun being ſet he was put to take up his lodging in the field, taking the ground for a bed, and a ſtone for a pillow; the ſervant of his grandfather went out like a Lord in that Country (and ſo he is ſtiled by Rebekah Jacobs mother, Gen. 24.18) having ten Camels for his ſervice, and other things ſutable; but Jacob the bleſſed heir, both of Abraham and Iſaac, is ſent that long journey alone on foot, with a ſtaffe in his hand, Gen 32.10. which was partly for more privacy of his departure, leſt Eſau ſhould way-lay him in his going towards Haran, which he did in his coming thence with four hundred men, Gen. 32.6. but eſpecially to give an example of patience to the godly, and of confidence in God, whoſe providence was the more apparent towards him, by how much he had the leſſe aid of humane means; and withal to inſtruct us, that Gods children muſt expect their portion of bleſſing, rather in ſpiritual, then temporal comforts.

a Ladder] Chriſt is that Ladder by which God and man are joyned together; and by whom the Angels miniſter unto us; all graces by him deſcend upon us, and we by him aſcend into heaven. The upper part of this Ladder, is taken by ſome, to ſignifie his divinity, and the lower, his humanity.

Angels of God aſcending and] To this repreſentation made to Jacob our Saviour alludeth, and applyeth the aſcending and deſcending of Angels unto himſelf, Joh. 1.51. the words there are deſcending upon him, but they may be read, either aſcending above him, as thoſe who wait on him when he cometh down from heaven to Judgment; for when he deſcendeth, the Angels that follow after him in place, will be above him, as ſome may be below him, ſome on each ſide of him: or, unto him, as having reference unto him in all their miniſtrations, whether from God unto men or from men unto God: or, by deſcending upon him, may be meant the placing, and founding upon him of all the heavenly favours, which by the miniſtry of Angels God communicateth to his Church, and thereby alſo may particularly be underſtood the miniſtry of Angels, which they exhibited to him after his temptation, Matth. 4.11. in his paſſion, Luke 22, ver. 43 at his Reſurrection, Joh. 20.12. and aſcenſion into heaven, Act. 1.11.

aſcending and deſcending] Angels are ſtill in motion, never idle, and as ready to deſcend, and to be humbled; as to aſcend, and to be exalted: their diligence, and obedience, is a pattern for us, Matth. 6.10. and their continual intercourſe betwixt heaven and earth, as ſpirits miniſtring for their ſakes, who are heirs of ſalvation, Heb. 1.14. may be matter of confidence to Gods children, againſt the might and malignity, both of divels and men: by this (though Angels may hear our prayers, and ſee our tears) they are not Mediators of Interceſſion betwixt God and us, or to be ſerved, either with ſupplications or vowes: for notwithſtanding this viſion, Jacob did not ſo account of them, nor apply himſelf unto them.

V.13. To thee will I give it, and to thy ſeed] He enjoyed this promiſe only by faith concerning his ſeed, for all his life-time himſelf was a ſtranger in this Land: ſo then to thee and to thy ſeed, muſt be to thee in thy Seed, for they had that in poſſeſſion, and having the poſſeſſion for his ſake, it was a gift in favour to him.

V.14. As the duſt of the earth] See Annot. on Chap. 13.16. See alſo Chap. 32.12. and Numb. 23.10.

In thee and in thy Seed ſhall all the families of the earth be bleſſed] (Gen. 12.3. and 18.18. Act. 3.25. Gal. 3.8) By this is meant chiefly ſpiritual bleſſings, flowing from the vertue of the promiſed Seed Chriſt Jeſus, and from him diffuſed to all the faithful, of what Family, Nation, or Country ſoever.

V.15. I am with thee] * In this free and full expreſſion of Gods favour, we ſee how good a maſter he is to a true and faithful ſervant; if we would have him ſuch a one to us, we muſt be ſuch as Jacob was to him, ſee Judg. 6.16. Iſai. 43.2. Jer. 1.19.

until] This until is an extenſive, not an excluſive word, giving aſſurance of an eſpecial time, wherein there is no doubt; but not excluding or denying the time following, as Mat. 28.20.

V.16. And I knew it not] God is preſent every where, but eſpecially with the godly; and not only then when they are apprehenſive of him; but when they perceive no evidence of his preſence, as Job confeſſeth, He goeth by me, and I ſee him not; he paſſeth on alſo, but I perceive him not, Job 9.11. Or, it may be, when he ſaid, he knew not that God was there, he meant, that ſuch apparitions were peculiar to the family of the faithful, and that he did not think God would ſo have revealed himſelf in that place.

V.17 Afraid] Any ſtrange apparition, though glorious and gracious, affects mans frailty with fear, becauſe of his ſin: ſee Matth. 17.6. Luke 2.9. & 8.35. Rev. 1.17. but beſides, he was touched with a godly fear and reverence; Gods profeſſed favour and familiarity did not breed contempt, but a reverend awe and dread of his Almighty Majeſty, which David profeſſeth, when he ſaith, I will come into thine houſe in the multitude of thy mercie, and in thy fear will I worſhip towards thine holy Temple, Pſal. 5.7.

the houſe of God He calls it Gods houſe, where God and his holy angels, who are of his houſhold, are eſpecially preſent; and in regard of that preſence, he thinks it a fit place for the building of God an Houſe, Altar, or a place for eſpecial worſhip, ver. 22.

the gate of heaven] The Church Militant here below, hath ſuch neer reference to heaven the Church Triumphant above, that he that is truly a member of the one, may come to knock at the gate of the other, and have it opened unto him, Mat. 7.7.

V.18. A pillar] (Gen. 35.14,20. Iſai. 19.19. 2 Sam. 18.18) Or, Statue, which was neither any great thing (for it was no more then one man himſelf could rear;) nor any artificial thing (for Jacob had no tools, and it is like, no skill to uſe them for ſuch a work;) but it was ſuch a ſetting up of ſtone, or ſtones piled one upon another, as on the ſudden he could make, for a thankful memorial of Gods gracious apparition to him in that place.

and poured oyl] Which he might the next day fetch from the City, (being not far off) and might return to the place again; or he might take with him from home in a vial or bottle, to anoint, or refreſh himſelf, or to apply in way of medicine, if he had need; and he poured it out upon the pillar, as an oblation unto the Lord: (as he did in his return, Gen.35.14.) Or, as David poured out the water of the well of Bethlehem unto the Lord, 2 Sam.23.16. And if this pouring out of oyl were a conſecration of that pillar or place, to an holy uſe, as Exod.30.16. and 40 9. it makes not for the Popiſh practice, in their ſuperſtitious conſecration of Churches, and the utenſils or appurtenances belonging to them; for this oyle was not it ſelf firſt conſecrated, nor poured out with holineſs, or ſuperſtitious benedictions; nor did Jacob any thing therein, but by divine inſtinct and inſtruction, nor did he conceive any inherent holineſs in the place: O but whatſoever eſtimation, or appropriation there was of Religious places in the Old Teſtament, (as the Temple of Jeruſalem had the preeminence for holy uſe above all other places of the New Teſtament) that difference is taken away, Joh.4. from ver 20. to 24. ſo that God may be ſerved as acceptably by the Aſſemblies of the Saints, in Chriſtian Churches and Chappels, as in the Temple at Jeruſalem; and in times of perſecution in private houſes, mountaines, or dens, or caves of the earth, Heb.11.38. Yea, whereſoever men lift up pure hands without wrath or doubting, 1 Tim 2.8. as well as in the faireſt Temple.

V.19. Bethel] A City neer the place of this apparition, conceived to be about thirty Engliſh miles diſtant from Shechem. The word ſignifieth the houſe of God, which afterwards was turned by Jeroboam into a place of Idolatry, for there he ſet up one of his golden Calves, 1 King.12.28,29. and for that abomination the name of it was after that changed into Bethaven, Hoſ.4.15. and Chap.10.5. that is, the houſe of iniquity, or vanity: ſo the Houſe of God, by courſe of time, and the corruption of men, may be turned into the houſe of the Divel; true Religion is preſerved in the perſons of the godly, not in the places of godlineſs; ſo Rome, once the Church of God (by Apoſtaſie from the truth) is of Gods Church become the Divels Chappel; of a Bethel, a Babel.

Luz] Of this Apparition, Jacob maketh mention by the name of Luz, which as it was the more ancient name, ſo in Jacobs time it was yet in uſe, Gen 35.6. but whether called Bethel or Luz, it was a City ſituate upon an high hill, in that portion of the Land of Canaan, which by lot fell to the Tribe of Benjamin, Adrich.Delph.Theatr p.16. Queſt. How is it then that Jacob lay in the field, when Bethel, where God appeared unto him, was a City? Anſ. It is not like that he lodged in a City, becauſe he had but a ſtone for a pillow, but probable that being benighted, he lay in ſome field not far off, that might be a part of the Territories, belonging to the City next unto it, and ſo might be called by the name of the City, at leaſt by him, who being a ſtranger there, (for it was about fifty miles off from the place of his dwelling) knew no other name of the place.

V.20. Vowed a vow] To vow unto God (not to Saints) things lawful, and within our power to perform, and without opinion of merit, or caſting a ſnare on our own ſouls, or laying a ſcandal before others (when we are at liberty to do otherwiſe) thus to vow, as it was the practice of the Patriarchs, as Abraham, Gen.14.22. and Jacob in this place before the Ceremonial Law, ſo (now Ceremonial Laws are vaniſhed) it is lawful to vow under the ſtate of the Goſpel. See on Eccleſ 5.4,7.

If God will be with me] The word Im, rendred if in this place, may be Engliſhed when, and is here neither a word of doubting, nor of condition, in ſuch ſort, as if Jacob meant either to bind God to give him bread to eat, and cloathes to wear, or elſe to give up his title to him; but it is a word of order or inference to bind himſelf to ſome demonſtration of his gratitude thus: If God will be with me, and will keep me in the way that I go, and will give me bread to eat, and raiment to put on, ſo that I come to my fathers houſe in peace, then ſhall the Lord be my God; but I am ſure the Lord will do all this, for for this, and more a great deal, I have his moſt free and expreſs promiſe, ver.14,15. therefore as ſure as God is true of his word, will I bind my ſelf unto him by a ſolemn vow, to acknowledg and ſerve him as my God, and to ſet up a memorial of his goodneſs to me, and my gratitude to him.

bread to eat, and raiment to put on] Grace and nature are contented with a little. See 1 Tim.6.8. Matth 6.11. Prov 30.8.

V.22. This ſtone ſhall be Gods houſe] By Gods houſe, is meant a place of worſhip; that place in thoſe times was chiefly an Altar; and of that ſtone with others, he meant to make an Altar; and thereon to offer his oblations. The word Beth, here uſed for an houſe, may be taken for any place of repoſe, or for that which receives or holds another thing, as (beſides an houſe for the habitation of men) the forehead, Exod 28.38 is rendred in the Targum (or expoſition of the Bible in the Chaldean Tongue) the houſe of the eyes; and a vail, in Exod.34.35. the houſe of the face: and the Hebrews of latter times call a glove or mitten Beth-etsbegnoth, that is, the houſe of the fingers: ſo the grave is called, the houſe appointed for all living when they be dead, Job 30.23. and all this with reference unto man, and with reſpect to other creatures; the Sparrows neſt in the Hebrew is the Sparrows houſe, Pſal.84.3. and the Fir-trees are ſaid to be an houſe for the Stork, Pſal.104.17. and the holes in the Rocks, the houſes of the Conies, Prov.30.26. and the Spiders web is called, the Spiders houſe, Job 8.14. By Gods houſe then we are not to underſtand a Church, (for there was no ſuch houſes in thoſe dayes) nor a place of any great capacity or receipt, but a place of worſhip; which place might be an Altar, that Altar made of that ſtone, as the principal part of it: for here did Jacob build an Altar, and offer an oblation upon it in his return, Gen.35.7,14.

CHAP. XXIX.

Verſ.1. OF the Eaſt] That is Meſopotamia, ſituate Eaſtward from the Land of Canaan.

V.2. And lo, there were] Thus he was directed by the only providence of God to Labans houſe.

a great ſtone] Both to keep the water pure, and the Well full, that it might ſuffice the flocks, for there were not many ſuch Wells, or waters in thoſe parts; therefore the greatneſs of the ſtone, was a ſaving of the ſtore.

V.3. And they rolled] That is, the Shepherds who kept the ſheep, and came to water them.

V.4. my brethren] It ſeems in thoſe dayes the cuſtom was to call even ſtrangers brethren, eſpecially if they were of one profeſſion, or courſe of life, as Jacob and theſe Shepherds were.

V.5. The ſon of Nahor] He was the immediate ſon of Bethuel his father, and Nahor was his grand-father; yet is he named the ſon rather of Nahor then of Bethuel, becauſe Nahor was a man of more note. See Chap.31.53. not only in the family of Iſaac, as being his fathers brother, but in the Family of Laban, as appears Chap.31.53.

V.6. Is he well] Heb. is there peace to him? or, is he in peace? By which word the Hebrews ſignifie all proſperity: and they call War Milchamah, from eating, becauſe it devoureth all things. Of this expreſſion, ſee Annot. on Chap 37 14.

Lo, it is yet high day] Heb. the day is great. That is, the Sun is yet high, and much day to come; and therefore too ſoon to gather the cattel from their meat; and for thoſe ſheep that are already gathered, water them and bring them back again to their paſtures.

V.8. We cannot until] It ſeems the ſtone that covered the Wel was ſo great, that until the Shepherds came together, it could not be removed, and that none might be left without ayd, they agreed to tarry one for another. So ſome came ſooner, ſome later, which gave Jacob occaſion (having himſelf been accuſtomed to the keeping of Cattel) to give them his advice out of his good wil; and it is not better meant on Jacobs, then taken on the Shepherds part, who do not ſnap him up as an over-buſie ſtranger, as the Sodomites did Lot, for medling in matters that belonged not to him; but fairly and gently give an excuſe why they cannot follow his advice: which may be an example of meekneſs, and humanity, and modeſty in our intercourſe with others, eſpecially ſtrangers.

V.9. And while he yet ſpake] See Gen.24.15.

Rachel] Not Leah, whoſe tender eyes could not ſo well endure the light and open air, ver.17.

with her fathers ſheep] See Annot. on Gen.24.15.

V.10. Rolled the ſtone] With the help of others, or of himſelf; for being about 77 yeers of age, the time of full ſtrength in thoſe times, he might haply be able to do that alone, which required the aſſiſtance of many hands, eſpecially if the Shepherds were young boys, or weak women, and he would ſtrain his ſtrength the more, to be the more noted, and better accepted by Rachel. See the like Exod.2.17.

V.11. Kiſſed Rachel] Having ſhewed firſt who he was, and how neer of kin, he kiſſed her, both according to the common faſhion among kinsfolks, and out of ſpeciall affection, as having a mind to take her for a wife: in divers times and Countries, the uſe of kiſſing hath been various: it was ſometimes uſed among men, as ver.13. of this Chapter, and Chap.31.55. and 45.15. Exod.4.27. & chap.18.7. & Luk.7.45. though moſt uſually betwixt them of a different ſexe, as a ſign of benevolence and love; hence it is applyed to expreſſe the dear love betwixt Chriſt and his Church, Cant.1.2. and that the Apoſtle gave order to greet one another with an holy kiſs, 2 Cor.13.12. an holy kiſs, not a wanton one, as Prov.7.13. not an hypocritical kiſs, as that of Joab, 2 Sam.20.9 and of Judas, Mat.26.49.

lifted up his voice and wept] For joy, after upon mutual report and ſpeech of the ſtate and condition of the ſeveral families of Iſaac and Laban, and their neer kindred; and no doubt alſo upon the apprehenſion of Gods eſpecial providence in bringing Rachel to the Well, (as Rebekah his mother when ſhe was choſen for a wife for his father) his heart melted into affections, that could not be kept in, but burſt out into audible and viſible expreſſions, ſuch as might both be heard and ſeen. See Gen.45 14,15,16.

V.12. brother] So ver.15. That is, neer kinſman, for he ſaith in this verſe, that he was Rebekahs ſon, who was Labans ſiſter, ſo ver.15. By this term, brother, was profeſſed an affection belonging to the neereſt degree of kindred that can be; ſo Lot is called Abrahams brother, being the ſon of his brother Gen 13 8.

V.13. All theſe things] That is, the ſtory of his Fathers family, and of his journy, the cauſe why he came from his Fathers houſe, and what he had ſeen by the way.

V.14. My bone and my fleſh] That is, of my kindred, Gen.2.23. Judg.9.2. 2 Sam.5.1. & 19 13.

a month] Heb. a month of dayes. That is, a whole month, not one day ſhort.

V. 18. I will ſerve thee ſeven yeers for Rachel] It was the cuſtom of many Countries to buy wives, whereof there are ſome inſtances among the poſterity of Jacob, as 1 Sam. 18. 25. 2 Sam 3. 14. Hoſ 3. 2. See alſo Gen. 34. 12. But becauſe Jacob had nothing to give, coming an empty wayfaring man, with a ſtaff in his hand, he offereth ſeven years ſervice for the younger ſiſter.

V. 19. It is better] Laban makes no direct anſwer to Jacobs motion, but gives him good words in the general, without any intent, it ſeems, to let him ſo ſoon be poſſeſſed of his choice in particular; Jacob was a plain man, Gen. 25. 27. of too honeſt an heart to ſuſpect deceitful dealing in his Uncle; elſe he was wiſe enough (as his dealing with his brother Eſau ſheweth) to have made a ſurer bargain for himſelf.

V. 20. But a few dayes] Heb one dayes, Gen. 27. 44. If we loved God, our ſervice of him, though it were for many yeers together, would not be tedious to us; the want of love to him makes men weary to ſerve him, Mal. 1. 13. though but for a few hours, one day in a week, Amos 8. 5. the day that ſhould and would (if our affections were rightly tempered) yeeld us more delight then any of the reſt. See Iſa. 58. 14

V. 25. Behold it was Leah] It was Leah before, but then he did behold her, and ſaw her without her vail; for virgins in modeſty were vailed, or brought in the dark to the Bride-chamber.

beguiled me] The cauſe why Jacob was deceived, was, for that in old time the wife was covered with a vail when ſhe was brought to her husband, in ſigne or token of chaſtity and ſhamefaſtneſs. See Chap. 24. 65. And whereas it is ſaid, that Judah thought Thamar to be an harlot, becauſe ſhe had covered her face, Chap. 38. 15. the meaning is, that becauſe her face was covered he knew her not, & becauſe he knew her not, he took her for an harlot; or if harlots did wear vails, they were of another faſhion, or worn at other times, and in another manner then Brides were wont to do; and though Leah might have been known to Jacob by her ſpeech in the dark, as Jacobs voice was known to Iſaac when he was blind, yet her vail might be a cover for her ſilence, for in that the modeſty of women appeareth, as well as by hiding of their faces; or her ſpeech, being only a low whiſpering, it could not eaſily be diſcerned. In this deceit, it is like that Leah acted her part after her fathers, as Jacob his after his mothers direction, and therein ſhe was faulty, though in an inferior degree, for he ſhewed himſelf a very unjuſt man, and an unkind Uncle; whereby yet Jacob might be remembred of his deceitful dealing with his brother Eſau. See Mat. 7. 12. though God turned it to good, and might upon this occaſion, be diſpoſed to repentance for what was paſt, and to patience under that condition, which either his neceſſity, or his Uncles diſhoneſty put upon him.

V. 26. Not ſo done in our Country) Or, it is not the cuſtome of our Country. If it had been ſo, he ſhould have ſaid ſo much to Jacob ſeven years ſooner, when he offered his ſervice upon condition to marry the younger daughter; this mental reſervation of the cuſtom all this while, ſhewed it was not Labans cuſtom to deal uprightly; beſides, if it were the cuſtom, why did he againſt cuſtom pretend a marriage, and call his neighbors to a marriage feaſt betwixt Jacob and Rachel? this pretence of cuſtom is often uſed againſt truth and right; as in the prohibition of marriage to the Clergy, and the Communion-cup to the Laity, and other particulars of the Romiſh Religion; which indeed in reſpect of the antiquity of truth, are but Innovations, though obtruded in the name of ancient cuſtomes.

V. 27. Fulfil her week] The word Shebang in Hebrew, is ſometimes taken for ſeven years, (ſo the Geneva Tranſlation hath it) ſometimes for ſeven dayes or a week, ſo here; the meaning is, that, for as much as the manner was to celebrate a wedding with ſeven dayes feaſting, as Judg. 14 12. Jacob ſhould accept of Leah for his wife, & celebrate the nuptials after the wonted maner, and that done, he would preſently give him Rachel, for whom he ſhould ſerve the next ſeven years after, which he did; and that he ſtayed not for Rachel until a week of yeers, is evident by order of the ſtory, for Jacob ſtayed in Meſopotamia with Laban twenty yeers, chap. 31. 38, 41. At the fourteenth year of his ſervitude was Joſeph born, before which time Rachel had been ſome good while a barren wife, and therefore as out of hope of iſſue by her ſelf, ſhe gave her maid Bilhah to her husband, who by him had two ſons before her ſelf had any, as Gen. 30 ſheweth, whence it muſt neceſſarily be concluded, that Jacob was married to Rachel after a week of dayes, according to the phraſe and cuſtom already obſerved, not after the end of the ſecond ſeven yeers ſervice.

V. 28. Fulfilled her week] That is, he took Leah for his wife, and fulfilled her week of ſolemn feaſting for the wedding, as hath been ſaid.

Rachel his daughter to wife alſo.] Two wives at once, if they had not been ſiſters, had been one too many for one man, as is implyed in the firſt inſtitution of marriage; yet beſides them he had both their handmaids to be his wives, Gen 30. ver. 4. 9. The law againſt plurality of wives was not yet expreſly declared, nor againſt the marriage of two ſiſters as afterwards it was, Lev 18 18. it is doubted therefore, whether at this time either the one or the other were a ſin in the holy Patriarch; it ſeemeth not likely that they having ſuch revelations from God, ſhould be ignorant whether it were a ſin or no, or that being ſo godly, they ſhould live ſo long in a ſin againſt their knowledg; there was doubtleſſe a diſpoſition of the Divine providence in it, if not a diſpenſation by Divine authority for it. For that ſhould not be haſtily preſumed, ſince the chief warrant that can be pretended for Polygamy, or marriage of many wives at once, is for increaſe of mankind, and at the firſt Creation in Adams time, and the renovation of the world in Noahs time, when there was moſt need of ſuch means of multiplication, God allotted but one woman for one man; and for ſuch like particulars as this of Jacob, though God have his hand in them, ruling and over-ruling them at his pleaſure, and his part be alwayes pure and perfect, yet on mans part there may be corruption and infirmity, as in the matter of the benediction of Jacob, wherein concurred both God and Iſaac, Rebekah, Jacob and Eſau: God being altogether juſt and holy in his act, they in theirs were every one faulty, though in a different degree; yet for the marriage of Jacob (though unlawful, at leaſt doubtful) it may in part be excuſed, in that his mind was to have had but one, and though he loved that one ſo affectionately, that ſeven years ſervice ſeemed to him but a few dayes for her ſake, ver. 20. and though he lived with her continually, he modeſtly and chaſtely converſed with her all the while: Now that Rachel and Leah made offer of their hand-maids to his bed, as his grand-mother Sarah to his grand-father, and that he accepted of their ſociety, not for pleaſure but for propagation to increaſe mankind, eſpecially, to beget children for Gods Church, ſuch examples muſt be no patterns for our imitation; yet of polygamy, or having more wives then one, ſee Annot. on Deut. 17. 17.

V. 30. Seven years] After one ſeven already ſpent, and ſo great wrong put upon him, he without murmuring, ſubmits his mind and body to ſeven yeers ſervice more; A rare example of humility and patience.

V. 31. The Lord ſaw] God ſeeth not only the actions of men that appear, but their affections that keep out of ſight.

that Leah was hated, he opened] That is, leſs loved; as Matth. 10. 37 compared with Luke 14. 26 and Joh. 12. 25 Rachel had beauty to make her acceptable to Jacob; and to make Leah lovely in his ſight, God makes her fruitful, while the other was barren: If Leah had been as fair as Rachel, or Rachel as fruitful as Leah, there would have been too great a prelation of one before the other. Now God, who divideth and diſpenſeth his favours as he pleaſeth, qualifieth them both in different kinds to be pleaſing to their husband, and to moderate the affections of Jacob, that he may neither hate the one, nor dote upon the other: Favour and fruitfulneſſe, and every deſirable thing, is his free gift, who ſheweth hereby, that oft-times they who are deſpiſed of men, are favoured of God. See on chap. 8. 7.

V. 33. LORD hath heard] Hereby it appeareth, that ſhe had recourſe to God in her affliction by her complaint; wherein ſhe did not inſtruct God in her eſtate, (as if he knew it not without her telling) but ſue to him for removal of her affliction, by the obtainment of her husbands affection; and therein the Lord ſhewed that he heard her, by making her amiable as a mother, who was not beloved as a wife.

Judah] In this and the precedent names, ſhe keeps a memorial of Gods mercies to her; and as he goeth on in grace to her, ſo doth ſhe in gratitude towards him; no barren wife to Jacob her husband, nor barren daughter to God her Father.

CHAP. XXX.

Verſ. 1. E*Nvied*] The word in the Original, is ſometimes taken for a lawful emulation in a good cauſe; ſometimes for an unlawful indignation at good; ſo is the word Zeal diverſly uſed in the New Teſtament; In this place it appeareth to be ſet down in a ſinful ſenſe, as Rachels fault to be much offended at her ſiſters fruitfulneſſe, her ſelf being barren; ſhe ſhould have rejoyced in zeal to Gods glory in propagation of the promiſed Seed, in the good of mankind by the multiplication of people, in the increaſe of Gods Church, ſhe ſhould have been glad of the bleſſing of her own fleſh and blood, eſpecially in the neereſt degree, as Leah was to her, and in the contentment of her husband, (who had no doubt a great deſire to be a father, as well as ſhe to be a mother) in that her defect of fruitfulneſſe was ſupplyed by her ſiſter; but ſelf-love makes her ſin againſt them all. Anger is a paſſion that is ſometimes good, elſe the Apoſtle would not have ſaid, Be angry and ſin not, Epheſ. 4. 26. But envy at anothers good, Gen. 37. 11. Numb. 11. 29. Pſal. 106. 16. is alwayes bad, and ſo much worſe then anger when it is bad, as it is of longer continuance; anger is ſaid to be a ſhort madneſs, and envy may be ſaid to be a long one. See Prov. 27. 4 Gen 37. 11. Wherein we may ſee the deformity and foulneſſe of envy, the infirmity of humane nature, and of the female ſex, even in the better ſort of women; the diſquietneſs of poligamy, or divers wives at once, even in the moſt holy, and beſt ordered family.

ſaid unto Jacob, give] Envy is a ſinful and fooliſh paſſion, as well as wrath, Job 5. 2. It maketh Rachel miſtake her husband for her God, as her husband did Leah for her, though God were not veiled as Leah was, but ſhe blinded as Jacob was not. Thus doth natural corruption break out of one ſin into another; ſhe beginneth with envy at her ſiſter, but proceedeth to injury againſt God, and her injury is no leſs then Idolatry; ſo though ſhe gave over her fathers Idols, ſhe became an Idolatreſs again. Jacobs queſtion implieth a conviction of her for that ſin.

elſe I dye] Not only becauſe ſhe was not to live in her poſterity, as her ſiſter Leah in hers, (for the parents may be ſaid to live in that their ſeed liveth in their children) not that ſhe meant to lay violent hands upon her ſelf, (as ſome have conceived) but becauſe if ſhe continued childleſſe ſhe had no deſire to live, or conceived the grief of her barrenneſſe, would break her heart, and ſhe ſhould dye of diſcontent; for as Eliphaz ſaith, Envy ſlayeth the ſilly one, Job 5.2. and ſo it is both a ſin, and a puniſhment of ſin. The cauſe why ſhe was ſo deſirous of children, might be, becauſe fruitfulneſſe was pronounced as a bleſſing, and to want it, was conceived to be a curſe, and ſo was taken as for a reproach. So ver.23. and Luke 1.23. 1 Sam.1.6. Iſai. 4.1. That Jacob might delight in her as fruitful, as well as fair, and that her ſiſter might not have that, either as advantage above her, or matter of equality with her; for if ſhe might not be his only beloved, ſhe would be at leaſt, his beſt beloved bed-fellow, which ſhe had cauſe at leaſt to doubt, for Leah brought him children while ſhe was barren. See on chap.35.18.

V.2. Jacobs anger] A good man may be angry, and it is a good anger when it is ſet againſt ſin, eſpecially when it ſheweth, that we prefer the honour of God before the favour of our deareſt friend, as Jacob here doth. See Luk 14.26.

am I in Gods ſtead] The godly take it ill that any honour is given to them which is peculiar to God, Act.14.14,15. Doubtleſs the Saints and Angels above, are not wel pleaſed with the Idolatrous ſervices of men below, Rev.19.10. and 22.9.

who hath with-held] It is only God that maketh barren and fruitful, therefore I am not in fault, Gen.16.2,20,18. Pſal.113.9. and 127.3. Hoſ.9.14.

V.3. My maid Bilhah] Rachel deſerved, and had a reproof in the precedent words, which ſhe took with patience, making no reply for her own defence; and ſeeking to make amends for it, ſhe makes offer of her maid in her ſtead to her husbands bed, whereby ſhe might have the name of a mother, in the right of her hand-maid, for the children that were the hand-maids by nature, were the dames by adoption; as Gen.16.2. or by right of participation with her husband, as wherein ſhe had a ſecondary right, though they were her husbands in the firſt place, Exod 21.4. So ſhe made account ſome part of her barrenneſs was put away, and ſome of her husbands good will ſwayed from her ſiſter (whoſe envious rival ſhe was) to her ſide.

bear upon my knees] The meaning is not only that Rachel would receive her children on her lap, as though they were her own; as Gen. 50.23. Iſai.66.12. but that at the birth of them ſhe would do the office of an aſſiſtant to the mother, who is many times ſet upon the knees of another woman while the Midwife doth her office, and this aſſiſtance belonged eſpecially to ſuch as were to be adopting mothers to the children.

V.4. Handmaid to wife] Though there be a difference betwixt a wife and a Concubine, as hath been noted upon Chap.22.24. and 25.1. yet they agree ſo much, that the wife is ſometimes called a Concubine, as Keturah, 1 Chr.1.32. and a Concubine called a wife; as Gen. 16.3. and as Bilhah is here called a wife, ſo is Zilpah ſtiled, v.9. and as wives, their children had their portion of inheritance of the Land of Canaan, with the children of their miſtreſſes, Leah and Rachel; which in other caſes was not uſual.

V.6. God hath judged me] It is like that the emulation betwixt Leah and Rachel, Jacobs wives, as it bred envy on the one ſide (for ver.1. Rachel envied Leah for her fruitfulneſs) ſo it raiſed ſome proud contempt on the other, as in Hagar towards her Miſtreſs Sarah, Gen.16.4. or ſome reproachful provocation, as in fruitful Peninnah towards barren Hannah, 1 Sam.1.2,6. as if God were againſt them, or had no regard unto them, whom he ſuffered to be barren; whereupon Rachel making her complaint, and prayer unto God, and making him Judg of her cauſe (as Sarah did of hers, Gen.16.5.) God bleſſing her advice and offer of her hand-maid with the birth of a child, ſhe taketh it to be his judging of the matter on her ſide, againſt her emulous ſiſter, who perhaps upbraided her with barrenneſs, as Peninnah did Hannah; wherein (though God be alwayes juſt) ſhe was ſomewhat partial to her ſelf; as ver.8.

V.8. With great wreſtling] Or, Excellent wreſtlings, in the Original, wreſtlings of God. See the Annot. on chap.23.6. Jonah 3.3. with the places quoted in the Margin. She had been very emulous, and ſtriven much with her ſiſter to match her in her fruitfulneſſe; and for that purpoſe had done what ſhe could to endear her ſelfe into the love of Jacob, and had uſed all the helps ſhe could of diet and phyſick, and no doubt had with much importunity (like unto her husbands wreſtling with God) begged the bleſſing of the womb for her ſelf, and her hand-maid, and ſo prevailed for another ſon; but in this boaſting, though ſhe accounted her ſelf to be ſtrong in wreſtling, ſhe bewrayed the weakneſs of her ſex, and the vanity of her mind, for her ſiſter yet had more children then ſhe, and thoſe more her own then Rachels were.

V.9. Left bearing] (Chap 19.35) For a time, for ſhe conceived again, and ſhe had children afterwards, ver.17.

Zilpah her handmaid, and gave her to Jacob to wife] Leah meant in this to match Rachel (for there was ſtriving and wreſtling on both ſides for the preeminence, both as wives and as mothers; an evil uſually incident to polygamy, or multiplication of wives to one husband;) but what Rachel did in a kind of neceſſity, having no child at all, Leah did without neceſſity having children already begotten, and born of her own body, as thinking it not honour enough for her to go before her ſiſter in her own immediate fruitfulneſſe, if ſhe did not ſhew her ſelf as kind to her husband in the gift of her handmaid, and matched her ſiſter in that ſecondary motherhood of the handmaids iſſue, wherein ſhe ſhewed her ſelf a ſiſter in evil, being as vain in her deſires as Rachel in her boaſtings.

V.10. Bear Jacob a ſon] It appears Jacob accepted of her gift according to her mind, which ſheweth that Jacob was too indulgent both to his wives and to himſelfe: ſuch humane frailties are to be noted, pitied and prayed againſt, and with all care and caution to be ſhunned.

V. 11. A troop] That is, either that at the birth of Gad, there was hope of a plentiful iſſue increaſing to a troop, or that Gad ſhould be a Captain of a troop, an eminent man leading others after him.

V.14. Reuben] Suppoſed at this time to be a child about five yeers old.

wheat harveſt] The later harveſt for barley was ripe and reaped before it.

Mandrakes] The word Dudaim, in the Original (which ſome Tranſlations have retained) in the general ſignifieth amiable, as in Cant.7.13. and is uſed in this acception, and no where elſe in the whole Scripture; there Dudaim is ſaid to give a ſmell, and it is meant a pleaſant ſmell; thence ſome tranſlate it amiable flowers, the Greek turnes it, Apples of Mandragoras, which is a kind of Herb, whoſe root hath the likeneſs of a man. The fruit of that root called Mandrake Apples, have been anciently conceived to be of an amorous operation, cauſing love, conducing to coition and conception; it is ſaid to be of pleaſant ſmell and colour by ſome Writers; others ſay, it is of a rank and unpleaſant ſavour; howſoever it is not like to be Mandrake Apples, becauſe at this time of the yeer (which was wheat-harveſt, and that was about the beginning of May in this Country) the Mandrake Apples are not ripe, but rather that Dudaim here rendred Mandrakes, was ſome flowers of the field, (ſuch as pleaſed little children chiefly with their colour, for Reuben that gathered them was about five or ſix year old) and had withal a delightful ſmel, Cant.7 12,13. ſo that Rachel was taken with an eſpecial delight in them, and deſire of them.

V.15. Is it a ſmall matter] Leah not well pleaſed with Rachel before, takes a ſmall occaſion to break out into a paſſion, the grudge which lay at her heart, now breaks out at her lips, in this queſtion, implying that ſhe makes a ſmall matter of doing to her a great wrong, which ſhe aggravates by adding one wrong unto another.

taken my husband] It ſeemeth now Rachel and Leah in reſpect of child-bearing, were both alike; (for though Leah had been fruitful before, ſhe was at that time barren as Rachel, having given over to bear, Chap.29. ver.35. and Chap.30.ver.9.) and therefore Jacobs affection ſwayed by the beauty of Rachel, eſtranged him altogether, or, for the moſt part, from her bed; thence ſhe challengeth her for taking away her husband from her; wherein (but that her ſelf-love made her blind) ſhe might ſee her ſin recompenced to her in its kind; for ſhe had wronged Rachel ſo before, when it could not but be very offenſive unto her.

ſhall lye with thee] She made ill uſe of her husbands great affection to her, for here ſhe takes upon her the diſpoſal of his perſon, and for a trifle hires him out unto her ſiſter.

to night] It ſeemeth there was ſome ſet rule betwixt Jacob and his wives for their lying with him by turns, ſo that having a certain right for his ſociety, they might give it up to each other as they could agree.

V.16. I have hired thee] That ſuch particulars of ſeeming ſmal moment are ſo punctually recorded in the Scripture, the reaſon may be, to ſhew how obſervant God is of the family of the faithful, and his providence towards them, which reacheth even to the numbring of their hairs, Mat.10.30.

and he lay with her] The good man, deſirous to keep peace betwixt two emulous women, ſubmits to their paſſions and partialities, and makes good the bargain betwixt them concerning himſelf, though it were made without his conſent.

V 17. God hearkned to Leah] This was commendable in both theſe women, that they invited God by prayer unto their marriage bed, ver.22.

V.18. Becauſe I have given] Though Leah ſay right in accounting a child to be the gift of God, yet here ſhe miſapplyeth the divine favour, and maketh it the reward of her former error, rather then the grant of her precedent prayer; here again ſhe bewrayeth her infirmity.

V.22. Hearkned to her] See Annot.on ver.27.

V23. Taken away my reproach] A reproach among thoſe eſpecially who are fruitful themſelves, and therefore ſhew contempt towards the barren, to their diſgrace and vexation. See Chap.16.5. and 1 Sam. 1.5,6

V.26. Give me my wives] They were already given; or rather dear bought with long and hard ſervice; yet he would not take them away without a mannerly preface of leave from their father before their parting; which condemnes the injurious dealing of many, who make no conſcience of ſtealing away daughters, to make them wives without their parents conſent. See Annot.on Chap. 21.21.

V.27. For thy ſake] (Chap. 19.3) Maſters may here learn to make choice of godly ſervants, in whoſe hands their eſtates are like to proſper. Chap.39.3,5.

V.30. Since my coming] Heb. At my feet. That is, ſince I ſet my foot into their dwelling, or ſince I ſet my foot to labor and go about upon thine affaires. See Deut.11.10.

V.31. Not give me any thing] That is, no ſet rate or price for my ſervice, or (as ſome think) no recompence out of thy precedent or preſent eſtate, but out of that which ſhal accrew unto thee from the date of our preſent agreement.

V.32. Of ſuch ſhall be my hire] That is, when all the ſpeckled, ſpotted, or parti-coloured, or brown ſheep, or lambs, and all the ſpotted, ſpeckled, or parti-coloured goats are removed, and none left but thoſe that are white, I will have none other wages then thoſe young ones, which coming of white dams, are not white, but parti-coloured or brown; and as there were any brown, he gave them to Laban, and kept only the white, (as Labans ſtock to breed upon) leſt his parti-coloured increaſe ſhould be thought to proceed from the different colours of the Rams or Dams.

V.33. Righteouſneſſe anſwer] God ſhall teſtifie my righteous dealing by rewarding my labors. So that when my ſtock is increaſed, it will plainly appear, that the hand of God hath been good to me, not mine falſe or unfaithful to thee.

in time to come] Heb. to morrow. For that is taken for the time to come, as yeſterday for the time paſt, Gen.31.2. Exod.4 10. and 5.7. Ruth 2.11. as to day, for the time preſent, Pſal.65.7. Heb.3.7. and 13. 8. See on Joſ.22.18.

ſtollen with me] If he had any of the increaſe of Laban's ſheep or goats, that were not ſpotted, he would be contented they ſhould be accounted his not by Gods gift, but by his owne theft.

V.37. Took rods] And pilled part, and left part unpilled, ſo that they were partly white, and partly green, or of that colour they were of before they were pilled: Jacob here uſeth no deceit, for it was by Gods direction, as is probably gathered, Chap.31.9, 10, 11, 12. and this he did at the ramming time.

green poplar] Not in reſpect of colour but of tenderneſs and moiſture being young, and not hard and dry by growth or age. See Iſid. Etymol. l. 12. c 1. And he took rods of ſuch trees, either becauſe they were more ready at hand, or for ſome natural quality (though unknown to us) inclining to ſuch an effect as he deſired; or God who ordered this device for good ſucceſs, directed Jacob to this choice.

V.39. Conceived before the rods] And parti-coloured according to the rods; this was partly by the ſtrength of imagination, which ſometime hath great force to conform the conception to the object; ſo women with child have brought forth children reſembling the Pictures ſet before them, ſometimes very beautiful, and ſometimes very deformed, according to the repreſentation of the pictures in their ſight or thought, at the time of their conception: but this was not all, for as it is like that God directed Jacob to this courſe, ſo he bleſt it to him, that the effect did certainly fall out whenſoever the means was uſed to that purpoſe, Gen.31. 10, 11, 12. which otherwiſe had been very uncertain, and more like to fail then to take effect; for ſuch an operation of the fancy or imagination is very rare, eſpecially in the unreaſonable creatures; howſoever Jacob muſt not neglect any means, that God preſcribes: and by this we are taught ſo to order our confidence in God, as not to neglect any humane providence, which he either preſcribeth, or alloweth.

ring ſtraked] That is, having a ſtreak of contrary colours about their leg round like a ring.

V. 40. Faces of the flocks toward the ring-ſtraked] This was, that by looking upon them their imaginations might work to a reſemblance of them, which by concurrence of Gods power in favour to Jacob, produced effects, though in that kind rare, yet very regular for the increaſe of his riches, to a liberal reward of his good ſervice.

V.41. The ſtronger cattel] Which took the ram about September, and brought forth about March; but the feebler took ram in March, and yeaned about September: yet ſome conceive the quite contrary, and for ſuch cattel as bring forth twice a year (as the ſheep in Meſopotamia do, and the like obſervation is made of the ſheep in Italy) the latter birth may be accounted the feebler, for the firſt-born hath the might and beginning of ſtrength, as Jacob ſaid of Reuben Gen.49.3. and the Hebrew word Hagnariph, ſoundeth to that ſenſe, for it ſignifieth both late bringing forth, and feebleneſs: and when the feebler ingendred, he laid no coloured rods before them.

V.42. So the feebler were Labans] Laban dealt ſubtilly with Jacob, in putting it to him to ſet down the condition touching his wages, thinking his modeſty would demand leſſe then fully to anſwer his deſert; and to prevent Jacobs ſubtle dealing with him, he put his parti-coloured cattel to the keeping of his own ſons, and committed the reſt unto Jacobs cuſtody, yet is Jacobs portion increaſed, and Labans diminiſhed.

V.43. Increaſed exceedingly] The meanes whereby this came to paſs, he mentioneth to his wives, where he ſaith, God hath taken away the cattel of your father, and given them unto me, Chap. 31. 9. wherein God dealt kindly with him as a ſon, while his Uncle did him not the juſtice due to a ſervant; how much better is it to be a ſervant to God then to man?

CHAP. XXXI.

Verſ.1. A*Nd he heard*] His ill uſage in Labans houſe makes him the more deſirous to return into Canaan; ſo the croſſes of this world may make us fore-caſt for a better Countrey, the Canaan above; and to be willing to remove from Meſech and the Tents of Kedar, Pſal. 120.5. the habitation of ungodly men, to enjoy better company in a better place, Heb.11.10.

words] The children uttered in words, that which their father diſſembled in heart; for the covetous think that whatſoever they cannot ſnatch to them is pulled from them.

hath taken away] The wicked envying the proſperity of the godly, ſlander it, as injuriouſly gotten by themſelves, when it was graciouſly beſtowed on them by God. See ver.8,9.

gotten all this glory] Worldly men highly eſteem of riches as their chiefeſt glory, Pſal.45.16,17. though themſelves be baſe in wicked ways of getting, and over-wary keeping of them; but they are only then a glory, when wiſdome and righteouſneſſe are joyned with them, as Prov. 8.18.

V.2. Countenance] Though Laban were a ſubtle and diſſembling man, giving good words, Chap.30.27,28. without any good intent; yet ſo great was the grudg of his heart, that the ſubtilty of his head could no longer conceal it, and ſo by his countenance, he diſcovered his ill affection towards Jacob, as well as his ſons by their backbiting words: thus by Gods goodneſs are the godly warned to beware of the wicked. See on chap.45.

as before] Heb. as yeſterday, and the day before. See Annot. on Chap.30.33.

V.4. Rachel and Leah] See on ver.14.

V.5. God of my fathers] That is, the God whom my Fathers worſhipped, and with whom they were joyned by an eſpecial covenant.

V.6. with all my power] A faithful and religious ſervant will be as intentive and laborious in his maſters affaires, as in his own; ſerving him, as Jacob, with all his might, and more then that, he cannot do for himſelf; and as he could not do more, ſo could he not endure more for himſelf, then for his maſter he did See ver. 40. This good ſervants will take for a pattern of paines and patience; to the bad, who are ſlight and ſlothful in their maſters buſineſs minding their own eaſe and pleaſure, more then their maſters profit (though bad maſters as Laban was) it may be brought for rebuke.

V.7. ten times] It may be taken for many times; as Num. 14.22. not preciſely ten, but rather more; for the Ewes yeaning twice a year in Meſopotamia, as they do in Italy, Jacob might in the ſix years ſervice for his reward in cattel have his wages changed above ten times; but a certain number is put for an uncertaine, which is uſual in the Scripture; and for this number, ſee Lev.26.26. Job 19.3. Zach.8.23. Neh.4 12.

But God ſuffered him not] Gods reſtraint of the wicked, is the protection of the godly. See Gen.20.6.

V.8. If he ſaid thus, the ſpeckled ſhall be] Before the increaſe fell to Jacob under divers colours, Chap.30.32. but Laban thinking that too great a wages for his work, reſtrained him to lambs of one colour; and they likewiſe multiplying to more then he was willing to allow him, (as if he had thriven by change rather then by regular providence) he changeth from that colour to another. But though Laban were ſo changeable that Jacob had juſt cauſe to complain of him for it, God is the ſame in his goodneſs to him; and ſo he hath the advantage of Laban, what change or choice ſoever he made, the greateſt number fell to Jacobs lot; yea, all that were not ſeparated before, brought forth according to the contract concluded on by covenant betwixt them to be Jacobs.

V.10. It came to paſs] See on Chap.30.39.

V.13. I am the God] The apparition, ver.10, 11. and this ver.13. though reported ſo neer together, were ſix yeeres aſunder in time; for the former was about the beginning of Jacob's laſt ſix yeers ſervice, this latter at the end of them; and he that is here called God, ver. 11. is called the Angel of God, and this Angel was Chriſt, which appeared to Jacob in Bethel; and hereby appeareth, that he had taught his wives the fear of God, for he talketh as though they knew the thing.

of Bethel] Bethel is the houſe of God; the God of Bethel, the God of Gods houſe: by which title God approving the name that Jacob gave unto it, Chap.28.19. and withal accepting of his ſervice and vow which he made in that place, ſtirreth him up to future confidence by former experience of his favour.

Vowedſt a vow] God ſheweth himſelf pleaſed with his vow; and by mentioning it, ſtirreth him up to a due performance of what he had vowed.

V.14. Rachel and Leah] One ſpake for both, or both ſpake the ſame thing, as Peter and John, Act.4.19. but Rachel (though the younger daughter) is named firſt, as the beſt beloved, and becauſe ſhe ſhould have been the elder wife by ſeven years, if either Jacob or ſhe had had their right, Gen.29.25. ſo are theſe two women named, Ruth 4.12. See Annot. on ver. 4. and make one of both.

yet any portion] Or, any more portion. The daughters of Laban apprehending no profit by their husbands further continuance in his ſervice, or their abode in his houſe, are willing to forſake him; ſo is his covetouſneſs required in its kind; he cares for none but for his profits ſake, and they (though his daughters) care no otherwiſe for him, then they may reap commodity by continuing with him.

V.15. As ſtrangers] Good men entertain ſtrangers courteouſly, like friends, Gen. 18.3 and 19.2. bad men uſe their neereſt friends, or kindred, as harſhly as if they were but ſtrangers.

he hath ſold us] For they were given to Jacob in recompence of his ſervice, which is a kind of ſale, whereas Laban ſhould have given them a part of his eſtate in marriage.

devoured alſo our money] That is, what we might have had in money or money worth, for the fourteen yeers ſervice of our husband, he hath ſpent as his own upon his own occaſions.

V.16. Whatſoever God hath ſaid] The precedent reaſons for removal from Labans ſervice are humane, this is divine, and ſo better then all the reſt; a ready rule to obey God in all caſes, which anſwers all doubts, and may ſecure us againſt all after-claps; while we obey as of duty we may truſt him with the ſucceſſe, and ſo not trouble our ſelves with a fearful forecaſt of offenſive conſequences to enſue: ſo theſe women are ready to do as God ordained, viz. to leave their father, and to go with their husband, Geneſ. 2. 24. hoping to find the comfort in him and their children which was loſt in their father, Pſal. 45.16.

V.18. To go to Iſaac] He was long in going, about ten yeers, by his dwelling at Shechem, and Bethel by the way.

V.19. Rachel had ſtollen] Neither out of covetouſneſſe, (though haply the Images were pretty and precious) nor out of deſire to divorce her father from his Idols, nor to prevent his divination of their flight by them, but as yet tainted with her native Idolatry, it is like ſhe ſtole them with a ſuperſtitious reſpect unto them. See Chap. 35. 2.

Images] Or, Idols. For Images taken for Gods (as theſe were, ver.30.) muſt needs be Idols; the word in the Original is Teraphim, a word of the plural number, becauſe they that addicted themſelves to Idols, loved them ſo well, as to have uſually more then one of that ſort in their houſes. Of what figure theſe Images were, it is not certainly known: Some take them to be veſſels or inſtruments of braſſe of the uſe of Dials, whereto was added ſometimes the operation of Divels, for preſage or prediction of future things; but it is more like they were of an humane ſhape, for ſo it appears, 1 Sam. 19. 13. where the ſame word is uſed of an Image in David's family, where the thing was not abuſed, as in other places, being kept haply rather for deriſion then for devotion; with them Idolaters conſulted concerning ſecret matters, Ezek.21.21, from them by the deceits of the divel, or the Prieſts, they received vain and deluſive anſwers, Zech.10.2. and it is like they expected help and health by them, whence Avenarius deriveth the Greek word, Therapeuo, which ſignifieth both to worſhip, and to heal; thus do theſe Images, or Teraphim, become perfect Idols: and the word is moſt appropriated to ſuch Images, as by the cunning and impoſture of the Divel were uſed to give anſwer to Idolatrous people. In Hoſ.3.ver.4. Images and Teraphim are ſet down as different things; the word for Image is Matſebah, which is the ſame with Statua, or a ſtanding reſemblance, derived from a word ſignifying to erect, or ſet up, ſo it may ſtand for an Image in general: but Teraphim ſignifieth a peculiar kind of Images, as before hath been expreſſed. See on Judg 17. 5.

V.20. Stole away unawares] In the Original, Stole away the heart of Laban, and ſo the Geneva Tranſlation hath it; by the heart of Laban, we may conceive either that which Laban ſet his heart upon, as his daughters, and Jacob's goods which he had gotten under him, or the gainful ſervice which he had performed to him; or his Teraphim, or Images which were as gods to him, ver. 30. all theſe being taken away at once, he might be as Ephraim, without heart, Hoſ. 7.11. Or, to ſteal away from Laban his heart, is to ſteal away without his knowledge, or good will; as ver. 27. Laban ſaith, Why didſt thou flee away ſecretly, and ſteal away me, ſo it is in the Original; the meaning is from me; the word from, is ſometimes expreſſed, ſometimes underſtood in the Hebrew, making mention of the ſame thing, as, Hear thou from heaven, 1 King.8.43.

V.21. Set his face toward] With a purpoſe to go that way. See Jer. 50.5. Luke 9.51,53.

Gilead] The higheſt hill beyond Jordan, in length ſtretched out to 50 miles, it beginneth neer the City Jaer, and the rocks of Arnon Southward, and runneth through two Kingdomes, the one of Og, the other of the Amorites; in that dimenſion of longitude ſeveral parts of it have ſeveral names, as Gilead, Seir, Hermon and Libanus. Adrichom. placeth it in the Tribe of Manaſſes, Theatr. terr. ſanct. p.85. See ver.47.

V.22. The third day] Labans flocks that were kept by his ſons, were three dayes journey from the cattle committed unto Jacobs cuſtody, Gen.30.36 So Labans craft and miſconceit of Jacob gave him an advantage for evaſion from him; ſo is the ſaying of Eliphaz verified, Job 5.12,13.

V.23. His brethren] That is, his kinſmen and country-men.

ſeven dayes journey] To Laban, but by this time to Jacob it was the thirteenth day; for Jacob was gone three dayes journey before Laban knew of his departure, and by that time that Laban had gone thoſe three dayes journey, Jacob paſſed on, and made his ſix dayes, and then was Laban where Jacob was firſt ſet out; from thence purſuing ſeven dayes with a ſwifter pace then Jacob travelled (with his wives, his little ones, and his flocks) he overtook him the ſeventh day of his own, the thirteenth of Jacob's journey.

V.24. To Laban in a dream] The wicked ſometimes had apparitions from God, though not for their own, ſo much as for the godlies ſake. See Gen.20 3,7. Num.22.9.

good or bad] In the Hebrew it is from good to bad; ſee chap.24.50. but the meaning is, neither good nor bad; as Gen.14. 23. from a thred to a ſhoo latchet, that is, not ſo much as either a thred or a ſhoo-latchet. Or by forbidding to ſpeak either good or bad, is meant as if he had ſaid, neither by fair words nor by foul, flattery nor reproaches, promiſes nor threats, endeavour to bring back Jacob to thy houſe, or to his former condition when he dwelled with thee. Thus God watcheth over the malignity of the wicked, and for the ſafety of his ſervants, and makes them bleſſe that would curſe, Numb.23.11. become kind, that came out cruelly minded againſt them; as Gen. 32. 6,7. and 33. 8,9. See Pſal.39.2.

V.27. Sent thee away with mirth] Laban hath now changed his place, but not his practice; he playeth the hypocrite ſtill, and pretends that as if he had known Jacobs mind, he would have diſmiſſed him with much cheerfulneſs; whereas if he had foreknown his purpoſe, he would have put his tarrying irons upon him, without any permiſſion to depart, ſo long as he could have kept him in the condition of a ſervant; malice wil pick a quarrel where no fault is made, and hypocriſie will pick a thank where no good is meant.

V.28. Thou haſt now done fooliſhly] Jacob did very wiſely in following of God, and flying from him; and Laban thinks, no doubt, that he was too wiſe for him, in getting ſo much ſubſtance under him, and getting it from him with his wives and children without his knowledg, and againſt his mind; ſo the wicked in their reproaches many times belye their own hearts, to impeach the reputation of the righteous.

V.29. It is in the power of my hand] The wicked boaſteth of his power to do hurt, not conſidering how the goodneſſe of God is able to make a reſtraint of his power and ſpight. See Pſal.52.1. John 19. 10,11.

the God of your father] He was an Idolater, and therefore would not acknowledge the God of Jacobs father, or Grand-father (who firſt forſook the Idolatry of his father Terahs family) to be his God; and he ſpeaks in the plural number, your father, meaning Jacob and his children, though he call them alſo his own, ver.43.

V 30. Stollen my gods] It is not probable that Laban having had for twenty yeers together the ſociety of Jacob, (a man profeſſing the pure worſhip of the true God, appearing oft-times unto him, and manifeſting his favour by ſo great bleſſings upon him, that Laban acknowledged God bleſt him for his ſake, Gen. 30. 27.) ſhould be ſo groſſe an Idolater, as to take theſe little Teraphim or Images for Gods indeed, who were not able to ſave themſelves from ſtealing away, being ſuch as the Prophet Jeremy derideth, Jer.10.5. yet in that he calls them by the name of Gods, it is not unlike that he committed Idolatry to them, worſhipping the Image for God, or God by the Image, or the Image with God; and ſeeing that in ſo long a time of Jacobs abode in his ſervice, he continued ſo corrupt in his Religion, it ſheweth, that Idolatry is a folly deeply rooted in the hearts, not only of the ſilly, but of the ſubtil worldlings, as Laban was, and therefore is more religiouſly to be ſhunned, and more reſolutely to be oppoſed. See on Judg. 17.5.

V.32. Let him not live] Hence ſome collect, that theft, by the law of nature, was to be puniſhed with death; this ſevere ſentence proceeding of innocent confidence, was ſomewhat too ſudden and inconſiderate, whether he means that himſelf would put the party to death, or give him or her up to the hands of the Idolater; if Jacob had reſtrained that doom to his own deſerving, it had been enough to clear him of the theft, but he made it general, and ſo ſhewed himſelf more juſt in his meaning, then wiſe in his ſpeaking. See Chap.44.9.

before our brethren] He meaneth ſome that came with Laban, whom in civility he calleth brethren. See Gen. 19.7. and in affiance of his own faithful dealing, makes them Judges of Labans accuſation, though as parties with him in that hoſtile purſuit they were profeſſed enemies to himſelf. See Act.4.19.

V.35. Jacobs tent, and Leahs tent] The men had tents apart from the women. See Annot. on Gen. 24. 67. and the women by themſelves, according to their diſtinction, and difference of children and ſervants: Propriety is uſeful for peace and privacy. See Chap.23.2. and 24.67.

my Lord] Reverend reſpects is to be ſhewne to a father, though a bad one, as Laban was, as ſubmiſſion to a maſter, though he be froward, 1 Pet.2.18.

the cuſtome of women] She ſate upon the Idols, and covered them with her coats, pretending for her not riſing (to do reverence to her father) the neceſſity of her preſent condition according to her ſexe, Lev. 15.19.

V.36. Jacob was wroth and chode] Anger is a paſſion ſoon raiſed, but hardly ruled; the eaſieſt Precept in all the Scripture is that of Paul to the Epheſians, Be angry, and the hardeſt prohibition (that which is joyned with it) ſin not, Eph. 4.26. for it is never more hard for a man to forbear ſin, then when he doth not forbear anger; if Jacob kept his diſpleaſure within a warrantable temper (eſpecially ſo provoked by Laban, who carried himſelf for the moſt part liker a cruel Maſter, then a kind Uncle or Father) his anger is as much to be commended now, as his patience before; and the more, becauſe he doth not ſmother it with ſilence, as Abſolom did his wrath againſt Amnon, 2 Sam.13.22. nor ſugar it over with ſweet words, or ſhewes of good will, as Joab did by Amaſa, 2 Sam.20.9. (which as ſome conceive is a point of wiſdom, but is (as Solomon accompteth it) folly, Prov. 10.18.) but chides it out, and ſo ſhewes himſelf to be, as he is ſtiled, a plain man, Gen. 25. 17. And in this we may take the example of his diſpoſition into our imitation, but then we muſt take heed that our wrath laſt not too long, (for though it may be ſometimes a gueſt in the boſome of a wiſe man, it dwelleth only in the boſome of fooles, Eccleſ. 7.9.) and that it chide not too loud, with a ſharper accent of rebuke then the cauſe will well bear, and ſo fall upon foul reproaches, in ſtead of free reproofs.

V.37 My brethren and thy brethren] See Annot. on ver.32.

V.39. I bare the loſs] The careful Shepherd ſhould not ſatisfie for caſual loſſes, yet ſo unjuſt was Laban to require it, or Jacob ſo juſt as of himſelf to do it.

V.41. Thus have I been] Ver.38,39,40. Jacob ſheweth (Labans iniquity compelling him to praiſe himſelf, and ſo did Paul, moved thereunto by emulous adverſaries, 1 Cor.15.10. and 2 Cor.11.1. &c.) what he did and endured in his ſervice, overſeeing his flocks for twenty years together, and yet he had but the charge of beaſts, how much better are the ſouls of men, and how then ſhould ſpiritual Paſtors rouſe up their ſpirits, and ſtir up their endeavours, and perſiſt in their vigilant care for the ſheep of Chriſts flock? how ſhould they watch, and work, and do, and ſuffer any thing, leſt any ſheep or lamb belonging to Chriſts fold ſhould be worried with the Wolf? See Heb.13.17. 1 Pet. 5. 2. Iſai.56.10.

ten times] See the Annot.on ver.7.

V.42. And the fear of Iſaac] In all theſe Titles, the God of my father, the God of Abraham, Jacobs grand-father, and the fear of Iſaac, that is, the God of Iſaac, he meaneth but one God, but nameth both his father and grand-father, in regard of the great and eſpecial promiſes made to them both; and he names his father firſt as being next unto him, and aſcends by him to his grandfather; and being that he could go no higher (for the Covenant for the promiſed Land was firſt made with him) he comes down from him to his father again, and for the God of his father, puts down the fear of Iſaac, meaning him whom Iſaac feared, Gen. 27.33 for God is the proper object of religious fear. See Iſa.8.13. chap. 41.1. Iſai.8.13. Pſal.130.4.

V.43. All that thou ſeeſt, is mine] (1 Kin.20.3.) That is, all the goods and cattel which are within thy view, which thou lookeſt on as thine owne, are mine; as if Jacob had nothing as his own right, either by deſert from him, or gift from God; he makes this brag, that Jacob may think he is beholding to him, if he take not from him the goods he hath gotten.

what can I do] He owneth his daughters and grand-children as a tender father and grand-father, and pretendeth, that being ſo neer of kin to him, they are ſo dear unto him, that he cannot find in his heart to do them any hurt.

V.44. Let us make a covenant] His conſcience reproved him of his miſbehaviour toward Jacob: and therefore moved him to ſeek peace at his hands.

V.45. A ſtone] So in the Original, but the meaning may be ſtones, (by a figure called Enallage) or a heap of ſtones. See Gen. 28 11,18.

a pillar] In teſtimony of Jacobs true intention to keep the Covenant propoſed, See Exod.24 4.

V.47. Galeed] So called by anticipation, ver. 25. for until now, upon this occaſion, that mountain was not called by that name. It is a long tract of hills extended fifty miles in length, and called at a certain diſtance by the ſeveral names of Gilead, Seir, Hermon and Lebanon, in this place it hath two names, the one given in the Syrian Tongue by Laban, the other in the Hebrew Tongue by Jacob, both having the ſame ſignification, viz. The heap of witneſſe. See on ver.21.

V.48. This heap is a witneſſe] That is, this heap raiſed up in remembrance of the Covenant betwixt us, will be a memorial or remembrance, which may be alledged by way of witneſſe or teſtimony to the truth of the Covenant concluded betwixt us. In which ſpeech there is a figure called Metonymie, whereby the ſigne is put for the thing ſignified, See Annot.on Chap.33 20.

V.49 Mizpah] A name given of beholding, as men behold out of a watch tower; meaning that God doth behold and look both upon the Covenant and thoſe that make it, and whether ſincerely or no they intend to keep it; Laban gave this name, that he might ſeem to have ſome Religion, and to bind Jacob, who was religiouſly minded, to be more obſervant of his part of the Covenant.

V.50. If thou ſhalt] The ſenſe is ſuſpended, and left imperfect, the words of a curſe concealed. See Annot.on Chap.14.23. which is uſually rather implyed then expreſt, out of an averſion and unwillingneſſe to mention it, as Chap.14 23. whence it was, for the word Curſe, a word of bleſſing is uſed, Job 2.9. where according to the Original, the words of Jobs wife may in the primary interpretation be rendred, bleſſe God and dy, though taken according to her wicked intent, they be tranſlated, Curſe God and dye: the meaning here may be ſupplyed thus, If thou ſhalt afflict, then God who both knoweth and rewardeth wickedneſs (eſpecially treachery) puniſh thee as thou deſerveſt.

take other wives] (Levit.18.18) Having been (while his daughters were with him) a very ill father. See verſ. 15. he now pretends a tenderneſſe of affection to them, and conditioneth with Jacob againſt that vice, whereunto through covetouſneſſe he forced him before.

V.52. This heap be witneſs] See Annot.on ver.48.

V 53. Of Nahor] Behold how the Idolater mingleth the true God with his fained gods: he ſaith not, the God of Abraham, and the God of Iſaac but of Abraham, and of Nahor, and their father Terah, for theſe agreed in the worſhipping of falſe gods, Joſh.24.2. the God in whom Abraham and Iſaac agreed, is the true God; but Terah was ancienter then Abraham, and Nahor then Iſaac; yet both of them rather Idolaters then true believers. Antiquity then (eſpecially if it be but of a few degrees of precedency) is no good proof of the verity of Religion; but the child may be of a better Religion then his father, or his grand-father.

fear of his father Iſaac] See Annot.on ver.42.

V 54. Eat bread] Solemn Covenants were confirmed by ſacrifice; Pſa 50.5. and feaſting, Gen.26.30. the feaſt though conſiſting of fleſh, is called by the name of bread, becauſe bread is of moſt uſe for mans food; and is always one part of the meal, though other meats be never ſo much varied; bread without them is many times eaten, they without it ſeldome, or never.

V. 55. Kiſſed] An uſual manner in many Countries to begin their meeting, and conclude their parting with a kiſſe, as here. See Annot. on Chap. 29. 11. See alſo, 2 Sam. 14. 33. and Gen. 33. 4. Ruth 1. 14. 2 Sam. 14. 33.

blеſſed them] There is ſome ſeed of knowledge of God in the hearts of the wicked; and an over-ruling power of Almighty God here appeareth, in making him, who came forth to purſue Jacob and his company as theeves, to take an affectionate farewell of them with a friendly kiſſe, and fatherly bleſſing. See Gen. 33. 4. the ſtory of Balaam, Numb. 23. 11. and of Paul, Act. 28. 4, 5, 6.

CHAP. XXXII.

Verſ. 1. A*ngels of God met him*] Not in a dreame, but when he was awake they preſented themſelves unto him in a viſible apparition; that theſe were Troops of Angels under the preſident Angel of the Countrey of Meſopotamia, and the preſident Angel of the Countrey of Canaan coming with his company to meet each other and his Troops, as ſome affirm, is a preſumptuous conceit, and it is like as falſe as preſumptuous.

V. 2. This is Gods hoſte] He acknowledgeth Gods benefits, who for the preſervation of his, ſendeth hoſts of Angels; and ſometimes his aſſiſtance is repreſented with other apparitions, as 2 King. 6.17. The Angels are called hoſts, that is, companies of ſouldiers: firſt, for their number, for they are many, Dan 7. 10. Luk. 2. 13. Secondly for their order, for their Captain, (Joſh.5.13,14,15.) the Lord of hoſts who teacheth the hands to war, and the fingers to fight, is moſt skilful to direct them, and they moſt obſervant of his Diſcipline. Thirdly for their power, for one of them in one night was able to ſlay of the Aſſyrians Army, an hundred fourſcore and five thouſand, 2 King. 1. 35. Laſtly, for their ſervice, which is the defence of Gods Church, and Children, 2 King. 6. 17. Pſal. 34. 7. Dan. 10. 20. and the diſtruction of the wicked, Gen. 19. 13. Now though Jacob were ſecured from the danger of Labans purſuit, he muſt not account himſelfe ſafe without continuance of the Divine providence over him; for the godly are alwayes in danger to be aſſaulted by ſome enemies, or other, and therefore need a guard of Angels, when their eſtate ſeemeth ſafeſt; and though one alone, or God himſelfe without their ſubordinate ſervice could protect them, yet to ſhew his great favour, and to doe them more honour, God limits not the charge of them to any one particular Angel, but ſends an hoſte here to one man, and hath made them all miniſtring ſpirits to miniſter unto them, who ſhall be heirs of ſalvation, Heb. 1.14. All of them to all, to keep them in their wayes, Pſal. 91. 11. without limitation either of Angles, or perſons, ſo that no Angel is reſtrained from a particular miniſtration to any of the elect; nor any of the elect ſo allotted to the cuſtody of any Angel, that he may not expect the protection of many.

Mahanaim] Two hoſts or Camps, Cant. 6. 13. The word is of the dual number, and the hoſts might be two, the one before, the other behind; or the one on the one ſide, the other on the other ſide of Jacob and his company; and if we take it in a plural ſenſe, theſe Armies may be thought to compaſſe him about, as Pſal.34.7. howſoever, they placed themſelves in ſuch ſort as to give Jacob aſſurance of ſafety every way, ſince their ſervice is appointed them by God for the good of the godly, Pſal. 91. 11.

V.3. Jacob ſent Meſſengers] The word Ma'achim is the ſame for the Angels that came to him, and for the Meſſengers ſent by him to his brother: and the word Angel, ſignifieth no more in the literal ſenſe; whence ſome Jewes have groſly miſtaken the Text, thinking that Jacob ſent ſome of theſe Angels on the errand to Eſau; which is a vain conceit, for he directs the Meſſengers what to ſay, ver.4. which he would not preſume to do unto ſuch Angels as God ſent unto him, who were Angels by nature, that is, heavenly Spirits, as wel as by name; that is, ſuch as bring meſſages from one to another; the differences betwixt the one and the other may be obſerved by the circumſtances of the place, and collations of Scriptures.

to Eſau his brother] Becauſe he was to paſs through his Countrey in his return to Canaan.

unto the Land of Seir, the Country of Edom] Here they ſeem to be the ſame, but Gen. 36 21. Seir is ſaid to be in the Land of Edom, ſo Seir may be taken for a part of Edom, or Eſaus poſſeſſion which was called Seir, not from Eſau, (though he were called Seir for his roughneſſe, as Edom for his redneſs) for it had that name before Eſaus time, Gen 14.6. But from Seir a Chorite, or Horite, Gen. 36,10.

V 4. Unto my Lord Eſau] (Ver. 18. Chap. 33. 8) He reverenced his brother in worldly things, becauſe he chiefly looked to be preferred in the ſpiritual promiſe; and though he had the bleſſing of the birthright pronounced upon him, yet the time was not yet come that it ſhould be perfectly accompliſhed; nor did this ſubmiſſive, either ſpeech or behaviour of Jacob to Eſau, prejudice his right of primogeniture or birthright; no more then David did his right of royalty, who after he was anointed King, calleth Saul, the Lords anointed, and his Maſter, 1 Sam. 24. 6. And in this fair ſpeech of Jacab, he prudently applyed himſelf to the pacification of Eſau, ver. 5. ſee Prov. 15. 1. of whom he had cauſe to fear ſomewhat of his old grudge and threat, which drove him to take a long journey and hard ſervice for his ſecurity from it. See Prov. 15. 1.

I have ſojourned with Laban] By reporting his condition as baniſhed from his native Country ſo long, he propoſeth himſelf as an object rather of pity, then of envy, to his brother.

V. 5. I have oxen] In mentioning his eſtate, he brags not of his riches, but ſheweth that he will not be burthenſome either to him or his fathers houſe, nor a reproach to their family by his poverty.

V. 6. And the Meſſengers] Some upon theſe words note, that the meſſengers brought word that Eſau was appeaſed, and that he came to meet him of love and reſpect; but there is not a word in the Text to that purpoſe, and the fear of Jacob in the next verſe ſheweth the contrary.

four hundred men with him] If he came not for miſchief, he brought ſo many for oſtentation, or for ſecurity; for thoſe that are a terror to many, are afraid of many.

V. 7. Greatly afraid] Albeit he was comforted by the Angels, yet the infirmity of his fleſh doth appear; the angels appeared unto Jacob betwixt two dangers, when there appeared no need of their protection unto him; now the angels are gone, and his incenſed brother cometh with four hundred armed men, in all probability to take revenge for a wrong of twenty years ſtanding. Thus God is pleaſed to give his ſervants interchangeable cauſes of comforts and fears, that they may ſtill be exerciſed for their ſpiritual proficiency, and may neither deſpair in diſtreſs nor preſume in proſperity.

be divided] The people and the flocks; the greater cattel by themſelves, and the leſſer by themſelves, and ſome of his company with each ſort to drive them together; honeſt policy (as wel as faith and piety) is both lawful and needful in the affairs of Gods ſervants. See Ver. 13, 20 chap. 14. 15. and 30. 37, 41.

V. 9. O God of my father] Here, if ever, was a fit time and occaſion for Jacob to betake himſelf to the mediation of the angels, who had lately preſented themſelves to his view, as Military Troops, and it was now ſeaſonable to implore their preſence to overmatch the forces of his brother; but he knew that was unlawful, and therefore he directs his ſupplication for ſafety immediately to the God of his father and grandfather, (without any mention of angels at all;) and he uſeth their names to quicken and ſtrengthen his faith by the promiſes of God unto them, and his Covenant with them; for though God ſometimes ſend his ſervants viſible ſuccors in their diſtreſſe, as 2 King. 6. 17. yet that is very rarely, becauſe he would have their hearts ordinarily upheld by faith, and not by ſenſe. See Annot. on chap. 31. 42.

V. 10 of the leaſt] Jacob pleads his merit toward Laban, Chap. 31. from ver. 38. to 41. but having to do with God, he ſets a very low eſteem of himſelf, as not deſerving the leaſt of Gods mercies. See the ſelf-ſame dejection of Abraham, Gen. 18. 27. and of Mephiboſheth, 2 Sam. 9. 7, 8. See alſo Luk. 17. 10.

all the truth] That is, not only by teaching him to diſcern betwixt truth and falſhood; but by ſhewing himſelf true in his predictions and promiſes unto him, making them true and right by an anſwerable event.

with my ſtaffe] But poor, like a wayfaring footman that carrieth all his wealth with him, and yet is not over-loaded with his burden.

this Jordan] Which he might ſee from Mount Gilead, or Galeed, where he laſt was, Chap. 31. 47. and if at that time out of ſight, yet not out of mind, and ſo as preſent to his memory, he might ſay, this Jordan.

become two bands] That is, come on, or increaſed in eſtate, ſo that I have two bands, a flock of leſſer cattel, and a drove of greater, and two companies of ſervants to attend and order them. See ver. 7. of this Chapter.

V. 11. Deliver me] Prayer is as a City of refuge to the godly againſt the malice of the mighty; the readieſt means of deliverance out of diſtreſs, Pſal. 50. 15 the mother with the children] Or, upon her children, as Hoſ. 10. 10. meaning he will put all to death; This Proverb cometh of them who kil the bird together with her young ones, Deut. 22. 6.

V. 13. which came to his hand] (1 Sam. 25. 8.) That is, not which his hand fetcht in by craft, or guile, or rapine, or wrong, as Hab. 1. 15. but which came to his hands, as freely ſent or preſented him by Gods providence, and his bleſſing upon his labours; or that which was neereſt at hand as fit to make a pacifying preſent.

a preſent] A liberal preſent conſiſting (as ſome reckon) of five hundred and eighty head of catel of ſeverall kinds; where we may obſerve the prudence of Jacob in his carriage towards Eſau, as well as in his prayer, his faith and piety to God; he prayeth to God and putteth his confidence in him, yet uſeth humane meanes to ſerve the Divine providence, as well as to preſerve himſelfe, and his company: and ſending of preſents is a good meanes to that purpoſe, Prov. 17. 8. and Chap. 18. 16.

V. 16. every drove by themſelves] Heb. drove, drove. See Annot. on Chap. 7. 2.

a ſpace between] That Eſaus diſpleaſure might be abated by degrees, and ſo by degrees he might encreaſe in favour, and acceptance with him; a prudent courſe, and by Gods bleſſing like to take that effect he intended, Chap. 33. 8, as indeed it did, Chap. 33 8, 9. See Annot. on Chap. 33 1.

V. 22. eleven ſons] He had a twelfth child, his daughter Dinah, the youngeſt of all his children, (excepting Joſeph) who no doubt was under his provident care with her brethren; but ſhe is not mentioned in this place, either becauſe the female ſex is not ſo much obſerved in the Scripture, (for they were not entred into the Church with a Sacrament, as the males were) nor is any of their ages regiſtred or ſummed up at their death, except Sarahs, (as ſome have noted) or it may be Dinah was not mentioned, becauſe ſhe was not a mother in Iſrael, as theſe eleven ſons were fathers.

Jabbok] See Annot. on Duet. 2. 37. See alſo Numb. 21. 24. Deut. 3. 16. Joſh. 12. 2. Judg. 11. 13.

V. 24. there wraſtled a man] So in appearance; but indeed God, as is implyed by Jacobs deſire of a bleſſing from him, ver. 26. and his mention of him by the Name of God, verſ. 28. 30. who, Hoſ. 12. is called firſt God, ver. 3. then an angel, ver. 4. The ſame angel it was whom Jacob remembreth (in his benediction) as his deliverer from all evil, Gen. 48 16. that is, the angel of the Covenant, Mal. 3. 1. Michael the Arch-angel, Jude 9. that is, Chriſt; not a created angel, and Jacobs keeper, as ſome conceive.

wreſtled] Not only with ſpiritual ſtruglings, teares, and prayers, Hoſ. 12. 4. but with corporal alſo, wherein God aſſayled him with one hand, and upheld him by the other.

untill the break of day] This wraſtling was by night, (but at what time of the night it doth not appear) and took up about break of day, for it was intended for a private conflect without ſpectators; none muſt be witneſſes of it but Jacob, nor muſt Jacob fully know with whom he wreſtles, and therefore he departed before clear light appeared to diſcover him to the ſervants of Jacob, or any other that ſhould come that way.

V. 25. when he ſaw] This is ſpoken after the manner of men, whoſe knowledge cometh to them by time, and experience, whereas God by his pure and perfect act of intelligence knoweth all things, not by degrees, or ſucceſſively, but perfectly and at once.

that he prevailed not] Not becauſe he could not, but becauſe he would not, as Gen. 19. 22. for in compariſon of him Jacob was but a worm, as he is called, Iſa. 41. 14. eaſily trodden on, and cruſhed under his foot; and God gave him ſtrength to reſiſt, and hold-out, ſo that whoſoever gave over firſt, the victory was his who gave the vigour to prevail; and if the words had been, he could not prevail, they muſt have been underſtood, not for any over-matching of his power, but for the reſolution of his will, which, in regard of his Decree to order the conflict thus, muſt needs be ſo. See Mar. 6. 5.

out of joynt] By the ſtrength that was given to Jacob to wreſtle, and to prevail with God, he might take encouragement to meet with his brother Eſau now marching towards him, that the news of his approach might not too much perplexe him; and that he might not be too much puffed up with the glory, and ſucceſs of ſuch a ſingle combate, he is made ſenſible of his owne humane frailty, and of his power who ſtrove with him, by a maime in his thigh; ſo Paul lifted up with revelations to the third heaven, leſt he ſhould be exalted above meaſure, 2 Cor. 12. 7. felt a thorn in the fleſh, and the buffetings of Satan.

V. 26. Let me go] See Annot. on Exod. 32. 10. See alſo Deut. 9. 14. and Luk. 24. 28. 29.

I will not let thee go] Though by this hurt in his thigh he was made more weak, yet was he ſtrong, 2 Cor. 12. 10. ſo ſtrong, as to wreſtle again for a bleſſing; and this was a moſt vehement wreſtling with weeping, and ſupplication, as Hoſea noteth, Chap. 12. 4. The power of prayer is next to Almighty, and by this ſometimes are the hands of the Almighty, as it were, bound to the peace, when he hath a quarrel with his people, Exod. 32. 10. Deut. 9. 14.

except thou bleſſe me] This example is many ways appliable to the ſtate of the Chriſtian Church; there is a night of wreſtling and affliction, and a day of bleſſing; there is a mixture of ſtrength, and infirmity in the beſt; there is an holy ſtriving with God by importunity of prayer, Rom 15. 30. and an holy violence to be uſed for the Kingdome of heaven, Mat. 11. 12 and in ſtriving for that, we ſtrive for a bleſſing; for with a bleſſing we ſhall be admitted to it, Mat. 25. 34. and with bleſſings abundantly furniſhed in it.

V. 27. What is thy name] The Angel being God, asketh not this queſtion, as man, out of ignorance, for he knew it well enough, as he did what was became of Abel, when he asketh of his brother Cain where he was, Gen. 4. 9. but he asked of his name, to take an occaſion for what himſelfe meant to ſay of the change of his name.

V. 28. no more Jacob, but Iſrael] (Chap.35.10.) That is, no more onely Jacob, (for that word muſt be underſtood, as Jer. 7.22, 23.) for he was often called Jacob, after this; or, rather Iſrael then Jacob, as Hoſ. 6.6 Exod.16.2,8. For after this he was chiefly called Iſrael, and his poſterity more uſually the children of Iſrael, then the children of Jacob, and familiarly Iſraelites, not Jacobites. Or this may be a precept as well as a propheſie; and though all Divine propheſies be fulfilled as they are meant, yet all precepts are not performed as they are enjoyned. The name Iſrael, importeth (as the Angel expoundeth it) a princely power with God; The change of names in the godly is an argument of favour with God, and of honour with men, and an incitement to change from bad to good, from good to better. *S*ee Gen. 17.5,15. The name Iſrael, cometh of Sarah, he hath prevailed, and El, God, according to the reaſon rendred in the Text. See on Ch. 46.2.

and with men] Having power with God, thou ſhalt prevaile with men, as with Laban before, ſo now with Eſau thy brother, though he may ſeem to overmatch thee, both in the number and power of thy people.

V.29. Tell me, I pray thee, thy name] God appeared to Jacob at leaſt twice before this, yet before now he did not ask him his name. The reaſon whereof may be, that Jacob might take occaſion to return upon him with the ſame queſtion, not doubting but he would give himſelf ſome peculiar name, whereby he might the better both remember and honour him. See Judg.13.17.

wherefore is it that thou doſt ask after my Name] The Angel will ſuccour his neceſſity, and ſtrengthen him againſt adverſity, but not ſerve his curioſity; it was not more curiouſly done in him that asked after the name of this Angel, then in many who take upon them to tell the cauſes why the Angel did conceal it. That ſome Angels had names, it is plain by Luk.1.19,26. and that the Angel of the Covenant, Chriſt Jeſus, had alſo a name before his Incarnation, appears, Dan.10.21. where he is named Michael, and that name is repeated, Jude ver 9. Rev.12.7. but whether all the Angels have particular names (which may be ſo if God pleaſe, for he may call both angels and ſtars by their names, Pſal.147. 4. in a literal ſenſe) and why the angel in this place would not tell his name is uncertaine; it may be the name here meant, was that which was not to be revealed till afterward. See Exod. 6.3. Or that Jacob muſt be taught humility, (and we by his example) in ſetting modeſt bounds his to inquiries, and contenting himſelf with ignorance of that which God will have hid. See Judg 13.18. 1 Sam.6.19. Rom.12.3.

V.30. Called the name of the place, Peniel] That is, the face of God, not that Gods eſſence is diſcernable by any, but this viſion in humane form, in compariſon of other apparitions, was more plain and familiar, with face to face, as thoſe that wreſtle, or as when a man talketh with his friend in preſence. See Exod.33.11.

and my life is preſerved] It hath been a conceit of great antiquity (it may be from this place) that men could not ſee God but with peril of life, ſo thought Manoah, Judg.13.22. Yet there is no inſtance of any one dying upon ſuch a ſight; but Exod.33 20. the Lord himſelf ſaith, There ſhall no man ſee me and live; by which may be meant, that the viſion of God is not in this life, but in the other; ſo that unleſs a man dye, he ſhall not live to ſee ſuch a ſight, for God is indeed inviſible to carnal eyes. 1 Tim.6.16. See chap.16.13.Pſal.17.15. 1 Cor.13.12.

V.31. He halted] The faithful ſo overcome their temptations, that they feel the ſmart thereof, to the intent that they ſhould not glory, but in their humility. See on ver.26. And this ſheweth, that he prevailed not with the Angel by his own ability. Some think he was cured of his maime before he met his brother; yet is not any perſon to be deſpiſed for any ſuch defect; Though the typical Prieſthood admitted of none to miniſter at the Altar, that had any bodily blemiſh, Levit.21. 18,21. yet is none leſſe acceptable with God for it; and though Jacob delighted more in the out-ſide of Rachel then of Leah, becauſe ſhe was more beautiful, if ſhe had not a better inſide alſo, God eſteemed them both alike: neither the blindneſſe of Iſaac, nor the lameneſſe of Mephiboſheth, nor the Leproſie of Naaman (and we may take in any other, either defect or deformity, that was not wilfully contracted by mens own wickedneſs, as the redneſs of eyes in a drunkard, Prov. 23. 29.) made them leſs beloved of God. The uſe of ſuch infirmities, is (to thoſe that have them not) matter of thankſgiving to Almighty God, who maketh the difference; and to thoſe that have them, to be humbled by them, and withal, to endeavor a recompence of their bodily blemiſhes, with an advantage of ſpiritual graces and endowments of their minds.

V.32. Unto this day] The remembrance of this ſtory was kept by a general abſtinence of the Iſraelites from eating of that part of the thigh (in any of the creatures) which in Jacob was ſinew-ſhrunk; and this continued until Moſes wrote this ſtory without any intimation of fault or folly therein; and to this day the Jewes obſerve it, though with much vanity and ſuperſtition, as they do other obſervances, whether of Hiſtory or Religion: and indeed the ſtory of Gods wreſtling, is moſt memorable, wherein, though profane wit may find ſomewhat to cavil at, as if ſuch a conflict with man were too mean a buſineſſe for Almighty God, yet religious wiſdom will conſider, that Gods thoughts are not mans thoughts, nor his wayes mans wayes, Iſai.55.8. For he chooſeth the fooliſh things of the world (as the world judgeth them) to confound the wiſe; and the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty, 1 Cor.1.27. If humane wit had been to ſet down a Sacrament for the Patriarchs, it would have deſpiſed ſuch a one as Circumciſion: but God chuſeth alſo the baſe things of the world, and things which are deſpiſed, and things which are not, to bring to nought the things that are, ver. 28. And for this deſcending of the Son of God to this wreſtling with Jacob, what is it to that humiliation of his in being born in a ſtable, to his ſtooping down to waſh his own ſervants feet, Joh.13.5. to his making himſelf of no reputation, and humbling himſelf to obedience, even unto death, the death of the croſs? Phil.2.7,8.

CHAP. XXXIII.

Verſ.1. Divided] That if the one part were aſſailed, the other might eſcape. *S*ee Annot.on Chap.32.19. This he doth, making humane prudence ſubſervient and ſubordinate to divine providence.

V.2. Foremoſt] He ranketh them according to their right, and his own reſpect unto them; they are ſet before in a time of danger, who in time of ſafety come behind.

V.3. Before them] He followed the firſt company which conſiſted of the hand-maids and their children, and went before the other company where were his wives and their children: Or, there were three troops of preſents to Eſau, and theſe becauſe ſent at the ſame time, and being neer together, might go for the firſt troop. See Chap. 32. from ver. 16. to the 20. incluſively; and if all theſe made the firſt troop, his wives and Concubines with their children, might make the ſecond, and to them he was the Leader; wherein he ſheweth himſelf as a good Paſtor, more chary of his charge then of himſelf, putting himſelf neereſt to the peril, and keeping them as far off as he could. *S*ee Joh. 10.11.

bowed himſelf] By this geſture he partly did reverence to his brother, and partly prayed to God to mitigate his wrath; for the heart may be exerciſed in devotion to God, while the body performeth an outward miniſtry to man. See Neh.2.4 Of Jacobs homage to Eſau, ſee Annot. on Chap.32.4.

ſeven times] That is, many times, a certain number for an uncertain; of ten times, ſee Chap. 31.7. and the annot. upon it.

V.4. Eſau ran &c.] Here be many expreſſions of reconciliation; too many, too emphatical and forcible to be thought fained in a man that had neither occaſion nor diſpoſition to diſſemble; and herein Jacobs adviſed prudence, and ſoft language, and ſubmiſſive behaviour ſerved under Gods providence to bring this to paſſe, that he might prevail with men, as well as with God, according to the note ſet upon his name, Gen.32.28. Thus when a mans wayes pleaſe the Lord, the ungodly that are his enemies may be made his friends, Prov.16.7.

V. 9. I have enough] Though Eſau were a bad man, in this reſpect there are many worſe, who have never enough, Eccleſ. 4.8. Prov. 30.15.

V.10. If I have found, &c.] If indeed thou art fully reconciled unto me, receive this preſent from me.

preſent] The Hebrew word is Minchah, ſignifying properly, a gift, which is given to God or to man, as a ſuperiour, with profeſſion of the excellency of him to whom it is given, and the ſubjection of him that giveth it.

face of God] In that his brother imbraced him ſo lovingly contrary to his expectation, he accepted it as a plain ſign of Gods preſence. It is the manner of the Hebrewes to entitle to God the things that excel, as the mountains of God, the City of God. See Annot.on Chap.23.6. & Chap.30.8. So Jacob taking delight in the looks, and behaviour and carriage of his brother Eſau, as very excellent and worthy acceptance, he compares his face to the face of God; or in his reconciled countenance and carriage he ſees the gracious face of God, whoſe work it was, (as he acknowledgeth in the next verſe) as it were ſmiling upon him; hereto accordeth that of David, by this I know that thou favoureſt me, becauſe mine enemy doth not, triumph over me, Pſal.41.11.

V.11. Bleſſing] (Joſh.15.19. 1 Sam.25.27. and 30.29. 2 King. 5. 15. 2 Cor.9.5,6.) That is, an effect of Gods bleſſing upon me, or a token of my good will and wel-wiſhing of bleſſing unto thee, or of my bleſſing or praiſing of God for his goodneſſe in this turning of thine heart from hatred to love.

V.12. Let us take, &c. They are the words of Eſau to Jacob for a ſociable paſſage together to Seir, the habitation of Eſau.

V.14. According as the cattel] Heb. According to the foot of the work. By the foot is meant the pace; and by the work the cattel, as attended by the work and miniſtry of Jacob, and his ſervants.

until I come unto my Lord] Here Jacob implyeth a promiſe of following Eſau to Seir where he dwelt, but the Scripture maketh no mention of his performance, and it is thought he did not come according to his promiſe, becauſe Seir is not mentioned among the ſtations of his abode by the way; thence ſome have conceived, that when he promiſed to come, he ſaid not as he thought, not meaning to truſt himſelf ſo far with a lately reconciled enemy; which is not likely, for Seir was ſo neer, that Eſau upon his failing, out of diſtruſt, might ſoon have returned upon him with a new quarrel: It is more probable that Jacob meant what he ſaid, but after might upon a better conſideration, or ſome warning from God, (as the Wiſe men had, Mat. 2.12) change his mind and courſe; yet ſo, as that himſelf, with ſome few of his ſervants, might viſit him for a while with ſome fair and courteous excuſe, for the reſt, who were invited with himſelf. See Rom. 1.13. 1 Theſ. 2.18.

V.17. Built him an houſe] Neither of any great coſt, nor curioſity, for he ſtayed here but a while; therefore it was like it was a ſudden and ſlight piece of building, like ſuch cottages or cabines, as ſouldiers ſuddenly rear for preſent uſe, and with a purpoſe for removal thence.

V.18. To Shalem] Or, Salem. The word Salem ſignifieth ſafe; ſo ſome take it not for a proper name of a place, but for an appellative word, noting the proſperity of Jacobs paſſage; that he came ſafe to Shechem, and thence they infer that he was healed of his halting, and that before he met with Eſau, elſe he would have made that an excuſe for his not following him to Seir; but whether Jacob were ſo ſoon cured of his halting, or were not at all cured of it, (and gave the more occaſion of the Iſraelites forbearing of ſome part of the thigh, as is noted, Chap. 32.32.) which is uncertain, there might be a City in the Country of Shechem, called Salem; and it is thought the ſame was that called Sychar. See Joh. 4.5. See Annot. on Chap. 14.18.

V.19. He bought a parcel] This was a part of the Land of Canaan, which was his by promiſe, yet the time of poſſeſſion of it, according to the grant to him and his ſeed, was not yet come; and therefore without diſtruſt of Gods promiſe, or a renunciation of his own right, he buyeth a piece of land for his preſent neceſſity, as Abraham did the field of Macpelah, Gen. 23.17,18. See Joſh. 24.32. Act. 7.16.

children of Hamor] He was Prince of the *S*hechemites; and his ſubjects are called children, becauſe a Prince is the father of his Country. See the name Abimelech in Annot. on Chap. 20.2.

an hundred pieces] Or, Lambs. That is, for ſo many Lambs in kind, or the price of ſo many; or ſo many pieces of ſilver, having the picture of the Lamb figured upon them; the ſame word Keſitah is uſed, Job 42.11. of the gift brought to Job, and it ſignifieth a ſheep, and a piece of coyn; but a ſheep had been a ſmal matter, therefore it is like it was a piece of coyn with a ſheep figured upon it; and liker to be gold then ſilver, eſpecially as the preſent of the rich: and our Latine word pecunia, is ſo called, either becauſe it is uſed in commerce, as cattel were before, or elſe becauſe the portraiture of a beaſt was ſtamped upon it. See Annot. on Chap .30.

V.20. El-Elohe-Iſrael] That is, God the God of Iſrael: he gives the Altar the Name of God, not Idolatrouſly putting it in the place of God, but figuratively, as the ſigne for the thing ſignified; as our Saviour calleth bread, his body, and the wine, his blood: Or repeating the word Mizbeahh, that is, Altar, again, which may well be underſtood; the words may be read thus, be called the Altar the Altar of God the God of Iſrael. Howſoever this Altar was ſet up as a pious and grateful memorial of Gods favour in giving him (according to his new name) power, not only to prevail with himſelf for a bleſſing, but with his brother Eſau to divert deſtruction; and by putting Gods Name and his own ſo together, he more confirmeth his confidence in him, and ingageth his own fidelity and obedience unto him; or (as ſome conceive) the Altar had an inſcription upon it, which was, the Altar of the mighty God of Iſrael. See Chap. 35.7. Jer. 33.16. Ezek 48.35.

CHAP. XXXIV.

Verſ. 1. D*inah the daughter of Leah, which ſhe bare unto Jacob*] The moſt faithful and holy family may have ſome fearful examples of ſinful miſhaps; David had many; which may ſerve for a caveat againſt too much confidence in the piety of parents for education of children, and for reſtraint of raſh cenſures againſt the religious, in regard of the faults, or miſcarriages of their children.

went out to ſee] Dinah was now about fourteen or fifteen years of age, and went upon ſome feſtival day, when the women met, to ſee them, and obſerve their perſons, their habits and behaviour: but though ſhe went but to ſee her own ſexe, ſhe was ſeen by the other, and being ſeen was deſired; and being deſired, was luſtfully abuſed by Shechem, the ſon of Hamor, Prince of the Country. This example ſheweth that too much liberty is not to be given unto youth, eſpecially to the weaker ſexe, who may be ſtrong enough to provoke to temptation, and too weak to reſiſt it, when it returnes upon themſelves with ſolicitations to luſt; it is beſt for ſuch to be ordered by the Apoſtles rule, which is, that they be keepers at home, Tit. 2.5.

V.2. Saw her, he took her] Concupiſcence is begotten by a wanton eye on a beautiful object, and being begotten, it preſently groweth ſtrong, and maketh haſte to the act; if beauty be not covered with a vaile, the eye muſt be confined with the Covenant of Job, Job chap. 31. verſ. 1. Dinah was the daughter of Leah, and Leah the firſt wife of Jacob, by intruſion into Rachels right; if ſhe thought upon the wrong, both to Jacob and her ſiſter, ſhe might have occaſion to conceive, that Dinah her daughter did now, by this miſcarriage, bring her ſin to her remembrance; and ſo her heart, if it were as tender as her eyes, might multiply tears for her own tranſgreſſion, in that ſhe was a wife too ſoone, as well as for her daughters, who was not ſoone enough, being made a bedfellow to him, whom ſhe had no time to call her husband.

V.3. And his ſoul clave] Luſt, though it be a ſin of the fleſh, makes the whole man carnal, both ſoul and body; and the ſoul rather then the body, for when the body is parted from unclean ſociety, the ſoul cleaveth ſtill to the object of concupiſcence, and ſinneth with it, when the body comes not neer it.

V.4. To his father Hamor, ſaying] He asketh his fathers conſent, and withal requireth him to make a marriage with Dinah. This proveth, that the conſent of parents is requiſite in marriage, ſeeing the very Infidels did obſerve it.

Give me this damoſel to wife] He had unlawfully lyen with her before, and now he would have her to be his wife; thus are the wicked prepoſterous in their courſe; ſo many become mothers with ſhame, who might firſt have been wives with credit; and many firſt make vows, and after the vow, enquire whether it be lawful or no, Prov. 20.25. Yet in this the example of Shechem condemns the practice of many, who are ſo looſe in their deſires, that they make no account of the bond of marriage; if they may have carnal bedfellows, they care not for wives, contrary to Deut. 22.28,29.

V.5. Held his peace] His wiſdome kept ſilence, though his grief were great; for it could not be otherwiſe, ſince Dinah was his only daughter, and now as much lamented as an harlot, as before beloved as a virgin, yet he holds his peace; the ſorrow is many times the greateſt at the heart, which is leaſt in the mouth or eyes. See Job 2,13.

V.6. To commune] For pacification of Jacob for the offence of his own ſon, and for perſwaſion to a marriage with Jacobs daughter.

V.7. Folly] Sin and folly, in the *S*cripture phraſe are names of the ſame naughtineſs; the *S*acriledge of Achan, Joſh. 7.15. and the rape on the Levites Concubine, Judg. 20.6. are called folly; and the moſt ſubtil act, if it be ſinful, deſerves no better a title, for in all ſin there is an averſion or turning from God, who is the ſoveraigne good, and the hazzarding of the beſt thing within, (our ſouls) and the beſt without, (the Kingdom of heaven) for it; ſo that the greateſt Politicians, if wicked withal, ſhall have cauſe to paſs the cenſure of the Apoſtle upon themſelves, that profeſſing themſelves wiſe, they became fools, Rom. 1.22.

in Iſrael] Chap. 33.20. In the precedent Chapter, ver. 20. and not many yeers before this, the name of Iſrael was a perſonal name of Jacob: now it is more general, extending to the whole family deſcended from him: or theſe words may be the words, not of Jacobs ſons, but of Moſes, who writeth this ſtory, according to the phraſe or form of ſpeech in his time, agreeable to the Law, which ſaith, There ſhal be no whore of the daughters of Iſrael, Deut. 23.17. See on Joſh. 7.15.

V.11. Find grace] Chap. 33.15.

V.12. I will give] Though the luſt of Shechem to Dinah was lewd, yet his love to her (for now treating of a marriage, his affection deſerveth a better name then before) was in this reſpect commendable, that he ſet an high price upon her perſon after her proſtitution, which was his fault, if not only, yet in a degree of exceſſe above hers; and becauſe he had robbed her of that which he could neither give nor reſtore, he would now put a great mulct upon himſelf, that he might buy him a right in her for the future, whom, by his former abuſe, he unjuſtly, as well as unchaſtly poſſeſſed. Compare this dealing with that of Amnon towards Thamar, 2 Sam. 13. and Shechem will ſeem an honeſt man. Upon this offer of his, ſome obſerve that it was the manner of the Eaſtern Countries for men to buy their wives, as now it is the manner with us, for fathers to buy husbands for their daughters, by giving both them and money, or ſome other dowry with them in marriage: and in ſome Countries (as Herodotus reporteth) the manner was to bring all marriageable maids into a publick view, and ſuch as were beautiful, were bought by thoſe that would give moſt for them, and the money paid for them, was given in marriage with thoſe that were not ſo amiable, as to be deſired meerly for their own ſakes; ſo they made proviſion for a numerous increaſe, that none might be barren by perpetual virginity, whether by voluntary reſolution, or upon neceſſity. Now whereas this example of Shechem is made the ground of the obſervation of the cuſtom of the Eaſt forementioned, to which ſome add the Law, Exod. 22.16,17. Deut. 22.28,29. they do none of them reach to a general practice of that kind: And it is to be noted, that in all theſe caſes, the money comes in as a ſatisfaction for wrong done, not as a bargain upon free and equal proceeding.

V.13. The ſons of Jacob] Simeon and Levi, who were brethren to Dinah, by their mother Leah; Jacob it ſeems having no mind to hear of the matter, becauſe he was extremely grieved with what was done, and unwilling to treat of a marriage where he meant it not, (for the holy ſeed of his family might not mingle with the curſed Canaanites, Deut. 7.3,4.) ſuffered his ſons to make anſwer to the motion of Shechem and Hamor.

deceitfully] Plainneſſe and ſincerity was the phraſe of their father, Gen. 25.27. and deceitful dealing is the reproach of the ſons, though towards Idolaters and Infidels: They then that teach and practice falſe dealing with Chriſtians, holding that faith given to hereticks is not to be kept, may be Simeonites and Levites, brethren in evil, but not true Iſraelites as Jacob was.

V.14. Uncircumciſed] They made the holy ordinance of God a mean to compaſs their wicked purpoſe: It is ill to deceive, though in meer civil matters, but much worſe to do it under pretence of Religion, for that is to joyn impiety againſt God with injury to man: See Abſoloms hypocriſie, 2 Sam. 15.7,8.

that were a reproach] Iſaac and Jacob both took wives out of uncircumciſed families, yet without reproach; but it was worſe to give a daughter to an uncircumciſed husband, for Circumciſion was not an Epicene or Common, but only a Maſculine Sacrament, ordained for men only, not for women; yet it was unlawful for an Iſraelite, whether male or female, to match with a Canaanite; nor was Circumciſion to be obtruded upon them, being unbelievers, ſince it was a ſeal of the righteouſneſs of faith, Rom. 4. 11.

V. 17. Our daughter] If they had treated in their own names, they ſhould have ſaid, Our ſiſter, but it is like they uſed the name of their father.

V. 20. Gate of their City] For the people uſed to aſſemble there, and there was Juſtice alſo miniſtred, Prov. 31. 23.

V. 21. Theſe men are peaceable] Thus many pretend to ſpeak for the publick good, when they only mind their own private gain and commodity.

V. 23. Shall not their cattel] To the wicked, gain is godlineſſe, as to the good godlineſs is gain, 1 Tim. 4. 8. and 6. 6. Many chuſe their Religion with meer worldly reſpects of profit and advantage, and theſe are they whoſe covetouſneſs is Idolatry, and who are as eaſily changed from one Religion to another, in time of perſecution, as mony, their Idol being melted, will take any ſtamp that is ſet upon it: Yet he might mean it not as a ſpoil from them, but in regard of gainful commerce with them.

V. 25. the third day] Wounds received are moſt painful to the wounded the third day.

ſore] Circumciſion put the circumciſed to much pain, and for a time diſabled them, though at full age, from bodily motion or action. See Joſh. 5. 8. Yet was it exerciſed by Gods appointment upon little children; an argument of a divine power and authority going along with that Ordinance, elſe it would have been thought, by the wiſer ſort, not a reproach to be without it, as the ſons of Jacob ſaid, ver. 14. but rather a reproach to receive it as a Sacrament; and cauſing a great paine, not without ſome peril, eſpecially to tender Infants; neither fathers, nor mothers, nor nurſes, nor Mid-wives, nor any that had power to refuſe or reſiſt it, would have given way unto it, if Gods ſtamp had not beene upon it, though but mean metal in it ſelf, to make it to paſs for current Coyn among men. Our entrance into Covenant with God by Baptiſm, by the ſprinkling of water, not by the ſhedding of blood (as in the Sacrament of Circumciſion) is an evidence of the divine indulgence to Chriſtian Churches, and may be an inducement to a more general Covenant with God, and a ſtronger obligation to lightſomneſſe and cheerfulneſs in his ſervice under the Goſpel, then that of the Jewes living under the Law.

two of the ſons of Jacob] Viz. Simeon and Levi; theſe are mentioned as they that were moſt offended for the wrong done unto their ſiſter Dinah, who was both by the fathers and the mothers ſide, but their other brethren mentioned without diſtinction, ver. 7. 13. may well be thought to have had their parts in this bloody plot, yea, and it is likely Jacobs ſervants alſo, and that in their Maſters name, as is obſerved on ver. 17.

Slew all the males] Becauſe the wrong their ſiſter ſuffered, came from the male-kind; and though in reſpect of man, it was not juſt to ſlay the Innocent with the wicked in this caſe, yet all being guilty of ſin and of death before God, he might juſtly permit this rage to the ruine of that people; and many times he takes occaſion, upon the exceſſes of ſins of Princes, to puniſh their ſubjects with them, and for their ſakes, as well as for their own. See on Chap. 20. ver. 7. 2 Sam. 24. 2 Chron. 32. 25.

V. 27. The ſons of Jacob] In the twenty fifth verſe, the ſons of Jacob are ſet down by their number, two, and by their names Simeon and Levi; here the ſons of Jacob without diſtinction of names, or limitation of number they are mentioned: and indeed Dinah had four more brethren, beſides theſe two, both by the fathers and the mothers ſide, who might be zealous to revenge the wrong, as well as Simeon and Levi, though theſe two, in degree of rage and reſolution, might be leaders to the reſt: and becauſe the execution of the ſlaughter ſeems too much for two, it may be probable, that others beſides thoſe that were named, ver. 25. were drawn into the ſame bloody combination; and it may be they are here named the ſons of Jacob, for aggravation of their guilt, in that having ſo good a father, they were authors and actors of ſo great a crime, which that good man ſo much deteſted, ver. 30. and Chap. 49. 5, 6, 7. So then, as a good ſon ſhall not bear the iniquity of a wicked father, Ezek. 18. ſo a good father ſhould not bear the infamy of a wicked ſon, or ſons.

came upon the ſlain] Either to take from them their apparel and other appurtenances, worth the taking away, and to ſpoil them generally of their goods; or to execute the remainder of their rage, which would not be ſatisfied with death only; ſuch was that of the enemies of Cicero, (towards his dead body) when they cut off his head and hands, ſet them upon the pulpit of Orations, and Fulvia, not content with the cruelty of men, took his head into her lap, ſpit on his face, and pricked his tongue with pins, as in revenge upon the tongue that had uttered, and the hand that had written thoſe eloquent and vehement Invectives, called Philippicks againſt Antonius. See Plut. life of Cicero, pag. 881, 882. And Stadius in Flor. l. 4. cap. 5. The like barbarous inhumanity is recorded of the Antichriſtian, to that of the heathen Romanes, as that which was practiſed upon the body of Pope Formoſus, by Pope Stephen his ſucceſſour, who took him out of his grave, arraied him in his pontificall habit, cut off three of his fingers, and caſt them into the River Tyber. Lyit. Prand. hiſt. l. 1. cap. 8. And upon the dead body of Zuinglius, Sleydan Com. l. 8. fol. 123.

V. 29 in the houſe] That is, in every houſe; in this fact of Simeon and Levi with their partakers, though as from God, the Shechemites were juſtly puniſhed, partly for actual guilt, partly for approbation of the ſin of Shechem, and for their profanation of Gods Sacraments to ſerve their own turns, and for a purpoſe to ſpoil Gods people of all their goods, verſ. 23. and albeit the wrathful vengeance of Simeon and Levi argued, either a great deal of zeal againſt the ſin, or a great deal of pride againſt the ſhame of their ſiſters rape, yet it was a wicked conſpiracy and execution, as being done without the knowledge or conſent of their Father, and ſo beyond the meaſure of regular juſtice, both in the number of perſons (for all were not in the fault that were in the puniſhment) and in degree of ſeverity, being both murder and rapine, and that at ſuch a time as the Shechemites ſhould rather have been pitied, and all this brought in with treachery againſt men, and impiety againſt God in the abuſe of the Sacrament, whereby the Book of Judith is convicted of groſſe errour, and ſo Juſtly excluded out of the Canon of the Scripture, which approveth the ſlaughter of the Shechemites by Simeon and Levi, as done by the ſword given them by God, and out of a divine zeal, Judith 9. 2, 3, 4. which their Father accurſeth, as proceeding of a wicked and cruel wrath, Gen. 49. 7.

V. 30. And Jacob ſaid] By this reproof of Simeon and Levi, Jacob witneſſeth his great diſlike of their wickedneſſe; But he ſeemeth to take the matter upon himſelfe, when he aſſigneth that which was gotten from the Shechemites, to the power of his ſword and bow for obtainment, and bequeatheth it for enjoyment unto Joſeph, Gen. 49. 21. which words of Jacob are taken by ſome Interpreters, as a Propheſie fulfilled in the expulſion of the Canaanites by his poſterity, whoſe bow, he calls his bow, becauſe they were then in his loynes, and ſpeaks of the conqueſt as already made, becauſe of the undoubted aſſurance of it upon Gods promiſe; but moſt take the words in an hiſtorical ſenſe, and ſo ſome refer them to this exploit of his ſons Simeon and Levi againſt the Shechemites, wherein he approves of the fact, but ſo farre onely as it was the execution of Gods Juſtice for the injury to his daughter, and as God confirmed that title of what was taken from them, by caſting an awe upon the neighbouring Canaanites that they durſt not offer, either revenge, or reſcue of the prey out of his poſſeſſion; this was Gods Sword and Bow, and he may be ſaid to call it his, becauſe of the late great league betwixt God and him, whereof, See Gen. 32. 28 and 33. 20. but it is rather meant of that parcell of ground which Jacob bought of Hamor, Shechems father, who (Gen. 48. 22.) might be called an Amorite, though he were an Hivite, either becauſe he might be an Amorite by parentage, an Hivite by poſſeſſion, or dwelling place; or the Amorites mingled with the Hivites, and being of more note then they) might give the denomination for them both; and, (which is more then that) the Amorites were ſo famous among the Canaanites, as to give a name to all the people of the Land of Canaan, Gen. 5. 16. This Land being Jacobs by particular purchaſe, he bequeathed it with ſpeciall favour, as a Legacy to Joſeph, as a portion above his brethren, as he ſaith, Chap. 48. verſ. 22. Object. But he bought this with his money, or lambs, Chap. 33. 19. How then did he take it with his ſword and his bow? Anſw. It is not unuſual in Metaphoricall phraſe, to call that by the name of a ſword, and a bow, which, in effect and uſe, is anſwerable to them. Now money is (as Solomon ſaith) anſwerable to all things, Eccleſ. 10. 19. it is a defence, Eccleſ. 7. 12. and can doe as much as the ſword and the bow, thence was the ſaying of a publike Warrior, that no City was ſo ſtrongly walled, but an Aſs, laden with gold, might make a breach into it; ſo may gold be called the Artillery, and great Ordnance, and ſilver may be called an hook to take fiſh, and he that buyes it, may be ſaid, (according to the Proverb) To catch it with a ſilver hook; in like manner the ground which Jacob bought with his ſilver, may be ſaid to be taken with the ſword and bow; and he may uſe this phraſe in this ſenſe, with particular oppoſition to the bloody ſword, and bow of his ſons Simeon and Levi. Or that which Jacob thus purchaſed, might be violently invaded by the Amorite, when he departed thence towards Hebron, and might, by force of Armes of Jacob his ſons and ſervants, be recovered again, as ſome conceive, not without probability; for though nothing of faith or life, neceſſary to ſalvation, be left out of the Scriptures, yet many particular actions and occurrences are omitted in the Hiſtory of both Teſtaments; and in this particular ſtory of the ſlaughter and ſpoil of the Shechemites, though it be not ſet down what became of the captive women and children, which were brought away by Simeon and Levi, verſ. 29. it is not unlike, that many of them were by Jacob ſent back to the City, (for he had not room for them at home) with a proportion of the ſpoil for their neceſſary maintenance, keeping what he thought fit, to ſerve for a recompence of the wrong to his deflowred daughter.

ye have troubled me] A wicked man is a troubleſom man; troubleſome, not onely to others, as Achan, Joſh. 7. 25. And Ahab, 1. King. 18. 18. but to himſelfe, and therefore he is compared to the troubled Sea, when it cannot reſt, whoſe waters caſt up mire and dirt, Iſa. 57. 20.

to make me] Though with God the ſoule of the ſon ſhall not bear the iniquity of the father, nor the father the iniquity of the ſon, Ezek. 18. 20. with men it is uſually otherwiſe; for the miſcarriage of the children is many times imputed to the reproach of the parents, though they deſerve it no more then Jacob did here; the more muſt their care be by good example, and education, and by conſtant prayer to God, for his bleſſing upon it, to do their beſt to make them unblameable in their wayes, and free from all ſcandal in their lives and converſation; this would be a comfort and credit to both ſides; and the contrary a double diſcomfort and diſgrace to parents, and children.

ſtink] (Exod.5.21. 1 Chron.19.6.) Cruelty and treachery are odious and abominable ſins, both in the ſight of God and men, good and bad: in the ſight of the good, by whomſoever they be committed; and in the ſight of the bad, if committed by any but by themſelves: for this the Popiſh Religion is infamous, and the infamy of it ſhould make us keep aloof from the ill ſent of that abomination.

I being few] I and my family conſiſting of a ſmall number. The dwelling of a few faithful among many Infidels is very dangerous; ſuch is the condition of the Proteſtants with the Papiſts, who are many for one in the Kingdome of Ireland, who now have ſhewed themſelves as treacherous and cruel as Simeon and Levi; who not under the check of a good father Jacob, but ſpurred on rather by the ſpirit of Eſau, a man of the ſword, Gen.27.40. ſhew no moderation or mercy in perſecution, and purſuit of thoſe, over whom the confidence in their overmatching number makes them inſult, and with more intolerable Tyranny to oppreſſe them; which will no doubt be a warning to our brethren, if they recover peace in that land, to be more curious in their courſe of life, that they may rather ſweeten their reputation with pious, modeſt, temperate, chaſte, kind and humble behaviour, then by any contrary exceſſes, give any juſt cauſe of ſcandal, to make them, as it were, to ſtink and be abominable to thoſe that live among or about them: It may be an admonition to England to uſe all good means to leſſen the number of our Engliſh Papiſts, I mean not by putting them to the ſword, for hat is their way of advancing their Religion; but by driving out both Prieſts and Jeſuites who ſeduce them, and by removal of the great ſcandals of lewd and unlearned Miniſters, by ſetting up godly, able, and painful Preachers, with eſpecial choice of them for their gifts and parts, for thoſe places where Papiſts do moſt abound; by taking the children of Papiſts, eſpecially their heirs, from the corrupt education of their own parents, and placing them where they may be trained up in the truth of doctrine and holineſs of life, and by other waies and means, which the wiſdom of the State, conceiveth to be moſt meet to work this effect.

V.31. As with an harlot] The anſwering their father by ſuch a queſtion, gives an eccho or reliſh of their wrath againſt the Shechemites, and ſheweth, that they did not think themſelves too raſh, but mild towards them, as if they had been more chary of their ſiſters chaſtity, then her father, or had diſliked the lewdneſs of Shechem more then he. Extremity of paſſion takes notice of no mean, betwixt careleſs connivance at ſin, and cruel violence againſt the ſinner; this ſheweth that yet their hearts were bloudy, though their hands were waſhed; and ſo in this paſſionate demand they bewray further wickedneſſe, to wit, impenitence for their bloody fact, impatience at the juſt rebuke of their good minded, and much grieved father. Chap. 9.

CHAP. XXXV.

Verſ. 1. G*Od ſaid*] By immediate revelation of himſelf to Jacob, whether by viſion when he was awake, or by dream when aſleep it is not ſet down; but howſoever, hereby we ſee that God is ready at hand to ſuccour his in their troubles.

Bethel] That is, the houſe of God, where at his going to his Uncle Laban, when he fled for fear of the threatned revenge of his brother Eſau, he made a vow to God to be performed upon his ſafe return. See Chap. 28.19.

An Altar unto God, that appeared] That is, to me who appeared unto thee, as Numb.26. God ſpeaks as if himſelf were a diſtinct Perſon from the God to whom this Altar muſt be built; thence ſome infer, that God the Father commands an Altar to be built to God the Son; and it is true, he being God is to be worſhipped no leſs then God the Father; for though that be true, and it be a ſign of a pious mind, to take all good occaſions to intimate the Doctrine of the Trinity, and the Deity of the Son of God, yet this phraſe will not ſerve to bear up an argument againſt ſuch as are oppoſite to that high and hard, though Orthodox or true doctrine; ſince that phraſe, viz. of Gods ſpeaking of himſelf, as in another perſon, is uſed elſewhere, whence no ſuch obſervation can be deduced, as both in the third and fourth Commandments of the Decalogue.

V.2. Jacob ſaid unto his houſhold] It belongs to the head of the family, to have care of thoſe under his charge, that they ſerve God aright. See Gen. 18.19. Joſh.24.15.

to all] All muſt ſerve God in the like pure and religious manner, therefore no toleration of any in an idolatrous religion. See Deut. 29.9, 10, 11.

that were with him] Beſides his own houſhold, he might have ſome of the Captive Shechemites with him, Chap.34.29. though ſome it is like were ſent back, his houſe not being of a ſufficient receipt for them all.

put away] (Joſh.24.23. Judg.10.16. 1 Sam.7.3.) Whether ſuch as were ſtolen by Rachel from Laban, or any taken in the ſpoile of Shechem, it is uncertain; but there muſt be no mixture of the falſe Religion with a true; when Gods Altar is erected, Idolatry is to be depoſed. God is too great to be ſerved by the halves, and mans heart too little to entertain him, and Idols with him, whoſe rival-ſhip in Religion his jealouſie cannot endure; therefore where his Ark was ſet up, Dagon was thrown down. 1 Sam.5.3, 4. 2 Cor.6.16.

ſtrange gods] Or, eſtranging, alienating gods, becauſe they draw the heart from the true God; or ſtrange, becauſe it is ſtrange, that men ſhould be ſo ſimple as to take thoſe for gods, which are made with hands, as Demetrius and the Idolaters of Epheſus did, Act. 19.24. ſuch as the Pſalmiſt and the Prophet Jeremy deride, Pſal. 115.5. Jer. 10. 3, 4, 5. or ſuch as are the gods of a ſtrange people, with whom the Iſraelites muſt not hold communion, eſpecially in marriage and matters of Religion.

among you] Jacob had not all this while, ſince his departure from Labans ſervice, (which was about ten yeers ſpace) wittingly tolerated Idolatry in his houſhold, for he was ignorant of Rachels ſtealing away her fathers falſe gods, and confident (upon Labans curious ſearch, and finding nothing in all his Tents) that there was no ſuch vanity in his family; but it is like now Rachels theft was brought to light, and it may be ſome new ſtrange gods were brought into it by the captive Shechemites.

and be clean] Outward waſhing is a ſign of inward cleanſing of the ſoul from the ſin of Idolatry, Iſai.1.16. which is principally required; for the outward ceremony, is nothing to the inward ſincerity of ſorrow for ſin, Joel 2.13. This cleanſing argueth the filthineſs of Idols, though made of Silver and Gold, and therefore they are to be caſt away as a menſtruous cloth, with extreme deteſtation, ſaying, Get you hence, Iſai.30.22.

change your garments] They might be changed by waſhing them, Exod.19.10. or putting on other cloathes in ſtead of them. The cleanſing by water, and changing of garments were both ceremonies; though yet the Ceremonial Law was not written, it was in part practiſed by the Patriarchs (who in many things were to be diſtinguiſhed from the Heathens) and afterwards committed unto writing by the Miniſtry of Moſes. See Chap.49.3.

V.3. In the day of my diſtreſs] That was at leaſt thirty yeers before, at his going to his Uncle Laban; which muſt admoniſh us not to forget Gods mercy, when we are got out of miſery.

V.4. Ear-rings] (Hoſ. 2.13.) Which either had been abuſed to the Idols of Shechem, or might be eaſily turned to occaſion of Superſtition, as Tablets, or Agnus Dei's amongſt the Papiſts; their readineſs to part with the memorials of Idolatry and Superſtition, though of ſome price, condemns the ſuperſtitious diſobedience of ſome, who though upon the command of Authority, will not part with ſuperſtitious pictures, albeit they be neither in price nor propriety to be compared with theſe Ear-rings, and other precious appurtenances of Idolatry, which are to be rejected with abhorring deteſtation, as Iſai.30.22.

hid them] It is like that he firſt melted them, or otherwiſe defaced them leſt they ſhould be found, and again abuſed to Idolatry, as Moſes did, Exod.32.20. and Hezekiah, 2 Kin.18.4.

under the Oak] Idolaters had a ſuperſtitious reſpect unto trees, thence it was that groves were to be deſtroyed as monuments of Idolatry, Exod. 34.13. Deut.7.5. & 12.3. and among trees the oak was eſpecially accompted of, as appears, Iſai.1.29. The Idols being buried under this tree were the more like to lye hid, becauſe it was ſuperſtitiouſly preſerved from cutting down, or digging up.

V.5 Terror of God] (Exod 23.27 Joſh.2.9, 11. 1 Sam.11.7. 2 Chr. 17.10) Jacob was afraid of the Canaanites, that they being many and his people few, they would deſtroy him, and his houſe, Chap. 34.30. God ſecures him from this danger, by making them to fear, of whom he was afraid. So he exerciſeth a power, not only over the hands, but over the hearts of men, to make them timorous, who otherwiſe might be moſt confident; and on the contrary to give them moſt courage, who have moſt cauſe to fear.

V.6. Luz] See Gen.28.19.

V.7. There an Altar, and called the place, El-Bethel] That is, the God of Bethel; and Bethel ſignifieth, the houſe of God. Of this, ſee on ver.1. and Chap.28.19. The building of an Altar here at his return, was the performance of his vow there made, as he went to his Uncle Laban, Chap.28.22

V.8. Deborah Rebekahs nurſe] Sent with her when ſhe was ſent with Abrahams ſervant to be married to Iſaac, Gen.24.59. Her name is here called Deborah: whether ſhe had given ſuck to Rebekah or no, is uncertain; yet it ſeemeth ſhe had a motherly affection towards her, and not unlike ſhe was a kind and careful overſeer of Jacob in his minority. Object. But how came ſhe into Jacobs family in his return from Meſopotamia, who was left with Rebekah in the land of Canaan? Anſw. Rebekah might be now dead, and Jacob was now returned into Canaan, and having lived eight yeers in it, though at ſome diſtance from his parents dwelling, it is probable he might fetch or ſend for Deborah to his family to comfort and cheriſh her, as a woman of much prudence and experience (being now above or about an hundred yeers of age) and that ſhe might be an aſſiſtant in the government of his family, being a woman of much prudence and experience, eſpecially to keep peace betwixt his emulous wives and their hand-maids; or ſhe hearing of his return with wives and children, and ſtore of cattel, might come to ſee him of her owne accord. Some of the Hebrews ſay, ſhe was ſent by Rebekah to Haran to call home Jacob, and that in their return ſhe dyed in the way.

Allon Bachuth (.i.) the oak of weeping] For the death of Deborah; though neither Jacob nor his family got by her life, yet they make great lamentation for her death. The affection of good people are more moved with reſpect to goodneſſe then to gain.

V.9. Again] God revealed himſelf in ſpecial manner to him, ſix times before this. The firſt, Gen. 28.13. The ſecond, Gen. 31.11. The third, Gen. 31.10. which two apparitions though they be reported together, were about ſix yeers diſtance the one from the other, ſee Annot. upon thoſe two verſes. The fourth, Gen 32.1,2. The fifth, Gen. 32.24 &c. The ſixth, ver. 1. of this Chapter; and the ſeventh is that in this ninth verſe.

V.11. I am God Almighty] See Annot. on Chap. 17.1.

multiply] (Chap. 8.17. & 9.1 & 28.3 & 48.4) Multiplication is a bleſſing often promiſed by God in favour to man; it is an ungrateful part in many to murmure at this bleſſing; a wicked part to prevent it by abortion, a divelliſh part to deſtroy the increaſe, and to make prodigal waſte of mankind, as ambitious Warriors do, who make no more ſcruple of ſlaying a multitude of men, then reapers do of cutting down a field of corn.

Kings ſhall come] In the promiſes of God touching the ſeed of Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob, we are to underſtand a ſpiritual poſterity, as well as a carnal; ſo thoſe are Abrahams children that are true Believers, as he was, Gal. 3.7. And godly livers doing ſuch works as he did, Joh. 8.39. and theſe as ſons of Abraham, they ſhall be received into happy reſt, and repoſe in Abrahams boſom, Luke 16.22. Taking the Propheſie in this, as well as in the other ſenſe, we may conceive it fulfilled literally and ſpiritually; literally, in David, in Solomon, in Rehoboam, &c. who lineally deſcended from the loynes of Jacob; and ſpiritually, in thoſe Kings of the Gentiles, who firſt became believing ſons of Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob, and then nurſing Fathers of the Chriſtian Church, Iſai. 49.23.

V.12. to thee—and to thy ſeed after thee] So it was ſaid to Abraham, Gen. 17.8. yet he was not poſſeſt of a foot of it, Act. 7.5. viz. as a chief owner, but as a ſojourner, or not as taking poſſeſſion of Gods promiſe, for that muſt needs be made to Abrahams, Iſaacs and Jacobs poſterity, by war upon the Canaanites, and victory over them by Gods aſſiſtance: yet may the Land be ſaid to be given to Abraham, and Iſaac and Jacob, becauſe it was given (to thoſe that did poſſeſſe it) for their ſakes; ſo they that fed the hungry, gave drink to the thirſty, cloathed the naked, and viſited the ſick and impriſoned, are ſaid to do all this to our Saviour, (whom they never ſaw) becauſe they did it to others for his ſake, Mar. 25.40. And as in the intention of the giver, Abraham was he in whoſe name the originall grant was made (ſo that whoſoever was not of the ſeed of Abraham could have no right unto it, no nor all the ſeed of Abraham, for Iſhmael was excluded, as Eſau of the ſeed of Iſaac) ſo in the acceptation of the receiver, Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob, took that whereof their poſterity was poſſeſſed, as if they had injoyed it themſelves. Or, if by the land of Canaan, we underſtand the Canaan above, (as by the ſeed of Abraham, the true Beleever, ſee Annot. on verſ. 11.) we may ſay, that to him and his ſpiritual ſeed is that good Land given, and therefore they that are poſſeſſed of it, are ſaid to reſt in the boſom of Abraham, Luk. 16.22.

V.13. God went up] As God is ſaid to deſcend when he ſheweth ſome ſigne of his eſpecial preſence below, as Chap. 11.5. Exod. 3.8. Numb. 11.17. So he may be ſaid to aſcend when he withdraweth it again, and the apparition is ended. See Chap. 17.22. and Judg. 13.20.

V.14. ſet up a pillar] He ſet up one in that place about thirty years before, but that was but an extemporary pile of ſtones, made by him alone, which by this time haply was demoliſhed, or at leaſt profaned, and therefore now he ſet up a new pillar.

V.15. Bethel] See on Chap. 28.19.

V.16. a little way to come] (2 King. 5.19.) That is, leſs then a mile from Bethlehem, as ſome ſay that have ſeen it.

Ephrath] The ſame is called Bethlem ver. 19. Ephrath is derived of the word Pharah, ſignifying, he hath made fruitful, or (as ſome conjecture) from Ephrath the wife of Caleb, 1 Chron. 2.19. and Bethlehem, ſignifieth the houſe of bread; the Prophet Micah joynes both names together, Micah 5.2. There was another Bethlehem in Galilee in the Tribe of Zebulun, for diſtinction from which this is called Bethlehem of Judea, becauſe it was in the portion of the Tribe of Judah; and in this Bethlehem was our Saviour born, Matth. 2.1. And he was (as ſome obſerve (as by way of fit correſpondence betwixt the perſon and the place) the bread that came down from heaven, Joh. 6.33.

V.18. as her ſoule was in departing] The beginning of life, is when the ſoule is united to the body, upon the configuration of the parts fit for reception of it, and operation by it; and the end of it is, when there is a parting of them by the ſoules departing from the body, which liveth while the ſoul is in it, 2 Sam. 1.9. (where the Engliſh hath my life, the Hebrew hath Naphſhi, my ſoul) and dyeth when the ſoul departeth, as here; and reſtitution to life, is the return of the ſoul unto that body from whence it was departed, 1 King. 17.21.22.

for ſhe dyed] Rachel called to her husband for children, with ſuch paſſionate importunity, as if ſhe ſhould dye of grief if ſhe had them not; and now ſhe hath her deſire, and dies by that means. How fond are many in their affections, who thinke there is no contentment without ſatisfaction to them, when it may be their greateſt affliction to have them take effect? It is good to be ſo moderate in our wiſhes for all temporal comforts, as to crave them onely with condition of Gods good will and pleaſure, and that with ſuch indifferency, as to be pleaſed without them, if he pleaſe not to beſtow them.

Benjamin] Rachel gave unto her ſon a name of ſorrow, Benoni; Jacob liked not that, becauſe it would be too conſtant a motive to mourning by bringing to his remembrance the loſſe of his beſt beloved Rachel, therefore (though he permitted much to his wives in this kind) he uſed his own authority for the change of that name, and choice of a better, to wit, Benjamin; whereby burying the intimation of grief, he would bear in mind a memento of love, and profeſs by that name, that Benjamin, for his mothers ſake, ſhould be as neer and deer unto him, as his right hand. See Pſal. 80.17.

V.19. buried in the way] It is not material where one dyeth, or where he is buried; the body is not curious in what bed of duſt it ſleepeth; and the ſoul finds as ready a way to heaven or hell, from one place as another. See on Chap. 48.7.

V.20. pillar] Monuments and memorials of the dead, are not unlawful, but may be uſeful to mind ſuch as ſurvive of the vertues of the deceaſed for their imitation, and of the hope of their happy reſurrection to eternal life; But they muſt not be ſet up with too much pomp, nor out of ſuperſtition, or immoderate affection, which ſometimes produce each other; and it is not improbable, that Idolatry had its beginning from memorials of the dead, made for conſolation of the living. See the Book of Wiſdom, Chap. 14 from verſ. 12. to the 23. A clear conviction of the Papiſts, who allow that Apocryphal Book the credit and authority of Canonical Scripture.

unto this day] That is, the day of Moſes writing this Story, but it continued many years after this, for there is mention made of Rachels ſepulcher, 1 Sam. 10.2. which could not ſo well be kept in memory, if the pillar remained not: the Papiſts take upon them to tell, that this monument was made up of twelve ſtones, in remembrance of Jacobs twelve ſons, with a pillar like a pyramis ſet upon them all, under the ſhadow of an oak; and this Adrich. delivereth upon the report of Bredenbachius, who ſaid he ſaw it: and others tell the like ſtory upon the relation of pilgrims; So Adrich. Delph. Theatr. p.19. in Tribe Benjamin. Et Salian. Annal. Ann. Mund. 2306. p 340 col. 1. But it is like theſe narrations, are either fained to foment ſuperſtitious pilgrimages, or that additional ſtructures were made of latter times, to revive and refreſh the memory of Rachel, and of the dear love of Jacob towards her, both alive and dead.

V.22. tower of Edar] That is, a thouſand paces from Bethlehem where the Angels appeared unto the Shepherds, and brought the glad tidings of the birth of our Savior, Luk. 2.8. &c.

V.22. With Bilhah his fathers Concubine] It was a great grief to Jacob that Dinah was raviſhed, yet ſo much the leſſe as ſhe was more innocent, being, as it is like, abuſed by force; but this act of Reuben and Bilhah was a ſin of greater guilt in them, becauſe willing (it is like) on both ſides, of greater grief to him, and of greater ſhame to the whole family; yet it is ſet down with the ſilence of Jacob or Iſrael, (though as a father to the one, and as an husband to the other, the wrong touched him in the neereſt degree) and without cenſure of the Writer: (ſee on Chap. 49.4.) which may teach us to take notice of the faults of Religious families, rather with ſilent ſorrow, then with clamorous reproach, if ſuch ſcandalous ſins be committed among Chriſtians, that Religion ſhould not ſuffer for it: the Religion may be good, though ſome that profeſſe it may ſometimes do ſuch wickedneſſe as is not to be named, 1 Cor. 5.1. And this fact of Reuben teacheth, that the Patriarchs were not choſen for their merits, but by Gods mercies, whoſe election by their faults was not changed. After this inceſt of his ſon, Jacob abſtained no doubt from Bilhah, as David did from his defiled Concubines, 2 Sam. 16.22.

Twelve] With Dinah the children of Jacob were thirteen, but women come not into the account of the Tribes; and without her the Tribes (taking the two ſons of Joſeph, Ephraim and Manaſſeh for ſeveral Tribes) were thirteen, but uſually they are reckoned but for twelve, becauſe thoſe two were not the ſons of Jacob by immediate deſcent, as Joſeph their father, and all his brethren were; and now the number of Jacobs ſons is made up, for after the death of Rachel he had no more.

V.26. Born to him in Padan-Aram] Not all of them, for in this Chapter it is plain, that Benjamin was born where his mother dyed (ſee on ver. 16.) that is hard by Bethlehem in the Land of Canaan, where Jacob had continued for the ſpace of eight years. So that we muſt underſtand theſe words of the greater part of Jacobs children, and indeed of all but one. See Annot on Chap. 15.13. And for that there needed no particular exception to be made, ſince that is done already by relation of the ſtory of Benjamins birth, and Rachels death, ver. 18, 19. ſo that no Reader can be miſtaken for want of an expreſs exception of Benjamin in this verſe.

V.27. Jacob came unto Iſaac] That is, with his wives and children, family and furniture, wherewith God had bleſſed him; for it is not probable that having lived many yeers in Canaan, and not very far diſtant from his father, but he viſited him divers times at Hebron, before he finally removed himſelf from his former habitation.

V.28. An hundred and fourſcore yeers] A longer life then any of the Fathers enjoyed after him; with which, Moſes willing here to cloſe up the ſtory of Iſaac by a figure called Prolepſis, or anticipation, brings in his full age an hundred and eighty yeers, with his death and burial, and after makes report of things concerning his poſterity unto chap.

which fell out when Iſaac was alive, for he lived twelve yeers after his grand-child Joſeph was ſold into Egypt.

V.29. Gathered to his people] See on Chap.25.8.

CHAP. XXXVI.

Verſ.1. THe generations of Eſau] This Genealogy declareth, that Eſau was bleſſed temporally, and that his fathers bleſſing, Chap.27.39. took place in temporal things. The ambiguities and ſeeming repugnancies in this genealogy, may be briefly reconciled by theſe rules. Firſt, Some perſons have many names, as Eſau is called alſo Edom in the firſt verſe; Jacob alſo is called Iſrael, Gen. 32. 28. and 35.21,22. So one of Eſaus wives the daughter of Iſhmael is called Mahalath, Gen.28.9. and Baſhemath, Gen.36.3. and Sarah is called, Iſca, Chap.11.29. And this not only in the names of perſons, but in names National alſo, as the ſame perſon is called ſometimes an Hittite, Chap.26.34. ſometimes an Hivite, ver. 20. of this Chapter; becauſe the Hivites were the greater Nation, and comprehended alſo the Hittites, and ſometimes an Horite, ver.24. of this Chapter; and the rather becauſe the one were in habitation mingled with the other. Secondly, ſometime the ſame name is given to ſeveral perſons, as there were two called Anah, two called Corah, three called Diſhon or Diſhan in this Chapter. Thirdly, the grandfather is called alſo a father and the grandchild (whether Nephew, or Neece) a ſon or daughter unto him, 2 King.8 18.26. Fourthly, Some are called ſons of others who were not their natural iſſue, but adopted children; as Amalek, whoſe mother was Timnah, yet is he called the ſon of Adah, verſ.12. to the one he was a natural ſon, to the other a ſon adopted. Fifthly, Some men had the names of women given unto them, as Timnah, and Abolibamah, mentioned ver.40,41. were called by the names of the firſt mothers of their Nation.

V.5. And Abolibamah] The wives of Eſau are not ranked in the order of their marriage, (for the daughter of Iſhmael was married to him after Abolibamah) it being fitteſt to name her firſt, of whom Moſes had leaſt to ſay, and her laſt, who gave occaſion by her fruitfulneſſe to ſay the more.

V.6. Went into the Country] That is, to another Country then that of Canaan, where he had dwelt, and herein appeareth Gods providence, which cauſeth the wicked to give place to the godly, Eſau removes thence to Mount Seir, that Jacob might enjoy Canaan according to Gods promiſe.

from the face] This removal of Eſau from Canaan, is taken to be after he had dwelt in Seir, and had come thence to ſolemnize his fathers funeral, Chap.35.29 after which time Jacob and he being upon good termes, are thought to have dwelled together, until their riches increaſing as (Abrahams and Lots, Chap.13.6.) gave occaſion of their parting. Or, it may be thus underſtood, that after Jacob was gone to Padan-Aram, or Meſopotamia, Eſau after a time being increaſed in eſtate, and finding his father, but eſpecially his mother, ſo affectionate to his brother Jacob, that he had no hope of any joy of living there, when he returned, removed himſelf, with his wives, children and eſtate, (which he had gotten in Canaan) to dwel in mount Seir, verſ.8. a place which haply pleaſed him better for commodiouſneſſe of hunting, to which he was very much addicted, and where he might make himſelf more room then as a ſojourner with his father in Canaan could be allowed him.

V.7. For their riches] Eſau being commodiouſly ſeated, and increaſed in riches, reſolved not to remain where he was, conceiving his brothers eſtate and his would be too much for ſuch a portion of Canaan, as in the way of ſojourning would be allotted to them; ſuch thoughts as theſe he might have before Jacob returned, and therein might be confirmed when he ſaw his encreaſe, and was reconciled unto him; and therein the affections and intentions of Eſau (though he minded only his own commodity) conduced to the accompliſhment of the divine providence, which had deſigned Canaan for the inheritance of the poſterity of Jacob, not of him.

could not bear him] Not but that the Land of Canaan was both ſpacious and fruitful enough to ſupport and ſuſtain them; but they not poſſeſt of it as in their own right, but ſojourning in it, could not be ſupplyed with ſcope and compaſs enough for all their cattel.

V.9. Fathers of] See on Chap.13.6. To all that deſcend from him in a right line, he is a father, though never ſo remote; and to ſuch a one the deſcendents in what degree ſoever are children; ſo our Saviour Chriſt is called, the ſon of David, the ſon of Abraham, Matth.1.1.

V.15. Dukes] That is, Leaders or chief Governours, or Heads of ſome eminent families or kindred; who joyning together made an Ariſtocratical form of Government; that is, a Government of divers choice and chief men, governing among themſelves in an equal tenour of Authority, without any King ruling over them by any abſolute power, though for orders ſake ſome one might have the pre-eminence, as the Duke of Venice hath; ſuch a Government the Edomites had at the firſt, after that Kings, from them they came back to Dukes again, all being elective, and not by ſucceſſion. If God dignifie them ſomuch who are not of his houſhold, how much will he honour and exalt thoſe that are?

V.20. Who inhabited the land] That is, before Eſau did there inhabit, whoſe poſterity by their ſword made themſelves room in the Country, by expelling the old inhabitants thence, Deut.2.12,22. So verifying Iſaacs prediction, Gen.27.40. to their gain and glory in the world. But withal it is to be noted, that Eſau had married Abolibamah Neece to Zibeon the third ſon of Seir, ver.2. & 20 of this Chapter: yet for all this affinity, Eſaus poſterity expelled their kinſmen by marriage, of their poſſeſſion: There is no truſt then in the alliances of wicked men; though they make marriages with one another, they will violate all lawes of affinity and friendſhip for their own advantage. See Gen.31.23,24,29.

V.24. That found the mules] The word Jemim in the Hebrew (as Schindler obſerveth, and the beſt Interpreters agree with him) is here, and no where elſe found in the whole Scripture, which makes the ſignification of it the more uncertain; the Vulgar Latine turns it Bathes, or hot waters: the moſt and beſt Divines take it for Mules, and hold, that Anahs finding them out was by an experiment of his own, cauſing a mixture of an aſſe and a mare, whence mules are ingendred, who can ingender nothing; this did Anah, who not contented with thoſe kinds of beaſts which God had created, found out the monſtrous generation of mules, between the aſſe and the mare, which as an enormity againſt nature, the Lord forbiddeth, not only in that, but in any other kind, Lev.19.19.

V.31. Before there reigned any King over the children of Iſrael] The poſterity of Eſau was advanced ſooner to royal dignity, then the poſterity of Jacob, which in the Egyptian ſervitude were under a rod of Iron, while Eſaus off-ſpring ſwayed a golden Scepter. The wicked riſe up ſuddenly to honour, and periſh as quickly; but the inheritance of the children of God continueth for ever, Pſal.172.28. But how could Moſes write this, ſince the Iſraelites had no Kings in his time? This he might write by the Spirit of Prophecy, for he propheſieth of the peoples deſire of a King, and gives rule both concerning his choice and his carriage, Deut.17.14,15. See Deut.33.5. Or this might be added by ſome other.

V.33. Jobab] Many of the Ancients hold this to be that of Job, of whoſe patience there is an hiſtory, but the words differ much in the Hebrew writing; for this Jobab beginneth with Jod, but Job of whom the Book is written, beginneth with Aleph, and is called Job or Ijob, never Jobab in the Hebrew Text.

Bozra] A famous City of Idumea, not far diſtant from the City Teman. See Amos 1.12. It is brought in allegorically in the Prophecy of Chriſt, Iſai.63.1.

V.34. The Land of Temani] Heb. Of the Temanite. The whole South Country of Idumea, ſo called from the City Teman, the Metropolis of Idumea, and the Princes Palace, ſituated on Mount Seir; which City might be ſo named from Teman the eldeſt ſon of Eliphaz, ver.11.15. and hence it is probable, that Eliphaz one of Jobs viſitants, was called a Temanite, Job.2.11.

V.37. Rehoboth] Which is a City ſituate by the River Euphrates, built by Nimrod, Gen.10.11. Some ſay this is another Rehoboth from that noted in the place forecited, and that it is diſtinguiſhed from it by the mention of the River; but the matter is ſomewhat uncertain, and of no great weight.

V.40. The names of the Dukes] From Kings they come downe to Dukes again, God having a power to advance and depoſe Principalities, to ſet up, and pull down, and to change not only the Governours, but the manner of Government as he pleaſeth; for the ſucceſſion of theſe two hundred years or thereabouts (the length of Edoms regiment limited with Moſes death, as by ſome it is) will he found too little; but after the government of Dukes, Moſes reckons eight Kings, and after them eleven Dukes again. See 1 Chron.1.51. for the King of Edom, (it may be) he was degraded to a Dukedome, becauſe of his hard hearted uſage of his brother Iſrael returning out of Egypt, Numb. 20.14,20. To this the anſwer may be, that though the Kings ſucceeded one another, the eleven Dukes might be contemporaries, and rule all at once; or if they be accounted in ſucceſſion, Moſes by the Spirit of Prophecy, as well foretels their names and dignities which did ſucceed when he was dead, as reports precedent matters for many hundred years before his birth. To this may be added a third anſwer, (which is yet not to be preferred before the former) viz. that this might be inſerted by ſome ſuch author as made up the ſtory of the Book of Deuteronomy from the fifth verſe to the end of the Chapter.

V.43. Father of the Edomites] Or, of Edom; that is, of that race or off-ſpring which hath its original from Eſaus loynes, for all the Deſcendents bear the name of their principal progenitor, though many degrees diſtant from him, becauſe that virtually they were contained in him, elſe they could not have been derived from him; ſo the Jewes many hundred yeers after Jacobs deceaſe are called Iſrael, or the children of Iſrael; whereby we are directed from the condition of the one, to look both forward and backward to the condition of the other, and to obſerve how Gods promiſes or threats given out with reference to their mutual relations, are made good upon them in ſucceeding ages: and withal the name of Edom (being given Eſau by occaſion of his parting with his birth-right for a meſſe of red pottage, for which he is condemned as a profane perſon, and thrice repeated in this Chapter as an addition to the name of Eſau) is to be taken as a brand of perpetual reproach upon him, Heb.12.16. as Jeroboam the ſon of Nebat, with this addition, which made Iſrael to ſin, 1 King.16.26. aud Chap.22.25. 2 King.3.3. and elſewhere.

CHAP. XXXVII.

Ver.1. I*N the land*] The land named was Canaan, the place in particular not named was Hebron.

V. 2. generation] (Chap 5. 1. and 36. 1.) That is, the ſtory of ſuch things as came to him and his family, with reference unto the generation, or catalogue of his Iſſue ſet down before, Chap. 35. with the interpoſition of the generations of Eſau, Chap. 36. to ſhew by way of compariſon the different condition of Gods Church, and children, and of the families of the wicked.

ſeventeen years old] Some Popiſh Tranſlators ſay, ſixteen years old, a manifeſt ſwerving from the Hebrew Text, and with it from the Greek Seventy; from which ſome eminent Papiſts pretend a ſecret inſtinct of the Spirit in the Author of that Tranſlation, which is a gloſſe more corrupt then their Text; for if Joſeph were ſeventeen, he was ſixteen in truth of ſtory, though not of interpretation; but it can be no way true that Gods Spirit would correct in a Tranſlation, that which he had dictated in the Original.

with the ſons of Bilhah, and with the ſons of Zilpha] The ſons of the handmaids, (it ſeemeth) were ſorted together, and with them Joſeph, becauſe his mother Rachel was now dead, and he envyed perhaps by Leah, for his mothers ſake; and by her ſons becauſe he was the darling of his father; therefore Jacob for preſervation of peace, divided (as it is probable) both his women, children, and cattel into two companies; in the one was Leah, her ſix children, and a great part of his flock with them; in the other the handmaids, their children and Joſeph with them; where Jacob might expect more ſafety, becauſe there leſs envy would follow the love of his father, or the preeminence which that might produce on Joſephs behalf.

his fathers wives] Not properly ſo called, for Bilhah Chap. 35. 22. is called a concubine; yet above other concubines might be called wives, becauſe their ſons ſhared in the Inheritance in the Land of Canaan with the ſons of Rachel and Leah, who were wives in a proper ſenſe. See the difference betwixt a wife and a concubine, on Chap. 22. 24. and 25. 1. and 1. King. 11. 3.

their evill report] Which is thought to be ſome injurious uſage or carriage towards Joſeph; yet it may be beſides that the ſons of Bilhah and Zilpah miſ-behaved themſelves, and raiſed an ill report upon the family of Jacob by their criminall converſation, which if it were ſuch as ſome have imagined, was moſt abominable. Joſeph obſerving it with diſlike, acquaints his father with it, that by him they may be reclaimed from their evil courſes; wherein he doth the office of a good ſon, and a good brother, to his father, and brethren, and acquitteth his own ſoul from all guilt that might have been contracted by his ſilence.

V. 3. more then all] That is, more then any of them all.

the ſons of his old age] (Gen. 44. 20.) He was 91. yeare old at the birth of Joſeph; now that parents love their young children better then the elder, there may be many reaſons; as Firſt, to be parents in old age argueth the continuance of Gods bleſſing, and of their good and ſtrong conſtitution, when it was moſt like to fall for ever. Secondly they more value ſuch an iſſue, becauſe they expect no more of that kind, and that makes it more dear, becauſe more rare. Object. But Benjamin was younger. Sol. Firſt, this is to be underſtood in reſpect of his elder brethren; and for Benjamin, he was not yet come to any proof to gain ſo much of his fathers affection. Thirdly, in the youngeſt they look that the memory ſhould hold out longeſt, and natural affection gaineth ſtrength in its courſe, ſo that the further it goeth the ſtronger it groweth. Fourthly, the young children are commonly more converſant with old men, ſince they keep home, whereas the bigger children are much abroad. Fifthly, their innocency breeds acceptation without exception, whereas the elder children commit faults, it may be crimes, (as Reuben did, Gen. 35. 22.) to grieve the hearts of their parents, and ſhorten their lives. Sixthly, Old fathers decline towards the infirmity of young children, (as the Proverb hath it, once a man, and twice a child) and are commonly more tender, and kind to thoſe who are by their tenderneſs more apt to be expoſed to injuries by others. Object. But Benjamin he was younger then Joſeph, and ſo was he alſo ſon of Jacobs elder age. Anſw. True, but there was ſomewhat there, beſides the reaſons here alledged, which made Joſeph ſo beloved of Jacob; as that he was the long deſired iſſue of his beloved mother Rachel, and her firſt born, that took away the great grief of her former barrenneſſe, and he left no matter of miſhap behind to afflict the heart of his father, as the birth of Benjamin, with the death of his mother, had done; and he was beautiful like his mother, and certainly, there appeared in young Joſeph the preſages of very vertuous acts, and employments of great importance.

a coat of many colours] (2 Sam. 13. 18.) Or, pieces; And it might be both, wherein both pieces and colours were ſo mingled, as might make moſt for delight and decency in the eye; The Greek word Poikilon, uſed by the LXX. and the other Greek word Polymita uſed by the Latines, ſound both to the ſame ſenſe, the one ſignifieth varied, the other varied in particular, by pieces of ſeveral colours. This coat is here mentioned both as an Argument of Jacobs love to Joſeph, and as an occaſion of his brothers hate, and a colour and cover for their bloody plot from the eyes of their father. Some curiouſly enquire concerning the matter of Joſephs coat, whether it were ſilk, or of divers kinds of threads, (which afterward was forbidden by the Law to be made of linnen and woollen, Lev. 19. 19.) and concerning the making, of it, whether it were long, or with ſleeves or no; but as there is no need of ſuch nicety, ſo can there be no good ſatisfaction given unto it. It is of more uſe to note, that as Jacob loved him better, ſo he ſhewed his love unto him by ſuch outward ſignes, as ſet him out unto his brethren as an object of envy: it had been better he had loved him more, and ſhewed it leſs; it is a part of prudence in parents, ſo to govern their affections or themſelves in the expreſſion of them, that they give no cauſe of grudge, or malignant emulation among their children, Eph. 6. 4.

V. 4. hated him] Many things met together to make Joſeph maligned of his brethren, as his fathers favour, which in his gay cote was an eye-ſore to their envyous looks; his complaint of his brethren, and after all, his dreams raiſed their hatred to a great height, verſ. 5, 8, &c.

could not ſpeak peaceably] Wherein appeares the power of humane corruption, which is too ſtubborn to bee held in by any bond, either of Religion, or nature; thoſe that are very bad cannot ſo much over-rule their naughty hearts, as to permit a good word to come out of their lips, Matth. 12. 23. an evidence againſt the opinion of the power of free-will in matter of morality.

V. 5. dreamed] Of dreams, ſee on Chap. 20. 3. & on Chap. 31.24.

V. 7. Obeyſance to my ſheaf] This was but a dream, the dream of a child, but in the dream was a myſtery; and the meaning of it was, that Joſephs brethren ſhould bow down to him, as their ſheaves ſeemed to do to his ſheaf; if this had been acted in the field, it would have been matter of amazement to them all; but then the providence of God in ordering the various affections, paſſions, and paſſages of his brethren towards him had not been ſo manifeſt, nor his advancement ſo ſtrange, and above their expectation, as when the preſage was but a dreame, and that but Joſephs own dream related of and by himſelfe. See on Chap. 24. 6.

V. 9. behold, the Sun and Moon and the eleven Stars.] See annot. on ver. 10.

made obeyſance] It was twice revealed to him, how he ſhould be honoured, but he hath no revelation how he ſhould be humbled, for God meant to bring this about by wayes unknown both to Joſeph, his father, and brethren; when God reveals himſelfe to any, he doth it with ſtint and limitation; the light he giveth unto them being like that of a dark-lantern, which may be ſhut, and opened by ſeveral acts of illumination; ſo that neither the Prophets, nor Apoſtles, knew any more of Gods ſecret counſel, then he was pleaſed by particular informations, to impart unto them; compare 2 King. 5.26. with 2 King. 4.27. & Act. 5. 3. with Act. 10. 17, 21.

V. 10. his father rebuked him] Partly in ignorance, whence the dream came, and how it was to be accompliſhed; and partly in wiſdom, and good will to Joſeph, whom he would not have by this means become more hated of his brethren.

ſhall I and thy mother, &c.] Jacob takes himſelfe to be meant by the Sun, his wife by the moon, and his ſons by the Stars, according to the promiſe made to his grandfather Abraham, Gen. 22. 27. wherein he takes notice of his own preeminence above his wife in the compariſon; But though Joſephs brethren did moſt humble homage unto him, Gen. 26. 4. did his father do ſo too? and if he did, his mother could not, for ſhe dyed before in travail with Benjamin Anſw. Firſt, for his father; though that be not expreſly written of him, yet before he was made known unto him as his ſon, he had him in the eſtimation and honour of a Viceroy, or Deputy of a great King, and therefore did Joſephs brethren call their father his ſervant, and with that word in their mouthes bowed their heads and made obeyſance, Gen. 43 28. And when Jacob came into Egypt, it is not to be doubted but he gave him reſpect according to the dignity of his place; and if Rachel were dead at this time, (which ſome deny) the words of Joſeph might, as to her, ſeem to ſound as an idle dream. Or, the mother of the family, who was unto Jacob as the Moon to the Sun, might, when ſhe came with Jacob her husband, do homage unto him, albeit it be not expreſſed.

V. 11. Obſerved the ſaying] (Deut. 7.28. Luk. 2.19.) He thought there was ſomewhat extraordinary in it, and though he knew not what it was, he ſet his mind to obſerve it.

V. 13. I will ſend] This was a good while after his brethren had expreſſed their envy againſt him, and by this time he hoped it was appeaſed.

V. 14. Whether it be well] Heb. Peace. Peace is a compendium of all proſperity, even the proſperity of War is called Peace, 2 Sam 11.7. Text and Margin: as on the contrary, War is the muſter of all miſeries. See Annot on Chap. 29. 6.

to Shechem] Which was from Hebron where his father was (as ſome compute the diſtance) fixty Engliſh miles, (as others) eighteen leagues, which wants not much of the other meaſure: thoſe that were rich in cattel, to have them well paſtured, were faine to keep them many times at great diſtance; when Laban, by Gods bleſſing upon Jacobs faithful ſervice was enriched, his flocks were ſometimes fed at the diſtance of three dayes journey, Gen 30 36. Queſt. But how durſt Jacob truſt his children and his cattel in that place where his ſons had committed ſuch cruel revenge upon the Shechemites? And how durſt he adventure his darling Joſeph upon ſuch a journey alone? Anſw. For the firſt, though his ſons had gotten them a title to Shechem by the ſword, God gave Jacob a peaceable poſſeſſion of it by an admirable over-awing of the people in thoſe parts, for the terror of God fell upon the Cities round about, Gen.35.5. and by that, or Gods protection otherwiſe, he hoped his Joſeph would be ſafe, though ſent alone, as himſelfe had been, when he travelled a ſingle wayfaring-man a far longer journey, Gen. Chap.28.

V. 17. Dothan] Dothan (as ſome write) is as far diſtant from Shechem, as Shechem from Hebron; others reckon them to be about eight miles aſunder, but if it were no more, yet added to the former journey, it was a great way, and Joſephs readineſſe to take the pains to do more then his father did command him, following to the full rather what he meant, then what he bad him do, is a commendable example of child-like obedience to his father, and might have been an occaſion of great benevolence from his brethren, if they had not been prepared with the prejudice of precident envy, and malice, to requite his good with their evil. In this place (yet not a City) was afterwards a City built, called by that name, 2 King.6.13.

V. 18. conſpired] The Holy Goſt covereth not mens faults, as the vain Writers do, who make vice vertue.

to ſlay him] To lay him in a dead ſleep, ſo that he ſhould never dream again; In this was Joſeph, a Type of Chriſt, conſpired againſt by thoſe, whom he came to viſit, Luk.20. verſ. 14.

V. 19. this dreamer] Heb. maſter of dreams. See Annot. on Chap. 14. 13. They give him this nick-name in ſcorn, as the manner of ill minded men is to ſet terms of reproach upon the Religious; ſo Chriſt was called a Galilean in deriſion by Julian; the Apoſtle Paul a Babler by profane Philoſophers, Act. 17. 18. This age abounds with ſuch abuſive appellations, caſt upon the beſt Chriſtians, by ſuch as are of an heretical Religion, or of no Religion at all; the practice of this kind of contumely is ancient, and the patience under it as ancient; which may make us both to look for it, and make light of it.

V. 20. pit] The Hebrew word Bor, ſignifieth ſometimes a ciſtern, or any receptacle of water which hath no ſpring to feed it, and ſo is ſometimes dry; the Hebrew Scholiaſt make the difference betwixt Beer and Bor, the former, ſaith he, ſignifieth a Pit, or Well only digged; the other the ſame, when it is built up about with ſtones, or other materials.

we will ſay ſome evill beaſt] To unnatural cruelty, they purpoſe to adde an act of inhumanity, to kill him, for whoſe ſafety they ſhould hazard their own lives; and being killed, not to vouchſafe him a buriall: and to both theſe they will adde a probable lye to cover the matter, they will impute their bloody fact to wild beaſts, a lye like enough to be believed, by that we read, 1 King. 13. 24. & 2 King. 2. 24. they would do a bruitiſh act, but would not own it. How much better is it to be reputed a murderer, and to be none, as Paul was, Act.28.4. then to be one indeed, and lay the blame upon another, whether man, or beaſt, as theſe would do?

V. 22. to deliver him] Reuben his half brother, the eldeſt ſon of Jacob by Leah, perſwades them not to ſlay him, but to caſt him into ſome dry pit; whence his meaning was to fetch him out, and to return him ſafe unto his father; he made no ſcruple to pollute his fathers bed with inceſt, Gen. 35 22. yet he makes a conſcience of being defiled with his brothers blood: and it may be he is the more deſirous to redeem the guilt of his luſt with a grateful office to his father, and to regain his love. How corrupt is this Church in the Patriarch Jacobs Family, when moſt of his ſons are tainted with the hainous ſins of inceſt, or murder in intent, and endeavour, though not in deed? for they were innocent in fact, but againſt their wills.

V. 24. into a pit] Their hypocriſie appeared in this, that they feared man more then God; and thought it was not murder, if they ſhed not his blood; or cared not though it were, while they had an excuſe to cover their fault.

V. 5. ſate down] Here is not a word how Joſeph took the matter at his brethrens hands, nor what he ſaid to ſave himſelfe; yet it is plain by the confeſſion of his brethren among themſelves, (when they ſaw themſelves entangled by their own fault) that he beſought them in the anguiſh of his ſoule to ſpare him; but they would not hear, Chap.42. 21. whence we may be directed to ſupply the ſenſe of a doubtful place, with ſuch additions as in probability of reaſon are ſuitable to it.

to eat bread] An uſual Phraſe in Scripture for the ſuſtenance of man, which is put many times for a full meal with variety of meats. Exod.18. 12. They refreſhed themſelves, or it may be feaſted, becauſe now they were freed from their dreaming brother; their conſciences were aſleep, as Jonah was in the ſide of the ſhip, Jonah 1. 5. ſo they make much of themſelves, and little regard the afflictions of Joſeph, Amos 6.6.

Gilead] Which was the way from Arabia to Dothan, and Dothan the way thence into Egypt.

V. 26. what profit] It would be a ſtrong bridle of reſtraint from ſin, if we would but poſe our ſelves with the queſtion of profit, What ſhall we get to gain the good will of men, and loſe the love of God? what eaſe will it be to our minds to ſacrifice innocent blood to our wrath, and when that is allayed, to raiſe a tempeſt of anguiſh, and fear, in our own conſciences? what profit to win the whole world, and loſe our own ſouls? Mat.46.26. See Rom 6.21.

and conceal his blood] Conceal it from men, when it will cry to God for vengeance againſt us, Gen.4 10. Job 16.18.

V. 27. ſell him] Men, eſpecially captives taken in war, were in many countreys ſold upon a price, as cattel were, and therefore the ſervant is called the Maſters money, Exod 21.21. and becauſe he was his money, if he corrected him ſo cruelly that he dyed within a day or two after, his Maſter was not to be puniſhed for it. See the place forecited. In after times ſuch as were taken in war, and might in war have been killed, remained in the power of their Saviours (for ſo are men ſometimes called, 2 King.13.5. Nehem. 9.27.) for their lives, and for all hard uſages on this ſide death; but againſt this tyranny, eſpecially among Chriſtians, there have been many both Eccleſiaſticall, and ſecular prohibitions, as againſt a practice both irreligious, and inhumane.

V. 28. Iſhmaelites] It ſeems uncertain whether Joſeph were ſold to the Iſhmaelites, or Midianites, or Medanites, for Verſ.25,27. and in this verſe, & Chap.39.1. the Iſhmaelites are named for that purpoſe, and in this verſe alſo they are called Midianites; and ver. 36. Midianites of Midian, as the Medanites of Medan, both Abrahams ſons: the like change or confuſion of the names of the Iſhmaelites, and Midianites, may be obſerved, Judg.8.24,26,28. and the reaſon may be, becauſe though they were a diſtinct people in their Original, (for the Iſhmaelites came of Iſhmael, the ſon of Abraham by Hagar, Chap.15.6. The Midianites of Midian his ſon alſo, but by Keturah, Chap.25.2) yet they were a mixed people; for a good part of them, in their habitations (the Midianites and Medanites living in the countrey of the Iſhmaelites, and exerciſing the trade of Merchandiſe among them) and therefore the Chaldeans call them both together, Arabians, (that is) a mixed people; coming of the Hebrew root Gnarab, which ſignifieth to be mixed; and for the particular of ſelling of Joſeph, we may conceive that the Iſhmaelites bought him, and ſuch Merchants as were (though by their dwelling and commerce mingled with the poſterity of Iſhmael) by deſcent ſprung from Midian and Medan the ſons of Keturah; and that all three muſt be two names of the ſame perſons, is plain, by comparing this ver. with the laſt of this Chapter, where it is ſaid, the Midianites ſold him to Potiphar, and in the firſt verſe of the 39. Chapter, it is ſaid, that Potiphar bought him of the hand of the Iſhmaelites; to which agreeth that which is ſaid in this place.

twenty pieces of ſilver] In this again was Joſeph a type of Chriſt, Joſeph is ſold by thoſe of the twelve, who ſhould have been more affectionate and faithful to him then any other; ſo Chriſt was ſold by one of the twelve, choſen for eſpecial ſervice and fidelity; and as Joſeph was paſſed over from hand to hand, from his brethren to the Iſhmaelites, from them to Potiphar; ſo was Chriſt delivered over from hand to hand, Luk. 23.7. Joſeph was ſold for twenty pieces of ſilver, and Chriſt but for ten more; and though there were no compariſon betwixt the worth of the wares and the price; for Chriſt was infinitely more excellent then Joſeph, (though of a mere man he was of great worth, and renown) yet they that bought Joſeph had the better bargain, for they were preſerved by their purchaſe; but they (at leaſt ſome of them,) that bought Chriſt, bought a ſtumbling ſtone, or rock of ruine to themſelves; to whom may be applyed that ſpeech of his; Whoſoever ſhall fall on this ſtone, ſhall be broken, but on whomſoever it ſhall fall, it will grind him to powder, Matth. 21. 44. and though Joſeph were ſold (in the intent of thoſe that ſold him) to ſave his life, and in the purpoſe of Gods providence to be a means to ſave others from famiſhing to death; and Chriſt were bought with a mind to murder him, yet he ſaved many more by his death, (which was the aym of the Divine decree for mans redemption) then Joſeph by his life; and in this reſpect Gods providence might ſet the ſale of the antitype Chriſt upon an higher price, then Joſeph his type, or figure.

V. 29. and he rent his clothes] Reuben having carefull thoughts to deliver Joſeph out of danger, went ſome way about (to ſhun the ſuſpicion of his brethren) that he might take him out of the pit; before he came thither, ſale and delivery was made of him to the Iſhmaelites, whereupon he returned with much anguiſh of heart, and extremity of paſſion, rent his clothes, the expreſſion of a troubled ſpirit, and a ſign and teſtimony of hearty ſorrow: which manner was taken up, no doubt, at firſt by extremity of paſſion, without any regard to the decency of whole apparel, or damage by tearing them, and after wards from the example of ſome eminent perſons drawn into common practice; for ſo it ſeems to be, Num.14.6. 2 Sam.1. 2. and Chap.13.19. 1 King.21.27. 2 King. 6. 30. & 19. 1. Ezra 9. 3. Job 1. 20. & 2.12. Eſther 4.1. Joel 2.13. and from practice it was ſometimes put into precept, as 2 Sam. 3.31.

V. 30. The child is not] He calls him a child, though ſeventeen yeeres of age, becauſe himſelf was eldeſt of all, and Joſeph the youngeſt but one. See Annot. on Chap.22.5. and he ſaith, he is not, that is, not there; viz. in the Pit, or not at all; for that is the ſpeech uſed for one that is dead, or ſo reputed, Gen 42. 13. 36. Jer. 31. 15 Lam 5.7. Mat.2.18.

and I, whither ſhall I go?] He thought ſome miſchief had befallen him, becauſe he could not find him, and feared his father would moſt require account of him at his hands, becauſe he was the eldeſt; and that he would take it the worſe from him, as being prepared for a miſconceit by reaſon of the offence at his former evil act with Bilhah his Concubine, Chap. 35.22. thence is he in great perplexity, as not knowing what to do, or whither to go.

V. 23. and they brought it] In the beginning of this verſe it is ſaid, the brethren of Joſeph ſent his coat, and preſently after, they brought it; in the word ſent, there is to be underſtood meſſengers, and thoſe meſſengers are they that brought it.

V. 33. an evill beaſt hath devoured him] The bloody coat makes Jacob take the matter juſt as the conſpirators had plotted it; but thereby both are deceived, they who thought their bloody hypocriſie was ſufficiently covered with Joſephs coat; and he, who thought his Joſeph was unrecoverably loſt.

V. 34. rent his clothes] See Annot. on ver. 29.

put on ſackcloth] This is here firſt mentioned; a ceremony of ſorrow, (among the Eaſtern people) and uſed among the Religious alſo before the giving of the Ceremonial Law; and was afterwards taken into ordinary practice (as the renting of the clothes before mentioned.) See 2 Sam 3.31. 1 King. 20.31. & 21.27 2 King.19.1. Neh. 9.1. Eſth.4.2, Pſal.30.11. & 35.13. Lam.2.10. Joel 1.13. Jonah 3.5. Mat. 11.21.

and mourned for his ſon] There was more cauſe to mourne for the wickedneſs of his ſons, that were alive, if he had known what they had done, then for Joſeph, if he had been dead; for if wild beaſts had devoured his body, that was to the ſoul but as a garment to it; but with this difference, that though the garment may be cut, or pierced, or torn with the body, or the body may be wounded, the garment kept whole, yet the ſoul can never be harmed by any outward violence; for the wounds of the body are but outlets of the ſoul of the juſt to a ſtate of liberty and ſafety; ſo that they, that ſorrow overmuch for the death of their holy friends, are as Jacob waſhing the bloody coat of his ſon with tears, when his body was reſcued out of deadly danger.

V.35. And all his ſons] They that had their hearts and hands deepeſt in the plot that did ſo afflict their father, pretend a ſympathy of ſorrow with him, and a deſire to miniſter comfort unto him; thus they encreaſe their own ſin by hypocriſie, while they make offer of leſſening his ſorrow by compaſſion.

and all his daughters] That is, Dinah with his ſons wives, for he had no daughters of his owne but Dinah, nor were his ſons at age to have children (who being Jacobs grandchildren, might be called his daughter, ſee Chap.31 43. & on Chap 36.1.) to comfort him; for his eldeſt ſon being not above twenty five years old, it was not like that any child of his, or any of the reſt was now of ſufficient age to be his comforters.

I will go down] Jacob was ſo paſſionately affected with the conceit of his ſons untimely death, that by ſorrow he is like to haſten his own; and carried with the tyde of his diſtemper beyond himſelfe, he both refuſeth all comfort, and reſolveth to carry his grief to his grave. He was perhaps too fond in his love to Joſeph, and now he ſmarts for it, as David did for doting upon Abſolom, 2 Sam.18.33. The exceſſe of one affection (the caſe being changed) turneth to the exceſſe of another; in both the beſt may offend, and therefore all muſt watch more carefully over their hearts, that their paſſions grow not too wild to be governed with grace, and reaſon.

grave] The word Sheol here uſed and Engliſhed the grave, ſignifieth generally the ſtate of the dead, without any reference to pain, or anguiſh, as Pſal.30 3. Iſa.38.18,19. and in many other places, eſpecially in this place where Jacob, when he conceived that Joſeph was killed, rent his cloathes, and refuſed comfort, ſaying, I will go down into the grave unto my ſon mourning; for by the grave, he could not mean a place digged below in the earth, for he thought he was devoured and torn in pieces by ſome evil beaſt, ver. 33. much leſſe that he was gone to hell the place of the damned, becauſe he was a good child, and had evident ſignes of the favour of God towards him; and particularly it is taken for a low place in the earth, and that either ſhallower, as the grave, Prov.30.16. or deeper, as that devouring gulf which ſwallowed Core and his company, Numb.16.33. or for the place and ſtate of the damned, where they are ſhut up to ſuffer torment without mitigation or end. The Popiſh Divines in their Annotations upon this place find fault with our Tranſlation for the word grave, and would fain have it be believed, that becauſe Jacob thought his ſon went not into the grave, and meant not himſelf to go to hell, that Limbus is the place meant by Sheol, a place bordering upon hell, where they muſt meet, and where there is no pain; and ſome of them deny the word Sheol to be any where in Scripture taken for the grave; but others of them confeſſe it is frequently ſo taken. We may take the word Sheol then here for the grave, or ſtate of the dead, out of commerce with the living: and if the Papiſts will have the word Sheol, to ſignifie either hell, or ſome ſtate of the dead next about it, and neer unto it, as Limbus Patrum or Purgatory, what will they ſay of the ſheep and oxen and tents, which in the ſixteen of Numbers, ver. 33. went down in the pit? in the Original the word is Sheol, but ſheep and oxen, &c. went not to Hell or Limbus.

an Officer] The word in the Original is an Eunuch, that is, a gelded man, Iſai.56. verſ.3,4. but it is not like that Potiphar was ſo, for he had a wife, Geneſ.39.9. And ſome ſay a daughter alſo, married to Joſeph, but that is an errour: ſee Annot. on Chap.41. ver.46. And becauſe Eunuchs were Chamberlaines to the Kings women, Eſth.2.3. and conſequently Courtiers, and thoſe Courtiers imployed ſometime in other offices the name Eunuch came to be a name of Court honour or office, and ſo to be given to ſome, who were perfect men, and not gelded, as Eunuchs were; ſuch a one might Potiphar be in this place.

Captain of the guard] According to the Hebrew (as the Marginal reading hath it) it is one who is chief of the ſlaughter-men: and the word put for a ſlaughter-man, is ſometimes taken for a Cook, as 1 Sam.9. 23 becauſe the ſame man many times killed the meat he dreſſed, and in ſome places the Butchers office and the Cooks met in one, the ſlaughter-houſe being a neer neighbour to the kitchin; in this place it may be a Captain of the guard or fence; the Greek word Mageirineuein, which properly is to play the Cook, is uſed for to kill, and from killing of beaſts and fowles, &c. it is made a Military word, and put for killing of men: in this place the word rendred Captain of the guard, may be a Provoſt Marſhall, or, chief marſhall, ſo it is in the Marg. here, and in 2 King.25. 8. or ſuch a one as was of chief Authority over the cuſtody of malefactors, and was to ſee execution done upon them, when they were to be put to death, as a Sheriffe with us. He was fitly diſpoſed of by the Divine providence, that of a ſon being made a ſlave by his brethren, he might by his Miſtreſſes love and hate (for he had both by turnes) and by his Maſters jealouſie and authority be made a priſoner, and of a priſoner a Ruler, that the goodneſſe of God might appear more powerful then the wickedneſſe of men; (whereof in Joſephs caſe there is clear evidence; for his honour was manifold more then his humbling, for he was in a contemptible condition but thirteen years, and fourſcore years in an honourable eſtate) and that his children might have faith for the fulfilling of his prophecies and promiſes, not onely without the helps of humane means, but againſt them.

CHAP. XXXVIII.

Verſ. 1. AT that time] Part of the ſtory in this Chapter fell out after the ſelling of Joſeph into Egypt, but that part concerning Judahs marriage was before; Some take the words [at that time] in reſpect of his taking of a wife, for the time betwixt Joſephs ſelling into Egypt, and Jacobs ſending for to ſojourn there; (which was twenty three years (or as ſome reckon twenty two) as may be gathered by comparing of Chap.37.2. & 41.46) and at the beginning of that account they conceive that Judah married the daughter of Shuah the Canaanite, for otherwiſe the ſtory of Joſeph may ſeem abruptly to be left off, and that of Judah to be unſeaſonably brought in: ſecondly, they ſay, that at that time when Joſeph was ſold into Egypt, Judah dwelt in the preſence of his brethren, and therefore it is likely, that after this he made his choice of a Canaanitiſh conſort: but neither of theſe reaſons are convincing, for Judahs ſtory might be brought in in this place, becauſe of the dignity of his Tribe, by the deſcent of Chriſt from him and Thamar according to that which is here reported of them, and becauſe the moſt of theſe matters concerning him and his ſons, had their courſe in the time prefixed; and for that which is ſaid of Judahs dwelling in the preſence of his brethren, it will not infer ſuch a ſtrict reſidence at home, but that he might make a viſit to a friend elſe-where, and there might ſee, and like, and ſteal an unmeet match with a Canaanite. Therefore this, notwithſtanding the ſtory of Judah, may have its entrance before the ſelling of Joſeph, and yet might be brought in here, becauſe the greater part of it followed after; and ſo at that time, muſt be underſtood in ſome larger latitude, and be referred to the time of Jacobs continuance in Canaan, after his departure out of Meſopotamia; as it is ſet down, Chap.37.ver.1. and accounting the time by the ſtory of Joſeph being ſeventeen years old when he was ſold, and Judah being then about twenty one years of age, ſeven years before that, that is at fourteen years old he married; and in the three years, next enſuing, had three ſons ſucceſſively one after another, viz. Er, Onan, and Shelah; when Er, his eldeſt ſon, was about fourteen years of age, he married him to Thamar; and Er, for his wickedneſſe, being ſmitten dead by God, he gives Thamar to his ſecond ſon Onan, to raiſe up ſeed unto his eldeſt brother, who doing as wickedly, God doth as juſtly by him, and ſo he cutteth off him alſo; Thamar then expecting the third ſon for the ſame reaſon that ſhe had the ſecond, and diſappointed of her deſire, in the diſguiſe of an Harlot, is uſed like an Harlot by her father in law Judah, (who was now about thirty years of age) by him ſhe was mother of twins, Pharez and Zarah; Pharez being married at fourteen years old (as Er his elder brother, and father were) begat Hezron the ſame year, and the year after he begat Hamul, and that year went Jacob into Egypt, and carried thoſe two little ones with him in the fourtieth year of Joſephs age; ſo that for the moſt of the ſtory of this Chapter, we may take the words, at that time, or, in that time, for the time after the ſelling of Joſeph into Egypt, onely Judahs marriage (as the ground of the enſuing paſſages) is related here, though it fell out before, becauſe it was fit to mention things ſo coherent together; all the ſtory beſides happened after the ſelling of Joſeph into Egypt, and ſo the whole is moſt fitly ſet down, as one continued ſtory in this place. The marriage of Judah, Er and Pharez, at fourteen yeares old; but eſpecially Judah his begetting of Er, and Pharez his begetting of Hezron and Hamul about that age, may ſeem ſomewhat ſtrange; and ſo are many things in Scripture, yea, in the narration of this Chapter, yet it is not improbable, becauſe, in very many of that age, there is a natural ability for that purpoſe, and there wants not inſtances of ſome, who were fathers ſooner then at fourteen, as Ahaz was when he begat Hezekiah, which is plain by compariſon of 2 King.16.2. and 2 King.18.2. and.17.1 And Doctor Rivet in his exercitation on this place out of Scaliger, relates a ſtory of one who was under twelve years of age when he begat a child. And no doubt but there are divers inſtances of ſuch early fruitfulneſſe, as at fourteen, and might be more, if marriage were uſual at that age.

Judah went] Judah is ſingled out in this ſtory from the reſt of his brethren, and brought in with Thamar, becauſe of theſe two (though wickedly made one) the holy Child Jeſus was to be deſcended, according to his pedegree, Mat.1.

Adullamite] That is, one of the City of Adullam, called alſo Odollam, which in the diviſion of Canaan fell to the Tribe of Judah. See Joſh.12.15. & Ch.15.35. it was ſituate in a lower part of the Country, then where his father dwelt, & therefore he is ſaid to go down thither;

David made an eſcape from Achiſh King of Gath, and betook him to a Cave there, 1 Sam.22.1.

V.2. Saw there a daughter of a certain Canaanite] He was but a raw youth, about fourteen yeers old, and he took a wife by ſenſe, not by reaſon or religion, which ſhould both have directed him to have made his choice by his fathers advice, who would never have conſented to match an Iſraelite with a Canaanite, ſuch mixed marriages of the bleſſed and accurſed ſeed being forbidden, firſt by his Grandfather, Gen.24.3. and after by his father Gen.28.1.

whoſe name was Shuah] This was not the name of Judahs wife, but of her father, as the Hebrew Text importeth by the Gender, and as it plainly appeareth, ver.12.

V.3. And he called his name] Of Judahs three ſons, the firſt had his name given by his father, the two latter by their mother; the one it is like by licenſe, the other by the abſence of her husband, for the authority of giving names is principally the mans, and the time of impoſition was moſt anciently at the birth, afterwards at the time of circumciſion of the child, Chap.21.3,4. and Luk.2.21.

V.5. He was at Chezib] That is, Judah was at Chezib, another City of Canaan, (not far from Adullam) which ſome conceive to be the ſame with that which is called Achzib, Joſh.15.44.

V.6. Judah took a wife for Er] Now Judah hath a ſon, he uſeth his own right to diſpoſe of him in marriage, and thereby ſheweth the wrong he did unto his father, in marrying himſelf without his conſent; children many times uſe their parents ſo, as they would not be uſed themſelves by their children, when they have them; it would make them more apprehenſive of their duty and better diſpoſed to do it, if they would think when they are children, what they would require of their own children if God ſhould honour them to make them parents.

Thamar] Some Jewiſh Doctors would have her to be the daughter of the High-Prieſt Melchiſedech, becauſe Judah doomes her to that death; which in caſe of whoredome was to be inflicted on the Prieſts daughter, Levit. 21.9. but the computation of time will not allow him to have now a daughter young enough to beare children, for he dyed one hundred, and ſixteen years before this fowle fact; It is more like Judah choſe for his ſon, as he did for himſelfe, a Canaanite, who if ſhe were willing to leave the Religion of her Country for that which Judah profeſſed, might be a good woman. Some doubt whether ſhe were not rather a Philiſtine then a Canaanite, ver. 7.

wicked in the ſight of the Lord] All wickedneſs is in the ſight of the Lord, but of ſome it may be ſaid rather then of others; as ſecret ſins may be ſaid to be in his ſight, becauſe no eye but his can ſee them; and great ſinners are ſaid to ſin in his ſight, or before the Lord, as was ſaid of Nimrod, Gen.10.9. and the men of Sodom, Gen. 3.13. becauſe they ſin with ſo much boldneſſe as if they would profeſs impiety before his face; and he in juſtice ſets an eſpecial eye and obſervation upon them to reward them according to their wickedneſſe: What wickedneſs this was, is not ſet down; it is thought by ſome to be like that of Onan, ver 9. but not out of envy, but to preſerve the beauty of his wife, which by bearing of children, and giving ſuck would be impaired; but this was not like to be the conſideration of one ſo young; ſome hainous and hateful ſin certainly it was, both for kind and degree; and if it were of that kind, it is not unlike it would have been mentioned, as well as the ſin of his other brother; but becauſe the wiſdom of God thought fit to conceal it, it is not fit to be inquiſitive after it.

and the Lord ſlew him] By a wicked Angel, ſay ſome Popiſh Commentators, quoting for it, Pſal.78.49. And ſome more particularly ſay, that this wicked Angel was Aſmodeus the ſlaughterer of the libidinous husbands of Sarah, Tob.3.7,8. but this is but their conceit; it was doubtleſs, whether immedtately from the Lord, or by a good or bad Angel, ſuch a ſtroke of divine vengeance as might be known to come from the hand of God. He was then but young, about fourteen yeers of age; (as hath been noted in the firſt verſe) at this age and beyond, many make account they have a priviledg for youthful pranks, though profane or impure; but they ſhould Remember their Creator in the dayes of their youth, Eccl.12.1. leſt they provoke him to be their deſtroyer, either in the midſt of their days, Pſal. 55.23. or ſooner, as he was to Er in this place, and to his brother Onan, ver.10. &c. or yet ſooner, as he was to the little children, who mocked the Prophet, 2 King.2.24

V.8. Raiſe up ſeed to thy brother] This order was for preſervation of the ſtock, that the child begotten by the ſecond brother ſhould have the name and inheritance of the firſt, which is in the New Teſtament aboliſhed. This is the firſt example we find of the marriage betwixt the widow of the dead, and the ſurviving brother; but when it was firſt ordained we find not, but no doubt it was at the firſt by revelation from God; but when, and to whom it was firſt preſcribed doth not appear; but it is plain, that in Moſes time it was made a written Law, Deut.25.5. And it is ſo to be underſtood, that if there were no natural brother in the neereſt degree of kindred to marry the widow, the next kinſman was to do the office of an husband to her, Ruth 4. and this was to preſerve the pre eminence of the firſt-born, as a Type of Chriſt, and for the diſtinction of the Tribes, that the Propheſie of his deſcent and pedigree, might more plainly appear; otherwiſe the brothers marriage of the dead brothers widow, was forbidden, Levit.18.16. And therefore, before the Ceremonies of the Jewiſh Church were aboliſhed, Herod was reproved by John Baptiſt for marrying his brother Philips wife, doing it rather out of wanton luſt, then of charity or neceſſity to raiſe up ſeed unto his brother, who dyed not childleſſe, for he had a daughter; but in the Chriſtian Church it is no way lawful; it is therefore an evidence of Antichriſtian pride in the Pope (exalting himſelf above God) to diſpenſe with inceſtuous marriages, which God hath perpetually forbidden; as he taketh upon him to do, and others to defend; he might as well diſcharge men from the Law of the ſixth Commandment, becauſe God in ſome caſes alloweth killing, as in lawful wars, and for execution of juſtice; and from the eighth Commandment, becauſe he allowed the Iſraelites to ſpoyle the Egyptians, as he doth in this caſe diſcharge men from the Law of the ſeventh Commandment, allowing ſuch marriages unto Chriſtians, as were permitted only by way of diſpenſation to Gods people in the Old Teſtament upon eſpecial reaſons, which being made for their peculiar ſtate, with it are at an end. In compariſon of ſuch Ordinances, which ſeem to be repugnant the one to the other, as in theſe forementioned, Deut.25.5. Lev.18 16. with others we muſt learn to diſtinguiſh the conſtant and perpetual precept or prohibition from the temporary exception; as in the ſecond Commandment, the Law is negative againſt Images for religious uſe, the exception is the making of the reſemblance of Cherubims, Exod.25.18,19,20. and withal, we muſt remember that it belongeth to him to make the exception, who makes the Law.

V.9. On the ground] The lewdneſſe of this fact was compoſed of luſt, of envy, and murder; the firſt appears, in that he went raſhly upon it, it ſeemes he ſtayed not till night, for the time of privacy for ſuch a purpoſe, elſe the bed would have been named as well as the ground; the ſecond is plain by the Text, he envied at the honour of his dead brother, and therefore would not be father of any child, that ſhould be reputed his, and not his own; the third, in that there is a ſeminal vital virtue, which periſheth if the ſeed be ſpilt; and by doing this to hinder the begetting of a living child, is the firſt degree of murder that can be committed, and the next unto it is the marring of conception, when it is made, and cauſing of abortion: now ſuch acts are noted in the Scripture as horrible crimes, becauſe, otherwiſe many might commit them, and not know the evil of them: It is conceived, that his brother Er before, was his brother in evil thus far, that both of them ſatisfied their ſenſuality againſt the order of nature, and therefore the Lord cut them off both alike with ſudden vengeance; which may be for terror to thoſe Popiſh Onanites who condemn marriage, and live in Sodomitical impurity, and to thoſe, who, in marriage, care not for the increaſe of children (which is the principal uſe of the conjugal eſtate) but for the ſatisfying of their concupiſcence.

V.10. Slew him alſo] See Annot. on ver.7.

V.11. A widow at thy fathers houſe] By the ſame reaſon that Onan married Thamar, the third ſon Shelah was to marry her, (Onan being dead) but Judah fearing the like miſhap to him which befel his elder brother, having perhaps a ſuſpition of ſome fault in her, or that ſome unluckineſſe followed her, had no meaning to make a third marriage with her; and for better prevention thereof, leſt by being together, ſhe ſhould intice his ſon Shelah, he appoints her to return to her fathers houſe, and there to tarry (as he pretended) but until Shelah were grown up.

V.12. To his ſheep-ſhearers] It was the manner of old (as appeareth by this place) and it continued many yeers after this (as we ſee by Nabals practice, 1 Sam.25.2,8,36.) to make a feaſt at the ſhearing of ſheep, and it is continued to this day in many parts of this Kingdom; at this feaſt the Owners of the cattel had a double evidence of Gods bounty to them; for while ſome parted with their wool to cloath them, others, it is like, were ſtripped of their ſkins, having loſt their lives, to feed them.

friend] The ſame word here rendred friend, the pricks only varied, ſignifieth a Paſtor or Shepherd; both theſe acceptations happily met together in our bleſſed Saviour, who was both a good Shepherd to his ſheep, and a very good friend to them, laying downe his life for them, Joh 10.11.

V.14. Her widows garments] The manner was (as by this it ſeems) for widows to be diſtinguiſhed by ſome grave and mournful habit, from wives who enjoyed the comfort of their husbands.

in an open place] Heb. The door of Enajim; a proper name of a place, or of the eyes, that is, a place which affords an open proſpect to the eyes; or a croſſe way, where the eyes are put to it to look intentively what way to chuſe, and what to refuſe; or, the door of two fountains, a way which is an open paſſage betwixt two fountaines. Such as are of that tempting profeſſion, though to ſecret ſin, haunt places which are open and obvious to common commerce and recourſe; as the harlot by Solomon is ſet out, Prov.7.12. Now ſhe is without now in the ſtreet, and lyeth in wait in every corner. Prov. 9 14. See Jer. 3 2. Ezek. 16.24,25.

Shelah — grown, and ſhe was not given] It appeareth now to Thamar, that Judah had no purpoſe to do the right that belonged to her widow-hood; ſo being hindred by him from being a lawful wife, ſhe takes thence occaſion to make her ſelf his bed-fellow by an unlawful means; and he being now a widower, as well as ſhe a widow, ſhe thought it more lawful to be done, and Judah more likely to be drawn unto it.

V.15. becauſe ſhe had covered her face] That he did not know her by her voyce, the reaſon might be, either for that ſhe ſpake to him in a whiſpering noiſe; becauſe it was a ſecret matter; or, not ſuſpecting his daughter in law in that place, he might think it another, though ſhe ſpake like her, and his own inordinate paſſion might by Gods judgement be an occaſion to blind his judgment, ſo that hearing he might hear and not underſtand, and ſeeing he might ſee and not perceive, Mat. 13.14. See Annot on Chap. 29.25.

V.18. And he gave it her] That is, the pledg ſhe demanded, to wit, his ſignet, or ſeal, his bracelets, and ſtaff; luſt whether for corporal or ſpiritual whoredom, is a beſotting evil, which makes a man part with his precious things to a pernicious purpoſe; ſo did the Iſraelites with their ear-rings to make the golden Calf, which they ſet up to their own ruine, Exod. 32.

and he came in] Not by the high-way where ſhe ſtood to tempt, but in ſome private place not far off, more like to be choſen for ſuch a ſinful ſecret. This fact of Judah is recorded for many reaſons: Firſt, to ſhew the impartiality of Gods Spirit, which indicted unto the Penmen of the holy Scriptures, who uſeth no connivence to the offences of any; therefore Moſes, though he were of the Tribe of Levi, tells Levi's faults, Gen. 34.25. & Chap. 49.5. &c. as well as Judahs here, yea and his own defects, Chap. 38.15,16. Exod. 4.13. and Gods diſpleaſure towards himſelf as well as others, Exod. 4.24. Num. 20.12. and David, howſoever he is highly magnified, hath his faults laid open, though done in ſecret, as well as others, 2 Sam. Chap. 11. & 12. & Chap. 24. and Jonah reports his own murmuring againſt God, and took a chiding for it, anſwering nothing in his own defence, and ſo his Book is ended. Secondly, That we ſhould not Idolize the Worthies of former ages, but conſider them as frail men, though never ſo eminent. Thirdly, To ſhew them that the favours they received from God, were not rewards of their works, but the exerciſes of mercy, whereof the beſt thought themſelves moſt unworthy, Gen. 32.10. Fourthly, To take away all boaſting of a carnal birth, and therefore our Savior himſelf, though immediatly born of a pure Virgin, was lineally deſcended from this Judah and Thamar, that men might reſpect him for himſelf, not for the worth of his progenitors in the fleſh; and hence the vanity of the Jews brag is evident, who gloried that they were not born of Fornication, Joh. 8.41. whereas Judah (from whom they are called Judai, Jewes) here committed inceſt with the widow of his own ſons. Fifthly, To comfort penitent ſinners, though they have foully fallen into groſs offences, for though divers of the Patriarchs were great ſinners, as Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah, yet were their poſterity all ſharers in the Land of Canaan, and all their names written in precious ſtones on Aarons breſt-plate, Exod. 28.21.

V.20. His friend the Adullamite] (his name was Hirah, ver. 12) but he had ſhewed himſelf a better friend, if (when he went with Judah to his ſheep-ſhearers, at which time the fact was committed) he had diſſwaded him from it; but it is like he had his part in conſenting to the ſin, as well as in concealing of the ſhame; but friendſhip is not rightly underſtood nor practiſed; the trueſt friendſhip is to ſave or deliver a friend from the greateſt evil, and the greateſt evil is ſin; but to tempt any to that, or to tolerate him in it, is the part rather of an enemy, then of a friend. See Annot on Gen. 20 1. ſee alſo Lev. 19.17.

V.23. leſt we be aſhamed] Men are more afraid of ſhame, in reſpect of men, then of ſin, in reſpect of God; yet not ſo much afraid of ſhame as they ſhould be, for they think not much of that until they have made way for it by their wickedneſs; elſe if the importunity of their carnal deſires would give them leave and leiſure to conſider what ſhame attendeth upon ſin, it might be a means to with-hold them from it, Rom. 6.21.

V.24. Bring her forth] From the houſe ſhe dwelled in, to priſon, that being firſt delivered of child, ſhe may be afterwards burned.

let her be burnt] We ſee that the Law was written in mans heart, which taught them that Adultery ſhould be puniſhed with death, albeit no Law as yet was given: of thoſe Laws which were written by Moſes, divers were in uſe and practice before his time, as for Altar, Sacrifices, Oblations, Tithes, the diſtinction of clean, & unclean creatures, with others, and ſo adultery was puniſhed with death; and it was taken for adultery if a betrothed virgin plaid the harlot, for which, both ſhe, and her carnal male were to be put to death, Deut. 22.23,24. and the death was ſtoning, as in the place forecited, except in a Prieſts daughter, and ſhe, if ſhe offended in that kind, was to be burnt, Lev. 21.9. In regard that Judah made offer of his third ſon Shelah, for an husband to Thamar, ver. 11. and ſhe accepted of it, ſhe was in the caſe of a betrothed woman, and ſo her fault was reputed as adultery, at leaſt by the diſcipline of Jacob, and his ſons. Now becauſe Judah calls for her out to be burnt, it is probable either that he took her as one of his family in relation to his ſon (though dwelling for the preſent in her fathers houſe) and that ſo he had authority to judg her as he thought meet; or that there was ſome, either Law or practice, among the Canaanites, to puniſh adultery with death, and that might ſometimes be with fire; for ſome Heathens have had that ſin in ſuch deteſtation, as to inflict that penalty for that fault. See Jer. 19.22,23. Or if there were no ſet law or cuſtom for ſuch ſeverity againſt that ſin, it may be ſuch as were of credit and account in that place, as Judah was, might propound and perſwade to ſuch a puniſhment; howſoever Judah (in paſſion and diſdain, to have his family ſo diſgraced, and with a deſire to rid Thamar out of the way, becauſe he was unwilling to match her with Shelah) might in his heat and hate, make ſuch a motion upon the pregnant proof of her conviction. But herein Judah is himſelf convicted of many faults: Firſt, of his unjuſt dealing with Thamar, as the widow of his two dead ſons. Secondly, his unchaſte medling with her in that habit of an harlot. Thirdly, his raſh and cruel ſentence againſt her, before he had heard what ſhe could ſay for her ſelf, notwithſtanding ſhe was with child, which was in effect, to ſlay the innocent with the wicked; for what fault could be laid to the charge of the child yet unborn, that it ſhould be burnt before it came to light? the light of nature hath taught men to abhor ſuch cruel executions, unjuſt as well as unmerciful; God reſolves againſt it, Ezek. 18. & Deut. 24.16. And with all this ſeverity towards Thamar, there is joyned much partiality to himſelf, who if he had not been too indulgent to himſelf, would not have been ſo ſeverely bent, as to deſire ſhe might be burnt. See on ver. 18. and 2 Sam. 12. 5,7.

V.25. When ſhe was brought forth] What ever authority Judah had, his words prevailed ſo far with thoſe to whom he ſpake, that ſhe was brought forth as a capital Offender, but ſhe eſcaped death, by ſtopping the mouth of her accuſer.

V.26. Judah acknowledged them] He might no doubt have made excuſes againſt her accuſation upon ſuch arguments; and if he had not denyed the things to be his, he might have pretended that they came unto her hands ſome honeſter way, then by an unchaſte contract with her by the high-way; but now the conſciouſneſs of his own heart, and the force of truth, extorts a confeſſion from him, that theſe things were his, and that they were aſſured evidences of his offence.

She hath been more righteous then I] That is, ſhe ought rather to accuſe me, then I her; he doth not only confeſſe, but with words of aggravation againſt himſelfe, She is more righteous then I; If we compare their faults, in ſome reſpects he was more faulty, and ſhe in ſome others; he, in that he failed to perform what he had promiſed, not as matter of courteſie, but of right, and whereby her chaſtity might have been preſerved; and in that he both perſwaded her to the ſin, and covenanted to pay her for it; for though ſhe came forth with an intent to tempt, and to be tempted, if he had not ſolicited the buſineſs, ſhe would not have offered to perſwade him unto it, and in this ſhe was more righteous then he, becauſe he in his familiarity with her, cared for nothing but his carnal pleaſure; ſhe minded more the propagation of mankind. Laſtly, he intended to put her to a painful and ſhameful death without any compaſſion to the innocent within her, ſhe had no ſuch dangerous deſire or deſign upon him. But in this he was more righteous then ſhe; for ſhe knew that ſhe lay with her husbands father, he knew not that he lay with his ſons wife; but his free confeſſion makes him more capable of pardon in reſpect of God, and her in reſpect of men; for the cauſe was like to fall, when the proſecutor was changed from charging of her, to accuſation of himſelf, wherein he further teſtified the truth of his repentance.

he knew her again no more] This is the trueſt ſign of the ſincerity of his confeſſion, when he forbears the ſin, and doth ſo no more; many confeſſe a fault, and ſoon fall to it again; but the true contrition is, when a man takes ſuch offence at his own offending, that with an upright heart he can ſay, as in the Book of Job, I will not offend any more. That which I ſee not, teach thou me; if I have done iniquity, I wil do no more, Job 34.31,32.

V.27. Twins were] Which a skilful Midwife when the mother was in labor might perceive.

V.28. put out his hand] The birth was very painful and perilous by the ſtrife of the twins; as Chap. 25.26. and by that God would chaſtiſe Thamar for her offence; but though ſhe had all the pain, yet Judah was her partner, as in the ſin, ſo in the ſhame (as wel as in the ſin) which was double, for two baſe begotten children would do them twice as much diſgrace as one alone.

V.29. And ſhe ſaid] That is, the Midwife ſpeaking in ſome paſſion, as fearing leſt the manner of the birth would be perilous to the mother, or children, or to both.

this breach be upon thee] That is, imputed to thee. So Sarah when ſhe chargeth Abraham with the contumacy of the handmaid, ſaith, My wrong be upon thee, Gen. 16.5. Or, this breach be upon thee; that is, the remembrance of it ſhall be ſet upon thy name, thou ſhalt be called Pharez, that is, a breach, becauſe thou haſt put forth an hand as thy brother did, but haſt broke through all impediments, and made him draw back his hand again to give thee precedence, that thou maiſt be the firſt-born; and accordingly is Pharez ſet before his brother Zarah in the Genealogy, Numb. 26.20. 1 Chron. 2.4,5. and brought in by the Evangeliſts, Matth. 1.3. Luk. 3.33. as a progenitor of Chriſt. In the birth of theſe two brothers, we may note the difference in the new birth, which ſhould be whole and intire, as that of Pharez, not like that of Zarah, who was born but in part with one hand thruſt out and preſently drawn back again; ſuch is their regeneration or new birth, who are religious but in part, and ſoon depart from the profeſſion they have begun; that birth, though it may make ſome ſhew for a time, as Zarahs hand tied about with a ſcarlet thred, will not be ſufficient for ſalvation, no more then one thred is enough to make a whole ſute to cover the nakedneſſe of a ſinner. Divers Divines of ancient and late time, apply theſe two brethren to the different ſtate of the Jewiſh and Chriſtian Church, underſtanding by Zarah who put forth the hand, the Church of the Jewes, appearing with juſtification by works, which are attributed to the hand, and drawing back by unbelief and obſtinate rebellion, Rom. 10.

laſt; and by Pharez the Church of the Gentiles coming after the other, yet being a more perfect birth, getting the primogeniture or birth-right from him; and then by Zarahs coming forth wholly after him, the new birth of the Jewes, called to the profeſſion of the faith of Chriſt in the Evangelical Church.

V.30. Called Zarah] From a word ſignifying to ariſe as the Sun doth, or to appear, becauſe he appeared and in part came forth firſt, as the Midwife ſaid, ver. 29.

CHAP. XXXIX

Verſe 1. AN*d Joſeph*] Moſes returneth againe to the ſtory of Joſeph (whence he made ſome digreſſion concerning Judah and Thamar) and goeth on with it to the end of the whole Book.

and Potiphar, &c.] See on Chap. 37. 24, 36. with the Annotations upon them.

V.2. A proſperous man] The favour of God is the fountain of all proſperity, and therefore though God many times uſe ſecondary means, as a mans own diligence, and others benevolence, to make him proſper, we muſt direct our prayers only to God, that we may do ſo, and our praiſes to him when it is ſo.

V.3. his Maſter ſaw] By the effects; for though he knew not the true God, he might know that ſome divine power ruling over mens affaires, gave good ſucceſſe to what Joſeph did, and dealt in. See annot. on Chap. 30. 27.

V.4. Found grace in his ſight] Though he were hated of his brethren, he was favoured by a ſtranger; there was another effect of Gods favour, and therefore to be ſought for at Gods hand, as Neh. 2. 4, 5.

Overſeer] For this office was requiſite ſome acquaintance with the Egyptian Tongue, to the learning whereof no doubt he had addicted himſelf; and he was very capable of that or any other skil, elſe he could not ſo ſoon have been ſufficient for ſuch Offices as were put upon him; it is like at firſt he ſpake it imperfectly, but uſe in one ſo ingenious would advance a pace to proficiency. Here we ſee an inſtance of the divine providence, for Joſeph was ſold to be a ſervant, a ſlave, but God prefers him from a ſtate of contempt to a place of Authority; his diligence and faithfulneſs made him well accepted of his Maſter, according to that of Solomon, He that waiteth on his Maſter ſhal be honoured, Prov. 27. 18. Thus the prediction of his dream begins to work, which by degrees (though with ſome interruptions) proceeded to an higher pre-eminence of honour and power.

all that he had, he put] Becauſe God proſpered him, Potiphar thus truſted him, ſo he made Religion to ſerve his profit.

V.5. for Joſephs ſake] The wicked do fooliſhly in ſetting themſelves againſt the godly, whom if they would reſpect as they ought, they might enjoy as affectionate and faithful friends, and truſty ſervants, on whoſe fidelity they might relye with much eaſe and advantage to themſelvs. See on ver. 3, 23.

V.6. Ought he had ſave the bread] The words are taken to be a proverbial ſpeech, whereof the meaning is, that he was aſſured that all things ſhould proſper well, therefore he did eat and drink and took no care: By Bread is meant in the phraſe of Scripture, that which is neceſſary for a mans ſuſtenance, eſpecially his dyet; of that Potiphar took more notice, becauſe he would pleaſe his palate: or it may be Joſeph had leſſe to do in that then in other matters, becauſe there was ſomething peculiar in the dyet of the Egyptians, whence it was, that the Egyptians might not eat bread with the Hebrews: for that was an abomination to the Egyptians, Gen. 43. 32.

a goodly perſon, and well favoured] Sometimes God is pleaſed to joyn inward and outward grace in the ſame perſon; that beauty may make grace more acceptable with carnal people, and grace may make beauty more ſafe from their ſolicitations and from ſelf-conceit. See 1 Sam. 16. 12.

V.7. After theſe things] After Joſeph had ſerved Potiphar firſt as a ſervant, then as a more eſpecial attendant on his perſon; laſtly, as a chief Officer in his houſe, which might take up about nine or ten yeers time.

caſt her eyes] Beauty is a dangerous object to a wanton eye, and a wicked heart; in which reſpect blemiſhes and blindneſs may be born with more patience, ſince by the one we are not ſo apt to give, by the other not ſo apt to take occaſion of ſin.

Lye with me] In theſe words is declared the ſum whereto all her flatteries did tend; it is like her ſolicitations to luſt (at leaſt at the firſt) were not in the plain expreſſion here ſet down; but her favourable and familiar uſage of him, liker a friend then a miſtreſs (though in the language of our time, a Miſtreſs is but a the familiar) by wanton glances, and ſometimes by words of immodeſt intimation, which in effect ſorted to no other meaning then theſe words expreſſe.

V.9. How then can I] The grace of God is a powerful reſtraint againſt the provocation of ſin; ſo that the godly cannot conſent unto it, 1 Joh. 3. 9. whereas the wicked on the contrary cannot ceaſe from it, 2 Pet. 2. 14.

do this great wickedneſſe] Adultery is a great wickedneſſe: firſt, becauſe it is a theft of that which is moſt precious and ſhould be moſt peculiar to the owner, as in this verſe is ſhewed; and therefore the ſuſpition or jealouſie of injury in it, raiſeth the rage of a man to ſuch an height, that it will not be allayed without revenge, Prov. 6. 34, 35. And it ſtealeth ſometimes an heir into a mans eſtate, or at leaſt thruſteth in for a portion among the legitimate children a ſtranger that hath no right to be a ſharer with them. Secondly, Marriage being not made without the bond of loyalty, the breach of that bond is treachery. Thirdly, in a religious and godly perſon it is ſacriledge, for the body of ſuch a one is the Temple of the Holy Ghoſt, 1 Cor. 6. 19. and to turn the temple of God to the uſe of carnal pollution is a profane Sacriledge. Fourthly, beſides all this, Joſeph, if he ſhould yeeld to his laſcivious Miſtreſs, ſhould ſhew himſelf not only ungracious towards God, but ungrateful unto a very kind and reſpective maſter: not without great cauſe then he called Adultery a great wickedneſſe.

and ſin againſt God] The fear of God preſerved him againſt her continual temptations. See annot. on Chap. 20. 6, 11. and 42. 18. Neh. 5. 15.

V.10. Day by day] Heb. Day, day; that is, daily: the word doubled imports continuance of time without intermiſſion; ſo alſo Exod. 16. 5. Or omiſſion, Lev. 6. 12 Deut. 14. 22 Or progreſs in place without diverſion or digreſſion, Deut. 2. 27. We ſee here how ſin abounded in the tempter, and in the tempted how grace abounded much more, with whom ſuch unceſſant ſolicitations could not prevaile; which ſhould be remembred as a patern of perſeverance in the reſiſtance of ſin.

or to be with her] Occaſions of evil, 1 Tim. 5. 14. yea and the appearances of it alſo, 1 Theſ. 5. 21. are to be avoided, as well as the evil it ſelf; The ſociety then of the wicked is to be ſhunned, Pro. 1. 15. eſpecially of ſuch as are tempters to ſin, Prov. 5. 8.

V.11. His buſineſſe] That is, the buſineſſe that belonged to his Office, and that being private (for privacy afforded her a fit opportunity to tempt) it is like it was ordering the accounts and reckonings of his charge.

none of the men of the houſe there within] It is like Potiphar was abroad at ſome feaſt, or ſome publick occaſion, and had moſt of his ſervants with him; his wife making her ſelf an occaſion to ſtay at home with a few of her family, whereof Joſeph was one.

V. 12. Caught him by his garment] How unruly a thing is lawleſſe luſt, which breaks through the bonds and bounds both of conſcience and of modeſty, putting a woman (who by her ſexe ſhould be ſhamefaſt, and by her calling (as being the wife of a Governor, a Miſtreſs) grave) into an impudent offer to commit rape upon a man!

he left his garment] He ſtays not to parley with her, no not ſo much as to plead with her againſt her lewd motion, having done that before, becauſe the temptation was come to ſuch an height, that it was more ſafe to flye from it, then to fight with it: much leſſe would he, though ſtrong enough (being an able young man) ſtrive with her to recover his garment again, for he liked it the worſe for her ſake, and feared he might be tainted with the touch of her.

V.14. She called to the men] She went out and made a noiſe to thoſe few that were in or about the houſe. See ver. 11. Where we ſee the difference betwixt meer luſt and true love: luſt oft times turns to hate, whether unſatisfied, as here; or ſatisfied, as 2 Sam. 13. 15. whereas true love is conſtant, and would not make a quarrel for ſuch repulſes of ſin, but would rather take them for occaſion of thanks, as David did when he was kept by Abigail from his bloody purpoſe againſt Nabal, 1 Sam. 25.

to mock] That is, ſo to abuſe one, that others may mock and contemne him; though ordinarily to mock, is to delude and diſappoint ones expectation; ſo Balaam chargeth his aſſe with mocking him, Num. 22. 29.

us] To make Joſeph the more maligned, ſhe intitles the offence in general termes, as if it were a national wrong of an Hebrew againſt the Egyptians, who were forward enough to take offence under that title. See Gen. 43. 32.

he came in unto me to lye with] The manner of the wicked is to charge that upon the innocent, whereof themſelves are moſt guilty; the blaſphemous Jewes charge Chriſt with blaſphemy, Matth. 26. 65. And the heretical Church of Antichriſt cals the moſt Orthodox Chriſtians by the name of Hereticks; and many account the beſt Chriſtians troublers of the State, as Ahab did, 1 King. 18. 17. when not they, but themſelves are thoſe that trouble it.

V.17. which thou haſt brought] She layeth a fault upon him, that, to quit himſelf to her, he may lay more rigour upon Joſeph.

V.20 Into the priſon] It was ſtrange that Potiphar being a Military man, maſter of the ſlaughter men, as is noted on Chap. 37. 36. and ſo incenſed againſt Joſeph for a crime ſo capital, brake not out into ſome mortal violence; this muſt be imputed to the power of Gods providence, who can bridle mens corruptions, or manacle their hands, as pleaſeth himſelf; ſo he with-held Abimelech from Sarah, Chap. 20. 6. and David from Nabal and his houſhold, 1 Sam. 25. 32, 33. he ſhut the Lions mouths, Dan. 6. 22. ſet bounds to the ſwelling waves, Job 26. 10. and ſuſpended the operations of the fire, that though it blazed, it could not burn, Dan 3. 21, 22, &c. under whoſe favour and power is ſufficient ſecurity againſt the anger and terror of the whole world.

In the priſon] And in the Dungeon alſo, Chap. 40. 15. his evil intreatment there may be gathered from Pſal. 105. 18.

V.21. But the Lord was with Joſeph] He ſuffered not only as an evil doer, though he were none, but for an evil doer; for if the truth had been known, the wife of Potiphar had been fitter to be put in priſon then he; but howſoever he were miſdeemed among the Egyptians, God knew his innocency, and was with him in priſon, as well as in the houſe of his Maſter. How good is it to have God for our friend, who will be with thoſe he loves, as well in their affliction, as in their proſperity, and will ſhew them light in the place of darkneſs, Pſal.112.4. though it be the darkneſs of a priſon?

gave him favour] See on ver.4. Exod.3.21. & 11.3. & 12.36. Pſal. 106.46. Prov.16.7. Dan.1.9.

V.22. He was the doer of it] Not that he was as a common drudge to do every ones work; but that having the rule of the whole priſon, all things were done either by him, or his command or direction.

V.23. Looked not to any thing] See on ver.6.

the Lord made it to proſper] Pſal.1. ver.3. See Annot. on ver. 2. & 3. & 5.

CHAP. XL.

Verſ.3. HE put them in ward] In Joſeph's caſe (once a great Favourite in the houſe of Potiphar, and afterwards with wrath and reproach turned out of his houſe, and committed to priſon) we may obſerve the fickleneſs of humane favour; and in theſe two Court Officers, the ſlippery condition of Courtiers, who either by their own errors, or others malice, or the mutability of the minds of their great Maſters, ſuffer many times a lamentable change of their eſtates; which yet is often not lamented, becauſe their former elevation (haply abuſed by inſolency of carriage) hath made them obſerved with an envious as well as with a curious eye.

V.4. The Captain of the guard] This may well be thought to be the ſame with Potiphar who before committed Joſeph to priſon; for by this time, (the Lord being with him and ſhewing him mercy, Chap.39.21) his innocency might be made known unto him by means of the keeper of the priſon, to whom it is like he told the true ſtory of the falſe and foul dealing of his Miſtreſſe towards his Maſter and himſelf, though for his own credit ſake he might deſire to bury that unhoneſt buſineſs in perpetual ſilence.

V.5. And they dreamed] See Annot. on Chap.20.23.

according to the interpretation] (Chap.41.11) The interpretation ſhould be according to the dream, not the dream according to the interpretation; The meaning is, that each had his dream congruous to his condition, which was not idle, but ſuch as did preſage ſomewhat to come to paſſe, requiring correſpondent interpretation, and it was interpreted accordingly, ver.12, 18.

V.8 We have dreamed a dream] Not both one dream, but each of them a dream; as ver. 5.

there is no interpreter of it] That is, for us to conſult with, becauſe being ſhut up in priſon, we cannot have recourſe to the Magicians of Egypt, with whom in ſuch matters we ſhould conſult. See Gen. 41.8. & Dan.4.7.

Do not interpretations belong to God] You are deceived, if you expect the interpretation of your dream from ſuch Wiſards, the true interpretation of them belongeth to God, and to thoſe to whom he is pleaſed to reveal them; ſo Chap.41.16.

tell me them] By this he taketh not upon himſelf to be God, for chap. 41.16. he ſaith, it is not in him to give anſwer to ſuch doubts, as of himſelf, but addreſſing himſelf unto God, and receiving anſwer from him, he makes no doubt but he ſhall be able to tell them both what is meant by their dreams. See Dan.4.8. & Chap 5.12.

V.12. Are three dayes] That is, ſignifie three dayes; ſo it is uſually in the Scripture, where there is no Hebrew word to anſwer our Engliſh word, ſignifie.

V.13. within three dayes] That is, on the third day, ver.20. which interpretation Joſeph had not by conjecture from the three branches, ver. 10. (for branches have no reference unto dayes, but the three branches might have been as many weeks, or months, or yeers) but by divine revelation.

lift up thy head] This phraſe is ſometimes taken for advancing, as Jer.52.31. and ſometimes for reckoning, numbring, or ſumming up to an head; ſo it is uſed, Exod.30.12. Num. 1. 2. and Chap. 26. 2. In both theſe ſenſes it may be taken in this place; for the Butler was to be lifted up againe to the Office from whence he was depoſed, and to be reckoned and accounted in the number of Court Officers as before.

V.14 Think on me] Though Joſeph could tell when the Butler ſhould be releaſed, and reſtored to his Office, it ſeems he knew not the time of his own deliverance, as the man of God that came out of Judah, who propheſied againſt the Altar ſet up by Jeroboam, knew not the calamity which was to come upon himſelf, 1 King.13. See on Chap.37 9 & 46.27.

make mention of me] He refuſed not the means to be delivered which he thought God had appointed; we may truſt in Gods providence, yet uſe what means is in our power to bring his purpoſe to paſſe; without which though he can work what he will, yet it being his revealed will to us, that we ſhall uſe the means, we muſt not divide them from the end. See on Chap.7.1.

bring me out of this houſe] Servitude or reſtraint, if God put it upon us muſt be patiently born; yet liberty is rather to be deſired, if it may be had, 1 Cor.7.21.

V.15. I was ſtollen] There was a ſtealing of men forbidden upon pain of death, Exod 21.16. and men were ſtollen to be ſold, as there it is ſaid; now Joſeph by the injuſtice of his brethren, was ſtollen from their father, or, (which is all one) conveyed away from him without his knowledge, and ſold to the Iſhmaelites, Gen. 37.28. &c.

out of the land of the Hebrews] That is, the Land of Canaan, ſo called becauſe the poſterity of Abraham the Hebrew, Gen.14.13. were the beſt of thoſe that dwelled in it; and for that by eſpecial grant from God they were the true Lords and Owners of it.

I have done nothing] Innocency is no protection againſt the power of malice; yet may it well be pleaded againſt the wicked, that thereby God may have the glory of the patient ſuffering of his people, and the wicked the ſhame of their unjuſt dealing with them. See Joh.10.32. Act. 24.12, 13.

V. 16. white baskets] The word Chor rendred here white, is a ſubſtantive, though the ſenſe be adjective; and it ſignifieth whiteneſſe, and ſo it is referred to the baskets made of white pilled twigs, or to the white bread in the baskets: and it ſignifieth alſo an hole, for ſuch baskets might be wrought with holes, and the more looſely twigged to let in the air; but of this we need not be very curiouſly inquiſitive, ſince they were but baskets in a dream, which do not require a real determination to paſs upon them.

V. 17. in the uppermoſt] there was of all manner of baked meats, for Pharaoh; ſo far goeth the Text, no further; but ſome ſay, that in the middlemoſt and lowermoſt, there was bread and nothing elſe.

V. 19. lift up thine head] The ſame phraſe that was uſed, ver.13. and afterward, ver.20. but in a contrary ſenſe, as the words following [from off thee] ſhew, whereby may be meant that his head ſhould firſt be ſtricken off, and lifted up as the head of a traytor, and afterward his body hanged on a tree.

the birds ſhall eat] The Gentiles, it ſeems, did not cut thoſe down they hanged up, (as did the Jewes, according to the Law ordained by God, Deut.21.22, 23.) the ſame day they were executed; and herein Joſeph doth freely and faithfully forewarn the Baker of his danger, that he may prepare himſelfe the better to undergo it: It were to be wiſhed, that Phyſicians, and thoſe that attend on ſick folk, would, if they ſee any ſignes, or preſages of death, take occaſion to warn them to make ready for another world; the neglect of this duty hath endangered many a ſoul, while the Phyſicain loath to affright his Patient, leſt it ſhould hinder the operation of his Phyſick, and the friends of the ſick unwilling to ſpeak an uncomfortable word, have ſuffered them to depart without due preparation for ſo great a change; and if they be unwilling to hear of death, they muſt hear of it for all that, that they may be made willing, for none come to heaven againſt their will.

V. 20. birth day] It is a practice of great antiquity, and of long continuance (for it is the practice of many people to this day) annually to celebrate the remembrance of their birth-day in particular, as God did the worlds birth-day in general by a ſolemn and weekly Sabbath; whereof though we find but two examples in the Scripture, and thoſe not of good men, viz. Pharaoh in this place, and Herod, Mat.14.6 And two examples of good men who curſed the day of their birth, Job, Job 3. 1. & Jeremiah, Jer. 20.14. yet the example of Abraham making a Feaſt at the weaning of Iſaac, comes ſomewhat neer it; for at the birth of the child the mother was too weak, (and ſometimes the childs birth is the mothers death, as Benjamins was to his mother Rachel, Gen.35.18.) to bear a part in ſuch a ſolemnity; at the circumciſion the child was in too much pain for an occaſion of her rejoycing; and the firſt fit opportunity was, when the child giving over milk, was grown up in ſtrength to feed on ſtronger meet: See on Chap.21.8. and if a birth-day be remembred with thankſgiving to God, as the Lord of life and death, the author of health and ſtrength, the giver of children, Pſal.127.3. and done without ſuperſtition, or vanity, or exceſſe, or abuſe of Gods creatures, learned and godly Divines give allowance to it; who teach alſo that it might be lawful for Pharaoh and Herod to keep their birth-day, and yet deny the Popiſh celebration of the Feſtivities of Peter, and Paul, and other holy men or women; for it is one thing for one to keep a memorial of his own, or anothers birth day, while he is alive, another to make a perpetual practice of it, when he is dead; one thing to do it onely by a way of thankſgiving to God, and for his honour onely; another to performe Idolatrous devotion to the Saints, as the Papiſts do.

V. 22. he hanged the chief baker] His birth-day celebrated with mirth and magnificence, gave him occaſion to take notice of his chief Officers, and to retain, change or diſcharge, and deal with them as he ſaw cauſe; ſo came the Butlers and Bakers faults to his conſideration, and cenſure, and in both Joſeph was approved a true Prophet.

V. 23. but forgat him] The ungratefulneſſe for favour received, and unmindfulneſſe of men in miſery, is a grievous ſin; this was the Bakers fault towards Joſeph, and that fault is complained of by the prophet Amos, Chap.6.6.

CHAP. XLI

Verſ.1. AT the end of two full years] That is, two years after the Butlers return from priſon, and reſtitution to his place, which might be the third yeare of Joſeph's impriſonment; for he had, before the Butlers and Bakers commitment, given ſome good evidence of his vertue and fidelity, which cauſed the Keeper to give him ſo much truſt,

as to commit them to his cuſtody.

dreamed] This dream was not ſo much for Pharaoh, as to be a meanes to deliver Joſeph, and to provide for Gods Church.

behold he ſtood] That is, he dreamed that he ſtood.

by the river] That is, the river Nilus, which watereth the plains of Egypt,and ſo makes them fruitful without rain.

V.2. Out of the River] That is, Nilus, whoſe inundation, if it be deep, promiſeth plenty ; if ſhallow, threatneth famine ; whereof ſee in what degre of both the obſervation of Plinie, Annot.on verſ.34. of this Chapter. Thence may both the fat kine ſignifying fruitful years, and the lean,ſignifying years of famine,be fitly ſaid to come out of Nilus;and ſince the chief ſubſtance for mans ſuſtenance,conſiſts in kine and corne, the years both of plenty and of famine,are ſutably ſet forth in both kinds.

V.6. the Eaſt wind] Is a very ſtrong and drying wind ; by that the waters of the red Sea were divided, Exod. 14.21. and by it tempeſts are raiſed, Job 27 21. Ezek. 27.26. and ſhips ruined, Pſal.48.7. fruits dryed up or blaſted, Ezek. 19. 12. and by that, together with the heat of the Sun, was Jonah made faint, Jon.4 8. And this wind is ſo much the worſe for Egypt, as it cometh with more force and vehemence from the deſert of Arabia.

his ſpirit was troubled] (Dan.2.verſ.1,3.) How weak is the ſpirit of Kings ! and how ſtrong and powerful is the King of Kings, who in their ſleep can make trouble ready for them againſt they be awake, and can make waking miſery of a repreſentation in a dream ! and more then that, even in dreams he can terrifie them, and make their time of repoſe and reſt, a time of tribulation : See Chap.40.6. & Matth 27 19. So it was with Job, (and it may be as ill with any whatſoever) When I ſay, my bed ſhall comfort me, my couch ſhall eaſe my complaint then (ſaith he) thou ſcareſt me with dreams, and terrifieſt me through viſions, Job 7.17. There is good cauſe then to cloſe up the day with ſupplication to God, that the words of Solomon may be made good unto us, when thou lyeſt down thou ſhalt not be afraid, yea, thou ſhalt lye down and thy ſleep ſhall be ſweet, Prov. 3.24. and when day returns (after a comfortable and quiet night) to make that mercy a part of our mornings praiſe and thankſgiving to God, by whoſe onely favour we have enjoyed it.

Magicians] They are called alſo wiſemen,Exod.7.11. Soothſayers,Dan. 5.7. Sorcerers, Aſtrologers, Dan.2.2. that is, ſuch as profeſſed a curious art of telling ſecrets, and of foretelling future things, which they did by obſervation of the Stars, and other ſuperſtitious wayes, wherein concurred the ſuggeſtion of Satan, either revealing the ſecret ſought after, or craftily concealing his ignorance, by giving anſwer in ambiguous, and doubtful terms ; yet ſo often did he diſcover ſecret matters by ſuch inſtruments, that it was believed by the greateſt Kings, they could tel almoſt any thing : as when Nebuchadnezzar, had dreamed, and forgotten his dream, he called the Magicians, and Sorcerers, and Aſtrologers, and Chaldeans, who were much exerciſed in ſuch curious arts, and threatned them, that if they would not reveal his Dream, both what it was, and what it meant, he would cut them in pieces, and make their houſes become a dunghill, Dan. 2. verſ 2,5. And though they would not take upon them to tell what was his dream, they undertook if he would tell it to interpret it, verſ. 7 a manifeſt evidence of the ſtrong illuſions of Satan, whence Atheiſts may be convicted ; for if there be a divel, and divelliſh divination, there muſt needs be a God, and Divine revelation ; and happy is the world by the coming of Chriſt, as in many other reſpects, ſo in this for one, that the Divel and his Chaplains have not had that power to deceive, and miſlead the world, as they had before his incarnation.

none that could interpret] The wiſeſt of the world underſtood not Gods ſecrets ; but to his ſervants they are revealeed ; See Chap.18.17. Pſal.25.14. The Magicians at this time ſeem to have been aſtoniſhed, or ſtupified, that they had nothing to ſay by way of probable conjecture, though the dreams afforded them ground, and ſcope enough for ſuch a purpoſe ; ſurely this ſilence of theirs was of God, as was Joſephs ſpeech, according to that of the Prophet Iſaiah, Surely the Princes of Zoan are fools, the counſel of the wiſe counſellours of Pharaoh is become brutiſh, Iſaiah. 19. 11.

V. 9. I do remember my faults] God gives the Butler occaſion to call Joſeph to mind, whom he had forgotten till now, at leaſt hee had not made good his promiſe to remember him to Pharaoh ; he beginneth with a confeſſion of his fault, but ſo, as meaning rather to pleaſe Pharaoh, then to perform his promiſe made unto Joſeph, of whoſe condition he had no mind to think or ſpeak, becauſe he had endured it as an agrievance : and was loath to remember Joſephs ſtate to the King, leſt the remembrance of his own fault (if he were guilty) ſhould be renewed, or the Kings wrong (if he were innocent) ; yet this forgetfulneſs of his was ſerviceable to the divine providence, for thereby Joſephs knowledg of interpretation of dreams, was reſerved to the beſt occaſion to make uſe of it,to the fitteſt ſeaſon, when the Magicians conſulted with (about Pharaohs dreams) could not ſay any thing for the interpretation thereof.

V. 11. we dreamed a dream]See Annot. on Chap 40.8.

according to the interpretation] Heb. according to the ſolution of his dream. See on Chap.40.verſ. 5.

V. 13. me he reſtored] If we refer the words to the perſon laſt ſpoken of, the ſenſe is,that Joſeph by his interpretation declared, I ſhould be reſtored ; or Pharaoh reſtored, &c.

V. 14. called Joſeph] The wicked ſeek to the Prophets of God in their neceſſity, whom, in their proſperity, they abhor : but thus God doth promote his own purpoſe by wicked men, though they think not of it : all this was to make Joſephs humiliation a ladder of promotion, to make his enemies his friends, as his brethren were his enemies; and by means of dreams, to enlarge and advance him, who by occaſion of his dreams was ſold for a ſlave, and afterwards thruſt down into the dungeon.

out of the dungeon] The word is taken uſually for the loweſt place of the priſon, but Joſeph at this time was not there ; (being ruler over the priſoners) or there, not as a priſoner himſelf, but as overſeeing the reſt in that place ; it may (by a Synecdoche of the part for the whole) be taken for the priſon it ſelfe, as many interpreters render the word in this place.

he ſhaved himſelfe and changed his raiment] Such as were in a condition of great diſtreſs, did uſually neglect the ornament of the hair, and ſuffered it to grow wild, without cutting or trimming ; but their ſtate being changed, eſpecially when they were to appear in the preſence of Kings or very great perſons, they put themſelves into a forme of decency, both for their hair and habit of attire ; for true piety and civil decency well ſuit together. It is therefore a groſſe errour of ſome Popiſh Monks, who think they cannot ſeem holy enough, unleſſe they ſhew themſelves ſlovens in their perſons and apparel.See Eſter.2.12.

V. 16. It is not in me] Joſeph aſſumeth not unto himſelfe ſo much wiſdom, but aſcribeth it to God, as though he would ſay, If I interpret the Dream it cometh of God, and not of me. So Dan 2.28.

an anſwer of peace] By peace is meant all manner of welfare, and ſo the words are an apprecation of all proſperity to Pharaoh ; or, by an anſwer of peace we may underſtand,ſuch an anſwer as may quiet his troubled mind concerning his Dream.

V. 17 Pharaoh ſaid unto Joſeph] Though Pharaoh were a great King, Joſeph but young, by condition, a Priſoner, by Nation, an Hebrew, (and ſo an abomination to the Egyptians) yet he diſdaineth not to propound his Dream unto him, and to deſire a reſolution from him, touching the interpretation thereof ; None ſhould think himſelfe too great, or too wiſe to learn of any one who can teach him any thing. See Eccl.9.15.

V. 21. ſtill ill favoured] What is ſhewed here in a dream, is many times true in ſtory ; when thoſe that have good things have not Gods bleſſing in their uſe, it is with them as though they had them not ; and though they ſnatch on the right hand, and greedily devour on the left, they are not ſatisfied, Iſa.9. 20. it is ſo with ſome wicked ones in the dayes of plenty, who are poor, not ſo much by their own portion, as by their unmeaſureable deſires, which admit of neither brim nor bottome ; whereas it is ſaid of the godly, that in the days of famine they ſhall be ſatisfied, Pſal.37.19.

V. 25. The dream is one]In ſignification ; that is,both the dreams of Pharaoh ſignifie the ſame things.

V. 26. ſeven good kine are] That is, ſignifie, ſo verſ. 27. A figurative ſpeech, as when it is ſaid (in the Sacrament) of the bread, This is my body, and of the wine, This is my blood, ſo the figure of a Calfe is called the Calf,Exod.32.19,20.

V. 30. ſhall be forgotten] Becauſe the grievouſneſſe of the famine ſhall fill their hearts and minds with matter of complaint for the preſent miſery, ſo that by the importunity of their famiſhing deſires they ſhall have no liſt, nor leiſure to look back to what they have had, but forward to what they may get to ſupply their neceſſity.

V. 31. ſhall not be known] According to the meaning of the precedent verſ. See the Annot. upon it.

V. 32. dream was doubled] Repetitions of things in the Scripture have their uſe, and the uſe is to make the deeper impreſſion upon the mind, and to import aſſurance,and expedition in the act ; ſo here.

V. 33. let Pharaoh look out a man] Comminations of miſery do not exclude mans careful endeavours, either to avoyd, or qualifie it, that it may be more tolerable.

V. 34. a fifth part] Why not rather the half, ſince the years of plenty and of famine were even. Anſw. A fifth part might ſuffice, firſt, becauſe it was fit that in the dear yeares, men ſhould be more frugal in their diet, and content with leſſe. Secondly, there was ſomewhat in ſtock of former years, before the dreams of Pharaoh, which foretold the Famine. Thirdly, though Nilus did not overflow the fields in the dear years, as at other times, and therefore tillage was laid down, Chap.45.6. yet this was not ſo univerſal, but that neer the banks of it, ſomewhat might be ſowed and returned with increaſe. At other times the meaſure of increaſe in the Land of Egypt was commonly according to the proportion of Nilus over-flowing, if it overflowed but twelve cubits deep, it was like to be a famine ; if thirteen, a ſcarcity , if fourteen, a competency ; if fifteen, a ſecurity ; if ſixteen, a plenty : See Plin. Nat. Hiſt. lib.5. cap.9. Fourthly, as Pharaoh was according to Joſephs advice to buy up ſuch a proportion of corn; and lay it up in ſtore under the cuſtody of officers in every city, ſo it is like (by his example) that other great men would be buyers and ſtorers to the ſame purpoſe, according as in Joſephs Judgment would be convenient.

V. 36. for ſtore] He foretells not onely the miſery to come, but the means ſo to mitigate it, that it may be born, by laying up proviſion againſt it come.

V. 38. in whom the Spirit of God is] (Dan.5.11.) The godly are moſt worthy of offices of honour ; it is the ſame Spirit which maketh holy, that maketh wiſe, 1 Cor.12.4,&c. and therefore for the Spirits ſake holineſſe ſhould be as highly accompted of as knowledge, though of propheſie ; yea and more, for with true prophetick knowledge men may go to hell, Mat.7.22.but none that is truely holy ſhall come thither.

V. 39. none ſo diſcreet,&c.] Wiſdome, and holineſſe are meet qualifications

lification for the ſame perſon; which diſcovereth double folly of many, the one of thoſe who think they ſhall not ſeem wiſe enough, unleſs they be ſometimes profane; the other of ſuch as think they cannot but be wiſe enough, if they be zealous, though they be not diſcreet; ſo on both ſides, there is made a divorce betwixt thoſe qualifications which Chriſt hath married together, Mat.10.16.

V. 40. Thou ſhalt be] Men ſhould be preferred according to their parts, and none put into any office who hath not gifts and endowments to make him able to diſcharge it. See Num. 11.17. Act.6.3.

be ruled] Or, armed, or at thy mouth ſhall all the people kiſſe, For, ſo the words may be rendred from the Hebrew Text; the ſenſe comes all to one, for this laſt phraſe imports very ſubmiſſive obſervance, as kiſſing the commands that come from his lips, not only aſſenting to them, but profeſſing their aſſent with a kind of delight; and though ſometimes ſuperious did kiſſe their inferiours, yet was it many times an act of homage of the inferious to their ſuperious, as 1 Sam.10.1.Pſal.2.12. Prov. 24.26. importing a ſubmiſſion, rather of affection, then of cumpulſion; of love, then of fear.

V. 42. took off his ring] The ring was an enſigne of honour, as we find it mentioned both in holy Scripture, as Eſth.8.2. Luk.15.22. and in divers humane authours: but withall, this ring might be a ſignet of royall authority to ſeal and confirm ſuch commands, orders and decrees, as Joſeph ſhould give out for the peoples obſervance.

fine linen] (Exod.25.4.Revel.19.8,14. According to the countrey, for Egypt was famous for fine linen, and broidered work, Prov.7.16. Ezek.27.7 The word is taken alſo for ſilke, eſpecially for white ſilke, in ſuch were the noblemen arrayed, and were thereby diſtinguiſhed from vulgar perſons.

gold chaine] This likewiſe was an ornament of honour, Prov.1.9. Ezek.16.11. Dan.5. verſ.7,16,29. How lawfull it is for godly perſons to weare ſuch precious things, and with what conditions, ſee Annot. on Chap.24. verſ.22.

V. 43. the ſecond chariot] Which was for him who was next to the King, the ſecond man in the Kingdome; all the precedent honour he might have within doores, and that his dignity without might be ſuitable to this, when he went abroad, as Mordecai was mounted on the Kings horſe, Eſth.6.8. ſo Joſeph muſt ride in the Kings Chariot, but in the Throne the King reſerved to himſelf a ſettled preeminence, verſ. 40.and in the Chariot did he reſerve to himſelfe a movable preeminence, ſo that he would have the firſt place, Joſeph ſhall have the ſecond, and ſo ſhall be known to be the ſecond man in the Kingdome; which is more honour then Daniel had for his reading of the writing on the wall of Belſhazzars palace, for he was made for it, not the ſecond, but the third man in the Kingdome, Dan.5.29.

Bow the knee] The word is Abrech, which ſome expound tender father, or father of a King; for Ab is father in Hebrew, and Rech in the Syriack is ſometimes uſed for a King; from whence perhaps the Latine word Rex might have its derivation; and Joſeph ſaith of himſelfe, that God made him father of the King, Chap.45.8. Some derive the word from Ab, which is father; and Rech, which is tender, as meaning Joſeph to be a father in prudence, though young and tender in years: howſoever, it is a title that calls for reverence, and that reverence may well be bowing of the knee, in which ſenſe alſo the word is taken by many learned Divines.

V. 44. I am Pharaoh] The words may be taken by way of proteſtation, as if he had ſaid, As ſure as I am Pharaoh, &c. Of the name Pharaoh, ſee Annot. on Chap.12.15. All the Kings of Egypt were called Pharaohs almoſt 1400 years from the firſt of that name.

hand or foot] A proverbial Hyperbole, or figurative ſpeech, whereby as much authority as may be is ſignified, that leſſe then is truth may not be conceived; or it may be underſtood of the publick affairs in the government of the Kingdom, wherein nothing ſhould be done, no man ſhould uſe his hand to do any thing in the affairs of State, his foot to go on any publick meſſage or ambaſſage without Joſephs advice. By all this hath Joſeph a temporal recompence of his wrongs; for his ſervitude, he hath a ring, an enſign of liberty; for courſe rayment, ſuch as was ſuitable to a ſervile condition, he hath a ſuit of ſilk or very fine linnen; for the fetters of his feet, Pſal.105 18. he hath a chaine of gold about his neck; and for a fixed priſon, or dungeon, from whence he could not ſtirre, a moveable Chariot (at his pleaſure) to bring him abroad with honour; and for contumelious terms, and reproaches, ſuch as his lewd Miſtreſs loaded him withal, loud acclamations of honour; as Abrech, tender father of a King, or bow the knee; laſt of all, for a full accumulation of comforts, he hath as ample recompence in proportion of time, as in the kind of his uſages, for the years of his affliction were but about thirteen, the yeares of his honourable preeminence or principality fourſcore: this may chear up the hearts of the godly, though for a ſeaſon they ſuffer under the prevailing power and ſpight of the ungodly, for they may aſſure themſelves that God (if they ſuffer not as evil doers) will do them right, and make them a full amends for all their wrongs.

V. 45 Zaphnath Paaneah] Egyptian words, as the moſt of thoſe, who profeſſe eſpecial ſkill in the Oriental Tongues, take them; and ſome ſo leave them without any interpretation at all; the Vulgar Latine repeating them, addeth [in the Egyptian tongue] but thoſe words are not in the Hebrew Text: the former word Zaphnath, ſome derive of the Egyptian word Zephon, ſignifying an Idol, whoſe name is given in honour to Joſeph, as the names of Bel and Nebo, Iſay.46 1. to Belthazzar, and Nebuchadnezzar; but as ſome expound the name, according to the Egyptian tongue, it ſignifieth the Saviour of the world: becauſe Joſeph, by his ſtoring up of proviſion againſt a general famine, was a means to preſerve them from periſhing by famine. But they that reduce the former word to an Hebrew Original, render it [a revealer of ſecrets,] and that is more pertinent to this ſtory, wherein the moſt remarkable thing reported, and moſt acceptable to Pharaoh, is the interpretation of his dream of the ſeven years of plenty, and famine; and his proviſion by the former, againſt the Latter. This giving a new name, eſpecially with ſuch a ſignification, is an act of favour, with an intent of honour. See Gen.17.5.& Dan.1.7. The latter part of this Name is left by ſome learned Hebrews as inexplicable, though it be ſaid by an eminent Hebrician in his cenſure of the Vulgar Latine of the Pentateuch, that the Egyptian, Punick, Arabick, and other Eaſtern Tongues are Dialects of the Hebrew, and of neer affinity with it.

daughter of Potipherah] This is not the ſame man whom Joſeph firſt ſerved, when he came into Egypt, for there is difference betwixt the writing of the names, and the titles and offices of the men; nor is it like that in ſo ſhort a time (as that of Joſephs impriſonment) the Captain of the Kings Guard, or Provoſt Marſhal of Pharaoh, ſhould become either a Prince, or Prieſt of On; but moſt improbable that ſo good and chaſte a man as Joſeph was, would take to wife the daughter of ſuch a mother, as his wanton, and (many other wayes) wicked Miſtreſs was: the firſt Potiphar was of the City Memphis, this of On.

Prieſt] Or, Prince, Exod. 18.1. the word is taken both wayes, becauſe anciently both offices met together in one man, who was both Prince in the Family, and Prieſt in the Church; and for that (as ſome obſerve) it was the manner of Egypt, out of Philoſophers to chooſe Prieſts, and out of Prieſts, Princes: but if this Potipherah were a Prieſt, he was an idolatrous Prieſt, and then Joſeph would not for Religions ſake accept of his daughter for a wife; it might be a fitter match for him if he were rather a civil Prince, then a Prieſt; and yet being an Idolater, though not a maſter of Idolatrous Myſteries (as the prieſt was) it is queſtionable whether it were well done of him or no. In the general it is not good, nor ſafe to be unequally yoked in reſpect of religion, whether heatheniſh, or heretical, 2 Cor.6.14. ſince there want not wofull inſtances in ſome who of the ſtronger ſex, and wiſer ſort have been drawn by the weaker to ſide with the worſer part; and ſo, though with hope, and purpoſe haply to win others, have loſt themſelves; if then it were not ſome onſet of unavoidable neceſſity, or that Joſeph had not eſpecial direction from God in his marriage (as in other things he had) the act was ill in him; and if the caſe were ſuch, that he could make no better a choyce, or were diſpenſed with for it by Divine inſtinct, the example as rare, and extraordinary, is not to be drawn into a rule, nor can be lawfull where the reaſons are not alike, becauſe of the expreſſe prohibition thereof Exod.34.12.Deut.7.3,4. 2 Cor.6.14. and the great perill thereby, 1 King.11.1. Nehem.13.26. Exod.34. 15,16.

of On] A City of Egypt (called alſo Aven, Ezek. 30.17.) in circuit about an hundred and fourty furlongs, more uſually called by the Greek name, Heliopolis, (which by interpretation is of the City of the Sun) then On, or Aven. See on Jer.43.13.

V.46. Thirty yeers old] His age is mentioned, to ſhew that his great prudence proceeded rather of revelation from God, then of experience in the world; and alſo to note, that he ſuffered impriſonment and exile fourteen yeers at the moſt, if when he was ſold into Egypt we reckon the ſeventeenth year but current or new begun, and account this thirtieth not for new begun, but for complete and ended. On the age of Joſeph, divers obſerve the age of thirty yeers to be an age of ripeneſs for publick imployment, for at that age David began his reign, 2 Sam. 5.4. Ezekiel his Propheſie, Ezek.1.1. John Baptiſt and Chriſt their Evangelical miniſtry, Luk. 3.23. the Levites their ſervice in the Tabernacle, Numb.4.3. Which ſhould admoniſh thoſe that are at that age, or above it, to extend their thoughts beyond their own particular intereſts, and to ſet them on work ſome way to promote the publick good.

when he ſtood] By this phraſe in Scripture is underſtood a ſerviceable attendance, as Dan.1.19. 1 Sam. 16.21. as to be ready at hand to receive commands, and to go preſently to put them in execution.

V.47. By handfuls] Or, heaps; viz. from one grain ſo many as would fill the hand, or make an heap; by which ſpeech is meant a very great increaſe.

V.48. Gathered up all the food] That is, the corn principally, not other fruits in general; for of many there was no great need, and many would not keep.

V. 49. Until he left numbring] He laid up the proviſion by rule and proportion, and reduced the barnes, and Bayes of building to number, with the quaintity of corne contained in them; and when he had ſufficiently provided for the publick ſupply of Egypt, he laid up afterward without any ſuch exact account as before he uſed.

V.50. Prieſt of On] See on ver.45.

V.51. Hath made me forget] It is thought by ſome, that notwithſtanding his fathers houſe was the true Church of God, yet the company of the wicked, or proſperity cauſed him to forget it. But that he did not altogether forget his fathers houſe, is plain, becauſe he maketh mention of it; this forgetfulneſs then is to be referred to the toyle he endured (for that he expreſly ſpeaketh of) and to that which was offenſive to him in his fathers houſe; which yet he needed not to forget, but ſo far as not to think of it by way of offence (as God may be ſaid to forget or not to remember mans ſin) or in a ſenſe of affliction, as before is premiſed, Iſai.65 16. But whereas he continued divers yeers in Egypt, ſome principal part whereof (as the City of Memphis) was but about fifty miles from Hebron, where was his fathers family, and his father heard not from him all the while, until he ſent for him into Egypt, it may be thought he failed ſomewhat, if not in his faith, yet in his filial affection; but though Joſeph made it not known unto them where he was, he might ſend privately to them, and be informed of their welfare, though they knew not from whom the inquiry came; and for his concealment of himſelf ſo long from them, he might do it as foreſeeing a fitter opportunity to reveal himſelf unto them afterwards; but certainly Gods providence diſpoſed of his diſcovery ſo, as that it fell upon the fitteſt ſeaſon: But if Joſeph were ſomewhat faulty towards his beſt friends, it is no marvel, ſince he had his infirmities as a man, and might have the more failings as a Courtier, eſpecially his condition being ſo ſtrangely changed, and his favour, and honour, and power being ſo great with a King and people, who had the Hebrews his natural kindred and Country men in extreme diſdain.

V.54. And the ſeven years of dearth began] The ſeven yeers of plenty now fully ended, the ſeven yeers of famine preſently followed; which may warn us in times of plenty to think of want that may come after, and to take heed we do not haſten it by a wanton waſtefulneſſe of Gods good creatures, nor by unthankfulneſſe to him that giveth them.

as Joſeph had ſaid] Divine predictions never faile of full effect.

dearth was in all lands] That is, in all thoſe lands that were neer to Egypt, as Phenice, Canaan, Syria, and Arabia, which are next in ſituation to it, and border upon it, not in all without exception: as Cæſar is ſaid to taxe all the world, Luk.2.1. yet the Taxe extended not beyond the bounds of the Roman Empire.

there was bread] That is, corn laid up in ſeveral Cities, ſo as with convenience to furniſh the whole Land.

V.55. Famiſhed] That is, vehemently hungred, the private ſtock of proviſion now being ſpent.

cried to Pharaoh] Though it were known to the people that Joſeph was appointed both to lay up, and lay out the proviſion made out of the ſeven yeers of plenty, yet many of them came unto the King; and it may be the more, becauſe Joſeph was a ſtranger born, and of that Nation, which the Egyptians had in great abomination; and becauſe Pharaoh was (as a common father) to ſee to the ſafety and ſuccour of all his people; therefore in the famine of Samaria, a woman called upon the King for help, 2 King.6 26.

V.56. All the face of the earth] Which words are to be limited, as ver.54. ſee the Annot. there.

V.57. All Countries] See Annot. on ver.54.

all lands] See Annot. on ver.54.

CHAP. XLII

Verſ. 1. Jacob ſaw] That is, heard or underſtood, or as ſurely believed as if he had ſeen it, (though he had it but by report, ver. 2.) becauſe the ſight gives beſt aſſurance (for one eye witneſſe is of more credit then many ear-witneſſes) therefore it is ſometimes uſed for the notice that is taken, or comes in by hearing; as the people are ſaid to ſee the thunderings and the noiſe of the Trumpet, Exod.20.18. and ſometimes alſo for the knowledg of things by the other ſenſes: as, ye have made our ſavour to be abhorred in the eyes of Pharaoh Exod.5 21. Savour is apprehended by the noſe or palate, not by the eye. Yea, by reaſon alſo, or by faith, becauſe many things are apprehended as aſſuredly by the light of reaſon, and evidence of faith, as if they were ſet before our eyes. See Judg. 16.5. Heb.11.27.

Corn] Heb. breaking. Why corn is called breaking, ſundry Writers give ſeveral reaſons; ſome ſuppoſe it is called breaking, becauſe it breaketh hunger; ſome, for that it is broken or taken off from the heap; ſome, becauſe it is broken by the mill; and ſome, for that it is broken into divers parts, and diſtributed when it is ſold; ſo Sheber the Hebrew word here uſed, (which ſome read, breaking) ſignifieth buying and ſelling, Am.8.5. Or, generally any act whereby diſtribution is made.

Why do ye look] Or, gaze, as men deſtitute of counſel, or ſo perplexed and amazed in mind, as not knowing what to do to be furniſhed with food againſt the famine? A grievous and terrible affliction, the violence whereof is ſometimes ſuch as makes many like hungry dogs to feed upon abominable meats, and to pay a dear rate for them; as in the famine of Samaria, an Aſſes head was ſold for fourſcore pieces of ſilver, and a little Pigeons dung for five pieces of ſilver, 2 King.6.25. (the Pigeons dung (as Joſephus noteth) ſerved in ſtead of ſalt, Joſeph. Antiq. lib 8. *cap.*2. *pag.*227) and ſometimes it is ſo fierce, that it makes the mother to uſe her teeth, in ſtead of her lips to her owne child, to bite without pity the Infant which ſhe was uſed to kiſs, and in ſtead of giving it ſuck, to let out the blood of it, Deut.28.57. which hath been done in a famine not only by ſome hard-hearted mothers, but by ſuch as were of a kind and tender nature, as the Prophet Jeremy ſheweth, The hands of the pitiful women have ſodden their own children, they were their meat in the deſtruction of the daughter of my people, Lam.4.10. yea they that have nothing beſides themſelves to offer up in ſacrifice unto this mercileſſe tyrant, Famine, are made ſometimes to be ſo fierce towards themſelves, as to eat the fleſh off their own armes, Iſai.9.20. The conſideration hereof may be a motive to thankfulneſſe to God, though but for ſcraps or crumbs which fall from the Table of the wealthy; and may be a caveat againſt murmuring at ordinary wants, and againſt wanton abuſe of Gods bounty, when he gives abundance: and Jacob and his family having their part in this common calamity, (which was alſo the lot of his father Iſaac, and of his grand father Abraham, Gen.26.1.) may be remembred to warn even the beſt and holieſt, that they expect not a priviledge from the common croſſes of this life, nor be too much perplexed (as it ſeems Jacobs ſons were) when God giveth them occaſion to exerciſe their faith and patience in the like kind; for that which is famine to others, ſhall be but a faſt or more moderate dyet unto them, for God their father will ſo provide for them, (as in this caſe he did) that in the dayes of famine they ſhall be ſatisfied, Pſal.37.19.

V. 2 Get you downe] Egypt lay lower then Canaan, and therefore when Joſeph ſends his brethren for his father to Canaan, he ſaith, Go up, Chap.45.9. but when he bids them bring him into Egypt, he ſaith, Bring him down hither, ver.13. and Egypt lying lower, was the fitter to be made fruitful by the overflowing of Nilus. See Annot. on Chap.13.1. See alſo Chap. 45. 9.13. and 46.4.

live and not dye] (Chap 43.8. Pſal.118.17. Iſai.38.1.) To live and not dye is all one; yet the phraſe is not idly either varied or doubled, but to expreſſe a ſtrong affection in the ſpeaker, and to imprint the like in the mind of the hearer; and ſometimes the firſt imports the bleſſing of long life, the ſecond a preſervation from death, by which damnation is noted, Rev.20.6,14.

V.4. But Benjamin] Jacob was very tender towards Benjamin, as Joſephs brother by Rachel, whom he moſt dearly loved, and as the youngeſt of all his children. See Annot. on Chap. 37. verſ.3.

V.6. Bowed] (Chap.43.26,28. & 44.14. & 50.18) Doing this homage to Joſeph, as Maſter of the corn, they make good, though unwittingly, his prophetick dream of his brethrens ſheaves doing obeyſance to his ſheaf, Chap.37.7.

V. 7. He knew them, but they] Some of them were at mans eſtate when they ſold him, and by them he might gueſſe at the reſt, eſpecially hearing and underſtanding their ſpeech one to another; but he being then but ſeventeen yeers old, and now very neer forty, was ſo changed in countenance, and language (ſpeaking the Egyptian Tongue) in habit and condition (being Nobleman-like, which they little looked for, having ſold him for a ſlave) that they could not know him.

made himſelf ſtrange unto them] This diſſembling was more ſutable to the condition of an heathen Courtier, then to the qualification of a true Iſraelite in whom is no guile, Joh.1.47. and is therefore to be taken rather as an example of Caution, then of Imitation: But this ſtrangeneſſe was kept with the better decorum, becauſe he had ſo ordered the ſale of corn, that whereas he imployed others to ſell to the Natives, he himſelf ſold unto ſtrangers, for which purpoſe he appointed a peculiar place to furniſh them, and that was the chief City of the Kingdom.

ſpake roughly] They deſerved no better entertainment at his hands, who dealt roughly with him, and had no pity on the anguiſh of his ſoul when he beſought them to ſpare him, ver.21. but Joſeph did not this by way of grudge or revenge, but to make them the more ſenſible of their own ill dealing with him, and of his kindneſs to them, when he diſcovered himſelf unto them.

V.9. To ſee the nakedneſs] That is, the weakneſs of the Land by want of walls, or other neceſſary ſafeguard; for he that hath no arms or defence, may be ſaid to be naked, as expoſed to peril from the hands of enemies; as he that hath no cloaths, is expoſed to the ſharpneſſe of the wind and weather. See Exod.32 25.

V.11. All one mans ſons] That ſhewes they were no Spies, for no man would ſend ſo many ſons together for ſuch a purpoſe: when Spies were ſent by Moſes to take a view, and to give information of the Land of Canaan, they were not ſent many of one family but one of a Tribe, Numb.13.2. and their direction was to ſee the Land what it was, and the people that dwell therein, whether they were ſtrong or weak, few or many, and what they dwelt in, whether in Tents or in ſtrong holds, and what the Land was, whether it were fat or leane, whether there were wood therein or not, Numb. 13.18, 19,20.

V.12. Nay, but to ſee] See the ſecond Annot. on v.7.

V.13. One is not] That is, not alive, Chap.44 ver.20. See Annot. on Chap.37. v.30. Lam.5.7. Or, not in this world, as was ſaid of Enoch, though he were not dead, but taken up alive, Gen.5.24. Heb. 11.5.

V 14 This is it that I ſpake] That is, you pretend you have another brother, and have not, and therefore being falſe in this, ye are Spies, and no true men.

V.15. By the life of Pharaoh] Some read, Pharaoh liveth; ſome, let Pharaoh live; or (which is the meaning) as Pharaoh liveth; Heb the lives of Pharaoh; if the words be rendred Pharoah liveth, or let Pharaoh live, or, (which is the ſame in effect) as Pharaoh liveth, the ſenſe may be, As truly as Pharoah liveth ye ſhall not go hence, as Ezek 33.11. As I live (ſaith the Lord God) [I have no pleaſure in the death of the wicked] So alſo 1 Sam.1.26. and Chap.17. ver. 55. If [the lives of Pharaoh,] the meaning is,by the life, or liver of Pharaoh, (of which expreſſion in the plural number, ſee Annot. on chap. 2. ver.7) and ſo we may conceive Joſeph had got a taint of the Courtiers language, which was to honour and flatter the King, by taking his name into their atteſtations; ſo in after ages it was the manner to ſwear by the life, or genius of the Emperor, a ſin which God hath forbidden as a great diſhonour to himſelf, Deut.6.13. compared with Mat.4.10. ſo great, as if it were uncapable of pardon, Jer.5.7.

ye ſhall not go forth hence] That is, ye ſhall not all go hence. Heb. If ye ſhall go hence, the words are ſuſpenſive, where the latter part, which is implicitely a curſe is forborn; the ſentence made out may be, if ye go hence let me be puniſhed, or, I will be puniſhed for you. See Annot. on Gen.14.23.

V.16. Elſe by the life of Pharaoh] He ſwears again by the life of Pharaoh; it is like that he had contracted a cuſtom (by his ill company) ſo to ſwear, which ſheweth how dangerous it is to be familiarly converſant with the wicked.

ye are Spies] Though he ſwear, he doth not forſwear, for he calls them Spies, but conditionally, if they brought not their younger brother to him; which condition they accepted of, and ſo were to be taken as ſpies if they did not bring him.

V.18. I fear God] (Neh.5.15.) And therefore will be true and juſt in my promiſe. See Annot. on Gen.20.11.

V.21. We are verily guilty] Affliction, as a rack, inforceth the confeſſion of thoſe faults, which otherwiſe would not be acknowledged, and conſequently not pardoned, Prov.28. ver.13. 1 Joh.1.9. Though then affliction be not pleaſant as a Banquet,it is profitable as a medicine for the recovery of the ſoul from the ſickneſs of ſin; though it have been of long continuance; for the guilt of their ſin was about twenty yeers old, though the ſmart and anguiſh of it was not felt until now; but affliction awakened their conſciences which before were aſleep; and their bonds and impriſonment were a means of freedom to their ſouls from the bond of wickedneſſe,according to the words of Elihu, If they be bound in fetters,and holden in cords of affliction, then he ſheweth them their work, and their tranſgreſſions that they have exceeded: He openeth alſo their ear to diſcipline,and commandeth that they return from iniquity, Job 36.8,9,10. See Hoſ.5.15.

In that we ſaw the anguiſh of his ſoul] See on Chap.49.23.

Therefore is this diſtreſſe] Here they do well to entitle their trouble to their ſin; though they were no politick ſpies, yet they deſerved as much and more then they ſuffered; herein their preſent ſtate is anſwerable to their precedent fault,for they diſdained that Joſeph ſhould have any pre-eminence above them, and now they are fain to do humble homage unto him; they conſpired againſt him,and he hath a plot to perplex them; they bound him and caſt him into a pit, he commits them to cloſe cuſtody, whence they could not ſtir, and binds the chief of their conſpiracy before their faces; they would not hear him when he begged of them for mercy, and he ſheweth himſelf inexorable towards them; and ſo is Joſeph a miniſter of divine juſtice upon them; for God hath ſaid, Whoſo ſtoppeth his ears at the cry of the poor, he alſo ſhall cry himſelf, and ſhall not be heard, Prov. 21.13. See Judg. 1.7. Mat.7.2. Jam.2.13.

V.24. Wept] (Chap 42.30) Joſeph had acted the part of a ſevere Inquiſitour towards his brethren until now, and now he can hold out his hypocriſie no longer; nature puts forth eye-witneſſes of good affection to them,while art pretends both cauſe and purpoſe of rigorous dealing with them: which was an aſſured proof that he troubled them to do them good, and not becauſe they did or meant him hurt; and here we ſee how natural affections are too ſtrong to be kept in by artificial diſguiſes. Joſeph was wiſe, yet could he not ſo keep on his diſſimulation, but his kindneſs overcame his craft; hence it is, that hypocriſie will not long be hid,and that a lying tongue is but for a moment;whereas the lip of truth is eſtabliſhed for ever, Prov.12.19.

bound him] Simeon had a chief hand in the maſſacre of the Shechemites, and it is like he ſhewed himſelf moſt harſh and hard hearted to his brother, for if he had been ſo well inclined to him as Reuben and Judah were, they three, by their ſeniority, might have prevailed much with the reſt in his behalf; wherefore he had moſt need of humbling; and it may be Joſeph feared his perverſe diſpoſition would diſſwade his father from ſending Benjamin unto him,and hoped that Simeon being the worſt of his brethren, the detaining of him would be the leaſt affliction to his father; howſoever he being left in his hands, Joſeph neither wanted means nor mind to uſe him with more reſpect, when he ſaw a meet ſeaſon for it.

V.25.Proviſion for the way] To ſerve both them and their cattel, that is,their aſſes,ver.27. in the way,that they might bring home all they had bought without diminution.

V.27. As one of them opened] That there was but one ſack opened in the Inne, may ſeem by this ſaying, which appears the more probable, becauſe when they came home and emptied their ſacks before Jacob,they were all afraid to ſee every man his money reſtored again;which had not ſo much affected and affrighted them, if they had all opened them before in the Inne; and though Judah ſay they opened their ſacks in the Inne,Chap.43.21. They that hold there was but one ſingle ſack opened, reply to that, that as Noah in the five hundreth yeer of his age is ſaid to beget Shem, Ham and Japhet, Gen.5.32. whereas he then only began to beget them; (and the ſame may be ſaid of Terah, Gen.11. 26.) ſo they were ſaid to open, when they did but begin to open their ſacks in the Inne, and finiſhed the diſcovery at their coming home: But it ſeems not probable that when one ſack was opened, and they ſo troubled,but that they would preſently make trial of the reſt; and it is enough that the reſt are mentioned to have done the like, Chap.43.21. And though upon the opening their ſacks in the preſence of Jacob they were affrighted again, that might be, not as at a new thing, but upon ſome new reaſon of danger, diſcovered by their father, which from his apprehenſion of peril, might work a ſtronger operation of fear in them then before they conceived; or it might have ſo much new force, as to renew their former fear, for a time intermitted.

V.28. Afraid] Guilty perſons are very timerous, and eaſily take a fright,even at that which is done in favour, if it be ſtrange and beyond expectation. See Lev.26.36.

that God hath done unto us] Becauſe their conſciences accuſed them of ſin,they thought God would have brought them to trouble by this money; Though they were moſt of them very faulty towards Joſeph, and otherwiſe wicked,yet they rightly apprehended that puniſhment was the reward of ſin,and God the authour of that puniſhment,and the diſpoſer of that matter by his providence,which reacheth even to the ſmalleſt matter Mat.10.29.

V.35. They were afraid] Sore afraid, for the Hebrew phraſe is,their hearts went out of them; upon the ſight of their money, when they opened their ſacks in the Inne, they were afraid there was ſome ſubtle device to enſnare them. See on ver.27,28. and now they open them at home, it is ſaid they were afraid; it is like the firſt fear was ſudden and ſhort, at leaſt that it did not laſt until they came home, yet with a ſecond ſight of the money, their paſſions might return upon them, eſpecially their father being taken with it, and giving reaſons for it, might eaſily receive the paſſionate apprehenſion of his ſons, and ſo they were now (father and ſons) afraid together: Or, the ſons would not acknowledg they had opened their ſacks before, and found the money in them, leſt their father ſhould have chidden them,and ſo they feign a fear with him, as if now they had firſt taken notice of the matter.

V. 37. Slay my two ſons] He had four ſons, Chap. 46. 9. therefore ſome read, for ſlay my two ſons, ſlay two of my ſons; or two which were then preſent, the other two at that time abſent: but what ſecurity was this to Jacob, who would be more loath to ſlay two of his grand-children, then to ſend his ſon Benjamin? this was a paſſionate and inconſiderate ſpeech of Reuben, yet ſo that Jacob might think that though his words were raſh, there was ſome reaſon for his confident undertaking for Benjamins return. See on Chap.19.8.)

CHAP. XLIII.

Ver.1. T*He famine was ſore*] The longer it continued in time, the more it increaſed in degree; this was a great temptation to Jacob to ſuffer ſo great a want where the Lord had promiſed to bleſs him with abundance; ſee Gen.28.13. This was the ſecond year of that great famine.

V.2. Eaten up the corne] That is,when there was very little left, and after a while like to be none,without a new ſupply.

buy us a little food] To ſerve us in the famine of this preſent year, for Jacob knew not that five years famine were yet to come: he had a great family of ſons, daughters, grand-children and ſervants, which by conjecture might amount to two or three hundred, ſo that a great deal of corn might be held but a little, in reſpect of ſo great a company: or he calling it a little, might meane in regard of the ſpare dyet which men were to be tyed unto in hard times, ſo that now they were to ſpend leſſe in proviſion, then when the Lord ſent it in a greater proportion.

V.3. Not ſee my face] With favour or ſafety to your ſelves, for I will apprehend you and puniſh you as ſpies, except your brother be with you. Chap.42.20. & 44.23.

V. 4. Buy thee food] They were to buy for themſelves as well, as for him, and he was but one, and they many, yet he ſaith to his father, we will buy it for thee, becauſe they went at his command, and for that the care of the whole family belonged to the Father of the Family.

V.5. We will not go] Becauſe it will be in vain: for we ſhall get no corn,but incur danger, for we are threatned if we come again and Benjamin be not with us.

V.8. And Judah ſaid] Reuben had ſpoken raſhly without heed,and his ſpeech was as little heeded by Jacob, as by himſelf, and ſo he prevailed nothing with him; Simeon the next in age to Reuben, was kept priſoner in Egypt; Levi next to him in birth, and too neer him in the blood of the Shechemites, having for that fact little acceptation with his father,either wanted heart to ſpeak,or hope to ſpeed,eſpecially ſeeing Reubens motion was refuſed; Judah the next in ſeniority ſpeaketh more wiſely,at a better opportunity (for now the neceſſity of ſupply made Jacob the more willing to yeeld,what before he had denyed) obtained his conſent to bring his brother Benjamin into Egypt: The way then to prevail with an unwilling mind,is to uſe a mediator, who hath ſome graceful acceptance with the party to be moved,and for ſuch a one to uſe prudent perſwaſion,and to watch the advantage of the beſt opportunity to make the motion ſucceſsful.

the lad] He was now about twenty four yeeres of age, and a father of divers children, Chap.46.21. yet he calls him but a lad, becauſe he was the youngeſt, and in his fathers affection as dear and tenderly beloved and cared for as if he were but a boy. See Annot. on Chap.37.30.

V.10.This ſecond time] That is,if we had not been delayed,we might have made a ſecond return with corn by this time,that is,if thou hadſt not ſtayed us in retaining Benjamin,we might,&c.

V.11. If it muſt be ſo] There is no wiſdom in ſtriving with neceſſity; when we cannot frame our condition to our wills, we muſt bring down our wils to our condition; and it was better that one ſhould be adventured upon ſome uncertain danger,then that all the family ſhould be left to the certain danger of famine.

beſt-fruits] In Hebrew, take of the melody,muſick, or ſinging of the earth; that is,excellent fruits, which are received with praiſe, and uſed with delight.

a preſent] Jacob reſolving to refer the matter concerning himſelf and his ſons to Gods providence, doth yet uſe his own prudence to ſpeed his purpoſe; and therefore to ingratiate them in the favour of that great Lord in Egypt (whom he knew not to be his good ſon Joſeph) he ſends a preſent,which (as Solomon ſheweth) is a means to pacifie anger, and to obtain favour, Prov.21.14. & 18.16. & 17.8.

a little balm and a little honey, &c.] Balm was very precious, and therefore a little of it might be a competent preſent; and a little honey, though Canaan were a Land flowing with milk and honey, (Lev.20.24. and in many other places) yet in a time of ſo great dearth, honey being of uſe for humane ſuſtenance,a little of it with other things,might be accepted.

ſpices] The Hebrew word is Necboth, which ſome render by the gum of the Balm tree; ſome,Wax; ſome,Aromatick,or Odoriferous Spices; others more generally,deſirable things; ſome(as the vulgar Latine in this place) expreſs it by the word Storax,which ſignifieth a kind of tree, and the tear or gum which iſſueth out of it,of which Diaſcorides writeth, lib. 1.cap.78. & Plin.l.12.cap.25.

nuts] Or, Terebinth; or, Nuts of the Turpentine tree; the Original word is not (as ſome obſerve) found any where but here in the holy Scripture.

V.12.Double money] This double money may have a double meaning; one is,that they took their money back which was found in their ſacks mouthes,and mony for more corn to be bought in Egypt: the other,that (beſides the reſtitution money) they took the price they formerly paid, and made an augmentation above that they paid before; either becauſe the price of the corn,by the continuance of the famine, was increaſed, or the proportion was to be doubled.

carry it again, peradventure it was an overſight] The men that ſhould have received and kept the mony,being buſily imployed with many at once, might be miſtaken, and ſo might you be ſome way or other; howſoever miſ-reckoning is no payment, the corn being ours, the money is theirs that ſold it, therefore take it with you, and reſtore it. Jacobs juſtice in bargain condemns the ill dealing of many, who make no conſcience upon how cheap termes they get another mans goods: It is naught,it is naught (ſaith the buyer) but when he is gone away,then he boaſteth,Prov.22.14. When by diſpraiſing the ware he hath pulled down the price, he makes brags of his bargain: and the ſeller ſaith as faſt, It is good, it is good; and if he can ſcrue up the buyer to an unconſcionable rate, he is ready to boaſt of his gains; but if either be miſtaken to his prejudice,no reſtoring will be made: yet the ſaying is moſt true without reſtitution (either in deed, or in deſire) there is no remiſſion. Aug.Ep. 54. Macedonio.

V.14. God Almighty give] Our chief truſt ought to be in God,and not in worldly means; the hearts of men are in Gods hands, Prov.21.1. And though it be a point of prudence to do what we can to win them, yet it is a part of piety to repoſe our confidence in Gods mercy to us, and in the mercies of men but as by his means.

if I be bereaved] He ſpeaketh theſe words not ſo much in deſpair, as to make his ſons more careful to bring again their brother; and withal to expreſs his reſolution to refer the matter to Gods providence,whatſoever became of him or his, as Eſther did when purpoſing to put her ſelfe upon the Kings diſpleaſure for her peoples ſafety,ſhe ſaid, If I periſh,I periſh,Eſth.4.16.

V.18. Were afraid] See Annot.on Chap.42.28.

that he may ſeek occaſion] Guilty perſons are very ſuſpicious,and are as injurious many times to wel-meaning minds by their miſtruſts of them, as by their ill dealing with them. See 1 Sam.17.28.

V.21 Every ones money was] See Annot. on Chap.42.27.

full weight] See Annot.on Chap.23.16.

V.13. Your God, and the God] This being the ſpeech of Joſephs Steward, it appeareth that notwithſtanding the corruption of Egypt,Joſeph taught his family to fear God.

hath given you treaſure] The good we receive from men is to be aſcribed to the goodneſs of God.

I had your money] I acknowledg the receit of it,there was no theft nor fault in you.

V.24.Waſhed their feet] See Annot.on Chap.18.4.

V.29.Saw — Benjamin] He ſaw him before, but he would not ſeem to take any eſpecial notice of him; now he profeſſedly ſet his eyes upon him, ſpeaking both of him and to him in an affectionate manner.

to thee my ſon] Joſeph calleth Benjamin his ſon,as he was a father in the Civil State,Chap.45.8. ſo are they that are Governors in the Commonwealth,to whom honour is due under the title of fathers by the fifth Commandment.

V.30. His bowels did yern] (1 King.3.26.) The worthieſt perſons are moſt tender-hearted, and ſo likeſt unto God. See Jer. 31.20.

V.32. For him by himſelf] There were three tables at leaſt in the room; one, and the chief for Joſeph as Viceroy to Pharaoh,another for his eleven brethren; and a third for the Nobles of Egypt invited by Joſeph to the feaſt; ſo that they dined together in reſpect of the room, not together in reſpect of the tables.

eat bread] Bread is put for all things that are ſerved in at a meal or feaſt. See Annot on Chap.31.54. It might ſeem ſtrange for ſo great a man as Joſeph to entertain ſtrangers of no higher rank then his brethren ſeemed to be,in that manner; but Joſephs wiſdom was ſuch, and ſo well known, that moſt would conceive he had ſome good reaſon for it, though they knew it not.

abomination unto the Egyptians] Not ſo much becauſe they were ſhepherds, as Chap.46.34. (for the Eyptians themſelves had flocks of ſheep, Gen.47. Exod.9.3,17. whoſe milk they did eat, and wear their wool, which might be as the Livery of ſervants, for they worſhipped ſuch cattel;) But becauſe they did feed upon ſuch cattel as the Egyptians did worſhip; and though the Egyptians did feed upon Bulls and Oxen, they did not eat Kine, for they worſhipped the females in honour of Iſis, who the Poets fain was turned into a Cow, and afterwards returned again to the forme ſhe had before; but above all things the head of any beaſt was an abomination unto them, becauſe upon the head they uſed to pour out all their imprecations; hence it is that they could not endure to have ſheep or kine to be killed, though by way of ſacrifice, and therefore ſuch ſacrifices were an abomination unto them, Exod. 8. 26. and ſo were ſuch as either did feed upon ſuch creatures as they did honour; or on ſuch, either in whole or in part (eſpecially the head) as they did abhor. Thus it is the nature of the ſuperſtitious to condemn all others,and to contemne them too as unclean in reſpect of themſelves; ſo did the Egyptians by other Nations.

V.33. And the youngeſt according] Though Benjamin were the ſon of Rachel, the mother of Joſeph, yet were the ſons of the handmaids,Bilhah and Zilpah, ſet above him; ſo much is ſeniority or priority of time to be accounted of, and in many caſes precedence is beſt ſwayed by that conſideration, ſince it is neither ſubject to doubt nor envy.

and the men marvelled] Who? and at what? if by the men be meant the brethren of Joſeph, ſome think it was matter of marvel to them, how he,being an Egyptain,(as they thought him) knew how to rank them according to their ſeniority;but it ſeemeth rather,that they placed themſelvs and then their marvel was either at ſomewhat of the Egyptian faſhion, contrary to that of their own Country, or that Joſeph ſate neither with the Egyptians, nor with the Hebrewes; yet that would be no matter of marvel,ſince he was a Prince, and ſo it was a Princely prerogative to ſit alone; or that themſelves were ſo honourably entertained in the Kings Court, being at home but Country ſhepherds; and that their brother Benjamins meſſe was five time ſo much as any of theirs, and theſe two might be cauſes of marvel, not only to them, but to the Egyptians alſo.

V.34. Sent meſſes to them] Heb. He elevated elevations from his faces unto them. The meaning is, that the meat was ſet before Joſeph, and he diſtributed what he thought good unto the Gueſts: the Hebrewes call the meſſes elevations, becauſe they were carried up on high for honours ſake: and from his faces; that is, of the meats that were ſet before his face, the plural number put for the ſingular.

Benjamins meſſe] The manner of thoſe times and Countries was not, as with us, to ſerve in diſhes, as in common, whereof thoſe that ſate at table might indifferently partake,but every one had his portion diſtributed to him by himſelf: ſome take this not for the whole meal, but that towards the end of it,ſome parcels of banquetting ſtuff were diſtributed to Joſephs brethren,and that in them Benjamin had five times as much as the reſt.

five times ſo much] In Hebrew it is five hands,for five parts: for gifts or parts are called hands or handfuls,becauſe they are given or taken with the hand. He ſheweth ſo much more reſpect to Benjamin then any of the reſt,becauſe he only was his brother both by the fathers and mothers ſide; ſo did Elkanah by a better portion to Hannah, ſhew that he preferred her before Peninnah,1 Sam.1.4,5.

drank, and were merry] Sometimes the word here uſed, ſignifieth to be drunken; but here it is meant but of a free uſe of drink; for cheerfulneſſe, not for exceſſe, as Cant 5.1. So is the Greek word, Joh.2.10.

CHAP. XLIV

Ver.2. Put my Cup] We may not by this example uſe any unlawful practices, ſeeing God hath commanded us to walk in ſimplicity,2 Cor.1.12. & Chap.11.3. Joſeph did this haply to try their affections to their brother Benjamin, whether they were well affected to him, or envious at him;for the extraordinary favour he had ſhewen unto him.

V.4. Follow after] Purſue them with a convenient number of horſe, that you may overtake them, and bring Benjamin from them, though they would offer to reſcue him.

V 5. Whereby he divineth] It was the manner of the Heathens, (and it is like among them of the Egyptians) in the Ceremonies of Divination ſometimes to uſe a Cup, ſometimes a Baſon; and Joſeph bearing himſelf as an Egyptian, and ſuppoſed by the people to be ſuch a Diviner, and to uſe ſuch Ceremonies, he taketh the matter upon him; or his Steward in his name ſpeaketh as if he divined by that Cup: Or the words may be, not in which, or by which he divineth; but of which, that is, he can divine, that is, tell where it is, and who hath taken it away; or by this Cup diſcover your dealing in this buſineſs, though it were done in ſecret: Or the word in the Original may ſignifie a prudent preſaging or inſight by conjectural trial; ſo there is no need to conceive that Joſeph played the Soothſayer after the Egyptian manner, which no doubt he deteſted, having a divination or revelation from God of an higher and holier kind then this; yet in that he was content to be taken for an Egyptian Diviner, or fained that he conſulted with Soothſayers, his ſimulation was a ſin, as his ſwearing before; for he was but a man, though of the beſt ſort, and as a man no doubt had his failings, as others of the Patriarchs: his example then is no pattern for any ones profeſſion or practice of ſuch ſuperſtitious diſcoveries.

V.8. We brought again] This is brought in as an argument of their true dealing, who were ſo ready to reſtore, not charged, or perhaps not chargeable by any with any wrong.

V.9. Let him dye] This was a ſpeech both too general, and too ſevere, like that of Jacobs their Father, Chap.31.32. but in this the more inconſiderate, becauſe they ſhould have remembred, how their money was put into their ſacks before, without their knowledge, and have thought that the like might have been done concerning the Cup, yet ſuch a confident aſſeveration, was an argument of innocency in thoſe that made it.

V.10. Shall be my ſervant] The ſervant of Joſeph ſpeaks thus, as in his Maſters name and right; for Joſeph himſelf came not out after them, for at his brethrens return to the City, he was yet in his houſe, ver.14.

V.13. Rent their clothes] To ſignifie how greatly the thing diſpleaſed them, and how ſorry they were for it. See Annot. on Chap.37.29. This was very hard uſage from Joſeph, but it was of good uſe for tryal and exerciſe of humility and patience, and it laſted but a while, and at laſt was recompenſed with comfort.

V.15. Can certainly divine] See Annot. on ver.5.

V.16. What ſhall we ſpeak] Their conſciences were clear, and their conviction ſeemed as clear, ſo that for the preſent they knew not what they ſhould ſay by way of apology for themſelves.

God hath found out] Here is nothing ſaid nor pretended by way of excuſe or defence, but rather a confeſſion, as though they were guilty of the fact, when they were all free; for Judah ſpeaking firſt (and it may be in ſome haſte, as more engaged in the matter then the reſt, becauſe of his undertaking for the return of Benjamin, Chap.43.9.) might upon the ſudden miſ-doubt there was ſome fault in ſome of his brethren, or if not concerning the Cup, he might recal to mind the conſpiracy againſt his brother Joſeph, and think that God was meet with them for that, as Chap.42.21. Howſoever, if we ſee no evident cauſe of our affliction, let us look to the ſecret counſel of God, who puniſheth us juſtly for our ſins.

we are my Lords ſervants] Judah firſt gave up their liberty loſt, who was the firſt mover for the ſelling of his brother Joſeph for a ſervant, Gen.37.26, 27. The Law concerning theft was in Moſes time, that reſtitution ſhould be made in ſome caſes double, in ſome four-fold, and he that could not make ſuch a recompence was to be ſold, and become his ſlave, to whom he was a thief, Exod.22.1, 3. but in this caſe their own words expoſed them to a greater peril, even to the loſſe of their lives, ver.9. and though therein they ſpake not wiſely, here they anſwer honeſtly, and profeſſe themſelves (at leaſt Judah for himſelf and the reſt, and none of them ſpake a word to the contrary) ready to make good what they had ſaid, though they dye for it; which may be juſtly applyed to the reproof of thoſe, who will ſtand to nothing they ſay, if it make againſt themſelves; but for their advantage, or to avoid damage, make no ſcruple to break their words, and ſometimes alſo their ſolemne oaths.

V.18. In my Lords ears] Judah coming neer, and deſirous to ſpeak in Joſephs ear, ſeemeth to be repugnant to that, Chap. 42.23 where it is ſaid, that Joſeph ſpake unto his brethren by an Interpreter, or (as in the marginal variation according to the Hebrew) an Interpreter was between them; becauſe the Hebrews underſtood not the Egyptian Tongue, nor would Joſeph, bearing himſelfe as an Egyptian, ſeem to underſtand the Hebrew Tongue; why then did Judah draw neer, and deſire to ſpeak in his ear, as by way of ſecret whiſpering? Anſw. Firſt, for his drawing neer, it was convenient for him that ſpake, to advance a little before the reſt of his brethren towards him, who was to be ſpoken to. Secondly, for that he ſaith of ſpeaking in the eare, it doth not neceſſarily imply any whiſpering ſpeech to be heard by one alone, as may appear by the like phraſe, Gen.50.41. Exod.11.2. Deut. 5.1. and in divers other places. Thirdly, If Judah did come neer, and deſire to ſpeak to Joſeph privately without an Interpreter, it were not repugnant to that, Chap.42.23. for in Egypt Joſeph was generally known to be an Hebrew, for he was accuſed under that name, Chap.39.14, 17. and ſo committed to priſon, and in priſon he was taken for an Hebrew, Chap.41.12. and under that title ſent for to the Court in great haſte, verſ. 14. And ſo being famous by his divine wiſdome, interpretation of dreams, and by his great change from a poor priſoner to a prime Courtier, it might eaſily be known to his brethren, (eſpecially now at their ſecond coming, having been ſo entertained by him, as no ſtrangers were but they) that he was an Hebrew, though they knew not of what particular family he was, nor durſt preſume to take further notice of him then he was pleaſed to allow of.

even as Pharaoh] That is, having his royal power for a great part of it in thy adminiſtration, and though not in equal authority with him, yet next unto him.

V.19 Have ye a father] This paſſed betwixt Joſeph and his brethren, at a former conference, but is not ſet down until now, when Judah took occaſion to relate what had paſſed.

V.20. Child] The word Jeled in the Original properly ſignifieth a child newly born, as Exod.1.17. and Chap. 2.7, 8. Or a child not yet weaned, Gen.21.8. yet it is applyed to Joſeph when he was ſeventeen yeers of age, Gen.37.30. And this extenuating term is given either out of compaſſion, importing tenderneſſe, ſuch a tenderneſſe as one would uſe to a little child, as in that place concerning Joſeph; or it is taken by way of excuſe, as an officious lye, as in this place, to keep Benjamin at home with his father, as if he were ſo little and ſo tender, that he were unfit and unable to take, or to be brought ſo long a journey.

a little one] That is, the leaſt in yeers, though by this time the father of divers children (for at his coming into Egypt with Jacob he was the father of ten, Chap.46.21.) and then (as ſome account his age) he was thirty years old, at the leaſt four or five and twenty.

V.26. We cannot go down] In Chap. 43 ver. 5. Judahs words are, we will not go down, but here rehearſing of them to Joſeph, he ſaith, We cannot go down; this repeating is a kind of repenting or correcting of his phraſe: we will not, hath a ſavour of contumacy in it, we cannot, may agree with filial duty; the former was ſaid to Jacob on a ſudden, the latter upon better advice, as under the awe of a ſuperiour power, of which he was to expect rather juſtice then favour. So we ſee ſecond conſiderations are wiſer then the firſt, and that fear will amend the faults which familiarity commits.

V.27. My wife bare me] He ſaith not my wife Rachel, by way of diſtinction from Leah, but calleth her his wife by way of eminence, as being firſt in his choice, and deareſt in his love, in compariſon of whom the other was no wife, and had been none if there had not been more fraud in her father, then there was love in him towards her, See Chap.46.19.

V.30. Bound up in the lads life] If he came not back, he would think ſome deadly miſchief had befallen him, as he did of Joſeph; and ſuch was the tenderneſs of Jacobs heart, that if Benjamin ſhould dye he could not live: this ſtrength of affection was the weakneſſe of that good man. And commonly the parents are more kind to their children, then their children to them; and ſo there is not oftner an errour of exceſſe on the one ſide, then of defect on the other. But in this pathetick ſupplication and pleading, Judah ſheweth more love to his father and brother, then to himſelf; offering himſelf a priſoner, that Benjamin might go free, and ſo his father may have none occaſion of ſuch grief, as may haſten his death. A good example for ſons, that they ſhew themſelves careful of their parents content, and that they do not (as many do) either by their wickedneſs, diſobedience, or diſſoluteneſs, grieve their hearts, and bring their heads before, or when they be gray, with ſorrow to their graves.

V.31. To the grave] See Annot. on Chap.37.35.

V.34. How ſhall I go] Meaning he had rather remain there priſoner, then return and ſee his father in heavineſs; yea, to ſee him dye for grief of that ill tidings which he ſhould bring, if he came back without his brother Benjamin.

CHAP. XLV.

Ver.1. C*Ould not refrain*] That is, from tears.

go out from me] Not that he was aſhamed of his brethren (for he did own both them, and his father, as is plainly ſhewed afterward) but that he would cover his brethrens fault, which he did, it ſeems, not only from the Egyptians, but from his father alſo; for otherwiſe it is probably conceived, that if Jacob had known it, he would have made an Item upon it among his farewel ſpeeches concerning his ſons, as he did upon the fact of Simeon and Levi, Chap.49. Beſides, it was not ſuitable to the perſon of a man, in place ſo great, and reputed ſo wiſe, to weep before others, according to his natural loudneſſe, which was very great.

V.2. Wept aloud] As he ſhewed great wiſdom in keeping in ſo great affection, without diſcovery until now; ſo now he expreſſed a moſt kind and compaſſionate diſpoſition to his brethren, notwithſtanding their wicked and cruel uſage of him in former times; an excellent patern of a placable heart, eſtranged from revenge, though both their dealing deſerved it, and he had power and opportunity to pay them to the full.

the houſe of Pharaoh heard] Some Egyptians were neer, and heard immediately, but the houſe of Pharaoh had it by report, as ver.16.

V.3. Troubled at his preſence] The ſenſe of guilt,and fear of puniſhment,put them into a ſilent amazement.

V.4. Come neer] It is like Joſeph as a great Lord ſate in ſome ſtate, and his brethren kept a reverend diſtance from him; now he calls them neer, that they might take better notice of him, and he might ſpeak more privately to them, that which was not fit for any other to hear but themſelves.

V.5. Be not grieved] This example teacheth, that we muſt by all means comfort them which are truly humbled and wounded for their ſins, leſt they ſhould be ſwallowed up of too much ſorrow,2 Cor. 2. 7.

for God did ſend] See Annot. on verſ. 8. and Pſal. 105. verſ. 16 17.

V.6. Earing nor harveſt] That is, no tillage, no ſeed ſowen, no harveſt to be reaped, (except in the places neer the banks of Nilus: ſee on Chap.41.34.) becauſe they had not ſtore, and ſtock enough to ſerve for bread and ſeed; and it was to no purpoſe to ſow, when Joſeph by revelation knew there would be no return to recompence the coſt, the earth being by barrenneſs unable to pay not the uſe but the principal alſo; God revealing this unto Joſeph, made him a means of much mercy to thouſands of people, who (but for his providence and proviſion) might have periſhed by famine.

V.8. But God] Albeit God deteſteth ſin, he turneth mans wickedneſſe to ſerve to his glory, as Joſeph ſaith unto his brethren, Ye thought evil againſt me, but God meant it unto good; to bring to paſs (as at this day) to ſave much people alive,Chap.50.20. So that Joſeph in this ſpeech doth not mean to clear his brethren from all fault, but to cheer them up in contemplation of Gods providence, who turned their malice and his miſery, into a means of great mercy. And indeed God is ſo good, that out of the worſt conſpiracies and deeds of the wicked, he can work the greateſt welfare; as from the bloody counſels of Herod and Pilate,and many others againſt our Saviour, Act.4.27. the ſalvation of the Elect, Epheſ.1.7. This may miniſter comfort and confidence againſt the plots and attempts of the wicked; wherein though they mean nothing but miſchief, God can by his omnipotent providence bring forth quite contrary effects to that they intend; and as he brought light out of darkneſſe, 2 Cor.4.6. ſo he can bring peace out of war, quiet and orderly government out of confuſed Rebellion; and the ruine of Antichriſt by that way whereby he hopes to reigne with glory and ſecurity; and this may likewiſe moderate our minds toward the wicked, (as we ſee it did Joſephs towards his brethren) that we neither bear malice to their perſons,nor break out into any unwarrantable dealing towards them.

a father to Pharaoh] That is, a counſellor or teacher; for ſuch an one is called a father, Judg. 17.10,11. For he that counſelleth and teacheth another, doth (if the one be wiſe, the other tractable) rule and govern him, as if he had the authority of a father over him; ſo was it betwixt Joſeph and Pharaoh, Joſeph adviſed, and Pharaoh aſſented, and ſo much regarded his judgement, that in the publick affaires none might move a hand or foot againſt his mind, Chap. 41.44.

V.10. Goſhen] Goſhen was a Province in Egypt ſituate betwixt the River Nilus and the Red Sea, bordering upon the Land of Canaan, it was a fruitful ſoyl, fit for the breeding and increaſe of cattel, where Jacob and his ſons might commodiouſly keep their flocks of ſheep, with leſſe offence to the Egyptians, then any where elſe, Shepherds being generally an abomination to the Egyptians, Gen.46.34. and this promiſe Joſeph maketh to his father, either after particular conference with, and licence from Pharaoh to that purpoſe, or out of confidence of his favourable aſſent,whenſoever the motion ſhould be made unto him; as appeareth, Chap.47.4,6.

thou ſhalt be neer] For the City of On where Joſeph had his chief habitation was neer to Goſhen.

V.12. That it is my mouth] Your eyes and ears may both be witneſſes that I your brother Joſeph ſpake unto you by mine own mouth, without an Interpreter,whom before I uſed,Chap.42.23. and in Hebrew,our native tongue, have I told you ſuch things, as, were I not your brother, I could not tell you.

V.15 Kiſſed alſo his brethren] See Annot. on Chap. 29.11. and on Chap.31.55.

and wept upon them] See Annot.on ver. 2. of this Chapter.

V.16. It pleaſed Pharaoh] It was more eaſie for Pharaoh to be well pleaſed with the coming of Joſephs kindred, becauſe he was too high to envy him or any of them; but it was much that Courtiers were ſo far from envy, as to rejoyce in ſo much grace conferred on a ſtranger favourite, which yet might be but a diſſembled content, and while they ſeemed to honour Joſeph, they might but humour the King.

V.17. And Pharaoh ſaid] Pharaoh for Joſephs ſake, ſheweth himſelf very kind to Joſephs kindred: A good man in honour and favour in the Court, may be a means of much good to many in the countrey.

V.18. The good of the land] That is, the chiefeſt fruits and commodities.

the fat of the land] The Hebrews call that by the name of fat in many things which is the beſt of that kind. See Gen.27.28.

V.20. Regard not your ſtuff] That is, what you cannot conveniently carry with you, do not care to leave it behind you, for you ſhall be furniſhed here with what you ſhall have need of.

V.22. Changes of raiment] That is, (as ſome conceive) a courſe garment for private uſe within the houſe, and a more precious ſuit to wear abroad: Or, change of garments, is ſuch precious garments, as will move a man to change thoſe he had before,to put the old off,and put on theſe,2 King.5 22 Zach.3.4. Or, change of raiment,might be of upper garments,which were not made for any body in particular,but might be indifferently worn by any; ſuch garments they put on often; and it may be they had more need of change, becauſe they uſed in paſſionate grief to tear their cloathes, eſpecially thoſe which covered all the reſt; as Chap.37.29,34. & Chap.44.13. and many other places. Hence it was, that change of garments were not only given in teſtimony of honour,or favour,but as wagers upon conteſtation,or trial of any matter in doubt, as Judg.14.12.

but to Benjamin] He ſheweth more kindneſs to Benjamin,then to any of the reſt; as appeareth not only here,but Chap.43.34. and ver.14. of this Chapter, becauſe he was his brother by both parents; which ſheweth,that the greateſt meaſure of natural affection belongeth to the neereſt degree of natural kindred.

V.23. After this manner] That is,(as ſome conceive)both mony and changes of rayment, in proportion to that he gave unto his brethren, and according to the reſpect he bare unto him; but it is more probable, that after this manner, ſhould be referred to what followeth,then to the particulars forementioned.

V.24. Fall not out by the way] Of this caution there was ſome need, becauſe it was like one would lay the blame on another, and by excuſing on one ſide, and aggravating on another, they might make a quarrel about him, who had remitted all the wrongs, and was now reconciled to them all.

V.26. Jacobs heart fainted] The conflict betwixt hope and doubt, joy and fear, but eſpecially fear prevailing,put Jacob into a ſwooning or fainting fit.

he believed them not] Vehement paſſions,whether of joy, as Luk. 24.41 or of fear, are great impediments to faith; but Jacob here gave the leſs belief unto them, becauſe they had told him a lye, to make him believe that Joſeph was dead, a juſt reward for a Lier, that when he telleth truth, he ſhould not be believed.

V.27. Revived] It is ſaid, his ſpirit revived when he ſaw the wagons, but if he were as dead in a ſwoon before, (and if he were not, how was he revived?) he could not ſee them. Anſw. His fainting, or failing of ſpirit might not be ſo much as to take away his ſenſes; or if it were, they might return before he recovered the livelineſs of his ſpirit,and then ſeeing what was ſent from Egypt,and therby aſſured againſt all doubting, he was cheered up with the belief of Joſephs ſafety and honour, as they had reported it.

V.28. It is enough] Enough content for me that Joſeph lives: and enough for life, if I may be ſo happy as to ſee him once before I dye, Chap.46.30.

CHAP. XLVI.

Verſe 1. B*eerſheba*] A place diſtant from Hebron (where Jacob now dwelt) about eight Germane, or two and thirty Engliſh miles, that it was the ready way from Egypt to Canaan, and the utmoſt part of the Land of Canaan, Southward toward Egypt. The word Beerſheba, ſignifieth the well of the oath, or ſwearing: whereof ſee Annot. on Chap. 21. 31. Here Abraham and Iſaac had dwelled a long time, where they had built Altars, and offered ſacrifices to God many times; and here doth Jacob offer ſacrifice unto him, by way of thankfulneſſe for former mercies,and of ſupplication for further favor in his journey. It is good to have recourſe unto God, which way ſoever we take our courſe in the world.

the God of his father Iſaac] Whereby he ſignified, that he worſhipped the true God, and alſo that he kept in his heart the poſſeſſion of the Land, from whence preſent neceſſity drove him; and he calleth him, the God of his father Iſaac, rather then of Abraham, (though he were his God alſo) becauſe he learned to know him, and ſerve him by his father,and not by his Grandfather. See Annot.on Chap.31.42.

V.2. In the viſion of the night] God watcheth in the night over the welfare of thoſe that ſincerely ſerve him in the day. What this viſion was, and in what manner it was,the Scripture is ſilent, and it becometh not us to be curiouſly inquiſitive after it; but the apparition was no dumb ceremony,for the word of God was joyned with it. Of viſions,ſee Annot. on Chap. 15.1.

Jacob, Jacob] Moſes calleth him Iſrael, and God calleth him Jacob, and that twice together; ſo in the fifth verſe, he is called once Iſrael,and Jacob twice; therefore when the name Iſrael was impoſed,and the name Jacob forbidden,the prohibition was not abſolute, but comparative. See Annot.on Chap 32.28. The doubling of the name was to raiſe up Jacobs attention; as Chap.22.11. & 1 Sam.3.10. and for aſſured confirmation; for there is that uſe of doubling of words,as there is of doubling of dreams Chap.41.32.

V.3 Fear not] Though Jacob had good cauſe to hope well both of his warrant for this journey into Egypt, of his welcome thither, and welfare there; yet his thoughts by the way might ſuggeſt unto him cauſes of fear of many kinds: Firſt, concerning himſelf, he might fear, whether he might lawfully go down into Egypt, though for relief againſt the famine, becauſe Iſaac his father was forbidden to go thither upon the like occaſion, Gen.26. He might fear that being old and feeble, he might dye by the way. 2. Concerning his poſterity; he might apprehend peril both to their ſouls and to their bodies; to their ſouls by Idolatry, becauſe the Egyptians were much addicted to it, (and indeed afterwards it appeared the Iſraelites were infected with it, who learned to worſhip a Calf, of them who worſhipped a Cow; and by diſſoluteneſſe, becauſe it was a pleaſant and fruitful Country, and the people were given to eaſe and delicacy, which corrupt the manners, and incline the mind to ſenſual pleaſures: And for their bodies, knowing the prediction of their ſervitude in that Country, Chap.15.13. he might fear, that now to come down into Egypt, was to make haſte to that miſerable condition, which but too ſoon would come upon them: And thirdly, concerning both, he might happly fear, that going thither, his eyes might ſee that, which would not ſo afflict him, if he kept him thence; and that he and his poſterity going thither, might ſeem to forſake the Land of Promiſe, the pledge of the heavenly Canaan.

there make of thee a great nation] God promiſeth there a great multiplication of his off-ſpring, where he moſt feared their ſuppreſſion; and he made good his word to the full, for they went into Egypt but ſeventy ſouls, Exod.1.5. and there came out of Egypt, of thoſe that came out of Jacobs loins (notwithſtanding the Egyptians did what they could to diminiſh their number) about ſix hundred thouſand men, beſides children, Exod.12.31. which was a miraculous increaſe; eſpecially if we conſider that it was brought forth in the ſpace of two hundred and fifteen years: whereas in two hundred and fifteen years (next before Jacobs deſcending into Egypt,) the poſterity of Abraham by Iſaac and Jacob, was increaſed but to ſeventy perſons: See Deut.10 22.

V. 4. I will go down with thee] Conducting and defending thee by my power, and diſpoſing of thy condition, and thoſe that are thine by my providence; ſo that though I be every where, I will be with thee there in eſpecial favour, to bleſs thee, and thoſe thou bringeſt with thee.

bring thee up again] That is, in thy poſterity; for the Progenitors live in their poſterity who deſcend from them, and are a part of them, eſpecially when God doth good unto them, in the name of their forefathers, and for their ſakes; which is the caſe betwixt Iſrael and his ſeed, who are therefore (though many deſcents removed from him) ſtill called by his name, not onely the children of Iſrael, but Iſrael, in many places of the Scripture, both of the Old and New Teſtament. Beſides, when Jacob was dead, he was brought back, and buried in the Land of Canaan, Chap.50.13. to take poſſeſſion of the promiſe.

his hands upon thine eyes] Shall ſhut thine eyes when thou dieſt; which appertained to him, who was the chief and moſt dearly beloved of the kindred; thus God incourageth Jacob againſt all his fears, and indeed it had been enough (if he had ſaid no more) to cheer him up, and to ſecure him againſt all diſcomforts, that he ſaid, he would go down with him; but out of the abundance of his goodneſs, beſides that moſt gracious, though general promiſe, he tels him that he will bring him (viz. in his poſterity) up again, and that Joſeph ſhall there cloſe up his eyes.

V. 6. gotten in the Land of Canaan] Jacob had gotten much riches in Meſopotamia, but that is not reckoned of, in compariſon of his increaſe in the Land of Canaan: beſides, his children now had ſtocks gotten in Canaan who were not of age to get riches in the Country, from whence he came into that Land: here is no mention of ſervants, yet having ſervants (as ſo great an eſtate could not well be without them) it is not like they left them behind them.

V. 7. his daughters] He had but one daughter of his own, which was Dinah, and but one of his ſons had a child of that ſex, (it was Aſher) and he had but one daughter, to wit, Serah, verſ.17. ſo that here we muſt take the word daughters (by enallage, a figure putting one number for another) for daughter, as ſons for ſon, verſ.23. of this Chapter, which figure is often uſed in the Hebrew Tongue. See Chap 21.7. & 50. v.23. Numb.26.8. 1 Chron.2.8,31.

V. 8. theſe are the names] A regiſter of their names, and the number of their perſons is here brought in at their entrance into Egypt, that it may appear how ſtrangely they were multiplied at their going out of Egypt. See Deut.10.22.

V. 12. Hezron and Hamul] Divers learned Divines (ſome ancient, ſome modern) hold that theſe two ſons of Pharez were born before the coming of Jacob into Egypt, but the exact computation of time, by the ages and acts of ſome deſcendents from him, will not admit of ſuch a maturity of years in Pharez, as that he could be actually a father at that time. The Jews ſay he begat Hezron at nine years old, which moſt will hold improbable; and ſome ſay, is incredible and impoſſible: there being ſuch difficulty in the thing ſo taken, there will be more facility in the phraſe, if we ſay, they came into Egypt in the loynes of their father Pharez, in which they lay hid, as Levi is ſaid to pay tiths in Abraham, Heb.7.9. for if a grandchild may be ſaid to act as in the loynes of a great grandfather, as Abraham to Levi, much more may the like be ſaid of the ſon, as in the loynes of his next precedent parent.

V. 15. thirty and three] Making Jacob himſelf one in this account; as verſ 8.

V. 20. Prieſt of On] See Annot.on Chap.41.v.45.

V. 21. The ſons of Benjamin] Of which are reckoned ten, of ſome whereof may be ſaid as of Hezron and Hamul, for he was but twnety four years old when he came into Egypt.

V. 26. ſoules] That is, perſon, by a Synecdoche familiar and frequent in Scripture, whereby the ſoul, the better part, is put for the whole man: for the ſoule it ſelf cometh not from the loynes of the fathers of our fleſh, but from God the Father of Spirits, Heb. 12.9. Eccleſ. 12.7.

loines] Or, thigh. This is put in modeſty for the part betwixt the thighs, and the rather, becauſe (as Anatomiſts write) there be veines in the thigh, which riſing from the veins of the loins, go along to that part and carry in the matter for the ſeed of generation. Of the modeſt expreſſions of the Scripture, ſee Annot.on Gen.4.1. and the fifth Annot.on Chap.49.10.

threeſcore and ſix] Not reckoning in this number, either Jacob or Joſeph, or his two ſons, who were in Egypt already.

V. 27. threeſcore and ten] (Exod.1.5.& Deut.10.22.) This is made the total ſum of all the houſe of Jacob which came into Egypt, and to make up that number, Jacob, as head of the family, is one, and Joſeph, (though he were in Egypt before) is another, and Joſephs two ſons born in Egypt, are reckoned with them, and all four added to the number of ſixty ſix (noted, verſ.26.) are juſt ſeventy: ſo that this number conſiſts wholly of Jacob and his off-ſpring, whereof all but three came with him into Egypt; of thoſe three, one was Joſeph, who came before, and two came not at all, being born there; yet they that came with him are ſaid to be ſeventy, the total taking its denomination from the greater part, but without any appearance of error or fraud, in that the ſtory ſetteth down plainly, not onely who came with Jacob, but who came not, verſ. 12. and in this verſe & Chap.48.5. In this place there were no great difficulty, but that Act.7.14. Stephen addeth five more to theſe ſeventy, ſaying, Then ſent Joſeph and called his father Jacob unto him, and all his kindred, threeſcore and fifteen ſouls: The Seventy Interpreters, though they keep the juſt number of ſeventy in their Tranſlation of Deut.10.22. yet in this verſe, and Exod.1.5. they make the number to be ſeventy five, which five are Machir the ſon, and Gilead the ſon and nephew, or grandchild of Maneſſes, and Sutalam and Taham, two ſons of Ephraim, and Edom, his grandchild by Sutalam, which they ſeem to have taken as a ſupplement out of 1 Chron.7.14,26. though neither the names nor number well agree; and to the five forenamed, they add two more, ver.29. So that by their account, if they reckon right, they ſhould give in for the full number, not ſeventy five, but ſeventy ſeven. But for that Tranſlation of the Septuagint, which was not free from errours, when it was at the beſt, but now is much more corrupt then it was at firſt, there needs no more ado, but to correct it by the Hebrew Text in this verſe, which muſt be the Standard to all Tranſlations and Teſtimonies. For this matter, that which is more conſiderable, and queſtionable is, How it cometh to paſs, that Stephen ſpeaking of the number, and Saint Luke writing of it, both ſet down no fewer then ſeventy five, Act.7.14. The Doway Tranſlators (in Auguſtines name) making the doubt inſoluble, give it up as a myſtery to meer ſilence; and this the rather, becauſe they would have the Scripture conceived to be ſo hard, that it is not fit to be read by Lay-people; and they that anſwer the objection, either indeavour to clear the greater number from error, or elſe confeſſe it with Caution againſt inconveniences that may enſue upon it: For the firſt, the reconcilement is endeavoured by ſome, by ſaying, that to make up that number, there is uſe of the figure, called Anticipation, whereby they are put in as then brought into Egypt, who were not born until afterwards; who yet might be ſaid to come in with Jacob, becauſe they were once in his loyns who came thither, though not then when he came in, their Father being both born, and in Egypt alſo, before the time of Jacobs removal: ſo Levi is ſaid to pay tithes to Melchiſedec in Abraham, Heb.7.9. though he were not till at leaſt an hundred and fifty years after their time; and Leah is ſaid to bear unto Jacob thirty three ſons and daughters, v.15. of this Chap. and Zilpah to bear unto Jacob ſixteen ſouls, v.18. wheras they were not all their immediate children, but many of them grandchildren, for which they never groaned; for they had other mothers, both to conceive and bear them; and of thoſe who are reckoned for the children of Benjamin, and are of the number of the ſeventy, that came into Egypt, Naaman and Ard, named, verſ.21. were grand-children to Benjamin; the ſonnes of Bela Numb.26.40. and were born after Jacobs coming into Egypt, for Benjamin was then too young to be a grandfather, when he came thither; but there is this relation betwixt the progenitors and their off-ſpring, that as the children are included in their parents, ſo the parents are ſometimes included in their children; as where God cheering up Jacob concerning his journy, telleth him, that he will not only go down with him into Egypt, but that he will alſo bring him up again into Canaan, ver.4. which is principally to be underſtood of him in his poſterity. See Ann.on ver.4. Obj. But if thoſe five be added, becauſe they were virtully in the loyns of Jacob, there might be added as well five thouſand, yea, ſix hundred thouſand, to which the Iſraelites encreaſed in Egypt, Exod.12.37. as hath been noted on verſ. 3. for all theſe alſo were virtually included in Jacobs loynes. Anſw. That will not follow: Firſt, becauſe the ſcope of this genealogy was to diſtinguiſh the Tribes, and to ſhew from how ſmall a number they increaſed to ſo great a multitude. Secondly, that being the purpoſe, it muſt be confined to a certain number, and that number made up of ſuch as either were, or might be, of one family; as the father, ſon, grandchild, and great grandchild, which Jacob might ſee before he died. And of theſe the moſt being ſuch as he brought with him out of Canaan, they might all in reference to Jacob be ſorted to his company. Some conceive that beſides Jacob, and thoſe that are reckoned as deſcended from him, there might be added five women of his company, who were wives. If this do not ſatisfie, the other anſwer is the confeſſion of errour, and that is diverſly applied. Firſt, to the Septuagint. Secondly, to thoſe that copied out the Scripture at the Firſt. Thirdly, to Stephen. Fourthly, to Luke. Firſt, for the Seventy Interpreters in the Old Teſtament, though divers Popiſh Doctors hold they were inſpired by the Holy Ghoſt (and ſo make their tranſlation of unqueſtionable authority) yet it is, eſpecially as now it is extant, very erroneous, and in this point in queſtion contradictory to it ſelf; for Deut.10.22. they render the Originall right by the word Hebdome conta, which ſignifieth Seventy, but here & Exod.1.5. they add five more. 2. Thoſe that Copied out the New Teſtament being ignorant of the Hebrew, might either corrupt the Greek Original, by conforming it to the Text of the Septuagint, which was in much uſe and account, even in the time of our Saviour; or might miſtake the word Pente, five for Pantes, all; and this if it were their errour, was very ancient, elſe it could never have been ſo general; nor would the Syriack Tranſlation have ſeventy five; (as the Septuagint hath) and that for the New Teſtament is ſo ancient, that in time it came very neer the Original, and is thought by ſome to have been made in the time of the firſt Antiochian Chriſtians. Thirdly, for Saint Stephen, ſome conceive he related the ſtory of Jacob's coming into Egypt, according to the Tranſlation of the Seventy Interpreters, which was in much uſe and eſtimation in his time, and which, as hath been ſaid, brings in the number with variation, for it twice reckons ſeventy five, and but once Seventy; which whether it may be imputed to Stephens ignorance of the Hebrew, as ſome ſay, or (confeſſing that he underſtood and ſpake Hebrew at that time, as others, both by conjecture onely) to his unwillingneſs to contradict a Tranſlation ſo accounted of by the believing Greeks, or that the addition of five muſt be underſtood, as hath been formerly ſet down, is not eaſie to reſolve; and in caſe he ſhould miſtake the Tranſlation for the Original Text, and ſo be in an errour (which is the worſt that can be made of the colliſion, or oppoſition betwixt this place, and Act.7.14.) the matter is not ſo dangerous, as ſome conceive it; for though Stephen were ſaid to be a man full of the Holy Ghoſt, Act.6.5.& Chap.7.55. yet that is no more then was required for qualification of all the ſeven Deacons, Act.6.3. Nor was he an enſpired Pen-man of the Scripture, more then any of the reſt of that ranke; nor were the Apoſtles alwayes, or equally inlightned by the Holy Ghoſt, though the ſame phraſe be uſed of them, which is applyed to Stephen (as of Peter, Act.4.8. and of Paul, Act.9.17.) and that in a ſenſe importing more infallible aſſiſtance, for Peter, who could tell by the Holy Ghoſt, that Ananias, and Sapphira told a lye, Act.5.3.9. was not told by the Holy Ghoſt, what buſineſſe the men had with him that came from Cornelius, Act.10.21. Nor did he know the meaning of the viſion of the veſſel like unto a ſheet, when it was ſhewed unto him, ver.17. and when God ſpake to him to kill, and eat of that which was preſented to him, he anſwered (not by inſtinct of the Holy Ghoſt, but rather as reſiſting it) not ſo Lord, ver.14. Nor was he ſo guided by the Spirit as Paul was, when he deſerved ſuch a ſharp rebuke, as Paul gave him to his face, Gal.2. from ver.11. to the 15 Nor was Paul alwayes in the ſame ſort aſſiſted by the Holy Ghoſt, and therefore he diſtinguiſheth betwixt direction given by himſelfe, and that which cometh by inſpiration from the Lord, 1 Cor.7. verſ.10.12. See Annot.on Chap.40. verſ.14. It is not necaſſary then to believe, that Stephen was infallibly aſſiſted in all he ſaid in his Apology to the Councel; and if he did either not know the Original Hebrew, which ſaith ſeventy ſoules; or cited the erroneous Greek of the Septuagint, not knowing it to be erroneous in a matter of ſo ſmall moment as this, (which in effect is of no great weight for faith, or manners) ſince he was neither an Amanuenſis, or Scribe to the Holy Ghoſt; nor delivered that number of ſeventy five, as a Dictate of the Holy Ghoſt, the miſpriſion is no prejudice at all to the truth of Religion, or to the Authority of the holy Text, on which we are bound to ground our belief. Fourthly, and laſtly, for Luke, (though ſome think him as ignorant of the Hebrew Text in this Chapter, and Exod.1.5. & Deut.10.22. Or as complying with the times, wherein the Greek Edition of the Seventy was in great reputation) I doubt not but without any ſuch excuſe, as binds to the impeachment of his authority, (as this doth) we may ſay, that though Stephen were miſtaken, he was not; for as an Hiſtorian, he was bound to make the report according to Stephens ſpeech; which be it good or bad, true or falſe, muſt in hiſtorical truth be related, as it was; and ſo we need not conceive there was any corruption of the Sacred Text, whereof we ought to be more chary then of Stephens credit, when it is no more concerned, or impeached, then in the premiſes hath been ſhewed; for to ſay that it is erroneous, generally erroneous in all, or in moſt of the Copies in this place, is to bring the whole Bible under doubt and ſuſpition of error, and ſo to ſhake the foundation of our faith; and if the Tranſcribers of the New Teſtament might juſtly here be ſuſpected, ſo generally to have miſ-written that Text, Act.7.14. it had been requiſite by the Hebrew Original, in this place, to have corrected it, how ancient ſoever the errour had been, whether of the Syriack, or any other Language whatſoever. But ſuppoſing Stephen to have ſpoken (as hath been noted) and Luke to have truely written what he ſpake, there can be no inference made from that, which we may not ſafely acknowledg, without diminution of due reſpect to, and with reſervation of infallible aſſiſtance in the holy Scripture. Object. If it be ſaid, that God promiſed ſuch aſſiſtance of his Spirit, to thoſe that ſhould be called in queſtion for his Cauſe, (as Stephen was) that they ſhould not need to take any thought for what they ſhould ſay, Luk.12.11. And ſo what they ſaid muſt be taken, not for an humane, but for a Divine anſwer; and conſequently, muſt of neceſſity be free from errour. Anſw. Thoſe words are no general promiſe, to every one that is drawn to the Bar of an unchriſtian Tribunal, but to the Apoſtles, as is plain by Matth.10.19. And though God might, and doubtleſs did, many times inſpire apologies into the hearts of other holy Witneſſes of his truth; yet this promiſe in regard of perſons, and of perpetuity, was the peculiar priviledg of the Apoſtles.

V.28. to direct his face] That is, to meet him at Goſhen, and to appoint a convenient place for that purpoſe.

V. 29. he fell on his neck] That is, Jacob fell on Joſephs neck; for Joſeph, notwithſtanding his greatneſs in Egypt, no doubt came down to perform the offices belonging to the affections of a ſon, and ſo in that poſture Jacob fell on his neck, and wept over him with tears of exceeding great joy. See chap 45.1. Luk.15.29.

V. 30. let me dye] See Annot.on Chap.45 verſ.28. Luk.2.29.

V. 31. unto him, My brethren] He was not aſhamed of his kindred, though they were of mean condition in the opinion of the Egyptians: See Chap.47.7. In this Joſeph was a Type of our Saviours humility, who though he were Lord, not of Egypt, but of all Lands, and of Heaven, as well as of Earth; was not aſhamed to call the meaneſt of the godly, brethren Heb.2.11.

V. 34. in the land of Goſhen] Herein Joſeph ſheweth his modeſtie, prudence, and goodneſſe, in that he would not place them in the Court where they might be corrupted with ill manners, but where they might be freeſt from idolatry and reproach of the Egyptians, and whence they might with moſt eaſe remove back to their promiſed Land.

abomination] God ſuffereth the world to hate his, that they may forſake the filth of the world, and cleave to him: and they were an abomination, becauſe they did kill and eat thoſe creatures, which the Egyptians did adore as gods: See Exod.8 26. Yet the Egyptians nouriſhed ſuch cattel, though not for meat, or ſacrifice, yet for delight and profit, by their milke and wooll, and manuring of the ground, and by paſſing them by bargain and commerce. See Annot.on Chap.43.v.32. Exod 8.26. &.9.3.

CHAP. XLVII.

Verſ.1. MY father and my brethren] See Annot. on Chap.46. verſ. 31.

in the land of Goſhen] Pharaoh made a frank offer of all the Land of Egypt for their choice and uſe, Gen.45. verſ.18, 20. and it ſeemeth Goſhen was moſt commodious for them, both as neereſt unto Canaan, and freeſt from offence to the Egyptians; to whom ſhepherds (and ſuch were Jacob and his children) were an abomination, Chap 46. verſ.34. and here they were placed at firſt, by vertue of that general power which Joſeph had in all the Land of Egypt, or by Pharaoh his profeſſed favour, Gen.45. v.18.20. but afterward this Land, upon the requeſt of Joſephs brethren, was by particular allowance, the place of their abode. See Annot.on Chap.45.v. 10.

V. 2. Some of his brethren] Hebr. Of the extremity of his brethren, they were five in number; but which five they were, is not ſet down, though ſome Jews take upon them to tell them by name, as the Papiſts do by the Wiſe-men, that came by the guidance of a Star to worſhip our Saviour. Some think becauſe of the word Extremity, or the laſt, or outſide of his brethren, that he took five of the eldeſt, or five of the youngeſt, which were the extremes, and left the middlemoſt; others conceive he made no choyce at all, but took ſuch as came firſt, or were readieſt when he required their preſence before Pharaoh: others think he made choyce of the worſt, ſuch as might be leaſt like to be taken for his ſervants, or to be made Courtiers, where to he was unwilling, becauſe he was loath to adventure them upon the corruption of the Court: others, that he made choyce of ſuch as were moſt graceful, and leaſt liable to ſcorn, or contempt of curious or envious Courtiers: But he made choyce of ſuch as himſelf beſt liked, and were fitteſt to be brought into the preſence of the King: and this he did, that the King might be aſſured they were come, and might ſee what manner of men they were.

V.3. What is your Occupation] A meet queſtion for a Magiſtrate to ask, to which they that cannot give a reaſonable anſwer, are to be ſuſpected to be idle, and ill conditioned perſons, for he that hath no lawfull calling to follow, is looſe and at leiſure to be taken into the Devils ſervice; the ground that is not tilled will bring forth noyſome weeds, and the ſtanding Pool (not the running River) will ſoon ſtink; and if the Sea did not work, and were not in continual motion to purge it ſelf, it would corrupt the ayr; and the ayr (but that winds do fan and purifie it by moving it to and fro) would be infectious. So it is with thoſe that are idle, they are moſt commonly vicious in themſelves, and the cauſes of corruption unto others; therefore have the wiſeſt States made the ſtricteſt Lawes againſt idle perſons, whoſe ſeverity is virtually approved by the Apoſtle, comdemning idleneſſe as a capital crime, to the pain of death, yea, to one of the worſt of deaths, famine; enacting, as the foundamental law of a Bride-Well, He that will not labour let him not eat, 2 Theſſ.3.10.

ſhepherds] Heb. A ſhepherd, in the ſingular number, that is, every one of us is a ſhepherd; the like Enallage, or joyning the ſingular number with the plural, ſee Gen.27 29.

V.4. No paſture] In Canaan there was a failing of the paſture ſooner then in Egypt, becauſe that is an higher ground then Egypt; and Goſhen is the lower part of Egypt, and ſo better ſtored with water, both in the ground it ſelf, and by ditches and gutters deriving it from Nilus.

Let thy ſervants dwell] This requeſt of Joſephs brethren was made no doubt by his direction; wherein his modeſty appeareth, in that he would not take upon him to ſettle them there without the Kings allowance. See Annot. on ver.1.

V.6. Is before thee] That is, open to thee for thy free choyce; and ſince they deſire to dwell in the Land of Goſhen, let them dwell there.

Of activity] Pharaoh would not ſet over his cattel any one that was not meetly qualified for the ſufficient overſight of them; much more curious choyce ſhould be made of thoſe who muſt have the overſight of the flock of Gods paſture, who are men, Ezek.34.21. then of the flocks of ſheep, or heards of cattel.

V.7. Brought in Jacob his father] See Annot. on Chap.46.31.

Jacob bleſſed Pharaoh] That is, prayed for him, as Num.6.23,24 Rom.12.14. and gave thanks to him for his great favour to Joſeph, and to himſelfe, and to the reſt of his ſons, praiſing him for his beneficence to them; for the word Bleſſing, is uſed in that ſenſe, Epheſ.1.3. Jam.3.9. and in many other places.

V.9 Of my pilgrimage] That is, variable abode, or ſojourning; ſuch is the life and condition of all the faithful in this world, who account themſelves as Pilgrims and ſtrangers here, 1 Chr.29.15. Pſal 39.12.& 119.9. Heb.11.13. and heaven to be their home, (which is meant by the Apoſtle, Heb.13.14.) to which they are travelling every day: yet Jacobs condition was a Pilgrimage, in reſpect of frequent changing of his dwelling, as from Canaan to Meſopotamia, Chap.28.5. from Meſopotamia to Canaan again, Chap.31. verſ.17.18. and in Canaan from Succoth to Sechem, Chap.33.18. from Sechem to Bethel, Chap.35.6. from Bethel to Ephrath, ver.16. form Ephrath to Hebron, ver.27. from Hebron to Egypt, Chap.46. which muſt be remembred by ſuch as by croſſes are occaſioned to ſhift from place to place, wherein they may take comfort, if their affections be as like unto the Patriarch Jacobs, as their condition; ſince God dealeth none otherewiſe with them, then with ſuch as he dearly loveth.

An hundred and thirty yeares] By a Chronological comparing of places, not onely the age of Jacob in ſome remarkable Paſſages of his life is to be obſerved, but the ages likewiſe of his children; Jacob when he was brought before Pharaoh was an hundred and thirty years old, that being the third year (though not compleat) of the Famine, Chap 45.6 Joſeph was then betwixt thirty nine, and fourty years old, for ſeven years before the Famine began, he was thirty years old, Gen. 41.46. ſo that he was born the 91. the year of Jacobs age, and the fourteenth year of his ſervice under Laban, which began in the ſeventy ſeventh year of his age; and Jacob now being an hundred and thirty years old, and Joſeph about nine and thirty, Reuben was about ſix and fourty, &c.

few and evill] (Job 14.1.) Few, in compariſon of many of his forefathers; evil, in reſpect of his manifold croſſes, which ſome reckon to ſeven, ſome to ten.

years of the life of my fathers] For his father Iſaac lived to an hundred eighty years of age, Chap 35 28. his grandfather Abraham to one hundred ſeventy five, Chap.25.7.

V.10 bleſſed Pharaoh] It is like that as his firſt ſalutation was with a bleſſing, ſo was his farewel. See Annot. on ver.7.

V.11. the land of Rameſes] That is not a Town, or a City, (though there were a City of that name built a good while after this by the Iſraelites, Exod.1.11.) but a ſpeciall part of the Province of Goſhen, (as an Hundred within a County) where Jacob and his ſons were firſt placed by themſelves, but afterward multiplying into a great number, they ſpread further, and had Egyptian families neer unto them, and among them; whence it was that the Angels diſtinguiſhed their doors by the ſprinkling of blood, Exod.12.7,23. and that the Iſraelites departing borrowed jewels of their neighbours the Egyptians, Exod.12.verſ.35,37.

V.12. according to their families] Or, as a little child is nouriſhed. Heb. even to the mouth of the little one. That is, from the greateſt to the leaſt; or with ſuch tenderneſſe as that wherewith a Nurſe feedeth her little one; or with as little care, or pains to Jacob and his off-ſpring, as children uſe in providing for themſelves: a figurative ſpeech, importing Joſephs great care for them, and their ſecure confidence for proviſion by his means; there was an evident proof of Gods gracious providence, in ſuſtaining his Church with fulneſs among ſtrangers, and by their Religion enemies unto it, when they themſelves were ſcanted in allowance.

V.13. the land —— fainted] That is, the people of the Land.

V.14. all the money] He went not into Canaan to gather money, but that which was brought out of Canaan to buy corn withal, and the money wherewith the Egyptians bought their proviſion, he brought unto Pharaoh; wherein he declareth his fidelity toward the King, and his mind free from covetouſneſſe.

V.18. the ſecond year] Not the ſecond year of the famine, (for it was the ſixth year) but the ſecond of thoſe extreme hard years, wherein they were put to the greateſt ſtraits to procure proviſion, not having any money after the ordinary manner of commerce to buy it, the firſt year of ſuch ſtraits was the fifth year, when the people (all their money being ſpent) bought bread with fleſh, giving their flocks, and herds in exchange for corn; this is reckoned for the firſt year of their extremity, and this year ended, they came the next year after, (which is reckoned the ſecond year) and ſet themſelves, and their lands to ſale for bread.

V.19. we and our land] The Land cannot properly be ſaid to dye; but as death is the deſtruction of man for this life, ſo the deſtruction and deſolation of the Land is a kind of death to it; and it may be ſaid to be deſolate, when either it wants ſeed to be ſowen upon it, or men to dwell in it, as when men have eaten up the corn that came of it, and the ground hath eaten up the men that dwelt upon it; and as trees while they bear fruit are ſaid to live, ſo may the ground; and fruitleſneſs and barrenneſſe is a kind of death to both.

give us ſeed] That as to the moſt might be corn for bread, (for that which is for ſeed will ſerve for bread) but to ſome who had ground upon the banks of Nilus, it might be of uſe to ſow for increaſe; for there only was hope, though no abundance to be expected.

V.20. Joſeph bought all] How excellent are thoſe creatures in their want, which when they abound are eſteemed as baſe, and waſted in abuſe? now the famine is grievous, corn is precious, and worthy to be bought with money, goods, lands, liberties, and all; for without it men cannot live, and what ſervice can all theſe things do a man when he is dead? God doth both wiſely, and juſtly, when by ſuch reſtraint he makes men know the worth of what they had, by the want thereof.

V.21. from one end of the borders] Having gotten their lands for corn, he made them change their habitations, that they might not plead an ancient poſſeſſion, and might with more chearfulneſſe pay their rent, which they would more willingly do in thoſe places, where they were but new commers, then in thoſe whereof they had been ancient owners. It may ſeem ſtrange, that ſo many being pinched with famine, would have the patience to part firſt with their money, then with their cattel; laſtly with their lands, and liberties; and that they did not mutinouſly meet, and violently break upon the Barnes, or ſtorehouſes where the corn was kept; this was the effect of Joſephs prudence, but eſpecially of Gods power, and providence, which ſtilleth the noiſe of the ſea, and the tumult of the people, Pſal.65.7. Queſt. But did not Joſeph deal injuriouſly, or uncharitably with them, by ſuch advantages of their neceſſities to ingroſs all their goods, and to inthrall all their perſons? To that it may be anſwered; Firſt, that Joſeph was the means under God, to ſave their lives, (as themſelves acknowledged, verſ.25.) from an horrible death, and therefore by him they received more good, then hurt. Secondly, the corn he ſold was the Kings, at leaſt the moſt part of it, and Joſeph was, in fidelitie to him, to take a valuable recompence for it. Thirdly, he did this with favovr, for though they ſold themſelves for corn, he reſtored their libertie. Fourthly, whereas he might have taken halfe or four parts, and left them but the other half, or one of five, he allowed them four parts, and conditioned but for a fifth unto the King, verſ.24. which was no more then was laid up in the yeares of plenty, Chap 41. verſ.34.

V.22. Only the land of the Prieſts] This proceeded not from Joſephs care (for he would not be ſo reſpective of Idolatrous Prieſts) but from Pharaohs; and yet the land of the Prieſts might the rather be kept from alienation, becauſe Potipherah, Joſephs father in law, was Prieſt of On; for whoſe ſake he is ſuppoſed by ſome to have favoured all the Prieſts; but in this indulgence though Joſeph had an hand, he had no heart; but as an Officer of Pharaoh, made an order, or drew up a ſentence, for reſervation of the rights and revenues of the Prieſts, which had been anciently allowed them by the good liking of Prince and people, throughout the whole land: the caſe is much alike among the reformed Chriſtians in France, who pay their tythes to the Idolatrous Prieſts of the Romiſh Religion, becauſe they are not left at liberty to withhold them from their hands: This, though it make not for the Popiſh opinion of exemption of the Clergy from the Secular power, (for which they plead by this example) yet it condemns the irreligion of many chriſtians, who ſhew little reverence or reſpect, if not much uncharitableneſſe, and contempt toward the Miniſters of the Goſpel, againſt whom the men of Egypt in the Day of judgment ſhall riſe up and condemn them, as the men of Nineveh, againſt thoſe that regarded not the preaching of our Saviour, Mat.12.41. See Ezr.7.24.

V.23 Seed for you, and you ſhall ſow] This was the laſt of the ſeven years of famine, and the next yeer was to begin with the return of former fruitfulneſs.

V.25. Pharaohs ſervants] Tilling the Land as his Farmers and Tenants, and not making claim to any as of our proper right, according to our title and poſſeſſion in former times.

V.29. Thy hand under my thigh] See Annot. on Chap.24 2.

V.30. But I will lye] Heb I will ſleep. Which may be meant with reference to the reſurrection of the dead; which ſome Papiſts (with the Sadduces) ſay, it cannot be proved out of the Books of Moſes; but here ſleeping implyeth a waking again, and death is the ſleep, reſurrection an awaking from that ſleep.

with my fathers] Jacob had no mind of the company of Idolaters, neither living nor dead. See Annot on Chap.23.9. And he deſired to be buried with his fathers for many reaſons; as firſt, becauſe there was the true worſhip of God moſt to flouriſh: ſecondly, thither his poſterity were to direct their thoughts with expectation of return out of Egypt: thirdly, there the Sepulcher of their worthy progenitors might be an incitement to them to the imitation of their lives, and preparation for their ends: laſtly, becauſe Chriſt was in that Country to lead his life, and to take his death, and thence to riſe and raiſe himſelf to the higheſt heavens.

V.31. Swear unto me] By exacting an oath of Joſeph, he doth not ſo much ſhew a miſtruſt of his ſimple promiſe, if he had not ſworne, as expreſſe his own ſerious deſire to be buried out of Egypt; and the rather, that Joſeph might do it with leſſe offence to the Egyptians, who, though they would not like the carrying away of Jacobs corps, could not but allow of Joſephs keeping of his oath.

bowed himſelf] Some conceive it was to turn himſelf towards the Eaſt, or toward Canaan; others that he bowed towards Joſeph, as to a great Lord of the Land of Egypt: but firſt, whatſoever Joſeph was in relation to Pharaoh, in which reſpect (according to his dream) his father was to do homage unto him; yet as Jacobs ſon, and in his fathers family, he was more ready to perform ſuch an homage to him, (as appeareth ver.12.) then to expect any from him. Secondly, Jacob being very devout, eſpecially drawing neer his end, it is reaſonable to take his bowing to be religious, ſince at this time chiefly he had (no doubt) many things in his mind, which might be matter both of prayer to God, and of praiſes of God; and though he were aged and weak, he would not preſent his devotion to God without an outward expreſſion of humility. See Annot. on chap. 17.3.

upon the beds head] (1 King.1.47) Or, on the top of his ſtaffe: So the Seventy Interpreters turn the Hebrew word; and the Apoſtle in the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes followeth their Tranſlation, Heb.11.21. It ſeemeth the Seventy followed a Copy which had no points, for the ſame letters varied in one vowel ſtand for both; for Mitteh, is a bed, Matteh, a ſtaff, the former is preferred, and ſeemeth the rather to be the right, becauſe the ſame word is uſed in the ſame ſenſe again, Chap.48. 2. This difference when it was debated by the Compoſers of the laſt Tranſlation of the Engliſh Bibles, one of them would have had both readings joyned together thus, Iſrael bowed himſelf upon his bed-ſtaff; but that opinion prevailed not: while he thus bowed, it was not (for ought appeareth either in this Text, or any part of Jacobs ſtory) with any reſpect to the Eaſt, or towards the Land of Canaan, but his outward geſture, with his inward worſhip, were both immediately directed towards God.

CHAP. XLVIII.

Ver.1. W*ith him his two ſons*] To profeſs a dutiful reſpect unto their venerable grandfather, and to receive his bleſſing at his farewel from the world.

V.2. Strengthned himſelf] The approach of his moſt honoured and moſt beloved ſon Joſeph, ſo affected his heart and quickened his ſpirits, that he could raiſe up himſelf from lying to ſitting, as if a new degree of ſtrength had been put into him.

V.3. At Luz] See Annot. on Chap.28 19.

V.4. An everlaſting poſſeſſion] Which may be underſtood literally, in reſpect of the carnal ſeed of Iſrael, and the earthly Canaan; but then it muſt be taken with condition of keeping Covenant with God, and ſpiritually, in reſpect of the true Iſraelites, (who are the faithful only) and the heavenly Canaan, which is indeed an everlaſting poſſeſſion in the moſt literal and ſtrongeſt acception of the word everlaſting, for both the place it ſelf, heaven, is everlaſting, and ſhal never either periſh, or be impaired, and the poſſeſſion is everlaſting to thoſe that once make entrance into it, for once admitted thither, they ſhall never be excluded thence. See on chap.17 8.

V.5. Ephraim and Manaſſeh] Joſeph names them otherwiſe, Manaſſeh and Ephraim, according to their birth, (for Manaſſeh was the elder, ver.14) but Jacob putteth Ephraim firſt, according to the pre-eminence of his bleſſing. See ver.19.

are mine, as Reuben and Simeon] That is, as if they were not my grandchildren, but immediate ſons unto me, yea two of mine eldeſt ſons, as Reuben and Simeon are; and they ſhall be particular Tribes, Num.1.32,34. as none of the children of mine other ſons ſhall be, and ſhall have their diſtinct portion in the land of Canaan: and ſo in them two thou ſhalt have a double portion, and therewith the prerogative of the birth-right, which Reuben by defiling his fathers bed hath forfeited, 1 Chron. 5.1. this giving to the eldeſt a double portion (as many other things forementioned Chap.38.24.) being in practice among the Patriarchs before Moſes his time, was afterwards put into a law, Deut.21.17.

V.6. which thou begetteſt after them] Joſeph at that time had no more children, but theſe two, Manaſſeh, and Ephraim, and whether he had any afterward, it is uncertain; the Scripture ſaith nothing of them, though Jacobs words imply, either that already he had, or in aftertimes was to have others. But we need not be inquiſitive after them, ſince if he had any more, they were to be ſorted (as his grandchildren were) to one of the two Tribes of his forementioned ſons, and to be called after their names in their inheritance, either Ephraimites, or Manaſſites.

V.7. as for me] The preſence of Joſeph put Jacob into a ſtronger apprehenſion of his moſt beloved mother Rachel, which affected him much, and moved him to ſay, as for me, making mention of her death, that lay cloſe to his heart, and was remembred and loved as himſelf.

Rachel dyed by me] He maketh mention of her, not onely becauſe his mind was ſo much ſet upon her that he could not forget her, (though dead long before) but partly to intimate a reaſon in her name, why he bequeathed the birthright to Joſephs children, which might be becauſe Rachel in right was his firſt wife, and (had his father in law done him right) Joſeph had been his firſt-born; and partly to give a reaſon why loving her ſo well, he did not bury her there where his anceſtors were buried, and where he meant to be laid himſelf; the reaſon hereof was the urgent neceſſity of her burial neer Bethlehem, who dying in child-bed by the way, could not well be kept unburied untill ſhe could be brought (eſpecially by the ſlow pace of the flocks) unto the Sepulchre of the Patriarchs.

in the way of Ephrath] This is remembred to make Joſeph more willing to bury Jacob with his fathers, in the peculiar buriall place ſeparate from participation with Idolaters; for though it were but a little way to Ephrath or Bethlehem, from the place where Rachel dyed, Jacob choſe rather to bury her in the way, then to bring her body to be laid up among the Sepulchers of Idolaters. See Annot. on Chap.23.9.

V.8. ſaid, who are theſe] He had named them before, verſ.5. but did either not ſee them, or not well deſcern them, by reaſon of the dimneſſe of his ſight, verſ.10. they might be at this time about twenty years old.

V.9. God hath given] The faithful acknowledge that is the gift of God, which carnal men do moſt account to come of themſelves.

I will bleſſe them] The bleſſing of Jocob, as of Iſaac, and Abraham, was more then a meer apprecation of proſperity; for ſo may the leſſer bleſſe the greater, and ſo any one may bleſſe another; but there was more in it then ſo, for it was guided with an eſpecial energy, or operation of Gods Spirit, and ſo ratified by God, as ordinary bleſſings were not. See Gen.27.33.

V.11. I had not thought——and loe] God croſſeth the conceits of his children to their great comfort, and is good unto them far beyond their expectation; Jacob thought never to have ſeen the face of Joſeph, and now he ſeeth both him and his ſons.

V.12. from between his knees] Joſeph ſitting down, his two ſons kneeled before him betwixt his knees, whom now he brought neerer to their grandfather, and ſet them in a convenient poſture to receive his patriarchal benediction of their grandfather, with impoſition of his hand upon them. See the firſt Annot. on ver.14.

he bowed himſelf] This bowing of Joſeph might be ceremonial to his father, and religious towards God upon different grounds and motives; ſo the people bowed down their heads and worſhipped the Lord and the King, 1 Chr.29.20.

V.13. toward Iſraels right hand] The right hand hath the preeminence of the left, becauſe it is ſtronger, and more active, (although with ſome people, as with the Turks, the left be the better hand) eſpecially among ſouldiers, becauſe it giveth a man ſome power over his adverſaries weapons, commonly worn on the left ſide; and leaſt Paul ſhould be thought to have the preeminence of Peter, as being placed in a picture or tablet on Peters right hand, ſome Papiſts will have in Eccleſiaſtical matters the left hand to be better, though in civil the dignity belongeth to the right; but that is refuted by this inſtance; for bleſſing is an Eccleſiaſticall, not a Civill thing.

V.14. Stretched out his right hand] Here we find the firſt mention of impoſition of hands, which was afterward often uſed; Firſt, in benediction, as Mat.19.13. Secondly, in offerings, Lev.1.4. Thirdly, in teſtification or witneſſe-bearing, and aſſenting, Lev.24.14. Deut.17.7. Fourthly, in extraordinary collation, or beſtowing of gifts and graces, Act.8.17. Fifthly, in miraculous cures, Mark.6.5. Luke.4.40. Act.28. 8. Sixthly, in admiſſion, and ordination of Magiſtrates and Church-officers, Num.8.10. Deut.34.9. Act.6.6. & 13.3. 1 Tim.4.14. This ceremony is uſed in the ordinary Ordination of Paſtors of the Church, neither as implying a power to communicate the gifts of the Spirit, nor for any myſtical, or ſacramental ſignification in that ceremony, but that the party ordained may be notified to the eye by the hand, as well as to the ear by the tongue.

upon Ephraims head] 1. Becauſe from him were to deſcend the Kings of the ten Tribes. Secondly, This Tribe in glory and number was to be ſuperiour to the Tribe of Manaſſeh, as Jacob foretold, ver.19. Thirdly, Becauſe of Ephraim was Joſhua to ſpring, who was to conduct the people into Canaan, wherein he was a Type of Chriſt.

Guiding his hands wittingly] Heb. Making his hand to underſtand. Feeling with his hands which was the fuller and bigger, he wittingly laid his right hand upon the head of Ephraim the younger, and ſo transferred the birth-right to him from the elder to the younger, as his father had done from Eſau to him, Chap.27. and therefore when the Tribes are numbred, Ephraim is mentioned by the name of Joſeph, Numb.1.32,34. and Manaſſeh by his own name, ver. 34. and Rev. 7.6. So in the ſealing of the Tribes it is ſaid, Of the Tribe, not of Ephraim, but of Joſeph, were ſealed twelve thouſand, Rev. 7.8. intimating that Joſephs prerogative deſcended upon Ephraim, not upon Manaſſeh. The Doway Tranſlators in their Annotations on this place, would have it believed that Jacob croſſed his hands in bleſſing his grand-children, to prefigure the form of the Croſs, and Chriſt dying upon it; whereas it is plain, that Joſeph having placed his ſons ſo, that Ephraim was ſet next his fathers left hand, and Manaſſeh next his right hand, Jacob meaning to beſtow the bleſſing otherwiſe then Joſeph conceived, and had plotted in the poſture of them both, was occaſioned to lay his armes acroſs, that he might put his right hand upon the head of Ephraim, and his left upon Manaſſeh.

V.16. The Angel] The word Angel here, muſt be underſtood of Chriſt (who is called an Angel, Mal.3.1. and Exod.23.20,21) not of a created Angel, for a created Angel did not redeem him from all evil, as he ſaith of him in this verſe.

let my name be named] That is, let them be named the ſons or ſeed of Jacob or Iſrael. See Iſai.14.1. Jer.14.9. Some Papiſts from hence would infer the Invocation of the deceaſed Saints, and preſenting prayers and ſupplications to them; but others more learned (though Papiſts alſo) acknowledg an Hebraiſm in the phraſe, and expound it in the ſenſe forementioned.

multitude] As fiſhes do increaſe, as the Hebrew phraſeth it; for they multiply exceedingly, and ſo did theſe ſons of Joſeph, for of them in Moſes his time were numbred eighty five thouſand and two hundred men meet for war, Num. 26. 34, 37. which is above the increaſe of any of the Tribes, reckoning Manaſſeh and Ephraim as both reduced to Joſeph, and deſcended from him, for none of his brethren in number of their iſſue were equal to his Tribe.

V. 17. It diſpleaſed him] Joſeph failed in binding Gods grace to the order of nature. He was for the eldeſt ſons preeminence, but Gods bleſſings go not by a carnal ſeniority, but by ſpirituall grace, and choyce; ſo Abel, Seth, Sem, Abraham, Iſaac, Jacob, Judah, and Joſeph, Moſes, David, Solomon, being younger, were preferred in favour before Cain, Japhet, Haran, Iſhmael, Eſau, Reuben; Simeon, Levi, their elder brethren: in this difference betwixt Jacob and Joſeph, we may note, that betwixt the holieſt and worthieſt perſons, in neereſt relations, as betwixt Jacob and Joſeph, there may be difference in opinion, affection, and endeavour for a time. See Gal. 2. 11. Act. 15. 39.

V. 19. greater then he] More in number; ſo in the numbering of the Tribes. Num. 1. there were reckoned 83000 men more of Ephraim, then of Manaſſeh, and though Num. 26. the Tribe of Manaſſeh have the exceeding number, yet after that again Ephraim is numbered by ten thouſands, Manaſſeh but by thouſands, Deut. 33. 17. and though both were the progenitors of eminent perſons; as of Ephraim came Joſhua, and Jeroboam, and others; of Manaſſeh, Gideon, Jephthah &c. yet Ephraim in the placing of the Tribe Ephraim, about the Tabernacle, had precedence before Manaſſeh, Num. 2. 18, 20. and had the name of Joſeph, as Manaſſeh had not, Num. 1. 32. Reu. 7. 8. And in regard of the prevailing of Jeroboam over the ten Tribes the name of Ephraim is taken for the whole Kingdom of Iſrael, ſee on 4. 501. Iſa. 7. 2. and in divers other places; yet was that Tribe more guilty of Idolatry, than the Tribe of Manaſſeh, yea more then any, and in moſt kinds of impiety more infamous then any of the other; in whoſe example is ſeen the uncertainty of goodneſs by deſcent; & the proneneſs of corrupt nature to Apoſtaſie from God, when Ephraim, once ſo gracious with God and man, as to have his name brought into a proverbial benediction, ver. 20. falls ſo far from grace as hath been ſaid, what truſt then to ſucceſſion of perſons, for truth or goodneſs, whether in Families, or Churches? See chap 50. 23.

V. 20. In thee] That is, in thy name; or uſing thy name; or with reference to thee, or for thy ſake; for, for Joſephs ſake, and in his ſtead, was the bleſſing of Jacob the Father pronounced upon the heads of theſe two ſons; ſo that Jacob ſpeaketh this to Joſeph.

ſhall Iſrael] That is, my poſterity, called by my name.

ſaying, God make thee as Ephraim and Manaſſeh] A form of benediction ſhall be taken up in their names; (as in the bleſſing of Ruth, God make this woman like Rachel, and like Leah, Ruth 4. 11.) for ſome ſpeciall graces, and favours of God conferred on their perſons, or their Tribes; which might be known among the Iſraelites, though it be not noted in the Scripture: and of thoſe two Tribes as they were perſonally fruitful above the reſt, ſo their portions in the land of Canaan were famous for fertility, Adrichom. Delph. Theatr. p. 23. and p. 70. and 57. So the Jews uſed, and at this day (as Fagius noteth) they uſe to ſay over their males, God put thee, or make thee as Ephraim, and Manaſſeh; and over their female children; God put, or place, or make thee as Sarah, and Rebekah. Of the like form in curſing, ſee Jer. 29. 22.

A. 21. I dye; but God] Though our neereſt friends, as mortal and and mutable in their condition, leave us, yet God, that cannot dye, will not fail to be with us, and with our ſurviving poſterity after us, if we by wickedneſſe do not give him occaſion to forſake us; as Deut. 23. 14.

land of your fathers] Which they had by faith in the promiſe.

V. 22. Moreover] Of this verſe, ſee the explication in the firſt Annot. on the 30. v. of the 34, Chapter, verſ. 1. Gather your ſelves together] To ſome that were then preſent he giveth his charge, to call the abſent, that they may come together, and hear all at once, what he hath to ſay unto them at his farewell with the world; and he doubleth this charge, for it is repeated again, ver. 2. they were brethren, and though diverſe in perſon, yet in him united as the branches in the ſtock; and by this joynt injunction for their aſſembling unto him, he intimateth the union that ſhould be among them, which the Pſalmiſt highly praiſeth, in the compariſon of it to the precious oyntment, wherewith Aaron was anoynted, and to the dew of Hermon. Pſal. 133. verſ. 2, 3. the oyntment was moſt pleaſant, as made up of many ſweet ingredients, exquiſitely tempered and put together by the art of the Apothecary, Exod. 30. 23, 24, 25. And the mountain of Hermon (which in the allotment of the Tribes was part of the portion of Iſſachar) was a very fruitfull mountain by the dew of heaven deſcending upon it, where for that reaſon the cattell were fed, which were to be offered in ſacrifice to God, Adrichom. Delph. Theatr. pag. 36. col. 2. Such is the delight and benefit of brotherly union; not is it more acceptable, or profitable to man, then pleaſing unto God, for where that is, he is ſo well pleaſed with it, that there he commands the bleſſing, Pſal. 33. 3. he cauſeth bleſſedneſſe to ſettle there, as it were ſolemnly enacting a law, that unity and felicity ſhall dwell together; as on the contrary, diſcord, and diſtraction breed want and woe, not only to particular Families, but to whole States and Kingdoms, Mar. 3. 24, 25.

that I may tell] Being now to leave the world, he leaveth ſuch advertiſements with his ſons, as the remembrance of them may do them good, when he is dead; whoſe example ſhould be a pattern to other dying men (though they have not the Spirit of Prophecy as Jacob had) to deliver ſome Memorandums at the time of their death to their ſurviving children, and friends, if they be apprehenſive of the approach of it; and have underſtanding, memory, and ſpeech, to enable them; as to recount unto them what remarkable things have hapned in their dayes, what notable judgements or mercies either upon the ſtate in general, or particular perſons, God hath ſhewed in their times, and what have been conceived, to be the motives and means of either; what changes they have obſerved and what peculiar acts of providence to make the condition of man either better, or worſe: what have been the wayes and methods of Satan to intice unto ſins and what helps and eſcapes they have had to get from it; what comfort and lightſomneſſe of conſcience they have enjoyed in a Sincere and conſtant attendance on Gods Ordinances, and in an holy care to make their converſations conformable to them; and what diſcomfort they have felt by neglect of them, or ſtraying from them; what they think of ſin, and of this world compared with holineſs, and the happineſs of the world to come; and for this purpoſe it would do well, if they made ſome preparations in the time of health and life, by ſtoring up ſuch obſervable matter, as may be like to work moſt effectually upon children ſervants, and friends, who ſhall be witneſſes of their laſt words; for a mans laſt words are the more heeded by thoſe that hear them, becauſe firſt, then his heart being more affectionately ſet upon God, his tongue is the more likely to be guided by God. Secondly, becauſe then what he ſaith is conceived to be ſpoken in ſincerity; for whatſoever he doth in the time of life and health, no man almoſt dare diſſemble at his death. Thirdly, becauſe with the words the perſon that ſpake them will be readily remembered, and the ſtate wherein he was at that time he ſpake; which being the common condition of all men, (for all are mortal) may diſpoſe the hearers to make the more ſerious application of all to themſelves.

tell you] He telleth them altogether what he hath to ſay to every one of them in particular, that every one of them may receive benefit, not onely by his own proper portion of their fathers ſpeech, but by his brethrens likewiſe. It was wiſely done of Jacob thus to order his diſcourſe unto them; that being good in it ſelf, it might by communication be the more good; and it ſhould be every ones deſire (and will be ſo in ſuch as are ſincerely religious) not to confine thoſe advertiſements to one alone, or to a few, which they may, with hope of more fruit, impart unto many.

In the laſt dayes] (1 Tim. 4. 1. 2. Tim. 3. 1.) 1 Joh. 2. 18 Jud. 18. That is, in after-times, yet a great while to come: ſee and compare Act. 2. 17. with Joel 2. 28. Or more particular in the laſt dayes, that is, your laſt ſtate in this Land, when God ſhall bring you out of Egypt; and becauſe he ſpeaketh of the Meſſias, (viz. verſ. 10.) as far off as to his coming in the fleſh, which was 1680. yeares after this Propheſie, the ſtate, and time of the Goſpel, may be called the laſt time, becauſe after that there will be no change of the Church from Chriſtianity to the worlds end; before the flood, and a good while after, the Church was ordered without a written law, until Moſes, and then came in the Levitical Prieſthood and Ceremonies, which laſted until Chriſt: Laſt of all came in the Chriſtian Religion, (that Prieſthood, and thoſe Ceremonies being aboliſhed) which without any change of Doctrine, or Sacraments, ſhall laſt until the worlds end. Now in that Jacob, when the eyes of his body were dimme, Chap. 48. verſ. 10. had his ſoul ſo enlightened, as that it could pierce to the apprehenſion of future events ſo farre off, and could diſcern through ſo many thouſand dark nights, as were to come betwixt the prophecy and the event, it is an aſſured evidence of the aſſiſtance of a Divine Spirit; for neither humane policy, nor judicial Aſtrology, (for though a Starre was appointed to guide the wiſe men to Bethlehem, when he was born, Matth. 2. 2, &c. all the Starres of the firmament could not (if they had been conſulted with) have told any tydings of his coming many hundred years after this time when Jacob fore-told it) nor Angel, nor Devil, could at Jacobs death (without a revelation from God) have prophecied of the Meſſiahs birth.

V. 3. Reuben thou art my firſt-born As the eldeſt ſon, there belonged to him divers worthy and honourable priviledges; as that when the father was dead, he was to ſucceed him in the headſhip of the family, and his younger brethren were to reverence him, and riſe up unto him as a father, and to maintain the honor of this preeminence, he was to have a double portion to any of the reſt in the eſtate of his father. So was it eſtabliſhed by expreſs Law in Moſes time, that if a man had two wives, the one beloved, the other hated, or leſs loved, (as it was with Jacob. Gen. 29. 30, 31.) he might not make the ſon of the beloved firſt-born, but ſhould not acknowledg the ſon of the hated, firſt-born, by giving him a double portion of all that he had, Deut. 21. 17. which, (though not by the inſtinct of nature, yet by ſome revealed light) with many other Ceremoniall particulars (which came into an expreſs Law in after-times) was in uſe and practice among the Patriarchs before the Law was written. See on Chap. 35. verſ. 2. and on Chap. 48. verſ. 5. and 38. 24. and 48. 5.

my might and the beginning of my ſtrength] That is, the firſt effect of my paternal power and vigour, whereby God enabled me to beget thee as a father firſt of all, and the firſt that of my family and off-ſpring, had the manhood and maturity of ſtrength, as Deut. 21. 17. and Pſal. 78. 51. And, who by the ſeniority and eldership, ſhouldeſt have been the prime Pillar of my Family.

The excellency of dignityes] Thou ſhouldeſt,and mighteſt,as my firſt-born,have enjoyned an excellency of dignity,power,and authority (with a double portion, as Deut. 21. 17.) above thy brethren , and therein I ſhould now have confirmed thee , and thy poſterity after thee, by my fatherly benediction,if thou hadſt not loſt thy birthright by thine offence ; but as thou haſt behaved thy ſelf, I muſt from God ſpeak of thee otherwiſe then in my fatherly affection I could wiſh , or thou out of love to thy ſelf, wilt be willing to hear.

V. 4. Unſtable as water] Water hath a quality to cool, and to make clean, but Reuben is not like to it, in thoſe reſpects, having been hot by luſt, and unclean by polluting his fathers bed ; but he is compared to water for its lightneſs, and unſtability, this element is eaſily moved by the winds into waves,and naturaly cannot contain it ſelf,within its own bounds,but whereſoever it is poured out runneth to the loweſt place; and for the greateſt part of it, the Sea,it is in continual motion of ebbing and flowing ; ſuch is the mind of a man led away with his luſt , as Reuben was : for concupiſcence and love of women taking off the conſtancy of man, (as we ſee in Solomon) making his heart too effeminate, and feeble to be ſtable and ſtedfaſt in any good thing The word here uſed is joyned with vain, Judg. 9. 4. [vain and light : or, unſtable perſons] and with [treacherous] Zeph. 3. 4. for they that are unſtable,or light, or vain men, by their lightneſs and unconſtancy , are eaſily drawn to be treacherous towards thoſe that truſt them, and being apt to be deceived themſelves, 1 Pet. 2. 14. they are ready to be uſed for deceit of others, and to divide from them to whom they ſhould adhere ; thence were the diviſions and grudgings of the Reubenites among themſelves, Judg. 5.v. 15, 16.

thou ſhalt not excel] The words in the Original are Imperative , do thou not excel, or excel thou not, but the ſence is Indicative,or prophetick ; as our Tranſlation hath it ; and yet the Hebrew phraſe imports , that though Reuben may ſeem in his levitie and unſtableneſs to follow his own mind, and to do his own will, he doth thereby undergo the curſe which God as by a kinde of commanding law hath laid upon him , as David obſerved of Shimei his curſing, 2 Sam. 16. 11. and accordingly it appeareth in the holy Hiſtorie, that he did not excell either in the number of his Tribe, as v. 33. 6.or in valor, or any excellent atchievement.

Becauſe thou wenteſt up [For a pang of lawleſſe luſt, and a moment or two of ſinful pleaſure, he loſt the preogative of his birth-right, which would have been a ſettled and perpetuall honor to him , and his poſterity ; ſo far doth ſenſuality beſot and befool men, when they give way unto it, and therefore is the luſtfull wanton by the Wiſe-man called a ſimple one, a yonng man void of underſtanding, Prov. 7. 7 and his going to the houſe of an harlot compared to a fools going to the correction of the ſtocks, verſ. 22. Reuben might haply think that this fact of his committed about fourty yeares before, was now both forgiven,and forgotten ; and it is but barely related, not reproved, in the firſt notice taken of it, Chap. 35. 2 . But it is not time, (how long ſoever) but true repentance that taketh off the guilt of ſin ; and God is alwayes free to take his own time, either to reprove, or puniſh it, to whom all things are alwayes preſent, though in yeares, or ages they be never ſo far diſtant , and not onely ſlipped out of the memory of man, but raſed out of all Records,and humane memorials : which muſt admoniſh us ſtill to renew our repentance, and in our riper yeares to bewail the wickedneſs of youth, and to pray for pardon of it, as David did, Pſal 25.7. and withall , to beware that we miſdeem not the judgement of God,when it doth not preſently proceed to the puniſhment of offenders, ſince, he neither winks nor ſleeps towards the wicked, but forbeareth, that his goodneſs may lead them to repentance, Rom. 2. 4. or if they remain impenitent , that upon their treaſuring up of wrath againſt the day of wrath, they may be more lyable to the righteous judgement of God, v. 5.

He went up] He ſpake to him before, now, as in indignation at him, turning his eyes from him, he directeth his ſpeech to his brethren,that they may take his cenſure as a caution unto themſelves ; whereby we ſee that zeal againſt ſin, may conſiſt with charity to the ſinner,for Jacob, as Reubens father, as inſpired now by the Holy Ghoſt, as a dying man,was doubtleſs free from malice towards him,and all the world ; So it was with dying David ; when he gave advice to Solomon to do juſtice upon Shimei, 1 King. 2. 9.

V. 5. Brethren] In evil, Proverb 18. 9. not more naturally of kin by blood, then morally and mortally by cruel bloodſhed , principally in the maſſacre of the Shechemites, Geneſ. 34. 25 and it may be alſo in conſpiracy againſt Joſeph, as thoſe of the Tribe of Levi and Simeon were againſt Chriſt (of whom Joſeph was a type ;) for Levi, it is certain his Tribe was deeply guilty of his death, for the Prieſts, who were of that Tribe, were his moſt bitter and bloody enemies ; and (as ſome ſay) Judas was of the Tribe of Simeon

V. 6. O my Soul come not] By this pathetical Apoſtrophe, or converting of his ſpeech from Simeon and Levi to his own ſoul,he profeſſeth his zealous deteſtation of their outragous act , leſt when he was dead he might have been thought, either a favorer of it, or not an enemy to it ; and it is a point of pious prudence (eſpecially in perſons eminent for godlineſs) before their death, to clear themſelves of ſuch aſperſions, or ſuſpitions, as upon their ſilence might be imputed unto them,with prejudice to the religion they profeſſed ; and for this reaſon, it is well done by many learned and godly Proteſtants, to make a confeſſion of their faith at their death, that Papiſts may not be believed, when they report their Apoſtaſie from the true Church to the Popiſh, as they did of Calvin, Beza, and others.

Mine honor, be not thou] By honor, may be meant his ſoul , which is the honour and glory of a man ; and by the word here uſed for honor, or (as ſome reade) glory, is ſometimes underſtood the tongue ; as Pſal. 16. 9. and Pſal. 30. 10. Act. 2. 26. for that alſo is the glory of a man above the dumb creatures, and by an eloquent uſe of it one man glorieth above another. The meaning may be,that he neither conſented to them in word or thought, and therefore he would not ſuffer in his honor and reputation for their ſakes ; and though ſome would glory in the contriving and ſucceſs of ſuch a miſchievous deſign, he was ſo far from glorying in it,that he did deteſt and abhor it.

Slew a man] That is, Hamor the King, the Prince Shechem his ſon, and their ſubiects the citizens; for the ſingular number is put for the plural, as the plural number is alſo divers times put for the ſingular in the Hebrew tongue.

Self-will] If in ſudain wrath the ill deed had been done, it had not been ſo bad, but there was time to conſider of the proiect, and reaſoning againſt it , and a wilfull reſolution againſt that reaſon ; and the more wilfull, eſpecially upon deliberation, the more wicked.

They digged down a wall] The words (as ſome render them,for they are ambiguous) are, They boughed an ox, or bull, ſo the Seventy, by the bull, meaning him who like a bull ruſhed upon a rape,and who was as the bull of the herd, the chief of the city but an ox is put for oxen, the ſingular number for the plural, and ſo the words are underſtood of the violent driving away of the ſpoyl of the Shechemites cattell , Chap. 34. 28. and cutting them with their ſwords that would not drive them ſociably, with the reſt of the herd But the beſt reading is, they digged down a wall, For though it may be then the city was not walled , they might make ſome violent breaches into the walls of particular houſes, or chambers, and there moſt likely where Hamor or Shechem were, becauſe their chief quarrel was at them for the abuſe of their ſiſter.

V. 7. Curſed be their anger] He curſeth not their perſons, but their wrath ; we muſt pray rather againſt the wickedneſs of the perſons, then againſt the perſons of the wicked, as David prayed not againſt the perſon of Ahitophel, (as that he might come to nought , and hang himſelf as he did)but that God would turn his councel into fooliſhneſs, 2 Sam. 15. 3. Yet ſometimes he curſeth wicked perſons, Pſal. 109, from the 17. to the 20. and elſewhere, whereof we may ſay, that his curſing might be a prediction, nor an imprecation ; or if an imprecation , yet conditional, (upon ſuppoſal of their perſeverance in ſin, or unleſs they repented) not abſolute ; or if abſolute, Davids judgment, and zeal being guided by Gods Spirit, (as Jacobs now was) that might be lawfull to them, which to perſons not ſo qualified would be unlawful ? but if it be not lawful to curſe, much leſs is it lawful to do as Simeon and Levi did, for that of Solomon is a good rule in the general, Say not, I will recompence evil, but wait on the Lord, and he ſhall ſave thee, Prov. 20. 22. And if Jacob by this meant any evil to the perſons or poſterity of theſe his two ſons , it was but a temporal evil, and that not without the condition of impenitence.

I will divide them in Jacob] By Jacob and Iſrael , here , muſt be meant not the perſon, but the poſterity of Jacob, or Iſrael ; and whereas he ſaith, I will divide them, he meaning God, by whoſe Spirit he ſpake, would divide them, or that he would divide them by his prediction , or propheſie, as it were,paſſing his word, they ſhould be divided ; as Ezekiel is ſaid to come to deſtroy the city, Ezek. 43. 3. where the meaning is, (as in the marginall variation on that place it is rendred) [when I came to propheſie that the City ſhould be deſtroyed] Now Simeon and Levi, they were not onely divided from each other, (for ſo it was with the other Tribes) but their ſeparation was different from the reſt ; Firſt, for the Tribe of Levi it is clear,and certain , that it had no diſtink portion of the land of Canaan. but onely certain Cities allotted, diſperſedly placed among the other Tribes, which were to the number of fourty eight, Joſh, 21. 41. but the Levites themſelves had none inheritance, Joſh. 13. 14. but tithes and oblations which were an occaſion of diſperſing them abroad, when they went about to gather them. But after their zealous execution of the command of God (by Moſes) upon the principal offenders in the Idolatry of the golden Calf, Exod. 32. 26. &c. this diſperſing of theirs was converted to a bleſſing, for they were conſecrated to teach Jacob Gods Judgements, and Iſrael his Law, Deut. 33. 10. So the people had the benefit of their inſtruction, and they the honor and acceptation due to that office, ſee on Deut. 10. 9. And for the Tribe of Simeon, as it was leſs honourable then the reſt,and had in the more contempt for the wicked act of Zimri the ſon of Saul , a Prince of a chief houſe among the Simeonites, Num. 25. 6, 14. (for which cauſe it is conceived Moſes would not vouchſafe to bleſs it with the other Tribes, Deut. 33.) ſo it was divided ; for firſt, it was not provided for by a diſtinct portion, but was as it were an Inmate to the Tribe of Judah ; and that not ſo much for Simeons ſake,as becauſe Judah had too much therefore out of the portion of the children of Judah, was the inheritance of the children of Simeon taken, Joſh 19.9. So that the Tribe of Simeon was under Judah,till God gave them, the place of the Amalekites, 1 Chr.4.43, Thus they were divided,part living there, & part in the Tribe of Judah, as hath been ſaid. This curſe of their diviſion is denounced as a meet puniſhment for their curſed union. It ſo falls out many times by the diſtribution of divine Juſtice, turning many wicked conſpiraces into mutuall hoſtilities, And we ſee by experience,none are more bitter againſt each other,then thoſe whoſe ſociety hath been too ſweet,& communion too neer, that hate being mutual,and reciprocal. which was but on one ſide in the buſineſs of Amnon,and Thamar, 2 Sam. 13. In ſetting down this curſe ſo fully,we may obſerve the ſincerity of the ſacred Writer, who (though he were deſcended of the ſtock of Levi) committeth to perpetual record the crime and curſe of his progenitor; if his pen had been guided by any motion of fleſh and blood, he would not have blazed his ſin and ſhame, in this ſort; but this is the manner of thoſe who are guided by Gods Spirit, to diſhonour themſelves to honour God; So doth Moſes again, Exod.4. and ſo did David, 2 Sam.6.21,22. Jonah, Chap.laſt, Paul and Barnabas, Act.14.14,15. See on Chap.38.18.

V.8. Shall praiſe] The paſſages betwixt Judah and Joſeph his unknown Brother, but known Lord of Egypt, Chap. 44. 16, 18, &c. and his pleading and prevailing with his Father for the ſending of Benjamin thither, Chap.43.3.&c. ſhew him to be a man of good parts and ſpirit; yet this ſeems rather to be ſpoken not ſo much of the perſon of Judah (who dyed in Egypt, and while he lived did no great matters to make him famous, nor did appear in any preeminence, being obſcured with the ſplendour of Joſeph, and in a ſtate of ſubordination under him) but of the Tribe which excelled in courage, ver. 9. in dignity, ver.10. and in ſincerity to God; for when others are blamed for their deceit, Judah is commended for his fidelity, as in the 11 of Hoſea, Ephraim compaſſeth me about with lies, and the houſe of Iſrael with deceit, but Judah yet ruleth with God, and is faithful with the Saints, Hoſ. 11. 12. The word uſed by Jacob hath an elegant alluſion to the name of Judah coming of Jadah, to praiſe or to confeſſe; and while his brethren praiſe him, they ſhal confeſs his prelation above them. It is obſervable, that Judah having formerly offended with Thamar, his fault is paſſed here over in ſilence, while the ſin of Simeon and Levi is remembred with reproach and imprecation; whereof the reaſon may be, that as the crime of theſe offending brethren was more hainous, ſo their diſpoſitions were more harſh and hard heerted; for Judah confeſſeth his fault with terms of aggravation, Chap.38.26. and they ſtubbornly ſtood to what they had done, when their good father with much grief and anguiſh of heart, rebuked them for it, as fearing the miſchief that might come of it, even to the ruine of himſelf and all his family, Chap.34.31.

in the neck of thine] This implyeth the courage of Judah to purſue his enemies, and his prevailing over them; which is obſervable in that Tribe above the reſt, for it was that Tribe which was firſt in rank in the Iſraelites marching in the wilderneſſe, Num.10.14. and firſt took the paſſage through the Red Sea, and the firſt that (when Ioſhua was dead) by the appointment of God, ſet upon the Canaanites, and got the victory, Iudg.1.1,2,4. And of this Tribe was David (whoſe ſpeech, 2 Sam.22 41 agreeth to this here) Zerubbabel, and many other valorous and victorious Warriors.

thy fathers children ſhal bow] He ſaith, thy fathers children, rather then thy mothers, as in Iſaacs bleſſing of Iacob, Gen.27.29. for Iſaac had but one wife, ſo it was all one to have given the bleſſing to the iſſue of the parent of either ſexe; but in Iacob the caſe was otherwiſe; where they that had all one father, had divers mothers; ſome whereof were wives, ſome handmaids.

Shall bow down before thee] This was literally moſt verified in David and Solomon. who were of this Tribe: and ſpiritually in Chriſt, the Lion of the Tribe of Judah, Rev.5.5. to whom all knees ſhall bow, Phil.2.10.

V.9. Lions whelp] The courage of Iudah is compared to a Lions Whelp; ſuch was the Tribe of Iudah in the firſt aſſayes of War in the time of Ioſhuah, afterwards it increaſed to the vigour of a Lion at full age, and old in compariſon of a whelp, ſuch it was in Davids time, and then it was by age and experience ſubtle, as well as ſtrong; for David of that Tribe was ſo wiſe, that Saul was afraid of his wiſdom, 1 Sam.18.5, 14,15. and withal very couragious. See 1 Sam 17. from ver.32. to 51. as the Lion above other Beaſts, who by his courage and ſtrength, is a King over them, Num 23.24. Prov.28.1. & Chap.30.30. Amos 3.8. Mic.5.8. See on Num.1.27.

from the prey my ſon] That is, having taken the prey, thou haſt gone up in a triumphant manner.

he ſtooped down, he couched] Iacob varieth the perſon, ſometimes ſpeaking as to his ſon, ſometimes ſpeaking of his ſon, as the Prophetick Spirit moved him; ſuch variations are uſual in the Scripture; the meaning is, that as after full ſatisfaction by ſpoil and prey, the Lion coucheth down to reſt; ſo after great victories of the Tribe of Iudah, by the ſucceſsful valour of David, there ſhould be reſt and peace under the reign of Solomon his ſon, of which it is ſaid, Judah and Iſrael dwelt ſafely every man under his vine and under his fig tree from Dan even to Beerſheba (that is, from one end of Canaan to another) all the dayes of Solomon, 1 King.4.25.

who ſhal rouſe him] His enemies ſhall ſo fear him, that they will not dare to rouſe or provoke him.

V.10. The Scepter ſhal not depart] All Chriſtian Writers generally expound theſe words as a Prophecy of the coming of the Meſsiah, that is, Chriſt, and of the authority, ſtate and condition of the Tribe of Iudah, or of the Iewes (who take their name from him) with reference to the Meſsiahs coming; and hereto agree many of the learned Iewes, as we ſee by the teſtimonies of Manaſ. & Ben.Iſrael, in his 65 Queſt. upon Geneſis, though in the particular expoſition and application, there be much difference not only betwixt Chriſtians and the Iewes, but betwixt both ſorts of them among themſelves; the words which are of moſt importance in the Prophecy, and require the moſt exact diſcuſsion and clearing, are the words, Scepter, Judah and Shiloh: yet the other words having ſome ambiguity in them muſt not be ſlighted. Firſt, for the word Scepter, (in the Hebrew Shebet) in its firſt ſignification it is taken for a Rod or a Staff, as the Rod which marked out the Tythe, Lev.27.32. it is called Shebet. Secondly, becauſe there might be a Rod or Staff of other matter, in figure and meaſure like unto that which grew out of a tree; the ſame word is uſed for that Rod which is made of iron, Pſal.2.9. Thirdly, it being the uſe of thoſe which are in Authority to have a Rod or ſtaff in their hands, as a ſign of preeminence, and power (as Iudah had his ſtaff or rod, Gen.38.18. and Moſes his, Exo.4.2.) (though the word be Matteh and not Shebet) a ſtaff or rod, is taken many times for the rod or ſtaff of a Magiſtrate, but eſpecially for that of Kings; And becauſe, though Kings at the firſt uſed ſuch ſtaves as naturally grew, yet afterwards, (for greater glory and majeſty) they were made of gold; as Heſt.4.11. thence fourthly, by a Metonymie, whereby the ſign is ſet for the thing ſignified, the word Shebet or Scepter is taken for a Kingdom, Dominion or power of Government, as, The Lord hath broken the ſtaff of the wicked, the ſcepter of the rulers, Iſai.14.5. where the former word is Matteh, the latter Shebet; and there are many other places where it is uſed in the ſame ſenſe. Fifthly, the word Shebet ſignifieth a Tribe, Judg.18.19. either becauſe the Tribes came of one ſtock, that is, Iacob, as many rods and branches out of the bodie of one tree; or becauſe every tribe had a ſeveral rod, with its name written up on it, Numb.17.1,2. though there the word be Matteh, not Shebet, which is alſo divers times taken for tribe; as Numb 1. 4,16. Sixthly, becauſe a rod or ſtaff is uſed to ſtrike withal, and ſtrokes are not indured without paine; the word Shebet is taken ſometimes for a blow, a wound, or for affliction, becauſe when a blow is received, the body and mind both are afflicted: So ſaith Iob, Let him take away his rod from me; the word is Shebet, Iob 9.34. There be other acceptions of the word Shebet, but they nothing concern the explication of this text. In this place the word Scepter or Shebet, in the Hebrew may be taken firſt for a rod, or ſcepter, or ſome other thing which is carried, either by Magiſtrates, or by others before them to import their power, and imprint a terror in the minds of ſuch as are ſubjects to them, Rom.13. ver.3,4. As before the Roman Conſuls were carried rods and axes, and our Magiſtrates have a ſtaff in their hands, and a mace or ſword carried before them by others, which are not to be taken only for Ceremonies of State, or power, but for monitories of duty, as of juſtice in the Governours, and of obedience in thoſe that are under their charge. Secondly, for that which is ſignified by a Scepter, that is, rule and dominion. Thirdly, the word Shebet a Scepter, is taken for a tribe, Iudg.18.19. So it may be ſaid that the tribe of Iudah (that is, the poſterity of Iudah, bearing his name; as the poſterity of Iacob or Iſrael, bare the name of Iſrael) ſhall not fail, neither in ſucceſsion, or appellation and title, until Shiloh come.

ſhall not depart] He ſheweth not when the Government ſhall begin with Iudah, but when it is begun, how long it ſhall continue, and hold on, and when be at an end; to wit, at the coming of Shiloh: this continuance, or not departing of the Scepter from Iudah, preſuppoſeth an approaching or coming of it to that Tribe, and both together are evidences of divine favour, if they be ſo taken and ſo uſed, as they ſhould be: when therefore the Royal Scepter is conferred on any Family or Tribe, and continued for many ſucceſſions in one line, or pedegree; or when Nobility, or Gentry, is with honour lineally drawn down in a great length for many deſcents, it muſt not make men proud of the antiquity, or eminencie of their parentage, or diſdainful of others, whom therein they exceed; but humble and thankful to God, gentle, and courteous to all, contumelious or injurious to none; otherwiſe, if they be haughty in themſelves, harſh unto others, the dignity or gentility of their birth, though never ſo ancient, is rather inveterate vice, then venerable virtue; and indeed rather prophane Gentiliſm, then Chriſtian Gentility.

from Judah] By Judah, is meant not the perſon of Judah, becauſe the Prophecie foreſheweth what ſhall befal in the laſt dayes, ver. 1. but the Tribe of Judah, or the Nation of the Jewes, with relation to that Tribe: this bleſſing of Jacob looking beyond the perſon of Judah, and a great part of his poſterity, may admoniſh us to reach out our reſpects to the good of thoſe that are remote, and far diſtant from us; a conſideration which may correct the common neglect of moſt, who confine their care to their own times, not caring what becometh of thoſe, who muſt come after: hence are ſome ſo indifferently minded to the remainders of Idolatry, that while they fear no return of it in their time, they forecaſt no caveats for the future; ſo many waſte woods, and very few plant any, not thinking what need their poſterity may have of timber to build, and fewel to burn; but many more raſhly ruſh into marriage, not thinking ſo far before-hand, as to their next iſſue, not counting beyond the dual number of man and wife, to provide an inheritance for the heritage of the Lord, Pſal.127.3. which may increaſe to a numerous poſterity.

nor a Lawgiver] Heb. a Scribe. That is, one that hath the power of making Laws, whether of himſelf, or with others, ſo that he hath the pre-eminence either in propoſal, or in confirmation of them, or writing them for Rules unto his people.

from between his feet] To the Scepter, a Law-giver is joyned; ſo that the power of the Ruler is not meerly arbitrary, but Legal, as a power put into rule of Laws for the ſway of the Scepter, is not lawleſſe or boundleſſe: this Law-giver ſhall come from him by lineal deſcent. The phraſe [from between his feet] may be a modeſt Periphraſis of the parts of generation and birth, as Deut. 28. 57. and many mean the Law-givers deſcent from Iudah; or between his feet, may note ſome eminent officer ſitting under the chief Governour, ſitting between his feet, or at his feet, Deu.33 3. and in his name, or by his power propoſing laws to be made, or pronouncing, or publiſhing them, when they are made: but the former expoſition is the better, as noting the honour and power, not of one that ſitteth under him, (who may be of another Tribe) but of one that cometh from him; and then the modeſty of the Scripture phraſe is to be marked, keeping ſo far off the mention of the part intended, as from the middle to the feet: So the denyal of neereſt ſamiliarity is phraſed by not knowing of a man, Gen.4.1. Judg.11.39. 1 King.1.4. Mat. 1. 25. Luk. 1.34. and eaſing of nature is veiled over with the phraſe of covering the feet, Judg.3.24. 1 Sam. 24.3. which was done by the ſideneſſe of the upper garment in uſe among the Jewes: See the marg.variat. on the ſecond of Kings 18.27. and the marg. variat. in Arias Montan. Bible upon Iſai.36.12. See alſo, Iſai.7: 20. and Exod.4. 25. Which may turn to the rebuke of ſuch as apply their wits to impure jeſts, as divers do, eſpecially ſuch who are Poetical; it is not much unſutable to the Romane Poets to be obſcene in their conceits, as many of them were, for they took a Strumpet for a Goddeſſe, but it is moſt repugnant to the profeſſion of a Chriſtian, who believeth in a Virgin God, the Son of a Virgin Mother, to vent ſuch immodeſt fancies as may make the face of a modeſt perſon to bluſh, when they are read or heard.

until Shiloh come] The word Shiloh, ſaith the Jeſuit Salmeron, Prolog.4. (that he might bring in the Scripture of our Saviour as ſuſpected to be corrupted by the Jews) ſignifieth nothing: but he is confuted by the beſt Hebricians in their Dictionaries, and by many of his own ſide in their Commentaries; the Popiſh party following the Vulgar Latine, render the word, he that is to be ſent, as if the original word were ſhiloach, from ſhalach, he hath ſent. But the word in the Hebrew Text is Shiloh, derived from ſhalah, which ſignifieth to ceaſe and be quiet and peaceable; and the ſame is taken not only in a paſſive ſenſe to be ſo, but in an active, to make ſo, and ſo it is put for a proſperous, or ſafe maker or Saviour, the Authour of quietneſs and ſafety to others; it is taken alſo for the tunicle or skin, in which the child is wrapped in the mothers belly, becauſe there the child lyeth in peace and quietneſſe; whence by an uſual Metonymie or figurative taking of the continent for the thing contained (as the cup, for the liquor in the cup; the houſe, for the people in the houſe) it is taken for the child that was wrapped in it. In both ſenſes it is applyed to Chriſt, for he was moſt quiet and peaceable, of whom it was foretold, that he ſhould not ſtrive, nor cry, nor ſhould any one hear his voice in the ſtreets, Iſai.42.2. Who endured contradiction of ſinners againſt himſelf, Heb.12.3. and when he was reviled, reviled not again, 1 Pet. 2.23. Who was brought as a lamb to the ſlaughter, and as a ſheep before the ſhearers is dumb, ſo he opened not his mouth, Iſai.53 7. and by this he was a Peace-maker for others, and a Saviour of others; for as the Prophet ſaith, The chaſtiſement of our peace was upon him, and by his ſtripes we are healed, ver. 5. that is, he was chaſtiſed, that our peace with God might be procured; He was wounded for our tranſgreſſions, and bruiſed for our tranſgreſſions, ver. 5. that we might ſleep in a whole skin, and obtain ſafety by his ſlaughter. And in the other ſenſe, as Shiloh is taken for a ſon, Chriſt is Shiloh, that is a ſon of the lineage of Judah: It is evident (ſaith the Apoſtle) that our Lord ſprang out of Judah, Heb.7.14. and therefore as Judah is compared to a Lion, ver.9. of this Chapter, ſo is Chriſt called, the Lion of the Tribe of Judah, Rev.5.5. wherein the Elders who uſed that phraſe, might allude unto the title given to Judah, ver.9. and whereto our Tranſlators direct the Reader in their marginal reference ſet upon Rev. 5.5 until Shiloh come the Scepter ſhall not depart from Judah, but then it ſhall; whereby it appeares, that God appoints the periods of Kingdomes and States; whereof, beſides many others, there is an illuſtrious evidence in the finiſhing of Belſhazzars Kingdom, Dan. 5.26. And as the periods, ſo the pauſes and ſtops of Government by inſurrection and rebellion, are to be referred to the ſame over-ruling power, as that of the Iriſh Rebels, of which we muſt conceive, that his providence is not aſleep, but his juſtice awake, and that in their divelliſh cruelty there is a divine chaſtiſement, which muſt admoniſh us to conclude a peace with God by making war with ſin, and to beſeech him to take part with his own people, and to make good the Cauſe of his Son Chriſt Jeſus againſt the band and faction of that man of ſin, the ſon of perdition, deſigned to deſtruction, 2 Theſſ. 2.8.

The ſummary ſenſe of this Prophecy made up out of the explications forementioned, may be thus: The Authority of ruling in the higheſt degree of preeminence, and the longeſt time of continuance (though in a diverſe form of Government) ſhall be in the Tribe of Judah; or if in any other Tribe, yet ſo, that Judah ſhall have the name, and honour of the Kingdom, Commonweal, and people who are of the poſterity of Jacob or Iſrael, which ſhall not be ſtiled, the Kingdome, Commonweal or people of Reuben, Levi, Gad or Napthali, &c. but of Judah, nor they Reubenites, Gadites, &c. but Judæi, Jewes; and that Tribe ſhall be a diſtinct Tribe of it ſelf, and ſhall neither be confounded, nor obſcured as the other Tribes after their Captivity in Babylon, but which cannot be affirmed of the reſt) it ſhall evidently appear who rightly deriveth his pedigree from that Patriarch; of which honour, when once it is poſſeſt, it ſhall not wholly be deprived until he come who is Shiloh, the Proſperer or Saviour, the ſon of Judah by lineal deſcent, and the true expected Meſſiah JESUS CHRIST; and about the time of his coming, (if we take it not punctually for the day, or month, or year of his birth, but with ſome latitude of time, as a little before, and a little after, for an orderly accompliſhment of the Prophecy) ſhal the Jewiſh Commonweal be diſſolved, and their Government broken in pieces, they diſperſed and ſcattered into ſeveral Countries, without any Governour or Law-giver of their owne Nation, and wholly in the power of the Princes or Potentates, or States in whoſe Land they live.

When, and how this Prophecy was to take effect.

They that conceive this Prophecy within a while after Jacobs death took effect, are miſtaken, for the firſt Magiſtrate the Iſraelites had out of Egypt, was Moſes, ſtirred up by God for their deliverance thence from their yoak of Bondage, about two hundred years after the death of Jacob, and Moſes was of the Tribe of Levi, not of Judah; and though the Tribe of Judah were firſt in the march, and their Standard placed foremoſt, Numb.10.14. yet was Moſes the Supreme Governor over all the Tribes. After him ſucceeded Joſhua, and he was not of the Tribe of Judah, but of Ephraim; afterwards was the Government by Judges for three hundred years, in which time there were ſucceſſive fifteen, one after another, of which only two, Othniel and Izban, were of the Tribe of Judah: After theſe Judges came up the Government by Kings, of whom the firſt was Saul, but he was not of the Tribe of Judah, but of Benjamin; after Saul ſucceeded David, and he indeed was of the Tribe of Judah, and began his reign in the year of the world, 2891. 636 years after this propheſie of Jacob; ſo long was it before it began to work towards effect; and therefore Jacob ſaid not when Judah ſhould begin to ſway the Scepter, but having begun, how long he ſhould hold on; and the Kingly power continued in that Tribe until the captivity of Babylon, viz. four hundred thirty ſeven years: during which time, was that eminently ſeen which is ſaid, 1 Chron.5. Judah prevailed above his brethren, of him came the chief Rulers, verſe 2. and the Royal Regiment ended in Zedekiah, 2 King.24.17. After the Captivity, the dignity of the Tribe of Judah (returning home an entire Tribe, as the others did not) revived in Zerubbabel, a Prince of the Tribe of Judah, and from him continued the Principality in that Tribe by the ſpace of two hundred and ſeventy yeers, until the Maccabees, of the tribe of Levi got into the Government as High Prieſts; of whom ſome took upon them to be Kings; the firſt that did ſo, was Judas Ariſtobulus, who put the Diadem on his head, and cauſed himſelfe to be called a King, as Joſephus ſheweth, Antiq. lib 20. cap 8. which to Hircanus was forbidden by Pompey, (when he had taken Jeruſalem by force) though he committed the Government of the Jewiſh Nation unto him, Ibid. Theſe were called Aſſamoneans from the firſt of that rank, Mattathias Aſſamonæus, as is commonly conceived) but Jacobus Boulduc labors to prove a miſpriſion in the word Aſſamoneans, and he will have them rather called Cedmonians, from Onias Priſcus, Heb. Cedmonæus, betwixt whom and that Mattathias, there were nine who were ſucceſſors to the one, and predeceſſors to the other; and he takes them to be a Sect or Society, as the Enoſeei or Eſſeni, far more ancient then the Maccabees; and conceiveth, that though they were Prieſts, they might be of the Tribe of Judah, as well as of Levi, Jacob Boulduc of the Church before the Law, lib. 1. cap.17. Theſe (as he maketh the computation) continued until Herod the Askalonite began to raign, which was about the thirty fourth year before the Nativity of Chriſt. For a great part of which time there was a Synedrion or Sanhedrim (as ſome commonly and corruptly call it) or Senate, which was threefold: the firſt conſiſted of three perſons, the ſecond of twenty three, the third and principal of ſeventy two, in whom was the Supreme Power; theſe, though at firſt they might be choſen ſix out of every tribe (except the tribe of Levi, and out of that but four were choſen, as Junius conjectureth in his expoſition on the place) yet after the Captivity the Sanhedrim conſiſted moſt of the Tribe of Judah, of whom the chief were the poſterity of David; thoſe carried the greateſt ſway in elections: and of this Tribe, with the Tribe of Benjamin (which ſtuck to Rehoboam when the other ten Tribes revolted) conſiſted the main body of the Commonweal, and ſo Jacobs poſterity were called not Reubenites, nor Simeonites, &c. but Jewes from Judah. So taking the Scepter not meerly for a ſign of Regal Authority, but for a Principality and preeminence of power, (though with a diverſe form of Government) the Tribe of Judah carried the credit from all the reſt, even until Herod (the Idumean) was made King of Jury by the Romane Senate, Joſephus Antiq.lib.14. cap.26. which was about the time aboveſaid before the birth of Chriſt; but yet the authority of the Sanhedrim or Synedrion did not finally faile, until Herod in the thirtieth year of his raigne ſlew them all, Joſephus Antiq lib.14. cap.17, pag.362. yet after that ſome power and authority ſtill remained in the Jewiſh Nation, and conſequently in the tribe of Judah, (which made the principal part of their Commonweal) for they had a Synedrion after this in their Synagogues, as is plain, Matth.23.34. Acts 5 17. and Chap.9.1,2. & 23 5. in which, beſide the High Prieſt, there was another preſident, as ſome hold; and though after the coming of Chriſt, the Romanes reſtrained the Jewes in capital matters, Joh.18.3. yet all but ſuch they might exerciſe according to their Law; and ſometimes leave was given to inflict capital puniſhments in matters according to their law. See Joh.19.7. and 18. 31. and ſometimes they did as much without leave, as Act.7.59. wherein they were ſometimes winked at, ſometimes puniſhed: for though they had a Law to ſtone unto death, Deut.21.21. yet for ſtoning James the brother of Jeſus, was Ananias depoſed from the Prieſthood, Joſeph. Antiq. lib.20. cap. 8. ſo that the Jewiſh power or ſcepter departed by degrees, for it was much weakned by Pompey, Joſeph. Antiq lib.14 cap.8. after that it was much ſhaken by Herods intruſion, but not finally broken, until the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, by which time it was manifeſted, that Shiloh was come; and after that the Jewes had no form nor face of a Commonweal, as before, nor any authority or diſtinction of any Tribe as before they had: hereby then it is evident, that the Meſſiah is come, whereby the chriſtians may be confirmed in their faith, and the Jewes convinced of obſtinacy. Where they ſeek to clear themſelves by objecting, that this Shiloh or Meſſiah muſt come in the laſt dayes, but our Meſſiah came many hundred years ago, long before the laſt dayes; but to this the Annot. on ver. 1. will be ſufficient anſwer. Some will have Saul, and ſome Nebuchadnezzar to be the Shiloh, but with manifeſt repugnancy both to the tenour and intent of the Text or evidence of ſtory. Some put in other cavils, but the wiſer, and learneder Jewes renouncing them all, give way to the reference of Judahs Scepter to Shilohs coming, as not come to paſſe before the birth of Chriſt; but withal they would fain make the world believe that Shiloh the Meſſiah is not yet come, and therefore they yet pretend to have Princes of the Tribe of Judah, and lineage of David. So Manaſſ. Ben. Iſrael ex Rabbi Iſaac Quaſt. in Gen. 65. But all men of judgment know they are but Impoſtures, and ridiculous pretences, ſince their genealogies are periſhed, their tribes confounded, and they no where enjoying any Scepter-like ſway, but are meerly in ſubjection in the ſeveral countries where God hath ſcattered them.

To him ſhall the gathering] When Chriſt ſhal be revealed to be a Saviour both by preaching and doing, the people not of one Nation only, but of all Nations ſhall be gathered together into Churches to hear the glad tydings of ſalvation by him, and ſhall preſent their ſervice and worſhip to him; for he is the deſire of all Nations, Hag. 2. 7. for though in his paſſion, his beauty was obſcured as the Sun was eclipſed, ſo that there appeared no form nor comelineſs, no beauty that he ſhould be deſired, Iſai. 52. 2. yet even then to ſpiritual eyes, he was white and ruddy, the chiefeſt of ten thouſand, Cant. 5. 10. white in innocency, ruddy in ſhedding his blood with patience; yea, ſo deſireable that the Jews did wait for his Law, and the Gentiles ſeek him, Iſa. 11. 10. and put their truſt in him, Rom 15. 12. and in him find reſt, a glorious reſt, Iſa. 11. 10. to his mountain the Nations have flowed, Iſa. 2. 1, 2, 3. in thouſands of Temples, and gatherings of the people in them for his ſervice; ſo that this part of the Prophecy is clearly fulfilled, and the former part, (though in it ſelf obſcure) more cleared by it.

V. 11. Unto the Vine] Becauſe the cloſe of the precedent verſe is expounded of the Meſſiah, ſome conceive theſe words to be a Prophecy of him alſo; for the ſpiritual bleſſings that he brings with him, are ſignified by the mountaines dropping down new wine, and the hills flowing with milk Joel 3. 18. by which is meant the plenty of Evangelical preaching, and of divine grace; and applying the words to him they are transformed from the literal ſenſe, into an allegorical, thus, the Meſſiah ſhall bind with the cord of faith, and hope, and charity, unto his vine; that is, unto his Church: his foal or aſſe-colt, that is, the people of the Gentiles, being as a young colt, not accuſtomed to the yoak of the Law; and his aſs, that is, the people of the Jewes, to the choice vine, that is, to the Meſſiah himſelf; and to ſtrengthen this interpretation, they read the words thus, binding his foal to the vine, and his aſſe, O my ſon, to the choice vine; the word beni, if Jod be an affix, ſignifieth, my ſon, and the word Sorec ſignifieth a choice vine; but the difficulty lyeth in the word beni, where Jod is ſometimes paragogical, or redundant, and ſo it is in the firſt word aſri, binding, in this verſe; now taking the word beni paragogically, it is not to be read, O my ſon, but to be conſtrued with the next word, and ſo it ſignifieth the ſon of his aſſe, that is, the foal of his aſſe; for the young of any creature is called in the Hebrew phraſe, by the name of a ſon, as a calfe is called a ſon of the herd, or beeves, Gen. 18. 7. and lambs, ſons of the flock, Pſalm 114. 4. and a young Unicorn, the ſon of the Unicorn, Pſal. 29. 6. and reading the words thus, they may (notwithſtanding the interpoſition in the precedent verſe) be a continuation of Jacobs bleſſing of Judah; wherein (though we ſhould read the words O my ſon,) he might vary the perſon, as in the ninth verſe; and taking Vines as a part of his bleſſing, they may import ſuch abundance of fruitful Vines, that the aſſes accuſtomed to eat thiſtles, might mend their diet, and feed upon Vine leaves; or that the portion of the Tribe of Judah ſhould be ſo well furniſhed with vines, ſo well grown, that the aſſe might be tied to them as to other trees; and ſo ſtored with grapes, that he ſhould not need to be ſhifted from vine to vine for his load, but might have it from one vine alone. See Numb. 13. 23. And though ſome part of Judahs portion were ſmitten with barrenneſs by the burning of Sodom, yet the greater part remained untouched, which might by the bleſſing of God make a recompence for that loſſe; for it was the beſt and largeſt portion of the Tribes, as Adrichom. deſcribeth it, Theatr. pag 38. and Arias Montan. in his Book called Chaleb, ſaith the like, expreſſing the ſituation of it, all to be in the South, which makes much for the fertility thereof; and he addeth alſo, that it was very ſpacious, and copious in vineyards and paſtures, ſo that in the abundance of proviſion for meat and drink, for food and rayment, this prophecy of Jacob was abundantly verified after the letter.

blood of grapes] The juyce of the grape is called blood by a figurative ſpeech, without any reference to a Sacramental ſenſe; no marvel then if it be ſo called, when it is uſed to ſignifie the blood of Chriſt; but it is ſtrange, that they which take upon them to be great Divines, will be ſo groſs as to ſtick to the letter, and not admit of a figure, when our Saviour called the Wine of the Sacrament his Blood, and the Bread his Body. See Deut. 32. 14.

V. 12. Red with wine] The redneſs of the eies is procured by the quantity of wine, eſpecially of that which is of the beſt kind, and hath ſpirits of the ſtrongeſt operation, Prov. 23. 29, 30. all theſe are implyed by this phraſe, which gives no allowance to exceſſive drinking, no more then our Savior doth to theft, when he compareth himſelf in his coming to a thief, Rev 3. 3.

White with milk] By the former phraſe, the fruitfulneſſe of the Vineyards is prophecied; by this the bleſſing of the paſtures, abounding with cattel, and they with milk.

V. 13. Zebulun ſhall dwell at the haven of the Sea] The portion of this Tribe was near to the River Jordan, in the fruitful region of Galilee, extending in length from the Lake of Geneſareth to the ſhore of the great Sea, which is nigh unto Mount Carmel; the breadth of it is about five miles from Mount Tabor extended toward the North; See Joſ. 19. 10, 16. and the ſituation of Zebulun was commodious for commerce, for it did not only extend to the Sea, but bordered on ſuch parts of it, as afforded fit and ſafe havens, and harbours. So that when they of Zebulun went out to ſhip, they might be chearful in their ſailing, (though the ſea be fearful to ſuch as are faint-hearted) according to the bleſſing of Moſes, Rejoyce Zebulun in thy going out, Deut. 33. 18. In this prediction of Jacob, if there were nothing elſe in it memorable, we have this to obſerve (as of that he foretelleth of ſome other Tribes touching their portion in the land of Canaan) that it is evident Jacob here ſpake by the inſtinct of the Spirit; for this (which the whole world knows was fulfilled of Zebulun) fell not out in effect till about two hundred years after Jacobs deceaſe; and then that portion was allotted to him, not by choice, but by lot, for the Land of Canaan was divided by lot among the Tribes, Num. 26. 55, 56. Joſ. 19. 10. So that howſoever the diviſion ſeems caſual, it hapned none otherwiſe then the divine providence not onely fore-ſaw, but fore-ordained; and ſo it is in all the dwellings of men, For the earth is the Lords, and the fulneſſe thereof, Pſal. 24. 1. and whereſoever he pleaſeth to place any, they muſt be contented with their condition. And for this of the portion of Zebulun in particular, three things are eſpecially obſerved of it; Firſt, there was ſituate the City of Nazareth where our Saviour was conceived, Luke 1. 26. and where for many yeares he was concealed, or obſcured, living as one of common and ordinary quality, and (as is probably thought) exerciſing himſelf in the mechanical occupation of his reputed father, a Carpenter, Mark. 6. 3. Secondly, that here is Mount Tabor, (as hath been noted) where he was glorioſly transfigured, Mat. 17. 2. Thirdly, here (that is, in the Land of Zebulun) by the way of the ſea, he began to preach, Mat. 4. 15. &c. for there it is probably conceived was moſt need of preaching. For firſt, the neighbourhood of the ſea maketh rich, and riches make men proud, and pride maketh men many wayes very wicked. Secondly, where there is comerce by ſea, there is a confluence of ſeveral Nations, who ſend not out the beſt, but the boldeſt for ſea-adventures, and they moſt commonly corrupt one another with the vices of each Country. Thirdly, having opportunity for piracy, and robbery, and a kind of exemption from ordinary juſtice, (which is reſident upon the Land, not upon the Sea) ſea-faring-men are often times not only leſſe religious, but more unjuſt, and more oppreſſive then thoſe that have their abode upon the land; ſo that of ſuch eſpecially is verified that of the Prophet, Thou makeſt men as the fiſhes of the Sea, as the creeping things that have no ruler over them, Hab. 1. 14. (There being as much diſorder and oppreſſion in the ſhips, (eſpecially of Pirats) as in the ſeas among the fiſhes, under them.

His border ſhall be unto Zidon] In ſetting down the limits of Zebuluns allotment, which is exactly done, Joſ. 19. from verſe 10. to the 16. there is no mention of Zidon, and in the topography, Zidon ſtandeth nearer to the Tribe of Aſher; it is therefore to be underſtood, that though Zebuluns border reached not to Zidon, yet the coaſts of it were over againſt Zidon, and ſo ſituate as to be fit for eaſie and ordinary commerce with the Merchants of Zidon.

V. 14. Aſſe couching betwixt] Iſſachar is compared to a ſtrong Aſſe, or (as it is in the Original) a ſtrong boned Aſſe, or an Aſſe of great bones; whoſe force ſhall be great, but he ſhall want courage, to reſiſt his enemies.

And the land pleaſant] Iſſachars Tribe placed in a fruitful and pleaſant portion, and being of a dull ſpirit, ſhall rather give themſelves to husbandry at home, then any valiant, or diligent undertakings abroad, as either thoſe of Judah by wars, or thoſe of Zebulun by merchandize; yet being ſtrong, they ſhall be laborious in tillage, and ſo addict themſelves to that peaceable and quiet life, as rather to ſubject themſelves to much toil, and tribute within their own portion, then either to enlarge their bounds, or to free themſelves from tyranny and oppreſſion. It is ſo with many of the people in France (as is obſerved by ſuch as have ſeen the manner of that Country) whoſe earthly mindes are ſo taken with the fruitfulneſſe of the ſoyl, that if they may have a part in it with peace, they ſubmit themſelves to a moſt ſervile condition, whereby they undergoe moſt heavy burdens of tribute, and other oppreſſions, rather like ſlaves, then ſubjects, yet like a generation of Iſſachars, or dull Aſſes, bear all; which is a juſt ground for the proverbial ſpeech of the French King, and his vaſſals, viz. That he is the King of Aſſes, whereas other Countries which hardly will maintain their people, make them more hardy and couragious.

V. 16. Dan ſhall judge] In the Original there is a Paranomaſia, or an affinity of like ſounding ſyllables, as Chap. 30. 6. for the words are Dan jadin ghnammo; the like is obſerved of Judah, ver. 8. of this chapter; and of Japheth, Chap. 9. 27. this is ſaid of Dan the firſt-born of the hand-maids iſſue, to encourage him againſt the conceit of neglect, and contempt, in regard of the condition of his mother; and he ſhall judge, not only as a diſtinct Tribe, which ſhall have princes, and principal men ordinarily to judge them, as Num. 1. 4. 16. but ſometimes extraordinarily to judge and deliver both them, and their brethren from the hands of oppreſſors; ſo did Samſon, who was a Danite by his Tribe, Judg.13.2.24. and he judged Jſrael twenty years, Judg.15.20.

As one of the Tribes of Iſrael] Yet not as every one of the Tribes, for every one ſhall not have that honour, for neither the Tribe of Reuben, Simeon, Gad, nor Aſher had any Judges; they that had, were the Tribe of Benjamin, of which was Ehud, Judg. 3.15. and the Tribe of Manaſſeh, of which was Gideon, Judg.6.15. and Abimelech his Son, Judg.9. and Jair, Judg.10.3. and Jephtah, Chap.11. &c. and the Tribe of Iſſachar, of which was Tola, Chap.10.1. the Tribe of Judah, of which was Ibzan, Chap.12.8. and the Tribe of Zebulun, of which came Elon, Chap.12 11. the Tribe of Ephraim, of which came Abdon, Chap. 12. 15. the Tribe of Dan, of which came Samſon, Chap.13.verſ.5. and the Tribe of Naphtali, of which was Barak, Judg.4.6. and the Tribe of Levi, of which was Samuel, 1 Cor.6.33,38.

V.17. Dan ſhall be a Serpent] That is, what he wants in ſtrength, he ſhall make out in ſubtilty and ſudden ſupprisal; making war, and getting victory rather by politick ſtratagems, then by force of armes: Moſes compareth him to a Lions whelp, Deut.33.22. but (as to the condition of the Danites in general) it is in regard rather of the ſuddenneſs of a Lions leap, when he ſeeth the advantage of his prey, then of his ſtrength or courage. So Samſon of the Tribe of Dan, though extraordinary ſtrong, and ſo like to a Lion, yet like a Danite he dealeth with his enemies as well by his policy, as by his ſtrength. See Judg. chap. 15. and 18. of the Danites taking of the city of Laiſh. Some of the Ancients have conceived that Antichriſt ſhall come of this Tribe, partly becauſe it is likened to a Serpent, and an Adder, and partly becauſe Dan is omitted in the ſealing of the Tribes, Rev. 7. whereas the prediction of Antichriſt, 2 Theſſ.2.3. &c. Rev. 17. and the accompliſhment thereof, as we find it by ſtory and experience, plainly diſcover this conceit to be vain and frivolous; and for the omiſſion of Dan, it is rather to be referred to the Idolatry wherewith that Tribe was eſpecially branded, Judg. 18.30. 1 King.12.29. and that upon better ground then to the raiſing of Antichriſt out of his Tribe, for which there is no probability either of Scripture, or reaſon; and they might as well have ſaid, that Antichriſt ſhall come of the Tribe of Simeon, becauſe Moſes in the 33 of Deut. maketh no mention of him in the benediction of the Tribes; as that he ſhall come of Dan, becauſe he is omitted by John; but it is moſt like that the one was omitted by Moſes, chiefly for his bloody treachery againſt the Shechemites; the other by John, for his notorious Idolatry. But the Fathers, good men, ſtanding ſo far off the acme, or full growth and progreſſe of Antichriſt, are to be pardoned in their miſtaking; which the Doway Tranſlators ſhould not in in modeſty (if they care not for truth or probability) have offered unto their Readers liking, (as they do in their Annotation on this verſe) ſince that errour (as if it had been taken to uſe by ſome erroneous Writers of after-times) is ſo improved and increaſed in ridiculous repugnancies to Scripture, reaſon, and ſometimes to it ſelf, that whoſoever is not extremely deſtitute of religion, and ingenuity, may be aſhamed of it, as our Proteſtant Authors have plainly diſcovered, who have exactly diſcuſſed the queſtion of Antichriſt.

V. 18. I have waited] (Pſal. 25. 21. & 130.5. Iſa.26. 8) This cometh in without any particular coherence with that which went before, or followeth after; motions of the ſpirit are not tied to rules of method, or Logical order; and therefore muſt not be miſliked as impertinent, becauſe they are not led in by a ſeries of precedent words or matter, which yet may have good coherence with ſilent and ſmothered thoughts, whence their expreſſions burſt out; thence it is that in the writings of the inſpired Pen-men we find ſuch various mixtures of comminations and comfort, and as it were ſudden aſcents or precipices from the one to the other.

for thy ſalvation] Jacob ſeeing the miſeries that his poſterity ſhould fall into, breaketh out in prayer to God for remedy; and this he doth, as for them in general, ſo eſpecially in reſpect of this Tribe, which by the ſpirit of prophecie he foreſaw in a double danger, both of great adverſity, Judg. 1. 34. and of groſs idolatry, 1 King. 12. 29. and withal having by the ſame ſpirit an apprehenſion of the Meſſiah, or Saviour under the name of Shiloh, his ſoul no doubt thirſted for the accompliſhment of his ſalvation, and full deliverance from all trouble by his means and merit; for the Fathers before Chriſt had none other Rock of ſalvation then Chriſtians ſince his coming, 1 Cor. 10. 3, 4.

V. 29. Gad, a troupe ſhall] (Chap. 30. 11) As in the names of Judah, Zebulun, and Dan, ſo in the name of Gad doth Jacob make a nominal alluſion for Gedud is a Band, or Army; the condition of the Tribe of Gad ſituate beyond Jordan Eaſtward, Joſh. 13. 8. towards the confines of the land of Canaan, was to be ſubject to incurſions of bordering enemies, and ſo might ſometimes by ſudden troups be overcome: yet they muſt not be diſcouraged, for afterwards they ſhall encounter their enemies with better ſucceſſe, and conquer them: this is the condition of Gods Church and children, for a time to have the worſt in conflict with their enemies, but with Gad they ſhall have the beſt at the laſt; they ſhall be as ſure of the conqueſt, as of quarrel or conflict; for their great Captain hath overcome the world for them, Joh.16.33.

V. 20. Out of Aſhur his bread ſhall be fat] That is, out of the portion allotted to Aſhur he ſhall have plenty of corn, which being ſown ſhall grow up into a full ear, which is called a fat ear, Gen. 41.5. Marg. The chief commodities which moſt abound in that part of Canaan, are corn, and wine, and oyl, but eſpecially excellent wheat, Adric. p. 1. ſo that though uſually by bread all neceſſary proviſion be figuratively ſignified, yet in this place it may be literally taken in reſpect of the excellency of that grain, which maketh the beſt and pureſt bread; of the ſtore of oyl Moſes maketh mention in his benediction, ſaying, Let him dip his foot in oyl, Deut.33. 24. And in the next verſe he mentioneth Minerals of Iron, and Braſſe under his feet, ver.25. marg. reading.

royal dainties] Which might conſiſt not only of ſuch pure wheat as hath been ſpoken of, but of fowl, and fiſh, and fruit of the beſt kind, which may be delicates on Kings tables.

V. 21. Naphtali is a hind let looſe] Judah is likened to a Lion, Iſſachar to an Aſſe, Dan to a Serpent, Napthali here to an Hinde, Benjamin to a Wolf; whence it may be their Families are knowne by their Armes; and they diſtinguiſhed by the formes of beaſts, or other creatures, as the Lion is a fit Enſign for Regality, for that with the Scepter is attributed to Judah: and if men fetch their Heraldry ſo high, as ſome do, it will do well from the ſame fountain to derive ſome reliſh of religion, to add unto ſuch outward ſignes ſome holy Motto, or ſacred ſentence of the Scripture, which may be a memento to them to ſet out their gentry, or dignity of birth more by their real virtues, then by painted ſcutcheons, or coats of Armes.

an hind let looſe] He ſaith not, he is like an hind let looſe, nor ſaith he of Dan, that he was like a Serpent, nor of Iſſachar that he was like an Aſſe, nor of Judah like a Lion, but he is an Hinde, a Serpent, an Aſſe, a Lion; which to take in a literal ſenſe were very abſurd; ſo is the Papiſts taking of the words of the Lords Supper, This is my Body, This is my Blood, according to the letter, which this and many ſuch like places direct us to expound in a Sacramental ſenſe. Now Naphtali is here compared to an Hind let looſe, to note the pleaſantneſſe of his condition, of which Tribe Moſes in his benediction ſaith, O Naphtali ſatisfied with favour, and full of the bleſſing of the Lord, Deut. 33. 23. So Naphtali placed in a ſafe and fertile ſoyl, is as an Hind taken, but let looſe again to be delicately brought up, delighting in a freſh and free paſture, having nimbleneſſe of feet like an Hinde, either for flight, or purſuit, as occaſion ſhall require, Pſal.18.34. See on Joh.19.33.

he giveth goodly words] He is gentle and affable, winning favour by fair words, & prevailing more by plauſible courtſhip, then by perillous valour.

V. 22. Joſeph is a fruitful bough] Though we read not by expreſſe mention of any more children that Joſeph had, but two, yet it may be he had more, for ſo the ſpeech of Jacob doth import, Chap. 48. 6. but if he had not, he was a fruitful bough in his two branches, Ephraim, and Manaſſeh, who multiplied exceedingly.

a fruitful bough by a well] The words are doubled for emphaſis, and aſſurance, or becauſe of his two ſons, Ephraim and Manaſſeh; and it is ſaid, by a well, becauſe moiſture is a means of fruitfulneſs, Pſal.1.3.

whoſe branches run over] In the Hebrew, whoſe daughters; which hath occaſioned ſome to underſtand that the daughters of the Egyptians, or women of Egypt when Joſeph paſſed by, got them upon the wals to behold his beauty; but firſt, they are Joſephs daughters, not the Egyptians: Beſides, the learned in the Hebrew language, know it uſual to call that which cometh from another by the name of a ſon, (and ſometimes of a daughter, as here) whether it be natural, as a ſpark is called the ſon of a burning coal, Job 5.7 See the marg. variat. or artificial, as the arrows are called the ſons of the quiver, Lam.3,13. (ſee there alſo the marg variat.) and of the bow, Job 41. 28. and by the like figurative ſpeech is the corn called the ſon of the floor, Iſa.21. 10. becauſe it is there beaten out of the ſheaf, or taken thence.

over the wall] Moiſture and heat are the cauſes of fruitfulneſſe; the Well here ſpoken of is a means of the one, the Wall of the other; for thoſe plants that are ſet by a Wall, as Vines, and Apricocks, and Cherries, and the like, by the reflexive heat of the Sun thrive better, and ripen ſooner then thoſe that are planted by themſelves.

V. 23. The Archers] The Archers (as this verſe ſheweth) were thoſe that hated him, and they that hated Joſeph were his brethren who ſold him, and would have killed him, Gen.37. and the wife of Potiphar who falſly accuſed him, entitling his name to her own crime; and Potiphar himſelf who thereupon impriſoned him, and it may be the Magicians of Egypt, who were by him put down in their art of divination, and the Courtiers of Pharaoh, who envyed to ſee a ſtranger advanced to ſuch honour in their Countrey; whoſe arrows were ſuch as David complaineth of, They whet their tongues like a ſword, they bend their bowes to ſhoot their arrows, even bitter words, Pſa.64.3. theſe were ſlanders proceeding out of the bitterneſſe of their own ſpight, and tending to make Joſeph of an unſavoury reliſh with others, eſpecially with Pharaoh, whoſe chief favourite he was: and becauſe theſe Archers are in the Original called maſters of arrows (which term implyeth a ſkilfulneſſe in ſhooting, See Annot. on Chap.14.ver.13) it is like that ſome of them were very ſubtil in their malicious ſuggeſtions againſt him, and their words were as venomed arrows, Pſal.64. 3. ſhot by thoſe who bend their tongues like their bows for lies, Ier.9.ver.3.

have ſorely grieved him] He was ſore grieved when his brethren ſtript him of his coat, and caſt him into a pit, Gen. 37. 23, 24. for then he beſought them in the anguiſh of his ſoul to ſpare him, but they would not hear, Chap.42.21. and it could not but ſorely grieve him when he was ſent to priſon as guilty of attempting a rape upon his Miſtreſſe, which his ſoul abhorred; yet that which ſore grieved Ioſeph, may much comfort others, in that in him they may obſerve, that ſore grief from the wicked, and great love from God, may meet together in the ſame man.

V. 24. But his bow] That is, the weapon or inſtrument wherewith he made good his cauſe againſt his enemies, namely his innocency, patience, and other virtues, which were more vigorous againſt them, then their vices againſt him.

by the hands of the mighty] Joſeph was ſtrong, but not of himſelf, but made ſtrong by the Divine power aſſiſting him, and reſiſting his enemies, ſo that he mightily prevailed over them all; Which may teach us to take heed that we neither truſt to our ſelves in any undertaking, nor boaſt of our good hap when things ſucceed as we wiſh, but that uſeing our beſt providence to repoſe our affiance upon God, and to give him the praiſe of all proſperous events; according to that of the Pſalmiſt, I will not truſt in my bow, neither ſhall my ſword ſave me; But thou haſt ſaved us from our enemies, and haſt put them to ſhame that hated us. In God will we boaſt all the day long, and praiſe thy Name for ever, Pſal.44.6,7,8.

from thence] That is, from the power and providence of Almighy God.

the ſhepherd, the ſtone] That is, Joſeph was made a ſhepherd to feed his father Iſrael in the time of famine, and a ſtone. on which he built his hopes for a comfortable habitation for himſelf and his family in the Land of Egypt; in which words likewiſe by the Spirit of Prophecy he might looke as far as to Chriſt, of whom Joſeph was a type, and to whom as a ſhepherd Joſeph was a ſheep, Pſal. 80. 1, And he is alſo called a ſtone, a tried ſtone, a precious corner ſtone, a ſure foundation, Iſa. 28. 16.

V. 25. with bleſſings of heaven above] That is, in the kindly operations of heaven from the Sun and Moon, which are named in Moſes bleſſing, viz. the precious fruits brought forth by the Sun, and the precious things put forth by the Moon, Deut. 33. 14. with which the favourable and fruitful influences of the Starres are imployed; and from the heaven below, that is, in the ſweet dewes and ſhowres coming from the ayr, according to the promiſe mentioned in Ezekiel, I will cauſe the ſhower to come in his ſeaſon, and there ſhall be ſhowers of bleſſing, Ezek.34.25. and in the wholeſome temperature of that element, which is more neceſſary for health, then good diet; for, of this men feed but at certain hours, of ayr (which they draw in with their breath) every moment: and in the bleſſings of heaven may be comprehended the fruitfulneſs of delicate fowl, who flye about the earth in the open firmament of heaven, Gen.1.20.

bleſſings of the deep] That is, Springs and Rivers, (which water the earth and refreſh both man and beaſt) the uſeful creatures that are in the waters: And withall ſince it appeareth, both by the benediction of Jacob, and Moſes, that God meant very variouſly, and abundantly to bleſs the Tribe of Joſeph, the bleſſing of the deep that lieth under, may be in the Mines of the earth, whereof ſome are moſt neceſſary, ſome moſt precious.

of the breaſts, and of] By multiplication of creatures, and of milk to nouriſh them: the bleſſing of the breaſts is named firſt, becauſe the nouriſhment is there provided before the creature be brought forth; for, God in his fatherly providence (according to the Proverb) never ſends a mouth but he ſends meat for it: of the joyning of theſe two (viz. the bringing forth, and breeding or nouriſhing) in one perſon, See Annot. on Chap. 21. ver. 7.

V. 26. have prevailed] That is, I have bleſſed thee in thy two ſons, more then my father, or grandfather, bleſſed their two ſons; for my grandfather Abraham gave was that Iſhmael one of his ſons ſhould be caſt out, and my father Iſaac gave the bleſſing to me from my brother Eſau; but I have bleſſed thy two ſons with a fatherly affection to them both, though I gave the preeminence to Ephraim the younger; Or the bleſſings of me thy father have prevailed above the bleſſings of my progenitors, for though thou haſt had croſſes notwithſtanding my bleſſing, I, though I had their bleſſing, have had more in number, and longer in continuance; or I have more expreſly, or with more tenderneſſe of affection bleſſed thee, then my progenitors bleſſed their children; becauſe from a child thou waſt moſt dear unto me, both for thy beloved mothers ſake and for thine own: and finding thee alive, when I ſuppoſed thee to be ſlain, and not onely ſo, but ſo highly favoured of God and man, and ſo good a ſon to me, and ſo kind a brother to thy brethren, that by thy means we enjoy'd a ſafe, and comfortable, and honourable condition in a ſtrange land, and in an hard time, by the greatneſſe and generality of the famine, I cannot but inlarge my benedictions towards thee, and ſtrive to out-bleſſe my forefathers in multiplication of bleſſings upon thy head, above their meaſure; and my bleſſing added unto theirs, will make thy condition more happy then mine hath been.

utmoſt bound of the everlaſting hill] Moſes in the 33. of Deut. pronounceth his benediction of Joſeph in theſe words; Bleſſed be his land, for the chief things of the ancient mountains, and for the precious things of the laſting hils, Deut.33.13,15. for there be precious bleſſings upon the hils, as Olives upon Mount Olivet, called (for the plenty and goodneſs of them growing there) commonly called in the Scripture the mount of Olives, as mat. 21. 1. Luk. 19.37. Act.1.12. See Adrich. Delph. Theatr. p 170. And on Mount Libanus there grow Olives, Cedars Pine-trees, ſweet Cypreſs trees, Frankincenſe, and other ſweet gums; beſides, out of it flow many excellent veines of water, and from thence have many famons Rivers their Original Adrich. Ibid pag 110. expounding them the words of Jacob by the words of Moſes, the meaning is, that he wiſheth unto Joſeph all manner of bleſſings, both from places neer, and far off, to come upon his head, as water falleth from the hils unto the valleys.

everlaſting hils] Some hils, are hils of ſand, or rubbiſh, lately heaped up; See on Chap.8.11. ſome are raiſed up by induſtry of men, ſome are made, and ſome are ſwallowed up by Earthquakes; but there are hils of more ſolidity, and firmneſſe, and ſuch as are like to laſt to the worlds end, and Jacob here meaneth the bleſſing of Joſeph for continuance to be like unto them, and not onely to be plentiful in meaſure, but perpetual in duration, and to hold out as long as the everlaſting hils; and ſo it muſt imply the condition of obedience; as Deut.28.1,15. And he ſaith hils, rather then valleys (though they alſo be perpetual) becauſe he implyeth an happineſſe eminent, like as an high hill, as well as an happineſſe permanent.

that was ſeparated] (Deut. 33. 16) When he was ſold from his brethren in to Egypt, and exalted to ſuch an height above them, by his high and great authority in Egypt.

V. 27. Benjamin ſhall ravine] Theſe words ſome underſtand of the City of Jeruſalem, ſituate in the Tribe of Benjamin; where was the Temple, and the Altar, that like a Wolf devoured the Sacrifices; but it is a prophecy of men, not of ſtones, or fire; and of that Tribe was Saul the King, who was a great Warriour, and made a prey of many people, 1 Sam. Chap.11. & Chap.14. and Saul the convert, who before his converſion ravined like a Wolf upon the flock of Chriſt, Act. 9.1,2. Gal.1.13. but the prophecy is rather to be underſtood of the whole tribe, which was greedy of the prey, rather of perſons then of goods, and therefore had the heart to encounter with the other tribes, when they were about ſixteen to one, for the Benjamites were but twenty ſix thouſand ſeven hundred, and the reſt were no fewer then four hundred thouſand, Judge. 20. verſ. 15, 16, 17.

in the morning he ſhall devour the prey] That may be meant of the perſons of his enemies, devoured with the ſword, 2 Sam.2.26. This prophecy, ſome apply to the victory and prey of Saul, Eſther, Mordecai who were of this Tribe.

and at night he ſhall divide the ſpoil] As the Wolf watcheth his opportunity for prey, early in the morning, and late in the evening; ſo will the Tribe of Benjamin watch up on all advantages to ſpoyl his enemy: He beginneth in the morning, which noteth his forwardneſs, to war; and holding out untill the evening, noteth his conſtancy in battel until he conquer; for dividing of the ſpoyl, is a conſequent of victory. In likening Benjamin to a Wolf, Jacob may mean him no diſgrace, for God likneth himſelf to a Leopard, and a Bear, as well as to a Lyon, Hoſ. 13. 7, 8. in regard of his wrath and rage when he taketh vengeance on his enemies; or if he mean it of Benjamin in an ill ſenſe, to ſignifie a mercileſſe diſpoſition, and an unſatiable greedineſſe after ſpoyl, (as it is probable he did) it is an argument that his affections were overruled by the Spirit of God; for Benjamin, as the ſon of his old age, was moſt dearly and tenderly beloved of him, of whom he would have ſpoken better, if he had ſpoken of himſelf, as his natural and indulgent father.

V. 28, All theſe are the twelve Tribes of Iſrael] That is, of theſe twelve ſons of Jacob, deſcended and were denominated the twelve Tribes of Iſrael: they are uſually numbred twelve, though there were thirteen, reckoning two Tribes deſcended from Joſeph which came of him; ſo that though ſometime a Tribe be omitted (as Simeon in the benediction of Moſes, Deut, 33. and Dan in the ſealing of the tribes, Rev.7. whereof ſee the reaſon Annot. on ver.17. of this Chapter) yet the number of twelve is ſtill made up, for where others are omitted, Levi is taken in; otherwiſe Levi is commonly left out. And the reaſon is, becauſe they are reckoned according to their diſtinct portions in the Land of Canaan, which the Levites had not. See Annot, on Deut.10.9. And for their order, ſometimes they are brought in according to their birth, as Gen 29 32,&c. and Chap.30. from the ſixth verſe forward, without any reſpect to their mothers, whether wives, or hand-maids; ſometimes they are mentioned according to the ſeniority, or acceptation of their mothers; as firſt the ſons of Leah, then the ſons of Rachel, after them the ſons of Bilhah Rachels hand-maid; and laſt of all the ſons of Zilpah Leahs hand-maid; ſo are they ranked, Gen. 35. 23, &c. Some times they are brought in according to the order of birth, partly of dignity, ſo Judah is named firſt, Revel.7.5. partly according to their lot in the Land of Canaan, and for that reaſon is Zebulun placed before Iſſachar, in this Chapter, though Iſſachar were the elder brother by the ſame father and mother, Gen.13.18,20. ſometimes they are ranked ſo, as we cannot give a reaſon of their order, as in the benediction of Jacob here, and of Moſes, Deut.33. where they both ſpake as they were moved by the Holy Ghoſt; but for the moſt part, Reuben is named firſt, not alwayes, as not in Num 2.3. Rev.7. Whence the Papiſts argument drawn for Peters great preeminece from a nominal precedence is convinced to be vain; for Reuben did not excell, but loſt the birth-right, for Judah had the preeminence of the Scepter, and the Prieſthood Levi had, and the birth-right was given to Joſeph, neither can they ſay that Peter was alwyes named firſt, for James was named before him, Gal.2.9

and bleſſed them] That is, having called them all together, and ſpoken to them in particular, he diſmiſſed them with a general benediction, praying for them all; and though that which he ſpake of Reuben, Simeon, and Levi, ſeemeth liker a curſe then a bleſſing, yet if he ſaid no more then hath been noted, his whole ſpeech might be called by the name of bleſſing, the denomination being made according to the greater and better part, and it ſeemes they had their bleſſing with the reſt, for they had their portion of the Land of Canaan as well as their brethren, and their names were ſet in the precious ſtones of the breſt-plate of Aaron as well as the reſt, Exod.28.21. and of their Tribes are as many ſealed as of the reſt, Rev.7.5,7. and that ſevere reprehenſion of them by their devout and dying Father, might work upon them to repentance, and thereby make them more capable of their portion with the reſt, and ſo it was a bleſſing to them; and like unto a potion, though bitter in taſte, yet of wholeſome and healthful operation. See on verſ.7.

every one according to his bleſſing he bleſſed them] That is, the bleſſings are ſet down, as they were particularly applyed to every Tribe, according to their ſeveral references to his twelve ſons.

V. 29. gathered unto my people] That is, his ſoul to the ſociety of the Saints above, viz. the ſpirits of juſt men made perfect, as Heb.12. 23. See annot. on Chap.25.8. who are the people of his ſpiritual kindred, and his body to lodge with the bodies of thoſe to whom he had alliance by the fleſh; thus he accounts himſelf a pilgrim here. See Chap.47.9. and thoſe his people, who are gone to the reſt and peace of a better world, to which he now apprehends himſelf ready to paſſe; for his holy life makes him not doubt of an happy death, whereof he can both think, and ſpeak, with cheerfulneſs and comfort. See on Chap.25.8

bury me with my fathers] See Annot. on Chap.47.30

V. 30. In the cave, &c.] He repeateth many particulars of this burial place, to make his ſons the more mindfull of the Land of Canaan; and in particular to furniſh Joſeph with more matter of excuſe to Pharaoh when he ſhould make report of his requeſt; that he might be entertained without offence; and withal, having been abſent thence by the ſpace of ſeventy yeares, and having no written evidence to ſhow (for they were not in uſe at that time) he ſetteth down the matter the more exactly, that his right to the burial place might be the better cleared, if any other ſhould lay claim to it, or queſtion, or doubt of his intereſt in it.

V. 33 he gathered up his feet into the Bed] Which (haply) hung down before as he ſate at the bed ſide; and ſo he compoſed himſelf quietly and deliberately for the ſleep of death, having enjoyed the uſe of memory and ſpeech unto the laſt; and ſo in the one hundred and fourty ſeventh of his age, and the year of the world, 2256. he yeelded up the ghoſt A life and death whorthy our moſt ſerious thoughts, for mark the perfect of man, and behold the upright, (ſaith David) for the end of that man is peace, Pſal.37.37. and though as perfect and upright as man may be, his peace may be put off, till towards his end; few men had more croſſes in their lives, none more comfort at their death then Jacob; if it be our lot to follow him in affliction, let us hold on our piety and patience, as he did, and we ſhall be ſure of peace at the laſt, a laſting peace that never ſhall have end.

Verſ. 1. A*Nd Joſeph fell upon his fathers face*] All the brethren of Joſeph it is like (unleſſe Simeon and Levi through offence at their Fathers reproof and imprecation, were more diſpoſed to anger then grief) ſhewed themſelves mournful for the death of Jacob; but, Joſeph as in other commendable endowments, ſo in this, exceeded them all: every word of the Text importeth a ſad weight of ſorrow, whereby we may obſerve him a better ſon to his father, as before, and after this a better brother to his brethren then they were to him; Religion doth not reject natural affection, but rule and govern it, ſometimes intending, ſometimes abating the force of it, that it may be proportionable to the cauſe, and the perſon; and here we ſee in Joſeph the combination, of piety and charity in an eminent degree. None of all the ſons of Jacob more devout towords God, or more kind to his kindred, whether in direct or collateral line; if then parents would have their children to be good children to themſelves, let them by prayer, and precept, and example, do what they can to make them good children to God. See Deut.6.7,8. Epheſ.6.4.

wept upon him] Some men account weeping an argument of womaniſh weakneſs, but we finde that men of an excellent ſpirit have been noted for their weeping, as David, 1 Sam.20 4. 2 Sam.3.32. & Chap. 12.22. & 13.16. & 18.33 the man of God, 2 King 8.11. Hezekiah, 2 King.20.3. Nehemiah, 1.4. yea, Chriſt himſelf, who was never known to laugh, is recorded twice to have wept, once over dead Lazarus, Joh.11.3. another time over the foreſeen deſolation of Jeruſalem. Luk.19.41. and Joſeph is recorded to have wept ſeven times; the firſt time we read of, is Gen. 42. 24. the ſecond Gen. 43.30. the third, Chap.45. 2. the fourth, Chap.46. verſ. 29. the fifth, in this verſ. the ſixth. verſ.10. and the ſeventh, verſ,17. of this Chapter. Jacob mourned much for Joſeph when he thought he was dead, Chap.37. verſ. 34. now Joſegh repaies thoſe tender tears; and notwithſtanding his Courtly dignity, his natural piety ſeriouſly laments the loſs of the Arch-Patriarch, his father: and this affection of ſorrow, and this expreſſion of tears is lawful, if it neither be produced from diſtruſt, nor proceed to exceſs yea the want of it is a fault, Iſa.57.1. See Act.8.2.

and kiſſed him] Though many things were in uſe with the Patriarches, which after were put into precept in the Levitical Law, that which made men unclean by touching of the dead. Num 19.11. was none of them; yet ſome take it that the touch of the dead was not forbidden, but if a man did touch, he was ceremonially unclean ſeven dayes, and was to purifie himſelf by precept in a ceremonial manner there preſcribed, ver.12. which if he did not performe, he was an offender, but not by touching ſimply, of which there was none expreſſe prohibition. Howſoever it were then, now there was none, and Joſeph expected his dear affection to his dead father, yet on the earth, and not long after to be laid within it, broke no part of this due obedience to his heavenly father. Here we ſee that though there be great difference betwixt a living and a dead body, and that difference cauſe a perpetual ſeparation of the dead from the living (how kind ſoever they have been in communion of life, yet filial affection in a good ſon towards a good father dyeth not when he dyeth, but ſurviveth, and ſheweth it ſelf by offices of love afterward, and there are the like workings of good will in other relations, both of kindred and of friendſhip, which ſometimes are manifeſted by the lips, when they are cloſed to kiſs, as well as they are opened to profeſs a dearneſs of reſpect: ſo was it with Joſeph towards Jacob in this place; wherein there might be (and ſome ſay there was) ſomewhat of ceremony, as a funeral uſage in former times; which hath deſcended to later ages, and is uſed in ſome places among Chriſtians to this day; though not alwaies with ſuch ſincerity, as in this act of Joſeph, for ſometimes it is done with ſo much hypocriſie, between ſuch as have been unequally yoked, (as where perſonal liking is not reciprocal) that they have kiſſed thoſe when they are dead, whom they could have found in their hearts to have killed, while they were alive.

V. 2. his ſervants the Phyſicians] The word for Servants, in the Original, is ghnabadim, which is uſed of ſerving God, Deut.6.13. Iſa.19.23. Pſal. 2.11. and of man, Gen.25 23. 1 Sam,4.9. 1 King. 12.7. and of the tilling of the earth the ſame word is uſed, as if it were a ſerving of the earth, 2 Sam. 9.10. And the word rendred Phyſicians, is Raphaim, of Rapha, which properly ſignifieth to heal or cure, literally the body, metaphorically the mind; the word Rephaim, or Raphaim, as Nephilim, Anachim, Emim, Zuzim, and Zamzamim, are commonly conceived to be Giants; but Jacob Bulduc takes paines to prove them to have been eminent men for religion and holineſſe of life, *lib.*1 *cap.*3. cap 10 & *cap.*15. of his Book of the Church before the Law; but here doubtleſs the word is to be taken, not in a religious, but in a civil, or phyſical, or medicinal ſenſe; where we ſee the phraſe of phyſick, and the approbation of Phyſicians, is very ancient; and it was groſſe ignorance, of the Romanes, who when they came from Greece to Rome, to baniſh them by the counſel of Cato, as ſent by the ſubtle Greeks to torture the Romanes, Morne. de. verit Relig. c. 8 p. 101 And yet ſome ignorant phyſicians, there might be, who might be as like to kill as to cure, for the knowledg of Phyſick at the firſt (as it falleth out in other profeſſions) was but little, elſe ſhould not men have beeen Deified for ſo ſmall a matter, as the skill of drawing of a tooth, and of looſening the body by a purgation, as AEſculapius was, Cicer. lib, 3. de Nat Deor. p. 248 Nor would Menecrates have taken ſo much upon him, for the curing of his Patients; as to aſſume unto himſelf the title of Jupiter, *Aelian. Var. Hiſt. l.*12. *c.*51. But though Phyſicians, how excellent ſoever be not to be eſteemed gods, yet their calling is honourable, and of their calling have been very excellent men, as Luke, who was one of the four Evangeliſts, called by Paul, the beloved Phyſician, Col.4.14. who though he began in the fleſh, ended in the ſpirit, contrary to thoſe carnal and unconſtant Galatians, Gal.3.3. and was conſtant to his holy companion Paul, when all others forſook him, 2 Tim.4.10,11. And though the Phyſicians calling be ſo honourable, yet might they without diſparagement be ſervants to Joſeph, becauſe he was ſo great a man, that throughout the whole Kingdom of Egypt, none might lift up an hand or a foot without him, Gen.41.44.

embalmed] That is, beſpiced, or ſweetned the dead body, that it might not be of an offenſive ſmell to ſuch as came neer it. The Egyptians, becauſe they wanted convenient and ſeaſonable burial places, by reaſon of the inundation of Nilus, and would not burn their dead bodies (becauſe they thought fire a wild beaſt, as the Perſians did not burn the dead, becauſe they eſteemed fire to be a God) betook themſelves to the art of embalming; and therein have been ſo good proficients, that they have kept ſome dead bodyes thouſands of years, which from Egypt are tranſported into other parts of the world, to be uſed for medicine. And hence the Jewes brought their cuſtome of embalming, which they uſed in the burial of Kings and great men, as of Aſa, 2 Chron.16.14. and of Chriſt, for which they made uſe of Mirrhe and Aloes, Joh, 19.39. Mirrhe (ſo called from the Hebrew word Mor) is a gum iſſuing out of a tree, in taſte bitter, but in ſmell very ſweet; and therefore the Graces of Chriſt and his Church are compared to it, Cant.1.13. This was a principal ingredient into the pretious oyntment of the high Prieſt, Pſal,133.2. which with other ſpices, was made into a curious confection by the Apothecary, Exod. 30. 25. Aloes (ſo named of the Hebrew word, ahalim, or ahaloth) is a ſweeet wood, whereof perfumes were made, with theſe, other ſweet odoriferous ingredients were compounded, and the more for that the body was to be carried a great way to the burial, and becauſe the Egyptians were curious this way, as Herodot. ſheweth, *lib.*2. and their curioſity now and then proceeded to a ridiculous vanity, for ſometimes they furniſhed tables with meat, and ſet them before the dead, as if they were to take their meals like living men; and they uſed to keep their parents bodies at home, and ſometimes to pawn them, and he that did not redeem ſuch a pawn, was held infamous. By this embalming, the godly which ſurvived, might be admoniſhed of ſuch a corruption of nature by ſin, as makes the body of the moſt holy Saint, ſubject to an ill and unſavory ſcent; onely Chriſt was embalmed without neceſſity, for his Body was ſecured from corruption, Pſal.16.10. Act.2.31. & 13.35. though haply they that beſtowed that coſt and pains upon it, did not think ſo of it: the Papiſts will not permit him that peculiar priviledg, but as they make the Saints partners with Chriſt, in other his prerogatives, do they in this; for they tell us of Fr. Xaverius, one of the firſt ten that ſet up the Society of the Jeſuites, that his dead body, after fifteen moneths, was found covered with lime, and that it was not onely untoucht, or untainted, but that it breathed out a very ſweet ſmell to them that came neer it. So *Bellarm. de notis Ecc.l.*4. *c.*14. *Tom.*2. *p.*1174. and of their

Saint Catharine, he ſaith he ſaw her body at Bononia entire, and uncorrupt, though ſhe dyed above an hundred years before his time; and he ſaith the ſame of the body of their Saint Clare, though ſhe had been dead about three hundred years before; Bellar. de Relick. ſanct. lib. 2. cap. 3. Tom. 1. p. 933. Laſtly, religious perſons hereby meant to remember themſelves of the reſurrection of the body, and the preſervation of it eternally afterwards.

V. 3. Threeſcore and ten dayes] The time of mourning for the dead, among the Hebrews, was thirty daies, Numb 20. 29. Deut. 21.13. and 34 8. and the Egyptians mourning ſeventy dayes, may ſeem to out-ſorrow them in time, but for degree of grief, doubtleſſe the Iſraelites exceeded them; But in this mourning, it is likely there was a meeting of the Egyptians and Iſraelites cuſtome together; the Iſraelites agreed with the Egyptians, in the long and curious ceremony of embalming for fourty dayes, which were dayes of ſadneſſe, becauſe they were ſpent in applications to the dead; and the Egyptians agreed with the Hebrews in their thirty dayes of mourning, according to the places forementioned. There is afterward mention made of a mourning, by the ſpace of ſeven dayes, ver. 10. thoſe were ſolemnized in Canaan, ſomewhere near the burial, but whether next before, or next after it, is uncertain; theſe were ſpent in more ſerious ſorrow, the greater number were rather ceremonies of mourning, and conſiſted much in forbearance of white and glorious apparel, of delicacy in dreſſing and trimming the body and the hair.

V.4. Joſeph ſpake unto the houſe of Pharaoh] That ſo great a favourite, and ſo honourable a perſon as Joſeph was, ſhould need mediatours to the King, or that he ſhould uſe them without need, may ſeem not to conſiſt with his preeminence, or prudence; yet there might be many reaſons for it; it might be his modeſty, to be beholding to ſome Courtiers to mediate for him with the King, who haply had done the like office for them; & by making them mediatours, he took occaſion to give them ful information, and ſatisfaction touching his motion, and to engage them to ſpeak for it, who otherwiſe would be forward enough to frame exceptions againſt it, and to traduce him for it, as if he meant to deſert the King, or diſdain his Kingdom, as not good enough for the interment of his dead Father, which had kept him while he was alive: And he might have cauſe to fear offence the rather, if (as it may befal the beſt and worthieſt men, by the fickleneſs of the Kings favour, or the falſhood of ſupplanting Courtiers) his authority and acceptation was any whit weakned, the times of neceſſity, which cauſed his advancement, being now expired. Or it may be the Ceremony of mourning, required his reſidence about the dead corps. Or laſt of all perhaps it was againſt the Ceremony of the Court, for a man in a mourning habit to appear in the preſence of the King, as Eſt. 4. 12. For ſuch reaſons as theſe (and it may be there were others, which Joſephs wiſdome might keep to himſelf, or communicate unto the ſervants of Pharaoh) might he at this time make uſe of ſuch interceſſours, to make known and preſent his requeſt to Pharaoh.

V. 5. Made me ſwear] Chap.27.31. That he may ſeem to diſdain the burial of the dead among the Egyptians, he pleads the obligation of an oath from his dying father; that ſo, if any exception ſhould ariſe, it might die with him; for men are not ſo apt to cavil at the dead, as at their ſurvivers, nor at what is pleaded by neceſſity, as what is in our liberty to do, or to leave undone; leaſt of all that is offenſive, which is done out of conſcience to God, and fidelity to the dead, whereof the light and inſtinct of nature, makes men piouſly and affectionately apprehenſive, though they want the inſtitution of the true religion.

which he digged] Or, bought, For a word which is a deſcendent of the ſame root, is put for buying, Deut.2.6. Hoſ.3.2. So they that think it hard to ſay, that Jacob digged the burial place, which was prepared by his grand-father Abraham, ſuppoſe it to be more like that Jacob might buy it, not in regard he was in the loynes of his grand-father when he bought it, (for ſo he might as well be ſaid to dig it, as to buy it) but becauſe his title might be queſtioned, and his poſſeſſion diſturbed, and ſo he might be compelled to pay for that again, which his grandfather had purchaſed before. But it is moſt probable, that the burial place, which Abraham bought, was ſo ſpacious, that he and his ſon, and grand-children, might dig themſelves ſeveral cells, or repoſitories for their dead bodies in it, as they conceived they might have occaſion to make uſe of them; and it was the manner of many in former times, ſo much to mind their mortality, as to build ſepulchres for their dead bodies, as well as to build houſes for living habitations, 2 Chro.16.14. Iſa.22.16. Mat. 27.60.

bury me] The bodies of the dead have, in divers ages and countries, being diverſly diſpoſed of; ſome have been embalmed and not buried, as hath been noted of the manner of the Egyptians; ſome buried without embalming, as the ordinary people every where; ſome embalmed and buried, and of them ſome had the Aromatick ſpices incorporated into their bodies; and ſome had their dead bodies laid upon them, and ſo were buried; for ſome, ſweet odours were burned at their burial, 2 Chron. 16.14. and Chap. 21. 19. and ſometimes the bodies themſelves were burned, 2 Sam.31.12. And this among the Jews; among the Romans, burning was taken up by Sylla, that others might not do by him, as he did by Marius, whoſe Relicks he removed from their burial place, and ſcattered them abroad Cic.lib 2 *d leg.pag.*340.341 *Plin.Nat. Hiſt. lib.*7. cap. 54. and ſome people wrapped their dead in skins, and hanged them up upon trees; ſo did the Colchi. Aelian. Var.Hiſt lib 4. cap 1. Yet burial, as it is moſt ancient, ſo it is moſt ordinary; ſo that to want it is complained of as a calamity, by Gods people, Pſal. 79.3. and threatned, as a Judgement on the wicked, in general, Jerem.7.33. and on Jehojakim in particular, of whom the Lord ſaith, He ſhall be buried with the burial of an aſs, Jerem. 22. 19. that is not buried at all, but caſt out of the gates to the common-dunghil, where dogs and fowls may devoure his body, as the body of an Aſſe. Dub. But is not burning better then burying? Anſw. In ſome reſpects it is, for ſo, neither men nor divels can abuſe the body of the dead; but in ſome, burial is better: Firſt, becauſe it is more anſwerable to Gods decree and doom concerning man; Gen.3.19. Secondly, becauſe it is a ſowing of the body in the earth, with expectation of the reſurrection of the dead, as of the ſowen corn, to which the Apoſtle compareth it, 1 Cor. 15. 36,42.43. and in theſe reſpects, it is not fit that any creatures, who are not raiſed from the dead, ſhould be ſolemnly buried; which was practiſed by Poliarchus, who uſed with great ſolemnity to bury his dead dogs, and cocks, which he took delight in, and to ſet up pillars, and write Epithaphs upon their graves, which is noted, as a luxurious vanity by Aelian; Var. Hiſt. lib. 8. *cap.*4.

V. 6. as he made thee ſwear] The very infidels would have oaths performed.

V. 7. all the ſervants] A very great number of them: for all, is ſometimes uſed for many, as Matth. 3. 5. as many is put ſometimes for all, as Rom. 5. 19. By one mans diſobedience, many were made ſinners, that is, all. It is not uſual for Court grace to hold out ſo long as Joſephs did, eſpeceially to one of another nation; but being the favourite of God, he made him the favourite of great men; and ſuch was his prudence and ſweetneſſe of diſpoſition, that he kept the height of honour without hate or envy.

V. 8. onely their little ones, and their flocks, and their herds] The little ones could not look to themſelves, much leſſe to their flocks and herds; therefore ſome great ones were to be left, to take the charge and care of both.

V. 9. a very great company] Some for defence and inforcement, in caſe they ſhould be aſſaulted by the Canaanites in the way, or their way ſtopped, or the burial place denyed; and for Jacobs more conſtant and honourable memorial, for as he honoured God in his life, ſo he is honoured at his death; for them that honour me (ſaith God) I will honour, 1Sam 2.33.

V. 10 threſhing floor of Atad] The place is ſo called from the multitude of brambles or thiſtles, for Atad ſignifieth a bramble, or thiſtle; in after times it was called Bethagla, that is, the houſe of the warn, or circuit, (as many expound it) for the firſt part it is Beth, a houſe, and for the reſt, ſome conceive it is derived from galal, which ſignifieth (among other acceptions) to lead or compaſſe about, as thoſe that mourned for Jacob, went about to bring him to his burial place, or compaſſed his corps or grave, about with great ſolemnity.

beyond Jordan] If they went the next way from Egypt, to the burial place (the cave of Machpelah before Mamre) that was in reſpect of Egypt on this ſide Jordan; and then their mourning at Atad or Bethagla, was well towards fifty miles beyond the ſepulchre; if ſo, they buried the corps afterward, and then there were ſo many miles of loſt labour in coming back to do it, for which no good reaſon can be rendred. It may be more probable that they went about, though not for fear of the Canaanites (for the Egyptians at that time were more formidable to the Canaanites, then the Canaanites to them) nor that they myſtically went that way, by which the Iſraelites afterwards were to paſs from Egypt into Canaan, yet for more commodious paſſage for ſo great a company, which could not conveniently travel in a narrow way, they fetched a compaſſe about, which occaſioned them to paſs the River Jordan, before they could come to Atad or Machpelah, which were beyond Iordan, not only in reſpect of Moſes his abode when he wrote this Story, but in reſpect of the local ſituation in the order of their journey. Some learned Hebricians make a great difference betwixt begneber, and megneber, the former they will have to ſignifie on this ſide, the latter beyond; but they make not good their obſervations by any fit inſtances, nor will their expoſition ſort with the ſituation of places, according to the exact topography of this journey.

great and very ſore lamentation] The Egyptians made very great ſhews of much mourning; ſee the Annot. on verſe 3. They mourned by themſelves, and Ioſeph and his company by themſelves; and howſoever the mourning of the Egyptians were full of vanity and ſuperſtition, yet that of Ioſeph (it is like) was grave, religious, and ſincere, with ſuch diſcourſe, as ſo holy an example migh miniſter unto them.

V. 13. field of] The moſt ancient burial, even of the beſt believers, and moſt religious perſons, was in the field, for that purpoſe Abraham bought this field of the children of Heth, Chap. 23. v. 17, 18, 19. And Moſes was buryed in a valley, though the particular place of his ſepulchre be unknown, Deut.34 6. And ſo were Kings alſo buried, ſome in their fields, 2 Chron.26.23. and ſome in Gardens, 2 King.21.18. And ſo was our Saviour buried, *Ioh.*19.41. The Heathens in their burials obſerved a double caution; the one that the dead ſhould not be buried in Cities; which was forbidden by the Emperour Adrian, upon a penalty of fourty crowns upon them that did it, and upon the Magiſtrate that ſuffered it, Cal Rhodig Antiq. Lect. lib. 17 *c.*19. The other, out of Cities burial places ſhould not be made in fruitful, but in barren ground, ib. c. 20. So Plat. in his ſecond book of Laws, among the laws of Lycurgus, one was that burial places ſhould be in the ground near to Churches, & round about them, that youth accuſtomed to the ſight of graves, might be the more hardned againſt the apprehenſion of death. Plutarch in the life of Lycurgus, p. 58. Among Chriſtians, the places of interment are uſed with much difference; ſome bury in places remote from the communion of men, ſome in Churches, and Churchyards; At the firſt, burial in the Church was allowed only to the patron or incumbent; after, ſuch as were of eminency for holineſs, or eſtate, were admitted to it, as by eſpeciall priviledg; now it is ſo common, that it becomes very incommodious to humane ſociety; beſides, many are ſo tainted with ſuperſtition in it (though they be not Papiſts, who moſt abound with that vanity) that if their friends, children, or other kindred die of the peſtilence, they think they are not buried like Chriſtians, unleſſe they be laid where others are, who did not die of a contagious diſeaſe. Dub. But is it not better ordinarily to bury in Churches and Church-yards, then elſewhere? Anſw. Firſt, In reſpect of the dead, it is all one whether he be drowned, or burnt, or buried; and if buried, all one where the grave is made for him. Secondly, In reſpect of the living, it is noyſome and unwholſome to bury there, whither the living have often occaſion to make their recourſe; eſpecially in peſtilential times, and moſt of all if the graves be not digged very deep. Thirdly, though we put no Religion in places, in the time of the Goſpel, yet it is not comly for religious perſons to make the houſe of God a Golgotha. Dub. But is it not lawful for any to be buried there? Anſw. Yes, for the bodies of the Saints, having been living Temples of the Holy Ghoſt, 1 Cor.6.19, are better then the material Temples of wood and ſtone. But yet they that ſurvive (if a living dog be better then a dead lion, Eccleſ.9.4) are more to be reſpected then the bodies of the dead; eſpecially in this local ceremony, which doth them neither good nor hurt; and ſo it were ſimply better, that none at all ſhould be buried in Churches, then that it ſhould be ſo common as now it is.

of Machpelah] See Annot. on Chap.23.9. and Chap.49.30.

V. 16. ſent a meſſenger] Hebr. they gave charge, or advertiſement to Joſeph, without any expreſs mention of a meſſenger, or meſſengers; yet ſuch were uſed; two, ſay ſome Hebrews, and they name them, Dan and Naphthali, who were brought up together with Joſeph, and ſociably imployed in attendance on Jacobs flocks, Chap.37.2. Others take it to be rather Benjamin, who was moſt gracious with Joſeph; both are uncertain: all that may be ſafely affirmed in this matter is, that ſome one was employed in the meſſage, who was no ſtranger, and ſuch a one as was worthy of ſuch truſt.

thy father did] It is not like their father knew it, (ſo charitable was Joſeph to his brethren, ſo chary of his good fathers contentment) for if he had known, he would have given ſome touch of it in his ſpeech to his ſons, Chap 49 as well as he did of the faults of Reuben, Simeon, and Levi; and if he had known it, Jacob knew Joſeph to be ſo good, that he would need no ſuch meſſage, to do his brethren no hurt; It is probable then, that their guilt making them afraid, they fained ſomewhat in their fathers name, that might deliver them from their brothers diſpleaſure.

V. 17. ſo ſhall ye ſay unto Joſeph] To make their peace with Joſeph whoſe goodneſſe was ſuſpected by their guilt, they plead for pacification and pardon, by many arguments; Firſt, by the deſire of his moſt honored, and dead father, whoſe requeſt to Joſeph had the power of a command, which he might have charged upon him with an oath, as verſe 5. Secondly, the relation of brethren, who under that title were to be tenderly dealt withal, though (when time was) they did not deal with him accordingly. Thirdly, as penitents, they confeſſe a fault, and crave pardon, and as unworthy to be called Jacobs ſons, they call him Joſephs father, wherein alſo they inſinuate his paternal tenderneſſe to Joſeph, loving him more then all his other children, Gen.37.3. Fourthly, they add to theſe motives of charity, a motive of piety, which is, their agreement and conſent in the ſervice of God; Forgive the treſpaſs of the ſervants of the God of thy father; by which phraſe, the God of thy father, they ſeem to imply, that as Ioſeph loved his father for Gods ſake and his own, ſo they would have him love God for his fathers ſake; and by pleading thus, they mean that having one God, they ſhould be at one among themſelves.

wept] As pitying their perplexity, and grieving that they made doubt of his good will towards them, of whom they had ſo good proof, before his fathers departure out of this life. See on ver.1.

V. 18. fell down] Here again they confirm the prediction of Ioſephs dream, Chap.37.ver.7, &c.

V. 19. Am I in the place of God] Or (as ſome Hebricians render the words) am not I under God? Firſt, of the former reading; They had called themſelves Gods ſervants, ver. 17. and preſently they fall down before him, ver. 18. and call themſelves his ſervants, as if they put him in Gods ſtead, by fearing him more then God: for it ſeems they feared his revenge, more then Gods vengeance: This might make him think worſe of their homage done unto him, then at other times before, and give him occaſion to ask this queſtion, Am I in the place of God? That is, in Gods ſtead to revenge my ſelf, or take vengeance into mine hands, which belongeth to him? See Deut. 32.25. Rom. 12. 19. Heb. 10.30. Or, may I take upon me to turn that to your hurt, which God hath ordered and diſpoſed for your good, as if I were a God as well as he? The former expoſition hath beſt coherence with the words that went before, and the latter with thoſe that follow after; and either may be true. Secondly, the other reading, am I not under God? may bear this ſenſe; If God who is rich in mercy doth abundantly pardon the penitent, why ſhould I, who am under him, and in ſubordination to him, be obdurate againſt my relenting brethren?

V. 20. but God meant it unto good] You plotted, but being but men could not perform; but God, whoſe will is his deed, really made good his gracious purpoſe towards you. Gods goodneſſe over-maſters the malignity of men, turning their evil into good, and making a medicine of a poyſon. See Pſal.119.17. In this acknowledgment Joſeph taketh off the thanks and praiſe of their preſervation from himſelf, and giveth it to God. See Gen 45.5. Act.3.12,13.

much people] The Egyptians, and other people, who in the famine were furniſhed with corn, out of the ſtore which Joſephs providence had laid up in the years of plenty.

V. 21. nouriſh you] By their plot Joſeph was like to periſh, or famiſh in a pit; but he, when he had them in his power, was ſo far from returning them like for like, that he recompenſed their wrongs with beneficence, doing good for evil, (which our Saviour requireth of Chriſtians, Matth.5.44.) overcoming evil with good, as the Apoſtle preſcribeth, Rom.12.21.

V. 22. fathers houſe] That is, his houſhold, or family, called the houſe, by a figure, which putteth the thing containing for the thing contained.

V. 23. of the third generation] In the Original they are called ſons of the third, that is, grandchildren to Ephraim in the fourth, and to Joſeph in the fifth degree; ſo Ephraim (though younger then Manaſſeh) exceeded him two deſcents; for Joſhua was the ſeventh from Ephraim incluſively, 1 Chron.7.26,27. but Zelophehad (who was contemporary with Joſhua, and dyed in the wilderneſſe) was but the fifth from Manaſſeh incluſively, Num. 27.1. and ſo Jacobs Prophecy of Ephraims more numerous poſterity, Chap. 48. 19. took effect betime, even while Ioſeph lived.

the children alſo of Machir] Or, the ſons of Machir: (for the word in Hebrew is of the Maſculine gender) whereby ſome underſtand only Gilead, by an Enallage of number, the plural number for the ſingular; as Gen. 46. 7, 23. Matth. 27 44. Luke 23. 25. Yet we find in the Genealogy of Manaſſeh, that Machir had two wives, and though by the one he had but one ſon, who was named Gilead, by the other he had two ſons, Pereſh, and Shereſh, 1 Chr. 7 16. but theſe of the ſecond marriage haply were not born in Ioſephs time, for he lived but fifty three years after his father Iacob.

were brought up upon Joſephs knees] The words according to the Original are, they were born on Joſephs knees, a phraſe moſt properly uſed of the femal ſex, Gen. 30.3. as that of coming from between the feet, Deut 28.57. yet as this latter is ſometimes figuratively applied to men, as Gen.49. 10. ſo may the former be, in that loving fathers delight to ſee their new born babes, children, or grand-children, and to ſhew ſuch kindneſs to them, as may well be expreſt by laying on the knees, or ſetting on the lap.

V. 24. ſurely viſit] He ſpeaketh this by the Spirit of Prophecy, to exhort his brethren to have full truſt in Gods promiſes for their deliverance, and to ſtirre up their memories and meditations of them, by bringing of his bones to take poſſeſſion for him, though dead before.

V. 25 took an oath] As his father took an oath of him, ver.5. ſo did he of his brethren and kinſmen, though not for his burial, yet for the bringing of his bones into the promiſed Land, upon their deliverance from the Egyptian Tyranny, which was not to begin until Ioſephs perſon were out of ſight, and his good deeds out of mind, Exod.1 8. This deliverance was accompliſhed about one hundred and fifty years after his death which fell out in the year of the world, 2523 or 2524. Pareus in Chronol Tab. next before his queſtions, and in cap. 50. on Gen.v 25 others compute otherwiſe, the reaſon of which difference ariſeth partly from the diverſe account of the birth of Abraham; which ſome refer to the ſeventieth year of Terah, ſome to the one hundred and thirty; and partly for that ſome place Cainan in the genealogy, and allow thirty years to his age, whom others omit.

of the children of Iſrael] It is not ſaid, of his brethren, becauſe they might all of them be dead before the Iſraelites departure out of Egypt, and it is like were ſo; for all of them (but Benjamin) being elder then Ioſeph, it is not probable that they, or any of them, outlived him one hundred and fourty years; of Levi we find that he lived one hundred thirty ſeven years, Exod.6.16. the Scripture being ſilent of the age and time of the reſt; therefore it is moſt like that this oath concerning the Tranſlation of Ioſephs bones, was ſo often renewed and taken again, or at leaſt remembred and reported by the parents and their children, that it might be ſurely performed by that generation, in whoſe time their deliverance was brought to paſſe.

ye ſhall carry up] After God hath viſited you in mercy, you ſhall depart hence, and take poſſeſſion of the promiſed Land; in the mean time he deſired not his body to be carried out of Egypt, as his fathers was, for the Egyptians would have taken it ill from him, though from his father they did not: beſides, it was ſome comfort to his ſurviving kindred, that he was (though but in his body, and at laſt, but in his bones) remaining with them; whereby his memorial was had in more honour with the Egyptians; and the Iſraelites might expect the more favour from them, while Ioſeph their brother was remembred among them.

my bones from hence] From Egypt, which was accordingly done, Exod. 13. 19. and the place whither they were brought, was the Land of Canaan, promiſed to Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, as is ſaid in this place, ver.24 and they were not carried thither, or kept here, for relicks to be worſhipped, but to be buried, as Joſh. 24 32. Nor were they brought to Canaan, as by way of reſtitution, becauſe Joſeph was ſold thence; for that had been but as if he that had ſtolen a bag of gold, ſhould reſtore the empty bag, when the gold is gone; beſides, he was ſold from Dothan, Gen.37.17, &c. and the remainders of him were buried at Shechem, Joſh.24 32. Nor did he deſire to be removed into the Land of Canaan, becauſe (as ſome Jews have conceived) there will be a readier reſurrection from that ſoyl, then from any other, for that is but a vain fancy, which Joſephs wiſdome could not imagine: But to teſtifie his aſſured belief that God would make good his promiſe for the Iſraelites deliverance from Egypt, and their ſettlement in the Land of Canaan; and his love to his Progenitors, with whom he deſired communion both living and dead; and to ſtir up the memories and meditations of his brethren and kindred, concerning the promiſes that God had made to their Progenitors for the poſſeſſion of the Land of Canaan.

V. 16. An hundred and ten years old] Whereof fourſcore years paſſed in an honourable Principality in Egypt; for he was advanced in the thirtieth year of his age, Gen. 41.46 and about nine years after he received his father in Egypt, and preſented him before Pharaoh, after the ſeven plentiful years, and two of the years of famine were expired. See Gen 45.11. & 47.1. after which time he held on his dignity and authority ſeventy one years; which added to the thirty, and the nine years forementioned, make up the juſt number of an hundred and ten years.

in a coffin] Cheſt, or Ark; for the word aron, here uſed, is the ſame which is uſed for the Ark of the Teſtimonie or Covenant, Deut. 31.9. yet though they agreed in name, they differed much in their fabrick, both for matter and figure; and were placed at a diſtance one from the other; for the Ark of the Teſtimonie was kept in the Holy of holies of the Tabernacle, where no other Ark or Coffin was admitted: ſo there were two Arks when the Temple was built; that of the Covenant, and another which had an hole in the top of it, to receive the oblations for the repair of the Temple, which was placed neer the Altar on the right ſide, at the entrance into the houſe of the Lord, 2 King. 12. 9.10.

An Appendix to the Hiſtorie of the Buriall of Jacob and Joſeph, clearing the doubts of Stephens Speech, Act.7.16. concerning the burial of Jacob and the Fathers in Sichem, in the Land of Canaan

THere is none, that frequently, and with an attentive mind is converſant in the holy Scripture, but upon his reading the Hiſtory of this fiftieth Chapter of Geneſis, will tranſmit his thoughts, as far as to the ſpeech of Stephen, Acts 17. verſe 15, 16. and he that reads that paſſage will reciprocate them back again to this ſtory, and it may be alſo to the 23 Chapter, verſe 16, 17, 18, 19, 20. and the 33 Chapter, and 18 verſe of this Book; and to the 24 of Joſh. verſe 32 and therefore it is not out of place, nor out of ſeaſon, here to ſearch for a ſolution of that difficulty, which, while it is doubtful in the Acts, caſts back a ſhadow of obſcurity upon thoſe places of the Old Teſtament, which will not vaniſh until that Text break out with ſome more brightneſſe of illuſtration, then from ſo ſhort an Expoſition as a marginal note can be expected, and ſuch an one is that which is upon Acts 7. 16 forementioned; for when that was made (and the ſame may be ſaid of ſome others) the Printer had no purpoſe to publiſh a Commentary on the Text alone, but to affix the expoſition of it to the margin of the Bible, otherwiſe they (who have made brief notes) as they were well able, ſo would they have been very willing to have made large Annotations; though in ſuch variety of Agents as have contributed their pains to this work, it may be ſome (according to the divers inclinations and bent of their genius) laboured for Laconical brevity, that they might ſay much in few words, while others gave more way to an Aſiatical length, leſt they ſhould be ſo ſhort, as not (by an ordinary Reader) to be underſtood.

Now for the more clear and full diſcuſſion of the doubts in the ſpeech of Stephen, it will be convenient briefly to ſet down, firſt, the words of Stephen, which are, Acts 7. 15, 16 So Jacob went down into Egypt, he and our fathers, and were carryed over into Sichem, and laid in the Sepulchre which Abram bought for a ſum of money, of the ſons of Emor, the father of Sechem.

And ſecondly, the original Stories of the Old Teſtament, whence they are taken, and whereto they refer; as firſt, that in Gen.23.16.20. Abraham weighed to Ephron the ſilver which he had named, in the audience of the ſons of Heth, four hundred ſhekels of ſilver, currant money with the Merchant. And the field of Ephron, which was in Machpelah, which was before Mamre, the field, and the cave which was therein, and all the trees that were in the field, that were in all the borders round about, were made ſure unto Abraham for a poſſeſſion, in the preſence of the children of Heth. And the field and the cave that is therein, were made ſure unto Abraham for a poſſeſſion of a burying place, by the ſons of Heth, verſe 16, 17, 18, 20.

Secondly, that in Gen.50.13 —— his ſons carried him into the land of Canaan, and buried him in the cave of the field of Machphelah, which Abraham bought with the field for a poſſeſſion of a burying place, of Ephron the Hittite before Mamre.

Thirdly, that of Joſhua, Chap. 24. verſe 32 And the bones of Joſeph, which the children of Iſrael brought up out of Egypt, buried they in Sechem, in a parcel of ground which Jacob bought of the ſons of Hamor, the father of Sechem, for an hundred pieces of ſilver; and it became the inheritance of the children of Joſeph.

To which we may add (and it will help to ſolve the doubt) that paſſage out of the Goſpel of John ch.4.5. Then cometh he to a city of Samaria, which is called Sychar, neer to the parcel of ground that Jacob gave to his ſon Joſeph.

Out of which we will firſt gather up what is without controverſie: ſecondly we will ſet down the ſeveral doubts which ariſe out of the ſeeming contradiction of one Text to another: thirdly, we will endeavour the reſolution of them, ſo as may be with moſt ſecurity to the credit, and authority to the Scripture.

Firſt, It is clear, that the field, and burying place which Abraham bought, Gen. 23 from verſe 16 to ver. 20. and Chap. 50. 13 is not the ſame which Iacob bought, Gen 33.18, 19 & Joſh.24 32. For they were diverſe in reſpect of name, ſituation, or place, of uſe, of price, and of perſons.

1. For the Name; that of Abraham was called the field of Machpelah; that of Jacob had no ſuch name, but was called a parcel of ground which he bought of the ſons of Hamor, Joſh. 24. 32. which he gave unto his ſon Joſeph, Joſh.4 5. and which became the inheritance of the children of Joſeph, Joſh. 24. 32.

2. For Situation, the field of Abraham was before, or over againſt Mamre, or Hebron, in the Tribe of Judah; that of Jacob was near the City Sichem, or (as it was corruptly called in our Saviours time) Sichar, Ioh.4.5. a City of Samaria, in the Tribe of Ephraim, diſtant from Hebron about 22 miles, accounting for a mile, as much in length as takes up an hour in ordinary travel.

3. For Price; that of Abraham coſt four hundred ſhekels of ſilver, Gen.23.16 that of Iacob coſt but an hundred pieces of ſilver, Ioſh 24.31 Heb. an hundred lambs, or an hundred ſilverlings, ſtamped or marked with the repreſentation of a lamb.

4. For Uſe; the field of Abraham was bought for a burying place at firſt, and there Abraham and Sarah his wife, Iſaac and Rebekah his wife were buried, there (ſaith Jacob) I buried Leah, Gen.49.31. and there Iacob beſpak his own burial place, verſe 29, 30 Chap. 50 verſe 55 and there was he buried, Gen. 50.13 but the field of Iacob was bought for another purpoſe, and was firſt uſed, not for a burial place for man, but for an Altar for God, Gen. 33.20. although afterwards the bones of Ioſeph were buried there, and it is probale alſo, the remainders of the other Patriarches.

Fifthly, and laſtly, they differed in Perſons, both byers and ſellers; for Abraham bought his field of Ephron the Hittite, Gen. 23. 17. Iacob bought his field of the ſons of Hamor, Ioſh 24.32 Acts 7. 16.

Secondly, It is manifeſt that theſe two purchaſes, being ſo diſtinct in themſelves, ſeem to be confounded in the ſpeech of Stephen.

Thirdly, It is evident, that though that were granted, and therewithal that Stephen erred, that yet it cannot impeach the truth and authority of *S*aint Lukes relation; for a true Hiſtorian may write that which is not true, in the name of another; and there may be an Hiſtorical truth, where a moral truth is wanting; as where Moſes writeth that Iacob ſaith, I am Eſau thy firſt born, Gen.27. 19, 24 and Ezra, Ieremiah, or Hezekiah, or whoever was the Pen-man of the firſt book of Kings, wrote an Hiſtorical truth, Chap.13.18. where we read, that the old Prophet ſaid to the young, that an Angel had ſpoken to him, to bring him back to take refreſhing at his houſe, though in him that ſpake it, it was a moral lie. See on chap.46, 27.

Fourthly, That is alſo clear, if Stephen (making a long ſpeech on the ſudden) did miſtake, and miſreport ſomewhat of the ſtory of the Old Teſtament, that cannot prejudice either the truth of Scripture, or the holineſſe of *S*tephen, or that aſſiſtance which he had from the Holy Ghoſt, though it be phraſed [he was filled with the Holy Ghoſt:] for that doth not import a perpetual, and infallible guidance of the Spirit in all particulars, as hath been obſerved in Annot. on Chap. 46. 27.

Secondly, Theſe propoſitions premiſed, the doubts to be diſcuſſed are partly general, partly particular.

Firſt, The general doubt is, how it can be ſaid, that Jacob, and the Fathers (whom Stephen calleth our fathers) were carried into Sichem, and there buried, Acts 7.16 ſince we read only of the burial of Joſephs bones in that place, Joſh.24.62.

Secondly, For particulars, the doubts are two; Firſt of Abraham, How the Fathers can be ſaid to be laid in the ſepulchre which Abraham bought of Hamor, when Abraham bought his burying place of Ephron, Gen.23.16. and Jacob purchaſed the field of Hamor, Joſh.24.32.

Secondly, Of Hamor, concerning whom there are three ſcruples.

Firſt, whether he were the father, or the ſon of Sichem.

Secondly, whether the Father of Ephron were called Hamor.

Thirdly, why Hamor is ſaid to be the Father of Sechem, rather then of any other of his ſons.

Thirdly, For reſolution of the doubts; To the Firſt (how it may be ſaid that Jacob and the Fathers were buried in Shechem, when we read only of Joſephs bones that they were brought thither, Joſh.24.32) it may be ſaid, Firſt, That the affirming of Joſeph, is no denial of the reſt. Secondly, Though it be not mentioned in the Scripture, it might be revealed to Stephen; as the name of Jannes and Jambres, the enchanters of Egypt, though we find them not in the Book of Exodus, nor in any other of the Old Teſtament, S. Paul knew and wrote their names, 2 Tim.3.8. and Jude knew of the Prophecy of Enoch, whereof there was no mention in the Old Teſtament, Jude verſe 14. Thirdly, It is very probable, that what Joſeph required concerning his bones, was done by the reſt in conformity to his example.

But the greateſt doubt is concerning Jacob, who was certainly buried in the ſepulchre of Abraham, as the reſt were not. Whereto the Anſwer is divers.

Firſt, Some ſay, that they were buried in Sechem, but were removed to Machpelah by the Shechemites, as not enduring them to lye in their ſoyle, out of a malignant remembrance of that which was done by Simeon and Levi, againſt their people and city; but it is not probable, that they that liked them ſo little, would honour them ſo much, as to bring them ſo far to an honourable burying place.

Secondly, Others conceive the words may be diſtributively taken; for, as there be two ſorts of perſons ſpoken of, and two places of burial, the one, that is, Jacob, might be buried in Abrahams burial place, the reſt at Shechem; but the words ſeem rather to be ſpoken of one burial place then of two.

Thirdly, Some hold there is no neceſſity of either of theſe anſwers, for though Jacob and the reſt be joyned together in a ſtate of mortality, Act. 7. 15. yet the 16 ver. of their burial may be confined to them, as the next Antecedent, in Sychem our fathers; without taking him into their number, though he, and none but he, of thoſe that dyed in Egypt, were buried in the Sepulchre of Abraham.

To the ſecond Doubt (how the Fathers can be ſaid to be laid in the Sepulchre which Abraham bought) divers anſwers are given:

Firſt, Some conceive there is ſome miſpriſion in the Tranſcribers of the Scripture, who miſtook the name of Abraham for Jacob; but that is not like to be true, nor ſafe to admit; not the firſt, becauſe all, or moſt copies have it ſo; nor is it ſafe to admit not the ſecond, for if the original, wherewith ſo many copies are concurrent, ſhould be corrupted, it would extenuate the authority of the holy Text.

Secondly, Others rather think (and it is more like, and leſſe dangerous) that Stephen miſtook the name of Abraham for Jacob. Againſt which anſwer, if it be ſaid, that his adverſaries, if he had been ſo miſtaken, would have taken him with it, and reproached him for it; the reply may be, that their rage againſt him was ſo great, that they took no notice of his errour in a matter of no great moment; or if they did, it might be omitted in Saint Lukes Narration.

Thirdly, Some conceive they avoid the inconveniencies laſt mentioned, by ſaying, that Abraham is not here to be taken in the Nominative caſe, but in the Genitive, underſtanding Jacob the grandchild of Abraham; for the word ſon, or grandchild, may as well be underſtood, as the word Brother, 2 Sam. 21.19. where Elhanan is ſaid to ſlay Goliah the Gittite, that is, the brother of Goliah, as the word is ſupplyed, 1 Chron.20.5. or as the word ſiſter, 2 Sam. 21.8. where it is ſaid, he took the five ſons of Michal, that is, the ſiſter of Michal, for ſhe had no children, 2 Sam.6.23. or as the word mother, Mark 15 40. as is noted afterwards; all which words, mother, brother and ſiſter, are omitted by a figure called Elleipſis, or Eclipſis, which is clearer in the Greek by the Article of the Genitive caſe, then in the Hebrew which hath no ſuch diſtinction by various terminations of caſes, as the Greek tongue hath. Others ſay, the name Abraham may be taken in the Nominative caſe. And indeed the name of the parents or progenitors, is ſometimes put for the poſterity, as the name of Iſrael or Jacob is put for his off-ſpring, many degrees of deſcent diſtant from him, and the name of David is put for the Meſſiah the deſcendant of David, Jer.30.9. Ezek.34.23. And Joſeph is put for his two ſons Ephraim and Manaſſeh, Gen.48.15. and ſo David is named where Rehoboam is meant, 1 King.12.16. and Abijah the ſon of Rehoboam, is called Rehoboam, in the report of the war betwixt Jeroboam and him, when Rehoboam was dead, as will appear by comparing 2 Chron. 13.3. with 1 King.15.6. Now by ſuch an expoſition, though Stephens ſpeech (if that were his meaning) might be freed from errour, yet if he were not underſtood in ſuch a ſenſe (which is not obvious to an ordinary apprehenſion, and hardly light upon without ſtudy) he might by the hearers be thought to falſifie, in putting one name for another; therefore ſome endeavour to remove the doubt by that which followeth.

In the third Doubt, which is concerning Hamor: where were three ſcruples: Firſt, whether he were father or ſon to Shechem. According to the vulgar Latine, and the Geneva, it is the ſon of Shechem; others ſay, the father of Shechem; the original ſaith neither, but tou Sychem, that is, of Sechem, which in reſpect of Grammar, may be either; but the original ſtory, Joſh.24.32. (whence the word muſt be ſupplyed) ſaith, the father of Shechem: the like conſtruction we have, Matth.1.6. and 10.2,3. and Luke 24.10. where we read Mary of James, which is made up by addition of a word, Mary the mother of James, Mark 15.40. The ſecond, Whether the father of Ephron were called Hamor, ſo ſome ſay, that Zohar Ephrons father, with whom Abraham bargained for the field of Machpelah, Chap. 23 17. was called Hamor; and ſo they think the difficulty of this place is beſt cleared, making the burial place to be that of Abrahams, not that of Jacobs purchaſe: But this is yet too ſhort to reach home to the removal of the Doubt; for though it be true, that it is not ſtrange in Scripture for one man to have divers names, yet it doth not appear to be ſo in this caſe, nor that this Hamor had a ſon called Shechem, as that Hamor, of whom Jacob bought his portion of ground, had; where we are to anſwer to the third ſcruple, which is, Why Shechem only of Hamors ſonnes is mentioned, when others, and not he, made the ſale of the ground which Jacob bought? Anſw. Shechem was amongſt Hamors ſons of chief note and accompt; for it is ſaid, he was more honourable then all the houſe of his fathers, Gen. 34.19. and ſince he is named, the reſt not mentioned, and it is moſt probable that he had moſt to do in this buſineſſe, and that the reſt conſented to his tranſaction.

The ſum of all is, That whatſoever contradiction may ſeeme to be betwixt the report of Stephen, and the ſtory of the Old Teſtament, Luke relating only what Stephen ſaid, is a true Hiſtorian, though Stephen were not. Secondly, That by the ſecond Anſwer to the ſecond Doubt, a ſudden ſlip of memory in Stephen may be confeſſed without inconvenience, or avoided by the third Anſwer. And if (as ſome ſay the father of Ephron had two names, and Hamor was one of them (which ſome learned men think the readieſt way to reſolve the doubt) that may ſway the reſolution for Abrahams purchaſe, as the third Anſwer to the ſecond Doubt doth for Jacobs.

ANNOTATIONS
On the Second BOOK of MOSES, called, EXODUS

According to the Greek: (which ſignifieth a going forth, or departure, viz. out of Egypt) and according to the Hebrew, VEELLE SHEMOTH; that is, And, or, Now, theſe are the name: which are the firſt words of this ſecond Book, after which manner the other three enſuing Books, are named.

The Argument,

THE ſecond Book of Moſes, (containing a ſtory of about 146 years (to wit, from the death of Joſeph, to the finiſhing of the Tabernacle) ſheweth the multiplication of the poſterity of Jacob, from a ſmall number, (even 70 ſouls, (i.) perſons, which came with him into Egypt, Gen.46.26,27) to ſix hundred thouſand men (beſides children): ſo they are numbred, Exod.12.37. and afterward the accompt given of them, in the ſecond year, and ſecond month after their departure is ſix hundred thouſand, and three thouſand five hundred and fifty, Numb. 1. 45,46. wherein none under twenty years old, none decrepit or unſerviceable for the wars; none of the Tribe of Levi, no women were numbred. This people (for their numerous increaſe) were feared and hated by the Egyptians: whereupon (for their own ſecurity they endeavoured by murthering the male children, and by manifold tyrannies over the reſt, to reduce them to a ſmaller number, But the more they were oppreſſed, the more they multiplyed, and God intending to get him honour over their oppreſſors, exerciſed his Juſtice on them, his compaſſion on his people, and his power on both, in a miraculous deliverance of the one, and deſtruction of the other. And having brought his people out of Egypt, he led them in the wilderneſſe, and there both cheriſhed and upheld them with extraordinary ſupplyes and ſupport, and yet chaſtiſed them for their manifold offences, (eſpecially murmuring and Idolatry.) Nevertheleſs, he made a covenant with them at Horeb, where he delivered them Laws, Moral, Judicial and Ceremonial, for their Government, both as a Church, and as a Commonweal.

Verſ. 1. NOw] Or rather And, according to the Hebrew, importing a continuation of that ſtory, which (though it conclude the Book of Geneſis) is not yet concluded. It is an obſervation of ſome, that (among the Hebrewes, Chaldees and Greeks) Writers begin their Diſcourſes with words of coherence, not to the words or matters next precedent, but to their owne foregoing thoughts, to which the words following do agree. But it is more reaſonable, to ſuppoſe that ſomewhat of the beginning of the Book is wanting, or that the Books are divided, which before were united: And ſo it was with the five Books of Moſes, which Originally made but one Volume, though now they be divided into five, as is obſerved in the general Argument of the Pentateuch.

houſhold] That is, his Children and Nephewes, for ſervants (who were not of the tribes of Iſrael) were not taken into this accompt.

V. 2. Reuben, Simeon] The children of Iſrael or Jacob, are often reckoned, as Gen 35.22. and chap.45.8. and 49.3. Exod.6.44. 1 Chr. 2.1. and in a diverſe order, upon divers occaſions, as in the next verſe, and on ver.6.

V.3. Benjamin] Benjamin was the youngeſt, and ſo ſhould have been named laſt, if he had been ranked by his age: but he is here placed the ſeventh in order, as the youngeſt of the ſons of Jacobs wives, and before the reſt, becauſe they were the ſons of the handmaids, and of them the firſt named are the children of Bilhah, (Rachels handmaid) Gen 30.3 and then the children of Zilpah (Leahs handmaid) Gen. 29. 24. Joſeph is not written in this Regiſtry, becauſe he was in Egypt before theſe came thither.

V. 5. the ſouls] That is, the perſons.

ſeventy ſouls] Deut.10.22. See Annot.on Gen.46.27.

V.6. And Joſeph died, and all his brethren] Here Joſeph is named firſt, in regard of the preeminence of his dignity, not by the precedence of his birth; for many more of his brethren were elder then he: not of his death, for ſome died before him, and ſome lived after him.

all that generation] Or kindred, as ſome read, but the Hebrew word Halor, properly ſignifieth a generation, and by generation, is meant all of that age or time with Joſeph and his brethren, whether Hebrews or Egyptians; this (by probable computation) was about the 109 year of the Iſraelites abode in Egypt.

V 7 The land was filled with them] Ver. 12. not the land of Egypt, but the Province or land of Goſhen, (allotted to the Iſraelites for their habitation.) This multiplication of ſo many (whereof ſee the Argument of this Book) from ſo few at firſt in ſo ſhort a ſpace, (for it was from the death of Joſeph to the beginning of their afflictions, as is diligently computed about, or not much above fifty years) might come to paſs, by beginning to be fruitful ſooner, and continuing longer then other women, and by their bringing forth many at a birth: and that might be the rather, becauſe (as Philoſophers and Phyſicians ſay) there are ſeven ſeveral Cels for Conception, wherein may be formed ſo many diſtinct Embryons, which proceeding to a perfect ſhape, may be ſo many children: and as (upon experience) it is reported, that ſome have brought forth five at a birth four times over, that is twenty, Ariſt. hiſt. animal. l.7. c.14. And as by ſuch frequent conceptions, their number might much increaſe, ſo alſo by Gods with-holding of abortion, whereby that which was conceived, was happily brought on to a perfect birth.

V.8. A new king] Act.7.18. whom ſome Hiſtorians call Mephis, ſome Rameſſes, ſome Armeſeſnianus, ſome Amonophis, or Amenoptes: but as this King knew not Ioſeph, though dead not much above fifty yeers before him, ſo may this King well be unknown to Writers, which were many hundreds of yeers in time behind him: and he might be called a new King, becauſe he was of another race or family from the former, or for that he took up a new way of government, or had new devices to bring about the innovations he had deſigned.

V. 9 Moe and mightier then we] Not abſolutely moe and mightier then all the Egyptians; but comparing the Province, or Country where they were planted, with any of the like compaſſe, the Iſraelites in number far exceeded them, and ſo (by their increaſe) grew ſtronger then their enemies, Pſal 105.24.

V. 10. deal wiſely] See Acts 7.19.

leſt they multiply] They were multiplyed before, verſe 7 and that the Egyptians confeſſed, and complained of in this verſe: therefore they take new counſels and courſes to prevent their further increaſe.

Get them up out of the land] Into Canaan, and ſo we ſhall loſe the commodity, which we might reap by their riches, and ſervice, while they are kept under our ſubjection. Envy at their number, fear of their power covetouſneſs of gain by their ſervice, and hatred of their Religion (whereof ſee Exod.8.26.) made them deſirous to retain them, as captive ſlaves, whom their fathers receive as gueſts, and enjoyed as friends, and as benefactors.

V. 11. Taskmaſters] Heb. maſters of tribute: which may be exacted as well in work, as in money.

Afflict them with their burdens] This God foretold Abraham, Gen. 15.13. the cauſe whereof, was not meerly the ſuſpicion, ſubtilty and malignity of Pharaoh and his people; but it is like the Iſraelites procured this unto themſelves by their provocations of God, by their Idolatries; as appeareth by Joſh. 24.14. Ezek. 10.7,8,9. and Chap. 23.3.

treaſure Cities] Or Cities of Tabernacles, as the Vulgar Latine turns the Hebrew word, mis chenoth, which may be rendred rather Repoſitories; and they might be ſtorehouſes of Artillery, Granaries for Corn, and treaſuries for royal and publick riches; but certain it is, that the Egyptians employed the Iſraelites in raiſing ſo many and ſo great buildings (whether of cities, caſtles or treaſuries) as might ſtil keep them in a painful and ſervile condition.

Pithom and Raamſes] Two Cities ſituate in the confines of the kingdome: and for the latter, it is to be obſerved, that there was a part of the Country of Egypt, called the land of Rameſis, which was given to the Iſraelites by Pharaoh, (for their poſſeſſion) at their entrance into Egypt, Gen.47.11. called the beſt of the land, there they built a City, and called it by the name of the whole Country, becauſe it was the beſt part of the land of Egypt, Gen.47.11. Or Moſes might give it the name, which it had when he wrote his Hiſtory, though it might be called by another name, when it was built: ſome take it for a city called Peluſium, different from Rameſis forementioned, Gen.47.

V.12. The more they afflicted them, the more they multiplied] Heb. And as they afflicted them, ſo they multiplied. Fear and hard uſage was in ordinary operation like to give impediment to procreation of children, but that their fruitfulneſs might appear to be by the eſpecial bleſſing of God, the more they are moleſted, the more they are multiplied; as is ſaid of Camomile, the more it is trodden, the faſter it groweth: but with this difference, that it is natural for that herb to thrive by oppreſſion; but it is not ſo by the nature of man, but by the favour of God that the godly prevail againſt perſecution; which may be one great cauſe why they ſhould wiſh well, and bear good will unto their enemies, ſince though they mean them never ſo much hurt, their malignity, may become an occaſion of very much good unto them; as the grudg of Joſephs brethren was converted to his honour, and to the comfort of himſelf and them, and of many thouſands more, Gen.50.20. And hereby we may obſerve that of the Wiſe man made good, againſt the wicked policy of the world, There is no wiſdom, nor counſel, nor underſtanding againſt the Lord, Prov.21.30.

they were grieved becauſe of the children of Iſrael] They meant to grieve the Iſraelites, and themſelves are grieved: ſo their puniſhment is ſutable to their ſin (and a great ſin it was to grieve not for their own wickedneſs, but for anothers welfare) and envy becometh both their crime, and their curſe.

V 14. All manner of ſervice] Both in the field and in the city, to man and to beaſt: many whereof were ſo baſe, that ſuch as were ingenuous might diſdain them, and ſo toylſome, that thoſe who were weak and tender could not endure them.

V.15. Shiphrah and Puah] That theſe were Egyptian and not Hebrew midwives, is conceived by their anſwer, ver.19. wherein they ſpeak of the Hebrewes, as differing from themſelves; but ſome rather think they were Hebrew midwives; becauſe it is not like, the Hebrewes would admit Egyptians at their labour, and that to have obtruded ſuch upon them, would ſoon have diſcovered that the male children were made away by the Kings command: yet that ſeemes more probable, then that the Hebrew women ſhould either for fear or hire be drawn to deſtroy all the males that were born of their own people: and though theſe midwives be ſaid to fear God, ver.17. that phraſe doth not neceſſarily infer, that they were right in Religion, as we ſee Jonah 1.16. But the greateſt doubt is, Why theſe are mentioned, and none elſe; why two, and no more? Some conceive, theſe midwives were ſuch as were of note and uſe in noble families, and ſo might do cruel execution upon the chief of all the Hebrew children: but the Egyptians made no ſuch difference of the Hebrewes, how noble ſoever ſome were by birth, they were all made baſe by ſlaviſh ſervitude, yet theſe midwives might be Miſtreſſes of that Art, and ſo by them others might receive that charge, which they received from the King; and they might receive it from him, being much imployed by the women of his Court.

V.16. Stools] The Hebrew word, Obnajim (found only in this place) is taken particularly for a ſtool, or ſeat framed for the uſe of women in travel, that the midwife may do her office, with more eaſe and ſafety to the mother and the child.

kill him] By ſtrangling or otherwiſe, ſo as may be done with moſt expedition and certainty, leſt they ſhould do the like to the Egyptians, if they were ſuffered to live to be men: and yet it muſt be done cunningly and ſecretly, with ſome private pinch, that the child might be thought to have had ſome miſhap in the birth; which cunning practice (though for a while it might) could not long be concealed: but malice is ſo blind, that it ſeeth but a little way beyond it ſelf; the foyles and failings with the juſt recompences of it, are neither foreſeen nor feared by the malicious, until they are ſurprized by them.

but if it be a daughter] They were content they ſhould live; being by reaſon of their infirmity, unable to reſiſt their rigour, and becauſe they were deſirous to reſerve them for their ſenſual ſatisfaction, being more beautiful then the Egyptian women. See the laſt Annot. on this Chap.

V. 17. Feared God] To fear God, and honour the King, are the ſociable duties, of pious perſons, and Loyal ſubjects, 1 Pet.2.17. while the ſubordinate power doth not control the ſupreme; but if ſo (as in this place) the reſolution of the ſame Apoſtle muſt be our rule, We ought to obey God rather then men, Acts 5.29.

V. 19. Hebrew women —— are lively] The Hebrew word Haioth which ſignifieth the quick, or quickning, may note (as the vulgar Latine rendreth it) a skill, quickneſs, or dexterity in doing the office of a midwife, which is many times prevented by the expedition of the birth; and it may be (as ſome Rabbines conceive) they might expreſſe the promptneſſe of the Hebrew mothers, in this manner, by a compariſon of contempt (that they might be the leſſe ſuſpected by Pharaoh, of pity or partiality towards them) as if they would have them to be taken to be like unto beaſts, who (when they bring forth) have no need or uſe of midwives aſſiſtance, they are ſo quick and lively in their deliverance. But it is moſt like that the Hebrewes (acquainted with the cruel command of the King) might rather make uſe of their ordinary neighbours, for aſſiſtance to travelling women, then commit themſelves to the hands of profeſſed midwives of the Egyptian Nation, and (if obedient to the Kings command) profeſſed murderers: yet it might be true of many of them, that they were delivered before the midwives came unto them. for thoſe that are laborious (when they are with child) have quicker labour, when their burden cometh to the birth, then others have. Howſoever this anſwer of the midwives is diverſly cenſured; for ſome from their fear of God, mentioned, v.17 and the recompence of their pity, v.21. infer, that they made a free and bold profeſſion of their faith, avowing to the face of Pharaoh with adventure of their lives, that the power and favour of God was with them; and therefore notwithſtanding the Kings command, they would do nothing againſt them: and yet it is generally conceived, that herein (to ſave the little Jewes alive) they told the King an officious lie, as Rahab did, Joſh.2.5,6. and David, 1 Sam 21.2. and Eliſha, 2 Kings 6.19.

V.21. Made them houſes] In this or the like expreſſion, God often profeſſeth favour to thoſe he loveth; as 1 Sam.2.35. 2 Sam.7.11. 1 Kin. 2.24. and Chap.11.38. Which phraſe importeth not ſo much the place of habitation or abode, as the bleſſing of families with increaſe and proſperity, as by a numerous, long lived and proſperous off-ſpring; and the off-ſpring (in the Hebrew Tongue) may be the rather called an Houſe, becauſe the word Ben, a ſon, is derived of the word Bana, which ſignifieth to build, for of children are families made up, as houſes of the materials, whereof they are compoſed. Hence ſome infer, the officious lye of the Midwives was lawful; but their act being a mixt act, conſiſting of piety to God, pity to his people, and fallacy in lying to the King; the two firſt were graciouſly accepted, and rewarded by God, the third was mercifully paſſed by, and pardoned by him.

V.22 And Pharaoh charged all his people] The Midwives being as kind to the male children as Pharaoh to the females, ver. 16. and 22. he giveth the charge more generally, and, that no doubt, with commination of crueltie on thoſe who could not find in their hearts to be ſo cruel, as he would have them; which took ſuch effect, at leaſt for a time, that the parents of Moſes could not long conceal him, Chap. 2.3. yet this violence did not continue all the time of the Iſraelites continuance in Egypt, becauſe there were many young Hebrewes under twenty years old when they went out of Egypt; and it is like this bloody decree died with the death of the Tyrant that made it, and that he died the ſooner, becauſe he was ſo cruel, according to the prophecy of the Pſalmiſt, Pſalm 55.23.

caſt into the River] That is the meaning of his command, whereby it might be known whether the Midwives obeyed it or no; where is obſervable the practice of Tyrants, which is to make up their bloody plots, ſometimes with fox-like ſubtilty, and ſometimes with lion-like cruelty; ſo, acccording to the proverb, the Lions skin pieceth up the Foxes, as well as the Foxes doth the Lions, as they ſee occaſion to make uſe of either.

and every daughter] When the charge was given to the Midwives to murder the males, it was with caution and exception, to ſave the females alive, v.16. and now it is enlarged to all the people to be ſlaughtermen to the ſons of the Hebrews, the Tyrant ſtill continueth his reſervation of the daughters, that they might be ſpared and kept alive; but this was not out of pitie towards them, but becauſe he had no ſuch fear of them, as of the other ſexe: and it is like, the daughters of God were more pleaſing to theſe ſons of men, then the daughters of men were to the ſons of God, Gen.6.2. then their own native Country women, aud ſo they would keep them either for their luſt, or to raiſe a fairer and more beautiful breed then their own. For ſome ſuch reaſon was it, that Abraham feared the beauty of his wife, would be a ſnare to his life among the Egyptians, and that, according to his fear, it came to paſſe, that the Princes of Pharaoh commended her, and thereupon ſhe was taken into his houſe, Gen. 12.14,15.

CHAP. II.

Ver. 1. A Man of the houſe of Levi] The Levite was called Amram: and of Amram it is ſaid, Chap 6.20. Num.26.59. that he took him Iochebed his fathers ſiſter to wife; which marriage may ſeem to be inceſtuous; but in that place, the word ſiſter may be taken for a kinſwoman, as the word Brother is taken for a kinſman, Gen.13.8. & chap.14 12,14. and if ſhe were indeed his fathers ſiſter, or his aunt, ſuch marriages were then tolerated, while there were but a few of a Tribe; but about an hundred years after, they were forbidden, Lev.18.12.

V.2. The woman conceived] This was not her firſt child; for Aaron Moſes his brother, was elder then he by three years, Chap.7.7. and their ſiſter Miriam was elder then Aaron, both born before the bloody Edict was made by the King, againſt the children of the Hebrews.

a goodly child] Act.7.20. That is ſaid here to be done by affection, which Heb.11.23. is attributed to faith: his parents truſted in Gods protection, for his preſervation, notwithſtanding the bloody Decree of Pharaoh, and their affection became ſerviceable to their faith, when it quickned them up to uſe all the good means they could to reprive him from peril.

V.3 No longer hide him] By reaſon of the ſevere charge given by Pharaoh, Chap.1.v.22. and the ſtrict ſearch for the male children, which (no doubt) was ſeverely enjoyned, as a means conducible to his end, though by Moſes it be not mentioned.

an Ark of Bulruſhes] Made like an Ark or Cheſt, and capable of the child; of ſuch materials they made veſſels of greater capacity, which were uſed in ſtead of boats or ſhips; for in ſuch veſſels the Ambaſſadors of Ethiopia croſſed the ſea, Iſa.18.2. that is, the Red Sea, which divided betwixt the Eaſtern Ethiopia, which was part of Arabia, and the Weſtern; and in Egypt the manner of old was, to uſe boats or veſſels of ruſhes or reeds. Plin.Nat.Hiſt l.7. c 56.

put the child therein] It was pitched, as Noahs Ark was, Geneſ.6.14. Thus by humane prudence, they ſerved the divine providence, and ſhewed faith and affection without preſumption.

flags] Which are a water reed, long, broad and ſharp pointed like a ſword; among theſe he was charily laid; both becauſe they were near the brink of the river, where the child might eaſily be ſeene, and that being ſtaid by the flags, he might not be carried away by the ſtream.

V.4. His ſiſter ſtood afar off] That is, Miriam, who being a Propheteſſe, Exod.15.20. might be guided by God to give this advice concerning the child, or if ſhe were but about ten or twelve years of age, and then no Propheteſs, ſhe might be taught by her mother, what to do in that matter.

V.6. This is one of the Hebrews children] So ſaid Pharaohs daughter, whom Joſephus calleth Tharmutis; ſhe ſaid ſo when ſhe had opened the Ark, and viewed the child, which might be known to be an Hebrew by his Circumciſion: for at this time the Egyptians had not received circumſion, though afterward they did: or ſhe probably conjectured thus by her fathers decree againſt the Hebrews: or by the beauty of Moſes, for the Iſraelites being more beautiful then the Egyptians, and he eminently beautiful above other Iſraelites, ver.2. of this Chapter, and Act.7.v 20.

V.7. A nurſe of the Hebrew women] Gods providence excludes not mans prudence: the making of the Ark, and dawbing it with ſlime and pitch, the placing of it, and the child within it, among the flags, neer the Rivers brink, ver.3. and ſetting his ſiſter to watch it, and her watchfulneſſe at due diſtance, and her diſcreet and ſeaſonable advice to Pharaohs daughter, were all effects of humane wiſdome, and ſubordinate means to the providence of God for the preſervation of the child.

V.10. Her ſon] Heb.11.24. By adoption or free choice, not by conception and birth; haply ſhe had none of her own, or if ſhe had, ſhe had none ſo beautiful as he: But as freely as he was choſen (in his infancy) ſo he freely refuſed that relation, and all the credit and comfort that belonged to it, when he came to maturity in manhood, but eſpecially in grace; for when he choſe to be a fellow in affliction with his brethren, rather then to have no fellow in Court-favour and honour, and yet he loſt no honour by his change: for afterward he grew mighty in words and in deeds, Act.7 22. prevalent in diſcourſe and counſel, and powerful in many great and miraculous operations.

his name, Moſes, becauſe] Joſephus Antiq. lib.2. cap. 5. (and many from him) conceive the word to be a compound (in the Egyptian Tongue of Mo, water, aud yſes ſaved: but the word is rather to be thought an Hebrew word, called Moſheh, derived from Maſcha, ſignifying, hath taken out, or drawn out; becauſe he was drawn out of the water: and in that ſenſe, that is, as ſignifying, not ſimply drawn out, but drawn out of the water, it is uſed, 2 Sam.22.17. and Pſal.18.16. and in thoſe two places only is that word found in Scripture. But whatever his name was in the Egyptian, Moſes is rendred in the Hebrew Tongue: And it is like his parents gave him a name before, at his birth or circumciſion, though what it was is not ſet down, but his name was put upon him as a memorial both of his danger and deliverance; wherein if there were a concurrence in ſound and ſenſe, both of the Egyptian and Hebrew Tongue, it was the more uſeful to ſuch a purpoſe.

V.11. Was grown] To the age of forty years old, Act.7.23.

an Egyptian ſmiting] Philo the famous Jew, conjectureth (and it is like enough) that this Egyptian was one of the rigid Governors of the Hebrews.

one of his brethren] The Hebrewes call all brethren which are of the ſame family or nation.

V.12. Slew the Egyptian] By which act, (wherein he was warranted by revelation from God) he meant to intimate (to his Hebrew brethren) that he was to be their deliverer from Egyptian bondage, though at this time they underſtood it not, Act.7.25.

V.14. As thou killedſt the Egyptian] He pretends deadly danger to himſelf, that he may endanger the life of Moſes, who was ſo far from killing any of his brethren, that by his good wil they ſhould not receive any wrong from any. Malice and anger is very forward to ſlander; as here Moſes is made an uſurping executioner, ſo was Lot made an uſurping Judg by the lewd Sodomites Gen.19.9.

Moſes feared] Not without good cauſe, and therefore he fled, ver.15. but in the eleventh to the Hebrewes, the Apoſtle ſaith, By faith Moſes forſook Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the King, ver. 27. which that it may not ſeem contradictory, to this of Moſes himſelf, we muſt diſtinguiſh of the departures of Moſes from Egypt, which were two: the former that here mentioned, wherein his fear appeared to be more then his faith; the latter, was after his conteſtation (by miracles) with Pharaohs ſtubborneſs, Chap.10.28, 29 and in this his departure was not by way of fearful flight, but of faithful and courageous conqueſt.

ſurely this thing is knowne] Though in verſe 12 he looked this way, and that way, leſt any one ſhould ſee him; but he that felt him, or his brother who was beaten by the Egyptian; yet ſome body ſaw him, or the Hebrew made ſome report, ſo that the ſecret came out.

V.15. But Moſes fled] He ſaved himſelf by flight from Pharaohs wrath, whereby he was reſerved for a better opportunity to conteſt with the Tyrant in the cauſe of his Maſter and brethren: that this is no way repugnant to religion, or to that courage, which the profeſſion of it requireth, doth appear by many places of Scripture; as by Gen.28.6,7. 1 Kin.19 3. Mat.2.13. & chap.10.23. & chap. 12. 15. & chap.24.16. Joh.8.59. Luk.4.30. 2 Cor.11.33.

Land of Midian] A city ſo called, was built by Midian, the ſon of Keturah, whence the Region round about was called Midian.

V.16. Prieſt of Midian] The Hebrew word Cohen, ſignifieth, a Prieſt, and ſometimes a Prince, or chief Ruler, as 2 Sam.8.18. text and margine; and it may be he was both, becauſe the principal men in thoſe dayes were Prieſts; as Noah, Melchiſedec, Abraham and others. Euſebius lib.9. cap.ult. de praparat.Evangel calls him, Jethro King of Arabia, of whoſe Kingdom Midian was a Province; but he ſeemeth here, rather to be a Prieſt, then a Prince; becauſe his daughters were ſo meanly imployed, ſo little reſpected by the Shepherds; ver.17. Of this name, ſee on ver.18.

to water their fathers flock] In thoſe dayes the calling and courſe of a ſhepherd was no diſparagement to worthy perſons, though it were not ſo honourable, as that Kings daughters ſhould be imployed in it. See on Gen.24.15.

V.17 drave them away] The men ſhepherds uncivilly wronged the women, taking the water which they had laboured for, to ſpare their own paines, and ſtriving to have the firſt turn at the time of watering, which was uſually done by many together, haply for the removal of the cover of the well, and drawing of water with more eaſe. See Gen.29 10.

But Moſes ſtood up, and helped them] Being ſo great a man in Egypt, he might have ſome ſervants to attend him, who might aſſiſt him, in reſiſting the wrongs done to women; if he had none, he ſhewed more goodneſs and courage, in taking part with the better cauſe againſt the ſtronger ſide.

V 18. Revel their father] He was, as ſome think, their grand-father; and in Scripture the Ancients in a direct line, are called fathers, and their Nephewes children, Gen. 31.43. and ſo one man may have many fathers, Act.24.14. But here it is more probable, that one father had many names, and that this Prieſt of Midian was called Revel in this place, and Jethro, chap.3.1 & chap.18. often, and Hobab, Judg.4.11. whoſe father was Raguel the Midianite, Num.10.29. he is alſo called, Jether chap.4 18.

V.19. An Egyptian] So Moſes ſeemed by his habit, and he told them (haply) that he came out of Egypt.

V.21. Content] The word Joal in Hebrew ſignifieth no more of it ſelf, but to be willing; but the Vulgar Latine forceth it to ſignifie an oath, which ſenſe it wil not naturally admit; in 1 Sam.14 24. the ſame word is uſed for adjuration, but it is with an Accuſative conſtruction, which here is not.

gave Moſes Zipporah] Children are the goods of their parents, which may not be taken from them, unleſs they give them: how ſoon it was that Moſes had this gift, is not extant in Scripture, it may be it was a good while after his admiſſion into Jethroes family, becauſe forty years after his coming to Midian, at his return unto Egypt, one of his two ſons was not yet circumciſed, Exod.4.25.

V.22. Gerſhom] Chap.18.3 The word ſignifieth a deſolate ſtranger; and it was given (for the name of his ſon) for remembrance of Moſes his eſtrangement from the land of his Nativity, whence he was driven, and for admonition to others (eſpecially his ſon who bare that name) to mind them of their inheritance in the land of Canaan, where they were to expect a more permanent abode.

V.23 In proceſſe of time] About forty years after Moſes fled out of Egypt; compare chap.7.7 with Act.7.30.

ſighed] Though the tyrant was dead, yet tyranny was not, Gods people were ſtil oppreſſed, albeit that Pharaoh were ſuppreſſed; for another Pharaoh ſucceeded him in power as great, and in oppreſſion as grievous to the children of Iſrael.

came up unto God] His eye ſeeth what the wicked do unto his people, ver.25. of this chapter, and his ear heareth when they complaine of what they ſuffer, Exod.3.7,9. chap 6:5. & chap. 22. 23,27. Jam.5.4. and they ſhall both feel the force of his hand, the one ſort by the ſuccer of a gracious Patron; the other by the ſeverity of a righteous Judg. See Numb.20.16.

V.24 Remembred his covenant] See on Gen 8.1.

V.25 Had reſpect unto them] Heb. Knew them; that is, acknowledged them for his people, and ordered the courſe of his providence for their deliverance, ſo as might be moſt profitable for them, moſt honourable for himſelf.

CHAP. III.

Verſ. 1 K*Ept the flock*] Moſes (from his childhood) had been a Courtier about forty years, and then he cometh down to the condition of a ſhepherd, and continueth in it forty years more; and for a third forty years, he had a more honourable, and leſs quiet condition, being a politick Paſtor and Governor of the Nation of the Iſraelites.

of Jethro] See Annot. on chap. 2 16, 18.

his father in law] The word Chothen ſignifieth not a father in law alone, but generally a kinſman; yet here it is to be contracted from the general acception, to the particular relation, betwixt Jethro and Moſes, upon the marriage of Zipporah.

backſide of the deſart] Proceeding further and further in the deſart, to find out freſh paſtures for his flocks: the Hebrew Scholiaſt thinks, the name of the place to be the further deſart.

mountain of God] Which was not ſo called until God made eſpecial choice of it, for the publication of his law, Exo. 19 11. and it was named alſo Sinai, from the ſtore of Bramble buſhes in that place, for Seneth in Hebrew is ſuch a buſh; it was called likewiſe Horeb, from the drineſſe and ſolitude of the place; yet might this hill, like Parnaſſus, have two tops, the one called Sinai, the other Horeb

V.2. The Angel of the LORD] As Gen. 48. 16. Judg. 6. 12. Act. 7. 30 This is not a created Angel, but the Angel of the Covenant, Exod. 23. ver. 20, 21, 22. (to wit, Chriſt) who is not only the Angel of the Lord, but the Lord of Angels, Heb. 1. 6, 7. and (by oppoſition) the Lord the Angel, or the Angel the Lord; for he is called, God, ver. 4, 6, 13 Jehovah, ver. 7.

appeared to him] As ſome conceive, in an humane ſhape, as a preludium, or foreſhewing of his Incarnation in time to come: but the Text ſaith in the next words, it was in a flame of fire.

in a flame of fire] A repreſentation of glory and terrour, to make him awfully apprehenſive of the Divine Majeſty, and withal, as well to erect him with confidence, as to humble him with reverence.

buſh was not conſumed] The word seneh, ſignifieth a dry buſh, the more ſtrange that it was not conſumed, ſince God is a conſuming fire, Heb. 12. 29. but that is to the wicked, who are compared to briars and thornes, Iſai. 9. 18. to ſuch his indignation is a devouring fire, an everlaſting burning, Iſa. 33. 14. But this buſh ſignifieth the Church, and therefore though it ſeem all on fire, either by reaſon of the divine preſence, or humane perſecutions, it is ſo preſerved by God, that it is not conſumed. See Iſai. 43. 2. & Dan 3. 27.

V.4 And when the Lord ſaw] See the firſt Annot. on v. 2.

Moſes, Moſes] The doubling of Moſes his name, importeth not only favour, but familiarity, and an affectionate mind to the matter in hand, as Luke 22. 31.

V.5 put off thy ſhoes] So Joſh. 51. 5. Act. 7. 33. The (ſhooes being next the earth) are uſually moſt foul, as the foot of ſuch as go barefoot, and therefore by putting off the ſhooes, and waſhing of the feet, is ſignified the purity which is required in our approaches to God. See Heb. 10 22. Joh. 13. 10.

holy ground] Becauſe of Gods preſence, and in relation to it, not by any inherent holineſs, whereof the place is not capable, nor any permanent holineſs, when the preſence is withdrawn.

V.6. Afraid to look upon God] Ever ſince our firſt parents were rebels againſt, and runawaies from their Maker, the moſt religious of their race have been affected with fear of the glorious preſence of God; for this, ſee Heb. 12. 21. Dan. 10. 7. Mat. 17. 7. Rev. 1. 17. He grew to more familiarity afterwards, chap. 7

V.7. I have ſurely ſeen] Heb. ſeeing I have ſeen. 1 Sam. 9. 16. See the Annot. on Exod. 2. v. 23.

I know] See Annot. on chap 2. ver. 25.

V.8. Came down] See the Annot. on Gen. 18 21.

and a large] Judea containeth in length, from Dan to Beerſheba, but an hundred and ſixty miles; in bredth from Joppa to Jordan, but ſixty miles; yet it is called large to them in compariſon of Goſhen, where they then dwelt, or in regard of the plentiful increaſe which it afforded to ſupport and nouriſh the inhabitants. See on Joſh. 12. 24.

flowing with milk and honey] That is, abounding with all things ſerving for neceſſity and delight.

the Canaanites and the Hittites, &c.] Sometimes the inhabitants of the land of Canaan, are ſignified under one name, as the name of Canaanites, or Amorites, or Hittites, here they come under ſix appellations, Deut. 7. 1. we find ſeven named, yea ſometimes their diſtinction ariſeth to ten ſeveral denominations, as Gen. 51. 19, 20, 21. and yet that enumeration and Nomenclature ſeems to be imperfect, becauſe the Hivites are not numbred among them; the reaſon hereof may be, becauſe ſome names are more general, ſome more particular, ſome more, ſome leſs eminent, ſome obſervable on one occaſion, ſome on another; as the people of Iſrael are ſometimes noted by their common name Iſraelites, as the ſons of Jacob or Iſrael; ſometimes by the diſtinct names of their ſeveral tribes; ſometimes one name of eminence compriſeth the reſt, as the Jewes have their name from Judah, the Prince of the tribes. See on Gen. 13 7.

V.9. Now the cry] He heard before, but now he will make others know, that he did, both obſerve and pity their oppreſſed eſtate, and meant to take a courſe for their deliverance out of it.

V.11. Who am I] He apprehendeth firſt the meanneſs of his own perſon (a baniſhed man, and a Country Shepherd) and then no doubt the greatneſs of the perſon with whom he ſhould have to do, the prejudice he had againſt him in particular, and the difficulty of the ſervice to deliver an oppreſſed people from ſo potent and malignant tyranny; and ſo he would fain be excuſed the undertaking thereof. See the like Jer. 1. 6.

V.12 Certainly I will be with thee] So that thou needeſt not fear, either thine own feebleneſſe, or the power of them againſt whom I ſend thee.

this ſhall be a token unto thee, &c.] Tokens and ſignes, given for aſſurance do uſually go before the thing whereof they are ſignes or tokens, as Judg. 6. 37, 39. or are concomitant with it, as Luke 2. 12 but here Moſes having ſeen a miraculous ſign of Gods eſpecial preſence, and God having ſpoken unto him, and aſſuredly promiſed his preſence with him, he had evidence and confirmation enough for the undertaking of his charge but now he would have him to enlarge and ſtretch out his faith (beyond the aſſurance of his commiſſion, and the good ſucceſs of it, in the deliverance of the people) to that which was a conſequent upon it, and did in reaſon preſuppoſe it; to wit, the grateful memory of their deliverance, when God would appear to him againe, and the people with him, at the Mountain where then he was: and it would be meet for him, (at his returne) to have an eſpecial Memorandum, that the Lord was with him ſtill, for his encouragement to undergo the further conduct of his people to the land of Canaan: and (in the meane time) he was pleaſed to give him full aſſurance of his powerful preſence with him, and aſſiſtance to him by many ſignes and tokens, precedent to his conteſtation with the Tyrant, which had their place before this ſervice (now foretold) and favour promiſed, came to paſs; and therefore he giveth him (as a preſent earneſt of more miracles to come) not only this viſion of the burning, but not burned buſh, but other miraculous experiments, whereof ſee chap. 4. ver. 3, 4. See examples of ſignes taken, as this here, from things to come, 1 Sam. 2. 3, 4. Iſai. 7 14. & 9. 6. & 37. 30 & Jon. 2. 18, 19.

V.13. What is his name] Moſes an Ambaſſador from God, deſires particular direction from him, touching what he muſt ſay unto the people, for Ambaſſadors are not to ſpeak their own words, but his that ſends them; and God being called by many names, it was of ſome moment, by what name he would now be mentioned unto them, eſpecially, ſince many of his names were abuſed, by application to Idols: To this purpoſe ſome obſerve, that when God judgeth, he is called Elohim; when he warreth, Sabaoth, Lord of Hoſtes, when he profeſſeth mercy, Jehovah, Exo. 34. 6. Howſoever, Moſes (doubtleſs) had good reaſon (though it be not apparent in the Text) why he moved that queſtion, and God by his anſwer ſheweth his allowance of it.

V.14 I am that I am] Or, I will be that I will be. For (in the Hebrew) the Future tenſe is often put for the Preſent; the word importeth an eternal being, according to the expreſſion of the Apoſtle, Heb. 13. 8. Rev. 16. 5. an incomprehenſible being, an independent being, on which yet all other things do depend, both for beginning and continuance; and withal a conſtant performing of his promiſe, having both unreſiſtible power, and immutable will to make good his word. See chap. 6. 2, 3. 2 Cor. 1. 20.

V.15 The Lord God] In the Original the word is Jehovah, the ſame in ſenſe with the name Ehieh, in the former verſe, but more in uſe then it and better known; and ſo by two names the impreſſion was to be made the ſtronger, that their faith might be more firm for belief of his promiſes. See on chap. 6. 3.

V. 18. ſacrifice] Becauſe Egypt was full of Idolatry, God would appoint them a place, where they ſhould ſerve him purely, without mixture with Idolaters; and ſafely, without dangers from Idolaters, to whom their ſacrifices were ſuch an abomination, that to offer them before their eyes, would provoke them to ſtone them, Exod. 8. 26.

V.19. not by a mighty hand] Or, but by a ſtrong hand, Exod, 6. 1. & 13. 3. Pſal. 136. 12. Wherein is no contradiction: for though God had done many miracles, which could not be done, but by a mighty, yea; an Almighty hand, yet the ſtubborn Tyrant would not yield, but by a very ſtrong hand, ſo far ſtronger then his own, that he could have no hope to prevail by ſtrugling againſt it: by ſuch an hand at laſt he let them go, becauſe (againſt it) he could not hold them any longer. By the ſame hand, God could have wrought their deliverance ſooner, but that is long conteſting with the contumacy of the Tyrant, made much for the manifeſtation of his Power, in multiplicity of Miracles; of his Juſtice, in variety of judgements, upon the Egyptians, and of his Mercy and faithfulneſſe to his people, in their ſo ſtrange redemption from ſuch intolerable bondage.

V. 12. favour not go empty] See Annot. on Chap. 12. verſ. 36. Chap. 11. verſ. 3. Gen. 15. 14. Pſal. 106. 46. Prov. 16. 7.

V.22. every woman ſhall borrow jewels of ſilver, &c.] This ſheweth, that (though Goſhen were principally poſſeſſed by the Hebrews, yet) there were Egyptians among them, as among the other Egyptians, there were ſome Hebrews: as is plain by the ſtory of the Paſſover ch. 12.

And theſe things they borrowed, or asked, (for the word doth not neceſſarily ſignifie borrowing) might be either a reward, or wages for their former ſervice, as Gen.31.9. or a mulct, or ſpoil of their Enemies, (raiſing an unjuſt Warre againſt them: they might alſo ſerve for proviſion of precious materials for the Tabernacle. Of this example ſome make very ill uſe: But it muſt not be a preſident for the like practice, but in the ſame caſe, and upon the ſame warrant, which were both extraordinary; and therefore this act of theirs muſt not be taken for a pattern in after times. Which is to be noted, againſt the injuſtice of the Anabaptiſts, who pretended a right to every mans eſtate (eſpecially if they take them to be wicked, and out of Chriſt) by virtue of the Apoſtles ſpeech, 1 Cor.3.22, 23. take upon them, (without either asking, or borrowing, or buying, to take from them what they pleaſe: wherein they lay a ground for the greateſt injuſtice that may be, even to the confuſion and ruine of all Common-weales: for which they can have no fair or probable pretence out of Scripture, but very much againſt it. And for that diſtinction they make, of the godly, and the wicked, though there be great difference betwixt them, in Religious, there is not the like in Civil reſpects: for No man knoweth love or hatred (i. of God) by theſe things, Eccleſ.9. for (as touching temporal things,) as it followeth in the next verſe) all things come alike to all, to the righteous and to the wicked; to the clean, and to the unclean; to him that ſacrificeth, and to him that ſacrificeth not; to him that ſweareth, as to him, that feareth an oath: and even of thoſe, that belong to Gods election ſome may ſeem for a time to be reprobats, and contrariwiſe; (as it was with Paul and Judas) ſo that had they lived together, Judas (who was a thief, Joh.12.6. (and a divel. Joh.6 70.) ſhould by their doctrine have had a right to rob and ſpoyl Paul of all he had. But their opinion and practice is yet more pernicious: for from this liberty (which the Anabaptiſts uſurp over other mens eſtates) they proceed to deprive the owners of them of ther lives, thinking them unworthy to live upon the earth, as the enemies of Paul cenſured him, Act.22.22. Of the injuſtice and cruelty of this Anabaptiſtical ſpirit, much is written by divers Proteſtant Writers, eſpecially by Bullinger and Sleydan, l.5.& 10. of his Commentaries; which if it were well conſidered, would awaken and quicken our ſpirits, for diſcovery of them, and for caution againſt them.

CHAP. IV.

Verſ.1. T*Hey will not believe*] By the ſpeech of Stephen, Act.7.25 (it ſeemeth) he was too credulous of the peoples apprehenſion, and of their aſſent to his ſucceſſeful undertaking of their deliverance, for he ſuppoſed they would take his killing of the Egyptian for a ſigne that by his hand God would reſcue them from Egyptian rigour; and now (on the contrary part) he is too diffident: It may be, he might miſtruſt his Countreymen (the Hebrews) by the experience of his own fears, and doubts: otherwiſe, he might have been confident, (having Gods promiſe for it) not onely for their deliverance by him, but for their obedience to him, and belief of him at leaſt for the Elders of Iſrael, Chap.3. 18.

V. 2. a rod] The queſtion is, What is that in thine hand? in Hebrew Maze: the anſwer, is a rod, Heb. matte: where is noted by ſome Hebrew Criticks a Paranomaſie, or illuſion to the ſimilitude of the words, in ſymphonie, or likeneſſe of ſound: the like is obſerved in Noahs bleſſing of Japhet, Gen. 9. 27. and Jacob's bleſſing of Dan, Gen.49.16. And as in Hebeew, ſo in Greek, Rom.1.29, 31.

V.3. it became a ſerpent] (So Exod.7.9, 10.) To change one creature into another (not in appearance onely, but indeed) requires a divine Power, and is a divine proof of any thing, to which is ſet ſuch a miraculous ſeal: and therefore the divels argument was good, (though his meaning was naught) when he would conclude, our Saviour to be the Son of God, by changing ſtones into bread, Mat.4 3. The greaer the change is, the more evidence of a divine Power at appearing in it. See the annot. on Chap.7.10.

V.4. and it became a rod] The rod, and ſerpent, might ſignifie the different condition of the Iſraelites, and Egyptians: a rod to correct thoſe as children, a ſerpent to ſting, and kill theſe as enemies: In this change, Moſes his faith overcometh his fear; and by faith the greateſt evils change their natures, and become not ſerpents to kill, but rods, or ſtaves (as Pſal. 23.4.) to comfort and ſupport. Or the rod and ſerpent may note the different condition of the Iſraelites onely, as firſt, under Joſephs rod of government: ſecondly, under Egypts Scorpion of perſecution, which was the rod converted to a ſerpent: thirdly, that ſerpent turned into a rod again, might intimate their eſtate and condition under the government of Moſes.

V.4. take it by the tail] Some curiouſly note, that he was bidden to take the ſerpent by the Tail, not by the head: becauſe that part was reſerved to be bruiſed by his Maſter, Gen 3. ver.15.

became a rod] The ſerpent being the embleme, or figure of the devil, this power over the rod and ſerpent by alternate change, is thought (by ſome) to typifye the prevailing of Chriſt over the devil, in the working of wonders, by changing the nature of the creatures, as well as otherwiſe.

V. 5. That they may believe] This miraculous power was not to be ſhewed, for oſtentation, or vain glory, but for confirmation of the faith of the Hebrews, touching Moſes his calling and doctrine, and touching their deliverance from bondage by his meditation, divine and miraculous operations concurring with it.

V. 6. leprous as ſnow] That is, white as ſnow. So Numb 12.10. 24 5.27. By that Moſes might be humbled, and the leproſie of his hand might be a preſervative to his heart againſt the ſin of pride; and ſo he might the better beware of aſcribing any of thoſe miraculous operations to his own handy work, which were to be effected onely by the finger of God.

V. 7. turned again] Herein the power of God appears, in that diſeaſe and ſoundneſſe come and go, at the turning of an hand, by his command: and therein it is very obſervable, that the ſame act produceth ſuch contrary effects, and in the very ſame place; as to put the hand into a clean and whole boſome, and to take it out leprous; and to put a leprous hand into it again, and to bring it out whole, and to leave no leproſie behind, was many wayes miraculous: Whereby we muſt learn to ſubmit our ſelves wholly to him, in what he commands, and to put our whole confidence in him, (for whatſoever he foretels, or promiſeth unto us) as alſo, for the cure of diſeaſes that come upon us, to addreſs our ſelves to him by prayer, who with meanes, or without meanes, with ſmall meanes, as well as with great, yea againſt meanes, is able to affect, what pleaſeth him. Math.8.3.15. &.6.2. &.30.8. Luk.5.13.

V. 8. voyce of the firſt ſign] The ſign is ſaid to have a voyce, becauſe it ſpeakes that to the eye, which words do to the ear: and (on the contrary) ſometimes that which is plainly and fully declared to the ear, is repreſented, as if it were acted, and exhibited to the eye, Gal. 3.1.

V. 9. river] That is, Nilus: for though God ſpeak to Moſes in the wilderneſſe, (as he did concerning the rod and ſerpent, and putting his hand into his boſome) yet this of turning the water of the river into blood, was reſerved for the land of Egypt, and not put in execution until Moſes came thither.

ſhall become] The words (in the Hebrew phraſe) are doubled, ſhall be and ſhall be, noting both earneſtneſs in aſſeveration, and aſſurance of execution.

blood] The Egyptians thirſted after the blood of little infants, drowning them in the River, and their ſin is ſhewed them in the ſame colour, and puniſhed in that wherein they had offended: Gods judgements are not onely juſt and equitable, but fit and ſuitable to the fault of the offenders, Judg.1.7.

V.10. I am not eloquent] Heb. I am not a man of words. After ſo many ſignes, he yet makes excuſes, that he may ſhun the ſervice, wherin humane frailty bewraies it ſelf, which by ſuch aſſuring evidence of ſaying and doing (as he had heard and ſeen) was not yet ſufficiently confirmed. How weak is the faith of the ſtrongeſt? how reluctant is humane reaſon to divine commands? if God do not work his own will in us, and obey (by grace in us) as well as command by his authority over us. See on Chap 6.12.

V. 11. who hath made] See Pſal.94.9.

V. 12. I will be with thy mouth] Notwithſtanding the former impediments, God could make him fluent and eloquent: howſoever he gave power to his ſpeech, ſo that he was mighty in words, as well as in deeds, Act.7.22. See Math.10.9.

V. 16. inſtead of a mouth] The gifts of God are diverſly diſtributed: Moſes had a ſpirit of government; Aaron (from the ſame Spirit) had a faculty of ſpeech, (which Moſes had not) one and the ſame Spirit, dividing to every one ſeverally as he will, 1 Cor.12.11. And this diverſity is the maintainer, and upholdor of unity, where prudence and piety have any ſway in humane ſociety: for it engageth men (according to their gifts) to mutual beneficence: ſo Aaron muſt gratifie Moſes by his utterance, and promptneſſe of ſpeech; and Moſes muſt fortifie Aaron by the authority of this place, and efficacie of his power.

V. 17. Inſtead of God] The Hebrew word is Elohim, which is attributed to God, and to Rulers alſo; as Exod.22.28. and therefore the meaning may be that, though Aaron were the chief Orator, (as Paul was, Act.14.12.) yet Moſes was to be the chief Governour; or if Moſes were called God, in a religious rather then a civil notion, the meaning may be, that he ſhall inſtruct him in divine matters: for though Aaron were a Prieſt, Moſes was ſo alſo, Pſal.99.6. and ſomewhat more then Aaron, viz not onely a Commander in chief, but a familiar Favourite of God, more then Aaron was, Exod. 33. 11. & Num.12. 8. But eſpecially Moſes was to be as a God to Aaron, in telling him (from God) what he was to ſay to others in this Name, ver.28 30.

V. 18. Let me go I pray thee] In this condeſcending ſo low, as to ask leave of his Father in law to viſit his brethren in Egypt, (after ſo high and divine acceptation) Moſes ſheweth an example of great modeſty and humility: his familiarity with God did not puff him up to contempt of men, eſpecially of ſuch, as (by a ſubordinate relation) he was obliged to reverence: yet this mannerly reſpect of man, did not abate of his obedience to God, nor did he think his Father in law would diſſwade him from what he deſired; or if he did, no doubt he was reſolved to obey God, rather then man, See Act.5.29. See chap.2.28.

to ſee] He mentioneth nothing but a viſit: it may be he was charged not to reveal his Commiſſion from God, until he came to the place where he was to put it in practice: if ſo, it was his piety to conceal it, if not ſo, his prudence, leſt his father in law (by propoſing difficulties, if not impoſſibilities, in the undertaking, and dangers in attempting) ſhould endeavour to bring him back, to his former diffidence, and indiſpoſition to the ſervice, and ſo make him, if not wholly to deſert it, yet more faintly, or leſs cheerfully, to go on with it, by reaſon of doubts and perils before him, and diſcontent left behind him, with his diſſenting and diſſwading Father in law.

whether they be yet alive] He pleadeth a reaſon of common charity, and forbeareth the reaſons of divinity, to wit, the revelation from God: an argument of his prudence, modeſty, and humility; for if he had not been prudent, he could not have kept in ſuch miraculous ſecrets; and if he had not been modeſt and humble, he would have made mention of them with jollity and glory. See Eſther 58.12.

V. 19. In Midian] This may be a ſecond apparition of God to Moſes, either to give him his charge for preſent addreſſe to the ſervice, (which before he did not) or to urge him, (upon his too much deliberation or delay) to more expedition in his duty.

which ſought thy life] In the deliverance of the Iſraelites from Egyptian bondage, Moſes was a Type of Chriſt, and therefore his deliverance and ſafety, and our Saviours, both are ſet down in the like phraſe, Mat. 2.20.

V. 20. took his wife, and, &c.] But finding incumbrance by their company, he ſent them back; for they met him (with Jethro) in the wilderneſſe, Exod. 18.5.

the rod of God] That rod which (by the miraculous power of God) was turned into a ſerpent, and (by the ſame power) returned from a ſerpent to a rod again.

V. 21. I will harden his heart] By withdrawing or withholding grace from him, (as by withholding or withdrawing light, he cauſeth darkneſſe) and permitting Satan to work upon him, and to excite and ſpur on his corrupt nature to all manner of contradiction and contumacy againſt God: and herein (viz. in reſpect of nature and grace) it was with him, as with a Greyhound held in by a ſlip or coller when an Hare is in ſight, for (if that be let looſe) he runneth violently at the Hare, (according to the diſpoſition which is naturally in him) and not put into him by him that firſt held him in, and after let them looſe, but is thereupon diſcovered by leaving him at liberty, to exerciſe his antipathy on that creature. The grace of God is like that reſtraining ſlip or coller, which if it be taken away, mans naughty nature breaks looſe into all manner of exceſſe, to which he is naturally enclined, or Satanically tempted. If it be ſaid, that the not hindring ſin maketh a guilt of ſin, as Neh. 13. 15, 16, 17. and therefore that Florinus (though branded for an heretick by the ancients) was in the right, when he held, that God was the author of ſin: it will not follow: for though it be true in men, that they are bound to hinder it all they can: it is not ſo in God, for he is bound to none, and therefore is free to beſtow or withhold his grace, as he pleaſeth: and (when the devil and wicked men have done their worſt) he knoweth how to make the beſt of any evil act, and to turn even a great evil into an occaſion of great good, as the paſſion of Chriſt to the preſervation of Chriſtians, Iſa. 53. 3,4,5,6,7. Rom. 5.9,10. Epheſ. 5.25,26,27. See chap. 7.3. & 9. 12 & 63.17.

V. 22. Iſrael is my ſon] By Iſrael is meant the poſterity of Jacob, (who was alſo called Iſrael) Gen. 32.28. and here is his off-ſpring named, not onely Gods Son, (a title of favour) but his firſt borne, a relation of honour; becauſe he made the firſt choice of that people before any other, and as firſt born, the people ſo called have ſo much, both benevolence, and preeminence (above all other nations) that God will not ſuffer them to remaine ſlaves: for as the firſt-born were conſecrated to God, (as his peculiar portion) ſo were the children of Iſrael accepted for his, as a peculiar treaſure, above all people, Exo. 19.5. and of them was to come (according to the fleſh) the firſt born of every creature: ſo our Saviour is called, Col. 1.15. becauſe he was before any creature, (in reſpect of his eternal generation) and the firſt borne of the dead, verſ. 18. of the ſame Chapter, becauſe his reſurrection in vertue, though not in time, was before all others.

V. 24 ſought to kill him] Or, would have killed him. That is, made ſhew, or offered to kill him, the cauſe whereof (as ſome conceive) was his diſtruſt, manifeſted before in his averſion from the ſervice, (whereto God called him) and ſo many excuſes as he made to ſhift it off, which diſtruſt he carried with him, on the way, and for that he was met withall, in a minatory manner, it may be as Balaam by the Angel, with a drawn ſword, as Num. 22.31. but the more received reaſon of Moſes deadly danger (at this time, and in this place) is, that he undertook this Ambaſſie to the Egyptians, before he had performed what belonged to a true Iſraelite, which was to circumciſe his child: for having two, it appears, that one of them (at leaſt) was yet uncircumciſed; the omiſſion of which ordinance, but eſpecially the contempt of it, (when God required it) was a capital crime, Gen. 17.14. and though death ſeem there to be threatned to the uncircumciſed Infant, (who may be cut off in this life, as puniſhment or chaſtiſement to his parents) yet the greateſt danger both of ſin and puniſhment, befalleth thoſe, who ſhould circumciſe their children, and do not: and therefore here we read, that the father, rather then the child, is threatned with death.

V. 25. Then Zipporah took] Being admoniſhed of the danger, either by an angel, or by inſpiration, either immediate to her ſelf, or mediate by her husband: This act was extraordinary, for Moſes (to whom it moſt appertained to ſee the Sacrament adminiſtred) was either wholly diſabled, or very much indiſpoſed, (whether by ſickneſſe, or any other impediment it doth not appear) at that time to do it himſelf.

a ſharp ſtone] Or knife, or a knife ſharpened upon ſtones, or ſharpned like the edg of a flint ſtone, ſo Joſ. 5.2,3. with ſuch an inſtrument, ſhe cut off the foreskin of her ſon.

caſt it at his feet] If at the Angels feet, it was to pacifie him, and ſo to deliver her husband from danger? if at her husbands feet, it might be, either by way of angry upbraiding, or to ſhew him that ſhe had exerciſed that ſeverity on her ſon for his ſake: ſome underſtand the childs feet, and ſome for caſting at his feet, read touched his feet: and they mean, that Zipporah her ſelf fell down at Moſes his feet, to deſire leave to depart, and to go home again: but the better tranſlation is, caſt it, &c. as before, both for words and ſenſe.

V. 25. a bloody husband] Moſes having married a Midianitiſh woman, (not wonted to ſuch a ſevere Sacrament, as ſome ſuppoſe) and ſhe being a fond mother, as well as a ſhrewd wife, cauſed the delay in adminiſtration of circumciſion; which was ſo dangerous to her husband, and indeed it was ſuch an harſh welcome of little Infants into the world, that it would never have been received, if Divine Authority had not appeared in the propoſal of it: See on Gen. 19.23. but yet there is no cauſe to conceive, that Zipporah was no ſtranger to circumciſion: for ſhe was a Midianite, and therefore deſcended from Abraham by Keturah, and the ſeed of Abraham (by whomſoever) were circumciſed; yet as Iſhmael was circumciſed, not at eight dayes old, but at the thirteenth year of his age, ſo ſome of his poſterity circumciſed not their children in their Infancy, but forbore to do it untill they attained more years and growth, and ſtrength: and to ſuch a circumciſion Zipporah might be accuſtomed, and yet might not bring her heart to conſent to circumciſe her ſon ſo young as Gods Ordinance required, Gen. 17.12. and ſo ſhe might call Moſes a bloody husband, becauſe her marriage with him engaged her child to be circumciſed, at a time when ſhe was weak, (being, as ſome take it, but newly delivered) as well as her child. The word Chatan, (rendred husband) ſignifieth a Spouſe, or Bridegroom, a ſon in law, or kinſman: a Spouſe or Bridegroom, in reſpect of the Bride; a ſon in law, in relation to her Parents, (when they are married) and kinſman to his wives kindred; and by a Metaphor, the circumciſed child is called Chatan, or Spouſe, becauſe (by circumciſion) it entreth into covenant, and thereby, as it were, eſpouſed to God. And ſome adde further, that (in the uſe of circumciſion) theſe words are ſolemnly pronounced, Thou art a ſpouſe of bloods unto me; therefore in the Original the word is of the plural number, as in the next Note.

So he let him go] That is, the Lord, or the Angel of the Lord, that threatned him, let him go, with a threat, without any hurt. Some underſtand it of Moſes letting Zipporah go back to her Countrey, Exod. 18.2.

V. 26. Becauſe of the circumciſion] Heb. (circumciſions. Belike ſhe remembers (with a freſh diſpleaſure) the circumciſion of her former ſon, and putteth both together in the Plurall Number.

V. 27. and kiſſed him] See Annot. on Gen. 29.11.

V. 30. and did the ſignes] Or, he did the ſignes, that is, not Aaron, but Moſes: or if any wonder were done by that Miniſtry of Aaron, it was uſually by the command, or appointment of Moſes.

V. 31. they bowed their heads and worſhiped] The joyfull tydings of their deliverance was entertained with humility, (whereof their lowly geſture was a ſigne, as Gen. 17.3.) and this humility is ſeaſonable, not in times of affliction or calamity onely, but alſo when the Lord conferreth his favours in greateſt meaſure. See Deut. 8.14.

CHAP. V.

Verſ. 1. M*oſes and Aaron*] With the Elders, as God appointed, Chap. 3.18. but, as ſome think, they went alone; becauſe they alone are named here; and in the fourth verſe, and becauſe inſtead of the Elders appointed, chap. 3. 18. God ſeemeth to have appointed Aaron for Moſes his companion, Chap. 4.14.

told Pharaoh] They both ſpake the ſame thing, or one of them by conſent of both: as Peter and John, Act. 4.19.

hold a feaſt] Chap. 10.9. Moſes is directed to deſire leave to offer ſacrifice unto the Lord; it is ſo alſo, verſ. 3. of this Chap. yet no repugnance: for part of the ſacrifices ſerved for a feaſt, and both belonged to the ſame perſons, and in both, the honour belonged to God, 1 King. 8. 63,64,65.

V. 2. Who is the Lord] Job 21.15.

V. 3. leſt he fall] Though the wicked (through hardneſſe of heart) contemn the Lord, the godly muſt, and will be affraid to offend him: and they muſt fear him, not onely with a loving reverence, as a father, but with an awful dread of his diſpleaſure, as a powerful Judge, who will pour out his plagues on them, who wilfully harden themſelves againſt him. See 2 King 17.25. Ezra 7.23. Zach. 14.17. 2 Chr. 29.7,8. & Chap. 30.8. In this denunciation of danger to themſelves, they imply ſome perill to Pharaoh, which afterward they ſet forth in expreſſe Comminations.

V. 4. Wherefore do ye] It is ſtrange that ſuch a Tyrant dealt not with Moſes and Aaron with more ſeverity, then rough and reproachful words: ſince (in the wicked) the tongue of ſlander, and the heart of murder meet together, againſt Gods people. See Jer. 38.4. But the ſame power, that wrought wonders, bounded his malignity within this compaſſe.

get you to your burdens] Chap. 3.16. Moſes being commanded to gather together the Elders of Iſrael, it is like theſe came with him, and Aaron, and it may be many of the ordinary workmen left their work to hearken after the ſucceſſe of their Mediation, and to them, not to Moſes, and Aaron, (who had not put their hands to the work) Pharaoh ſaid, get you to your burdens.

V. 5. are many] Hence it is probable, that the bloody Decree of drowning, or killing the male children, did not prevail at all, or but for a while.

V. 6. Officers] Theſe Officers were Hebrews, ver. 14. and 19. ſet over the workmen, but under the Egyptian task-maſters, who had power over them both.

V. 7. no more ſtraw] The uſe of the ſtraw was, either to bind the clay together, leſt it ſhould be too brittle; or to cover it, that it might not be chopt with heat, or wind; or to harden it (by burning in the furnace) or at leaſt, to kindle other fewel: this was brought to their hands till now, by thoſe on whom the task of brick, (whether by tale or heap) was not impoſed; now the ſame men muſt divide the] ſervices between them, as to do both, and yet no abatement of their labour in making, or burning brick, will be allowed.

as heretofore] Heb as yeſterday, or the day before yeſterday: So in the next verſe, and verſe.14. See on.Gen.30.33.

V. 9. more work upon them] The more that Tyrants are intreated, the more they tyrannize, taking occaſion by the requeſt, (as ſin by the Commandement, Rom.7.13.) to rage the more. See Rom 7.12,13.

vain words] Of Moſes and Aaron: wilfull wicked ones contemn the word both of God, and the worthieſt men, if it ſound not according to their corrupt and deſtempered paſſions.

V.12. ſcattered] Part of them tempered the clay, part formed the bricks, part of them yeelded, or burnt them, and part of them went abroad to gather ſtraw.

V.19. daily task] Heb. Matter of a day in his day.

V. 20. they met Moſes and Aaron] As they came from Pharaoh, the Hebrew Officers of the people met them, to know what anſwer the King had returned to them.

V. 21. ye have made our ſaviour] Ignorant and paſſionate people (by miſtaking occaſions for cauſes) charge the injuries of their greateſt enemies, upon their beſt friends.

to be abhorred] Heb. to ſtink. The like phraſe is uſed by Jacob, concerning Simeon and Levi, Gen.34.30.

V.22. evill intreated] By giving an occaſion of more affliction to thy people, againſt whom the Tyrants rage is not mitigated at all, but more aggravated ſince I mediated for them, then before: In which pleading with God, Moſes ſheweth himſelf (though with ſome mixture of diſpleaſure) rather zealous for God, then contumacious againſt him, and this rather by way of inquiſition, then of peremptory reſolution

V. 23. neither haſt thou delivered this people at all] Heb in delivering thou haſt not delivered: God, though he promiſe deliverance, leaveth a liberty to himſelf both for the time, and manner of performance, and muſt not be thought to deny it when he doth but defer it.

haſt not delivered] Heb. in delivering thou haſt not delivered. That is, thou haſt not at all delivered them.

CHAP. VI.

Verſ. 1. THe LORD ſaid] It may be by inward inſpiration, for here is no mention of any outward apparition.

with a ſtrong hand] My hand ſhall be ſo ſtrong and heavy upon him, that he ſhall not onely be content to diſmiſſe you, as Exod.3.20. but ready alſo, (with all his power) to expell you, rather then to keep you captives any longer.

V. 3. by the name of God Almighty] Heb. Elſhaddai. By that name he manifeſted himſelf, firſt to Abraham, Gen.17.1. and afterwards to Iſaac and Jacob.

but by my Name JEHOVAH] This name is derived from Haja, which ſignifieth, is or hath been. The former name ſignifieth (but in part) the nature of God, eſpecially his Almighty power; but the name Jehovah, importeth all his infinite perfections; eſpecially firſt his being of himſelf, before the World was made, Iſa.44.6. Secondly, his giving being to the creatures, Act.17.25. And thirdly, his making good his promiſes, by full, and anſwerable effects. The Jews out of a ſuperſtitious reſpect to that name, (where they meet with it) forbeare to pronounce it, and uſed the name Adonai, in ſtead of it.

was I not known to them] It ſeems to have been known to Abraham, Gen.22 14. to Iſaac, Chap.26.24 and to Jacob, Chap.27.20. The firſt mention of it we find, is in Gen. 2.4. when the Creation of the world was perfected, and not before: but though the Ancients, before Moſes his time, knew him by his Name Jehovah, and according to all the importance of it forementioned, yet was not God ſo fully known by that name unto them, (eſpecially as it importeth performance of promiſe) as he was to their poſterity, in Moſes his time, by the actual and admirable accompliſhment of his promiſe, in their deliverance from Egypt, and conduct to Canaan. Their Anceſtors had but a dimme and dark apprehenſion of that, which they are promiſed to have in full view, and experimentally to know, in reſpect whereof, the precedent knowledge was but as the light of the ſtars, when the Sun appeareth. See.Gen.22.12. So that the words are not to be taken as a preciſe negation, but by way of compariſon, as Mat.9.13. See on.Gen.32.29

V. 5. heard their groaning] See the ſecond Annotation on Exod. 2.23.

V. 6. great Judgments] That is, with plagues, as a juſt and judicial revenge for their great contempts of me, and tyrannies over you.

V. 9. into the land concerning which] Gen.28.13.

I ſware] Heb. lift up my hand, Gen.14.22. Ezek.20.15.

V 9. hearkened not] The extremity of their miſery made them firſt hopeleſſe, and then mindleſſe of remedy, or redemption from it; and altogether incredulous, for a time, as thinking the tydings too good to be true.

anguiſh of ſpirit] Heb ſtraitneſſe, or ſhortneſſe of ſpirit, which made them indiſpoſed both to believe, and to apply themſelves to the means of their deliverance: immoderate paſſions are a great prejudice, not onely to Gods truth, but to mans welfare.

V. 12. of uncircumciſed lips] Circumciſion was the ſeal of Gods Covenant with his people, and ſo an honourable badge; though on a diſhonourable part: and it noted the cuting off of the corruption of nature, eſpecially in natural generation: but the circumciſion of the lips, (which in a literal ſenſe would be a great affliction, and deformity) in a figurative meaning importeth, that which is commendable, and free from fault: ſo were not Moſes lips. See Annot.on Chap.4.10.

V. 14. theſe be the heads of] Moſes maketh, here, a digreſſion from his main Story, to note the deſcent of the promiſes from Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, to the preſent people; but eſpecially to obſerve the line of Levi, of whom himſelf, the firſt Captain of the people, and his brother Aaron the firſt high Prieſt, were deſcended; whoſe Prieſthood was derived by ſucceſſion to his poſterity: and this might be done the rather for an antidote againſt the fabulous reports of heathen Writers, (as of Juſtine, and Tacitus) who tell untruths of the Original both of Moſes, and of the people of the Jewes: which, though they were many ages after, were apprehended as preſent, by the Spirit, which aſſiſted Moſes in the penning of this ſtory. For the like reaſon it is piouſly conceived, that the Apoſtles made the decree againſt eating of blood, Act. 15.29. to ſecure the credit of the Chriſtians againſt the calumny of the heathens, who charged them with bloody banquets, as is evident by Juſtine Martyr in Dial. cum Tryph. Tertullian Apolog. and others.

the ſons of Reuben] Gen.46.9. 1.Chron.5.3: Reuben, Simeon and Levi, may be eſpecially mentioned, rather then the heads of the other Tribes, leſt they ſhould be thought to be rejected by reaſon of Jacobs ſevere commination againſt them, Gen.49.

V.15. and the ſons of Simeon] 1 Chr.4.24.

V.16. ſons of Levi] Num.26.57. 1 Chron.6.1: and 23.6.

V.20. his fathers ſiſter] Chap.2.1. The Vulger Latine renders the Original word, by couſin germane, that is, the uncles daughter: but not rightly, for it is no where in Scripture uſed in that ſenſe. See Annot.on. Chap.2.1:

V. 21. Korah] Moſes and he where brothers children, whoſe rebellion was puniſhed, Num.16.1.

V. 23: Aminadab] Who was a Prince of the Tribe of Judah, Num: 2.3: & Chap.10.14. Ruth 4.19,22:

V. 23. Naaſhon] In the Iſraelites return from Egypt, he is brought in as a Prince of the Tribe of Judah, Num.1.7: whoſe ſiſter Aaron married, though himſelf of the Tribe of Levi: for the law of reſtraint of marriages (within the ſeveral Tribes) was not yet made; and when it was, it ſeems it did not ſo reſtrain the Levites, who had no diſtinct portion, as the other Tribes: and it appears that the Tribe of Judah, and of Levi, matched often: becauſe (as ſome conceive) Chriſt was typified in this Tribe, and ſo was to be a Prieſt, as well as a King: yet Chriſt was not to be a Prieſt according to the order of Aaron, but of Milchiſedec. See Heb. 7. of the law of marrying within the Tribes, ſee Num.36. In the genealogy the modeſty of Moſes is manifeſt, ſince in the ſetting of it out, he honours his brother Aaron more then himſelf, naming him before himſelf, and bringing in himſelf as an acceſſary, and aſſiſtant to him, ver.26. though he were a ſon of the ſame Family, and his brother, both by the fathers and mothers ſide, and in more honour and favour with God, then Aaron was.

V. 26. that Aaron and Moſes] Forementioned in the precedent ſtory, and now Ambaſſadors to Pharaoh: ſo alſo verſ.27: but there it is Moſes and Aaron: and indeed, Moſes was Aarons ſuperiour, Chap. 4.26. yet he carrieth the matter of preeminence with ſo much moderation, that ſometimes he ſeemeth to be, if not ſubordinate, yet ſecond to Aaron.

armies] For their Families or Tribes were ſo great, and ſo compoſed in order, that they might be compared to Armies ſet in array, 1 Sam.4.2 marching in Rank and File, in a military manner.

V. 29. the LORD ſpake unto] So the Chapter began, and Gods ſpeech to Moſes being broken off, by this genealogy, he returneth to the ſtory he had begun.

V.30. Before the LORD] That is, to the Lord, as preſent with him and before his face.

how ſhal Pharaoh] Moſes reflecteth too much upon his own infirmity, and unfitneſs to be Gods meſſenger to Pharaoh, and thinketh too little upon that, which God ſaid he would perform; elſe confidence on Gods word and power, would have bred more boldneſſe and courage in him, in his Ambaſſage unto Pharaoh. It is good to take ſufficient notice of our inſufficiency for any great ſervice, yet ſo, as that we ſerve God (in what employment ſoever) with belief of his promiſes, and obedience to his commands, and not to think ſo much on oppoſition to our proceedings, as on the predominance of his power, who muſt and will prevail againſt all the might and contumacy of men.

CHAP. VII

Verſ. 1 A God to Pharaoh] The word is Elohim, which is aſcribed ſometimes to men in authority, as Chap.22.28. Here it is given to Moſes as an Ambaſſador from God, for God, and in his ſtead to command Pharaoh (though a King) and to puniſh him (as a Rebel) if he will not obey the words of Moſes, ſpeaking in Gods Name, and God by his Divine power working (with miraculous operation) the confirmation of his meſſage, and the conviction of Pharaohs contumacy, in ſuch ſort, that it might plainly appear God was able to deliver his people, though the Tyrant oppoſed to the utmoſt of his power: and in this reſpect Moſes was to be reſpected by Pharaoh, not as an ordinary meſſenger from man, but as one comeing with extraordinary Authority and power from God: ſo that in Moſes God would account himſelf obeyed, or contemned, as Luk. 10.16.

Aaron thy brother ſhall be thy Prophet] Or ſhall ſpeak for thee, before Pharaoh: thou ſhalt be a Prophet unto him, in revealing the ſecrets I impart unto thee, and he ſhall be a Prophet (to, or for thee) to Pharaoh in ſpeaking again to Pharaoh, the Elders and people what I have already, or ſhall hearafter declare unto thee: (for that is a Prophecy. See 1 Cor. 14.) and though Moſes were of a better ſpirit, Aaron was of a better ſpeech. See Chap.4.10.14.

V. 3. I will harden] Verſ. 13. Chap. 14 8. See Annot. in Exod 4.21.

V. 4. great judgments] So God had ſaid before, Chap. 6.6. but he repeateth it again, for further confirmation of Moſes his faith, and the increaſe of his courage. See Annot. on Chap. 6. v. 6.

V. 6. ſo did they] Exod 10.18,50. it is ſaid before, that they did as the Lord commanded them, and yet he ſaith, ſo did they: which may ſeeme a Pleonaſme, or ſuperfluity of ſpeech, without uſe, or need; but it is rather an emphatical duplication for care, to keep our ſelves cloſely to Gods commands.

V. 7. four ſcore years old] Moſes lived in the court fourty years and in affliction and baniſhment fourty years, before he entred upon his office to deliver his oppreſſed Brethren all that while; and before Moſes was borne, were the children of Iſrael afflicted by the King of Egypt, and his people: which may teach his ſervants in all ages, to wait upon God with faith and patience, becauſe, though he forbare their enemies for a time, he doth not forget his ſervants at all nor will ſuffer the rod of the wicked alwaies to lye upon the lot of the righteous, Pſal. 125.3. And though Moſes and Aaron were ſo old, yet as it was ſaid of Moſes, (that when he lived to the age of an hundred and twenty years) his eye was not dimme, nor his natural force abated, Deut 34.7. ſo might it be with Aaron, though three yeares older at his death, Num. 33.39. and ſo both of them by the abilities of their bodies, and minds, and the reverence and reſpect due to ſuch a venerable age, they were the more fit to undertake a ſervice, which required all qualifications of honour, and energy of power to make it effectuall. Beſides, the noting of the ages of ſuch eminent perſons maketh up the Chronology or computation of time, whereby the accompliſhments of the Prophecy (Gen. 15.13.) may be cleared.

ſhew a miracle] The very heathens expected miracles for confirmation of new things.

V. 9. Take thy rod] The Rod which was turned into a Serpent, and returned into a Rod again, Chap. 4.2.3.4. which is ſometimes called Gods Rod, becauſe he accompanied it with a miraculous power: ſometimes Moſes his Rod, and ſometimes Aarons, becauſe they held it in their hands, when God wrought wonders with it. there was another rod called Aarons rod, Num. 17.3.

V. 10. a ſerpent] So Exod. 4.3. where the word is Nahaſh, as Gen. 3.1. but in this place the word is Tannin, which is uſed for the whole, Gen. 1.21. here it is Tranſlated Dragon, by learned Hebricians, ſo alſo Mal. 1.3. & verſ. 10,22. Be like, the change before Pharaoh was not into an ordinary ſerpent, (called Nahaſh) but into ſome greater creature as a Dragon, or Crocodile.

V. 11. Sorcerers] God permitteth much to the power of the Devils Impoſture, that Pharaohs heart might be the more hardened, ſo that at laſt Gods conqueſt over them and him, might be the more glorious: and here the ſincerity of ſcripture ſtory is to be obſerved, which giveth the Divel his due, and utters the truth of his Agents prevailing force, as well as of his and their foyl at the laſt: among theſe enchanters, it ſeemeth, that the chief of theſe were Jannes and Jambres, 2 Tim. 3.8.

V. 12. they became ſerpents] The word here is the ſame which is ver. 10. this change was either in appearance only, (for neither the Devil, nor his Agents, can make any creature, or change their nature) or elſe, (by the help of the Devil) Serpents or Dragons might be brought into the place of the Rods, and the Rods removed them alſo out of ſight.

ſwallowed up] That is, the Serpent, or Dragon, into which Moſes his Rod was turned, ſwallowed up his Serpents, into which their rods were turned, or for which, they were changed, by the Inchantment and art of the Divel, not making, but bringing true Serpents in their places.

V. 13. And he hardned] See Annot. on Chap. 4 21.

V. 15. the Rivers brink] To wit, the River Nilus.

V. 17. in mine hand] The words are Gods words, yet the Rod is in Moſes hand; it is in Gods hand by vigorous influence, and in Moſes hand by outward miniſtration: as the ſword of Gideon, and the ſword of the Lord, Judg. 7.18. may be one and the ſame; Gideons in reſpect of uſe, Gods in reſpect of force, and the power of prevailing with it.

ſhall be turned into blood] The Egyptians were blood-thirſty men, bloodily minded againſt the Hebrews; and that they might have blood enough, their waters are turned into blood. Thus God requites the wicked in their kind, there was no need to turn the whole river into blood, ſo far as it runneth or reacheth, it was enough, that the ſtreams running by Egypt, had the plague, which (when it paſſed the borders thereof) might be clear as it was before.

V. 18. ſtink] by the ill ſent of the dead fiſh in it.

V. 19. all their pooles of water] We muſt not think that Moſes went particularly to every pool, to ſtretch his Rod over it, but that having ſtretched his Rod towards the River, he afterwards did the like over ſome ponds or pools, or gathering of water, in the name of all of the like kind: or he might (ſtretching out the Rod) make mention how far the Curſe ſhould reach; and it is like, it was rather upon the freſh waters, that were potable, then upon the ſalt; other liquors ſeem to be free from this plague, eſpecially milk, for that it is not properly comprehended under the name of water.

V. 21. and the fiſh dyed] Which was an evidence, that it was a true miracle, and that miracle a plague to them, by whom fiſh was uſed for neceſſary dyet, as Num. 11.5. And to ſome it ſerved, no doubt, for dainties; and that plague upon fiſhes, may confute the ſuperſtitious conceit of Papiſts concerning fiſhes, as if they were holier then other meats, becauſe they came not under the curſe, as other creatures, by the Flood.

throughout all the land of Egypt] Of Egypt, and of Goſhen alſo, (it is like) ſo far it might afflict the Egyptians, and not the Iſraelites.

V. 22. the Magicians did ſo] Exod. 7. 12. & Chap. 8.7. When all the waters were turned into blood, how could they do ſo? unleſſe they firſt returned them from blood to water again: Anſw. It might be in Goſhen, or if that Province were free from this as it was from the other plagues, Chap. 8.22. & 9.26. & 10.23. it may be, that all the Rivers and Pooles were not turned into blood, (at once) but that ſome of them being turned into blood, the Magicians practiſed their Inchantments on others: or they might dig new Wells, verſ 24. which had no commerce with theſe blood waters; or (becauſe this plague continued but ſeven dayes, ver. 25.) the Magicians might play their prankes when theſe dayes were expired: and then make their falſe appearances of blood, by their magical Impoſtures.

V. 24. digged] But it is like, they loſt their labour, if it were within the compaſs of ſeven dayes, after mentioned: for they were like to find, in ſtead of pure water, ſtinking blood, which would rather torture their taſte, then quench their thirſt.

ſeven dayes] This plague is expreſly ſaid to continue ſeven dayes, and it may be that it was the whole time, but the Text doth not ſet down the period of it.

CHAP. VIII.

Verſ. 3. F*Rogs into thy bed chamber*] Notwithſtanding Moſes and Aaron were harſhly entertained upon their firſt meſſage, Chap. 5.4. and the Tyrant were enraged, and the miſerable condition of the people aggravated, and Pharaoh by the enchantments of his magicians more hardened then before: yet Moſes and Aaron reſolutely purſue their commiſſion, and command from God, and preſs into his preſence, and perſiſt in their comminations: an evidence of their fidelity and courage in Gods cauſe, and a worthy example for all Gods meſſengers to follow in the like caſe, See Jer. 1.17,18,19.

kneading troughs] Or, Dough. This plague appeareth to be more grievous then the former: for that was only upon waters, this every where; the former was but upon liquor, nor upon all neither, this upon all their victuals; that afflicted them, but when they were thirſty, this at all times; that being often out of ſight might be ſometimes out of mind, this was a continual offence to many of their ſences, to their eyes the number and figure of the Frogs were a moſt horrid ſpectacel, to their eares their croaking was odious, and their crawling upon them, and among their meats moſt abominable: laſtly, the bloody waters came not up to their chambers, beds, or mouthes, but theſe frogs with unceſſant importunity haunted them in every place, and invaded them on every ſide, on every part. Hence it was, that this plague humbled the Tyrant ſo far, as to deſire to be prayed for, ver. 8. which the former did not.

V. 4. and the frogs ſhall come up both upon the] (Notwithſtanding all locks and bolts) the frogs cannot be kept out of the Kings bed-chamber, and for all his guard, they will come up upon his Royal perſon, and crawl upon his boſome, and croak in his eares when he is in bed, How deſpicable ſhall the dignity even of Kings become, if the King of Kings be pleaſed to caſt contempt upon them! See Pſal. 83.10. and how favourable is God unto man, by his ordinary, providence, in making ſuch creatures loath to come, where man hath to do, who are ſo lothſome to him, that he cannot endure to be touched by them.

V. 5. the Lord ſpake unto Moſes] By ſecret inſpiration, becauſe it was in the preſence of the King, and ſo not convenient to ſpeak of him, and not to him in his hearing.

V. 6. over the waters] That is, over againſt them, or towards them, from Pharaohs Court, where it is like that Aaron was at that time. See on chap. 7.19. and. 10.13.

covered the land] Goſhen, where Gods people dwelt, was excepted as from the plague of flies, ver. 22. unleſs the Egyptians that were among them, were infeſted with them, which might be without annoyance to the Iſraelites.

V. 7. The Magicians did ſo] That is, they ſtretched out their hands over or towards the waters, and either by falſe appearances, deceiving the ſight, made ſeeming Frogs, or the Divel brought true Frogs to the place, where the conteſtation, was betwixt Moſes and Aaron on the one ſide, and Pharaohs Magicians on the other: though it is like the Divel brought but a few, in compariſon of the number that were brought againſt them.

V. 8. intreat the Lord] Ver. 28. Chap. 9. 28. and 12. 32. Pſal. 78. 34. He that peremptorily refuſed to be intreated in the Lords name, to let the people go, asking by way of proud contempt, who is the Lord ? Exod. 5. 2. now feeling his hand lye heavy upon him, doth not diſdain to deſire his mercy : Such power hath God Almighty over Kings, though they be mighty in power, and haughty in ſpirit, that what they will not do for love, or reverence, he can make them do for fear. See Annot. on ver. 3.

V. 9. Glory over me] Or have this honour over me.

when ſhall I intreat for thee] That may be, I will give thee this honour to appoint, or preſcribe a time when I ſhall pray and prevail for thee : and if my prayer take no effect, do thou glory over me, and ſay I am no better then one of thy Magicians, who can rather bring a plague upon thee, then remove it.

V. 10. To morrow] Why not preſently ? the plague being ſo grievous, he might think, either that by that time they might be withdrawn ſome other way, and ſo they ſhould not need to be beholding to God, or Moſes, for that favour : or he might think, that though the Frogs might come on a ſudden, it was not ſo eaſie a matter to remove them again, and that therefore Moſes muſt have ſome time to mediate with God for that mercy, and to make it take a full effect.

V. 12. Moſes cryed] Though he were ſure of the miracle, v. 10. he did not forbear the meanes to obtain it, viz prayer unto God, which is ſo prevalent with God, that it is next to Almighty, in efficacy and power, See Chap. 32, 10. See the like 1 Kings. 18. 1. 42.

V. 14. the land ſtank] The plague was not wholly removed at once, that it might be known to be (not a counterfeit, but) a true miracle, for their clearer conviction ; and the frogs being gathered on heaps, that their ſtink might be offenſive to the Egyptians, as their ſins were to God; afterward it is like, they were partly caſt into the River, and partly buried in graves, or pits digged for them : though it be not ſo expreſſed.

V. 15. that there was a reſpite] This reſpite was but Gods Pauſe, for Pharaoh to make a good uſe of the precedent plague, that when Gods hand was taken off him, by withdrawing of his Judgement, he might by repentance have made himſelf capable of mercy, But this is the manner of ſuch as are doomed to deſtruction, to take more heart to go on in ſin, when they ſhould take moſt heed, that by ſinning again, they provoke not God to puniſh them again.

V. 17. became lice] The hebr. word Cnim, in the Hebrew, is variouſly rendred ; ſome take it for gnats ; (but they are rather comprehended in the plague of flies afterwards) ſome for fleas ; but they were not like to be plague enough because they were more movable, and leſs loathſome then other vermine : the moſt and beſt Interpreters render the word lice ; yet it may be as they came in an extraordinary manner, ſo they were of an extraordinary kind ; ſuch haply as the like was neither before, nor ſince, as is noted of the locuſts, Chap. 10. 14. by ſuch little creatures armed with a power from God, the greateſt Tyrants may be plagued, yea devoured, as were Herod by worms, Act. 12. 23. and Galerius and Maximinus. Bucolz. Jud. Chron. on the year 311. pag. 188, and on 313. pag. 190. and by lice Pherecydes was devoured. AElian. var. hiſt. lib. 5. cap. 18.

all the duſt] That is, a great deal of it, as all Judea, Mat. 3, 5, for a great part of the people of Judea ; or all the duſt, that is, the duſt all over the land, no place being free.

V. 18, the Magicians did ſo] That is, ſtretched out their hands with rods, as Aaron did, ver, 17, and ſhewed their endeavour to do the like, though in vain, but they could not] God confounding their wiſdome and power in a thing moſt vile, whereby yet he honoured himſelf ; ſince hence it appeareth, that there is nothing ſo ſmall, that his power and providence deſcendeth not unto, nor wherein he cannot foyl both the power and impoſture of men and devils, who could neither make lice indeed, nor make a ſhew of them

ſo there were lice] In the Hebrew there is an enallage of number, the Verb being of the ſingular Number, and the Noun of the plural ; as Gen, 1, 14.

V. 19. This is the finger of God] (Luk. 11. 20.) They might have ſeen and acknowledged the whole hand of God before ; now they confeſs a finger of it, in this plague which they yield to be done by Gods Power, and not by Sorcery ; which they ſhould have acknowledged of the reſt of the miracles : but their maſter the Divel taught them, both to counterfeit Truth, and to conceal it ; yea, and which is more, to perſevere in reſiſtance of it.

V. 20. for he cometh forth to the water [What ever were the occaſion of Pharaohs going to the water in the morning, whether for a pleaſant proſpect, or out of a ſuperſtitious reſpect to the River Nilus, it is uncertain : but ſure it was the fitteſt place for Moſes (now no Courtier, as before he had been) to meet with him, and early in the morning, he was moſt like to make uſe of what he had ſaid unto him.

V. 21. ſwarms of flies] Or, a mixture of noyſome beaſts. The word, in the Hebrew, which ſome read Harob, ſome Haroc : (by reaſon of the ſimilitude of the Hebrew letters Beth, and Caph) is by learned Hebricians tranſlated by the word mixtian, or a mixed ſwarm, which (according to the ſence, rather then the literal conſtruction of the words) is in ſome Tranſlations expreſt by [all kindes of flies] and it is certain, they were not of one ſort, Pſal. 78. 45. but a componnded plague, conſiſting of many kinds of the leſſer ſort of flying creatures, as of ordinary flies, gnats, bees, and hornets, which (by the importunity of their preſſing upon them) might give them no reſt, and ſome of them, with their ſtings might wound and kill them ; as Pſal. 78. 45. and as Joſephus noteth; Antiq. lib. 2, 6, 5.

V. 23. A diviſion] Heb. a redemption. That is, a diviſion, for redemption, or deliverance of his own people, from participation of the plagues, heaped on the Egyptians : wherein God giveth clear evidence of his Juſtice on the one ſort, and his Mercy on the other, ſo that here we have a type of the finall ſeparation of the Elect and Reprobate ; and of the ſalvation of the one, and the damnation of the other.

to morrow] it makes for more aſſurance of the miracle, becauſe they that hear the Prophecy of it, (for ſo ſhort a time) are like to ſee the failing, or performance of it thereafter, as in the event it falleth out.

V. 24. and there came] We read not of this plague, that any uſe was made of the Rod to bring this plague, and it is like it was not uſed, that it might appear, the power of theſe plagues was not in the Rod, but in the hand of God.

corrupted] Or, deſtroyed.

V. 25 in the land] (to wit) the land of Egypt, where hitherto it ſeems, they had been reſtrained, at leaſt from publik worſhip.

V. 26 the abomination of the Egyptians] Moſes refuſing the motion of Pharaoh for performance of the ſacrifice in Egypt, maketh his deniall (by a Dilemma) thus : If we ſacrifice here, we muſt ſacrifice, either after the manner of the Egyptians, or of the Iſraelites : If after their manner, that would be an abomination to the Lord our God : If after our own manner, that will be an abomination unto them, and they will ſtone us, for they will not endure to ſee us kill thoſe creatures, (as by ſacrifice we muſt) which themſelves adore as Deities : among whom, (the principal was an Ox,) with a white mark on his ſide, called Apis, whereof ſee Plin. Nat. hiſt. l. 8. c. 46. See alſo the Annot. on Chap. 43. verſ. 32. and on Chap. 46. v. 34. and on Deut. 13, 11.

V. 27. As he ſhall command us] Chap. 3. 18.

V. 29. deceitfully any more] Hitherto he had played the hypocrite, whoſe manner is, (in diſtreſſe) to ſpeak fair, and pretend humility, but no ſooner is the plague taken off, but hypocrites return to their wickedneſs again. See Pſalm. 78. 34, 36, 37.

V. 32. hardened his heart] Zach. 7. 11, 12. See the Annot. Chap 4. verſ. 21.

CHAP. IX.

verſ. 1. GO unto Pharaoh] He ſaith not here, (as Chap. 8. verſ. 20.) go to Pharaoh going forth to the water, and ſtand before him in his way thither ; but go to Pharaoh where he is, though at his Court, where he keepeth great ſtate, and maketh oſtenation of greateſt pride, and where he hath his paraſites about him, to puff him up with ſcorn and contempt, and to incenſe him to indignation againſt Gods Meſſengers and people ; there Gods Ambaſſadours muſt be bold to tell Gods Meſſage to the greateſt Tyrant ; yea, though they ſhould be ſerved with a prohibition for ſuch a place, as Amos 7. 13.

V. 3. in the field] This was an open plague without doores, and principally upon the cattell, and thoſe onely that were not in ſome houſe : and if men were out of doores, it is like they were partakers of the ſame plague with the beaſts of the field, as is threatned of the plague of hail, verſ. 19.

oxen, &c.] By Oxen is meant alſo Kine and Bulls : ſuch cattell the Egyptians had, though not for food of their fleſh, yet for nouriſhment by their milk, and for cloathing with their wooll of ſheep ; and ſome, as Oxen and Horſes, they made uſe of for their work : and of all kinds they made commodity by trafick with other Nations, though with divers of them they committed bruitiſh Idolatry. See on Gen. 46. 34.

a grievous murrain] the word here tranſlated murrain, is Chap. 5. verſ. 3. tearmed peſtilence, and it is one and the ſame diſeaſe, though when it is applyed to cattel, it be uſually rendred by murrain, when to men, as Chap. 5. verſ. 3. it is commonly tranſlated the peſtilence.

V. 5. to morrow] See on Chap. 8. v. 23.

V. 6. all the cattell] The greateſt part of ſorts of cattel : for ſome were reſerved for another plague, and ſome preſerved from it, by a favourable premonition, for their removal from the danger. verſ. 19 25.

V. 7. Pharaoh ſent] Into the land of Goſhen, to ſee whether Gods people there had a priviledg from this plague, which the Egyptians had not ; he did not ſend upon the former plagues, for in ſome of them the wayes were ſcarce paſſable, or with much danger, as we ſee, verſ. 3. and 19. and when they were more ſafe, it may be, the triall came not into his thought ; and he might ſend now the rather, to make up the loſs of the Egyptian catteil, out of the Herds of the Iſraelites.

V. 8. let Moſes] though Aaron took up his handful of aſhes, as well as Moſes, yet Moſes muſt ſprinkle both, that the power of theſe operations, might not be aſcribed to the hand of Aaron, (which held the miraculous Rod) or if they both ſprinkled the aſhes, Moſes might the rather be named, as Gods chief Miniſter, for the wonderfull deliverance of his people.

V. 9. blains] Hitherto (for all their plagues) they might ſleep in a whole skinne, although ſo many and ſo great plagues, might have kept them, both waking and weeping: but now the ſinne of their ſouls brake out in the ſores of their bodies, and on the beaſts for their ſakes, where the miſchief is not more miraculous, then the meanes uſed to produce it, v. 8 which was by caſting aſhes of the Furnace up toward Heaven; by theſe was ſent up a complaint to God, againſt the oppreſſion of the Iſraelites, in the Furnace of the brick-kilns (See Deut. 4. 20.) which came down with a vengeance upon man and beaſt The Original word, not uſed elſewhere in the Scripture, ſignifieth ſcalding or boyling blains, or bliſters: though the aſhes caſt up were not hot, but ſuch as Moſes and Aaron might hold in their hands.

V. 11 upon the Magicians] Though they were convinced and confeſſed themſelves overcom by God, in the plague of Lice, Chap. 8. verſ. 19. yet they ſtill perſiſted to oppoſe the Power of God, and the Miniſtery of Moſes; and therefore they were worthily plagued with boyles, for the corruption and contumacy of their minds againſt the Almighty. So God getteth him honour of them to their ſhame, being ſo branded, as that both their impiety and impotency, (though they took much upon them) was moſt apparent.

V. 12. as the Lord hath ſpoken] Chap. 4. 21.

V. 14. all my plagues upon thy heart] Though my hand hath been heavy upon thee already, I have plagued thee but ſparingly to that I will do, or I have in ſtore for thee, more and worſe, then yet thou haſt felt; and I will make thy heart ſick in ſmiting thee, Mich. 6. 13. and thine own conſcience ſhall condemn thee of ingratitude, and malice.

V. 15. Peſtilence] By this is not meant that known deadly contagion, commonly ſo called; but any, or all the plagues which are after mentioned, and were inflicted; and eſpecially it may be meant of the ſlaying of the firſt-born, as the cutting off may be meant of his, and his peoples drowning in the Sea.

V. 16. for this cauſe] So alſo Rom. 9. 17.

V. 16. for this cauſe have I raiſed thee up] Heb. made thee to ſtand. That is, I have made thee a man, perferred thee to be a King, ſupported thee by my Power, ſuſtained thee by my Beneficence, permitted thy pride, indured thy contempt, that the world may ſee my juſtice, in my puniſhment of thee, and my power in my conqueſt over thee, Chap. 14. 17. Pſal. 76. 10. Pro. 16 14. See Rom. 9. 17. 1 Pet 2. 8.

that my Name may be declared] That is, that my conteſtation againſt thy contumacy, may be known, and ſpoken of to the praiſe of my patience toward thee, and of my miraculous operations upon thee and thine.

V. 19. gather thy cattell] See Annot. in verſ. 6. A Judgement tempering together ſeverity and mercy.

V. 21. regard not] Heb. ſet not his heart unto.

V. 23. ſtretched out his rod] With how much eaſe, and in how ſhort a time doth God great wonders?

V. 24. haile and fire mingled] Pſal. 78. 47, 48. Hail and Fire are contrary: yet both concur in Gods quarrel to plague his enemies:

none like] This confuteth the obſervation of ſome, who ſay, there is never any Hail, or Rain in Egypt. See on Deut. 11. 10. The truth is, it is more rare there, then in other lands; but not ſo, that the obſervation ſhould be peremtorily and univerſally negative; yet it might well be ſaid there was none like it: for firſt, none ſo general over a whole land at once: Secondly, none ſo tempered with fire, ver. 23. and Pſal. 105. verſ. 32. Thirdly, none ſo punctually propheciecl, and accordingly accompliſhed, verſ. 18. Fourthly, none ſo deſtructive to man and beaſt, and trees, v. 25 and Pſal. 78. ver. 26, 47, 48. and 105. v. 33.

V. 26. Goſhen no hail] That may be meant of that part only which appertained to the Iſraelites: yet the Egyptians that were among them, if better affected to them then the reſt of their countrey men were, might haplie be freed from the plague of haile for their ſakes.

V. 27. I have ſinned] Exod. 10. 16. The wicked ſometimes confeſs their ſinnes to Gods glory, in their acknowledgment of his juſtice: but they do not truly repent, and reform, that they may be received to mercy.

V. 28. it is enough] That is, I will not put God to bring any more plagues upon me, thoſe I have already ſeen and felt, ſhall ſuffice for your diſmiſſion, I will now let you go, and ye ſhall ſtay no longer.

mighty thunderings] Heb. voices of God, Pſal. 29. verſ. 3, 4, 5, God preſents miracles to his eares, as well as to his eyes: yet, neither way, will his obdurate heart be ſoftned.

V. 29 the earth is the Lords] All the Inhabitants of the earth (Kings not excepted) muſt acknowledg God for their Land-Lord, and (under that title) they owe him ſuite and ſervice, See Chap 19. 5. Deut. 10. 14. Pſal. 24. 1. & 50: 12. 1 Cor 10. 26, 28.

V. 30. I know that] Moſes, though he knew (by experience of their ſtubbornneſs, and by revelation from God) that Pharaoh, and his people would ſtill be ſtubborn; yet he goeth on to work wonders, both in bringing plagues upon the wicked, and praying God to remove them: ſince God is glorified by both, though they were reformed by neither

V. 31. and the barlie were ſmitten] As Egypt differed from other Countreys, being watered not with rain, but with the river Nilus: ſo it is like there was a difference of the husbandry of that Land, in ſowing the Barly with the Wheat, which is not the manner of other Countries.

V: 3 . not grown up] Heb. hidden, or dark.

V. 35. was hardened] 2. Chr. 28. 22. and 36: 13.

by Moſes] Heb. by the hand of Moſes.

CHAP: X:

Verſ. 1. FOr I have hardned] Ver. 20, 27. and Chap. 4. 21. & 11. 10. Deut. 2. 30. The wicked muſt be admoniſhed, though there be no hope they will be amended, Iſa 6. 9. 10. Ezek. 2. 3, 4, 5. For if they turn not, God will whet his ſword, Pſal. 7. 12. and be glorified in his juſtice upon them, who made no accounto f his mercy.

V. 2. eares of thy ſon] Chap 13. 8. The miracles were ſo great that they ſhould be ſpoken of for ever: where alſo we ſee the duty of parents towards their children, which is to teach and inſtruct them in the Word and Workes of the Lord, Deut. 6. 6, 7. Pſal. 71. 15, 18: and 78. 5, 6. Joel. 1. 3. Epheſ. 6. 4.

V. 3. humble thy ſelf] The end of affliction is to humble our ſelves with true repentance, under the hand of God; and ſo it is a mercy to be afflicted; but if it do not take this effect, it is ſometimes withdrawn in judgement; as Iſa. 1. 5. and ſo it was in Pharaoh and his peoples caſe, from whom one plague was removed, that another might ſucceed it.

V. 4. locuſts] The Hebrew word Arbe, ſignifieth both a Locuſt, and a multitude of Locuſts; for Haba, whence it is derived, ſignifieth to be many, and their multitude is ſignificantly ſet down in the next verſ. See Prov. 30. 27.

V. 5. the face] Heb. the eye: they ſhall ſwarm, in ſuch number, that they ſhall cover the ground from mans ſight, though they moſt abound where moſt abundant of green fruit, or food is to be devoured. See Plin. lib. 11. c. 29.

and they ſhall eat] Devouring vermine are Gods ſcourge on man, for mans contumacy and contempt of God and his Word, Joel 1. 4.

the reſidue] From the plague of Hail, the Wheat and the Rye were preſerved, becauſe they were not yet grown up, Chap. 9. 32. Heb. They were hidden or dark, out of ſight, and out of hurt: whereby it appeares there was an intermiſſion betwixt this and the precedent plague, whereby the contumacy of Pharaoh was increaſed, and occaſion given for more miracles.

every tree] That is, the fruit of every tree, though theſe being ſuch as was never ſeen before, ver. 6. they might be ſuch, as might eat into the wood, as well as devoured the fruit; for that is reported of ſome Locuſts, Plin. Nat. Hiſt. lib. 11. c. 29. and theſe were worſe, not onely then any that were before, but then any that might come after, ver. 14.

V. 6. nor thy fathers fathers have ſeen] That is, they have not ſeen ſuch for number, nor any in effect ſo hurtful as theſe: but they and their fathers have ſeen Locuſts before, for Egypt had her part of ſuch kind of creatures, as well as other Countries, and more then ſome others.

V. 7. a ſnare unto us] Or, an offence, as ſome read: or an occaſion of all theſe evils: ſo are the godly charged, as Elias by Ahab, 1 Kings 18. 17. the ſin and the blame ſhould go together; but the wicked procure judgement on themſelves, and impute their plagues to the godly, who would reclaim them, and ſecure them, Chap. 23. 33. Joſh. 23. 13. 1 Sam. 18. 21.

V. 8. who are they] Heb. who and who, &c.

V. 9. with our young] Young and old (being comprehended in the Covenant) were to have their parts, both in the deliverance from ſervitude, and in the ſervice of their deliverer.

our flocks and our heards] Both for ſacrifice to God, and ſuſtenance for our ſelves.

V. 10. Let the LORD be ſo with] The words of Pharaoh ſavour of much diſtemper, and little ſenſe: the paſſion of anger is ſaid to be a ſhort fury: he was long angry, and ſo did (a great while) like a furious madman; and as he did, ſo he ſomtimes ſpake, he knew not what: and what he meant in this ſpeech, is hard to ſay: it may be he wiſhed that God had no more good will to them, then himſelf had; that as he was unwilling to let them go, ſo God would be unwilling to go with them: or it may be, he might (by way of deriſion) taunt them for their truſt in God, for their deliverance, as if he would do no more for them, then himſelf would do, and he would not let them go with their little ones (but with their men onely at the moſt, ver. 11.) and therefore that God either would not, or could not, work their full deliverance out of his hands. This was either his hope, or the deſire of his heart.

for evil is before you] That is, though you make a pretence of ſacrifice, you have ſome evil plot, or purpoſe to effect; or ſome evil is before you to way-lay you, and light upon you: at leaſt he thought they meant wholly to quit themſelves from his ſervice; as Chap. 1. 10. and therefore he would have kept their little ones as pledges for their return; and he threatens them, if they perſiſt in ſuch a purpoſe, to prevent the performance of it by ſome ſurpriſal of their perſons.

V. 11. Not ſo] That is, ye ſhall not (as ye demand) all depart.

V. 13. over the land] Neither his Rod, nor his Army could reach over all the Land: the meaning is, (as at other times) that he ſtretched his Rod over ſome part, in the name of the whole. See on Chap. 8. 6.

The eaſt winde brought the Locuſts] Gen. 8. 1. Num. 11. 31.

V. 14. neither after them ſhall] This Moſes ſpeaketh by the Spirit of prophecy, which as it ſhewed him a long retroſpect to the beginning of the world, ſo did it ſhew him a proſpect as long forward to future times. See the like perdiction, Chap. 12. ver. 6. See on Joel. 2. 2.

V. 15. covered] See Annot. on ver. 5.

darkened] Either by ſuch covering of the earth; as hath been ſpoken of, Annot. on ver. 5 Or by flying ſo many together, as (like a cloud) do darken the Ayr; ſo it was with ſwarmes of Locuſts in Poland and Sileſia, Anno 1575. which for a mile and an half obſcured the light of the Sun, Anno 1475. Bucolz Chron. p. 425. The like happened alſo, Anno 1642. p. 546. Ibid. See Rev. 9. 2. 3.

and againſt you] Againſt you all, whom I have oppreſſed with grievous ſervitude;and againſt you Moſes and Aaron in particular, whoſe perſons and miraculous operations,and juſt requeſts,I have hitherto contemned 1 Sam. 15. 24. Num. 21. 7.

V. 17. forgive——my ſin onely this once] He taketh notice of his ſin as the cauſe of his puniſhment,and deſires the removal of the cauſe,onely that he may be free from the effect; and he ſtints his petition to this ſin onely,either out of ſome hopeful opinion he had of himſelf,that he ſhould no more provoke God to plague him as he had done; or he ſeemeth modeſt in his requeſt, that he might more eaſily obtain it, thereby as it were threatning himſelf, that if he tranſgreſſed ſo again, he would deſire to be pardoned no more.

this death onely] That is,this deadly plague. 2. Cor. 11. 23. for being ſuch Locuſts,as the like were never before,nor ſhould be afterward, they might be a deadly annoyance unto them,as well as devourers of the fruit of the earth; & ſo that may well be true, which is ſaid (in the book of Wiſdom, c. 16. v. 19.) for them the bitings of the graſhoppers and flies killed, neither was there found any remedy for their life : indeed it was eaſie for God,to make them as pernicious to the perſons of men , as to the fruits of the earth; but the devouring of the fruits onely might be called a death, becauſe it was like to produce a famine , and famine is (many times) followed with the peſtilence,both which are deadly plagues.

V. 18. And intreated the Lord] The charity of the godly muſt exceed the malignity of the wicked, and they pray for them , though they deſerve rather curſing,then bleſſing, Matth. 5. 44. Pſal. 35. 13. Luk. 23. 34. Act. 7 60.

V. 19. weſtwinde) Heb a winde of the ſea. Becauſe the Mediterranean Sea is Weſtward, in reſpect of Canaan, and of Egypt: hence it is, that the Hebrews ſignifie the Weſt by the Sea.

Red ſea] Act. 7. 36. Heb. 11. 29 In the Hebrew it is, the ſea of Bulruſhes : the Greek and Latine uſe to render it, the Red ſea, ſo called, as ſome think, becauſe the water is red, Adrich. Delph. Theat. pag. 123. Some, becauſe it ſeemeth red , by reaſon of the red ſand,or gravel; ſo the Geneva : or from red mountains neer unto it : but it is rather thought (by the moſt Judicious) that it is ſo called from a King who had his Dominion neer unto it, whoſe name was Erythras, (Erythrus in Greek ſignifying red,) which may be Edom, that is, Eſau, the red ſon of Iſaac. See the ſecond Annot. in Gen. 25. 30. and Fulleri Miſcellan. lib. 4. cap. 20. & Sixt. Amam. Antibuc. diſſertat. de Nom. Jehovah p. 531. 1 Kings. 9. 26.

V. 21. even darkneſs that may be felt] The words are figurative, importing extraordinary black darkneſs, as rivers of teares, Pſal. 119. verſ. 136. extraordinary ſorrow; yet God might ſo thicken the ayr, that they might take notice of it, not onely by the eye, but by the hand, when they could rather feel,then ſee what was next unto them; This darkneſs might be cauſed by a withdrawment of the light of the celeſtiall bodies, or by drawing a thick curtain of very black clouds betwixt mens eyes & them, or by thick foggy vapours, which were ſo groſſe, that (like tangible bodies) they might in a manner be felt, ſuch hyperbolical expreſſions are uſual, not only in humane authors , but alſo in the holy Scriptures. See Deut. 1. 28. See Wiſd. 17. 4, 5, 20.

V. 23. neither roſe any] They were not only (for three dayes ſpace) deprived of the naturall lights and lamps of heaven, but of artificiall alſo,the vapors might be ſo thick and moiſt as to put out their candles and any other light that was kindled by them : ſo they were as blind men, that could not ſee at all,and as lame men, that could not move from their places; and ſo they ſate ſtill, and as under the arreſt of this darkneſſe,becauſe they could not ſee what to do, whether to goe.

Iſrael had light] Eſay. 60. 2. Whereby they had opportunity to have ſtoln away; theſe three dayes of darkneſs to the Egyptians , and of light to the Iſraelites , would have ſerved for their three dayes journey in the Wilderneſſe, Chap. 3. 18. and 5. 3. and 8. 27. in which time they might have removed themſelves and their goods : but God had yet more miracles to work for his own glory, and their ſafety, and he would not have them go out like fugitives at all, but rather to march out of Egypt,as by way of honourable and triumphant victory over their enemies.

Pharaoh called] After the three dayes darkneſs was expired, and light returned.

onely let your flocks] As a gage or pawn of their return,or a forfeiture if they returned not, or as a recompence and ſupply for the loſſes of their cattel by the plagues of hail, and murrain, Chap. 9. 6. 25.

V. 25. Thou muſt give us alſo] Thou muſt not onely give us leave to go, but permit us to have our cattel alſo, that we may have wherewith to ſacrifice to God.

V. 26. Not an hoof be left] The Miniſters of God ought not to yeeld one jot to the wicked (as touching their charge) though they would not have him obeyed at all; his word and will muſt be performed to a tittle.

with what] That is, with what beaſts , or how many in particular : the lawes of ſacrifices were punctually ſet down after their deliverance out of Egypt : yet from Cain and Abels oblations, Gen. 4. the continual practice of the Patriarchs, and the diſtinction of beaſts into clean and unclean, was ſome direction for this duty.

V. 28. Thou ſhalt dye,] Though before he confeſſed Moſes juſt, yet (againſt his own conſcience) he now threatneth to put him to death : an impudent ſtubbornneſſe, after ſo many miraculous terrors by the miniſtery of Moſes, that he ſhould threaten him with death , whoſe prayers he had ſo often begged for his deliverance : all wickedneſs is folly, but ſuch as this, is no leſſe then madneſs, and a wonder of the Devils working by divine permiſſion : yet did not this diſcourage Moſes from his duty, Heb. 11. 27.

V. 29. thou haſt ſpoken well] He approveth not Pharaohs ſpeech in Pharaohs ſenſe , but rather taunts him , turning his words to another intent then he thought of.

I wil ſee thy face again no more] Theſe words are ſet down here, (by Anticipation) for they were not ſpoken untill after Moſes his laſt meſſage, Chap. 11. 4. 8. Or elſe they may be a propheſie of Pharaohs perdition in the ſea, that (after their parting) he ſhould be drowned, no more to be ſeen by him or any elſe.

CHAP. XI.

Verſ. 1. THe Lord ſaid] This was ſpoken to Moſes by inſpiration, (before he departed from the preſence of Pharaoh) having denounced the death of the firſt-born, after which time (as he ſaid Chap. 10. v. laſt) he made his appearance no more before him.

thruſt you out] He ſhall ſend you away without any condition , with haſte and violence, as afraid to keep you captives any longer : and without all hope to overcome the power which hath ſo miraculouſly managed your cauſe againſt him.

V. 2. borrow] See Annot. on Chap. 2. 22.

neighbour] See on Chap. 3. 22. Though at firſt the Iſraelites (planted in Goſhen) had not much to do with the Egyptians, from whom they were (for the moſt part) ſeparated in manners, and in habitations, (for which a part of the Province of Goſhen was ſufficient) yet afterwards they multiplyed ſo much, that they ſpread all over that Countrey : and beſides had many mixed habitations in other parts of Egypt , whence it was, that their doores were diſtinguiſhed by the ſprinkling of blood, as in the next Chapter.

jewels of ſilver] Chap. 3. 22. and 12. 35.

V. 3. favour] Pſal. 106. 46. Exod. 12. 36. Act. 2. 47. Exod. 3. 21

very great] 2 Sam. 7. 9. Eſth. 9. 4. That is, much honoured , much feared , in regard of the manifold miracles wrought by his miniſtery both in bringing puniſhments upon , and withdrawing puniſhments from the people of Egypt : whereby he might be the more like to obtain jewels, or whatſoever elſe he ſhould ask of the Egypitans for himſelf or the people.

V. 4. about midnight] To wit, of the night , which followed the fourteenth day of the moneth Niſan, in the morning of that fourteenth day, Moſes gave out the commination againſt the firſt-born, before he finally departed from the preſence of Pharaoh, v. 8. at the evening of that fourteenth day the Paſſeover was firſt celebrated, and the night after that evening, was the ſlaughter of the firſt-born.

V. 5. from the firſt-born] Exod. 4. 23. & 12. 39.

that is behind the mill] Judg. 16. 21. Eſay 47. 2. Lam. 5. 13. Matt. 24. 41. Heb. behind two mills, or after two mills-ſtones. The meaneſt ſervants (many times) were put to grind at the mil : wherefore mils were often in priſon houſes, where priſoners and captives were kept in work, to turn the mill : which was ſometimes ſo made, that they that wrought were placed on the back part thereof, betwixt the mill it ſelf, and the wall of the room, wherein it was placed : ſo they were behind the mill, and ſometimes they drave it before them , thruſting and turning it about with the main ſtrength of their bodies, which though it went round, yet ſtill they came behinde it, ſince they forced it about , by driving it before them , rather then by drawing it after them. See on 1 Kings 4. 33.

V 6. great cry] Chap. 12. 30.

V. 7. a dog move his tongue] Joſh. 10. 11. Job. 5. 23. Hoſ. 2. 18. A proverbial ſpeech, ſignifying that their condition ſhall be very quiet, without any diſturbance of man or beaſt : whereas the Egyptians were in tumults, and made out-cryes for loſſes of their firſt-born.

V. 8 ſhall come down] Moſes had hitherto been a ſuiter at Pharaohs Court for the freedom of the Hebrews, but after a while the condition of the King and Kingdome ſhall be ſo far changed, that Pharaoh ſhall (by his ſervants) ſolicite them to be gone, Chap. 11. 1. and the Egyptians ſhall be fain to buy their liberty, with great liberality, giving them their moſt precious things at their departure.

in great anger] Though Moſes were a man of a very meek and patient ſpirit, (Num 12. 3.) yet in the cauſe of God, ſeeing Pharaoh ſo rebellious againſt him, ſo outragious againſt his people, ſo falſe in his promiſes to both, his zeal raiſed his indignation to a great heighth of deteſtation of him, and his doing. So alſo Exod. 32. 19. Num. 16. 15. Thus may we be angry without ſin, and (in ſuch a cauſe) we cannot without ſin forbear anger. See Mark. 3. 5.

V. 9. that my wonders] God hardeneth the hearts of the Reprobates that his glory may be the more ſet forth, Rom. 9. 17.

V. 10. not let] No words, though after ſo many wonderful deeds, would work upon this ſtubborn tyrant, to let Gods people go ; God permitting him to the courſe of his corrupt nature, and the miſguidance of the devil, and knowing out of the evil of both, to ſet forth his own glory, in bringing forth his people with a mighty hand.

CHAP. XII.

Verſ. 1. ANd the Lord ſpake] That which here followeth, (touching the inſtitution of the Paſſeover, and ſprinkling of the blood of the Paſchal Lamb) was ſpoken by God to Moſes, and by Moſes to the people, before the ſlaughter of the firſt-born ; (as is plain by the 12. 22. and 23. verſes of this Chapter.)

V. 2 This moneth] called in the Hebrew, Abib, Exod. 13. 4. in the Chaldee Tongue Niſan, Eſth. 3. 7. containing uſually, part of March, and part of April. See Annotation on Gen. Chap. 7. 11. and on Joſ. 3. 1.

firſt moneth] That is, the firſt according to the order obſerved in Eccleſiaſticall matters, as for political affaires, they reckoned from September, (called by the Chaldeans, Tiſri) becauſe (as it is thought) the World began with that moneth : and it is thought to have begun with it, for that there were ripe fruits at that time : though many of the Ancients conceive it began with the Spring : and according to this latter computation, was the Jubile reckoned, Lev. 23. 8, 9, 10. becauſe of the Secular accompt of contracts and releaſes then to be determined ; this year called the Civill year, ended at the Feaſt of the ingathering of fruits, which was after their harveſt, whereof ſee Exod. 23. 16.

In the tenth day] The Lambe muſt be ſerved on the tenth day, (on which day the Iſraelites made their entrance upon the borders of Canaan Joſh. 4. 19.) from the flocks, and ſacrificed the fourteenth day, verſ. 6 this was for more ſerious and ſacred preparation for the Sacrament ; and to ſignifie our Saviour Chriſt, as ſeparate from ſinners, Heb. 7. 26. Some think this was peculiar to the firſt Paſſeover, and that it was therefore peculiar, becauſe the Lamb might be in readineſſe, and not to ſeek when he was to be ſacrificed, for which they would have little leiſure, neer their departure : but that reaſon ſeems not ſufficient to appropriate this preparation to the firſt Paſſeover : becauſe, firſt this ſeparation was typicall, as hath been noted out of Heb. 7. 26. Secondly, if it were occaſionall, ſo was the unleavened bread, ver. 34. yet it was eſtabliſhed by a perpetuall Ordinance, and that upon an heavie penalty, ver. 17, 18, 19, according to the houſe of their fathers] thereafter as the fathers of the houſhold had great or ſmall families.

a lamb] Or, kid. (The Hebrew word Seh, ſignifieth either of them :) (for ſuch as had no meanes to bring a Lamb, a Kid was allowed them, uſing the ſame Rites) By the Lamb, or Kid, was ſignified Chriſt, Joh. 1. 29. who was innocent and harmleſſe like a Lambe, Heb. 7. 26. and becauſe the lamb of the Paſſeover was a figure of Chriſt, he is by a figurative ſpeech called Our Paſſeover, 1. Cor. 5. 7.

for an houſe] If the houſe or family were ſufficient for the eating of a Lamb, he who was the chief man in the family, if an Hebrew, was to kill it, and if they were too few, or onely women in the houſe, they were to joyn themſelves to thoſe, who were more, and better fitted for ſuch a ſervice.

V. 4. of the ſouls] See Annot. on Gen 12. 5.

According to his eating] He ſhall take ſo many as are ſufficient to eat the lamb : which Joſephus reckoneth to the number of ten men, beſides women, and children : (Joſephus of the warres of the Jews, lib. 7. cap. 17.) But if a man had a great family (as Abraham had three hundred and eighteen trained ſervants that did bear armes, Gen. 14. 14.) one Lamb would be too little : and therefore as when the company was too few, more perſons were to be added, that they may be enough for the Lamb; ſo if one Lamb were not enough, more muſt be added, that there may be Lambes enough for the company.

V. 5. without blemiſh] Some read without ſpot : but that is ambiguous, for thereby may be meant, either a ſpot of another colour, which may be an ornament, as in the Lambes of Jacob, Gen. 30 35. or a mark of deformity, or defect ; the former is not forbidden in the Lamb, or Kid, to be ſacrificed, but the latter : This Lamb or Kid, was a type of Chriſt, who was without ſpot or blemiſh of ſin, 1. Pet. 1. 19 Heb. 9. 14.

a male] The word Seh, in Hebrew, ſignifieth a Lamb or Kid, whether male or female, for it is of the common gender, and is taken (in the generall) for the leſſer ſort of cattel ; and it may ſignifie a young Kid as well as a Lamb ; as Deut. 14. 4. but though the law leave it to the choice of either ; uſe and cuſtom made it moſt frequent, to furniſh the Paſchal ſupper, rather with a lamb, then with a kid ; and accordingly did our Saviour celebrate the Paſſeover. The lamb is taken of the ſtronger ſex, and more worthy gender, becauſe Chriſt (ſignified by it) was to be of a maſculine vigour, as well as of a lamb-like meekneſſe.

of the firſt year] Heb. ſon of a year. That is, not above a year old, though it might be offered younger at any time, when it was but eight dayes old, Chap. 22. 30. Levit. 22. 27.

V. 6. whole aſſembly] That is, every aſſembly, in every family, or the maſter of the houſe for the family ſhal kill it, and with the family eat it : and this it is like, was the manner, not onely of the firſt Paſſeover, but of the reſt ; becauſe it was a ſervice, not of the Sanctuary, but of private families, where the maſter of it was (to the preſent purpoſe) a Prieſt, as before the Levitical Prieſthood was ordained, which ſerved for publick miniſtrations, not for the ſervice of private families in his way : and though in the ſecond of Chron. 30. 15. it ſeemes the Prieſts were to kill the Paſſeover, (i. the Paſchal Lamb the moſt proper ſervice of the Paſſeover) that is to be underſtood rather of the Bullock ſacrificed at this feaſt 2 Chr. 35. 7. then of the Paſchal Lamb in private familes ; and this Bullock was rather a part of the ſolemnity of the feaſt of unleavened bread, which laſted ſeven dayes together, then preciſely of the Paſchal Supper, which was made onely with a Lamb, by the firſt both inſtitution and obſervation alſo, where the chief of the family was to do that, which the Prieſt did in the publick obſervance of the ſanctuary, ver. 21.

In the evening] Heb. betwixt the two evenings. In our Saviours time, and before, the day was divided into twelve hours, Joh. 11. 9. but a long time before that, the Jewes made ſpeciall choice of three times for the practice of devotion, Pſal. 55. 17. Morning, Noon, and Evening, each of which had its meaſure : the morning was the firſt part of the day from Sun riſing to noon : the noon was the middle part of the day, taking up about two houres, before the Sun aſcended to the Meridian point, that is, before twelve of the clock, and two hours after : and the evening was from the beginning of the declining of the Sun to its ſetting : before this ſetting of the Sun, (and ſo long before as it might ſerve for doing what belonged to the ſacrifice by day light) was the Lamb killed, and the time that followed till night, was a ſecond part of the evening, called a ſecond evening, and ſo as betwixt two evenings, was the Paſſeover or Paſchal Lamb ſlain. Some make a fourfold diviſion of the day artifical, from Sun to Sun, the firſt from Sun-riſing to nine of the clock in the forenoon ; as Act. 2. 15. by many is expounded : the ſecond from nine to twelve, conteining three houres more : the third from twelve to three, which made up the ninth hour ; and the fourth from that to Sun ſetting, which conſiſting of three houres more, the laſt of which is the twelfth hour : ſo the day betwixt Sun riſing, and Sun ſetting, is ſometimes divided into twelve parts, Joh. 11. 9. ſometimes into three, ſometimes into four, and according to this laſt diviſion alſo there may be two evenings, that is, two parts of the afternoon, or evening, as well as two mornings, that is, two parts of the morning or forenoon, and in that part of the day (which conſiſted of the third diviſion) ended at three of the clock, and which was called an evening (becauſe all that time the Sun was declining towards his ſetting) and at the end of it, and towards the beginning of the fourth part of the day, (which was reckoned for the ſecond evening, and which was a Participle of both evenings, or a borderer betwixt both) was this Lamb to be killed ; and as the type, ſo was the antitype our Saviour ſacrificed upon the croſs about the ſame time, Math. 27. 46, 50.

V. 7. ſtrike it on the two ſide poſts,] See Rev. 7. 3. and 9. 4. and 14. 1. This was done for diſtinction of the dwellings of the Hebrews from the Egyptians ; not for inſtruction or direction to the Angel, who knew how to diſtinguiſh their houſes in the darkeſt night, without any ſign at all, but to direct the faith of the Iſraelites to the death of their great Redeemer, and their deliverance from a greater Tyranny then that of Pharaoh, by his bloud, and withall to leave a Memorandum to the ſurviving Egyptians of this wonder. Some think this ceremony was particular to the firſt Paſſeover ; Others, that it was to continue in the land of Canaan, and the ſprinkling of the bloud of the lambe might continue as of the ram Exod. 29. 16. to note the like in the Lamb of God, whoſe bloud muſt be ſhed, 1 Pet. 1. 2. (for without blood-ſhedding there is no remiſſion, Heb. 9. 22.) and ſprinkled by faith upon our hearts, Heb. 9. 13. 14. & Chap. 10. 22. and 12. 24. 1. Pet. 1. 2. It is not the bloud in his veines, by concomitancy, (as the Papiſts teach) will ſerve the turn, but the blood let out of them, bloud not taken out after the manner of meat, but of waſhing, as in the one Sacrament of drinking, as in the other which muſt do us good.

wherein they ſhall eat it] They then who were called out of one family unto another family, to make up a competent number for the eating of the Lamb, as ver. 4. were there to tarry that night ; for no houſhold had ſecurity from ſlaughter, but that wherein the lamb or kid was eaten.

V. 8. roſt with fire] as ſome conceive, becauſe it would be ſooner roſted then boyled, and they were to dreſſe it that way which had moſt expedition, becauſe they were in haſte : but the reaſon rather may be, for conformity to our Saviours ſufferings, whereof it was a type, and our Saviours ſufferings were anſwerable to this, for fire is moſt ſharp and piercing, the moſt active of all the elements, under which all things are moſt paſſive ; and though his paſſion was moſt bitter to him, it is moſt ſweet to us : as roſt meat is ſweeter then that which is either raw or ſodden, which is forbidden at the paſſeover, ver. 9.

* unleavened bread] The Lamb was to be eaten in haſt verſ. 34. Deut. 16. 3. and ver. 34. of this Chapter, and unleavened bread is made ready ſooneſt; but withall, leaven having an operation to ſower and puffe up, (and ſo being uſed to ſignifie ſin, as the ſin of hypocriſie, Luk. 12. 1. and of malice, and other wickedneſſe, 1 Cor. 5. 8.) unleavened bread was fitteſt to be part of the Paſchal Supper : wherein was perfigured, or foreſhewed, the integrity and purity of Chriſt. Beſides, the feaſt of unleavened bread was to begin on the fifteenth day, Num. 28. 16, 17. and to laſt till the one and twentyeth day, See verſ. 18. and Chap. 13. 7. and 23. 18. and 34. 25. Num 9. 11. Deut. 164.

Bitter herbs] Num. 9. 11. We cannot be partakers of ſuch ſweet meat, without ſowre or bitter ſauce ; that is, our hearty repentance, in bitter teares, Matt. 26. 75. and it was to the Iſraelite a remembrance of their affliction in Egypt, Deut. 16. 3. and of monitory of mortification of their corruptions, as it were a bitter crucifying of the fleſh, with the affections and luſts, Gal. 5. 24.

Eat not of it raw] There needed no prohibition againſt the eating raw fleſh, in a literall ſenſe, therefore is not impropable (which ſome here note) that ſince the Paſchal Lamb was a type of Chriſt, John 19.36. the Popiſh doctrine of eating Chriſts fleſh raw in the Sacrament, in a carnal ſenſe, is here precondemned: and it is not more repugnant to the type, then to religion and reaſon: to religion, in deſtroying the nature of a Sacrament, by confounding the ſigne with the thing ſignified: and to reaſon, requiring carnal nouriſhment to a ſpiritual ſubſtance, to which the fleſh profiteth nothing, Joh.6.63. yea ſenſe, for they would have the receivers believe, that they receive the very fleſh and blood of Chriſt, when they ſee, and touch, and taſte nothing but bread; and when their ſenſes tell them it is bread and wine they receive, they moſt ſenſleſly deny them all.

head with his legs] All of the Lamb, that was mans meat, muſt be roaſted whole, even the inwards when they were waſhed, and ſo all eaten; ſo Chriſt is not to be divided, 1 Cor. 1. 13. yea even his coat was ſeamleſs, Joh.19.23. to give caution againſt ſchiſme and ſeparation.

V.10. * until the morning] It muſt not be kept, but imployed only for that uſe, for which it was ordained; and ſo it was not to be ſuperſtitiouſly reſerved, as the Papiſt uſe the conſecrated wafer, nor profanely to be uſed, Exo.29.34. which might have fallen out in Egypt, if being to be gone in haſte, they had left any part of it in their houſes behind them. * Chap.34.25.& 23.18.& 29 34 Lev.7.15 Deut.16.4.

V.11. Staff in your hand] As ready to depart thence; it is very probable, and generally received, that the Paſſeover was eaten ſtanding; for that was a geſture of readineſs for preſent paſſage; and this geſture is conceived to be peculiar to the firſt Paſſeover, becauſe that only was eaten in haſte; and for that our Saviour celebrated the Paſſeover with another geſture, Luk.22.14,15.

the Lords Paſſeover] The Lamb is called the Lords Paſſeover, by a figurative ſpeech, (which ſpeech is obſervable in both the Sacraments of both Teſtaments) for it was not the Paſſeover it ſelf, but the material part of it. It was called the Paſſeover, becauſe where the Angel of the Lord ſaw the bloud ſprinkled upon the ſide poſtes of the doors, he paſſed over that houſe in mercy, and ſlew none in it, ver.13. and paſſed on with ſpeedy judgment to deſtroy the firſt-born of the Egyptians.

V.12. Gods of Egypt] The Egyptians were great Idolaters, and had a multitude of Idols, which they took for gods: theſe gods were either deſtroyed, or (which is in effect as much) diſcovered in their defect of a Deity, by laying open their impotence, to preſerve thoſe who did ſervice to them, and truſted in them, as if they had been gods: See Iſai. 1.1. & 46. 1. Among theſe the chiefeſt of them were Kine, and other cattel of that kind, which were deſtroyed with the murrain, and with the haile, chap.9.3,25. and it may be their great Idol Apis, had ſome eſpecial judgment executed upon it, as upon Dagon the Idol of the Philiſtines had, 1 Sam. 5.3. See Numb. 33.4.

V.13. When I ſee the blood] God knew well enough whom to ſave, without ſeeing the ſign; but this is ſpoken after the manner of men, and to men, whoſe weakneſs of faith, and ſtrength of fear ſtood in need of ſuch a ſign and ſaying, for their aſſurance of ſafety. See on ver 7. Ezek. 9. 4.

V.14. For a memorial] Of your deliverance. Dayes dedicated to God, or inſtituted by him, for holy memorials of his mercy, muſt not be ſpent in idleneſſe, or wantonneſs, but in ſerious conſideration of the benefit received, and hearty, holy, and humble gratulation and thankſgiving for it.

for ever] Ver. 24. That is, until Chriſts coming, for then Ceremonies had an end, Rom.10.4. Col.2.16,17 The word (for ever, for it is but one word in the Hebrew) is uſed not only for time without end, but ſometimes for a long time, as Prov.29.14. Dan 3.9. as til the year of Jubile, which was every fiftieth year, Exod.23.26. Lev.25.40. See Pſal.85.1.

V.15. Seven days] This number is of much note and uſe in Scripture, and by ſome accounted a number of perfection; becauſe when God had perfected his work of Creation, he reſted, and ordained the ſeventh daies reſt for a memorial of it. It is obſerved alſo by ſome, that the deſtruction of the Egyptians in the Red Sea, fell out ſeven dayes after the Iſraelites went out of Egypt; and this is alledged as another reaſon of the number of ſeven, obſerved in this ſenſe. Of theſe ſeven the firſt was the fifteenth day of the month at even, being the next day after the eating of the Paſſeover: the time whereof was the latter end of the fourteenth day See on Deut.16.8.

V.15. Shall be cut off] Not only from communion in the Church or ſacred Societies, as an uncircumciſed perſon, Gen.17.14. but if any contempt or contumacy appeared in the breach of the Ordinance, it was penal, yea capital, and might coſt the life of the offendor, as Exod.31.14. See on chap.30.20.

V.16. Every man] Heb. Every ſoul. By a very uſual figure, where a part, eſpecially the better part, as the ſoul is, is put for the whole perſon. See on Gen.12.5. & 14.21.

that only may be done] The firſt and laſt of theſe ſeven dayes of the feaſt of unleavened bread, were to be obſerved in the manner of Sabbaths: yet with this difference, that on theſe dayes meat might be dreſſed, on the Sabbath not, chap.15.v.5,23.

V.17. armies] Ver.41,51.

V.18. In the firſt month] Lev.23.5. Num.23.5.

V.19. Cut off] It is no light matter, nor little danger to diſobey God, though but in a thing in it ſelf, of no great weight. It is a good rule then, in all Gods commands, to conſider, not ſo much what it is, as who it is, that biddeth, or forbiddeth any thing. See on v.15. and on Gen.17.14.

ſtranger] The Hebrew [Ger,] (from which our Engliſh word ſtranger, may be derived) ſignifieth not only a forrainer, but ſuch a one as is a Proſelyte, or Convert in Religion: and ſo it is to be underſtood in this place; a ſtranger was not to partake of the Paſſeover, nor to obſerve this Feaſt. Except he were firſt converted and circumciſed, verſ. 43,44.

V.21. Elders of Iſrael] Who were to ſlay the Paſchal Lamb in private families. See Annot.on v.3.6.

V.22. Lintel] Or, Tranſome, or upper door poſt. This (as ſome conceive) was proper and peculiar to the firſt Paſſeover, (though ſome think otherwiſe) when the Iſraelites habitations were among the Egyptians: for before they came into Egypt, the land of Goſhen was not without inhabitants of that Nation; and when they came at the firſt, there was room enough for the ſtrangers, and old inhabitants, and afterward their multiplication made a great mixture, not only in Goſhen, but in other parts of Egypt alſo; eſpecially after they were made as common drudges to the whole Nation of the Egyptians.

none of you ſhall go out] The danger of death was in the houſes, and there God would ſhew his favour to the Iſraelites, where he executed judgment upon the Egyptians. It might have been dangerous for them to have ſtirred out, having this command, to keep within doors, a command haply like that of the Lord, Iſai.26.20. Come my people enter thou into thy chambers, and ſhut thy doors, hide thy ſelf as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpaſt until the morning] * This ſheweth they went not out of Egypt in the night, as ſome have conceived. See Numb. 33.3. Deut. 16.6.

V.23. The deſtroyer] That is, the Angel of God ſent to kill the firſt-born, of whom ſome doubt, whether he were a good or a bad Angel; more like a good one, becauſe ordained of God for ſafety to his ſervants, and to execute vengeance on his enemies, Chap. 14.19,24, 25, & 23.20.23. And moſt uſually the wicked are deſtroyed by good Angels and the godly chaſtiſed; as in Jobs caſe, by the bad, and they are delivered and ſuccoured by the good: nor is he to be accounted a bad Angel, becauſe if the Iſraelites had not marked their doors, he would have deſtroyed them: for if they had diſobeyed ſo eaſie a command, for their own ſafety, they had deſerved to have been deſtroyed: and God himſelf threatens to deſtroy Jeremy if he ſhould diſobey him, by not ſetting himſelf againſt a rebellious people, Jer.1:17. But though this might be a good Angel, (who executed a double commiſſion of mercy and juſtice, the one on the Iſraelites, the other on the Egyptians) yet they might be plagued with evil Angels, and ſo it is ſaid they were, Pſalm 78. 49. albeit ſome tranſlate thoſe words (according to the Hebrew) Meſſengers of evils, and mean by thoſe meſſengers, Moſes and Aaron, foretelling the plagues of Egypt, in the 7, 8, and 9 Chapters of this Book.

V.24. For ever] See Annot.on ver.14.

V.25 The Land] Of Canaan; in the wilderneſs they celebrated the Paſſeover but once, Num.9.1,5.

V.26. What mean you] Chap.13. v.48. 9.14 Pſal.78.6. Joſh.4.6 Deut.32.7. The meaning of true religious ſervices is to be known unto children; true religion is the exerciſe of minds illuminated with faith and knowledge, and not of an ignorant or blind devotion (as among the Papiſts) who have a maſſe of myſtical Ceremonies, whereof neither children nor ancient men, no nor many of their Prieſts, do know the reaſon; and indeed for many of them, no reaſon is pretended, but ſuch as is ridiculous.

V.27. Bowed the head] Exod.4.11. 2 Chr.29.30. They gave God thanks for ſo great a benefit, and expreſſed their thankfulneſſe with an outward geſture, and that geſture was as well the bowing of the head, as the bending of the knee.

V.29. At midnight] Chap. 11. 4. Not in an exact Mathematical meaſure, but about midnight; when the wicked is moſt ſecure, their deſtruction is neer. 1 Theſſ.5.3.

firſt born] Not only of men, but of beaſts; and among men, it is not meant only of children of both ſexes, but of parents alſo, and thoſe both men and women, who were born before them, and of the firſt-born of their fathers families; and if they had children, their firſt-born of them were ſlain alſo, ſo that in one houſe the father of the family might be a firſt-born, and his wife; and if he had divers wives, he might have a firſt born by each of them, and ſome of them might have firſt-born grandchildren. Some would have it, that in one houſe, there was but one who was killed, as the firſt born, and in many families it may be, there was no firſt born. There might be ſome exception from this general ſlaughter rule, as of Pharaoh (if he were a firſt-born) and of ſome others of families, whom God might reprieve for a future deſtruction; but Pharaohs firſt-born was ſlain, as is expreſſed in this verſe, who, it may be, was partner with his father in the government of Egypt, and the oppreſſion of Iſrael. Of the firſt born, ſee the Annot.on chap.13.2.

dungeon] Heb. The houſe of the well, or pit, becauſe it was made round, like as wels or pits are digged; or becauſe ſuch as were put there, were exerciſed in drawing and carrying of water. See on chap.11.5.

V.30 Great cry] Chap.11.6. Here their cruelty recoyles upon them with calamity; for they made Gods people cry by reaſon of their bondage, Exod.2.23. and when they were intreated to ſhew favour, they increaſed their rigour; now it is their turn to cry, and God hardens his heart againſt them, as they againſt his people. See Prov.21.13. Jam. 2.13.

not a houſe] Of thoſe houſes, wherein were any firſt-born, either of men, or of beaſts, according to the former obſervation, ver. 29. it was very ſtrange if any family had not ſome dead in it, and many (as hath beene obſerved on that verſe) might have many dead.

V.31. He called for Moſes, and ſaid] That is, he cauſed them to be called, and ſpoken to in his name.

V.32. Bleſs me] Chap.8.48. Pray for me, that I may be bleſſed at leaſt, not curſed as I have been.

V.33. out of the Land] Chap. 11.1. There is neither truth nor certainty in the wicked, their conſciences being ſwayed by their paſſions, their paſſions varyed with their ſtates, their ſtates changeable at Gods choice and pleaſure: thence they that by force would keep Gods people captives, would now make them fugitives to run away in haſte: thus is that fulfilled which God foretold of their departure, Chap.11.1. and the remainder of their wrath reſtrained, as the Pſalmiſt hath it, Pſal. 70.10.

dead men] That is, in aſſured danger of death, as was ſaid to Abimelech Gen. 20.3.

V.34. Kneading troughs] Or, dough. See v.39.

V.35 And they borrowed] Chap.3.22. & 11.2. It is not like that this borrowing, whereof they were foretold, and which was agreed on to be before, (ſee Annot. on chap.3.v.22) was put off until the day of their departure out of Egypt, though then for a farewel, they might have a great proportion of the goods of the Egyptians brought unto them, but that formerly, (as the Egyptians by the precedent judgments were inclined, and opportunity ſerved) they made uſe of the advantage to borrow, and lay up in ſtore, for this time, which was far too ſhort (if they had put it off till then) to furniſh them ſufficiently for their occaſions. Pſal. 105.37.

V.36.* Favour] It is in Gods power to give his people favour in the eyes of enemies: therefore, when we are to ſeek, or ſue to any by petition or otherwiſe, it is good firſt to preſent our requeſt unto God, to make us gracious in the eyes of men. See Neh.2.4,5. *Gen.33.4. Prov.16.7. Exod.3.21. & 11.3.

ſpoiled the Egyptians] It is juſt with God, that his people ſpoil thoſe, who ſpoiled them, Ezek.39.10. and juſt with men (having Gods expreſs warrant for it) as the Iſraelites had in this caſe.

V.37. From Rameſes] Whereof ſee Annot. on Gen.47.11. to Succoth; the Hebrewes journeying out of Egypt towards Canaan had (as they are noted by ſuch as carefully compute them) forty two ſtations in the Deſart; whereof Rameſes was the firſt, Succoth the ſecond, which was betwixt Egypt and the Red Sea; where we muſt underſtand, that that part was ſometimes reckoned to Egypt; but uſually the manured part only, was called Egypt, and this part being untilled, was called Succoth of the Booths or Tabernacles, which the Hebrewes firſt pitched in that place, Num.33.5. The word Succoth, is derived from a root, ſignifying to hide, to cover, and to defend, which is the proper uſe of thoſe moveable manſions, as well as of thoſe which are fixed or ſettled. See Lev. 23.43.

ſix hundred thouſand on foot] That is, ſuch as (not under twenty yeers of age) were able men to march in Military manner, without need of ſupport of horſes, or carts to carry them; beſides women, children, decrepit old men, which (with the wicked multitude, who were partly Egyptians) are conceived to amount to the number of about half ſo many, to wit, three hundred thouſand perſons.

V.38. A mixed multitude] Heb. a great mixture, Num 11.4. Theſe were ſtrangers, and not born of the Iſraelites, but partly Egyptians, and partly ſervants of other Countries, who moved with miracles, removed out of Egypt with them. See Zach.8.23.

V.41. At the end of the four hundred and thirty yeers] (Gen. 15.18. Act.7.6. Gal.3.17) From Gods promiſe of the Land of Canaan, made to Abraham, Gen.12.7. and his firſt paſſage into Egypt, v.10. to this miraculous deliverance, were four hundred and thirty yeers, Gal.3.17. whereof for a great part, he and his were ſtrangers and ſojourners, partly in Egypt, partly in Canaan, ſixty yeers were ſpent in tolerable ſervitude, after that, eighty yeers more under intolerable tyranny. See the Annot. on Gen. 15.15.

the ſelf ſame day] Ver.51. Ezek.24.2. God is moſt juſt and exact in performing of his promiſes, though very ancient and far off, he keepeth touch even to a day; which may make us confident in the call of the Jewes, the fall of Antichriſt, and other predictions yet to be fulfilled.

V.42. A night to be much obſerved] Heb. A night of obſervations. Though the deſtruction of the Egyptians, and the preſervation of the Iſraelites, were in the night, the ſolemn memorial of that memorable juſtice and mercy was to be obſerved in the day, and much obſerved, becauſe it was extraordinary great; for men muſt endeavor to be proportionably mindful of, and grateful for great favors: ſo that not only ingratitude, but too little gratefulneſſe, is a great fault, 2 Chron.32. ver.25.

V.43. No ſtranger] Ver.19. Except he be circumciſed and profeſſe only your Religion, v.48,49.

V.44. That is bought for mony, when thou haſt circumciſed him, ſhall be circumciſed] He is bound ſo to be as the child of the native Hebrew; but a ſtranger who converſeth with the Iſraelites, as a Merchant, or otherwiſe, as a mercenary labourer hired by the day, or for a certain time, was neither bound to be circumciſed nor uncircumciſed, permitted to eat of the Paſſeover; and ſo it is in the Evangelical Sacraments, for none may eat of the Lords Supper, who is not a member of the Church by Baptiſm.

neither ſhall ye break a bone thereof] Joh.9.36. Num.9.12. As men do that feed deliberately, having leiſure not only to eat the fleſh, but to break the bones, that they may eat the marrow in them: this was forbidden, becauſe of the haſte they were to make in their departure; and (as according to the letter, it was ordained touching the Paſchal Lamb) ſo it is in that type or figure, prophecied of the Lamb of God, and accordingly fulfilled at his paſſion, and ſo applyed by the Evangeliſt John, chap.19. ver.36. for that was not done unto Chriſt which was done unto the two theeves which were crucified with him, who by ſuch violence were put to death; but he voluntarily laid down his life, and in the ſame manner, was able to take it up again, Joh. 10.18. and did ſo.

V.47. Keep it] Heb. do it.

V.49 One Law] See the like Num.15.15,29. As God is one Lord, ſo of that Lord, there is one faith in him, one worſhip of him, one baptiſm to him, Epheſ.4.5. It is ſaid of the gods of the heathens, that they were good fellowes, and that they were content with a ſhew of worſhip, becauſe none at all is due unto them, for they are no Gods which are made with hands, Act.19.16. no more, or better gods are they which are made with brains; that is, with vain fancies and imaginations of men: but he that is God indeed, will allow of no rivalſhip in his ſervice; but requireth, as his due, the devotion of all the heart, with all the ſoul, with all the mind, Matth.12.37. and therefore he is a jealous God, Exod. 20.5. and if any men take any part of that from him, which when it is whole and entire, is much too little for ſo great a God, his jealouſie will be raiſed up to wrathful revenge, Exod.20.5. Nehem. 2.2. Toleration of divers Religions then, is impious and dangerous; Impious, eſpecially, if (as ſome late Libertines have taught) if the moſt Paganiſh, Jewiſh, Turkiſh and Antichriſtian conſciences and wayes ſhould be permitted; for ſo moſt horrid blaſphemies againſt God, and his Son Chriſt Jeſus ſhould be ſuffered: and Dangerous, becauſe thereby the indignation of the Almighty may be much provoked, many ſouls may be ſeduced to damnable errors, and the Church and State rent into deſtructive factions, contrary to Luke 14.23. Rev.2.20. 1 Cor.1.10. Mar.3. 24,25. Luk.11.17. Phil.1.27,28. Jude 1. and many other places of the Scripture, which taken together do clearly evict a negative concluſion againſt toleration of ſeveral Religions, where there is power in the Church and State to ſuppreſs all, but that which is true and conſonant to the Scriptures.

CHAP. XIII.

Ver.2. SAnctifie unto me] That is, ſet them apart for my uſe, that they may offer up themſelves a living Sacrifice, holy and acceptable in my ſight, Rom.12.1. *Exod.12.13,15. & 22.29. & 34.19 Lev.27.16. Num.3.13. & 8.16. Luk.2.23.

†All the firſt-born] The firſt-born of clean creatures were to be ſacrificed, Num.18.17. of the unclean to be redeemed, and a price muſt be given to the Prieſts for their Redemption; both of them by way of grateful memorial of Gods mercy in ſparing the firſt born of Iſrael, when he ſlew the firſt-born of Egypt, ver.15. The firſt born of men were to be ſet apart, for eſpecial ſervice to God, and they were reckoned for the firſt-born, though a daughter had been born before: in ſtead of theſe, the Lord took the Levites to his ſervice, Num. 8.15,16. Under this title of dedication and appropriation to God, an eſpecial holineſſe was required of them: and in regard of that holineſſe, all that are ſanctified are called the firſt-born, Heb.12.23. See Gen.4.4. Col.1.15. 1 Cor. 5.20.

Are mine] So all things are Gods by right of creation and preſervation: but the firſt born are his by peculiar right, and to be offered to him for ſacrifice, or for redemption, in remembrance of his mercy. Of this general and particular right of God, ſee Annot.5. on Chap.19.5.

V.3. Remember] Chap.23.15. See Annot. on Chap.12.42.

no leavened bread] To ſignifie, that at their departure they had no leiſure to leaven their bread. See Annot. on Chap. 12.19.

V.4. Abib] When corn began to be ripe in that Country. See Annot. on Chap.12.2. & on Gen.7.11.

V.5. When the Lord ſhall bring thee] The Paſſeover ſeemeth here to be enjoyned but for the Land of Canaan, and it was kept but once in the wilderneſs, Num.9.5. and the ſecond Paſſeover was thirty eight yeers after, Joſh.5. the reaſon whereof might be, firſt, becauſe the keeping of the Paſſeover preſuppoſed Circumciſion, which by reaſon of continual travel, was in the Deſart there intermitted: ſecondly, becauſe in the Land of plenty, the people might be apt to forget their precedent preſſure, and deliverance from it; and therefore there eſpecially they muſt keep the memorial of it. See Deut.8.14. & 32.15.

flowing with] See Annot. on Chap.3.8.

V.9. Upon thine hand] Thou ſhalt have continual remembrance thereof, as thou wouldſt of a thing that is in thine hand (as a ſeal ring on thy finger) or before thine eyes: the Jewes (as in conformity to this Law) had the Law of the Decalogue written in pieces of parchment, which they wore upon their arms, foreheads, fringes or borders of their garments theſe are the Phylacteries, which our Savior mentioneth, when he taxeth the hypocriſie of their degenerate poſterity. Mat.23.5. See Prov.3.3. & 6.21. & 7.3. Iſai.49.16. Jer.22.24.

the Lords Law may be in thy mouth] Joſh.1.8.

V.11. of the Canaanites] Under which name other people called (elſewhere by ſeveral titles) are contained, who might all be called Canaanites, as deſcending from Canaan, Gen.10.6. though ſome ſort (among them) more eminent then the reſt, were called chiefly by that name. See on Gen 15.21.

V.12. Smite all the firſt born] Chap.12.29.

the LORDS] This is ſpoken not of all, but of ſuch beaſts as were fit for food and ſacrifice; as ſheep, goats and beeves.

V.13. Of an Aſſe] That is, of a ſhe Aſs, who is the dam, and bringeth forth a foal: this is alſo to be underſtood of an horſe, and of other beaſts that were unclean, which were not offered in Sacrifice. For aſſes, both in Egypt and in Canaan, were in more ordinary uſe then horſes, both for bearing of burdens, and for riding. See Judg.10.4. and 12.14. and were not only ſtrong, but ſwift alſo, above thoſe of other Countries. See on Deut.23.18.

ſhalt thou redeem] When, and at what rate, ſee Num.18.16.

break his neck] For if it were not redeemed, it reſted as in Gods right and propriety, and ſo man was not to make uſe of it as his own: and by his breaking or cutting off the neck, for the word is uſed for cutting off, Deut.21.4. Iſai.66.3. the ungratitude and hardneſs of the heart of the owner was to be noted and hated, who would not give a Lamb or a Kid, a creature of leſſe price and uſe, for the life of an Aſs, that might live and do ſervice.

ſhalt thou redeem] By offering a clean beaſt for ſacrifice in his ſtead: for otherwiſe (as in Gods right, and their own deſert) they might have been offered up in ſacrifice themſelves; but they were to be redeemed, as Iſaac was, by offering up a ram, Gen.22. ver.12,13. or by a payment of money, to wit, five ſhekels, Num.18.16.

V.14. In time to come] Heb. to morrow, becauſe that is next to come. See on Gen.30.33.

* What is this] * Deut.6.10. ſee on chap.12.v.26.

V.16. Frontlets] Little plats, or pieces of parchment, worn upon the forehead, called Phylacteries, according to the Greek, Matth.23.5. from a word ſignifying to keep or preſerve, that is, in memory; for though they could not ſee betwixt their own eyes; they might ſee in each others foreheads, that which ſhould remember them of Gods deliverance of them: their right uſe was memorative, which afterwards was turned into ſuperſtitious preſervatives againſt the power of ſin. See on Deut.6.6.

V.17 For God ſaid, Leſt] God led them about to train them, before he put them to war with their enemies: for war is a terrifying evil, which if they ſhould ſoon meet with, it would diſpoſe them to think it better to go back into Egypt, then to make their way through the weapons of ſuch enemies, as had ſlain ſome of their brethren before. (See 1 Chron.7.21.) Yet they were to fight with the Amalekites, and did ſo, Chap 17. but that was not until the fortieth day of their journy out of Egypt, when they were too far off to return into Egypt, and that was but one fight, and in that God gave them a glorious victory: but in the way, by the Country of the Philiſtines, they muſt have begun with war, and (having begun) muſt have been ſtill provoked to go on with it, ſince they were wilful and a warlike Nation. Herein God ſheweth, that he graciouſly condeſcendeth to humane weakneſs. See Gen.19.20,21. Deut.10 8. 1 Cor 10.13. And this God did (as obſerving the rule of his ordinary providence) for otherwiſe, he could eaſily have made the Philiſtines to favour them, as he did the Egyptians; or could have made his peoples courage more vigorous then their enemies, by victories over them.

V.18. Harneſſed] Or, By five in a rank. Joſh.1.14. It is not like they now had much armour beſides their ſtaves, unleſs when the armed Egyptians, purſuing them, were drowned, they recovered any of their armes for a ſpoil, when they ſaw them lye dead upon the ſhore, Chap. 14.30. And yet they migh be allowed ſome armes for defence of that part of the Country where they dwelled, from the incurſions of enemies, and might borrow armes as well as other things, of the Egyptians. The word Chamuſhim here uſed, hath the ſignification of five in it, and ſo it is taken here for five in ranks, or for girding up their loynes, at the fift rib: the meaning is, that they went not out of Egypt in a tumultuary manner like fearful fugitives, but truſſed up, or girded up, and going on in an orderly manner, like a well ranked army, ſo that none gave impediment to another.

V 19. Moſes took the bones] So Joſeph ordered at his death, and (for more aſſurance) required a ſolemn oath, Gen.50.24,25. The wil of the dead in lawful things, is faithfully to be fulfilled by their ſurviving friends. It is like the bones of the other Patriarchs were carried, as appeareth by the ſpeech of Stephen, Act.7.16. at leaſt this is evident thereby, that their bones alſo were brought into Canaan; though when, and by whom, it be not certain.

God will ſurely viſit] Gen.50 25. Joſh.24.32. See Annot on Gen. 50.24.

V.20. Succoth] Exod.12.37.

V.21. The Lord went] Chap.14. Numb.14.14. Deut.1.33. Pſal. 78.14. called the Angel of God, Chap.14.19 by which is underſtood Chriſt, Exod.23. from the 20 verſe to the 23. who was typified by this cloud, as the alluſion of the Prophet Iſaiah intimates, Iſai.4.5,6. and who was tempted by the diſobedience of the Iſraelites, 1 Cor. 10.9.

Pillar of a cloud] Which was moved by him with ſuch variation, as God thought fit, for the guiding of their journey, and for their ſtations; for it went before them when they were to march, and when to ſtay, it ſtood ſtill, and when the Tabernacle was built, it went back, and reſted over it, where they were to reſt; and though it were narrowed toward heaven like a pillar, it was broad downwards, and diffuſed like a cloud, whereby it might ſerve for a ſhelter to the people from the heat of the Sun. See Pſal.105.39 Num.9.15,23. and on Deut.31.15.

V.22 took not away] Neh.9.19. The firſt mention of the cloud and fire, is at the third manſion, or pitching of the people; but that letteth not, but that they were guided by them before, for Joſephs bones are not mentioned til then, and yet the people carryed them all the way out of Egypt: and they having need of ſuch guides, by day and by night, both before and after, there is no doubt, but they continued all their journey in the wilderneſs.

fire by night] Though they did not uſually journey in the night, yet ſometimes it is like they did: See Neh.9.19. and though it were but ſometimes, God was alwayes ready for them, and watching over them, as Pſal.121.4.

CHAP. XIV.

Ver.1. AND the Lord ſpake] That which he ſpake before, is here brought in, and it is brought in here, to ſhew that Moſes miſtook not his way, when he brought the people into theſe ſtraits and dangers, but therein he followed Gods direction, as they did his; the reaſon whereof, ſee in the Notes following.

V.2. Turn] This turning was a returning; for they were before at Etham, whence now bending their courſe, (as here they are appointed) they coaſted towards Memphis (the chief City of Egypt Southward) whereas the Land of Canaan, whither they were to go, was Northward.

Migdol] This was a gariſon Tower, or caſtle of the Egyptians: ſo that turning this way, the Iſraelites might be thought to have loſt their way, and to be intangled in the wilderneſſe, and that with ſuch diſadvantage (having Migdol on one ſide, mountains on the other, the ſea before them) Pharaoh and the Egyptians might be drawn out to purſue them, with hope to prevail againſt them; that ſo the faith of the Iſraelites might be tryed, Gods power and providence the more declared, and the enemies more confounded, in their own deſtruction, and Gods ſtrange deliverance of his people.

V.4. be honoured] By puniſhing his obſtinate rebellion. See on Exod.9.16.

V.5. Fled] Whereas they pretended to go but three dayes journey into the wilderneſſe, to ſacrifice to the Lord their God, Chap.3.18. and 5,3. it was told Pharaoh that they were run away, and purpoſed now to return no more. But they went not out like run-awayes, but with a confident boldneſſe, and in an orderly march. See the Note on ver: 8.

V.6. why have we] The wicked are apt to repent of their wel-doing, as the godly of their ill. See the Annot. on Chap.12.33.

V.7. charets] Of old they uſed charets with ſithes at their ſides, to mow down men in their way; there were other charets, out of which they fought, as now out of ſhips men uſe to do: But where had Pharaoh horſes? all the cattel of Egypt being killed, Chap.9.6. Anſw. That is to be underſtood (as the plague of hail) only of thoſe that were in the field. See Chap.9.19, 25.

Captaines] Called in Hebrew Salaſim, or Schalaſchim, which ſignifieth thirds, either becauſe they were the third ſort of men, next to the King, or ſet up over the third part of the army, or that one of them was ſtrong enough for three men.

the Lord hardned] See Annot. on Exod.4.21.

with an high hand] *S*o alſo Numb.33.3. The hand of God overmatching the might of Pharaoh, ſo that in the power and protection thereof, the people did not fearfully flie, but confidently marcht in a Military poſture: and if the high hand be referred to them, it importeth a ſtoutneſſe of ſtomach, as when men are audacious in ſin, they are ſaid to act it with an high hand. *S*o Num.15.30. according to the Hebrew.

V.9 But the Egyptians] Joſh.24 6. This ſheweth the condition both of the wicked and the godly; for though the malice of the wicked be intermitted, it is not ſuppreſſed; and the godly, who (though they have their pawſes from perſecution) have not their quietus eſt, from all purſuit, while they are on this ſide Canaan.

V.10. Cryed out] Joſh.27 7.

V.12. Is not this the word] They would ſeem Prophets in foretelling the evil, that Moſes might bear the blame, if they miſcarried in their way, as if he (with ignorance and confidence) had drawn them into danger againſt their premonition. See chap.5.21. & 6.9. It is then very incident to querulous natures, to think themſelves wiſer then their governors, and it is very neceſſary that governors be as low in humility, as they are high in authority, that they may patiently bear the impatient and paſſionate reproaches of inferiors.

V.13 For the Egyptians] Or, whereas you have ſeen the Egyptians day, &c.

Ye ſhall ſee them again no more] That is, no more alive, for (when they were dead) the water wrought up their dead bodies, and they were ſeen by the Iſraelites on the ſhore, ver.30.

V.14. hold your peace] By that phraſe in Scripture may be meant, not only a ceſſation from words, but from actions; as Pſal.52.3. & 83.1.

Iſai.42.14. and here they are bidden, not ſo to keep ſilence, as not to call upon God for ſafety from deſtruction, but quietly to compoſe themſelves, in expectation of Gods execution of his wrath upon their enemies, as if he ſhould ſay, only put your truſt in God without doubting or murmuring; for God deferreth his chiefeſt aid till mans greateſt need; when the danger is greateſt, the help of God is readieſt, as at this time; for the Iſraelites had on either ſide them huge rocks and mountaines, before them the ſea, behind them moſt cruel enemies, ſo that there was no way left to eſcape in mans judgement. See 2 Chr.20.17. and now they were bidden patiently to expect the ſalvation of the Lord. See the like, 2 Chr.20.15.17

V.15. Wherefore cryeſt thou?] Iſai.64.24. We read of no words that he ſaid: his crying was therefore like to be ſtrong ejaculations, and groanings of his ſpirit, Rom.8.26. which he uttered with ſome perturbation of mind (mixt with anger and fear) upon the peoples clamour againſt him. Yet his paſſion as then, did not overcome his confidence in God, nor that make him withdraw his devotion from him, or withhold his ſupplications for their ſafetie. By this queſtion, God doth not find fault with his devotion, but rather haſten him to the action, wherewith he meant to joyn his own miraculous power, for the peoples preſervation, and their enemies deſtruction, that is, the ſtretching out of the rod ver.16. See 1 Sam.16. Joh.20.17.

V.16. over the ſea] That is, towards the ſea, as before, over the river, and over the land. Chap.8.6. & 10.13.

midſt of the ſea] Not preciſely in the midſt, as the center is in the circle, but ſo as the ſea ſhould be on each ſide them.

V.17 I will harden] See Annot. on Exod.4.21.

get me honour] See Annot. on Chap.9.16.

V.19 The Angel of God] That is, the Lord himſelf, Chap.13.21. to wit, the ſecond Perſon in Trinity, the Angel of the Covenant, Exod. 23.20, 22.

removed] That is, removed the pillar, which was a ſign of his eſpecial preſence, which till now went before them, but now came behind them, that it might be between them, and their enemies.

V.20 Darkneſſe to them, but] The cloud ſheweth light to the Iſraelites, but to the Egyptians it was darkneſſe, ſo that their two hoſtes could not joyn together: it uſually went before the camp, now it came behind, and betwixt the Armies of the Hebrewes and Egyptians, ſhewing light to the one, and being black and dark to the other. See Iſai.8. 14. 2 Cor.4.3.

divided] So far aſunder, that there was way enough for ſo many hundred thouſand to paſſe through in one night, which required a great breadth: ſome think every tribe had his proper path. So *Epiphan. hæreſ.*46.

V.22. Upon dry ground] From ſo great fear as before made them cry out unto the Lord, ver. 10. they are come now to ſo much faith, as made them boldly to paſs through high walls of water, Heb.11.29. This paſſage is applyed (by the Apoſtle) as a repreſentation of Baptiſm, 1 Cor. 10.2. to which it may be likened in divers reſpects: as firſt, that Baptiſm by water is a meanes of ſafety to Chriſtians, ſo was this unto the Iſraelites. Secondly, that their going in the channel (the waters on each hand) was as being in the grave, and we are ſaid to be buried with Chriſt by Baptiſm, Rom.6.4. Thirdly, Their coming ſafe to the ſhore, was as a reſurrection after burial; ſo to ſuch as are baptized by immerſion or dipping in the water by baptiſm, the ariſing out of it, hath the ſame reſemblance, though that manner of baptizing is not neceſſary, as ſome would inforce from the ſignification of the word, for the contrary appeareth, Mark 7.4. Fourthly, Some Expoſitors upon 1 Cor. 10. 2. ſay, (though but by conjecture) that as they paſſed through the ſea, ſome drops of the raiſed waters were ſprinkled upon them, and ſome from the cloud that was above them; but if that were not ſo, the cloud preſerving them from the ſcorching heat, ſignifying, ſecurity from the burning indignation of Almighty God: from which baptiſm if inward as well as outward, is an eſpecial protection, Mark 16.16. and it is to be noted, that then when Chriſt was baptized, the Proclamation of his well-pleaſing acceptance was made from heaven, Mat.3. laſt, wherein is the ſafety of all the faithful who put their affiance in him. Laſtly, the univerſality of Baptiſm to both ſexes, all ages and ſorts of perſons, is repreſented by this paſſage through the Sea, in that (as the Apoſtle ſaith) they were all baptized in the cloud, and in the ſea, for both ſexes, women as well as men, children as well as thoſe that were of ripe yeers, Gentile Proſelytes (a mixed multitude, Exod.12.38.) as wel as Jewes, were under the cloud, and paſſed through the ſea.

V.24. In the morning watch] The night was kept with diverſe watches, ſometimes more, ſometimes fewer, but uſually one watch was from evening to midnight, another from thence to cock-crowing, and the third from that to the dawning of the day, this is thought to be about the three laſt hours of the night.

the Lord looked] This looking was not a bare beholding, but ſuch a one as troubled the Egyptians, and it was ſome evidence of divine power and indignation, whereby he might be known, as a man by his looks, and whereby he appeared terrible unto them, as Pſal.77.18.

V.25. That they drave them heavily] Or, Made them to go heavily

V.26. Over the ſea] Or, Toward the ſea. as v.16.

V.27. Returned to his ſtrength] For diviſion is a weakning of any thing, and now the ſea was bound, and had no ſtrength to wave, and ſwel and flow, as before it had: but God let it looſe again, and it was vigorous and violent as before.

overthrew the Egyptians dead] The Lord by the water ſaved his people, and by the water drowned his enemies. The ſame thing ſhall work contrary effects, thereafter as God ſhall pleaſe to imploy it; and be the operation never ſo natural, God can ſuſpend it, or move it, which way he thinks good, either for good or for hurt. See Dan.3.27.

V.30. Saw the Egyptians] See ver.13.

V.31. Great work] Heb hand.

and his ſervant Moſes] That is, the doctrine which he taught them, and the meſſage which he told them, (in the name of the Lord) they believed, as if the Lord himſelf had ſpoken to them. See Chap.19.9.

CHAP. XV.

Verſ. 1. THen ſang] Or ſhall, or will ſing, (according to the Grammatical conſtruction) which may imply, that as Moſes ſang then, when the Iſraelites were delivered, and the Egyptians deſtroyed; ſo the memorial of this mercy and judgment ſhould be kept up for the celebration of the glory of God in future times. Here is the firſt mention we find of ſinging in the Scriptures, yet it is not like there was no ſinging in the world before this time, nor that the Patriarks of precedent ages praiſed not God in ſinging unto him; for many things were done which are not recorded in the Scriptures: as (no doubt) the fathers before the flood kept a weekly Sabbath, for it was ordained at the beginning of the world, upon ſuch grounds, as concerned them as much as any of their Succeſſors, yet we read not of the practice of the Sabbaths obſervation, until Exod.16.

Moſes and the children of Iſrael] The ſong compoſed by Moſes, and garniſhed with many pathetical and rhetorical expreſſions, might be ſociably ſung by himſelf and the people; who (if they had not a competent number of copies of it, to read it) might have it repeated by parts unto them, ſo that they might ſing it all together, (as the manner is in many Churches of the Chriſtians) or he himſelf might ſing it for himſelf and them; as the prayers of a publick Miniſter in the publick execution of his Office, are the prayers of the people (though he only ſpake) while he doth it for them, as well as for himſelf, and with their conſent.

this ſong unto the Lord] Wherein they give him the whole glory of his own victory, magnifying his juſtice upon Pharaoh and the Egyptians, and his mercy on his own people.

V.2. My God] The original word ſignifieth a ſtrong and powerful God, and very fitly is he here noted by that name, where his powerful prevailing over the proud and mighty Tyrant, is illuſtriouſly ſet forth.

an habitation] A Tabernacle to entertain his preſence with worſhip due unto him.

V.3. A man of war] The word Iſh, here uſed for man, is ſometimes uſed to ſignifie ſome eminence; as a man of words, Exod. 4.10. is put for an eloquent man; a man of arm, for a mighty man, Job 22. 8. So a man of war, 1 Sam.17.33. for a famous Warrior, and God is ſo a man of war, as to be a maſter of war, ſwaying the ſucceſs of it to which ſide he pleaſeth, as in the battel betwixt the Iſraelites and the Amalekites, Exod.17.11.

the LORD] Jehovah is his name. See Annot. on Chap.3. 14 15.

V.4. Red Sea] In the Hebrew it is called Suph, that is, the ſedgie ſea, ordinarily it is tranſlated the red ſea; and by the Greek, the ſea Erythræum, from a King called Erythrus, buried by the ſhore of that ſea. See on chap.10.19.

V.5. As a ſtone] Or, as lead, ver.10. The weight of their ſin, and of Gods wrath ſunk their dead bodies down into the ſea, with more then ordinary preſſure, as their preſumption was extraordinary high and daring; the wicked are deſigned to deep deſtruction, whereby they violently deſcend as a ſtone caſt into the water, which is too weak to bear the weight of it, Neh.9.11. Jer.41.63, 64. Rev.18.21.

V.7. Againſt thee] Such is the league between God and his people that what is done againſt them, he accounteth as done againſt himſelf, Act.9.4.

* As ſtubble] That is, not for the particular manner of the deſtruction; (for ſtubble is conſumed with heat of fire, theſe were overwhelmed in the water) but for the ſpeedineſs, certainty and unrecoverableneſs of their overthrow; as the Prophet Iſaiah threatneth, Iſai.5.24. * Iſai. 47.14.

V.8. With the blaſt of thy noſtrils] Noſtrils, and other parts of man, are aſcribed to God, for the capacity of man, and by this we are to note the vigor of the Almighty Spirit, who can (with as much eaſe, as man letteth his breath paſs through his noſtrils) overthrow the mightieſt power of the wicked. See Job 4.9. 2 Theſ.2.8. And if we take the words in a more particular ſenſe, the Wind may be called the breath of Gods Noſtrils, for that only cometh from him: and as a wind divided the waves of the ſea, and made them to ſtand like walls on each ſide, for a paſſage to his people, Chap.14.21. So a wind might blow down thoſe water wals upon the Egyptians to overwhelm them.

congealed] That is, hardned, either becauſe the waters ſtood like confirmed wals, or the muddy part (under their feet that walked through it) was thickned and confirmed like a ſolid floor.

heart of the ſea] Or, depth of the ſea, Jon.2.3.

V.11. Amongſt the gods] Or, mighty ones. So the Scripture ſometimes calleth the mighty men of the world, eſpecially Judges and Magiſtrates; as Exod.22.28.

glorious in holineſſe] Holineſſe is the glory of the Creator, therefore the Seraphims glorifie him, in trebling the acclamation of holineſſe, Iſa. 6. 3. And where we are taught to pray for the glorifying of his Name, we muſt ſay, hallowed be thy Name; that is, let it be declared, and believed to be holy; and the Apoſtle linketh holineſſe and honour together, 1 Theſ.4.4. The more unreaſonable then is their irreligion, who make holineſs the mark of their malignant contumelies, and do what they can to turn the greateſt glory into ſhame.

fearful in praiſes] Who ought for his great and dreadful execution of judgement to be praiſed, and when we praiſe him we may fear, becauſe we cannot ſufficiently praiſe him; yea ſo far ſhould we be from preſuming on God for any of his acts and attributes, that all of them, even his mercy ſhould affect us with an awful fear, and religious reverence; for this, ſee Pſal.2. 11. & 130.4. Iſa.6.5. Jer.33.9 Pſal.130.4.

V. 12. the earth ſwallowed them] The Earth is (ſometimes) taken for the Globe which is made up of earth and ſea, and diſtinguiſhed from the heaven, the upper part of the world, and ſo by a Synedoche, the earth may be ſaid to ſwallow them, though the ſea drowned them; or they may be ſaid to have been ſwallowed up in the earth, becauſe the ground which was ſolid to the Iſraelites was ſoft to them, and they ſunk into it, like a ſtone, or lead, into mire, verſe 5, 10. See Annotations on verſe 5. And it may be when they were found dead on the ſhore, Chapter 14. verſe 30. they were buryed in a pit to prevent the corruption of the ayr.

V. 13. thy holy habitation] That is, the promiſed Land, the Land of Canaan, inhabited by the holy Patriarchs, eſpecially the City of Jeruſalem, and there the Temple principally which God intended it ſhould be built, in which he promiſed to dwell, that is, to afford his ſpecial preſence, 1 Kings 9. verſe 3. Pſalm 48. 1, 2. and 76. 2. and 135. 21.

V. 15. the mighty men of Moab] See this prophecy accompliſhed, Num. 22.3. of Canaan. ſee Joſh.2.9. & 5.1. Hab.3.6.

V. 16. paſſe over] Not over the Red ſea, for they had paſſed that already, but into Canaan, as the next verſe ſheweth.

V. 17. mountain of thine inheritance] Deut. 3 25. Mount Sion, where Moſes (by the ſpirit of prophecy) foreſaw the Temple ſhould be built, and there God promiſed his abode, as in the place of a perpetual inheritance and habitation. See on verſe 13. 1 Kings 9.3. This was about four hundred and eighty years after the peoples departure out of Egypt.

haſt made thee] After the manner (uſual in prophecies) viz. which is to expreſſe future things by the Preter Tenſe, he ſaith, thou haſt made thee, for thou ſhalt make: ſuch an expreſſion importeth certainty and aſſurance. See Rev.18.2. 10.21.

V. 18. for ever and ever] The word holam, here uſed, when it cometh ſingle, ſignifieth (many times) a long time not limited in words, though limited in decree and providence to a certain period; when with the word gnaed, which ſignifieth beyond, as here, it ſigneifith an abſolute and everlaſting eternity, Pſal. 146.10.

V. 20. Miriam] So is ſhe called, both in the Hebrew, and Caldean Tongue; the vulgar Latine turneth it Maria, and ſo with reference to the Virgine Mary: the Etymology of ſome Hebrews will pleaſe the Romaniſts, who ſay, Mar, ſignifieth Lady, and Iam, the ſea; but the right derivation of it is from Marar, which ſignifieth bitter; becauſe about the time of her birth, the bitter affliction of the Iſraelites began to break forth.

V. 20. *the * propheteſſe*] By whom the Lord ſpake: They who vilifie the female ſex, eſpecially with reference to Religion, may here obſerve that in point of holy prophecie, male end female are all one in God as in Chriſt, Gal. 3.28.* Judg. 4. 4. 2 Kings 12. 14. Luke 2. 36. Acts 21. 9.

the ſiſter of Aaron] And of Moſes, yet ſhe is called the ſiſter of Aaron rather then of Moſes, becauſe ſhe was Aarons ſiſter before ſhe was his ſiſter, being elder then either of them; and becauſe Moſes was long abſent from her, (when Aaron continued with her) and ſo ſhe was longer, and more generally known by the name of Aarons ſiſter, then the ſiſter of Moſes: theſe three were the principal conductors of the people out of Egypt into Canaan, Mic.6.4.

timbrel] Pſalm 68. 25. 2 Sam. 6. 5. That is, a little Drum, Tabor, or Tabret; the Hebrew word Teph, cometh from a word ſignifying to ſtrike; ſome of them had little bells hanging within them, which when the skin of the Tabret was ſtricken, returned a muſical ſound.

and with dances] Or, flutes, ſignifying their great joy: which cuſtome the Jews obſerved in great ſolemnities, Judg. 11. 34. 1 Sam. 18.6. But it ought not to be a cloak to cover our wanton dances; for this dancing was a religous and outward expreſſing of their inward rejoycing, and glorying in God: beſides, it was not a mixt dancing of men and women, but the women danced by themſelves, as the manner was, Judg. 21. 21.

V. 21. Miriam anſwered them] As ſome think alternately, or by turns with the men; or that the women repeated thoſe words, Sing ye to the Lord, &c. as the cloſe or burden of the ſong, as Pſalm 136. for his mercy endureth for ever, which cometh in at the end of every verſe; and the burden of this ſong might be the words of the firſt verſe, repeated by Miriam in this verſe; or (being a Propheteſſe) ſhe might ſing another ſong like unto it.

V. 22. of Shur] A part of the great wilderneſſe, having the particular name of Shur, the ſame is called Eth, Num. 33.7. and Etham, Chap. 13. 20. and is ſaid to be a deſert tract of ground bordering on both parts of the Red ſea, in reſpect of which extent Shur might be a part of narrower or ſhorter compaſſe.

Marah] Or, bitterneſſe. What name ſoever the place had before, for the bitterneſſe of it, now Moſes gave it this name, anſwerable to the nature of it; that the Iſraelites might not be too much puffed up with their prevailing over the Egyptians, God mingleth his favours with afflictions; after their joyful melody of ſongs and inſtruments of muſick, they are exerciſed firſt, with thirſt, and then their thirſt is tortured with bitter water.

V. 24.* murmured againſt Moſes] Magiſtrates are not to be envyed* for the honour of their places, but to be pitied rather for the burden of their cares, and fears, and dangers; and the many clamours, which multitudes of people are ready to raiſe againſt them, when any thing goeth not well with them. * See Chap.16.2. & 17.3. Num.24.22.

V. 25. And he cryed] See Annot. on Chap.17.4.

a tree] Which might have a natural ſweetneſſe in it, as that wood which the Greeks call Glycyrize, (we, Liquoriſh) that is, ſweet-wood, which might be ſweet enough to give a good reliſh to a particular draught, but that the caſting of it into the main water, it turned it wholly into a more pleaſing temper, was not natural, but miraculous, which God could have done, without any external ſign, but for mans dulneſſe, and to make a deeper impreſſion upon his apprehenſion, he put forth his power by ſenſible inſtruments (in themſelves) altogether impotent to produce ſuch great effects, in any hand but his own. See the like miracle 2 King. 2.20. and 4.41.

a ſtatute and ordinance] What this was, is not ſet down, but it appears, that God gave them ſome Ordinances, before the ſolemn publication of his Law at Sinai; or the Statute ſummarily may be that in the next verſe.

V. 26. keep all his Statutes] Deut.28.1.

none of theſe diſeaſes] Deut.7.15. Sincere and ſound obedience is wholeſome, both food and Phyſick, as well for the body, as the ſoul: for it either prevents diſeaſes, or removes them; ſo godlineſſe hath not only the promiſe of this life, but the performance of good things in this life, beſids the promiſe and aſſurance of that to come, 1 Tim.4.8. Prov.4. 22. Pſal.103.3.

that healeth thee] As the Lord can heal the waters, and make them of bitter, to become ſweet, ſo he can heale their perſons, by keeping them from diſeaſes, and recovering them out of them, and this, both for the diſeaſe of the ſoul, Pſal. 41. 4. and of the body, Matth. 9. 26.

V. 27. And they came] Num.33.9.

palm trees] Or, date trees. Theſe trees ſhoot up into a great height, and bring forth a ſweet fruit: of this tree they have anciently taken Enſignes of victory, and to that the Spirit alludeth, Rev.7. 9. Theſe twelve Wells, and ſeventy Palm-trees, ſome compare, firſt, to the twelve Patriarches, and ſeventy perſons that went into Egypt: and then to the twelve Apoſtles, and ſeventy Diſciples; but that is no interpretation, nor inſtruction of the Text, but a mere alluſion onely.

CHAP. XVI.

Verſ.1. WIlderneſſe of] Not immediately from Elim, (the next place before mentioned) for here was the eighth ſtation, and the ſeventh is omitted, becauſe there is no memorable matter obſerved of it.

Sin] Sin is the common name of the whole ſpace of the deſert, from Elim to mount Sinai; yet here it is particularly taken for that part of it, where the Iſraelites had their eighth manſion, or pitching of their Tents: and it was called Sin, (as ſome conceive) from a City of Egypt of that name, Ezek.30.16. The deſert of Sin, Num.20.1. is not this deſert, but another called ſometimes Kadeſh, towards which, this part of the Wilderneſſe coaſted.

fifteenth] In reſpect of the ſecond moneth, it was the fifteenth day, but the thirtieth from their departure out of Egypt.

V. 2. the whole Congregation] Gen.19.4. Exod.17.23. The greater part are commonly the worſe, and therefore the conſent of a multitude, is no good Argument of a good cauſe; we muſt go by rule then, and not by example; or if by example, rather by example of the beſt, then of the moſt, and then alſo our imitation muſt be with the limitation of the Apoſtle, 1 Cor.11.1.

murmured] Having now ſpent their proviſion of unleavened dough, which they brought out of Egypt. See Annot. on Exod.15 24.

V. 3. we had dyed] Famine is an affliction more bitter then death: for it is a dying by degrees, a lingring torment, in reſpect whereof a ſpeedy death from the hand of God, is deſired as a favour. But their impatience was above their preſſure, and God did but make them faſt, to give himſelf occaſion to furniſh them with a miraculous feaſt.

fleſh pots] How carnally minded were theſe murmurers, who had rather be Pharaohs ſlaves for victuals, then Gods free men, notwithſtanding his power as well to feed them, as to free them? and how falſly do they commend their precedent, to aggravate their preſent condition? for it is not like, that there was either ſo much liberality exerciſed towards them, or ſo much liberty given unto them, as to have ſo full a diet as they ſpake of; or ſo much leiſure to ſit by the fleſh pots, as they ſay.

to kill this whole aſſembly with hunger] Becauſe their former ſtore was much what ſpent, and no ſupply appeared for the future: the charge is very heinous, and injurious; but it is uſual for men in anger, to make little ſcruple of the greateſt ſlander

V. 4 *rain bread from * heaven*] That is, a grain made by God immediately in the ayr, whereof (being punned) they might make Cakes, Numb. 11. 8. their murmurings deſerved to be puniſhed in hell, yet God is pleaſed to ſatisfie them with food from heaven; ſo ſhould we endeavour to overcome others evil with good, Rom. 12. 20, 21. * Pſalm 78. 24, 25. & 105. 40.

a certaine rate every day] Hebr. the portion of a day in his day: as their daily bread, that they might day by day, exerciſe their faith in Gods providence for their proviſion, as Matth. 6. 11. Prov. 30. 8.

† prove them] Chap. 15. ver. 25. Deut 8. 2. That is, trie them, or make them known, not to himſelf, who knew them well enough before (without any experimental trial of them) but to themſelves and others, whether afflictions, or favours, will work them to obedience, and to diſcover their contumacy, if neither of theſe wayes prevail with them. † Chap. ver. 25. & deut 8. 2

V. 5. twice as much] On the ſixth day their allowance was doubled, that the ſeventh day (being the Sabbath) might be the better hallowed by their ceaſing from their labour of gathering, grinding, or dreſſing of it (ſo far as the day before it might be prepared) leaving them a liberty, for more active and uninterrupted devotion on that day, ordained for reſt; but not for reſt only, (for ſuch a Sabbath the cattel might and did keep) but for reſt, with reference to Religion, and for furtherance, and fitting of the ſoul for ſacred communion with God, in the duties of devotion.

V. 6. at even] At even they had Quailes, and in the morning Manna, verſe 13. By this miraculous ſupply, it will be manifeſt (as Moſes and Aaron might well ſay unto them) we have not deluded you, in drawing you out of Egypt, but that God hath delivered you, and will ſuſtain you without ordinary means, where ordinary faileth.

V. 17. † murmurings againſt the LORD] Verſe 8. They are ſaid to murmure againſt the Lord, Moſes and Aaron here, as they are ſaid to believe the Lord and his ſervant Moſes, Chap. 14. verſe 31. becauſe the Lord ſpake by Moſes and Aaron, and they murmured againſt the Lord, by their murmurings againſt Moſes and Aaron, becauſe they guided the people, as God guided them by the pillar of a cloud and of fire, Exod. 13. 21, 22. So he that contemneth Gods Miniſters, and the Magiſtrate is Gods Miniſter, Rom. 13. 4. (Moſes as well as Aaron) contemneth God himſelf, † 1 Sam. 8. 7. Numb. 16. 11. Luke 10. 16 Rom. 13. 2.

V. 8. not againſt us, but] That is, not onely, or not ſo much againſt us, as againſt the Lord: or rather againſt the Lord, then againſt us, for the reaſon of the precedent Annotation: the like phraſe and ſenſe hath the Prophet, Hoſ. 6. 6. See on Gen. 32. 28.

Heareth your murmurings] Verſe 9. 12.

V. 9 before the LORD] That is, before the miraculous cloud, which was the ſign of Gods ſpecial preſence: for as yet the Tabernacle was not ſet up: before which time (notwithſtanding) ſome conceive, there was a publick place of ſolemn worſhip; but when and where it was erected, or by what authority, or by whom and how it was imployed, is not delivered in the Scripture.

V. 10. glory of the LORD] God put an extraordinary glory upon the cloud, which might affect the people with more fear and reverence of his preſence. See Ezek. 20. 8. Matth. 17. 6. Rev. 1. 16, 17.

V. 11. ſpake unto Moſes] Who haply made a nearer approach to the cloud, then Aaron and the people did.

V. 12. at even ſhall ye eate fleſh] The Lord complayneth of their murmurings, and preſently promiſeth ſupply of food, but that was not a reward of their wickedneſſe, but for ratification of his promiſe, and to convince them of infidelity, and miſtruſt of him; as if he either could not, or would not make due proviſion for them.

and in the morning] The bread and the fleſh came not both at one time, but the one at evening, the other in the morning; as they came, ſo they might be eaten ſeverally; (as ſome conceive) the Quailes without bread and the bread without Quailes: for as the proviſion came in an extraordinary manner, ſo it might have an extraordinary temper, or qualification, to be both wholſom and pleaſant of it ſelf, without any thing elſe, to reliſh or ſeaſon it: or though they came in at ſeveral parts of the day, they might be joyntly uſed in their daily refections.

V. 13. at even the † Quailes] Num. 11. 31. They flew in the day over the ſea, and by night came they to their journeys end, (the Camp of the Iſraelites) being furthered in their flight by the wings of the wind, Pſal. 78. 26, 27.

in the morning the dew] It came down (as ſome conceive) like an airy dew, and when it was come down it was thickned and hardned into a ſmall round grain, verſe 14. but Num. 11. 9. it ſeemeth that the dew and Manna were two diſtinct things, both when they were together, (for when the dew fell, the Manna fell upon it, Num. 11. 9) and when they were parted, as ver. 14.

V. 14. the dew that lay] Num. 11. 7. Pſal. 78. 24.

V. 15. it is Man, or Manna] Or, what is this, or it is a portion; the word Manna, is one of thoſe words which are received without change in ſeveral Languages; as Amen, Selah, Hallelujah: Some think that Man, (according to the Egyptian Tongue) is put for Mah, in the Hebrew, ſignifying who, and ſometimes what; others take it to be a Caldee or Arabick word, of the ſame ſignification; but at this time that dialect was not known to the Iſraelites, ſome rather think it is a Syriack word: but the moſt proper derivation of the word is from the Hebrew, Mannah, or Minnah, which is to prepare; ſo it is a portion, prepared by God, ſo that they might preſently eat of it, though they might grinde, or pun, or bake, or boil it alſo. The Manna of the Apothecaries, is a Syriack dew; but this differeth from this Manna of the Iſraelites many wayes, eſpecially in that the Syriack Manna will not melt with the Sun, nor putriſie in the night; nor is it hard, nor fit for food, but for phyſick onely: in all which particulars, the Hebrew Manna was contrary to that.

they wiſt not what it was] Though they called it a prepared portion, they were not yet acquainted with the proper nature and uſe of it.

This is the bread] Joh. 6. 31. 1 Cor. 10. 3.

V. 16. Omer] An Omer, verſe 36. is ſaid to be the tenth part of an Ephah; and an Ephah is about ten pottles; or as ſome ſay, ſeven gallons and a half, and near the meaſure of our Engliſh buſhel; ſome conceive the Omer to contain three pints and an half, ſome a pottle; ſome rate it by the proportion of fourty three hens eggs, and a fifth part: which way ſoever it be taken, it is enough for the ſtrongeſt man, and the hotteſt ordinary ſtomach: Wherein Gods bounty may be obſerved, ſee on 1 King. 4. 22.

V. 18. he that gathered much] As in reaping, ſo in gathering of Manna, ſome are quicker and do more then others, in the ſame time. But the gathering being laid on an heap (whether greater for each Tribe, or leſſer for ſeveral Families) the diſtribution was ſo made, that an Omer was allowed to each perſon; and though any had gathered more, he was to have no more then that meaſure for himſelf, and they that gathered leſſe, had their part made even with the reſt: to this the Apoſtle alludeth, 2 Cor. 8. 15. In this portion of Manna, it is probable the ſucking children had no part, their mothers milk was their portion.

*every man * according to his eating*] To the eating of his family, that is, every Maſter of a family according to the proportion of his number, or houſhold. * Exod. 12. 4.

V. 19. Let no man leave] What if one could not eat an Omer? Anſwer, As the meat was miraculous, ſo might be the capacity, and concoction of mens ſtomachs: or if (as the people were of different ſtatures, and tempers) that which was competent for greateſt men, and hotteſt ſtomachs, were too much for ſuch as were leſſe grown, or leſſe hungry, then the overplus at night might be caſt into the fire, as the remainders of the Paſchal Lamb, Exod. 12. 10. and of the Prieſts portion of fleſh and bread, Exod. 29. 34.

V. 20 bred worms and ſtank] This came not by the nature of Manna, which would have kept without corruption on that day, as well as on the Sabbath, but by a miraculous power, cauſing it to putrifie, for the converſion, or puniſhment of the incredulous, and to ſhew that diſtruſt in Gods providence, or contempt of his Ordinance, are as offenſive unto God, as it can be to a man, to eat corrupted meat, ſtinking or crawling with worms.

V. 21. is melted] That is, went away as a dew, that it might not remain either to corrupt on the earth, or by treading on, to come into contempt.

V. 22. twice ſo much] Which proportion ſhould ſerve for the Sabbath, and the day before.

told Moſes] Not knowing as yet, why the proportion on the ſixth day was doubled, but Moſes preſently telleth them the reaſon in the next verſe.

V. 23. To morrow is the reſt] The ſolemn ſanctification of the Sabbath, was ordained by God at the beginning of the world. See Annotation on Gen. 2. 3. but it is like it was intermitted by the bondage of the Iſraelites in Egypt. See on Chapter 5. 7. and 15: 1.

ſo that which ye will bake] As they gathered the portion for the Sabbath the day before, ſo they dreſſed it the day before: that which might be done on the eve of the Sabbath, muſt not be left to be done on the Sabbath day, that there might be no occaſion to hinder holy duties required for the ſanctification thereof. See Chapter 35: 3.

V. 24. it did not ſtink] That which they laid up on the ſixth day, to ſerve for the ſeventh, did not corrupt, becauſe it was done according to Gods command: Obedience is a ſweet thing, it ſweetens the perſons and actions of men to God, Gen. 8. 21. 2 Cor. 2. 15. and the creatures to man, Prov. 15. 16.

V. 25. not find it] They did not find it, becauſe it fell not on the Sabbath day, for God would not have them to have occaſion to go out to labour for it on the Sabbath day, that they might be the more free to ſanctifie the whole day, by ſuch religious duties as he required of them.

let no man go out of his place] This was not an abſolute prohibition of all local motion on the Sabbath day, (though ſome Jews in after Ages took it ſo; and therefore in what place and ſtate ſoever the Sabbath took them, would not upon any occaſion move or change, or divert from it til the day was done) for they might go out of their Tents, to the place of publick worſhip (whether Tabernacle, Temple, or Synagogue) on the Sabbath day, for it was to be ſanctified with a ſolemn Aſſembly, Lev.23.3. and the people were to come out of their private tents, to make up that aſſembly at the tabernacle (which ſtood without the camp, Exod.33.7.) this might be the Sabbath dayes journey, Acts 1. 12. the prohibition then is concerning ſervile works, and ſuch motions, as gave impediment to the due obſervation of the religious reſt on the Sabbath, and in particular it forbade going out on the Sabbath to gather Manna.

V.31. Like Coriander ſeed] Not in colour, but in form and figure, for the colour of it was like the colour of Bdellium, Num.11.7. which is white as Chryſtal; the colour of Bdellium, ſome ſay, ſomewhat inclineth to yellow, ſo is not Coriander ſeed, for that (though it be not black) is of a darker colour inclining to brown.

and the taſte of it was like to water made with honey] Unbaked or undreſſed, it was like unto ſweet wafers, but when it was dreſt it taſted like freſh oyle, Numb, 11.8. yet it might be this Manna here might differ in taſte from that in Numbers, but both ſerve to confute the Apocryphal conceit of the Author of the Book of Wiſdome, Chap.16. 20,21. viz. that Manna was that in taſte, which every man delighted in; for in both places the taſte is ſpecified and reſtrained; and if it was that which every one liked, how came it to be ſo diſliked as it was? Num.11.6.

V. 33. a pot] Heb.9.4. Here is an anticipation in ſtory. See on ver.34.

V. 34. before the Teſtimony] That is, the Ark of the Covenant, afterwards ſet up, when the Iſraelites encamped at Mount Sinai, but here mentioned for concluſion of the ſtory concerning Manna; it was called the Teſtimony, becauſe therein were the Tables of the Law, Deut.10.5. which was the Teſtimony, or Witneſſe of the Covenant betwixt God and his people, and would teſtifie againſt them, if they tranſgreſſed againſt him; and in the ſame Ark, Aarons rod and the Pot of Manna, kept teſtimony, or evidence of Gods power and favour: yet ſome conceive they had ſome Tent, Tabernacle, or place of publick worſhip, before that curious piece of work (whoſe deſcription is afterwards exactly delivered) was erected.

V. 35. fourty years] which were at an end on the morrow after they came into the Land of Canaan, and had eaten of the old corn of the land, Joſh.5.12. that is, of the proviſion remaining of the former years ſtore: where we ſee God will not ſupply men with miraculous means, when ordinary means is afforded unto them. This Manna, Pſal.78.25. is called in the Hebrew, the food, or bread of the mighty, uſually tranſlated, Angels food; not that Angels eat any food at all, unleſſe when they take an humane ſhape, as Gen.18.8. for they are ſpiritual ſubſtances, without bodies: but as ſome conceive, becauſe it had a virtue to nouriſh above ordinary food, and ſo (if ſin hindred not) would draw out a mans life, rather to an angelical, then an humane duration. or it might be called the food of Angels, becauſe it came from the habitation of Angels; or becauſe it was made by the miniſtry of Angels, or for that, if the Angels were to be nouriſhed as men are, they need not any more dainty diet: ſo it is commended in the name of Angels, his Eloquence is, 1 Cor.13.1. where a tongue is attributed to them, not by way of poſition, but of ſuppoſition: but it is without doubt, that our Saviour maketh it a type of himſelf, Joh. 6.33. and ſo doth the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 10.3.

V.36. Ephah] See Annot. on verſe 16. of this Chapter.

CHAP. XVII.

Verſe 1. Pitched in Rephidim] Moſes nameth not every place where the people of Iſrael encamped; but only thoſe places where ſome notable thing was done, or happened to them. See Num. 33.12,13.

V. 2. did chide with Moſes] Num.20.4.

tempt the LORD] By requiring a miraculous evidence of his preſence among you, ver. 7. as if you had ſaid, Why diſtruſt you God? Why look ye not for ſuccour of him, without murmuring againſt us? this is to tempt him to wrath to your own ruine.

V. 3. for water] Heb. at the waters.

Murmured] See on Chap.16.v.24.

V. 4. cryed unto the LORD] When the people murmure for meat or drink, Moſes betakes him to the Lord; for the belly hath no ears, and a rude multitude are as like to be provoked, as pacified with words; but the godly may alwayes have recourſe unto God, and find acceptance with him; and he that can ſtill the noiſe of the waters of the ſea, can ſtill the tumult of the ſea, Pſal.65.7.

to ſtone me] How madly do the common people, ſometimes mutine againſt their moſt godly Governours? there is great cauſe to pity and pray for thoſe who are ſet over a multitude, ſince it is difficult to pleaſe them, and to diſpleaſe them dangerous: but no cauſe to think the worſe of them, becauſe their rage is raſh and irreligious. See the like 1 Sam. 30.6.

V. 5. take with thee the Elders] Not all the people who by their murmuring againſt God, and fury againſt Moſes, were unworthy to ſee the miracle, but the Elders, who were not ſo wicked, and would be ſufficient witneſſe of what was done.

wherewith thou ſmoteſt the river] Chap. 7. verſe 20. The river Nilus by the hand of Aaron: ſome underſtand by the river, the Red Sea, becauſe (as ſome hold) it is rather narrow like a river, then broad like the Ocean: and it is true he uſed the Rod, and it is like the ſelf-ſame Rod to both; but the ſea is very rarely called a river.

V. 6. Behold, I will] Numb. 20.9. Pſal.78.15,41. 1 Cor.10.4. Wiſd.11.4.

water was fetched out of the Rock] this miracle was wrought twice, the firſt time, the firſt year of the peoples journying; and the ſecond, many years afterwards, to wit, in or about the beginning of their fourtieth year, and thirty ninth manſion, or ſtation, Num. 20. Some think both miracles are one and the ſame, becauſe Num. 20.5. the people (in their murmuring expoſtulations) ſay, Wherefore have you made us to come out of Egypt? now in fourty years time, they conceive, that all that generation (which came out of Egypt) were deſtroyed for their murmurings: ſo that ſuch as were alive (except Aaron, Moſes and Caleb) could not ſay, they were brought out of Egypt; but if we look upon Numbers 14. verſe 29. it will appear, that many more might be then alive, ſince the Commination is there made againſt thoſe, who at their firſt numbring were twenty years old and upward: beſides which, there were very many under twenty, of whom many were alive, at this latter miraculous iſſuing of water out of the Rock, and the ſons of thoſe that were dead, might in their murmurings ſpeak, as in their fathers names and perſons: this water iſſuing out of the Rock, is ſpiritually applyed to Chriſt, 1 Cor.10. 4. whereunto add, Joh.4.13,14.

V. 7. Maſſah] That is, temptation.

Meribah] That is, chiding, or ſtrife; there was another Meribah, Or, chiding and murmuring, Numb.20.13.

is the Lord among us] Impatience under preſſures, provoks God by diſtruſt of his promiſe, reproach of his providence, and denyal of his preſence: all this implyed in this paſſionate, and diſcontented demand, which (in effect) is a renunciation of all Religion at once, even to the denyal of the Deity of God; for if he be not every where preſent, he is no where; no God: if there be not a divine omni-preſence, there is not a Divine Eſſence. Their words may (notwithſtanding) be mollified with a more gentle conſtruction: and they may be ſaid to queſtion Gods preſence but in relation to his providence, in providing for them, their extreme thirſt felt the want of this, and that might occaſion the queſtioning or doubting of that: but exceſſe of paſſion, keeps no bounds of moderation in better men, then moſt of this mixed and tumultuating multitude were. See Jonah 4.9.

V.8. Amaleck] (Deut.25.17) That is, that Amalekites who were the poſterity of Eſau, by Duke Amalek, his grand-child, Gen. 36.16. and the heirs of his hatred againſt the Iſraelites, the off-ſpring of his brother Jacob; with remembrance and emulation (as it is like) for the old Quarrel of the birth-right, and bleſſing gotten by Jacob from Eſau.

V. 9. unto Joſhua, Chooſe us out] Moſes was a Prince unto the people, and Joſhua (as a Lord General) managed the Military matters.

rod of God] Chap.4.20.

V. 11. held up his hand] With the Rod in it; the lifting up of the hand, is rather a natural, then an inſtituted geſture in prayer; and though outward geſtures of themſelves be not acceptable to God, yet ſuch geſtures of devotion (ſuch as are warrantable by the Word) he both alloweth of, and will accept of, when they are moved, and quickned by the fervency of affection within: this lifting up of the hands toward heaven ſhewed, that to God there, he directed his prayer, and from thence hoped for help, to prevail againſt the enemies. See Pſal. 56.9. 121.1. 141:2. Iſa.1.15. Jam.5.16. * Pſal.24.2. Eſa.11.5. Jam.5.16. Pſalm 56.9.

let down his hand] When his devotion fainted, the Iſraelites hands were enfeebled: where we ſee, how dangerous a thing it is to faint in prayer, and how powerful prayer is, againſt the power of warlike enemies.

V. 12. and Hur] Who is thought to be the brother in law of Aaron and Moſes, by the marriage of their ſiſter Miriam; or if not ſo, an aſſociate with Aaron, for the government of the people in the abſence of Moſes. See Chap.24.14. 1 Chron. 2.19,20.

ſo his hands were ſteady] It is like he held up firſt one hand, with the Rod in it, and that weary, he uſed the other; and when both were weary, and his whole body alſo, with long ſtanding, a ſtone was ſet under him, and his hands held up on each ſide, and ſo having that eaſe and aſſiſtance, his devotion might hold out with more vigour, and the people ſeeing the miraculous Rod, ſtill held up on the top of the hill, might take more courage in the battel below.

V. 14. * Write this for a memorial in a book] In the Chronicles or Annals of the time, that the wickedneſſe of Amaleck in aſſaulting Gods people, may be remembred for revenge, until they be all rooted out: here is the firſt mention of writing of a Book; there might for all that be writing of books before Moſes his time, as of Enochs prophecy mentioned, Judg. 16. which ſome cite as a written Volume, yet the Apoſtle might have that he citeth in Enochs name, out of ſome other later Book, which now is not extant; or by the ſpirit of revelation, which diſcovereth things paſt, as well as to come, as the Hiſtory of the Creation ſheweth. See Chap.34.17. Exod.34.27.

the remembrance of Amalek] Deut. 25.19. 1 Sam.15. Not that it ſhould never be remembred, that there was ſuch a man, or not ſuch a people (as appeareth by the precedent Note) but that their houſes, caſtles, and other memorials of their greatneſſe and honour ſhould be demoliſhed, razed and ruined, and they either not remembred at all, or not without deteſtation and diſgrace; which is worſe then a meer oblivion, or ſilent forgetfulneſſe.

V. 15. Jehova-Niſſi] That is, the Lord is my Banner, as he declareth, by holding up his Rod in his hand, profeſſing thereby, that he and the Iſraelites (under his colours, and in arms for his cauſe) expected, and obtained good ſucceſſe, by the favour and power of the Lord of hoſts, ſee Judg.6.24. Jer.23.68. & 33. 16. Ezek.48.35. See alſo Pſal. 20.5. & 60.4.

V. 16. Becauſe the Lord hath ſworn] Heb. the hand upon the throne. By which may be meant, either that Amalek preſumptuouſly endeavoured to make an aſſault upon the Throne of God, in ſetting upon his people to ruine them; in whoſe deliverance and defence, God had engaged the glory of his Throne, and the power of his Scepter in a perpetual war againſt Amalek: or that Moſes had taken a ſolemn oath (as it were laying his hand upon Gods Throne) for aſſeveration and aſſurance, that he and the people will have an unreconcilable war with the poſterity of Amalek.

V. 2. ſent her back] It ſeemeth by this place, he ſent her back (for a time) to her Father, and it is like at that time when ſhe was ſo impatient of the circumciſion of her ſon, Chap.4.25. that ſhe might not (through fear or grief, for his dangerous oppoſition to Pharaoh) either withdraw him from his duty, or (by her diſcontent and murmuring) make him leſſe chearful in performance thereof.

V. 3. Gerſhom] See on Chap.2.22.

V. 4. Eliezer] That is, my God is an help.

V. 5. mount of God] That is, Horeb, ſo called, becauſe God wrought many miracles in it. So Peter calleth the Mount where Chriſt was transfigured, the holy Mount: for by Chriſts preſence it was holy for a time, 2 Pet.1.18. See Annot. on Chap.3. 5.

V. 8. come upon them] Heb. found them.

V. 10. Bleſſed be the Lord] By this it appeared, that Jethro worſhipped the true God, and therefore Moſes might the rather marry his daughter; and it is like that by Moſes he was further inſtructed in the true Religion; yet his next words, ver.11. note, either ſome underſtanding, or a weak apprehenſion of the true God.

V. 11. * Now I know] See Gen. 22 12. 1 King. 17.18,24. Jethro was a deſcendant from Abraham; who was his great Grand-father, by Midian (one of Abrahams ſons by Keturah, Gen.25. 2.) from whom his Progenitors received the Religion of Abraham, but the further they were from the father of the faithful, the more they degenerated from the Faith, and a true worſhip of God: and ſo were (by this time) tainted with Idolatry: but partly by converſing with Moſes his ſon in law, for fourty years together, and partly by the report of the Law, prodigies and miracles (which God had wrought for the deliverance of his people, by the miniſtry of Moſes) Jethro his knowledge of the true God was much increaſed; ſo that now he knew him more clearly, and fully then before: whereupon he forſook his former falſe gods, and betook him to the ſervice of the only true God, wherein it ſeemeth his poſterity perſevered. V. 22. at all ſeaſons] Verſe.26. Eſa.16.5.

V. 23. and God command thee ſo] Or if thou do this, thou ſhalt fulfil the commandment of the Lord. Though he gave him good counſel, he would not have him further to follow it, then God would be pleaſed to approve of it, as he did, Num. 11. 16,17.

V. 24. ſo Moſes hearkened] He did not think himſelf too good, to be adviſed by a man far inferior to himſelf, both in piety, prudence, and acceptation with God: But why did not ſo wiſe a man as Moſes, think of ſuch a courſe himſelf? or why did not God himſelf give him that advice? Anſwer, It may be Moſes expected Gods direction for ſome courſe in ſuch affairs, and God would have him take it from Jethro for the exerciſe of his humility (as though he miraculouſly called Saul, Act. 9. he ſent him to Ananias to be inſtructed) and withal to ſhew him, that divine revelation doth not exclude the giving, or receiving of humane councel, when it is according to the rule of reaſon, and prudence.

V. 25. Moſes choſe able] As Moſes was to eaſe himſelf, by the ſubordinate ſervice of other officers: ſo for the choice of thoſe officers, he had the peoples aſſiſtance and conſent, Deut. 1. 13,14. The like election was made of the ſeven Deacons, for the furtherance of the Apoſtles in their function, Acts 6.verſe 2,3,4,5 See Chap.36.2.

CHAP. XIX.

Verſe 1. IN the third moneth] Or, in the third new Moon (viz. in the moneth Sivan, Eſt. 8.6. containing part of May, and part of June) This was the twelfth ſtation or encamping place of the Iſraelites in the wilderneſſe, and hear (to wit, at Sinai) they ſtayed almoſt a whole year, and hither they came about the fourty fifth day from their coming forth of Egypt, and five dayes after was the giving of the Law, whereof one or two daies of entercourſe (betwixt God and Moſes) might paſſe, and then he might receive from God the command of three dayes preparation, v.11. before the receiving of the Law.

the ſame day] Not the third day, as it was the third moneth: but the ſame day that the moneth beginneth, that is, in the firſt day of the new Moon: for the Hebrews account their moneths by the courſe of the Moon, and the firſt day of the new Moon, is the firſt day of their moneth.

V. 3. And Moſes] Acts 7.38.

and the Lord called] That is, for the Lord had called.

houſe of Jacob, &c.] God called Jacob Iſrael, therefore the houſe of Jacob, and the children of Iſrael, ſignifie only Gods people. See on Gen.32.28.

V. 4 you have ſeen] Moſes appealeth to their teſtimony, who were eye witneſſes of Gods wonders in Egypt: an argument of certainty, and aſſurance of any truth, when they are called to teſtifie who were preſent, and had the beſt evidence of ſenſe that may be, which is that of the eyes, to confirm their acknowledgement of it.

* on Eagles wings] Deut.32 11. Eſa 63.9. Rev.12.14. As the Eagle charily carryeth her young ones on her wings, Deut.32.11. not in her tallons, for fear of hurting them, and lifteth them up on high, above the reach of all that are adverſe to her, or to her brood; ſo the Lord was choice and chary of his people, and carried them ſafe above the power of their perſecutors.

V. 5. if ye will obey me indeed] Heb. obeying ye obey. That is, carefully, conſtantly, and throughly, in thought, word, and deed; for thoughts or promiſes of obedience, will not ſerve: But as God is good indeed, ſo his people muſt be obedient indeed keep my Covenant] Deut.29.9. A Covenant is an agreement betwixt two at the leaſt, and requireth mutual conditions betwixt the Covenant-makers. In this Covenant, the parties are God, and his people; the condition (on Gods part) is to give them deliverance, and inheritance; the condition (on their part) is confidence in him, and obedience to him.

* peculiar treaſure] Gods people being his peculiar treaſure, we muſt hence learn to value perſons, rather by their relations to God, then ſecular riches, and think them very ſilly, who deſpiſe and vilifie thoſe (as mean and worthleſſe) on whom God ſetteth the higheſt price: and being his peculiar treaſure, they ſhould not ſerve any but in ſubordination to him. See. Pſal. 135 4. Mal.3.17 Deut. 32.8,9. Eſay. 43. 1. Jer.10. 16. Cant.8.12.

* for all the earth is mine] Or, though all the earth be mine; Or, The meaning may be thus; it is in my power, to make election of you for my peculiar people, for all the earth is mine: mine to chooſe, or refuſe, as pleaſeth my ſelf, and all that is on the earth, even the cattel on a thouſand hills, Pſal. 50. 10. yea and all the world is Gods by the right of creation, and of perpetual preſervation. But his Church is his by peculiar appropriation to himſelf; as among this people he had his peculiar portion: For firſt, he had the Iſraelites for his Nation: ſecondly, the Levites for his ſervice: thirdly, the Firſt born of cleane creatures for ſacrifice: fourthly, the Sabbath for time; fifthly, the Tabernacle and Temple for place: ſixthly, the Tythes for revenue: ſo to alienate any of theſe without his conſent, is ſacriledge. See on Chap. 9, 29. * Deut. 10. 14. Pſal.24.1.

V. 6. a Kingdome of Prieſts] Rev.1.6. Or, royal Prieſt hood, as 1 Pet. 2.9. Royal in your overcoming the Canaanites, and ruling over them; and as Prieſts who are ſanctified to my ſervice, and come nearer unto me, then any other of your Tribes; ſo ſhall you be an holy people, and be nearer unto me, then any other Nation upon earth, Pſal. 148.14.

an holy nation] For the nearer you are unto me, the holier you muſt be, for I will be ſanctified in them that come nigh me, Lev.10.3. This is a doctrine for the Church at all times, for holineſſe becometh Gods houſe for ever, Pſal 93.5.

V. 8. all the people] Chap.24.37. Deut.5.17. & 26.7.

Moſes returned the words] Not that God knew not better then Moſes, both what the people ſaid, and thought: but becauſe Moſes was to be a mediatour betwixt God and them: therefore he muſt bring their words unto him, not to inſtruct him concerning them, but to receive his anſwer to them.

V. 9. thick cloud] 2 King. 8. 12. 2 Chron. 6. 13. This is not to be underſtood of the cloud mentioned, Exod. 13. 21. and 14. 19, 24. but that on Mount Sinai, v. 16. of this Chapter.

V. 10. ſanctifie them] That is, inſtruct, and enjoyn the people an holy preparation of themſelves, for their approach unto God: and teach them to be pure in heart, as they ſhew themſelves outwardly clean by waſhing, Heb. 10. 22. for without holineſſe, no man ſhall ſee God, Heb. 12. 14. much leſſe come nigh him: for iniquity is a wall of ſeparation betwixt God and man, Iſa. 59. 2.

waſh their clothes] See on Gen. 35. 2. Joſ. 3. 5. 8. 7. 13.

V. 11. third day] This day was the fiftieth day from the Paſſeover, and from the peoples departure out of Egypt: it is by the learned commonly called Pentecoſt, from the number of fifty, which that word ſignifieth, on which day the Law was given: in our vulgar language, it is uſually termed Whitſunday.

V. 12. go not up into the mount, or touch] Offer not by curioſity or preſumption to make neerer approaches towards the Majeſty of God, then he permitteth. See 1 Sam. 6. 19. 2 Sam. 6. 7. Rom. 12. 3.

beaſt or man] The beaſt is threatned or doomed to danger, to keep man at further diſtance from danger: ſo there is mercy in the commination, as it may be a premonition, though a ſeverity in the execution, by ſtoning the offender near hand, and by darting at ſuch as were further off.

trumpet] In Hebrew the word is Jobel, ſo alſo, Levit. 25. 11. but in Leviticus it ſignifieth the year of Jubile, which giveth liberty, becauſe it was proclamed with the ſound of the Trumpet; this Trumpet here might be ſounded by an Angel, or ſuch a ſound made immediately in the ayr by God himſelf.

ſoundeth long] ſome ſtrains in this ſound, were thick and faſt, like a quick pulſe, ſome more deliberately drawn out, wherewith the warning of the peoples approach was made.

V. 14. ſanctified the people] The Lord indeed is he who ſanctifieth the people; but Moſes is here ſaid to ſanctifie them, by ſhewing them, and preſcribing them, how to prepare themſelves in a pure and holy manner to meet their God.

V. 15. come not at your wives] But give your ſelves to prayer and abſtinence, that you may at this time attend onely upon the Lord, 1 Cor. 7. 5. The uſe of the marriage bed was never noted among the legal pollutions: and indeed (being inſtituted in the ſtate of innocency, Gen. 2. and honourable in all, Heb. 13. 4.) this forbearance was not preſcribed, as from a thing prophane, or unclean in it ſelf: but that the mind might be more fully, and ſincerely ſet upon the holy covenant to be made with God; and hence we learn, that the godly that they be alwayes eſtranged from things unlawful, muſt ſometimes abſtain from things lawful. The Papiſts who apply this, to be the Prieſts diſavowing of marriage, make an inference as abſurd, as if becauſe the people muſt ſometimes at ſolemn faſts, abſtain from meats, therefore the Clergy muſt eat no meat at all. See 1 Sam. 21. V. 4. Zech. 7. 3.

V. 16. thunders] Deut. 4. 11. 1 Sam. 12. 18.

V. 18. † quaked greatly] God uſed theſe fearful ſignes, to ſhew that his Law ſhould be had in very great reverence, and his Majeſty the more feared and adored: and if the beginning, or preface before the giving of the Law, were ſo terrible; how terribly will be the end of the Law breaking?

Pſal. 68. 7, 8. Heb. 12. 21.

V. 19. by a voice] God gave anſwer to Moſes by plain words, and ſo loud, that the people might hear him ſpeaking unto him. See v. 20. See Deut. 5. 24. 1 King. 19. 12, 13. Heb. 12. 19.

V. 20. came down] He came down from heaven before, and ſhewed his glory over Mount Sinai, but now he draweth lower and nearer the people, viz. to the top of the hill, where he ſpeaketh with Moſes, placed a little below it.

V. 21. to gaze] 1 Sam. 6. 19. Curious prying into the ſecrets of God, is dangerous to man.

V. 22. let the Prieſts] The prieſthood of Aaron, was not yet ordained, therefore the Prieſts here meant, are ſuch as (under the Law of nature) executed the Prieſtood, that is, the firſt-born, or fathers of Families. See on Chap. 24. 5.

leaſt the LORD] Levit. 10. 2, 3. A prophane Prieſt is ſo far from being a gracious mediatour, betwixt God and the people, (as he ſhould be) that he is more like to draw wrath upon himſelf, then procure favour for them.

V. 24. not the Prieſts and the people] Neither dignity, nor multitude can allow men paſſe the bounds that Gods word preſcribeth.

CHAP. XX.

Verſ. 1. ALL theſe words] Chap. 34. 28. Deut. 4. 13. The Commandments are to be received (all of them) with an equal regard, as having all of them the ſame Author: who if he be contemned in any one, is obeyed in none of them, Jam. 2. 10. There is ſo much written of the Ten Commandments in Catiſchiſmes, and other Treatiſes (of common uſe) that it will not be needful to make any long expoſition upon them.

V. 2 I am the Lord] Deut. 5. 6. Pſal 81. 10.

land of Egypt] Hoſ. 13. 4. 1 Sam. 10. 18.

bondage] Heb. ſervants.

V. 3. None other gods] There be many gods by name, 1 Cor. 8. 5 though not by nature, Gal. 4. 8. for flatterers make great men gods, as the people did Herod, Acts 12. 22. and ſimple people (upon any extraordinary evidence of divine power) beſtow a deity on him they ſee, in ſtead of him they ſee not; as the barbarous people did upon Paul, Acts 28. 6. and the ſuperſtitious account them gods which are made with hands, Acts 19. 28 and ſome take upon them the office of God, as Antichriſt, 2 Theſſ. 2. 4. and to ſome, their belly is their God, Phil. 3. 19. yea, the devil himſelf, 2 Cor. 4. 4. And whatſoever it is, that men love, or fear, or delight in, or truſt in, or would do more for, (as voluptuaries for their pleaſures, 2 Tim. 3. 4.) or but as much, as for the true God, is a falſe god unto them: but indeed there is but one true God, 1 Cor. 8. 6. Eph. 4. 6. even that God, who with a mighty hand, had brought the Iſraelites out of the bondage of Egypt: for, for others, (though they be ſo called) indeed they are no gods. 2. King. 19. 18.

V. 3. before me] Deut. 5. 7. Or, with me; or, beſides me. But the words before me, imply, that Idolatry cannot be ſo ſecretly committed, but that it is before Gods face, Pſal. 44. 20, 21. And Idolatry againſt God, being as Adultery againſt an husband, Jam. 4. 4. what an impudence is it to commit it in his preſence? See Iſai. 65. 3. 5. Gen. 10. 9.

V. 4. any graven image] Eſpecially of God, Deut. 4. 16. See Gen. 38. 8.

likeneſſe] Numb. 33. 52. Deut: 4: 18:

heaven above &c] Whether of Angels, Sun, Moon, or ſtars, or fowls of heaven; or of men, or beaſts on earth; or of fiſhes in the ſea: this enumeration is made ſo full, to ſeclude all kinds of Idolatrous repreſentation of God by the creatures; for, that there ſhould be no Image made of him, is plain (by the expreſſe caution) given by the Lord himſelf; Take good heed to your ſelves: for ye ſaw no maner of image, in the day that the Lord ſpake unto you in Horeb, Deut 4. 15. See Iſa. 44. 9. 20.

V. 5. Thou ſhalt not bow] Nor ſerve, nor ſacrifice, nor do any ſervice to them. By this kind of geſture, all kind of lawfull ſervice and worſhip of the true God, is commanded in the ſcripture. And in the ſame phraſe, all honouring of Idols, 1 King. 19. 18. 2 King. 17. 35. and all religious worſhip of the creatures, whether abſolutely, or relatively; mediately, or ultimately, is condemned.

a jealous God] God and his people, are as a man and his wife, Hoſ. 2. 16, 19. and if they commit adultery againſt him by idolatry, (that is ſpirituall adultery, as is ſaid verſ. 3.) he will be inraged at the matter, as a jealous huſband at his laſcivious wife, and injurious Rival, Prov. 6. 34, 35. and this ſhould make his people chaſtly preciſe, and ſcrupulous againſt all occaſions and appearances of idolatry, by which his jealouſie may be provoked Nah: 2. Iſa: 48, 11. Neh. 12 Joſ. 24: 19:

† upon the children] This doth not contradict that of the Prophet Ezekiel, The ſonne ſhall not die for the iniquity of his father, Ezek. 18. 17: nor of the Apoſtle, Every one ſhall bear his own burden, Gal. 6. 5. The meaning of which words are, that no ſonne ſhall be damned for the ſinne of his father; nor any one man for the ſin of another, unleſſe by commiſſion, or approbation, or ſome other way he make it his own. But for temporal puniſhments, there is none but (by occaſion of other ſins) may have their portion in them: the ſin of David occaſioned the ſlaughter of ſeventy thouſand, 2 Sam. 24. 15, yet they (though in his conceit innocent ſheep, ver. 17.) were guilty of ſinne, and worthy of death as well as he, and yet from him, might come the occaſion of their death; as one may catch the Plague of another, and yet dye not by his diſeaſe, from whom he took the infection, but his own: But this is ſpoken chiefly of thoſe, who continue in the ſin of their Parents: and though divers die, (in their minority) God foreſeeth how bad they would be, if they lived, Pſal. 58. 3. And ſometimes the Parents derive vengeance on their heads by imprecations upon them, as the wicked Jews wiſhed Chriſts blood, (that is, the guilt of his blood) might be on themſelves, and on their children, Mat. 27. 25. And ſometimes the good children of wicked Parents, are temporally puniſhed, 1 King. chap. 14. v. 12. 13. becauſe in them, and by ſuch meanes, are their parents puniſhed; for that in them they would live and flouriſh, when themſelves are dead.

* Iſa. 65: 67, and Chap. 14: verſ. 20, 21. 1 Kings 21: 29: Job 5. 4 and Chap. 21: 19. Numb. 4. 33: 1 Sam. 15. 3 Matth. 23. 34, 35. Jer. 32. 18.

third and fourth generation] Jer. 2. 9. Exod. 34. 7. The third and fourth generation are named, becauſe (many times) the Parents live to ſee their own iniquity practiſed, and puniſhed in their childrens children: See on Gen. 9. 25.

hate me] Deut. 7. 10. The loving of Idols, is the hating of God, James 4. 4.

V. 6. to thouſands] Deut. 7. 9. As the viſiting is of perſons to the third and fourth generation, ſo the mercy is extended, or reacheth to thouſand generations: ſo abundant is God in his beneficence, which ought to move men to obey him of love, like ſons, rather then of fear, like ſlaves.

V. 7. Thou ſhalt not take] Levit. 29. 12. Deut. 5. 11. Matth. 5. 33.

in vain] Needleſly, or without juſt and weighty occaſions, or raſhly without heed and reverence; or falſly, without truth.

not hold him guiltleſſe] In which words is a Meioſis, or phraſe of diminution, (wherein more is meant, then is expreſſed, as Mic. 6. 11. John the meaning is, though men make it no great fault, it may be none at all to take Gods name in vain, not take any courſe to puniſh that ſinne, God will not hold him guiltleſſe that doth ſo; but will deal with him, as with a guilty perſon, as guilty of an high contempt of his glory, which he will not ſuffer to paſſe unpuniſhed. See Levit. 20. v. 4, 5. 1 Sam. 5. 6, 9. and Chap. 6. 9.

V. 8. remember] Both for the time paſt, the inſtitution of the Sabbath in memoriall of the creation of the world; and for the time to come, remember ſo to forecaſt thine affairs, that none impediment may interpoſe to hinder thy holy obſervation of the ſabbath. Chap. 31. 14. and 34. 21. Levit. 23. 3.

V. 9. ſix dayes] Chap. 23. 12. Ezek. 20. 12. Luk. 13. 14.

V. 10. not do any work] Of thy ordinary calling, nor of thy carnal recreations, that thou mayeſt have time ſufficient, and thine affection free, both for publick, and private excerciſe: and mayeſt be in good temper, for the practice of piety, and charity appertaining to the duty of the day.

ſervant] Deut 29. 11. God hath written a releaſe of the ſervants ſecular labour, that on that day he might be permitted to be his maſters fellow-ſervant unto God in the ſolemn obſervation of the Sabbath.

V. 11. bleſſed] the ſabbath is a day of bleſſing to man, as well as of glory to God, if he make a conſcience to keep it as he ought, and there will be no loſſe unto him, though (for a whole year) he ſhould forbear his work, and profit, in obedience to God, Lev. 25. 20, 21. See on Levit. 19. 25.

the Sabbath day] It is not ſaid the ſeventh day from the Creation; but the Sabbath day, that is, the day of religious reſt; for though God reſted on the ſeventh day from the creation, his legall Ordinance here doth not preciſely preſcribe the obſervation of that ſeventh day, but one day in ſeven: as although the firſt adminiſtration of the Sacrament of the Lords Supper, were in unleavened bread, yet the inſtitution of it, is for the uſe of bread, not of that which is unleavened.

V. 12. Honour thy father, &c.] Deut. 27. 16. Lev. 19. 3. Under theſe two terms, all Governours, Natural, Civill, and Eccleſiaſtical are comprehended with the mutual duties betwixt Superiours, Inferiours, and equals belonging to them; according to their ſeveral relations.

that thy dayes may be long in the land] Deut. 5. 16. That is, to the Jews, the land of Canaan; to others, the land of their poſſeſſion; which implyeth a promiſe of long life, to ſuch as are obedient to their Governours: and it may be an encouragement to inferiours, (eſpecially to children) to behave themſelves ſubmiſſively to their Superiours, in that an obedient child ſhall by Gods promiſe (laid hold on by the parents prayers) prolong his dayes: therefore are parents requeſts for their children called uſually by the name of bleſſings.

V. 13. Thou ſhalt not kill] Matth. 5. 21. Thou ſhalt neither by thine hand effect nor by thy tongue procure, nor in thine heart deſire, the death of thy brother: but thou ſhalt love, and preſerve his life, uſing all good means conducing to that purpoſe, Matth. 5. 21. Rom. 13. 9.

V. 14. not commit adultery] Ezek. 2[illegible]. 11. 1 Theſſ. 4. 3, 4. Whereby all unchaſte thoughts, affections, words and behaviour are forbidden; and all purity in heart, word, and deed, required.

V. 15 not ſteal] 1 Theſſ. 4. 16. Epheſ. 4. 28. Neither by fraud, nor force wrong any one in his eſtate; but ſave his goods, and do him good with thine own, if he have need.

V. 16. not bear falſe witneſſe] Deut. 19. 16. Thou ſhalt neither by ſpeech, nor ſilence, neither by raiſing or receiving a falſe report, be injurious to the credit or good name of thy Neighbour: but ſhalt carefully preſerve it, and clear it from reproach; if thou knoweſt how to do it, and haſt opportunity for it.

againſt thy Neighbour] Nor for him: for all lying is here forbidden as all cruelty and wrath, by the name of killing: all bodily uncleanneſſe, under the name of adultery; all injurious uſurpation of other mens goods, under the name of theft; and the prohibition is made in theſe terms, becauſe lies are more frequently made againſt them, and for that ſuch lies are worſe which are mixt with malice and ſlander, then thoſe which proceed out of affection and favour.

V. 17. * not covet] Thou mayeſt not ſo much as wiſh his hinderance in any thing; but muſt check the firſt motions of concupiſcence, againſt any of the precedent precepts. * Act. 20. 33. Rom. 7. 7. Jam. 1. 14.

V. 18. ſaw the thundering] Heb. 12. 18. See Annot. in Gen. 42. 1. and add to it. See on Gen. 12. 1.

V. 19. * Let not God ſpeak] God (in the publiſhing of his law) was ſo terrible, that the people had need of a Mediatour, betwixt him and them, in this was Moſes a Type of Chriſt, Gal. 3: 1. 9 1 Tim. 2: 5. See Deut. 19. 16. Matth. 17. 6. Act. 17. 32. * Deut. 18. 16. Matth. 17. 6. Act. 7. 3[illegible].

V. 20. prove you] That is, to try you, or diſcover you; how weak, how wicked, or well affected you are; whether you will obey his precepts, as you promiſed, or no: which probation or tryal, is not for ſatisfaction to God, who knoweth man even to his thoughts afar off, Pſal. 139. 2. but to himſelf, and to others, for correction and condition, when they did amiſſe.

that his fear] In the beginning of the verſe, the people were forbidden to fear, and here they are required to fear; ſo here is a two-fold fear; the one a ſervile, or ſlaviſh fear; which ſtareth perplexedly at the apprehenſion of danger: the other, a filiall and awfull fear, compoſed of reverence and love: of the former, he ſaith, fear not; and of the latter, theſe words, That his fear may be before your face, are to be underſtood.

that ye ſin not] Matth. 10. 28. Gen. 20. 11. Albeit we ſhould ſo obey God for pure love, that we ſhould be obſequious unto him, though our diſobedience were not dangerous to our ſelves; yet there muſt be a bridle from ſin, and a ſpur unto virtue, as well as beneficence a bait to obedience, Iſa. 1. 19, 20.

V. 21. thick darkneſſe] Exod. 19. 16, 18. 1 King. 8. 12.

V. 22. * from heaven] Not from the higheſt heaven, but from the place where then he made demonſtration of his eſpeciall preſence, which was upon the top of Sinai; or above that in the ayr, which is ſometimes called heaven; as Gen. 1. 20. Job 35. 11. Pſal. 79. 2. Jer. 7. 33. See Deut. 4. 36. Neh. 9. 13. See alſo Heb. 12. 25, 26.

Ye ſhall not make] See Annot. on v. 4. God repeats again his prohibition of Idolatry; wherein he diſcovereth his own deteſtation of it, and mans diſpoſition to it.

V. 23. with me] That is, to be ſerved together with me, See 1 Sam. 5. 45. 2 Kings. 17. 33. Ezek. 20. 39. and 43. 8. Zeph. 1. 5. 2 Cor. 6. 14, 15, 16.

to you] That is, to be ſerved by you; or to expect protection or deliverance to your ſelves, by ſerving of them.

V. 24. * In all places where I record my Name] Where he fixeth his ſolemn worſhip, for the memoriall and honour of his Name; as on altars of earth, here of ſtone, verſ. 25 Deut. 27. 5. Joſh. 8. 31. of braſſe, Exod. 38. 2. 2 Chron. 4. 1. in the wilderneſſe, in Canaan, in the Tabernacle or temple; yet by divine inſtinct, and diſpenſation, ſacrifice was ſometimes offered up, in other places; as in Miſpa, 1 Sam. 7. 9. and in Ramah, Iſa. 7. 17. in Carmel, 1 Kings. 18. 32.

*Deut. 12. 5.

V. 25. * lift up thy tool] He meaneth this of ſuch accidentall, and uncertain Altars, as were made in ſeveral places, upon ſeveral occaſions; afterwards when there was a certain place of worſhip it was ordained otherwiſe, Chap. 27. 1, &c. and 38. 1, 2. See Deut. 27. 5. Joſh. 8. 31. * Deut. 1. Matth. 21. 27.

thou haſt polluted it] Curioſity in Gods ſervice againſt his command, is not an ornament, but a defilement; ſo the flouriſher of Rhetorick, when they are brought in, as a neceſſary garniſh to the Word of God to make it gracefull, (as if it were of none operation, or worthy of no acceptatation with them) are but as a garland of weeds, neither graceful to the ſight nor ſcent. See 1 Cor. 1. 17. and 12. 4.

V. 26. neither ſhalt thou go up by ſteps] This was for a time onely; for afterwards there was an Altar made, not onely of the heighth of three cubits, Exod. 27. 1. but ten cubits high, 2 Chron. 4. 1. with ſtairs, Ezek. 43. 17. yet it is thought by ſome, the going up unto that was not by ſteps, or ſtaires, but by a continued aſcent raiſed ſo high, from the loweſt place near unto it, without any degrees marked out proportionably, one above another.

that thy nakedneſſe be not diſcovered] Which might be, by the ſtooping of the body, and flying abroad of his clothes; for men wore garments open below, againſt which inconvenience when Altars were ſet higher, linnen breeches were preſcribed, Exod, 28. 42, 43. See on 2 Sam. 10. 44.

CHAP. XXI.

Verſ. 1. JUdgements] That is, judicial Ordinances made for the juſt and peaceable government of the people, as the Ceremonial ſerve chiefly for the ordering of their behaviour (eſpecially) in duties of devotion towards God.

V. 2. If thou buy an Hebrew] When he ſelleth himſelf, or his ſon, or Daughter, in caſe of neceſſity, Levit. 22. 39. Or, when for Felonie, or Theft he is ſold, becauſe he is not able to make reſtitution, Exod. 23. 3. 2. King. 4. v. 1. Matth. 18. 18. And the ſame courſe, it is like, was to be taken with captives in war.

in the ſeventh] After his ſix years ſervice, the ſeventh year was, as ſome take it, a ſtandard certain and unvaried, and the ſame to all; to wit the Sabbatical year, which was to be counted from the conqueſt of Paleſtine, Levit. 25. 2. Deut. 15. 1, 2. So that whenſoever a man began his ſervice, it was at an end the ſeventh year, though he had ſerved but one year before the ſeventh came about; nay, if but a moneth, or a day before, it ſeemeth ſufficient; for in the ſeventh year releaſes were to be made of debts, and a little ſervice would ſerve, when what remained was to be remitted: But then the law of ſix yeares ſervice here, and Deut. 15. 12. is to little purpoſe, unleſſe the ſervice begin ſo ſoon as the ſeventh year expired. To avoid this inconvenience, ſome ſay, and (it is probable) that the ſix yeares ſervice was not broken off but by the year of Jubile, Levit. 25. v. 40. See Jer. 34. 9: 4.

V. 3. By himſelf] Heb. with his body, Alone, or in his ſingle perſon, and without a wife and children.

then his wife] As he came, ſo he ſhall go, whether in a ſingle or married eſtate; and it is like he had the priviledge of a father to go forth with his children he brought with him, as well as of an husband, to go forth with his wife.

V. 4. the wife and her children ſhall bee] The wife ſhall remain ſervant to her maſter, that gave her to her husband for a wife: and the birth following the belly, the children (born in her ſervice) ſhall remain (as the maſters) with the mother. But how could this ſeparation of man and wife be allowed, ſince their cohabitation is ſo expreſly preſcribed, Gen. 2. 24.? Anſwer, firſt, the husband was not compelled to part with his wife, for he might have continued his ſervice and ſociety with her, if he would: ſecondly, this parting might be but for a ſeaſon, and by mutuall conſent; thirdly, wherein it may ſeem to ſwerve from the ordinary Rule, there might be a diſpenſation, or toleration of it for the hardneſſe of mens hearts.

her maſters] Till the time of her ſervitude expired, which might be the ſeventh year or the fiftieth. This is to be underſtood of an heathen woman, for of ſuch they were to buy thoſe bond-ſervants, not of the Hebrews. Levit. 25. 42. 44.

V. 6. Judges] For perpetual ſervitude was a matter of too great moment, not to be made up by a private bargain; therefore (the publick Magiſtrate) muſt hear the caſe, betwixt the maſter and the ſervant; and be ſure, that the ſervant freely conſented to ſuch a ſervitude.

door] That is, the door where the Judges ſate, as ſome conceive; and then (when they have heard the caſe, and given ſentence in it) the ſervant ſhall be brought to the door of his maſters houſe; and that door is here rather meant; for the word is deleth, which is uſed of any particular door; not the word Schalbur, which ſignifieth the gate of a City; where Judges ſate, to hear cauſes, and to do Juſtice.

bore his ear] Either as a puniſhment for contempt of liberty, (which he might have had, but would not) or to be a token of his ſtrict and punctual obedience to his maſters commands, not to go over the threſhold, or out of the door, without his leave; at leaſt not againſt his will: or to note his ready obedience to hear and obſerve what his maſter commands; ſo ſome apply Pſal. 40. 6. where the opening of the ear, (according to the Hebrew) may be rendred by boring of the ear: and ſo obedience is better then ſacrifice, 1. Sam. 15. 22.

for ever] That is, to the year of Jubile. And at that time all Hebrew ſervants were to be ſet free, notwithſtanding any ingagement of ſervitude made before, Levit. 25. 40. Of the ſignification of the Originall word here rendred [for ever] ſee on Exod. 12. 14.

V. 7. ſell] As conſtrained by poverty, or with intent to prefer her from a ſervant, to be a wife, upon the promiſe of him that taketh her; ſo to accept of her, either as a principal, or ſecondary wife: as (when polygamy was in practice) the firſt wife was uſually chief, the other of an inferiour condition.

as the men-ſervants] That is, a woman ſhall not be diſmiſſed with ſo little care as a man, who is ſtrong and better able to preſerve himſelf from injuries, and harmes: nor ſhall an Hebrew ſervant be put off, as a ſtranger born of another Nation; eſpecially of the Canaanites, (who were to be ſlaves to the Iſraelites:) and by this law ſhe muſt either be continued in the houſe, and entertained like a daughter, or a ſecondary wife, or if he part with her, after he hath taken her to his bed, he ſhall procure an husband for her, by offering a meet price, and convenient apparell to make her the more acceptable, and graceful in his ſight.

V. 8. If ſhe pleaſe not] Heb. if ſhe be evil in the eyes of.

to a ſtrange nation] Becauſe this was a general rule for all Hebrew ſervants; and the caſe here mentioned, requireth more then ordinary charity. By a ſtrange nation, ſome underſtand, one of another Tribe, though an Hebrew, &c.

V. 9. after the manner] That is, he ſhall give her dowry convenient for a virgin of her condition.

V. 10. him] That is, for his ſon, or himſelf: for it may be taken of either.

V. 11. or duty of marriage] By which ſomewhat is meant beſides food and raiment, (for they are expreſſed) it may be that which is comprehended under due benevolence, 1. Cor. 7. 3.

theſe three] If he remit or refuſe to perform any of the three forementioned particulars, verſ. 10. then he ſhall let her go free, without paying any price for her redemption.

V. 12. he that ſmiteth] Levit. 24. 17. Matth. 26. 52.

V. 13. lie not in wait] But by imprudence, or negligence, or any caſual miſhap, hath killed another.

God deliver] Though a man be killed at unawares, yet it is Gods providence it ſhould be ſo: and he may be ſaid to deliver him into his hand that ſlew him; becauſe the Lord (who hath the diſpoſal of all mens lives, and before whom all are guilty of death) without mans purpoſe (by his divine diſpoſal) brought it to paſſe.

whither he ſhall flee] That is, to the Cities of refuge, in the land of Canaan, Deut. 19. 5. Joſ. 2. 2. Or, to the Altar, whether in the deſart, or any other place.

V. 14. from mine Altar] The holineſſe of the place ought not to defend the murderer, he ſhall find no mercy at mine Altar, who, without mercy, ſacrificed his brother to his deadly malice, in a preſumptuous manner.

Deut. 19. v. 11, 13. 19. 1 King, 2. 28, 31. See 2 King. 15.

V. 15. ſmiteth his father] The blow (though it be not deadly to the receiver) ſhall be deadly to the giver; for he ſhall die for it: becauſe his deeper obligation to all affection, and offices of reverence and benevolence to his parents, aggravates the guilt of any undutiful, or unkind miſcarriage toward them.

V. 16. ſtealeth a man] (Whether free, or a ſervant to another) ſhall be ſurely put to death; becauſe, uſually, they that ſtole men, meant to ſell them for ſlaves: and ſo they did great injury to thoſe, whoſe in right they were, and brought great miſery upon the party ſold, eſpecially if he were free and ingenuous before; and this law is principally meant of ſtealing ſuch a one. See on Deut. 24. 7.

found in his hand] If not yet ſold, or uſed like a ſlave, it ſeemeth hard, that the man-ſtealer ſhould dye, therefore ſome conceive, that if after the fact it could be proved, that he had been in the ſtealers hand, he ſhould die for it; yet the phraſe and manner of expreſſion, imports another ſenſe, which is; that if the ſtolne man be not yet ſold, and the theft apparent (as taken in the ſtealers hand) he ſhall die for it.

V. 17. curſeth] Or, revileth. Though the wicked words of the tongue break neither skin nor bone, they bewray ſuch a malignity of the heart, (when they proceed from children to their parents) that God doometh ſuch tranſgreſſiours to death, and that worthily; for they requite evil for good, returning imprecations for prayers, curſing for bleſſing; and this with breach of the ſtrongeſt bonds of natural obedience and affection, and the groſſeſt degree of ungratitude that can be.

Levit. 20. 9. Prov. 20. 20. Matth. 15. 4. Mark. 7 10. See Deut. 21. 18

V. 18. ſtone or fiſt] With the hand, or what cometh next to hand, as ſtones are commonly readieſt for ſudden violence, where the wrathful perſon would uſe ſome inſtrument of cruelty, which may do more hurt then a blow with the hand.

V. 19. upon his ſtaffe] 2. Sam. 3. 29. Zach. 8. 4.

V. 20. puniſhed] Heb. avenged] As a murtherer putting him to death.

V. 21. not to be puniſhed] i. By the Civil Magiſtrate. Though (before God) he be a murtherer, yet becauſe of the vile and contemptible condition of ſervants; eſpecially of ſuch nations, as by Gods decree were to be deſtroyed, Deut. 7. 2. the maſter was exempt for giving an account of his act; at leaſt from receiving of puniſhment, for any miſcarriage in that cauſe.

for he is his money] Becauſe he gave his money for him; as David calleth the water of the well of Bethlehem, their blood who adventured the ſhedding of their blood, & the loſſe of their lives to fetch it for him. 2 Sam. 2, 3 17. And ſo the poor mans mill-ſtone is called his life; becauſe he gets his living by it, Deut. 24. 6. See Gen. 37. 27.

V. 22. miſchief follow] That is, either by death, or maime of the mother, or childe.

V. 24. * eye for eye, &c.] The execution of this law belonged not to private perſons, but onely to the Magiſtrate; which yet was not alwaies to be obſerved with rigour; but theſe particulars are ſet down to ſhew, that the puniſhment muſt be limited to a due proportion: as that an eye ſhould not be required, in recompence of wrong in a tooth: or any member of more for that which is of leſſe uſe or worth: and this muſt be taken, not by an Arithmetical, but by a Geometrical correſpondence; for if he that had but one eye, had put out one of the eyes of him that had two, if the recompence were numerical, one for one, it were not equal; for then one man might loſe a ſenſe, the other but an eye, which is but the organ of ſeeing, without which he might ſee while the other remaineth; therefore the relation more agreeable to exact Juſtice, (in ſuch a caſe) was not an eye for an eye, but two for one, that is, blindneſſe for blindneſſe, but it was more charitable to make the amends by peculiar recompence, or ſome other way * Levit. 24. 20. Deut. 19. 21. Matth. 5. 38.

V. 28. the oxe] By this, if a beaſt muſt be puniſhed, (and it is a law touching other beaſts, as well as for an oxe) much more ſhould the murderer; ſince, though this law be concerning beaſts, it is not given to the beaſts, but to man; for to man it is ſaid, Thou ſhalt not kill: and if he do, it muſt be done unto himſelf, as he did to another, Gen. 9. 6. yet the oxe was to dye, for admonition to man, to have murder in the more deteſtation; and to make every one to look better to their beaſts, that they become not the cauſes of death unto others. See on Lev. 20. 15.

V. 29. his owner alſo ſhall be put to death] For a man not to hinder evil when he ought, and might, is to become guilty, as if himſelf had done the fact.

V. 30. ſumme of money] Taxed upon him by the next of kin to the party ſlain, or by the Judge, verſ. 12. See Numb. 35. 31.

V. 32. thirty ſhekels of ſilver] Our Saviours taking upon him the form of a ſervant, Phil. 2. 7. and his being ſold (by Judas) for thirty pieces of ſilver, Matth. 26. 15. is conceived by ſome, both ancient and latter Divines, to be prefigured by this law.

V. 33. do not cover it] This is to be underſtood of pits, in, or neer ſome way of ordinary paſſage, for in the field, pits were to be kept open for cattel to drink at any time.

V. 34. make it good] By this law, not onely commiſſion of evil is puniſhable, but the omiſſion of care to prevent evil.

V. 36. Oxe for oxe] Not an ox for a calf, or a ſheep, but according to the proportion of the damage, and ſo the former verſe is to be expounded.

CHAP. XXII.

Verſ. 1. SHeep] The Hebrew word is Seh, which comprehendeth leſſer ſort of cattel, as ſheep, and goats, by way of diſtinction from the greater ſort, Oxen, Camels, &c. For though ſome kind onely be mentioned, others are meant.

kill it, or ſell it] This aggravates the theft. See Annotat. on v. 4.

five oxen for an ox] Five with that which was ſtoln, and but four ſheep, becauſe the labour of the ox was to be valued, which while he was kept away, was a loſſe to the owner, perhaps greater then the price of the ſheep. See Prov. 14. 4. The ſame proportion might be held betwixt other great and little cattell, as betwixt the horſe and the goat.

V. 3. If the Sunne be riſen] If he be ſtricken to death in the dark, the want of ſufficient light, to judge who or what he was, and the want of meanes to bring him to juſt puniſhment, (for he could not be purſued in the dark) was ſome excuſe ; but if the Sun were up, to give ſufficient light, both to judge of the party, and to bring him to judgement, then to kill him, was murder ; unleſſe in the juſt and neceſſary defence of the wronged party.

V. 4. double] Before it was fivefold for an ox, four for a ſheep ; here but double : the reaſon is, becauſe if the thing ſtolne were found preſently with the thief, the property not alterd, the owner ſuſtained leſſe damage and trouble, and the thief ſhewed himſelf not to be ſo artificial in his falſhood, nor ſo ſetled in it, as he that carried the ſtoln goods away, and either killeth, or ſelleth, or keepeth them a longer time from him that hath right unto them ; but it is ſaid, Prov. 6. 31. That a thief, if he be found, he ſhall reſtore ſeven fold : this may be meant of a thief breaking into an houſe in the night, who if he were taken in the act, and ſmitten to death, no bloud was to be ſhed for him, verſ. 2. and having forfeited his life, he might pay dearer for his ranſome, then the rate of ordinary reſtitution ; and ſo he might pay not onely ſevenfold, but all the ſubſtance of his houſe, as it is in the ſame 31. verſe : or there might be a larger reſtitution in Solomons time, becauſe there was no plenty, 1 King. 10. 27. Or by ſeven-fold, may be meant manifold, as Gen. 4. 15. Pſal. 79. 12. Iſa. 30. 26.

V. 7. double] For money or ſtuffe ; whereas the reſtitution for cattell was four or five fold ; the reaſon whereof may be, becauſe it was eaſier for the poſſeſſor to keep what was ſo in his cuſtody, then his cattel in the field, for there he could not keep them under lock and key, as he might do the goods and money in his houſe.

V. 8. to ſee whether] The Judge muſt (by his prudence) endeavour the diſcovery of the deceit, if there be any ; and the clearing of the accuſed party, if he be innocent : and to this purpoſe, he muſt uſe the ordinary meanes, whereby the truth may appear, as receiving of evidence from witneſſes, and the ratification of that evidence, by oath. See verſ. 11.

he have put his hand] That is, whether he have dealt falſly, either by denying he had it, or affirming he reſtored it ; or pretending it was ſtolne from him ; or by any other way of deceit, to defraud the owner of his right.

V. 9. he ſhall pay] That is, the party who was put in truſt, if he be found in fault, as fraudulently failing the truſt repoſed in him.

V. 10. no man ſeeing it] But the party himſelf, there being no other proof, or witneſſe ; in ſuch a caſe an oath muſt be the end of ſtrife, as Heb. 6. 16.

V. 11. an oath of the Lord] So called, 1 King. 2. 43. becauſe when men take it, they take the Lord to be witneſſe of the ſincerity of their hearts, and verity of their lips ; and implicitely invoke his vengeance upon themſelves, if they ſwear falſly, therefore anſwering upon oath concerning a mans ſelf is not unlawfull. See Num 5. 19. Matth. 26. 3.

between them both] For the oath was to paſſe from the one, for the ſatisfaction of the other.

put his hand] See. Annot. on v. 8.

if it be ſtoln from him he ſhall make reſtitution] If by any fault of his it were taken away. Gen. 31. 39.

V. 15. with it] As ſometimes the beaſt and his owner might be hired together : and if he were preſent, the hirer might have ſo much leſſe care, as he would have the more of the ſafety of his own.

it came for his hire] He that hired it ſhall be free by paying for the hire.

V. 16. If a man entice] Deut. 22. 28.

V. 17. If her father utterly refuſe] For the children ſhould not marry without the conſent of parents.

according to the dowry of virgins] That is, according to her dowry as a virgin, whom he hath defiled; to wit, according to her ſtate, and condition, that is, more to the daughter of a rich man, then of a poor. See 1 Sam. 8. 25. There ſeems to be one ſet rate for all ſorts, Deut. 22. 29. But the caſe is not alike ; for that in Deut. is when the maid was forced, or luſtfully abuſed, without intimation of marriage, to induce unto the act ; and then the father was for his part of the wrong in the abuſe of his daughter, to have of the offender fifty ſhekels of ſilver, and he was to have her for his wife, and he might not put her away all the dayes of his life. But in this caſe (in Exod.) it is otherwiſe : for if her father refuſed to give her in marriage, he that abuſed her, was to pay ſo much, as might ſerve to marry her to another of a ſuitable condition : and if he were not able to make good that proportion, he was to be ſold as in caſe of theft, v. 3. of this Chapter.

V. 18. not ſuffer a witch] Witchcraft is here forbidden, Deut 18. 10. and that upon pain of death, 1 Sam. 28. 9. By Witch, is here meant any one that hath any dealings with the Devil, by any compact or confederacy whatſoever : the word in the Originall, is of the Femenine Gender, becauſe the Devills craft moſt prevails with womens weakneſſe, in that kind : but there are men Witches as well as women, Levit. 20. 27. and their ſinne as hainous, and their puniſhment as grievous : the word likewiſe ſignifieth one that changeth any thing before the ſight, (as Jugglers do) but if it be by ſlight of hand, without diabolicall art, it is not here condemned. Some have thought Witches ſhould not dye, unleſs they had taken away the life of mankind ; but they are miſtaken, both for the act of the Witch, and for the guilt : for firſt, the act of killing any one in ſuch a way, as is called witchcraft, is not the act of the Witch, but of the Devill ; and ſometimes it is rather his act to fain it, then his act to do it ; for ſuch is his craft, that where God hath given him a commiſſion to do hurt, or by his great knowledge (being a ſpirit, and of long experience) he doth foreſee in natural cauſes (though concealed from others) ſome imminent evil, he ſtirreth up malice betwixt the Witch, and the party, and offereth himſelf (for his, or her ſatisfaction) to bring the evil upon him, wherein the Witch hath no part, but a wicked will; and in that the Devil is more wicked then the Witch, and would do what evil he can ; though ſhe would intreat him to the contrary : But why then muſt the Witch be put to death ? Anſw. Becauſe of the league and confederacy with the Devill, which is high treaſon againſt God ; becauſe he is Gods chiefeſt enemy, and therefore though no hurt inſue this contract at all, the Witch deſerves preſent, and certain death for the contract it ſelf.

V. 21. Thou ſhalt neither vex a ſtranger &c.] Lev. 19. 33.

V. 22. ye ſhall not afflict any widow] Zach. 7. 10. Iſa. 1. 17. Jam. 1. 27. Deut. 24. 17. v. 27. 19.

V. 24. your wives ſhall be widowes] The juſt plague of God upon oppreſſors, and proportinable, as well as juſt.

V. 25. * upon him uſury] Which is a loan of money upon covenant for certain increaſe, whereby the lender intendeth, and endeavoureth to make ſure both principal and uſe, though the borrower be like to loſe either the one or both. Whereas in ſome caſes the rich lender muſt be ſo charitable to the poor borrower, as to expect neither uſe nor principall, Luk. 6. 34, 35.

by that the Sun goeth down] If it be ſuch a garment as without which he cannot comfortably reſt in the night ; and of ſuch a garment the words ſeem to be meant by this timely reſtitution, and it is in effect. v. 27. forbidden the taking of ſuch a thing to pawn ; for it were a vain and frivolous thing to take a pawn in the morning, which without payment of money muſt be reſtored in the evening.

* Deut 24. 13. Prov. 22. 27.

Magiſtrates they are ſo called, becauſe they ſhould (as God doth) do impartiall juſtice without reſpect of perſons ; protecting the godly, as being the Miniſters of God for their good, Rom. 13. 4. and puniſhing the wicked, who are malignant enemies to God and them.

V. 29. firſt of thy ripe fruits] Heb. thy fulneſſe. It is fit that God (who giveth all) ſhould be acknowledged as Lord of all, by an holy tribute unto him : and that that ſhould be preſented firſt, not onely to profeſſe his right, but to procure a bleſſing upon the reſt. See Mal. 3. 10.

V. 30. ſeven dayes] Some conceive it muſt be kept ſeven dayes, that it might have a bleſſing from the Sabbath, before it were preſented ; but the certain reaſon is, becauſe under eight dayes old it was two tender, and wateriſh, and not of ſo perfect a ſhape at firſt, as a few dayes after it would be.

on the eighth day] It was not neceſſary to offer it on that day, for that was the firſt day it was offerable to God ; but after that, it might remain untill a fit opportunity to bring it to Jeruſalem, and there to offer it on a Feaſt day. See Lev. 22. 27.

V, 31. * ye ſhall be holy] See on * Chap. 19. 6.

* torn of beaſts] If the creature were either killed by a beaſt, or in part devoured by him, or killed by a man for ſacrifice to God, or ſuſtenance to man, and a beaſt came caſually and tore any part of it, in ſuch caſes they were not to eat it : and by ſuch a forbearance, they were admoniſhed of decency, and cleanlineſſe in their dyet, and of eſtranging themſelves from a participation with beaſts in beaſtly qualities, eſpecially in cruelty. Levit. 22. 8. Ezek. 44. 31.

CHAP. XXIII.

Verſ. 1. Not raiſe] Nor receive, as the Original will alſo bear : the meaning is, thou ſhalt not endure the hearing of a falſe report, eſpecially, if it be offered, to make thee either a falſe witneſſe, or a corrupt judge: for as the receiver of ſtoln goods is partner with the thief ; ſo the willing hearer of a falſe report, is a partner with the ſlanderer ; and if a good name be better then great riches, Prov. 22. 1. a ſlanderous tongue is worſe then pilfering fingers.

V. 2. a multitude] The greater number is uſually the worſe, and though (in reſpect of men) it may be more ſafe for many, then for a few to offend : yet in reſpect of God there is more danger to an offending multitude, then to a few ; for he will rather bear with a few then many wicked ones, Gen. 6. 12. Chap. 19. 4. Some in ſtead of multitude and name, read great men as oppoſed to poor in the next verſ.

V. 3. a poor man in his cauſe] Levit. 19. 15 In charity we muſt have reſpect to a poor mans neceſſity ; but in poynt of juſtice, neither the power of the rich, nor the penury of the poor, but his right onely, v. 6. muſt be regarded. See Pſal. 72. 2.

V. 4. thine enemies ox or his aſſe] If we be bound to do good to our enemies beaſt, much more to our enemy himſelf, Math. 5. 44.

V. 6. not wreſt the judgment] Nor ſtrain nor ſtrive againſt the evidence of truth, to condemn the poor in his juſt cauſe, or to acquit him in that which is unjuſt.

V. 7. Keep far from a falſe matter] It is not enough to be no plotter, no promoter of a falſe report, or no agent in it; but we muſt ſhew ſuch a diſlike of it, as to keep aloof from it, as if there were ſome danger of infection by coming neer unto it. See, Prov. 4. 14, 15.

V. 8. * Take no gift] * Deut. 16. 19. Prov. 17. 8. 23.

V. 9. the heart of a ſtranger] Who when he is in a ſtrange place and diſtitute of friends, and (it may be) alſo of meanes, hath grief enough of his own, (as thou by experience knoweſt) and therefore thou muſt not adde oppreſſion to his affliction, which (thine own heart will tell thee) thou wouldeſt not have done unto thy ſelf. Chap. 22. 21.

V. 10. ſix years] Lev. 25. 3.

V. 11. but the ſeventh year] That year was the remiſſion of debts, Deut. 15. 1. 9. and the manumiſſion, or freedome of Hebrew ſervants; and at the beginning of the Sabbatical year, (which was the ſeventh year) was the Law to be read, in the Feaſt of Tabernacles, Deut. 31. 10. and the Land was then to reſt; This Sabbatical year began not with the moneth Niſan, or March, (whence the ſacred year was accounted) becauſe ſo they ſhould loſe the harveſt of two yeares: but it began with the Moneth Tizri, that is, September, from whence the civil year (after the manner of the Egyptians and other Nations) was accounted, ſo did they account their Jubile in the ſeventh moneth, Levit. 25. 9.

let it reſt] Untilled, or unmanured, both for ſowing, and reaping, which were forbidden that year, Lev. 24. 4. partly for ſparing the Land, that it might afterwards yeeld the better increaſe; but eſpecially what the land yeelded (of it ſelf) might be for the exerciſe of the peoples confidence in the divine providence, without their own pains; and for a charitable ſupply, firſt to the poor, and after them to the beaſts of the field; for the providence of God maketh proviſion for man and beaſt: yet the owner of the land or garden, might every day (which was not a Feaſtival) take ſuch things, and ſo much as was neceſſary for himſelf and his ſervants, Levit. 25. 6. ſo that nothing were hoarded up, whereby the proviſion for the poor might be diminiſhed. If any feared he ſhould be a loſer by ſuch a ceſſation, or reſting of the land, or doubted how he ſhould be provided for, if the earth were not exerciſed for the yearly increaſe; God paſſed his Word for a ſupply in the ſixth year, Lev. 25. 20, 21. none muſt come empty] Coming to the Tabernacle, or Temple, (at the Feaſt of Eaſter, Pentecoſt, and of Tabernacles) none muſt come without an oblation; partly for ſacrifices to God, and partly for proviſion for the Levites: and thus is was a duty laid down by Law, yet for the particular oblation it was a free-will offering, Deut. 16. 10. wherein the offerer was free to make the proportion of his gift.

V. 16. the feaſt of harveſt] Which is Pentecoſt, or Whitſontide; kept in remembrance, that the Law was given fifty dayes after they departed from Egypt; but called the feaſt of harveſt, becauſe then was the Wheat harveſt, and the ripening of other fruits. * Deut. 16. 13. Lev. 23. 17.

the feaſt of ingathering] At the end of the year, that is, in September, when the fruits of the earth were generally reaped and gathered in: which ſheweth that there was a double account of the year; the one for Civil affaires, which was in the beginning of Tizri, or September: the other for ſacred, (as for the feſtivals of the year) beginning with the moneth Niſan, See on Gen 7. 11. containing part of March, and part of April, Exod. 12. at this time was the feaſt of Tabernacles. CHAP. XXIV.

Verſ. 1. Come up] God called Moſes up to him before, upon his coming down, he was to propoſe the words of his Covenant unto the people, and to take their Anſwer, and then (with Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu) to come up to God again.

ſeventy of the Elders] Some choice men of thoſe, whom Moſes choſe and made Rulers over thouſands, hundreds, fifties, and tens, Exod. 18. verſ. 25. who might be the ſame, who afterward were endowed with Moſes his ſpirit to be aſſiſtants to him in government of the people, and they were to come to the Tabernacle, and there to be as witneſſes of what paſſed betwixt God and Moſes: the number was proportionable to the ſervice, and as ſome conceive, it was the rather choſen, with reference to the 70. ſouls which came with Jacob into Egypt.

V. 2. Moſes alone] He alone was to go up to the top of the Mount, the reſt might aſcend a good way, but not ſo high as he, yet where were apparent ſignes of Gods preſence, verſ. 10.17.

V. 3. And Moſes came] When he had received the Law in Mount nai.

All the words] Divine terrour made them promiſe fair, but their own frailty could performe but little; nor is it a condition competent to corrupt nature, to be legally and exactly juſt according to the Law of God, though they promiſe it never ſo ſincerely.

Verſ.7. Chap.19.8. Deut 5.27. See Rom.8.3.

V. 4. wrote all the words] Not the words of the Decalogue or Law Moral, but the other Laws, eſpecially the Judicial. Such as are ſet down in the former Chapters.

twelve pillars according to the twelve tribes] Gen.31.45. Joſh.4.8.9.20.

V. 5. young men] That is, ſome of the firſt borne, (who until the ſons of Aaron were eſpecially choſen for that ſervice) where chief aſſiſtants to the Father of the family, in offering ſacrifice, and when their Fathers were dead, ſucceeded in their office; whoſoever offered the ſacrifice, young men might be employed in preparation and aſſiſtance, in the ſervice which required the ſtrength of bodily labours about it, See on Chap. 19.22. & Num.3.12.

V. 6. half of the blood] The blood was divided betwixt the Altar and the people, to note the mutual ſtipulation of God to his people, and his people to him, who were attoned and made one by the blood of Chriſt.

V. 7. the book of the Covenant] See the firſt Annot. on verſ. 4.

and read it] The book was not only read, but ſprinkled with Blood mingled with water, Heb.9.19. and it was ſo mingled, becauſe otherwiſe by congealment it would have been too thick: beſides, it would go the further, being to be ſprinkled upon a great number who ſtood next in the room of all the people. See Heb 9.19.

V 8. The blood] Was ſprinkled with reference to Chriſt, and it ſignified, that the Covenant broken could not be ſatisfied without blood ſhedding, See Heb.9.22. anciently Covenants were made with blood, to betoken conſtancy in the Covenant, even to the ſhedding of blood and loſſe of life. See Gen.15.9 & Heb.9.20. & 13.20.

V. 10. And they ſaw the God] As perfectly as their infirmity could behold his Majeſty, though in propriety of ſpeech God is inviſible, 1 Tim.6.16. becauſe he is a Spirit, Joh.4:24. Therefore as no man hath ſeen God, Joh. 1.18: & 1 Joh.4.12. and no man ſhall ſee him with carnal eyes. The ſeeing then here meant is, when ſomewhat is obvious to our ſenſe, whereby we have cauſe to conceive, that God is preſent in an eſpecial and extraordinary manner. See Act.7.38. Iſa.6.1. Joh.12.41.

Saphire ſtones] The Saphire ſtone is of a clear sky colour, Anſelm. Boetius, hiſt. lapid. l.2. cap.42. which may ſignifie the greatneſs of Gods glory ſeeing what we admire over our heads, is below the glory of his feet.

V. 11. upon the Nobles] That is, the Elders, whoſe ſeniority, authority, and gracious endowments, made them noble and honourable.

he laid not his hand] Or, put not forth his hand to do them any hurt, Gen.37.22. Pſal.138.7. Though to have any viſion or apparition of Gods eſpecial preſence, hath been taken for a preſage of peril, a fore-runner of ſudden death. See Annot. on Gen.16.13.& 32.30.

and did eat and drink] Making a ſacred banquet of the ſacrifices offered, verſ.5. and were neither killed nor caſt down, but that they did cheerfully eat and drink as at other times.

V. 12. Tables of ſtone] Signifying the hardneſſe of our hearts, uncapable of impreſſion, unleſſe God write his Law therein by his Spirit, Jer.31.33. 2 Cor.3.3. Heb.8. 10. & 10. 16. And withall they import the perpetuity of that Law, becauſe ſtone is moſt durable. See Chap.31,18.&.32.16.

V. 13. and his Miniſter Joſhua] See Note on verſ.18.

V. 14. Aaron and Hur] See on Chap.17.12.

V. 17. like devouring fire] Heb.12.29. and it might be not only like as fire, but fire indeed. See Joh.1.14 The Lord appeareth like devouring fire to carnal men, but to them that he enlighteneth by his Spirit, he is like pleaſant Saphir, verſ. 10. yet to neither did he appear in any ſimilitude, for Idolaters to preſume to repreſent him in pictures. See Deut.4.15,16.

V.18. forty dayes and fourty nights] Deut.9.9 Of theſe forty days, the ſix dayes forementioned, ver.16. are by ſome ſuppoſed to be a part of the fourty, but it may be thoſe ſix dayes were ſpent in preparation, and the fourty after in conference betwixt God and Moſes, ver.13. It ſeemeth by ver.13.14. that Joſhua went up with Moſes into the Mount, but how high, how long he ſtayed there, whether he heard what God ſaid to Moſes, or whether he faſted fourty dayes as Moſes did, Exod.34.28. Deut. 9.9. there is nothing ſet down in the Scripture. See on chap.32.17. ſome think he ſtaid at the foot of the hil, while Moſes was on the top; ſome, that he aſcended ſome degrees, but not to the top; ſome, that he was on the top, but not within the cloud as Moſes was, and that he was ſuſtained all the while with Manna.

CHAP. XXV.

Verſ.2. SPake] After the Moral and Judicial Law, he giveth them the Ceremonial Laws, and that ſo punctually, that nothing ſhould be left to mans invention: wherein ſome things have myſtical ſignifications of great moment, and may have alluſions to holy things, yet to be too curious, as many are in finding out conformities to every particular, may occaſion both vanity and preſumption.

The chief grace of any gift is the good will of the heart, which advanceth two mites to more acceptance, then much more, either grudgingly given, or with vain oſtentation, Luk. 21.3 & 2. Cor. 8. 12. & Chap. 9.7. there was another kind of oblation commanded chap.38.26.

V. 3. Make of them] For the building of the Tabernacle.

V. 4. Scarlet] A deep and coſtly red, called Dibaphos (in Greek) that is, twice dyed, once in the wooll, and again in the cloth, to make it take a moſt perfect colour, and the Hebrew calleth twice dyed the ſecond worm; for out of the ſcarlet grain there cometh a worm, which ground into powder, and applyed twice by the Dyers Art, unto the wool or cloth, giveth it a moſt perfect red colour.

V. 4. * fine linnen] Or, ſilk. But linnen groweth from the ground, ſilk cometh from worms. See Annot. on * Gen. 41 ver.42.

Goats hair] To make a kind of ſackcloth for the covering of the Ark.

V. 5. Shittim wood] Ver.13.& 2. Chap.26.15. Which is thought to be a kind of Cedar that will not rot, but Eſa.41.19. it is called the Shittah tree, as a diſtinct tree from the Cedar, yet ſhooting up in height, and growing in bulk to the ſtature of a Cedar tree, having a leaf like a white thorn, and haply agreeing with it in laſting and durableneſs; for it is commended for lightneſs, firmneſs, fairneſs, and for continuance, without putrefaction above all other timber, and though it grow not in the wilderneſs, it might border upon it, or be brought by the Iſraelites out of Egypt: whereof they might foreſee manifold uſe, though not to this purpoſe. Some think they had it from Abel Shittim, Num.33 49.

breſt plate] Of this ſee Annot. on Chap.28.15.

V.8. Sanctuary] A place for holy and ſolemn ſervice to God, both to offer ſacrifice, and to hear the law, to preſent prayers, and celebrate them, which at the firſt was the Tabernacle, Levit.26.11. See on chap.26.1.

dwell among them] Not that Gods eſſence or preſence can be confined to any place, Pſal.139.7,8. but that he would there give eſpecial evidence of his grace, and glory, and of his neer relation to his people, in entercourſe with them by his Word and Sacraments: that Tabernacle was a type of the Church, the Myſtical Church of Gods people, in whom he dwelleth as in living Temples, 2 Cor. 6. 16. Heb. 3. 6. See 1 King.6.13. Rev.21.3.

V. 9. After the pattern] God ſhewed Moſes a model, after which he was to make the Tabernacle. See verſ.40. 1 Chr.28.19.

V. 10. two cubits] That is, of the common cubits, being in length from the bending of the arm to the end of the longeſt fingers: ſome meaſure the cubit to a foot and an half, of our meaſure; and ſo the Ark was in length, a yard and nine inches, and three quarters of a yard in height and breadth.

V.11. crown of gold] Crowns are commonly round, but this was a ſquare erected border according to the figure of the Ark. See Annot. on Chap.30.3.

V.12. in the Ark the Teſtimon] See 2 Kin.11.12. 1 Cor.2.1 When the Ark was made, commandement was given, that the Teſtimony ſhould be put into it, Exo.25.26. By the Teſtimony it meant the two Tables of ſtone written with the finger of God, Exo 31.18. called the teſtimony, becauſe by them was teſtified Gods will concerning the peoples duty. Before the Ark, (wherein was the Teſtimony) and neer unto it, Aarons rod was laid and kept, Num.17.10. And the Book of Deuteronomy was to be put in the ſide of the Ark, Deut.31.26, that is, by the ſide of the Ark, for the prepoſition Hbjin there uſed, may be rendred by a, ab, de, e, and ex, which may note a diſtance from it, but withall a neer ſituation to it. Some Hebrew Writers ſay it was put into a caſe, or repoſitory, placed cloſe by it; for it is expreſly ſaid, Nothing was in the Ark, ſave the two Tables of Stone which Moſes put there at Horeb, 1 Kin.8.9. and the ſame is repeated 2 Chr.5.10. On the contrary (in appearance, not indeed) the Author to the Hebrews ſaith, After the ſecond Vail was the Tabernacle, which is called the holieſt of all, Heb.9.3. which had the Golden Cenſer, and the Ark of the Covenant overlaid round about with Gold, wherein was the Golden Pot that had Manna, and Aarons rod that budded, and the Tables of the Covenant.

That which ſeemes to be the difference (for the matter of it, as Whether any thing but the Tables of the Law onely were in the Ark, or Aarons Rod, and the Golden Pot of Manna alſo) is of no great moment in it ſelf; yet ſome piouſly affected towards the Honourable eſtimation of the Law, think it advanceth the honour of it, that nothing ſhould be thought worthy to be placed with it in the Ark, & therefore they cleave cloſe to the negative Teſtimonies, forenoted out of 1 Kin.8. 9. 2 Chr.5.10. On the other ſide, ſome conceive it an impeachment of the authority of Epiſtle to the Hebrews, if the words thence cited, be not taken to be literally true, as they ſeem to carry the ſenſe at the firſt ſight; and Cajetane (beſides the Servatians and Anabaptiſts, Sixt. Senenſ. Biblioth. Sanct. l.7. p.491.) took occaſion to deny the authority of that Epiſtle, becauſe (as he thought) it contradicted the two Teſtimonies forementioned, as ſome of his own ſide have obſerved of him, namely Bellar. de Verbo Dei, l.1. c.17. Jacob Gordonius on 1 King.8.9.

Hence Commentators are divided, ſome reſolving, that nothing was in the Ark but the two Tables of the Law; ſome, that Aarons Rod, and the Golden Pot of Manna, were there alſo. The reconciliation is made two wayes. 1 By Hiſtorical Narration. 2 By Grammatical Conſtructions.

By Hiſtorical Narration, diſtinguiſhing the times, thus: While the Tabernacle ſtood, they were placed all in the Ark; but afterward, when the Temple was built, onely the Tables of the Law were placed in the Ark, (and therefore it was ſo punctually noted as a new thing in thoſe two forecited Teſtimonies) and the Rod and Pot of Manna were kept in ſome other part of the Temple; and they might be ſafer in the Temple without the Ark, then without it in the Tabernacle; yet ſome are of opinion, that they were not in the Ark, neither during the time of the Tabernacle, nor in the dayes of Solomon, but afterwards in the time of Jeremy; when by reaſon of the Chaldeans, *Jer.*49. the Jews, fearing the loſs of ſuch pretious things, put them all together in the Ark, and that Ark into an hole or cave of the earth to be hid; and afterwards when the Temple was repaired, the Ark was digged up, and placed in it again, and thoſe three things in it before mentioned: And as Adricom Delphus reports, when Jeruſalem was taken by Titus, he had that, the Ark, and Pot, and Rod, and the Golden Table, or Shew-bread, and the Golden Candleſtick, and other Utenſils of the Temple, as a part of the ſpoyls of that glorious Fabrick; *Andrichom. in Deſcrip. Jeruſ.p.*155.*num.*77. and ſome hold that Paul might have the relation from Gamaliel, or by a Jewiſh Tradition, or by revelation from God, as he had the names of the chief enchanters of the Egyptians, Jannes, and Jambres, 2 Tim.3.8.

Againſt this, viz. the placing of thoſe other two things, beſides the Law, in the Ark, Eſtius on *Heb.*9.4. objects, that Aarons Rod was too long to be lodged in the Ark, for that (ſaith he) was but two Cubits and an half long, *Exod.*25.10. and the Rod was a long Paſtoral Staffe, ſuch a one as Moſes uſed when he kept the Sheep of Jethro his Father in law. But that is but his fancy, which hath no ground; and two Cubits and a foot, being above a yard and a quarter, might be long enough for the Rod in reſpect of any uſe we find that was made of it; and for the negative, in 1 King.8.9. & 2 Chr.5.10. which ſaith, That there was nothing in the Ark but the Tables: The anſwer, which ſome learned men give unto it, is, That there was nothing of that kind, viz. Nothing of the whole Law in it, but the two Tables, wherein the ten Commandements were written.

This Hiſtorical reſolution reconciles the Epiſtle to the Hebrews, to thoſe other places, without varying a letter from the Text, or from the ſenſe, which at the firſt blench the words import. The other reſolution is Grammatical, and that is twofold: 1 That, whereas it it ſaid wherein, or in which, the original may be rendred with which; for in that ſenſe we find the proportion ἐν often uſed; As there was a man with an unclean ſpirit, in the Greek it is, ἐν πνεύματι ἀκαθάρτῳ, in an unclean ſpirit, Mat.1.23. His word was with power, Luk.4.32. in Greek ἐν ἐξουσίᾳ in power; The firſt Commandement with promiſe, Eph.6.2. in Greek ἐν ἐπαγγελίᾳ, in promiſe; That I may come unto you with joy, Rom. 15.32. in Greek ἐν χαρᾷ, in joy. Secondly, If we take the words in which, and with which, as theſe examples ſhew, then the words ἐν ᾗ may be in conſtruction referred not to the next Antecedent, which is κιβωτὸς, the Ark, though that be of the Feminine gender; but to σκηνὴ, the Tabernacle, which is Feminine alſo; and ſo the ſenſe is, wherein, or in which Tabernacle was the Manna, Aarons Rod, and the Tables of the Covenant (taking all three together) though the Tables of the Covenant were not onely in the Tabernacle, but alſo in the Ark; and this conſtruction hath warrant not onely by Rule, whereof ſee Sixt. Amama Hebr. Gram, l.2.c.2.p. 152. but alſo by many examples of the Scriptures; as Gen. 10.12. 2 Sam.21.14. Pſal.99.7. Mar.2.3 2 Theſſ.2.9. In this variety of Reconciliations, the judicious Reader may make his choice; but none can be ſo ſimple as againſt ſo many probable Reſolutions, to impute contradiction to the forealleadged Scriptures.

V. 17. Of the Mercy-ſeat] This was the covering of the Ark, made of pure gold; and not diſtinct from the Ark but placed cloſe unto it; and God ſitting as it were, upon the wings of the Cherubims, (which made the repreſentation of a ſeat) on the Ark below it. This narrow ſeat was a figure of Chriſt: the Word ſignifieth a Covering: the Meaning is, mans iniquity being covered by Chriſts merits, God is merciful unto him, Pſal.32.1. and therefore it is called the Propiatory, and Chriſt a propiation for mans ſins, 1 Joh 2.2. becauſe of the favour and mercy communicated to men, through his merit: and this was placed betwixt the Tables of the Law, and the Majeſty of God appearing between the Cherubims, ver.22. to note that Chriſt ſtands between God and the rigor of the Law, in our ſtead as our mediator, and that God might look upon the Law through him, as fulfilled by him for our ſakes, and on our behalf.

V. 18. Cherubims] The word Cherub, as ſome Hebrews conceive, is compounded of Che, that is, as it were, and Rabin, that is, a boy or a young man. Theſe Cherubims were figures of appearing Angels, or glorious repreſentations in humane ſhape, like beautiful youth, made with wings, to ſignifie the expedition which is uſed by Angels, in obeying the will of God; Hence the Papiſts would defend their Idolatry againſt the ſecond Commandement: But they may as well take upon them, to root out whole Nations by war, againſt the ſixth Commandement, and ſpoyl men of their goods, againſt the eighth; becauſe God gave an eſpeciall warrant to his people of Iſrael for them both againſt a general rule; when there is a general rule, as that prohibition concerning Images, the exception muſt have eſpecial warrant by the ſame Authority that made the rule; but it is abſurd from a ſpecial exceptation from a general rule, to ſet up a general contradiction to the rule; as the Papiſts do in this particular. See on Gen.38.3.

of beaten work] Not melted and ſo caſt in a mould, but beaten out of the whole piece with an hammer.

V. 29. diſhes] To receive the fine flower, and other oblations brought unto the Temple; and for the Shew-bread, which was to be placed upon them.

V. 30. Shew-bread] Heb. the bread of faces; that is, the bread ſhewed, preſented, or ſet in view as before the face: the manner how, is ſet down, Lev.24.5. they were in number twelve, acording to the number of the Tribes of Iſrael; in meaſure each contained two homers, enough to ſerve two men for one day; and they were placed on a Table, not in the holy of holies (where onely the High-Prieſt came) but in the holy place; the place of the Prieſts, not of the people; and ſix and ſix in a row, were theſe cakes or loaves placed, anſwering each other. This bread was (every Sabbath) ſet new on the Table, and when the new came, the Prieſts did eat the old in the holy place. The ſetting of theſe loaves was a memorial of Gods beneficence to his people, preparing (for them) a Table in the wilderneſſe, Pſal.23.5. & 78.19. and to admoniſh them, that in taking their repaſt, they ſhould have an eſpecial eye to God, in whoſe preſence that proviſion was ſet, to whom they were to give thanks, and eat to his glory, 1 Cor.10.31.

CHAP. XXVI.

Of the Sanctuary, or Tabernacle, a brief deſcription.

THE Sanctuary (at this time the Tabernacle) was a moveable houſe, made of boards of Shittim wood, whereof ſee ver.15. and hung about with curtains, wrought with divers colours in a curious manner, and covered over with three coverings, one upon another, to keep it from harm. It was thirty cubits long, ten cubits high, ten broad: the uppermoſt part whereof was made ſlope, and ſomewhat bending, each way (as the roof of an houſe) to ſhoot off rain, that it might not reſt upon it. It was divided into two pars, the one was called the holy of holies, at the upper end of it taking up ten cubits, wherein what was placed, ſee Chap.25.16. Into this holy of holies onely the High-prieſt came, and that but once a year, Lev.16. The other part was called the holy place, containing in it twenty cubits, In this was the Altar of Incenſe, on which incenſe was burned; on the right ſide thereof was the Candleſtick, mentioned ver.31. and on the left the Table of ſhew-bread, whereof ver.35. Theſe two parts were divided by a vail, and from the latter part of the Tabernacle, there was a Court of fiftie cubits in length walled with boards, but without a covering above; in part of this Court which was next unto the Tabernacle, was the Altar of the burnt offering, and the braſen Sea, or Laver for the waſhings; and ſo far might none approach but the Prieſts, whoſe place was divided from the peoples by a partition wall of boards, three cubits high and no more, that the people might ſee the Prieſt at his ſacrifice; and into this part, neither Gentiles, nor any unclean perſon, might approach, Joſephus Antiq.l3. c 5.

Verſ.1. T*He Tabernacle*] That is, a Tent, or moveable houſe for the Ark, Table, Shew-bread, &c. See on chap 25. verſ.8.

of cunning work] Heb. the work of a cunning workman, or embreiderer. Silk or linnen being the ground, threads of blew purple, and ſcarlet, were curiouſly wrought upon it, to make it both various and glorious.

V. 3. five curtains] So joyned as to make up one great one; and the other five ſo joyned, as to make up another great one, and theſe two after by loops, buckles, or hooks, ſo coupled together, as to make the Tabernacle as one entire work.

V. 7. to be a covering] Not onely above, but round about; ſo they were as a caſe for the Tabernacle (which was fine and precious) to preſerve it both above, and on all ſides, from the injury of weather; this covering was made of Goats hair, woven into cloath: and there was a third covering of Rams skins dyed red, ver. 14. and a fourth above that, next unto the weather (of Badgers skins) which are ſtronger, and courſer then the other, theſe curtaines were joyned together as the other, ver. 3.

V. 9. double the ſixt curtain] That is five on the one ſide, and five on the other, coupled together and, the ſixt was to hang over the entrance of the Tabernacle, the curtains being eleven in all, which number is made up of five and ſix, the ſixt of the ſix, and the eleventh of the whole was to be doubled, and ſo to hang on both ſides the doore of the Tabernacle. Theſe were larger then the former curtains of cunning work, for they were 30 cubits long, ver. 8. the other but 28, ver. 2. becauſe they were but a covering and ſafegard of the finer curtains.

V. 12. remnant] For theſe curtains were two cubits longer then the curtains of the Tabernacle, ver. 2. 8. ſo that they were ſider by a cubit on both ſides, that they might the better cover the better covering which was under them, and ſave it from wearing or defiling.

V. 15. Shittim wood] Whereof there was ſtore in the deſert of Arabia. See on chap. 25. 5.

V. 24. coupled] Like twins exactly anſwering one another: this is to be underſtood of the two corner boards in the back part of the Tabernacle, mentioned ver. 23. with far more ſtrength and firmneſſe were to be double, above and below, and ſo cloſed together that the Ring put in the corner might ſerve for the barres which met on both ſides.

V. 26. barres] Theſe bars covered with gold, and put into golden rings were to ſtrengthen and hold the boards together, that they might be firm and ſtedfaſt.

V. 28. midſt of the boards] Not through the thickneſſe of them, but through the rings, which were faſtned to the middle of the outſide; the middle, in reſpect of the ſpace above and below the bars.

V. 30. according to the faſhion] Act. 7. 44. Heb. 5. 8. See on Chap. 25. 9.

V. 31.] vaile] Within this vail which ſeparated betwixt the holy place, and the moſt holy, was the Ark placed, ver. 33. 2 Chr. 3. 14. Matth. 27. 51. Heb. 9. 3.

with cherubims] The portraiture of them wrought or woven into the work. See the Note on Chap. 25. 18.

V. 32. hookes] Some read heads of the pillars.

V. 33. moſt holy] Whereinto the high Prieſt onely entred once a year; here was the Ark placed, and hence God gave anſwers, therefore it was called the Oracle, in the 2 King 6. 15: 19. & 6. 28. it was a Type of heaven, the throne of God, for here God Manifeſted his eſpecial preſence, and the high Prieſt entred into it by eſpecial prerogative, as Chriſt our high Prieſt into heaven, and but once a year, the better to preſerve the reverence of the place, for which cauſe it was ſeparated by a vail from the reſt of the Tabernacle. See Chap. 30. 10. Levit. 16. 2. 16. 17. Heb. 9. 7.

V. 35. the Table without] That is, the Table of the ſhewbread, or twelve cakes or loaves (repreſenting the twelve Tribes) ſhall be on the outſide of the vaile, not in the inſide; (where the Ark was placed) that is, it muſt be ſet not in the moſt holy place, not on the inſide in the holy of holies where the Ark was placed.

V. 36. an hanging] This hanging, or vail, was a partition betwixt the holy place of the Prieſts, and place where the people were, it was not cloſe to the ground, becauſe at the entrance it was to let in ſome light. See on Levi 4. 6. ver. 37. overlay them with gold. See on chap. 36. 38.

CHAP. XXVII.

Verſ.1. A*Ltar*] This was not the Altar which ſerved for oblation of Incenſe morning and evening, but the Altar of burnt offerings made three cubits high, and five cubits ſquare, placed not in the Tabernacle, but in the Court, (which ſometimes is comprehended in the name of the Tabernacle) to the midſt of its height (which had ſome Shittim wood about it) it was covered with braſs, but within was, as ſome conceive, filled up half way with earth or rough unhewen ſtones; or which is more probable by the diſcription in the text, it was hollow unto the midſt where the braſen grate was, upon which the daily ſacrifice of a Lamb morning and evening was offered, Exod. 29. 39. and other oblations of ſeveral kinds and occaſions. It was firſt conſecrated with holy oyl, Num. 7. 1. and then other things ſet upon it were hallowed by it, Mat. 23. 19. This Altar differed from ſuch as were made of earth, upon extraordinary occaſions, Exod. 20. 24. for this was to continue for the conſtant ſervice of the Tabernacle, which muſt not be ſo baſe and mean as the other, becauſe the Tabernacle was glorious.

V. 2. hornes] Made like hornes ſharpe and crooked, partly for ornament, partly for uſe; and the uſe, as ſome conceive was, chiefly to bind the ſacrifice to the Altar, Pſal. 118. 27. which was to be offered upon the Altar.

with braſs] The wooden part of the Altar, was to be overlaid or covered with braſs to preſerve it from fire, and yet it was ſtrange, that the braſs very much heated did not burn the wood; and there was, as ſome conceive, an eſpecial providence in it, that it did not ſo, God as he ſent fire down upon the Altar overruling the operation of it at his pleaſure, yet the Altar being ſo broad, the fire might be kept in a grate at due diſtance from the wood.

V. 3. fire pan.] Which ſerved to carry fire from the Altar of the burnt offering, to kindle the incenſe, which burnt in chafing diſhes upon the Altar of incenſe.

V. 4. the grate] Made like net-work, but with ſmall holes like a ſieve, was faſtned by rings to the Altar, and let down by chains to the midſt of it; under it, as ſome conceive, was the wood and fire put, upon it the ſacrifice was laid to be burned; others hold, that both fire and ſacrifice were upon it.

foure braſen rings] The Altar had rings and bars by it ſelf, Chap. 38. 7. and ſo had this grate, that they might be removed and carried ſeverally by themſelves.

V. 8. as it was ſhewed] Heb. as he ſhewed, Exod. 25. 40.

V. 9. the Court of the Tabernacle] Which compaſſed the Tabernacle on all ſides: which was an uneven ſquare, for it was an hundred cubits, or fifty yards long; and fifty cubits, or twenty five yards broad, and five cubits, or two yards and an half high, which had for walles hangings of fine linnen, born up by pillars of braſs. In this Court and about the mid way from the Tabernacle to the outſide of it, was placed the Altar, in the open ayr, that the flame and fume of the ſacrifice might have free vent without hurt or offence. Of this Court fifty cubits from the Eaſt end towards the Sanctuary, were for the Sacrifices which were tendred by the people, in the part neereſt to the entrance, and offered by the Prieſts towards the furtheſt part of the fifty cubits and about ten cubits diſtance from the Tabernacle: for ſo many cubits was it off the Altar on the Eaſt ſide; and ſo many from the walls, or hangings of the Court, on the Weſt ſide, and 20 cubits on the North, and as many on the South ſide. In this ſpacious Court there was receipt for all profeſſours of Religion, whether ſincere or hypocritical, and ſo it was a type of the Church viſible in the world.

V. 10. fillets] They were certain hoopes or circles of ſilver plate, compaſſing the upper part of the pillar to beautifie it, and it may be alſo to faſten the hangings in ſome places to the pillars.

V. 13. Eaſt ſide Eaſtward] Or, full Eaſt.

fifty cubits] Meaning curtains of fifty cubits.

V. 16. gate of the Court] Which was on the Eaſt ſide.

V. 18. fifty] Heb. fifty by fifty.

V. 19. pins] Or, ſtakes. Wherewith the hangings were faſtned to the ground, that they might not be waved to and fro with the wind.

V. 20. oyl olive beaten] Lev. 24. 2. Such as come from the Olive, when it is firſt preſſed, and beaten, and rather beaten with a peſtel, or mallet, then chruſhed with a heavy weight of a preſſe, or mill ſtones; becauſe it ſhould run clear and free from dregs.

to burn] Heb. to aſcend up.

alwayes] See on Chap. 30. ver. 8.

V. 21. of the Teſtimony] That is, of the Law (in the Ark) the Teſtimony of Gods Will, and of his Covenant with his people, See on Chap. 25. 16. & 31. 18.

From evening to morning] For all night, and not by day, were the lamps to burn; and though it be ſaid alwayes, ver. 20. that is to be underſtood only of the night ſeaſon, as if it had been ſaid every night; for they could not burn until they were lighted, and they were not lighted until evening, Chap. 30. 8. and from thence they were to burn until the morning, Lev. 24. 3. This might be a Type or figure of that ſpiritual light which diſpelleth the darkneſs and blindneſs of the mind, 2 Cor. 4. 6. 2 Pet. 1. 19. See 1 Sam. 3. 3. 2 Chr. 13. 11.

CHAP. XXVIII.

Verſ. 2. H*Oly garments*] Garments to be worn in holy miniſtrations in reference to Chriſt our High Prieſt, who is holy and undefiled, Heb. 7. 26. and his robe which Chriſtians muſt put on, to make them accepted with his Father, is a moſt holy Robe. See Iſai. 52. 1. Rev. 19. 8.

for glory and for beauty] Whereby his office may be known to be glorious, and excellent as repreſenting him, who was, and is the brightneſs of the divine glory, Heb. 1. 3. Joh. 1. 14. and the glory of his people Iſrael, Luk. 2. 32. The other Prieſts had garments alſo for glory and for beauty, v. 40. but they were nothing ſo glorious and beautiful as Aarons were: for though as Prieſts they were Types of Chriſt, and ſo their calling was honourable, and their garments graceful; yet the high Prieſt was therein higher, and therefore in his rayment much more glorious then they, and by this livery of their Lord and Maſter, they were appropriate to his ſervice.

V. 3. wiſe hearted] Skilful artificers.

whom I have filled with the ſpirit of wiſdome] The Iſraelites had now more need to be inſpired by God with extraordinary knowledg becauſe (as ſome obſerve) they were imployed in Egypt rather as drudges, then trained up in an ingenuous education, in Arts and Siences: and yet had they been brought up in the ſtudy of them (wherein there is no proficiency without Gods favourable aſſiſtance, for all knowledge is from him, even that of the Husbandman, Iſa, 28. 26) to ſuch extraordinary curious work, there was need of more then ordinary direction, or inſtruction. See Chap. 31. 2. & 35. 30.

to conſecrate him] That is, to ſeparate him from the reſt of the people to Gods eſpecial ſervice

V. 4. an Ephod "] There was two ſorts of Ephods, the one made of fine and pure linen, which was common to all prieſts, " 1 Sam. 2. 18 & 22. 18 and uſed alſo by other perſons upon extraordinary occaſion: as David when he danced before the Ark, 2 Sam. 6. 14. The other was made of divers materials and colours, peculiar to the High prieſt, which was a ſhort coat without ſleeves, put upon his other garments (to keep them cloſe together) which uſe is intimated in the Hebrew word; theſe garments were all of them in number eight, reckoned in divers orders here, and Lev. 8. 7, 8.

V. 8. curious girdle] Or, embroidered.

V. 9. Onyx ſtones] White ſtones, like the white of a mans nail, whence they have their name. Anſelm. Boetius Hiſt. gem. l. 2. c. 90. Some of them are of divers colours, with white ſpeckles in them. See on v. 20.

V. 10. the other ſix] Of theſe two ſixes, it is like Levi was none among them, for the Levites preſented themſelves to God, in their daily miniſtration: and there were twelve beſides Levi, becauſe for one Joſeph, were reckoned two, Manaſſeh and Ephraim.

according to their birth] Gen. 43. 33 the eldeſt firſt, and the youngeſt laſt, ſee on v. 21

V. 11. with the work] Wiſd. 18. 24

in ouches of gold] That is, hallow places, in which the ſtones were ſet faſt, as a Diamond in a Ring.

V. 12. ſhall bear their names] This was a reſemblance of Chriſt our High prieſt, repreſenting his Church to God his Father.

upon his two ſhoulders] The prieſt was to bear the people on his ſhoulders, by a patient bearing of their weakneſs, and waywardneſs, as well as on his breſt, v. 15 by paſtoral affection, v. 29.

for a memorial] Not to the people to remember the goodneſſe of the patriarchs, who were many of them more noted for great faults, then for virtues; much leſſe may we think them to be as a help or memory to God, who neither can be ignorant, nor forgetful of any thing: But chiefly this memorial was to Aaron to remember the people by interceſſion for them; and withal to ſignifie that their memory is preſented to God, and preſerved with God. See Annotations on Gen. 9. 16.

V. 15. " the breſt plate of judgment] Ver. 29. It was ſo called, becauſe the High prieſt could not give ſentence in judgment without that on his breſt; or becauſe when he conſulted with God in caſes of doubt for a divine judgement, in that caſe he was to wear it on his breſt. See on " v. 30. See alſo 1 Sam. 28. 6. & 30. 7.

V. 17. a Sardius] Or, Rubie, Exod. 39. 10. a blood coloured Stone, and therefore called alſo a Rubie; but Sardius from Sardis, a City of Lydia, in Aſia, where ſuch ſtones are moſt plentiful; or where there are the rareſt, or beſt of that kind: whereof ſee Plin. lib. 37. c. 8.

a Topaz] A ſtone of a golden colour, as ſome ſay; others ſay it is green, Plin. lib. 37. Chap. 8. and others, partly of a grey, or skye-colour: but it ſeemeth to be a ſtone of high price, eſpecially the Topaz of Ethiopia, Job 28. 19. the operations of it are many and rare, as Fr. Rueus ſets them down, in his ſecond book of Gems, and Chap. 5.

Carbuncle] A precious ſtone ſhining like lightning, or a glowing coal of fire: the word Baraketh, is derived of the word Baroke, to lighten, Plin. lib. 37. c. 7. col. 253. Rueus ibidem c. 18 p. 249. And Anſelm. Boetius de Gem. l. 2. c. 8.

V. 18. an Emeraud] A ſtone of moſt perfect green colour, moſt pleaſant to the eye-ſight, and profitable, both to preſerve it, and to recover it when it is weakened; as Pliny ſaith, lib. 37. c. 5. See Rueus lib. 2. of Gem. c. 4. p. 237.

a Saphire] Is a precious ſtone of a light coloured purple, or of a blewiſh colour, like to that which is ſometimes ſeen in the clear skie. Ibid. c. 2. p. 223.

a Diamond] Is a ſtone bright and white, like Chriſtal, but in a more excellent degree, very hard, Ezek. 3. 9. Zach. 7. 12. Jer. 17. 1. though in thoſe places the Hebrew word be not Jahalom, as here, but Shamir) ſo hard, that by blows the hammer and anvile receive more hurt from it, then it from them, Plin. nat. hiſt. lib. 37. c. 10.

V. 19. a Ligure] Or, Lyncure. A Kind of Amber, Plin. 37. chap. 3. a gumme hardned into a ſtone, which ſtone (in ſome places) is very pretious, and of excellent quality and operation: Rueus lib. 2. c. 18. 26. Some call it a Turkeis, or Torcois, a ſtone of a pale green, inclining to skie colour, and of ſtrange effects, Ibid. c. 18. p. 256. Some take it for a Hyacinthus, or Jacinth, which is of a Purple or Violet colour.

an Agate] Or, Achate. A blackiſh ſtone, moſt uſually with white ſtreaks upon it, and many of them have much variety of colours, Rueus lib. 2. c. 16. p. 255. which though in ſome places it be common, is ſaid to be of excellent virtue againſt many diſeaſes: of this ſee Plin. lib. 37. c. 10.

an Amethyſt] A pretious ſtone, of a pale Violet colour, Rueus lib. 2. c. 11. p. 244. Of this, ſee Plin lib. 37. c. 9.

V. 20. Beril] Is a ſhining precious ſtone, whereof there are divers ſorts; but the beſt is of a ſea-water green colour, Plin. lib. 37. chap. 5.

the Onyx ſtone] Of that there be many ſorts, ſome ſay ſix, ſome ten, ſome fourteen, ſome eighteen; it is hard to ſay which of them is here meant, Plin. lib. 37. c. 6. See Annot. on v 9.

Jaſper] Of which alſo there were many ſorts of ſeveral colours, Rueus lib. 2. of Gem. c. 1. p. 231. See alſo Plin. lib. 37. v. 8, 9. Many of theſe ſtones are mentioned, Rev. 21. 19, 20. and of them many make myſtical ſignifications, which wanting ground of Scripture, the building upon them may prove no better then preſumptuous fallacies. For though many things of the Ceremonial Law ſerved to ſhadow out heavenly things, Heb. 8. 5. yet it is not ſafe to preſume (eſpecially in the explanation of myſteris) above that which is written; nor be two punctual in ſeruing up ſenſible things to ſpiritual conformities; as ſome, both ancient and latter Authors have been, eſpecially of the Popiſh party; nor too bold in bringing down Religious matters, to natural alluſions, as Joſephus doth, Antiq. lib. 3. c. 8.

V. 21. according to the twelve] It is probable from hence, and from verſe 10. that their names were ſet upon the twelve ſtones, according to the order of their births; and ſo Reuben had his name ſet upon the Sardius, Simeon upon the Topaz, and ſo Benjamin the youngeſt had his upon the Jaſper, named laſt. See the ſecond Annot. on v. 10.

V. 29. bear the names] Aaron ſhall not enter into the holy place, in his own name only, but in the name of all the Tribes of Iſrael. See Annot. on v. 12.

breſt-plate of judgment] See Annot. on v. 15.

upon his heart] This ſignifieth how neer the Elect lay to the heart of their High Prieſt Chriſt Jeſus: that is, how heartily he loved them, who parted with his own hearts blood for their ſakes: and it is an admonition of the Paſtors affectionate reſpect to his flock; as we ſee in the Apoſtles example, 1 Theſſ. 2. 8.

for memorial] See Annot. on v. 12.

V. 30. * Urim and Thummim] Signifie light and perfection, according to the beſt derivation in the Hebrew Tongue; and they are put in the plural number, lights, and perfections; to note the plenty, as well as the excellency of divine graces. This was meant, as ſome conceive, of the ſplendor and perfection of the pretious ſtones, of the breſt-plate, which were of moſt clear and perfect beauty: but that is not all; for beſides that, theſe words were ingraven, or written upon ſome of the precious materials of the High-Prieſts ornaments, the Urim and Thummim was neither made, nor placed by the inſpired Artificers, but (as ſome learned Writers rather think, by the compariſon of Exod. 39 10. Levit. 8. 8.) made by God himſelf, and put by Moſes into the breſt-plate. Hence it was called the Breſt-plate of Judgment, v. 15. and the Judgment given thereby the judgment of Urim, Num. 27. 21. becauſe the High-Prieſt put it on when he conſulted with God, and received from him clear and determinate anſwers in caſes of doubt. Theſe anſwers were ſometimes made by audible voice, ſometimes by ſecret inſpiration, which when the Prieſt had told it to the people, the ſtones and letters in the Breſt-plate, as is probably conceived, (for there is nothing certain of it in the Scripture) might have an extraordinary brightneſſe appearing on them, for aſſurance that the Prieſt had ſpoken with the Lord, and received reſolution from him; as by the ſhining of Moſes his face, when he came from God, with the Tables of the Teſtimony in his hand, Exod. 34. 29, 30. it was manifeſt that he had from God, what he brought unto the people; and whereas David, deſiring to conſult with the Lord, called for the Ephod, 1 Sam. 23. 9. the reaſon was, for that the Breſt-plate was faſtned to the Ephod, v. 28. and the Ephod to the Breſt-plate: ſo that if he had one, he had both, Exod. 39. 21. This Oraculous conſultation with the breſt-plate, that is, by the uſe of the Breſt-plate, continued among the Jews, until about, or ſomewhat above on hundred years before Chriſt, as ſome affirm; but it is generally, and more probably thought, that it laſted no longer, then to the Captivity of Babylon: (for which ſee Ezra. 2. 63) and after that time we find not that the Jews had any uſe of that kind of revelation * Lev. 8. 8. Ezra. 2. 63. Neh. 7. 65.

V. 32. Habergeon] A coat of male, which is a defenſive armour, made of Iron rings linked one within another, after the manner of network.

V. 34. A golden Bell and a Pomgranate] Which were flat and embroydered, and ſo mixed with the Bells, that between two pomgranates, here was placed one Bell, and between two Bells, one pomgranate. Joſephus antiq. l 3. c. 8. The Bell was for ſound, and the prieſts lip were to preſerve knowledge, for the inſtruction of others, Mal. 2. 7. and he muſt not be mute, Iſa.56.10. and if he be, it is upon his utmoſt peril, ver. 33. And it muſt be a golden Bell, for that it is the moſt precious and pureſt of metals, ſuch muſt his doctrine be, Prov. 3. 15. The Pomegranats being a ſweet and ſavoury fruit, ſignifie his life and converſation, the fruit of his profeſſion, of good reliſh and acceptation to good people. Some refer the Bell to Chriſts Prophetick Office, and the Pomgranate, to the ſweet ſavour of the Sacrifice of Chriſts Prieſtly Office, or of his perſonal perfections, or the graces he giveth to his Church. See Cant.4.3. Chap.6.7,8.

V. 36. a plate of pure gold] As ſome Hebrew Doctors ſay, it was in breadth the meaſure of two fingers broad, in length, reaching from one ear to another: Joſephus thinks it was not a plain plate, but a crown of gold, Antiq. l.3.c. 8. Which joyned to the Mitre, might (as ſome conceive) ſignifie, that Chriſt, of whom the High-Prieſt was a Type, was a true Melchiſedec, that is, both a King and a Prieſt.

HOLINESSE TO THE LORD] Holineſſe appertaineth to the Lord, and he is moſt holy, and nothing unholy may appear before him; and therefore all, both Prieſts and people, muſt ſee to their ſervice of him, that it be pure and holy, and ſuch as may be pleaſing unto him, who is moſt perfectly holy, and who is honoured by the bleſſed Angels with multiplyed acclamations of holineſſe, Iſa.6.3. See Chap.39. 30. Pſa 93.5. Dan.9.24. 1 Cor.30. Heb.7.26.

V. 38. bear the iniquity] The peoples offering could not be ſo perfect, but ſome fault would be therein; which ſin, the High-Prieſt as a Type of Chriſt did bear, and pacified God by making an atonement for them, Lev. 10. 17. Num. 18. 1. Iſa. 64. 6. Heb. 13. 15. 1 Pet. 2. 5.

ſhall hallow] That is, conſecrate, or give up to God in their holy oblations.

alwayes] That is, as oft as he exerciſeth his Prieſtly Office before the Lord.

accepted before the Lord] The real holineſſe of the Prieſt (anſwerable to the Ceremonial, worne on his forehead) made him accepted for himſelf, and the people, when he miniſtred before the Lord.

V. 39. the coat] A white gown ſleeved, and reaching gown-like unto the feet, which made looſe, was kept cloſe to his body with a girdle, Lev.8.7.

Mitre] A linen Mitre, a cover of the head; in what faſhion it was made, is uncertain; yet conceived, it was fine linen wreathed up, as the Turkiſh Turbants now are.

the girdle of needle-work] What a girdle this was, ſee Exod. 39. 29.

for glory and for] See Annot. on v. 2.

V. 40. coats] Of linen; for wollen wearing was forbidden to the Prieſts, Ezek.44. 17. theſe are Ephods, ſuch as are mentioned, 1 Sam. 22.18. which differeth from that of the High-Prieſts, for that was embroidered, and theſe were not.

V. 41. and conſecrate them] Heb. fill their hands, That is, conſecrate them, by giving them, or putting into their hands things to offer; and thereby admit them to their office, Chap.29.9,24.

V. 42. to cover their nakedneſſe] Heb. fleſh of their nakedneſſe, Exod. 20.26.

from the loyns even unto the thighs] Incluſively; that is, including and covering both the loyns and thighes, leſt if they ſhould ſtumble and fall, their nakedneſſe ſhould be ſeen to their ſhame.

V. 43. that they bear not iniquity] For not hiding their nakedneſſe.

CHAP. XXIX.

Verſe 1. W*ithout blemiſh*] Neither lame nor blind, or defective, or monſtrous in any member, nor ſick, nor ſore. See Mal.1.13,14.

V. 2. Unleavened bread] See on Exod. 12. 8. Here be three ſorts of unleavened bread, two of them are particularly named cakes, and wafers; and by unleavened bread, in the firſt place is meant another ſort, to wit, loaf-bread, mentioned v. 23. called there in the Hebrew (Chicar Lebem, that is, a maſſe of bread, or great bread. By bread Chriſt might be ſignified, as John 6.55. and by its being unleavened, his ſincerity, humility, and ſweetneſs.

V. 3. bring them] Preſent them in the firſt part of the Court, to be brought neerer to the Tabernacle, to be offered afterward.

in the basket] See on Gen.21. 14.

V. 4 waſh them] There is none, either perſon or calling free from pollution, yet thoſe who are deſigned to ſerve God in eſpecial manner, muſt endeavour after eſpecial purity; and when they fall ſhort of what they ſhould and would be, they muſt look up to Chriſt, and admire and adore his perfect holineſſe, which needs no waſhing, and whoſe blood cleanſeth the ſoul, as water the body waſhed in it.

water] Taken out of the brazen laver, placed between the Tabernacle and the Altar, Exod. 30.18.

V. 5. garments] The linen breeches are not here mentioned, for thoſe were privately put on before, theſe were to be put on openly at the door of the Tabernacle.

V. 6. mitre] Lev.8. 9. See on Chap.28.39.

the holy crown] That was the golden plate forementioned, Chap.28. 36. See Annot. on it, and Lev.8.9.

V. 7. * oyl] Oyl heals, ſoftens, and ſweetens; and therefore betokens the graces of the Holy Ghoſt, 1 Joh.2.27. which give ſoundneſſe to the ſoul, ſoftneſſe to the heart, ſweetneſſe to the life and converſation; moſt agreeable to Prieſtly function. Of the making of this Holy oyntment, ſee Chap. 30. 23. This pouring out of this anoynting oyl, ſeems to be peculiar to the High-prieſt, See Pſal. 133. 2. for we find not the like preſcription, or application to any of the inferiour Prieſts; their hands were anoynted, but not their heads, as the High prieſts was; nor was this done in ſucceſſion to the inferiour prieſts, (though at firſt both Aaron and his ſons were conſecrated with oyntment, Exod.30.30. Chap. 40. 14. Lev. 8. 30) but only to the High prieſts, who were admitted into their office with this pretious oyntment.

* Chap.30.25.

V. 9. put the bonets] Heb. binde.

a perpetual ſtatute] To be ſucceſſively continued in the line of Aaron, until Chriſt come in the fleſh, to effect what they foreſhewed. See on Chap.12.14.

conſecrate] Heb. fill the hand of. See Annot. on Chap. 28.41.

V. 10. put their hands upon the head] As confeſſing their own guilt, and putting it upon the head of the ſacrifice, offered firſt for their own ſins, that they being accepted, might be the fitter to offer ſacrifices for the ſins of the people: and it ſeems the party that brought a ſacrifice (though one of the people) was to lay his hand upon the head of his own oblation, Levit 4. v. 24, 29 which was done with confeſſion of ſinnes, Levit. 16. 21. and at leaſt an implicite acknowledgment of the deſert of death in themſelves, though it were turned upon the beaſt; ſee on Levit. 4. 33. and thus was the ſin laid upon the ſacrifice, as a Type of Chriſt, Iſa. 56. 6, 7. And it was the manner (when ſin was charged upon a guilty perſon) that the Witneſſes laid their hands upon him, as well to teſtifie their accuſation of him, as to ſtone him, Deut. 17. 7. Now as the beaſt to be offered had no inherent guilt in him, but an imputed guilt laid upon him, ſo was it with Chriſt, Iſa. 53. 4, 6. The immaculate Lamb, who was made ſin for us, that he might take away ſin from us, John 1. 29. 2 Cor. 5. 21. 1 Pet. 1. 19.

V. 11. thou ſhalt kill] That is, Moſes, (for he was of the Tribe of Levi, being Aarons brother) and though we read not of any ſolemn, or particular conſecration of him to the Prieſthood, yet he is numbred among the Prieſts, Pſal. 99. 6. and (as a Prieſt) did both conſecrate Aaron for the high Prieſthood, and offer ſacrifice; yet the word Cohen, which there, and elſewhere, moſt uſually ſignifieth a Prieſt, or Sacrificer, is ſometimes taken for a Prince, or principal Officer: ſee on Chap. 2. 16. But though Moſes exerciſed the Prieſts Office in this conſecration, yet when there was a ſtanding Prieſthood ſet up, it is like he left that ſervice (if not altogether, yet for the moſt part) to thoſe who were of the Prieſtly function.

V. 12. horns] Of the braſen Altar, which was placed at the door of the Tabernacle, Lev.4.7. not on the horns of the golden Altar of ſweet incenſe, there alſo named, becauſe hereby the braſen Altar was to be conſecrated for future ſacrifices: and becauſe the Prieſts, not yet competently conſecrated, they were as the people, at whoſe ſin-offering the blood was ſprinkled upon the horns of the braſen Altar, Lev.4.7. & 18. 30. & 9.9.

V. 13. the caule which is above the liver] It ſeameth by the Anatomy, and the Jewiſh Writers to be the Midriffe.

the fat that covereth the inwards] The burning of the fat, and inward parts (which in all ſacrifices were burned unto God) was to mind them of the mortification of their covered corruptions, ſignified by the fat, Pſal. 119.70. and by the charge of wickedneſſe on their inward parts, Pſal.5. 9. And it might alſo ſignifie the ſerving of God with the beſt, which is expreſt by fatneſs. See on Gen.4.4.

V. 14. * without the hoſt] Every ſacrifice for ſin was not thus offered, but that which was for the ſin of the high Prieſt, and of many together with him, nor wholly burnt fleſh, and skin, and dung as here is expreſt. It was ſo to be offered, to ſignfie an abomination due to the guilt of ſin, which fell upon our Saviour for us, when (with extreme deteſtation) he was led to execution, without the gate, that by taking the peoples unholineſſe upon himſelf, he might convey his holineſſe upon them, Heb.13.12. Lev.4.11.

V. 16. ſprinkle it] Which repreſented the ſprinkling of Chriſts blood, and mans reconciliation to God thereby, 1 Pet.1.2.

V. 18. a ſweet ſavour] Verſe 25. Gen 8.21. Heb. a ſavour of reſt. which cauſeth Gods wrath to reſt, or ceaſe from all diſpleaſure, and purpoſe of puniſhing his people. See Annot. on Gen. 8. 21. beſides this, there were other ſorts of offerings, at the conſecration of Aaron and his ſons, wherewith they were entred into their office, that they might (having their ſacrifices once firſt offered for themſelveſt) be the fitter to offer the like for others afterwards.

V. 19. the other ram] The former ram was called the burnt-offering, which was a ſin-offering, without which none other offering was accepted; this, the peace-offering, made for the proſperity of the Prieſt-hood, both in reſpect of the Prieſts themſelves, and the exerciſe of their Prieſtly function, with reference unto the people. Such oblations were uſually made, either for obtainment of ſome good thing deſired, or for acknowledgment of ſome good already received.

hands upon the head] See on v. 10.

V. 20. Ear, &c.] The ear was to be ſanctified for holy hearing, and againſt the hearing of any corrupt communication, and the hand for working, and the foot for walking, that his converſation might be holy, and his perſon ſanctified from head to foot. The whole body needed not to be ſo bloodied; ſo in Baptiſm, there is no neceſſity of plunging the whole body in water, but the ſprinkling of it on the fore-head, may ſuffice to ſignifie the myſtical meaning intended by it; where, by a ſacramental Synecdoche (though but a part be ſprinkled) the whole is waſhed and cleanſed.

V. 21. upon the Altar] The blood of the ſlain creature, received in ſome veſſel, was ſet upon the Altar, whence it was taken for ordinary ſprinklings.

of the annointing oyl] The compoſition whereof is ſet down, Chap. 30.23.

ſprinkle it] Either the oyl and blood ſeverally, or mingled together.

and upon his garments] This being commanded was no pollution; and againſt Gods command, elegancy and curioſity is pollution, Exod.20.25 yet the ſprinkling might be ſo ordered by God, that the drops might rather adorn, then diſgrace the garment.

V.22.right ſhoulder] In other peace-offerings (which were made for the people) that ſhoulder was a part of the Prieſts Fee, Levit.7. 32. for his ſervice; but here the oblation being made for the Prieſts themſelves, they were to offer it up on their own behalf.

a ram of conſecration] Not an holocauſt to be burned whole, in ſacrifice to God, as the ram, v.18. but for conſecration of the Prieſts in their holy function.

V. 23. before the LORD] That is, before the Altar of burnt offerings, where God was ſerved by ſacrifice, and where he accepted the ſacrifices offered unto him.

V. 24. wave them] That is ſhake them to and fro, as ſome conceive from Eaſt to Weſt, from North to South, ſignifying Gods univerſal preſence all the world over. The word ſometimes ſignifieth ſifting with a ſieve, Iſa.30.28. which may note, either the ſhaking of affliction, Iſa. 10.32. Or purging by affliction, as by ſifting and ſhaking, the chaff is ſevered from the grain, Mat. 3.12 Or, it may note the agitation and motion of the mind, which ſhould not be idle in the performance of Gods ſervice, but with this waving, or wavering the ſacrifices, was alſo lifted up, v.27. And hence it was called the heave-offering, as well as the wave-offering, v.28. Lev.7.34. and this was to raiſe the hearts of Prieſts and people upwards towards God. But ſome take this waving to be a caſting of the portions, out of one hand into the other, and the heaving to be a throwing of them upward.

V. 26. it ſhall be thy part] This is to be underſtood of other peace-offerings afterwards: for in this of the conſecration of the Prieſts, both the ſhoulder and the breſt, as ſome hold, were to be offered up to God by fire, as the fat. See on v. 22. according to the firſt Annot. on that verſe. Others take it, that the breſt was reſerved for Moſes (who now did the Prieſts Office) becauſe both breſt and ſhoulder are allowed to the Prieſts Office, v. 25,26. of this Chapter, Lev. 7. 31, 32. and the breſt only is ſpecified, as his part in this verſe.

V. 28. it is an heave-offering] That is, lifted up to God (as his right) and aſſigned by him, for a portion to his Miniſters.

ſtatute for ever] See Annot. on Chap. 12.14.

V. 29. his ſons] The eldeſt ſon of the high-Prieſt (when his Father is dead) ſhall be high-Prieſt in his ſtead, and ſhall have his fathers high-Prieſts garments put upon him, and be annointed as he was: this was done by one of the inferiour Prieſts, for there were no higher, the high Prieſts being dead, and none fitter to conſecrate a high-Prieſt, then a Prieſt.

V. 30. That ſon] Heb. He of his ſons. See Numb: 20.28.

ſeven dayes when] That is, ſeven dayes before he come to do ſervice in the Tabernacle, all which time he is not to attend within, but at the door of the Tabernacle day and night, Lev.8. 35. That he may have the holineſſe of the *S*abbath for his compleat conſecration, and the whole week taken up in this holy preparation, might mind the Prieſt of perpetual holineſs, not only on the *S*abbath, but all the dayes of the week, all the dayes of his life.

V. 31. the ram of conſecration] That is, the remainder after the oblation of the parts ſpoken of, v.22.

and ſeeth his fleſh in the holy place] In the Court before the Tabernacle where was the Altar, whence fire was to be taken to ſeeth it withall: there it was to be boyled, and there alſo to be eaten, Lev. 8. verſe 31.

V. 32. And Aaron and his ſons] Lev.8.31. & 24.9. & Mat 12.4.

V.33. eat theſe things] Which were reſerved of the ſacrifice, as part of the fleſh, and part of the bread left in the basket, v.32.

a ſtranger] That is, not only he who is no Iſraelite, but no Iſraelite who is not of the ſeed of Aaron, although he be of the ſtock or linage of Levi, for here was no offerer but the Prieſt; in other peace-offerings, the offerers who were not Prieſts, were partners with the Prieſts in portions of their oblations.

becauſe they are holy] Not the Levites in general, but the Prieſts, becauſe they be hallowed, or offered to God by eſpecial conſecration to the Prieſthood, as he that is a Levite and no more is not.

V. 34. burne the remainder] That which could not be eaten by them that day, was not to be kept unto the morning, but to be preſently burnt, that it might not be applyed to any other uſe then God had appointed it; neither by way of contempt, nor of ſuperſtition: yet this was not an univerſal ordinance; for in ſome caſes what remained of the ſacrifice, might be eaten the next day, Lev. 7.16. this therefore of burning the remainder, is eſpecially meant of gratulatory oblations, ſuch as was the Paſchal Lamb. See on Chap.16. 19.

V. 35. ſeven dayes] Every day for ſo many dayes together, were the hands of the Prieſt to be annointed, a bullock to be offered on the Altar, and the Altar to be cleanſed, and annointed.

V. 36 cleanſe the Altar] Chap 30. v.28 & Chap.40.10

V. 37. * whatſoever toucheth the Altar] That is, Prieſts ſacrifices, oblations, veſſels, fire, and all things that had relation to the Altar: but not ſimply every thing; this was a Type of the moſt perfect and operative holineſſe of Chriſt, Heb. 9.14. who is alſo called an Altar, Heb.13. 10,15. Whereby alſo was ordained, that none that is not conſecrated for the ſervice of the Altar, ſhould touch the Altar. * Chap. 30. 29. Mat. 23.19. Hag.2.13. Ezek.44.19. & 46. 20.

V. 38. Now this is that] That is, the principal uſe for which the Altar is erected, is for the daily ſacrifice.

day by day continually] This anſwereth to neceſſity on our part, who alwayes need remiſſion of ſins; and Chriſts efficacy on Chriſts part, who daily communicates the grace of reconciliation to the ſouls of his people. See on Dan.8.11 & 9.27.

V. 39. morning and at even] A pattern for double devotion every day.

V. 40. a tenth deale] That is, an Omer. See on Chap.16.16.

Hyn of oyl] An Hin was a meaſure for moiſt things, as an Omer, and Ephah for dry; and it contained about three quarts; ſo that the fourth part here mentioned is a pint and an half. Some ſay an Hin contained twelve Logs, and a Log contained the quantity of ſix Eggs of Paleſtine, which are bigger then ordinary; ſo that an Hin was as much as ſeventy two Eggs put together.

V. 41. at even] Heb betwixt two evenings. See Annot. on Chap. 12. 6.

meat-offering] The drink-offering, v. 40. and the meat offering in this verſe, may admoniſh us of Gods bounty, as well as other oblations of his juſtice or mercy.

V. 42. * at the door of] Where was the Altar of the burnt-offering, there God manifeſted his preſence by the cloudy pillar, which deſcended and ſtood at the door of the Tabernacle when God talked with Moſes, Exod.33.9. though he did moſt manifeſt his eſpecial preſence in the moſt ſecret part of the Tabernacle, Exod.30. 6. See on Chap.35. 22. & 40. 29,36. Exod.33.9. Chap.40.29, 36. Lev.16,2. & 9. 13,24.

ſpeak there unto thee] See Annot. on Chap.30.6.

V. 43. by my glory] Becauſe of my glorious preſence, whereby the Altar ſhall be declared holy; eſpecially when fire ſhall deſcend from heaven upon the ſacrifices, to conſume them, as Lev.9.24.

V. 44. ſanctifie the Tabernacle] I will ſhew (by evident tokens of my preſence) that I have made choice of them, for holy ſervices to my ſelf.

V. 45. " I will dwell among the children of Iſrael] God is every where, for he is excluded from no place, nor is he concluded in any place: yet is he preſent (in eſpecial manner) with grace and favour among his ſanctified ſervants; firſt they are ſaid to be ſanctified, ver. 44 and then they ſhall be dignified, and defended by his eſpecial preſence, Deut.23.14. afforded among them, " Lev.26, 12. 2 Cor.6.16.

that I may dwell among them] In my Tabernacle (which is my houſe, the place of mine eſpecial preſence) pitched among their Tents.

their God] Theirs by eſpecial covenant, and the manifold evidences of my favour towards them above all others.

CHAP. XXX.

Verſe 1. TO burn incenſe] Incenſe is made a type of prayers both in the Old Teſtament, as Pſalm 140.1,2. and in the New, as Rev.8.3 for incenſe is put up with fire, and prayers muſt be fervent in heart; incenſe is ſweet, ſo are prayers, eſpecially when they are preſented upon the golden Cenſer of our *S*aviour, ſee Pſa. 141. 2. Rev. 8. 3. Mat.3.11.

Shittim wood] See Annot. on Chap. 25.5.

V. 2. the hornes] Theſe were not for ſuch an uſe as thoſe of the greater Altar, chap.27.2. to bind the ſacrifice unto it, Pſal.118.27. but for conformity with it, and for ornament.

V. 3. " pure gold] God is worthy to be ſerved with the beſt, both for kind and degree; not only with gold the beſt of metal, but with the pureſt and moſt pretious of that kind; that is, ſuch as is pure without a counterfeit appearance, and pure without mixture of any other matter of meaner price: ſo for the holy oyl, he requires pure Myrrhe, v. 23. and pure Frankinſenſe, v. 34. Chap. 25. 11. Num.4. 11. & 28. 31. Rev. 8. 3.

the top] Heb. the roof, or covering, which was made gratewiſe, or like a net, in ſuch ſort, that the aſhes of the Frankincenſe, or of other ingredients put into the perfume, might paſſe through the Altar to the ground.

V. 4. a crown of gold] That is, a golden plate or border compaſſing the Altar round about like battlements, as that about the Ark; Exod.25.11.

V. 6. before the Mercy-ſeat] The Altar of Incenſe was not placed in the holy of holies, where the Mercy-ſeat ſtood, for thither came only the High-Prieſt, and that but once a year, Heb 9.7. but in the place next unto it (called the holy place, and ſeparated from it only by a Vaile) into which inferiour Prieſts went daily to burn incenſe, Luke 1. 8, 9. yet was this Altar of Incenſe ſet ſo neer the Vail, that it was alſo near the Mercy-ſeat, which was placed cloſe to the Vail on the other ſide.

where I will meet with thee] That is, before the Vail on the out-ſide; that is, next to the Sanctuary, or holy place: whereby, and by Chap. 29. 42. it appeareth that God did afford his preſence, and reveal his will, was to enterthe High-Prieſt in the holy of holies, (into which he not only tobut once a year), but elſe-where and at other times, as there was occaſion.

V. 7. Aaron ſhall burn] Not as an High-Prieſt; for this was the office of an inferior Prieſt, Luke 1.9. to which Aaron might in humility deſcend, but the inferior Prieſts might not preſumptuouſly aſcend to the execution of his peculiar office.

ſweet incenſe] Heb. incenſe of ſpices. By the Sacrifices, Chriſt is preſented as a ſatisfier for mans ſins; by incenſe, he is figured as an Interceſſour for ſinners, by mediation preſented to God on their behalf.

dreſſeth] Heb. maketh well.

V. 8. at even] Heb. between two evens. Of which, ſee the Expoſition on Exod. 12. verſe 6. for they did not burn daylight, as Papiſts generally do; and if they did burn alwayes, as it is ſaid, Exod.27.20. it was becauſe the Tabernacle wanted windows to let in light; with this ſervice of dreſſing and lighting the Lamps, were two other daily ſervices of the Prieſts, to wit, the offering of Incenſe, and of the daily ſacrifice.

V. 9. no ſtrange incenſe] Otherwiſe made, then according to the compoſition afterward preſcribed, v.34,35,36.

V. 10. once a year] The Altar of Incenſe was once a year, and that (on the day of expiation, Num. 29. 7. when the Prieſt went into the Sanctum Sanctorum) to be ſolemnly hallowed, and purged, becauſe of ſome errour or fault, at leaſt ceremonial, which might be committed in reference to it, and adminiſtration about it.

throughout your] That is, in the ſucceſſion of future times, until Chriſt, the ſubſtance of theſe Ceremonial ſhadows do appear.

V. 12. Their number] Heb. them that are to be numbred.

give a ranſom] Or, redemption: by way of acknowledgment, that his life is forfeited to God by ſinns, which is in Gods power to take away at his pleaſure; and that man holds it of meer courteſie from him. This is held by ſome to be a figure of the redemption of the ſoul by Chriſt, 1 Tim. 2. 6. And for want of this ranſome at the ſumming or numbring of the people (in Davids time) it is thought by Joſephus, Antiq. lib. 7. cap. 10. that he was cut ſhort of his number threeſcore and ten thouſand, 2 Sam. 24. forgetting the commandment of Moſes in this behalf; which was to be payed, partly as a tribute, whereby the Divine Soveraignty was acknowledged; and partly by building of the Tabernacle, which tribute might either continue for the repair and charge of the Tabernacle; or if intermitted, be renewed againe as accaſion did require, See 2 Chron. 24.6.

for his ſoul that] That is, for his life.

that there be no plague] That is, that by failing of ſo eaſie price for ſo great cauſe upon Gods command, he be not provoked to plague the people.

V. 13. half a ſhekel] Neh. 10.32. The rate is the third part of a ſhekel, but here is required more; becauſe the work is extraordiuary, more is required, even half a ſhekel of ſilver.

half a ſhekel of ſilver] That is, about fifteen pence, making the proportion according to our Coyn. See Annot. on Gen.23.16. The ſhekel of gold was of the ſame weight, but of far greater value, according to the pre-eminence of the one metal above the other. See after of the gerah, v. 13.

V. 13. after the ſhekel of the Sanctuary] That is, (as ſome take it) double to the common ſhekel; but it is more likely to be exactly ſo much, according to the Standard kept in the Sanctuary, a full ſhekel, no leſſe then the juſt weight of it. See on Gen. 23, 16. and on Mat.17.24.

Gerah] What that is, is eaſily known by the ſhekel, for it is the twentieth part of it; that is a three half pence: ſo that the ſhekel is two ſhillings ſix pence.

offering to the Lord] For the maintenance of the Tabernacle, and his ſervants and ſervices in it. See on v.16.

V. 14. from twenty years old] Becauſe ſuch were fit for imployment, both in war and peace, and commonly able (out of their gettings) to pay that proportion; neither women nor children came into the reckoning, becauſe they were ſorted to their parents, if in their minority, and the women accounted with their husbands, if they were married.

V. 15. the rich] The rich and poor in this particular, are both of one price, becauſe in ſpiritual things they are equal, and therefore their fare was alike at the Paſchal Supper; as under the Goſpel, he that at home hath moſt variety of diſhes, hath but the ſame proportion of Bread and Wine, with the pooreſt in the Supper of the Lord; for their ſoules are equal, and the price paid for their ranſom equal; and therefore was one rate appointed to both, that the rich might be the leſſe diſpoſed to deſpiſe the poor; and that the number of the people might be kept in memory, by the ſum of mony contributed by them: this contribution was annual, as ſome Jewiſh Hiſtories ſhew; but others conceive it was but occaſional, as there was cauſe to call the people unto it. See 2 Chron.24.9. Neh.10.32. Mat.17.24.

V. 16. for the ſervice] Which (in regard of the fabrick, furniture of the Sanctnary, and the Prieſts and Levites maintenance, who were to adminiſter in it,) was very coſtly.

memorial unto] That the people may be admoniſhed of the Lords favour, in remembrance of them, and of this readineſſe to uſe all beneficence to them, if they continue in obedience to him.

V.18 Laver] This Laver of braſs was placed betwixt the Sanctuary, and the Altar of burnt-ſacrifice, that the Prieſts might waſh themſelves with more privacy.

V.19 Shall waſh] When they went into the Tent of the Congregation, and when they came neer unto the Altar, they waſhed, Exod.40.12 Signifying, that he that cometh unto God, muſt be waſhed from all ſin and corruption, Iſa.52.11. Heb.10.22. Pſal.26.6. And in the ſame Laver, were the Prieſts to waſh the parts of the Sacrifice before they were burned, becauſe they were Types of the moſt clean and cleanſing ſacrifice Chriſt Jeſus.

and feet] Hence ſome collect that the Prieſts were barefoot, when they miniſtred in the Tabernacle, and becauſe (being the place of Gods peculiar preſence) it was holy ground. See Exod. 3.5.

there at] He ſaith not therein; for they waſhed with the water which flowed out at the cock or pipe of the Laver, as at a Ciſtern.

V.20. that they dye not] To diſobey God, though but in outward Ceremonies deſerveth death. See Exod.1.12. & ver.33. of this chap. & ver.38.

V.21. A ſtatute for ever] See Annot. on chap.12.14.

V.23 Principal Spices] For the compoſition of the holy Oyntment.

pure myrrhe] Heb. Myrrhe of liberty, That droppeth freely, that is the beſt that droppeth moſt freely; for that is the pureſt and freeſt from dregs. Myrrhe is a ſweet gumme, that iſſueth out of the Myrrhe tree, the fatter and moiſter part, and was uſed for the compoſition of this oyntment, highly praiſed and preferred before others, and none before it; thence is it ſo often mentioned in the Song of Solomon, as a figure of the fragrant graces, and ſweet and mutual acceptance betwixt Chriſt and his Church.

Cinnamon] A ſweet bark of a plant growing in Ethiopia, a low plant growing not above five cubits high above the ground.

Calamus] A kind of reed, uſed in powders and odours, it is very ſweet and giveth a very pleaſant ſcent afar off; it groweth in Arabia, India and Syria, Plin. Hiſt lib. 20. cap. 22. See alſo Theophraſt. hiſt. of plants, lib. 9 c. 7 & Dioſcorid. lib. 1. cap. 17.

V.24. Caſſia] Another kind of Reed or Cane, and very ſweet alſo, as the former, called alſo a Canel, it is a ſhrub growing to the height of three cubits, and of three colours: for when it cometh up firſt, for a foot from the root, it is white, then half a foot higher it waxeth red, but as it riſeth further, it is blackiſh; and this part is held the beſt, and ſo the next to it, is a degree lower, but the white is of no regard, and therefore they never cut the twigs or branches neer the root, the neweſt and freſheſt Caſſia is beſt and of moſt delicate ſmell. Plin. hiſt. lib. 12 cap. 19.

him] See Annot. on Chap. 29. 24

V.26. The Tabernacle] That is, all things which appertain unto the Tabernacle, thereby to ſet them apart for Gods ſervice.

V. 29. *That they may * be moſt holy*] This expreſſion in propriety of ſpeech, belongeth unto the Holy of Holies, and to the moſt holy things there placed; yet to keep off all from contempt of them, or profane uſurpation upon them, they are all ſometimes called moſt holy, becauſe appropriated to the moſt holy ſervice of the moſt holy God.
* Verſ.36.

Whatſoever toucheth] As ſome think, the word (whatſoever) is not to be taken really, but perſonally, for whoſoever; and ſo the meaning is, that none but a conſecrated perſon muſt touch the holy things of the Tabernacle: not that whoſoever, or whatſoever touched them, became thereby preſently hallowed, for it was a capital preſumption in Uzzah to touch the Ark, and he died for it, 2 Sam.6.6. And the Prophet Haggai ſheweth, that there may be a touching of unholy things by things holy, which yet may remain as unholy as before, Haggai 2. 12. Therefore the propoſition muſt be limited to the matter in hand; that is, to the ſervice of the Sanctuary: and ſo whatſoever is brought thither as an oblation, if it touch any of the hallowed things of the Tabernacle, being brought to be applyed to the ſervice of God, it becometh ſo appropriate thereto, that it cannot be imployed otherwiſe without profanation. See on chap. 29. 37.

V.21, Unto me] In the Hebrew Tongue, the words, unto me, are oft-times redundant, that is, ſo uſed, that the ſenſe is ſufficient and perfect without them; as if it were ſaid, it ſhall be holy; which may be meant with reſpect to the people, who were to account it an holy ointment, ſo as neither in the making nor application of it to profane it. Or, it might be ſaid to be holy unto God, becauſe it was ordained by God, with eſpecial reference to his ſervice in the Sanctuary.

V.32. Upon mans fleſh] This holy ointment was not to be applyed to any profane or civil uſe by any, but to be appropriate to the ſons of Aaron; and (as ſome think from chap.43.15. and Levit.4.3,5,16. and 16,32. and 21.20.) to the High Prieſt only, from Lev.21.10. And though Kings were annointed alſo, 1 King.19.15,16. yet it might be with other oyl, and not with this; and albeit Zadock the High-prieſt annointed Solomon, 1 King.1.39. yet might he uſe oyntment of another kind from this of the High-prieſts; or if he uſed this, as it is probable he did, that was done by eſpecial appointment of God, as an exceution from his general rule; and the exception is, as ſome make it, that this holy ointment was to be uſed onely, when there was a King choſen of a new ſtock or race, or upon ſome notable alteration in the ſucceſſion; for which they quote, Pſal 89.20. concerning Davids annointing, and 1 King.1.39. concerning Solomons. See on 1 Sam.10.1.

V.33. Any like unto it] The Lord requires piety with propriety, without counterfeiting or community. See Ezek.44.2.

upon a ſtranger] See Annot.on chap.29.33.

V.34. Stacte] The word in the Original ſignifieth a drop, ſome take it for Balm. Pliny ſaith, it is the pure drop or ſweat of the Myrtle trees, *Plin. lib.*12. *cap.*15. It is generally conceived to be a ſweet gum, hard enough to be beaten into powder, for ſo the making of the Perfume rerequired, ver.36.

Onycha] As moſt agree, is a ſweet kind of ſhel, white like unto a mans nayl, found in the Indian Lake, where ſhel fiſhes feed of Spikenard. Of this Onycha, ſee *Diaſcorid lib.*2.*cap.*8.

Galbanum] A Syrian Gum, as Diaſcorid. ſaith, *lib.*3.*cap.*81. This Galbanum, which is now in uſe with us, and frequent in Apothecaries ſhops, is a thing of no good or ſweet ſcent, and like of that kind, which (as Pliny writeth) by the ſtrength rather then by the ſweetneſs of it, recovereth them that are caſt down by the falling ſickneſſe, ſwoonings or trances, Plin. lib. 14 *cap.*5. It groweth much in the mountaine Amanus in Syria, *lib.*12.25. This was of another kind, or might be ſo tempered with the other ingredients, as to make a pleaſing perfume of it.

pure] That is, without dregs, or any corrupt adherence of any other thing. See on ver.3.

V.35. Holy] Preſcribed by God, and to be applyed by the Prieſts to an holy uſe; it is for incenſe and perfume to be ſent up to God in the Sanctuary.

V.36. Where I ſhall meet] See Annot.on ver.6.

V.37. Unto thee] That is, thou ſhalt ſo both eſteem it, and apply it.

holy for the Lord] Onely dedicate to the uſe of the Lords Tabernacle.

V.38. Cut off] If he offend in contempt of the Lords holy Ordinance, his cutting off may be by divine Judgment, a cutting off by a doubled death both of the body and ſoul, if repentance prevent not. See Annot. on v.20.

CHAP. XXXI.

Ver.2. C*alled by name, Bezaleel*] The Iſraelites in Egypt, were not bred and brought up in any ingenuous Arts, but in baſe drudgery like ſlaves; they were therefore much unfit to take in hand ſo curious a piece of work as the Tabernacle, and the appurtenances to it. But that defect is recompenced with great advantage, by divine inſpiration, whereby Bezaleel and Aholiab were endowed with wiſdom to deviſe and act with dexterity to make moſt curious work.

of Hur] This Hur it is like was the ſame who is mentioned, Chap.17.14. and 24.14. the ſon of Caleb, the ſon of Hezron, 1 Chr. 2.18. There was another Caleb, the ſon of Jephunneh, who with Joſhua, was one of the faithful Searchers and reporters of the Land of Canaan, and encouraged the people to attempt the conqueſt of it; when the other Spies had diſcouraged them with report of terrible untruths, both concerning the Land it ſelf, and the Inhabitants, Num.13 6. & 14.6.

V.3. Spirit of God] God ſpeaks of himſelf, both in the firſt and third perſon, and it is, as if he had ſaid, with my Spirit.

Workmanſhip] Not only that knowledg which is Divine is from God, but that which is humane, even the skil of Husbandry alſo, Iſai.28.26 And though Handy-crafts be acquired by natural underſtanding, and voluntary induſtry, yet they may be infuſed by God, and improved by him to a miraculous proficiency, and therefore Gods bleſſing in ſuch things is to be intreated before hand, and thankfully acknowledged afterwards.

V.6. * Wiſe hearted] Such as had endowments in an inferiour degree to thoſe of Bezaleel and Aholiab, (who were to theſe Maſter-workmen) to be their miniſterial Aſſiſtants. * Chap.35.10. & chap. 36.1.

V.7. Furniture] Heb. Veſſels.

V.8. Pure Candleſticks] Made of pure gold, beaten out of one piece, and curiouſly kept by the care of the Prieſts.

V.10. And the cloaths of ſervice] The ſons of Cohath were to carry the holy Utenſils or Furniture of the Tabernacle, when it was removed, but they might not touch them upon pain of death, until Aaron and his ſons had covered them with cloaths made for that purpoſe, Num. 4.12,15.

V.13. Verily my Sabbaths] Or, notwithſtanding, as the Geneva hath it: or, neverthéleſſe, as others read. Though theſe works may appertaine to the ſolemnity of my ſervice, and I would not have them put off, yet I will not require ſuch haſte in them, as to ſuffer my Sabbaths to be violated for them.

for it is a ſign] Becauſe by the ſolemn obſervation of the Sabbath, as ſanctified by God for an holy and thankful memorial of the creation; they profeſſed themſelves Gods people in an eſpecial manner, though the reaſon were general, and concerned all men as much as them, and God in calling them to an holy communion with him in the celebration of the Sabbath; (whereby as they glorifie him, ſo he ſanctifieth them;) it will not follow, as ſome thence infer, that the Sabbath is a mutable Ceremony, becauſe it is called a ſign, for ſo is the Rainbow, which yet ſhall laſt to the worlds end, as a ſign or token of Gods Covenant, not to deſtroy the world as he did before; nor is the Sabbath now aboliſhed, becauſe it was made with the Jewes in the Old Teſtament: for the reaſon reacheth alſo unto Chriſtians, for he is the Lord that ſanctifieth them, as well as the Jewes, and we are to remember his creation of the world and reſt, as much as they, which he urgeth, ver.17. And if it be taken for a diſtinctive ſigne, ſo is the holy obſervation of the Sabbath unto Chriſtians, whereby they are manifeſtly diſcerned from the profane, who for the moſt part are careleſſe of the Sabbath.

that doth ſanctifie you] That is, conſecrate you unto my ſelfe, for my holy ſervice and worſhip, and give you grace to hallow my Sabbaths, and to walk in holineſſe of life, for example and imitation unto others.

V.14. Keep the Sabbath] God ſo preſſeth the obſervation of the Sabbath in this Chapter, and elſewhere, (as Exod.20.8. Deut.5.12. Iſai.58.13,14. Jer.17.21,22. Ezek.20.12.) becauſe the Sabbath is to the reſt of the Commandments, (as the borders about Mount Sinai) to preſerve them from violation, for whoſoever maketh a conſcience to keep the Sabbath, will make a conſcience of the reſt: and accordingly on the contrary mens breaking out into manifold tranſgreſſions of the Law, are called and complained of by the name of violation or profanation of the Sabbath, ver.14. which ſometimes was puniſhed with death by the Magiſtrate, Num.15. or (if the Magiſtrate neglect his duty) by divine juſtice. See on Numb.15.34.

V.16. Perpetual Covenant] For the work of Creation muſt be kept in mind by a holy memorial, even to the worlds diſſolution, and in every age, God muſt have an holy tribute of time for his ſolemn ſervice, and that in the proportion of one to ſix: and this is of great uſe, not only for Gods glory, but for mans ſalvation.

reſted] From creating any more kinds of Creatures; but for individual ſouls he createth them ſtill, and in works of preſervation his providence ſtill worketh, Joh.5.17.

refreſhed] Not that God was weary by his work, though in a figurative ſenſe he ſometimes aſſumes a wearineſſe unto himſelf; as Iſai. 43.24. but that we might be more apprehenſive of his reſt, for our imitation; the phraſe is fitted to our condition, as many others of like kind; ſo in the next verſe, God is ſaid to have a finger, whereas indeed, he is a ſpirit, and hath neither humane parts nor paſſions. See Annot.on Gen.6.6. and Annot. 2. on the 18 verſe of this Chapter.

V.18. Teſtimony] The Tables of the Law, whereby he declared his will to his people. See Annot.on Exod.16.34.

* Tables of ſtone] * Deut.9.10. They were in probability like the cover of a Book, to open and ſhut: and on the one ſide were engraven the four Commandments, containing mans duty to God (commonly called the firſt Table.) And in the other, the ſix Commandments of mans duty to his Neighbour, called alſo commonly the ſecond Table. See on chap.32.15. The Tables were of ſtone, betokening the hardneſs of mans heart, whether from the Original, they were to be tranſcribed, to make impreſſion in ſuch hard matter, as would require a pen of iron, Job 19.24. and withal to note the durableneſſe of that Law, which was therein engraven. And it is like alſo the firſt Tables were Gods owne work both for matter and form; for the ſtony Tables were of his making and the words in them of his own engraving, Chap.32.16. Deut.4.13 & 9.10. And when Moſes in a pang of zealous indignation againſt the peoples idolatry had thrown them down and broken them, Chap.32.19. he was commanded after that to make up the breach, by hewing two Tables of ſtone like unto the firſt; yet the Lord himſelf was the Scribe, and made the writing as at the firſt, and graved on the Tables the ſame words, Exod.34.1. Deut.13.2. But it ſeemeth, Exod.34.27. that Moſes wrote, for there the Lord ſaith unto him, Write thou theſe words, for after the tenour of theſe words, I have made a Covenant with thee, and with Iſrael. And in the next verſe, the words are, And he was there with the LORD (forty dayes and forty nights, he did neither eat bread, nor drink water) and he wrote upon the Tables the words of the Covenant, the ten Commandments. Anſw. Firſt, it is plain (by ſundry fore-cited places) that the Lord (and not Moſes wrote on the Tables, both thoſe of the firſt and ſecond making. Secondly, for this place (it being ſomewhat obſcure) it is to be expounded by ſuch as are clear, even thoſe forecited, and ſo taking that clauſe of Moſes his faſting by way of parentheſis, the word, He, may be referred to the Lord, not to Moſes. Thirdly, for Moſes his writing it is not to be limited to the ten Commandments, on the Tables of ſtone; but to be extended to the whole Law, whereof he was to have a written Copy, for the better information both of the Prieſts and people, Deut.4.14. For thoſe Tables of ſtone were laid up in the Ark by Gods eſpecial appointment, Deut.10.2. and the ark was in the Holy of Holies, where neither the inferiour Prieſts, nor the people might come: therefore it was neceſſary there ſhould be written Copies for more general inſtruction; and that it was ſo, is plain by the ſeventeenth of Deuteronomy, where the King is commanded to write him a Copy of the Law in a Book out of that which is before the Prieſts and Levites, Deut.17.18. The Prieſts and Levites then had a Copy, and that Copy was according to the writing, by God commanded to Moſes, Chap 34.27.

finger of God] That is, by the power or Spirit of God, as appeareth Matth.12.28. Luke 11.10. compared: for (in a literal ſenſe) God hath neither finger, nor hand, nor fleſh, nor blood, as we have, but he is a pure Spirit, without any parts or compoſition at all. But the Holy Ghoſt in ſuch expreſſions aſcribing unto God a finger and other parts; as alſo anger and hate, and repentance, refreſhing, and other humane affections and paſſions, therein cometh downe to mans carnal capacity, for his better inſtruction, who otherwiſe would not be apprehenſive enough of what he would have imparted to man; which (for this particular) is that this writing was made without any humane miniſtry, and by an operation merely divine.

CHAP. XXXII.

Ver.1. DElayed to come down] *S*taying with God in the Mount forty dayes and forty nights, chap.34.28.

unto Aaron] Or, Againſt Aaron.

Up, make us] Act.7.40. Their ſpeech is as abſurd as impious; for how could they be gods, that were of mans making? how comparable to that God, who (by the Miniſtry of Moſes) had miraculouſly brought them out of the houſe of bondage? if they had not lived too long among groſſe Idolaters, and learned, and liked ſomewhat of their Idolatrous Diſcipline, they could never have been ſo groſs in their underſtandings, ſo ungrateful to God and Moſes, as to take this occaſion to renounce them both; eſpecially Moſes remaining in that Mount, from whence they had heard the Law againſt Idolatry, as well as againſt other ſins, ſo dreadfully ſet forth, Exod.19.16. & Chap.20.18,19. but this ſheweth mans proneneſſe to Idolatry, and the great danger in converſing with Idolaters.

gods] Gods for God, for one being made, they deſired no more; whereby they meant ſome viſible repreſentation of God to be carried before them; for it is too mad a conceit to think that the figure of a Calfe was that God that brought them out of the Land of Egypt; yet ſuch a madneſſe might be a part of Gods curſe upon ſome of them, for ſuch a ſin as we find, Job 24.13. viz. Rebelling againſt the light, whereby they might become vain in their imaginations, having their fooliſh heart darkned, Rom.1.21. and profeſſing themſelves to be wiſe, they might not only become fooliſh, (as the Apoſtle ſaith in the next verſe) but meer mad men: for to ſuch Idolaters as theſe belongeth that of the Prophet, they are mad upon their Idols, Jer.50.38.

go before us] They had the pillar of the cloud, but becauſe Moſes being in the Mount, it ſtood ſtill, they would have a ſtirring God that might preſently lead them onward whither they would go.

as for this Moſes] After ſo many miracles wrought by the miniſtry of Moſes, they ſpake of him thus with contempt, whom (on this ſide Idolatry) they could not reverence too much.

what is become of him] How neceſſary is it that ſuch as have the charge of people, ſhould attend on their charge: when upon a little abſence the people take occaſion to commit ſo great a ſin? yet he had warrant for his abſence, though that were no warrant for ſo groſſe a wickedneſſe.

V.2. The golden ear-rings] Aaron had ſome cauſe to hope that they did not ſo dote upon an Idol, as to buy it at ſo dear a price, as their precious Jewels, to mar them for the making of it.

V.3. * Break off the golden] If he thought ſo well of them, his charity was greater then their goodneſs, for they gave many both ear and eye witneſſes of their witleſſe fancies, and wicked wills, to ſet up Idolatry what ever it coſt them; wherein they ſhewed not only their fondneſſe to the Idol, but their ungratitude to God, for by his favour they were furniſhed with thoſe jewels, Exod.3.21,22. which now they turn to his great diſhonour. See on Gen.38.18. ſee Ezek.16.17. Gen.35.4. Judg. 8.24.

V.4. Molten calf] Pſal.106.19. The Egyptians were great Merchants of Idolatry, from whom the Iſraelites retailed in that ungodly trade; for they ſet up a Calf, while the Egyptians worſhipped Kine and Oxen. See 1 King.12.28 Ezek.20.7. & 23.8. It is not unlike but there paſſed more words betwixt Aaron and the people, before it came to the making of this Idol; and that they themſelves made choice of it, (though we find it not expreſt) elſe Aaron (doubtleſs) would rather have ſet before them a Cherub or Cherubims, then a Calfe, though ſome Papiſts, as Franciſcus Moncæus fondly ſaith, the figure of the Cherubims was after the figure of a Calf. See on Ezek. 10.14.

theſe be thy gods] It was but one, and ſo it is named, Neh.9.18. yet called Gods, (in the plural number) as God himſelf is ſometimes pleaſed to be called, (though he be but one) as Gen.20.13. & 35.7. eſpecially, Joſh.24.19. where it is ſaid, he is an holy God: the words for God and holy, are both of the plural uumber.

which brought thee] By this it appeareth that ſome of them (at leaſt) did mean to worſhip the true God in this falſe manner, though the groſſer ſort (like the blind Egyptians) might haply commit down-right Idolatry to the ſenſeleſſe Idol.

V.5. When Aaron ſaw] When Aaron ſaw their minds were ſo madly ſet upon this Idol; he fearing their fury went on according to their wilful wickedneſs, ver.22. built an Altar, &c. an Altar] If the Calf betoken a God, it muſt have an Altar for ſacrifice, and a ſet time for ſolemn ſervice.

to morrow] Sooner it could not be, with warning to the people before hand; this haſte was from their furious zeal, elſe it is like Aaron would have uſed delayes, that Moſes might have come to prevent further miſchief.

to the Lord] Or, For the Lord. The people uſed the word Elohim, when they called upon Aaron to make them gods, ver.1. (which is applyed not only to God, but to others beſides him) but Aaron uſeth the Name Jehovah, (which is peculiar to the true God) it may be to divert them from the work of mans hands, to the Maker of man, God himſelf.

V.6. Sate down to eat] Making a Feaſt as part of the Peace-offering offered up to the brutiſh Idol by ſottiſh Idolaters. 1 Cor. 10.7.

roſe up to play] Making merry by ſinging, ver.18. and by dancing, ver.19.

V.7. * Get thee down] * Deut.9.12.

thy people] Chap.34.10. Thine now, rather then mine, ſince they have ſo preſumptuouſly and impiouſly ſinned againſt me; yet they were Moſes people, as their Succeſſors were Queen Eſthers people, Eſth.7.4. by cognation with him, and ſubordination to him. See Dan.9.24. by this appropriation he is put in mind to make haſte to them, Deut.9.12. and to do his beſt to make them apprehenſive of their high contempt of God, and penitent for it.

V.8. Turned aſide quickly] For it was not long before this; that they promiſed their obedience to all Gods commands; among which one was againſt worſhipping of Images. See Exod.19.8. & Chap. 24.7. whereby we ſee what neceſſity we have to pray earneſtly to God, to keep us in his true obedience, and to ſend us good guides to that purpoſe.

V.9. * I have ſeen] * Deut.9.13.

V.10. Let me alone] God ſheweth that the prayers of the godly ſtay his puniſhment; not by the prevailing of humane force above divine; but by condeſcending of divine grace to the deſires of the godly. See Gen. 32.26. Deut.9.14. Jam.5.16.

* a great nation] Num.14.12. That is, a multiplied off-ſpring ſhal deſcend from thy loynes: for though God deſtroy a multitude of wicked perſons, he can raiſe out of one ſurviving Saint, a Nation and Church unto himſelf; yea, of ſtones, children unto Abraham, Mat.3.9 * Deut.9.14.

V.11. * Moſes beſought the Lord] Heb. the face of the Lord. * Pſal. 106.23.

why doth thy wrath] Moſes knew cauſe enough why God ſhould be wroth with them, but he uſeth the form of a queſtion, to put an emphaſis upon his petition; for ſo it is in effect, whatſoever be the form; ſuch pathetical enforcements are uſed ſometimes by the godly, as Gen.18.23, 24,25. ſometimes by the wicked, as Matth.8.29. compared with Luke 8.28.

V.12. * Wherefore ſhould] * Num.14.13.

* repent] * Ver.14. See Annot. on Gen.6.6.

V.13. * Remember Abraham] * That is, thy promiſe made to Abraham, Deut.9.27. See on Gen.8.1.

V.14. Repented him] That is, without any change of his will, he ſheweth a will to change his commination of ruine of the people, to a gracious acceptation of Moſes his prayer; as men when they repent, make a change of their words and actions: this ſheweth, how much a whole Nation may be beholding to one of Gods Favourites, and how much they are bound to make much of ſuch.

V.15. On both their ſides] The Tables (though of ſtone) were no bigger or heavier then Moſes could carry in his hands, and the Commandments were graven (as ſome conceive) on the inſide only, See on Chap.31.18. Others think they were on both ſides, ſo that each part (both being like a pair of Tables) had (as it is probable) their part of the Law written twice over, that is, the firſt Table had the four firſt Commandments written on each ſide, and the ſecond Table had the ſix laſt written twice over, once on the one ſide, and again on the other, in as large and fair a character to be read, as the ſpace would bear; like the Book of woes, Ezek.2.10.

V.16. Writing of God] Gods intereſt in theſe Tables is often mentioned, to note how far he was pleaſed to be employed and ingaged in the Covenant with the people, which aggravates their ſin who brake the Covenant; eſpecially by ſuch a wilful and witleſſe Idolatry, as that of the Golden Calf, which is, as if the wife of a moſt wiſe and glorious King, ſhould proſtitute her ſelf to ſome baſe worthleſs fellow, and deſpicable varlet.

V.17. A noiſe of war] By this it is evident, that Joſhua was neither a party in this Idolatrous conſpiracy, nor privy to the information that Moſes had in the mount; while this miſchief was put in practice, he was abſent from the people as Moſes was, but not preſent with God in ſuch neerneſſe as he, nor admitted within the cloud, where Moſes had a more immediate communion with God. See on Chap.24.18.

V.19. The Calfe] That is, the Image of the Calfe, for the ſigne is often uſed for the thing ſignified. *S*ee Annot. on Gen. 41.26.

and brake them] Wherein ſome wholly defend the act, as being by Gods inſtinct to ſignifie the breach of Covenant betwixt him and the people, and it may be ſo; becauſe he reports it as an act rather of deliberation, then of paſſion, Deut 9.16,17. and becauſe he is no where condemned for it, as for a fault, and is commended for the meekeſt man, that was upon the face of the earth, Num.12.3. yet as (when his ſpirit was provoked) he ſpake unadviſedly with his lips, Pſa.106.33. ſo being tranſported with zeal (though for Gods glory) he might do unadviſedly with his hands, and ſo he may be an example of mans imperfect ſanctity, and a proof that there is a mixture of divine grace, and humane weakneſs even in the beſt.

V.20. Ground it to powder] Gold may by Art, (as ſome have ſaid upon their own experience) be turned into powder; howſoever the faſhion being marred by melting, and made a groſſe lump, it was not uneaſie to file, or grate, or grind it to powder; or being melted, it might run thin, and become more brittle, and ſo made the eaſier to be turned into duſt, as Deut.9.21.

ſtrewed it upon the water] Which came from mount Sinai, and ran by the Camps of the Iſraelites: whether he ſtrewed it upon the water, all at once, or by parts gave to each a ſeveral portion, is not here ſet down, but Deut.9.21. it is plain that he caſt the duſt of it into the Brook.

made the children of Iſrael drink of it] It is not ſaid, drink of the Idol, for the words, of it, are in the Tranſlation, not in the Hebrew; ſo the drinking may be meant of the water, not of the metal whereof the Idol was made, whereby they might be admoniſhed of the baſeneſſe and weakneſſe of their Idolatry: ſince the water, though weak, had overcome and overwhelmed their upſtart Idol, and they could devour the water. This was a liquid and clear proof, how fooliſh the people were in making of ſuch a God, as could not defend himſelf from fire, nor file nor water, and which by taking it in a draught, might come forth as an excrement, whereby they might have it in more deteſtation and contempt. See on *Gen.*9.3. and the people were ſtiff-necked, ver. 9. yet the Lord doubtleſs caſt a terror upon them, and ſo over-awed them by Moſes, who had over-awed Aaron before, that they durſt not reſiſt, nor refuſe what Moſes offered: as when the Levites ſet upon the reſt of the people, and made a great ſlaughter among them, ver.27,28. (though they were many for one) for they were numbred up to ſix hundred thouſand fighting men.

V.21. What did] See Annot.on Gen.20.9.

V.22. * Set on miſchief] With ſuch an heavy violence, that I being but one, againſt ſo many, could make no reſiſtance, with ſucceſs to the cauſe, or ſafety to my perſon. * Pſal. 36.4. Prov. 4.16.

V.24. There came out this Calf] Aaron caſting the jewels into the fire might eaſily mar them, but without more ado then ſo, he could not make a Calf out of them; but that was done (ſay ſome Jewiſh Writers) by Art Magick, which might be beſides the intention of Aaron: but the Text is plain, ver.4. that Aaron was faulty in giving form to that matter, both by caſting it, or cauſing it, or at leaſt permitting it to be caſt into a mould, and to be poliſhed afterwards with a graving Tool, though being not a little daunted with the zealous and couragious indignation of Moſes, he was afraid to acknowledg his offence to the full; and therefore (by way of extenuation) he telleth Moſes, he caſt the materials into the fire, and that out of it came the Calf, as if it had been a matter rather of chance then of choice; which was ſo far not only from truth, but from probability alſo, that if extremity of paſſion had not eclipſed his reaſon, he would rather have freely confeſſed his fault, then have pleaded for himſelf, by ſuch a frivolous excuſe; in which, as in the precedent act, we may perceive, that the worthieſt and beſt high Prieſt (that is but a man) may erre both in his own practice, and his propoſals to the people in general. See the like excuſes, Gen.3.12. 1 Sam. 15.15.

V.25. Naked] As without armes, being now out of Gods protection, who before was to them as complete Armour, but now they were as naked and unarmed men among their enemies. See Numb. 14. 9. Iſai.22.8. Prov.29.18. Or their iniquity was diſcovered, as the deformity of a naked man, who wanted cloaths to cover it; their ſin being known to their open ſhame, Mic.1.11. or they were naked, as ſtript of the chief ornament of their ſouls, that is, innocency; as of the ornament of their bodies, their earings, and naked, as now laid bare for the laſh of divine judgment. * Gen.42.9. 2 Chron.28.19.

ſhame] Idolatry is a ſin that cauſeth ſhame which is ſtrongly ſignified by the Hebrew phraſe, calling Idols by the name of dung, which ſhould make us renounce them with extreme contempt and deteſtation. See Deut.7.25,26.

V.26. Who is on the Lords ſide] By this he meaneth to diſtinguiſh thoſe who were not guilty of the Idolatry, from thoſe that were: (for all were not partakers of that abominable ſin, 1 Cor.10.7. and of thoſe that were all were not guilty in the ſame degree) that they might neither be ſlaine, which were innocent, nor that any ſuch ſhould ſide with, or aſſiſt the guilty againſt the execution intended; but rather ſeparate from them. See 2 Kin.10.23.

all the ſons of Levi] It is probable that Aaron (the High-prieſt) being a ſon of Levi, had other Levites to joyn with him in ſetting up the golden Calf, on whom theſe Levites, (who came together upon Moſes Proclamation) did execution, ver.29. But it is ſaid, all the ſons, &c. becauſe the moſt of them were clear from the ſin, and zealous to puniſh it, and for that all the zealots who aſſembled for this ſervice, were Levites.

V.27. Slay every man his] Moſes was a chief Magiſtrate, and General of this great Army; and ſo he had great power to puniſh hainous crimes with death: yet as in other extraordinary caſes (Gen.49.7. Deut: 33.9.) God turned the curſe into a bleſſing. And though Moſes prevailed for a reprieve of the people in general, yet ſome who were the forwardeſt in that wicked work, (for prevention of like impiety in future time) were to be made examples of terror and caution to the reſt. In this execution of the Levites, ſetting themſelves in ſuch an hoſtile oppoſition to all the offendors of every Tribe, (they being ſo many in number) there was an evidence of Gods over-awing power, and of the timerous guilt of ſin, that they did not take up Armes againſt them for their own defence. By ſuch a divine vigour were the people over-awed by our Saviour when he whipped the buyers and ſellers out of the Temple, Joh. 2. 15, 16. See on ver.20.

V.29. Conſecrate] To have bloody hands, (in the cauſe and quarrel of God) by good warrant from him, is no defiling, but the hallowing or conſecration of the perſon who executes his vengeance. The word in Hebrew ſignifieth fill the hands, (for ſo it was at the conſecration of the Prieſts) which in this place imports as much acceptation with God, as the conſecration of the Prieſts for the ſervice of the Tabernacle.

every man upon his ſon, &c.] In revenging indignity and diſhonour to God, we muſt have no reſpect of man, of how neer relation ſoever: our zeal for him muſt eat up all carnal affection to our neereſt kindred, Deut.13.6,9. and Chap.33.9.

V.30. * Peradventure I ſhall] Though Moſes were a moſt gracious favorite of God, he would not take much upon him, in this Mediation: his humility towards God, and prudence towards men (who might have been leſſe fearful to offend, if Moſes had been more confident of pardon) moved him thus ſparingly to ſpeak; and indeed he might have cauſe to doubt of prevailing ſo far, as he deſired, on their behalf, and as the event ſheweth he did. See Joſ.14.12. 1 Sam.14.6. * 2 Sam.16.12. Am.5.15 Joel 2.14.

† an atonement] Zealous execution againſt hainous offenders, is a good means of atonement betwixt God and man; and by this atonement he meaneth the ſtaying of puniſhment; that God being ſatisfied with the ſacrifice of the offenders, might forbear to bring any further plague upon the people for that offence † Num.25.48.

V.32. If thou wilt forgive] The words are paſſionately, or modeſtly ſuſpended: the ſenſe may be made up thus, If thou wilt forgive, thy mercy ſhall appear to us, and we ſhall be thankful to thee for it.

blot me] That is, rather then thou ſhouldſt be diſhonoured and blaſphemed by thine enemies, for deſtroying thy people, as ver.12. I could wiſh my name blotted out of the Book of life, that is, rather loſe my part in the life of a better world: at leaſt be cut off out of this by ſudden death; wherein he preferreth Gods glory before his own ſafety, not wiſhing thereby the whole Doſe of damnatian (which conſiſteth not only of eternal ſeparation from, but of eternal hatred and blaſphemy againſt him) or his great zeal might have ſome mixture of corrupt paſſion in it, which might cauſe him to ſpeak unadviſedly with his lips, Pſal.106.33. See the like wiſh Rom.9.3.

V.33. Book] By Book is here ment no literal Record or Writing, but a figurative conformity to the writing or recording ones name in a Book (as many are) in favour, for honour or ſervice: and this may be underſtood of a temporal or eternal favour, either with limitation to this life, as that Moſes deſired rather not to live, then that all the people ſhould dye that were involved in this ſin: or with extent to the future; ſo he had rather loſe his intereſt in divine glory, then God ſhould be blaſphemed on this occaſion: both, or either of theſe he might mean, by blotting out of Gods Book, which phraſe we may underſtand by that we read, Luke 10.20. where thoſe who are dearly beloved are ſaid to have their names written in heaven, and Dan. 12. 1. to be written in Gods Book, which is called the Book of life, Phil.4.3. Rev.22.19. on the contrary, thoſe he hateth are ſaid not to be written there, Rev.13.8. or to be blotted out thence, as in the ſame place, Pſal.69.28. Rev.3.5. Deut. 29.20.

V.34. In the day when I viſit, I will viſit] That is, if they provoke me again to juſtice againſt them, I will remember this their iniquity againſt me.

V.35. † The Lord plagued] This is conceived by ſome, to be but a repetition of the plague, by the ſlaughter of the Levites, upon the people before mentioned: but it is more probable, that God afterwards (upon ſome new provocation) laid ſome plague upon them with remembrance of this idolatrous tranſgreſſion. † Ver.28.

they made the Calf] Which Aaron made; the chief offenders are they, who move and urge the doing of evil, as the people did the making of the golden Calf, not they who (for fear of danger) yeild unto it, as Aaron did.

CHAP. XXXIII.

Ver.1. UP hence] Not from the place where Moſes was with God: for Canaan was not up, or on high in reſpect of that; but it is meant of the place where Moſes and the people were together before, and where they were to meet again, when he came down from the Mount and he and they are thence bidden to go up, becauſe the Land of Canaan was encompaſſed with hills, ſo they that entered into it, muſt paſſe up by the hils.

* unto thy ſeed] * Gen.12.7.

V.2. † An Angel] Notwithſtanding their provocation of him, he will continue unto them a conducting Angel, with the pillar of fire, and cloud, though he with-draw ſome evidences of his former favour to them. † Chap.23.23. & 32.34. Deut.7.21. Joſh.24.11. This Angel ſome conceive to be a created Angel, and if ſo, they are degraded from the dignity they had before when the Son of God was their Angel-conducter, Chap.23.&c. & 32.34.

Canaanite] See the third Annot.on Gen.13.7.

V.3. Floweth] See Annot.on Exod.3.8.

I will not go] That is, I will not in ſuch familiar manner, nor with ſuch eſpecial evidences of grace and glory, ſhew my ſelfe thy Patron and Protector, as I have done; meaning this rather in reſpect of the people then of Moſes; for he was offended with them, not with him; and from this diſpleaſure, it may be, proceeded the placing of the Tabernacle, not in the midſt of the Tribes as before, but without the Camp, v.7. which before was pitched in the midſt.

† ſtiff-necked] That will not willingly bend or yeeld the neck to any yoak. † Chap 32.9. Deut.9.13.

leſt I conſume thee] For if I ſhould be as gracious unto thee, as I have been, and thou prove as ſtiff-necked as thou haſt done, I ſhould be provoked to conſume thee, for offences are aggravated by precedent favors, as Amos 3.13,14.

V.4. No man did put on] Such as they had from the Egyptians, or took in ſpoyl from the Amalekites, or any other that might ſerve to ſet them out in a glorious and cheerful manner, being ſad and deſerted for the heavy tydings they had heard from God. See ver 5.

V.5. into the midſt of] God threatens them, ver. 3. that he will not go up in the midſt of the people; here he threatens, I will come up into the midſt of thee: by the former, he denyeth his gracious preſence (in the Tabernacle, which was placed in the midſt of the Tents) for which Moſes intreateth the Lord, ver.13. and after the worſhipping of the golden Calf, removed quite out of the Camp, ver. 7. but here he threatneth, that he will come among them with a vengeance, and ſuddenly conſume them if their repentance prevent not their perdition.

and conſume thee] This Commination is propoſed, not as a peremptory denunciation of vengeance, but with an implicite condition of pardon to the penitent, and ſo it is ſet down as a motive and preparation to repentance; and if ſo it prevail, it may be a meanes of their preſervation; if not, they muſt expect this commination to take effect.

Put off thine ornaments] It is not fit that men ſhould pleaſe themſelvs in outward pomp and adorning of their bodies, when God ſheweth himſelf diſpleaſed with them. See ver.4,6. 2 Sam.12.20. & 19.24. Dan. 10.3. Joel 1.13.

that I may know] That either I may ſhew mercy if thou repent, or elſe puniſh, if thou perſiſt in thy ſin, and that I may proportion my dealing with thee, thereafter as thou ſheweſt thy ſelf to deſerve at my hands.

V.7. the Tabernacle] Not that whoſe deſcription is ſet down, Chap. 26. for that was not yet made, Chap.35.& 40. but ſome principal Tent, whether Moſes his own or what elſe, is not ſet down: ſee on ver.3. which might ſerve either for exerciſe of Religion, or for meetings for Civil matters.

of the Congregation] So called, becauſe the people gathered together, or aſſembled at the Tebernacle, the place of publick worſhip, and of oraculous direction, Or at leaſt came out, and ſtood at the door of their Tents, ver.8,10. looking toward the Tabernacle (covered with the cloud) whither Moſes went to mediate betwixt the Lord and his people.

V.8. Roſe up, and ſtood] The people were much affected with Moſes meſſage which he brought from God, which drew their eyes after him, and the more becauſe of the Tabernacles removal from the former to another place, but moſt of all, becauſe of the coming down of the cloudy pillar, and Gods communing with Moſes at the doore of the Tabernacle, they the while ſtanding at their own Tent doors, as unworthy to make any nearer approaches towards the place where God and Moſes met together.

V.11. † Face to face] Not that God hath a face, or any ſuch parts as man hath, as hath been noted on Chap.31. ver.laſt; nor that Moſes could have a view of the eſſence of God, which is inviſible, but that he was pleaſed to ſpeak to him more familiarly, and more plainly, then with others, and as one man ſhould ſpeak with another face to face, or mouth to mouth, Num.12.8. Or beſides other more uſual apparitions, as of the cloud and pillar of fire, he might confer with him in humane ſhape, as he did with Abraham, Gen. 18. † Gen.32.30. Deut. 34.10.

a young man] He is thought to have been at this time about forty ſix yeers of age, or (as ſome reckon) fifty, and ſuch in thoſe dayes were called young men, youth, ſometimes boyes, (as ſome render the word) by ſuch as were much their ancients, eſpecially if as yet they had no wives, (as Joſhua had not) and becauſe the younger ſort did uſually wait upon the elder, therefore waiters, young or old, were called by the name of young men or boyes; as becauſe Eunuchs were Court officers, Court officers were called Eunuchs, though they were perfect men. Gen. 37.36. See Joh. 21.5.

departed not] As being keeper of the Tabernacle in Moſes his abſence, and exerciſed there as his devotion and condition did require.

V.12. Send with me] God had ſaid, ver.2. he would ſend an Angel or Meſſenger before: here Moſes is inquiſitive, who he was and ſeemes to be troubled that God had not yet revealed it unto him; eſpecially ſince God took ſuch particular notice of him, and profeſſed peculiar favour to him; and ſince the cloudy pillar did not now guide them, nor God appear in the midſt of them as formerly he had done.

by name] In the Scripture phraſe Gods favour to men is expreſſed by knowing of them, and their names, as Pſal.1.6. Jer.1.5. Rom. 8.29. as on the contrary his diſpleaſure is ſignified by not knowing them, as Matth.7.23. And knowing by name, implyeth more acquaintance then knowing by ſight: for many know others by face, whoſe name they know not, or cannot readily call to mind: and it is yet a further note of Gods favour to Moſes, that he was pleaſed to take eſpecial notice of his name; and in his name to keep a memorandum of his tender care and compaſſion of Moſes, in his deliverance from drowning, when he cauſed him be drawne out of the water, which his name Moſes ſignifieth.

V.13. Thy way that] Now God had altered his courſe in the guidance of his people, he deſires to know what way, or in what manner he meant to deal with him and the people; he prayeth that God would graciouſly conduct them, as he had done, and that he might know he did ſo, by ſome undoubted evidence that he was preſent with him, and that he would ſhew himſelf propitious to him, and to the people committed to his conduct.

that I may know thee] That I may experimentally prove how good thou art to thy people, who diligently ſeek after thee, and deſire ſincerely to ſerve thee.

grace in thy ſight] Theſe words are twice repeated in this verſe, beſides once more at the 16 verſe: firſt as an inducement to Gods further direction of Moſes in the guidance of his people: ſecondly, as an effect of that favour, whereby it may appear he was accepted with God, and gracious in his ſight.

V.14. Give thee reſt] Not from journeying and labour, for yet the people were to be led on further by him, but from trouble of mind; ſo that amidſt outward troubles and aſſaults of enemies, he ſhould enjoy a tranquillity of mind, in reſting and repoſing himſelf quietly in the confidence of Gods power and favour.

V.15. If thy preſence go not] Moſes had ſet his heart ſo affectionately on Gods preſence, and was ſo prepared to preſſe his requeſt unto him for it, that though God had granted the thing, he could not forbeare to expreſſe, what he had before conceived to that purpoſe, which is ſet downe in this and the next verſe.

V.16. Separated] That is, diſtinguiſhed from other people by thy benevolence to us, and thy giving us preeminence over them. Chap.34. 10. Deut.2.7.

V.17. I will do this thing that] How gracious a Favourite was Moſes with God; and how powerful and profitable an Advocate for the people, when God is ſo ready to grant what he requeſts on their behalf, as here (notwithſtanding his threatning at the third verſe) to promiſe not only the conduct of his Angel, ver.2. but a viſible ſign of his eſpecial preſence among them.

V.18. Shew me thy glory] Moſes had found extraordinary grace with God, and thereupon groweth more bold to advance in petition for more: and now he deſireth to ſee, (not Gods eſſence, for that is inviſible, 1 Tim. 6.16. and Moſes it is like was not ignorant of it, but) his Divine glory, as a glympſe of that bleſſed viſion of him which God reſerved for another life. It ſeemeth God ſpake with Moſes by a ſenſible voice, and that his preſence was over-ſhadowed with a cloud or darkneſs, ſo that his glory did not appear, and therefore now deſired the removal thereof, or that his glory might break through it, and that he might ſee it, ſo far as his mortal condition was capable of it.

V.19. My goodneſſe to paſſe before thee] Moſes makes his demand of Gods glory, and he anſwereth him by his mention of his goodneſſe; whereby he promiſeth, that ſo much as is good and profitable for him to know, he will reveal unto him: Or, I will make (ſaith he) all my goodneſſe to paſſe by; that is, I my ſelfe will paſſe before thee, and with my ſelfe, all my goodneſſe and glory, but that is too much for thee to comprehend: it ſhall therefore paſſe, not ſtay for thee to gaze upon; paſſe before thee, that thou mayſt ſee a ſhadow of it behind; and becauſe in this ſtate of defiled infirmity and mortality, thou canſt by the eye of ſenſe diſcern but little of mine excellency (whether for my goodneſs or glory) I will help the dimneſs of thy ſight, by inſtruction of thine ear, and wil proclaim my Name and Nature, 2 Cor. 5.7.

Proclaime the Name] The Lord himſelf will utter his own Name, and will make mention of his Attributes, as Chap. 34. 5,6,7.

I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious] Among his Attributes his mercy is moſt glorious, and his mercy is the more glorious, in that he freely conferreth and beſtoweth it on whom he will, without any merit in any, and therefore it ſhould paſſe without murmuring in all; for God is a moſt free Agent, and cannot come under any account for what he doth, or doth not. See Rom.9. from verſe 16. to 23.

V.20. Not ſee my face] That is, thou canſt not ſee me, as I am in my ſpiritual Majeſty, which is altogether inviſible; nor canſt thou bear the brightneſſe of that glorious apparition which accompanieth my preſence, though I have talked with thee familiarly, as one friend doth with another, when they ſpeak face to face. See the firſt Annot. on ver.11.

there ſhall no man ſee me, and live] For my glory (if I ſhould manifeſt it to the full) is too much for mans infirmity to apprehend, and it would aſtoniſh him ſo, as to make him a dead man. See Rev. 1.16, 17. Or if a man would ſee God, he muſt dye, and then he ſhall ſee (as it were) face to face and know as he is known, 1 Cor.13.12. See the third Annot. on Gen.32.30 & on Exod.24.10. yet the very eſſence of God is ſtil inviſible.

V.22.With my hand] Of Gods hand we muſt conceive, as of his face. ſee Annot. on ver.11. and of his finger, Annot. on chap.31.18. God hid his glory from Moſes his eyes, as if an hand had been ſpread over his face to cover them.

V.23 My back-parts] That is, when mine inviſible gloiy is paſſed by, (wherein my Majeſtie moſt ſhineth, as beauty on the face) thou ſhalt ſee ſo much of my glory coming after it, as wil be enough both for thy diſcerning, and for thy deſire; and if God appeared in an humane ſhape at this time (as ſome conceive) Moſes might ſee him behind as in a ſhadow, who in the brightneſs which went before, was too glorions an object for the eyes of any meer mortal man.

CHAP. XXXIV.

Ver.1. H*Ew thee two Tables*] The former Tables were wholly of Gods framing, both for the matter and the form, but here Moſes prepared the Tables and God wrote upon them, (as at the firſt) whereby he graciouſly received the people into favour again, and reſtored them unto their precedent condition, yet this difference might mind them of their former miſcarriage, which occaſioned the breach of the former work, which God immediately made, but now refuſed to repair, renew, or to make wholly as before. See Annot. on chap. 31.18.

like unto the firſt] God is conſtant to his Law, and ſo ſhould his people be, neither taking upon them in any ſort to alter it, nor by change of times or occaſions, to hold themſelvs diſcharged from obedience unto it.

which thou brakeſt] God doth only mention, not blame the breaking of the Tables by Moſes: whence may be collected, either that Moſes did not amiſs therein, or that God accepted of his zeal, and pardoned his error. Here is no mention made of making of an Ark wherein to lay the Tables, but it ſeemes God gave that in charge to Moſes at the ſame time Deut.10.1. to make an Ark of wood which ſerved for that purpoſe, until that more curious and glorious Ark was made, which was the principal furniture of the Tabernacle.

V.3. not feed before] Chap 19.12,13. That which is ſaid of the flocks and herds was not for their ſakes, who neither deſire the ſight of Divine ſecrets, nor could they ſin whatſoever they did, but it was to breed more reverence in the people, and to keep in their curioſity and preſumption from prying into what God would not have them know, whereto the proud corruption of their nature did too much prompt them. See 1 Sam. 6.19.

V.4. Mount Sinai] See the next Annot.

V.5 There] This and the two next verſes, ſeem to belong to Gods ſpeaking to Moſes, in the hollow clift of the rock, mentioned in the former chapter, ver.22,23. though in the 2 and 4 verſes, it ſeemeth God and Moſes were upon the Mount when theſe words were ſpoken, and yet there alſo might theſe words, ver.5,6,7. be uttered by God to Moſes: for as he wrote the ſame words in the latter Tables, ver.1. which he had written in the firſt, ſo he might repeat again, what he had formerly ſpoken.

V.6. Long-ſuffering] Heb. Of wide noſtrils. For ſuch as are ſo, do more eaſily breathe out the heat of their hearts, and fervor of their ſpirits, and ſo are neither ſo vehemently angry, (for heat by reſtraint (as in a cloſe oven) is more violent then where there is vent) and are ſooner appeaſed. See Num.6.14,18.

V.7. For thouſands] See Annot. on Exod.20.6.

iniquitie, tranſgreſſion and ſin] By ſo many words concerning ſin, God profeſſeth the multitude of his mercies, as before by the number of perſons, as if he had ſaid, that he wil pardon not only all ſinners that ſoundly repent, but all ſins of what kinds or degrees ſoever, by what names or titles ſoever they be ſtyled, upon mans heartie repentance, which is vertually included in the promiſe of pardon. See Matth. 12. 31,32.

by no means] Though his mercy be much magnified, the wicked muſt not thereby be emboldened to offend, for he will not be ſo merciful, as to reſtrain his juſtice from its proper work on the wicked, Exod 23 7. and ver.21. Joſh.24.19. Job 10.14. Jer.30.11. Mic.6.11. Nah.1.3. and he wil be by no means prejudicial to his juſtice, if they do not make themſelves capable of his mercie, by repentance of ſin for the time paſt, and reformation of life for the time to come.

viſiting the iniquity] See Annot. on Exod.20.5.

V.8. Bowed the head] Though God be a Spirit, and therefore principally to be worſhipped in ſpirit, Joh.4.24. yet man hath a body as well a a ſpirit; and he muſt glorifie him in both, 1 Cor.6.19. for both are his & not only by right of creation, but of redemption alſo, as the ſame place of the Apoſtle plainly proveth, 1 Cor.6.19,20.

V.9. I pray thee] Moſes found grace in Gods ſight, and he improves all his intereſt in Gods favour, for the peoples ſafety and praies ſo much more importunately even for fortie daies and fortie nights, as they were more ungrateful towards God, and himſelf more gracious with God; and he bends, and bowes, and humbles himſelf ſo much the more, as they were more ſtiffe-necked, and ſtout hearted.

ſtiff-necked people] God denyeth his preſence becauſe they were a ſtiffe-necked people, Chap.33.3. and Moſes deſireth it upon the ſame ground: but for different reaſons: God becauſe they had made themſelves unworthy of ſuch a favour, and by abuſing it, might more provoke his anger to their owne ruine; Moſes deſires Gods preſence, the better to keep them in awe and obedience, who otherwiſe would be like to be unruly: and therefore ſeeing the people are of this nature, the Rulers have need to call upon God, that he would alwayes be preſent with his Spirit for their aſſiſtance, in reſiſtance of their wilful rebellions.

* for thine inheritance] Pſal.33.12. Zach.2.12.

V.10. * I make a Covenant] That is, I renew my Covenant already made, or, I bind my ſelf now to do more then I have done; (which was a new Covenant) this may be collected from the words following after. * Deut.5.2.

before all thy people] They are called Moſes his people, becauſe committed to his government. See Annot on chap.32.7.

V.11. Amorite] See Annot. on Gen.24.39.

V.12. Take heed to thy ſelf] Leſt by making a League with Idolaters thou become an Idolater as they are, and ſo when they are caſt out for their wickedneſs, thou be unworthy to be received or continued in their ſtead, chap.23.32. Deut.7. 2.

* make no Covenant] * Chap.23.32. Deut.7.2.

V.13. Deſtroy] It is not enough to be no Idolaters our ſelves, but we muſt be zealous againſt the Idolatry of others, every man according to his intereſt in Gods cauſe, and the dutie of his place whereto God hath called him. Chap.23.24.

groves] Pleaſant ſhady places which they choſe for their Idols. See on Gen.21.33.

V.14. Whoſe Name] By Name is meant God himſelf: as, The Name of the God of Jacob defend thee, Pſal.20.1. So the next words (is a jealous God) do ſhew.

Jealous] See the Annot on Exod.20.5.

V.15. They go a whoring] The precedent words ſeem to be directed to Moſes alone in the ſecond perſon, now the ſecond perſon is changed into the third: the meaning is, that Moſes if he ſhould make ſuch a covenant as a publick Governor, would include the people in the Covenant, and they by that means would be brought to go a whoring after Idols, for Idolatrie is ſpiritual whoredome; ſo in Jer.2. and 3. Ezek.16. and elſewhere; and that becauſe there is a kind of matrimonial Covenant betwixt God and his people, as Hoſ.2.16. in which reſpect he is called a Jealous God, in the precedent verſe, and chap. 20.5. and they that tranſgreſſe this covenant in turning their hearts from God to any creature of the world are guilty of adultery; Jam.4.4. make thy ſons] The weaker ſex may overcome the ſtronger, by temptations to idolatry, therefore ſuch unequal marriages are dangerous, and to be declined. See Neh.13.25 Num.25.1,2.

V.17 No molten gods] By this all Idolatrous repreſentations are forbidden, as by graven Images in the ſecond Commandment; but the prohibition is here made rather by the name of a molten God, becauſe the golden Calf was ſuch a one, Chap.32.4.

V.18. Unleavened bread] This and the other particulars, for the moſt part from hence to ver.24. are ſpoken of before, chap.23. and have Annot. upon them.

in earing time, and in harveſt] Though tillage for an harveſt, and harveſt for mans ſuſtenence, be moſt neceſſary, yet the religious reſt of the Sabbath muſt not be broken for them, how much leſs for needleſs works or carnal ſports.

V.22. Of weeks] That is, of ſeven weeks after the Paſſeover, viz. the feaſt of Pentecoſt, Lev.23.15. after 49 days, that is, a week of weeks, which is the fiftieth day.

V.27 Theſe words] That is the Ceremonial precepts, which was accordingly done, when he wrote the Book of Exodus; but for the words of the Moral Law, God wrote them himſelf twice over, ver.2. See the ſecond Annot. on ver. 28. of this chapter.

V.28. Fortie dayes, &c.] This remaining in the Mount was another fortie daies from the former, chap. 24.18. This miracle was to confirm the Authoritie of the Law; and the like is obſerved of our Saviour before his publication of the Goſpel, who faſted alſo fortie dayes and fortie nights, which both being miraculous, are no more to be followed by men then other miracles are. See Annot. on Exod. 24.18.

he wrote] Some think God wrote the firſt writing, and Moſes the ſecond, as God ſeemed to command him, ver.27. But ſee 2 Annot. on Chap.31.18.

V.29. Moſes wiſt not] That is, knew not, for no man can ſee his own face, but in a looking-glaſs: or if he had ſeen it, it would ſeem nothing to that glory which he ſaw of God when he paſſed by.

face ſhone] Moſes deſired to ſee Gods glory, Chap.33.18. Now he himſelf hath by the reflex of the divine ſplendor, ſo much glory upon him that others for fear dare not look upon him, how ſhould he then, or any one elſe be able to comprehend the glory of the divine Majeſty, while he is in a condition of humane frailtie? Yet this makes for the honour of the Law, 2 Cor.3.7,8. and for the honour of Moſes, who brought it to the people, who coming to them with this ſplendor upon him, was to be received as an Angel of God, Gal.4.14.

V.30. They were afraid] See Annot. on Exod.3.6. If his glory did ſo affright them, the Law might much more terrifie them, which in regard of mans tranſgreſſion, (though in it ſelf holy, juſt and good, Rom.7.12.) wrought wrath, Rom.3.15. and that wrath condemnation, 2 Cor.3.7,9. Luk.1.12.

V.33. A vail] To hide his face (when he came as an intermediate agent betwixt God and the people, for it may be this glory was not conſtant all times) becauſe it was too glorious for the eyes of the people: how blind and baſe is our condition here, when it is not capable of a derivative glympſe of divine glory? and how incomprehenſible is Gods Majeſty, when a reflexive ray or beam of his beauty, is too much for mortal men to look upon? See 2 Cor.3.13.

V.34. Before the Lord] Which was in the Tabernacle or Tent of the Congregation. What that was, ſee Annot. on chap.33.7.

he took the vail off] For though he were not capable of Gods glory, nor the people of his, yet his glory could be none occaſion of terror or mazement, ſince in compariſon of them, it was not ſo much as the leaſt ſpark in the chimney to the Sun in the firmament.

V.35. With him] That is, with God.

put to death] The Sabbath is ſo often remembred, and upon ſuch ſevere penalties impoſed, becauſe of the great importance of it to Gods glory, and mans good, and the proneneſs of our corrupt nature, either to forget it, or to profane it.

V.3. Kindle no fire] For any handy-work, though for the framing of the Tabernacle: or, (as ſome expound) for dreſſing of meat, wherein the *S*abbath was more ſtrictly obſerved, then the firſt and laſt day of the Feaſt of unleavened bread, Exod.12.16. though (in other reſpects) they were kept as preciſely as the *S*abbath: for though (according to our *S*aviours Argument in another caſe) that which is extraordinary, is uſually more ſolemnly, reverendly, and reſpectively entertained, and there is more coſt beſtowed upon it, then on that which is ordinary, in this the caſe is otherwiſe: for in the ordinary weekly *S*abbath, there is a Commandment in the Decalogue plainly and fully expreſſed, and by many Arguments preſſed upon the conſcience of the people, all written twice over by Gods own writing in the Tables of ſtone, which cannot be ſaid of any of the anniverſary Feaſts: and when the chiefeſt of them, which was the Paſſeover) light upon the weekly *S*abbath, it was to be kept with more reſtraint, then if it had happened on another day, and then the liberty of dreſſing meat, or of kindling of a fire, to ſuch a purpoſe, was to be forborn. Yet becauſe the *S*abbath was all the year long, and therefore (in Winter as well as in *S*ummer) and that in Winter little children, ſick or weak perſons, yea, and ſuch as are reaſonable ſtrong, could not comfortably perſiſt, in the celebration of the *S*abbath, without fire. It is not probable, that all kind of kindling fire to light a candle, or to dreſſe meat, was forbidden on the *S*abbath, but that ſuch a kindling of fire, as the duties of mercy, and exigencies of neceſſity required, was allowed; and though the Tabernacle, were of much uſe for the ſolemn ſervice of God, and there was very great cauſe to haſten the work: yet for that God would not give any allowance for any labor upon it, no not ſo much as for kindling of any fire to heat any tool, or melt any metal; and therefore in this ſtrict prohibition brought in, as an Introduction of caution, immediately before the preparation for the Tabernacle were preſented. *S*ee chap.16.23.

V.5. Willing heart] God careth not for that which is given with grudging, 2 Cor.9.7.

V.10. Wiſe hearted] Who was a skilful, an expert Artificer, eſpecially for the curious work: required for the framing of the Tabernacle. *S*ee ver.25,26,31,34,35. & chap.31.6. & 36 1,2.

V.11. The Tabernacle] His Tent; and by Tabernacle is meant the whole, by Tent the curious and glorious part of it, and by covering that which was ſpread upon it to preſerve it, yet ſometimes the covering of comely hair over the principal Fabrick is called a Tent, Chap.36.14. which is the covering of Camels hair put upon the Tabernacle.

V.12. The vail of the covering] Which hanged before the Mercy-ſeat that it could not be ſeen. See Note on chap.36.35.

incenſe Altar] Chap.30.1.

V.18. Pins] Theſe were ſharpned in the lower part, and faſtned in the ground, and they were to keep the curtains from whiſling to and fro with the wind: the pillars (which ſome Tranſlators call pins) alſo might be ſharpned in like ſort, that piercing deep into the ground, they might ſupport the Tabernacle with more firmneſs.

V.22. and brought bracelets and ear-rings] If theſe were the ſame who before gave their golden ear-rings to the making of the golden Calf, chap.32.3. they now ſhewed themſelves cordial and real converts by this bounty to a better work. If they were not the ſame, they were more religious towards God, and more wiſe in honouring him with their ſubſtance, and eſteeming his ſervice worthy of their moſt precious jewels.

V.26. In wiſdom] That were skilful in ſpinning.

V.28. And ſpice] Chap.30.23.

V.29 by the hands of Moſes] That is, the Lord gave a Commandment to Moſes concerning the framing of the Tabernacle, as it were delivering the work into his hands, to be ordered by his appointment.

V.34. may teach] So cunning and skilful as to be Maſters of their Art, able to inſtruct and teach others.

V.35. A vail of] That was the inward vail of the Tabernacle, dividing betwixt the Holy of Holies, (where the Ark was) and the other part called the Sanctuary.

Sanctuary] By the Sanctuary, he meaneth here all the Tabernacle.

V.2. †Called Bezaleel] † Chap.31.2. They were endowed with gifts before, but that qualification did not warrant them to enter upon the publick work, without a peculiar calling of Authority. See Exod.18.25. Act.6.3.

V.3. every morning] Heb. in morning in morning. That is, morning by morning, or every morning. By morning ſome conceive is underſtood the whole day artificial, as Gen.ch.1. without any difference or diſtinction of hours: but in regard of the great forwardneſs of the people, it is like the former part of the day is meant.

V.6. Neither man nor woman] Both Sexes were imployed in preparing the Tabernacle: the women in carding and ſpinning coloured wool, and men in weaving their work into a web of cloth, and other works.

reſtrained from bringing] Their liberalitie condemneth the backwardneſſe of many now either to build an houſe to the Lord, or to uphold and repair it, what it hath been built by others: and this reſtraint ſheweth and blameth their fault, who think there cannot be too much beſtowed on the outward magnificence and ornament of Temples or Churches.

V.8. Cherubims] Which were little pictures with wings in the form of children. See Annot. on Exod.25.18.

V.10. Fiftie loops] Chap.26.10.

V.14. Tent over the Tabernacle] The Tabernacle was a Tent, and is ſo called, ver.18. but this Tent was a courſer covering, to keep it fair from offence of foul weather. See Annot. on chap.35.11.

V.19. Above that] There were divers coverings of the moſt curious Tabernacle, one above another, to preſerve it from the annoyance of raine, and ſtormy ſeaſons. See on ver. 14, and on chap. 26.7.

V.20. Standing up] To beare up the Curtaines of the Tabernacle.

V.27 Weſtward] Or toward the ſea, which was the ſea called Mediterranean weſtward from Jeruſalem.

V.29. coupled] Heb. Twined.

V.30. every board] Heb. two ſockets under one board.

V.33. middle bar] Of this bar there is no mention, in any precedent deſcription of the Tabernacle; it ſeemeth to be a bar thruſt through the middle of the boards; there were other bars on the outſide, which were of uſe both to unite and ſtrengthen them.

V. 35. a vail of blue] This was the inward vail of the Tabernacle betwixt the Sanctuary and the Holieſt of all, where the Ark was placed.

V. 37. hanging for] Which was betwixt the Court and the Sanctuary.

needle work] Heb. The work of a needle work, or embroiderer.

V. 38. Overlaid their Chapiters] That is, their heads, and knobs which were covered with golden plates, that nothing outwardly appeared on them but gold: but the pillars though they had gold upon them, were not wholly covered with it, but had, as it were, girdles, or hoopes of gold here and there; whereby they were rather adorned, then covered; for between theſe golden girdles, or couples, the woods was ſeen. It may ſeem (by Chap. 26. ver. 37.) that the pillars themſelves were overlaid with gold; but in this 36. Chapter the particulars are more diſtinctly ſet down, then in the 26. and therefore that place is to be expounded by this, as in the preſent Annot. which is confirmed, Chap. 38. 17.

V. 8. † Looking-glaſſes] † Or, Braſen glaſſes. Rab. Kimchi, ſaith, that women brought their Looking-glaſſes, which were of braſs, or fine metal, and offered them freely unto the uſe of the Tabernacle. The words in the Original, and other Languages, have nothing in them that ſignifieth glaſs, but only looking or repreſenting the look, or to the looks, which may be done in many ſorts of metals; and for braſs in particular, it was the manner (not only among the Jewes, but other Nations) for women to dreſſe themſelves by ſetting a piece of ſhining braſs, or ſome other piece of bright burniſht metal before their faces; as the manner with us, and many others is to uſe ſteeled glaſſes. See Plin. Nat. Hiſt lib. 33. cap. 9. Theſe women, (notwithſtanding their former faſhion to trim themſelves by them) they willingly gave up to the ſervice of the Sanctuary, preferring therein Gods glory before their own gracefulneſs.

aſſembling] Their aſſembling to give up their deſirable things to the ſervice of God, was (according to the Original reading) by troops; ſo forward and free-hearted were they in their offerings, that they ſeemed to make haſte, and as it were to ſtrive who ſhould come ſooneſt with their gift.

V. 43. Bleſſed them] Whereby is not meant (as ſome take it) the conſecration of the Tabernacle, and of the things that appertained to it, for that is done in the next Chapter: but the bleſſing of the people for their forwardneſſe and bounty, for the building and furniſhing of the Tabernacle, and of the Artificers for their care and exactneſſe in the workmanſhip of every particular, & his bleſſing of them, was praiſing of them for what they did; and praying for them, that God would bleſs them for his Sanctuary, for their good will and free-heartedneſſe to his Sanctuary.

CHAP. XL.

Ver. 2. T*He firſt day*] Of the firſt month, and the ſecond year after their departure out of Egypt, ver. 17. after that Moſes had the ſecond time, been forty dayes and forty nights in the Mount, he came downe, and cauſed this work to be done: which being finiſhed, was ſet up in the month called Abib, which containeth part of March, and part of April.

of the Congregation] Of meeting of the Prieſts and Levites, and people, according to the degrees of their approaches, for the High-prieſts had admittance where other Prieſts had not; and the Prieſts in reſpect of place, had a preeminence above the Levites, and they above the people who aſſembled in the Court of the Tabernacle; yet ſo, as they were all accounted of one aſſembly, where God by his eſpecial preſence, met with his aſſembled ſervants. Lev. 4. 3. 2 Mach. 1. 10. and though only the High-Prieſt were particularly annointed in his perſonal ſucceſſion; yet the Prieſt-hood may be called everlaſting in that ſenſe, that other Levitical Ordinances are ſaid to laſt for ever. See Chap. 12. 14.

ſecond year] That is, after they came out of Egypt, Num. 7. 1. ſo that they continued in the wilderneſſe a whole year almoſt before this Tabernacle was ſet up, and it was ſet up ſeven months after Moſes came with his directions for it, from the Mount: for he came downe thence the twentie eighth day of the fifth month after their departure out of Egypt, from whence to the firſt day of the firſt month of the ſecond year, are ſeven months, which with the five months before) make up a whole year, with which ends the ſtory of the Book of Exodus. as the Lord commanded] Theſe words in this Chapter, are repeated many times, ten times chap.39. and eight times in this Chapter; to note what warrant Moſes had for his curious work, and how punctual he was in performance of Gods command; and in the exact rapetition of ſo many particulars, he ſheweth that his hiſtory is compoſed not for delight, but for truths ſake, ſince theſe particulars have no allurement in them, to make a wiſe man willing ſo often, either by his pen to write them, or to read them when they are written, being many of them, (ſaving for Gods command) matters of little moment.

V.34. then a cloud] The pillar of the cloud, which was before upon the former Tabernacle, now (by a new miracle) removed to the new Tabernacle; ſo did the pillar of fire, ſhining with greater glory then before. See Levit. 16.2. Num.9.15. 1 King. 8.10. Iſai.6.4. Rev.15.8.

V.35. not able] By reaſon of an aſtoniſhing reverence; and it may be alſo, the brightneſſe of the glory, might be ſome impediment to his ſight for a time; this was extraordinary, for if it had been uſual, it would have hindred the holy miniſtration in that place. See 1 Kings 8.11.

ANNOTATIONS
ON THE Third BOOK of MOSES,
Called by the Greeks and Latines, LEVITICUS,
But in Hebrew the Name is given it from the firſt words wherewith the Book beginneth, which is,
VAIIKRA; That is, And the Lord called.

The Argument,

THE Name Leviticus, moſt received in Tranſlations, noteth a principal part of the Contents of the Book, which is the Function of the Levites; who in general were all the ſons, and male Deſcendants of the Patriarch Levi; but the Office of the Prieſts being confined to the Line of Aaron, the other Levites of the poſterity of Cohath, Merari, and Gerſhom, (who were the ſons of Levi) were diſtinguiſhed from them as Miniſterial Aſſiſtants from the principal Agents in the Sacrifices and other ſervices of the Sanctuary; ſo that though all the Prieſts were Levites by their Parentage, all the Levites were not Prieſts by their Office, but thoſe of Aaron only, which takes up moſt of the firſt part of this Book; whereto are added divers Rites and Rules concerning the ſanctification of the people from pollution both outward and inward; and of the place where, and times when Gods ſolemn ſervice was to be performed; together with promiſes and threatnings to quicken men to an holy care of keeping of the whole Law. The Book was indited by God and delivered to Moſes in the ſecond year of the peoples departure from Egypt, in the year of the World, 2524, and it appeareth (by compariſon of the beginning and end of Leviticus, with Exod 40.17. and with Numb.1.1.) that it was begun and finiſhed in the firſt mon- of the ſecond year before mentioned. Of this Book Hierom in an Epiſtle to Paulinus, ſaith thus: Leviticus is a Book at hand, in which every Sacrifice, yea almoſt every ſyllable, and the garments of Moſes and Aaron, and the whole Levitical order breathe heavenly Sacraments; ſo that none may wonder if from thence we ſhall obſerve myſtical ſenſes.

CHAP. I.

Verſ. 1. AND the LORD] The cloſe of the laſt chapter of Exodus, is how the cloud of the Lord was on the Tabernacle by day, and that fire was upon it in the night in the ſight of all the houſe of Iſrael, throughout all their journeys: and after the deſcription of the Tabernacle, and the things appertaining to it in the laſt part of Exodus, here fitly followeth (by orderly connexion) the ſtory of the Levitical Prieſthood, for the ſervice thereof: and therefore it beginneth with And. See the Note on Chap. 1. ver.1. of Exod.

the LORD called] With an audible voice; whereby it appeareth that Moſes was firſt inſtructed by the Lord himſelf, before he delivered theſe ordinances to the people. See 1 Cor.11.23.

out of the Tabernacle] Or Tent, from the Mercy ſeat, Moſes being without it; for he could not enter into it when it was covered with a cloud, and filled with the glory of it Exod.40.35.

Of the Congregation] See Annot. on Exod.40.1.

V.2. Cattel of the herd, and of the flock] By heard is meant the greater cattel, as oxen, kine and heifers; by flock, the leſſer, in particular, ſheep and goats, ver.10. which were equally acceptable to God under the Law (though in the Goſpel by ſheep are ſignified the Elect, by goats Reprobates, Mat.25.32,33) becauſe to man they were of moſt uſe for his ſuſtenance and maintenance, both for food and rayment, that thereby he might profeſs his dependance upon God for both; and his preferring of Gods glory before his own benefit in giving them up in ſacrifice to him, Chap. 22. v.18. And it may be alſo theſe creatures were the rather to be ſerved up in ſacrifice to God in oppoſition to the Idolatrous reſpect which the Egyptians had of them: whereof ſee Note on Gen.46.34.

V.3. burnt Sacrifice] All the cattel that were offered in ſacrifice were uſually burnt, and therefore they might all be called burnt ſacrifices; but this rather then any, becauſe it was wholly burnt, ſaving the skin Lev.7.8. of the Greeks called Holocauſt, that is, wholly burnt. See on ver.4.

a male without blemiſh] A male, becauſe that is the worthier ſex; without blemiſh, that is, the beſt and perfecteſt in his kind: See Annot. one Exo.12.5. to ſignifie the perfection of the perſon (whereof this Sacrifice was a Type, 1 Pet.1.18,19. & 2.22) and that God the Creator is worthy to be ſerved with the beſt of his creatures. See Note on Gen.4.4. Lev.22.19. Num.28.31.

voluntary will] There were other oblations which were not left free to a mans own choice, but were preſcribed by expreſs precept; as that of the firſt fruits and firſt-born, Exod. 22. 29. beſides other: yet none were to be offered againſt the will, but with a good will, for God loveth a chearful giver, 2 Cor. 9. 7.

at the door of the Tabernacle] Within the Court and neer unto the door of it, where it was to be preſented before it was offered upon the Altar. For that part of the Tabernacle next to the door was for the aſſembly of the people, the inner part neer to the door of the Tabernacle, where the Altar ſtood, was only for the Prieſts and Levites, whither the people might not come: This Tabernacle was a Type of Chriſt, Heb. 9. 11. by whom all ſervices as by a doore, have paſſage to, and acceptance with his heavenly Father. See Joh. 10. 7.

V. 4. Put his hand] See on Exod. 29. 10. Chap. 3. 28. & 4. 15. & 7. 30.

burnt offering] The Greek word, which the Latines alſo uſe in this and the foregoing verſe, ſignifieth a whole burnt offering; becauſe all of it was burnt except the skin, and in ſome caſes that alſo. The Hebrew word, Olah or Gnolah, tends to the ſame ſenſe; for it is ſo called from aſcending, becauſe it aſcended up to God in flame and fume; and none of it was reſerved for a portion to the Prieſts, or to him at whoſe coſt the ſacrifice was bought: and this ſignified that a man was wholly to give up himſelf to God, both body and ſoul, with all the parts of the one, and faculties of the other; and in both theſe reſpects, that is, of propriety to God, and integrity to man, it had the preeminence above all other oblations of the Law. See 1 King. 3. 15.

to make an atonement for him] The ſame ſacrifice might be offered up for divers ends, as this burnt offering to expreſſe gratulation for good received, Pſal. 51. 18, 19. and to procure pardon and remiſſion for ſin committed, Job 1. 5.

V. 2. He ſhall kill] That is, he that brings it not by himſelf but by the Prieſts, (for one may be ſaid to do that, which another doth for him, or in his name, Joh. 4. 1, 2.) whoſe uſual office it was to perform ſacrifice, to ſprinkle the blood with an implied confeſſion, that the party who brought the ſacrifice deſerved to have his own blood ſpilt, and ſupplication to be ſpared from death for his paſſions ſake, whereof this bloodſhed was a figure, which repreſented Chriſt, Heb. 9. v. 13, 14. By ſprinkling this blood then above the Altar, might be ſignified the offerers acknowledgment of his guilt of the blood of Chriſt; and withal the killing of the ſacrifice for him, was an inſtruction unto him, to mortifie all his carnal luſts and affections, as Gal. 3. 24.

Altar] Of the burnt offering, Exod 27. 1. Chap. 3. 2, 8, 13.

V. 6. he ſhal ſay] That is, the Prieſt to whom it belonged by ordinary duty to do it, though upon extraordinary occaſions, the Levites aſſiſted in that ſervice, 2 Chron. 29. 34.

V. 7. put fire] The fire that kindled the ſacrifice at firſt, came down from heaven, Levit. 9. 24. that fire once kindled, was to be continually nouriſhed with fire, that it might never go out: any fire but that was accounted ſtrange fire; and to bring ſtrange fire, to burn either ſacrifice or incenſe, was impious and perilous, as the example of Nadab and Abihu ſheweth; as Numb. 10. 1. This putting of fire then upon the Altar, was either a continuance of fire, by putting more fewel unto it, and laying the wood in order upon it; or it was the laying of the fire on the Altar again, when it had been removed, for the taking away the aſhes, (when it was too full of them) that it might be cleanſed: and this fire was not only inſtrumental to burn the legal ſacrifice, but typical to ſignifie the zeal of the Evangelical ſacrifice, Jeſus Chriſt; whoſe zeal for his Fathers glory, did eat him up, Joh. 2. 17. and gave him up for his brethrens ſafety to death, upon the Altar of the Croſſe, which is as violent and painful death, as by burning with fire.

V. 9. but the inwards] By which ſome underſtand all the intrails, even to the guts, which emptied and clean waſhed, were to be put into the Lamb again: others conceive, that by the inwards, muſt be underſtood only the heart and liver, and ſuch inward parts as were eaten by men, out of ſacrifice; for as ſuch creatures only were ſacrificed, as ſerved for the ſuſtenance of man; ſo ſuch parts of them were excepted from ſacrifice, as did not uſually ſerve for food; for which cauſe the holocauſt, or whole burnt-offering, was not burned with the skin, Lev. 7. 9. and in that reſpect the Altar might be called a Table, Mal. 1. 12. not only becauſe Gods proviſion was laid upon it, but becauſe men many times feaſted on the portions reſerved from it, 1 Cor. 10. 18.

waſh in water] This ſignifieth the cleanneſſe, and purity that was in Chriſts ſacrifice, and of that which ſhould be, Heb. 10. 22. In our ſervices to God, which are ſacrifices, as having reference to God, though they be immediate benificences to men, Heb. 10. 22. and 13. 16.

a ſweet ſavour unto the LORD] A ſavour of reſt, which pacifieth the anger of the Lord, and maketh it reſt and be ſtill, Ezek. 16. 42.

V. 11. Northward] The Tabernacle Door, and Altar were ſo ſcituate, or placed, that on the North-ſide, there was more ſpace for ſuch acts, as required moſt room, as the killing and dreſſing of the ſacrifices did.

before the LORD] Before the Altar, at the Door of the Tabernacle, where the Lord was pleaſed to afford his ſpecial preſence.

V. 12. on the wood] Or, on the grate over the wood. See Exod. 27. 4.

V. 13. waſh the inwards and the legs] The inward affections are to be cleanſed from ſin, and ſo are the outward actions noted by the legs, wherewith men walk in their open converſation. See Ezek. 36. 25. Joh. 13. 5, 10.

V. 14. turtle doves] That Bird in the Hebrew is called Tur, from meditation, becauſe that the Turtle ſeems to ſit as one that meditates on ſerious matters, and to mourn for ſome miſhap or affliction. Of Birds, Turtle-doves, and young Pigeons, were chiefly offered, Lev. 14. 4. though there they be not particularly named; and of them the Turtle was the beſt for kind, the younger the beſt for time: this was the oblation of the poor, who were not of ability to offer a Lamb. Levit. 12. 8. there is no mention either of Turtle, or of Pigeons. Theſe were offered rather then Hens or Capons, becauſe their feeding is more clean then houſhold-birds, and rather then Partridges, though they be dainty meat, becauſe they are more hardly come by then Doves, who love to lodge in houſes, as men do. See on Gen. 15. 10.

V. 15. wring] wring off his head. So Lev. 5. 8. ſome think it was enough to pinch the Bird in the head to death, and that the neck was not to be wrung off, but that were a kind of ſtrangling (whereby the blood was kept in, that ſhould be let out) which was not admitted, either in meats or ſacrifices: Beſides the Text ſaith, the head was to be burned (and it ſeems) by it ſelf; but that could not be, if it were only pinched, and not wrung off.

at ſide of the Altar] Heb. upon the wall of the Altar. For it had a wal of boards about it.

V. 16. his crop with his feathers] See a reaſon hereof, Annot. on v. 9.

Eaſt part] Of the Altar towards the door of the Court, for the more reverence and decency of the Tabernacle.

V. 17. not divide it aſſunder] So ſome conceive the wings were to be divided, not the body of the birds, but that was to be opened longwiſe, as not to be cut clean through, nor to be cut in pieces, or parted aſunder, as other ſacrifices were. They that by Birds underſtand heavenly-minded perſons (and the fowles are called the fowles of heaven, Job 35. 11. and the Turtle or Dove is noted, as moſt repreſenting the condition of ſuch) obſerve that ſuch ſhould not be divided by Schiſms, or Factions, or diſtracted by ſecular cares. See Annotat. on Gen. 15. 10. But eſpecially in their devotions, (which are ſpiritual ſacrifices) their intentions, and affections, ſhould be wholly fixed upon that holy object, to which of duty they are to be directed.

CHAP. II.

Verſe 1. MEat-offering] The burnt-offering was not offered without the meat-offering, Num. 15. 4-7, 10. But that was Legally preſcribed, and ſo of duty; this was voluntary at the Offerers choice: beſides, that was limited, for the meaſure; (in the place fore-cited) this was left to the free-will of the Offerer to make the proportion. The word in the Original, which ſome Tranſlations take up, is Mincha, and it is taken for oblation of things without life, as Bread, Meal, Wine, Salt, Oyl: and of ſuch things Oblations were made for many Reaſons. 1. Becauſe God, as he was the giver of theſe, as well as of the other creatures, ſo he was to have a tribute of theſe, as well as of the former ſort. 2. Becauſe the poorer ſort might have opportunity more often, to exerciſe their Devotion to God in the ſervice of his Sanctuary. 3. Since they that wait on the Altar, were to live on the Altar, 1 Cor. 9. 13. and ſuch particulars were of uſe to that purpoſe as well as the other. 4. Becauſe Gods Altar had a conformity to a Table, Mal. 1. 7. 5. By this the poor were to make thankful acknowledgment of their portion to God, as well as the rich; and for myſtical ſignification, this Free-will offering did ſignifie the freeneſs of Chriſts offering himſelf in ſacrifice to God, Joh. 10. 15, 17. Heb. 10. 7, 9. in conformity whereto, Chriſtians ought freely to offer up themſelves a living Sacrifice, Rom. 12. 1.

of fine floure] Without any mixture of bran, for God is worthy to be ſerved with the beſt of each kind, contrary to the practiſe of covetous hypocrites, Mal. 1. 14.

oyl upon it] Oyl was uſed for meat, 1 King. 17. 12. for medicine, Luk. 10. 34. for ornament to make the face to ſhine, Pſal. 104. 15. for lamps to burn, Exod. 25. 6. In which reſpect it might typiſie Chriſt, who is called oyl, Iſa. 10. 27. though the word be rendred anointing; for he is meat, and medicine, and ornament, and illumination, and all unto his people that is good for them: It is put alſo, for the Holy Ghoſt and his gifts, Pſal. 45. 7.

frankincenſe] The chief uſe of that was to make a ſweet ſmell, and ſo it was the fitter to ſignifie the ſweet odour of our Saviours ſacrifice, Epheſ. 5. 2. without whom, truly apprehended by faith, and ſincerely ſerved without hypocriſie, all Religious ſervices are unſavoury, though offered with the ſweeteſt Incenſe, Iſai. 1. 13. Jer. 6. 20.

V. 2. burn the memorial of it about an handful] A part of this Meat-offering, (about an handful) was to be burnt as a remembrance and intimation of the whole that was given to God, whereof, though part were burned, the reſt remained for ſuſtenance of Gods ſervants, Levit. 6. 16. and conſequently for the maintenance of Gods ſervice; and in giving that portion ſo unto God, the whole ſtock was acknowledged as a gift from God. See Exod. 30. 16. Acts 10. 4.

V. 3. moſt holy] Heb. holineſſe of holineſſes. The Hebrews emphatically expreſſe things, by doubling the Noun, and changing the Number, as King of Kings, Rev.17. 14. that is, a moſt powerful King; Servant of ſervants, Gen.9 25. that is, a moſt vile and contemptible Servant. Song of ſongs, Cant. 1. 1. that is, a moſt excellent Song; and Heaven of heavens, that is, the higheſt and moſt glorious Heaven. So ſuch Sacred things are called Holineſſe of holineſſes in the Law, which none might touch, or which none might eat of, but the Prieſt, and that in the holy place, near the Altar, Levit.6.26. & Chap.7. v.6. & Chap. 10.12. and of other common ſacrifices, the Prieſts part might be brought home to his houſe, and there eaten by his Wife, Children, and the reſt of his Family. See Chap.21.22.

V. 4. baked] The former offering was of Meal, not hardened by the fire, this is of Meal made into Bread, either baked in an oven, or in a pan, or plate, as ſome conceive, in the Sanctuary, becauſe of that is ſaid, Ezek. 46. 20. and 1 Chron. 23.28, 29.

V. 6. in pieces] Becauſe part was to be offered to God, and part reſerved for the uſe of man, of Aaron and his ſonnes, verſe 10.

V. 11. no leaven] This was not general: for at Oblations of firſt-fruits, ſuch as were the wave-loaves, Lev. 23.17. and at oblations of thankſgiving, leaven was admitted, Lev.7.13. yet the unleavened bread was more pure, and it ſerved alſo, to renew the memory of the Iſraelites miraculous deliverance out of Egypt, when they went away in ſuch haſte, that they had not leiſure to leaven their bread, Exod.12. 34. and it was more meet to repreſent our Saviour the bread of life, for hypocriſie is ſignified by leaven, Luk. 12. 1. and the want of leaven ſignifieth ſincerity, 1 Cor.5.8. Beſides theſe Religious reaſons, ſome alledge certain Phyſical conſiderations of leaven, as that it puffeth up the belly, and if it ſhould be burned, would be more unſavoury in the ſmell; but the former reaſons may ſuffice.

nor any hony] Hony (as ſome think) was forbidden to be offered by the people of God, becauſe it had the operation of leaven; ſome, becauſe the Gentiles uſed it in oblations to their gods; and though they uſed ſalt in their ſacrifices alſo, yet that was not forbidden, but preſcribed, v. 13. becauſe ſalt prevents putrefaction, and makes that which is eaten with it the more ſavoury to the taſte; or becauſe, where leaven is forbidden, there the bitter bondage of the Iſraelites is to be remembred, according to the precedent Annotation, whereof unleavened bread, and bitter herbs are joyned together, Exod. 12.8. wherewith the ſweetneſſe of hony doth not ſuit, by which alſo (as ſome of the Ancients expound it) it ſignifies the delight of the fleſh: yet of both there might be an offering to the Prieſts, as the next words imply. See 2 Chron. 31.5.

V. 12. not be burnt] But reſerved for the Prieſts, Num.18.13. yet the meat-offering made by, and for the Prieſts themſelves, was to be wholly burnt, and none of it eaten, Lev.6.23.

V. 13. ſalt] Salt gives a pleaſant ſeaſoning to meats, and keeps them from corrupting; By that the incorruption of communication is noted, Col.4.6. yea and the ſoundneſſe of the mind and manners, Mar. 9. 50.

of the Covenant] Which they were bound, as by Covenant, to uſe in all ſacrifices, Num.6 18,19. Ezek.43.24. Mark.9.49. Or it meaneth a pure and ſure Covenant to indure while theſe Levitical Ordinances were to laſt; for ſalt is a preſervative from corruption, therefore a durable Covenant, is called a Covenant of ſalt, 2 Chron.13.5. and the ſtate of corruption is ſaid to be unſalted, Ezek.16.4.

V. 14. meat-offering] The Hebrew word ſignifieth a gift in general; but uſe hath ſo reſtrained it to this kind of gift in particular, that ſome Tranſlations retain it; the Engliſh renders it meat-offering by way of diſtinction, chiefly from holocauſts or whole burnt offerings, of which no part was reſerved for the Prieſts, and conſiſted principally of ſuch things as ſerved for meat, and wanted life, as of Bread to eate, Cakes, Wafers, &c. and ſalt to ſeaſon, of Oyl, of which ſome kinds ſerved for meat, ſome for perfume, (as Frankincenſe did) whereby the anoynting of Chriſt was ſignified, 2 Cor. 1. 21. 1 John 2. 27.

green eares] This was the third ſort of Oblation made of corn, the laſt in worth, but the firſt in nature, and in time; for it was of the Barley harveſt; whereby the people were to learn, that which way ſoever they made uſe of their corn, God was to have a tribute of honour, and the Prieſt a portion of it for his ſupport in the ſervice of the Sanctuary.

V. 16. burn the memoriall] That is, the thing offered for a memorial, by a figure called a Metonymia. See Annotat. on verſe 2.

CHAP. III.

Verſe 1. P*Eace-offering*] Sacrifices of thankſgiving offered for Peace, (by which word the Hebrews ſignifie all proſperity;) and thoſe either generally, or particularly; for there were general ſacrifices for all, and particular for Prince, or Prieſts, or the people by themſelves; and ſome of them were for reconciliation, when God was offended for ſinne, Judges 20. 26. 1 Chron. 21. 26. others for thankſgiving, when he was pacified towards them, and at peace with them; the former were firſt offered, for no works or ſervice can be acceptable with God, unleſſe an expiation and reconciliation for ſinne go before, and by theſe peace-offerings are ſignified, 1. Chriſt his Oblation of himſelf, as bearing upon him the chaſtiſements of our peace, Jer. 53. 5. and ſo becoming our Peace-maker with God, Matth. 3. laſt. Epheſ. 2. 14. and 2. the ſacrifice of Praiſe, which was fit to be joyned with an offering for Peace, that ſo while we beg new grace, we may ſhew our ſelves grateful for former favours: And the Hebrew Writers conceive, they were called Peace-offerings, becauſe part of them was offered to God, part was given to the Prieſt, and part to him who brought it to be offered; ſignifying an agreement among all who were at it and were ſociable partakers of the ſame thing. See on 1 Kings 3. 15. See Chapter 7. 11, 29. and 22. 18.

V 2. at the door] That is, where the brazen Altar was, on the Eaſt-ſide of the Court; wherein they differ from whole burnt-offerings and ſinne-offerings, which were offered on the right-ſide of the Court, or towards the North, Levit. 1. 11. and 6. 21, 25. and 7. 2. and the reaſon hereof was, becauſe part of the peace-offering, to wit, the fat and breſt were to be waved before the Altar, upon the hands of him that came to offer it, Levit.7.30. and he himſelf to offer it to God, and the Prieſt was to take it out of his hand; and it was not lawful for the people to come into the Prieſts Court, therefore the offering was to be made at the entrance of the Court, whither they might come; and it was to be offered here, becauſe it was not of the moſt holy things, of which only the Prieſt did eat, (for he that offered it eat a part of it.)

V. 3. of the peace-offering] That is, part of the peace-offering, for of this ſacrifice one part was burnt, another was reſerved for the Prieſt, and the third belonged to him that brought it; for the right ſhoulder, and the breſt, Levit. 7. 30. with the two jawes, and the maw were the Prieſts, the reſt his, at whoſe coſt the oblation was made, Levit. 7. 15, 16. and hence it was, that in this offering Turtle-doves, and young Pigeons were not permitted to the poorer ſort to offer, as they were in the whole burnt-offering, becauſe in them being ſo ſmall, this diviſion could not conveniently be made.

the fat which covereth the inwards] The fat as the beſt of the ſacrifice is offered up unto the Lord, and ſo teacheth, that the beſt is ſtill to be given him. See on Exod. 29.13.

V. 4. the two kidneyes] It was not ſufficient to ſacrifice the ear, or foot, or any out-ward part, which might be parted without loſſe of life, but the inward parts muſt be offered, without which the creature cannot live, becauſe the perſons for whom the ſacrifice was offered, deſerved death, and without the death of Chriſt could not be redeemed; and the ſacrificing of theſe inward parts, ſignifying the mortifying of the inward luſts and affections of the fleſh, Gal.5.24. which have their root in the reines or kidneys and the liver, they are therefore here mentioned, for more ſerious conſideration of that part.

V. 6. male or female] For a peace-offering it was indifferent to offer either male or female, which might be accepted here, becauſe theſe are by way of thankſgiving for external bleſſings, but in whole burnt-offerings, only the male as the chief, chap.1. 3. See chap.4.32. where a female is expreſly preſcribed; as alſo, Chap.5.6.

V. 8. upon the head] See Annot. on Exod.29.10.

V. 9. the whole rump] Even to the back-bone, over againſt the reins or kidneyes (as the Hebrew Text importeth.) This was peculiar to the peace offering, of a ſheep, a lamb, or ram; but if the peace-offering were an ox, or a goat, it was not ſo. The offering of the rump, ſome interpret to be an intimation of perſevearance to the end; but it rather ſheweth that there is not the meaneſt part of the creature, but God hath a right unto it, and though a thing never ſo contemptible in it ſelf, God can make it honourable by applying it to his ſervice, in ſacrifice, as here; in a Sacrament, as in Circumciſion, Gen.17.11.

V. 11. the food] Hebr. bread. Whatſoever is burned may be ſaid to be food to the fire which devoureth it; but the ſacrifice is called food or meat, in reſpect of God, who takes delight in it, as a man doth in his meat, when he is refreſhed by it. See Mal. 1. 12. which ſets forth Gods love, who reckons himſelf as a gueſt at their feaſts.

V. 13. before the Tabernacle] At the door of the Tabernacle.

V. 16. all the fat is the L O R D S] It is certain that the fat of unclean beaſts neither ought, nor could be conſecrated to the Lord, nor of clean beaſts which might not be uſed in ſacrifice, as Harts, and wild Oxen: and it is certain, that the fat that is mixed with the fleſh of clean beaſts, they might eat, Deut.32. 14. for they were onely forbidden the fat which covereth the inward vital parts; to wit, the heart, liver, lungs, kidneyes, and ſmall guts, with a continued net or caul, and ſo might eaſily be ſeparated from the other fleſh. And this fat was ſo ſtrictly forbidden to the Jewes, that they might in no caſe eat it, no not if they killed their beaſt at home, for it is called a law to them in all their dwellings, and joyntly forbidden with blood, ver.17. which they might not eat in any caſe, any where. But this ſome underſtand only of the fat of goats, ſheep and oxen, as Joſephus ſaith in his third Book of Antiquities, Chap.10. That clean beaſt which might not be offered unto God, they might eat its fat, but the fat of them that might be offered to God, they might not eat, and that upon pain of death, Lev.7.25. But if the beaſt were killed at home, the fat ought not to be conſecrated to the Lord, becauſe it is no where commanded; but as the blood was to be poured on the ground, ſo was the fat to be burned with a prophane fire, unleſſe haply they might uſe it to make candles of it, or to other profane or common, but honeſt uſes, as is granted, in almoſt the like caſe, Lev. 7. 24.

V. 17. neither fat nor blood] Theſe two are prohibited, as not wholſome enough to be mans meat, (as ſome conceive) and though they be both forbidden together, yet it is with this difference, that all fat was not forbidden to be eaten, Neh.8.10. but only the fat of the oxe, or ſheep, or goat offered in ſacrifice, Lev.7.23 (and this chiefly, the fat of the inwards) and the fat of beaſts that die of themſelves, or are torn of wild beaſts, ver. 24. and the fat was the fitter for ſacrifice, becauſe it would ſoon take fire, and go up in the flame; but for blood, that was more generally forbidden, Levit.17.14. 1 Sam.14.32,33,34. which might be, firſt, for diſtinction of the Jews from the Heathens, who uſed to drink the blood of their ſacrifices: ſecondly, for moral admonition againſt cruelty: thirdly, for myſtical intimation of reverence to the blood of our Saviour, ſignified by the blood-ſhedding of the ſacrifices; as David would not drink of the water of the well of Bethlehem, but poured it out in an offering before the Lord, becauſe it was equivalently (as he called it) the blood of thoſe who fetched it with the peril of their lives, 2 Sam.13.17. See on Gen.9.4.

CHAP. IV.

Verſe 1. I*Gnorance*] Num.15.22. Either of the Law, or of the fact, which a man is bound to know, and may know; for ignorance in ſin is no ſecurity againſt puniſhment; it may ſometimes extenuate a ſin, but it cannot annihilate it, or take it wholly away, nor procure a total impunity to the ſinner, Pſal.19.12. Luk.12.48. yea, if it be wilful ignorance, it doth rather aggravate the guilt, then abate any part of it: to theſe ſins of ignorance may be referred ſins of infirmity, proceeding from inconſideration, when a man is ſuddenly overtaken in a fault, Gal.6.1. and it is probable it extends not to all in general, but ſuch for which the conſcience would more likely be touched: for of ordinary deviations there was an expiation by the daily burnt-offerings for the whole Church, and the ſacrifice of the day of Atonement, Lev.16. 30.

V. 3. that is anointed] Meaning the High-Prieſts, as the Caldee, and Seventy render it, anointed with that ſolemn ointment, Exod. 29.7. and he only in the ages following was anointed, Lev.21.10. Anointed is eſpecially mentioned, becauſe for any ſin committed before anointing, a peculiar oblation was not required, but only ſuch a one as was offered for the Prince, or one of the people.

ſinne] This taught the people they muſt look for another Mediator, which had no need of an offering for ſinne, but could make a perfect atonement betwixt God and them, Heb. 7. 26, 27, 28.

according to the ſinne of the people] That is, if as he is a man, not as a Prieſt, he ſin, as others of the people do, as being ſubject to the like paſſions as others are, as Act.4.15. Heb. 5.2,3. or ſo ſin according to the ſin of the peole, as ſcandalouſly to draw others to ſin, or to incourage them in ſin, by his corrupt teaching of the Law. See 1 Sam. 2. 17, 24.

ſinne-offering] This differs from a peace-offering; becauſe in this the Offerer had no part, but the fat and kidneys, and blood being offered to God, or burned, the reſt came to the Prieſt, for they were altogether holy to God, and ſo could not be carried out of the holy place by any but the Prieſts, nor eaten any where but in the holy Court, Chap.6. 26. (whence the Prieſts are ſaid to eat the ſins of the people) and this only in ſacrifices for the ſin of private men, or publick Princes; for thoſe which were offered for the High-Prieſt, or all the people, the fat and blood being offered in the holy Court, were wholly burned without the Camp, for the greater horrour of greater ſinns: but in peace-offerings, the third part returned to him that offered them. Secondly, the ſin offering was to be made away the ſame day it was offered; but the peace-offering, in ſome caſes, might be ſet aſide till the morrow, Chap.7.13. Thirdly, in peace offerings might be uſed oyl and frankincenſe, but not in ſin-offerings, becauſe they make for delight and pleaſure, which were to be far from a repenting ſinner. Laſtly, it was peculiar to the ſin-offering, that the blood of the ſacrifice was put upon the horns of the Altar, but with this difference, that in the ſacrifices for the ſin of the High-prieſt, or of all the people, the blood was put upon the horns of the Incenſe Altar, v. 7. but in others, upon the Altar of burnt-offering, v. 25. Of the difference betwixt a ſin-offering, and a treſpaſs-offering: ſee Annot. on Chap.7.v.1.

V. 4. ſhall lay his hand] Hereby confeſſing that he deſerved the ſame puniſhment which the beaſt ſuffered, See on Exod. 29.10.

V. 5. the Prieſt that is anointed, &c.] Here the ſinner himſelf, Heb. 7. 27. is ordered to bring the blood of his ſinne offering into the Tabernacle, which was not yet enjoyned in any ſacrifice. This typified our way opened into heaven, by the blood of Chriſt, Heb. 10. 19,20.

V. 6. ſprinkle of the blood ſeven times] A myſtical number ſignifying our perfect cleanſing from ſinne, by the ſprinkling of Chriſts blood, Heb.9. 13, 14. and that our ſins require much purgation, Pſalm 51.2.

the vaile of the Sanctuary] Which was betwixt the Holieſt of all and the Sanctuary, called uſually Parocheth, in the Hebrew, Lev.16.2. to diſtinguiſh it from the other vail, at the entrance of the Tabernacle, called Maſach, Exod.26.36.

V. 11. the skin of the bullock, and his fleſh] In this, and the ſin-offering for the whole Congregation, wholly burned without the Camp, the Prieſt did eat no part, Lev.6.30. (though he did in other ſin-offerings, ver. 26. of this Chapter) becauſe the offerer might not eat of the ſin-offering; but in theſe the Prieſt was offerer, either ſolely, as here, or incluſively, as in the ſin-offering for all the Congregation. This might ſignifie the deteſtableneſs of ſin, eſpecially of Sacred perſons, or of a whole people, which here, as it were, on the back of the bullock, was carried out of the Camp. Secondly, that the True ſin-offering ſhould ſuffer without the gate, Heb. 13. 11, 12. Thirdly, that by Chriſt his ſufferings, our ſins are fully pardoned, removed far from us: and for the perſon that was to carry this ſin-offering out, though it ſeem to be the High-Prieſt, verſe 12. yet he was onely to ſee it done, and not by doing it himſelf, render himſelf unclean, as you may ſee in the ſame caſe, Chap. 16.27,28.

V. 12. where the aſhes] The aſhes of the ſacrifice offered upon the Altar, were firſt placed in the Court near the Altar, and thence they were afterwards carried out of the Camp, into ſome ſtony place, where no dirt nor carrion was caſt: and this was done, the better to preſerve the ſervice of God from all contempt.

V. 13 if the whole Congregation] Or the greater part of the people. The multitude excuſeth not from ſin, but if all have ſinned, they muſt all be puniſhed, if Gods juſtice be not appeaſed by ſound repentance; (which is ſuch a ſorrow for ſin, as worketh a change both of the mind, and of the manners of the ſinner) ſee Gen.6.12,13. & 19.10. Hence alſo we may obſerve, that not only particular perſons, but particular, or National Churches may erre.

V. 14. then the whole Congregation ſhall offer a bullock] This preſcription is general for all ſin, but for omitting ſome ceremonial duties enjoyned them, Num.15.24. they were to offer a kid of the goats for a ſin-offering.

V. 15. Elders] Not the Prieſts in this caſe, but the heads and Magiſtrates, which were ſeventy in number, Exod.3.16. & Chap.24.1. for all the people could not lay on their hands, therefore it was ſufficient that the Ancients of the people did it, in the name of all the Congregation.

V. 16. the Prieſt that is anointed] That is, the High-Prieſt. See Annot. on v.3.

V. 18. Altar which] That is, the Altar of Incenſe. See Annot. on v. 3.

V. 20. as he did the bullock for a ſin-offering] That is, the bullock offered for the ſinne of the Prieſt, called the firſt bullock, verſe 21.

forgiven them] That is, they ſhall be acquitted from their offence, and not only from the guilt of ſin, but from any eccleſiaſtical, or external cenſure, or puniſhment of the Law.

V. 21. without the Camp] All whole burnt-offerings for ſin were to be burned without the Camp, or Hoſt, Exod. 29. 14. See Heb. 13, 12,13.

V. 22. When a ruler] Of a Family, or any head of a Tribe, or any Governour; for the word in the Original, ſignifieth one elevated, or lifted up above others, as Numb. 1. 4. and Chap. 7. ver. 2.

and is guilty: Or if his ſin wherein he hath ſinned, come to his knowledg, &c.] That is, whether preſently he come to acknowledge it; or afterwards it be diſcloſed unto him, ſo ſoon as he knows of it, he ſhall bring his ſin-offering.

V. 24. and kill it] That is, the Prieſts ſhall kill it; for it was not lawful for any out of that office to kill the beaſt. So ver. 33.

before the LORD] See Annot. on Chap.1.11.

V. 25. of the Altar of burnt-offering] Neither this for the Ruler, nor that for private perſons, verſe 30. were ſprinkled before the Vail in the Tabernacle, nor upon the Altar of Incenſe, as thoſe for the Prieſt and all the people were, verſe 6, 7, 16, 17, 18. for their ſinnes, as more hainous, required a more ſolemn manner of atonement.

V. 26. an atonement for him] Wherein he repreſented Jeſus Chriſt.

V. 29. in the place] That is, at the door of the Tabernacle, where all ought to be killed, Levit.1.5. ſee v.33.

V. 32. a female] See Annot. on Chap.3.6.

V. 33. he ſhall lay his hand] Meaning, that the puniſhment of his ſin ſhould be laid upon the beaſt, and that as he had received all he had from the hand of God, ſo with his own hand he offered that ſacrifice willingly unto God. It is uncertain here who ſhould lay his hand; it ſeems here, and verſe 15. that the bringer of the ſacrifice or he for whom the ſacrifice was offered, was to lay his hand upon the head of it; but for the killing of it, it belonged to the Prieſt onley. See on v. 24.

in the place] That is, a place beſide, or neer the Altar. ſee v.29.

V. 34. according to the offerings] Or upon the offerings, or beſides the burnt-offerings, which were daily offered to the Lord. See Chap.3.5.

CHAP.

CHAP. V.

Verſ.1. SOul-ſin] That is, a perſon, as Chap. 4. 2. for the ſoul, as more excellent then the body, is often put for the whole perſon in the Scripture, by a ſynecdoche of the part for the whole; which brings forth another figurative ſpeech, as when that which properly belongeth to one part, is aſcribed to the other, as touching to the ſoul, v. 2. which properly appertaineth to the body, though not without the ſociety of the ſoul; ſo alſo eating, Chap.7.20.

and is a witneſſe] This ſeemes not to be meant of ſecret faults, but rather of ſuch as come to publick tryal before the Judge; in which caſe, he that knoweth any thing for the clearing of the truth, and will not reveal it, his connivance, and ſilence in ſuch a caſe, gets him a guilt of other mens ſins, beſides his own.

whether he hath ſeen or known it] That is, whether he were an eye-witneſs of the injury done to his neighbour, or otherwiſe came to know it, he muſt diſcover the truth, when they to whom the oath is given cannot, or will not; or elſe he is guilty and muſt offer a Treſpaſſe-offering, becauſe his brother is prejudiced by his ſilence.

V. 2. if a ſoul touch] See the firſt Annot. on this Chapter.

unclean and guilty] Ceremonially unclean, and guilty of the breach of the Ceremonial Law, though he knew it not; yet the conſcience was not defiled by ſuch caſual accidents, nor by any thing without the man, Matth. 15. 11, 18. unleſſe by wilful ignorance, or inconſideration; ſo as there was a Ceremonial cleanſing, Numb. 19. 6, &c. for the touch it ſelf, whether ignorantly, or knowingly committed, there was by inconſideration or caraleſneſſe a Moral guilt contracted, in which reſpect he was to bring a treſpaſſe-offering, as is here expreſſed.

V. 3. then he ſhall be guilty] If when he knoweth it, he do not perform what the Law appointeth in that caſe, then he is not only Ceremonially, but Morally guilty, as a contemner of the ordinance of God.

V. 4. ſwear] That is, raſhly, without conſideration of what is right and juſt, or what is within his power to perform; ſuch an oath was that of David againſt Nabal, 1 Sam.25.22.

to do evil] That may be not only to commit an evil of ſin, but to inflict ſome evil of pain, diſgrace, or damage upon himſelf or others, which though it might be juſt to be done, the raſh reſolution of ſwearing to do it, was a ſin.

V. 5. in one of theſe] Which have been mentioned before in this Chapter, that is, faults of infirmity, ignorance, and inconſideration.

confeſſe] With repentance for his fault, or elſe, neither confeſſion, nor oblation would do him any good; and this the offender ought to do in other ſacrifices for ſin, though it be not ſo expreſſed: with offering of ſacrifices there was confeſſion of ſins as a part of the offerers profeſſion of repentance. The Hebrews write that this confeſſion was thus to be made; I have thus or thus committed ſuch a ſin, I am aſhamed, and it repents me; I will never return to the ſame again. And ſome make this to be the reaſon, why the Prieſts were commanded to eat the remainder of the ſacrifice for ſin alone, and that within the Court, not ſo much as thoſe of their own houſe admitted, leſt by this means the offerers ſins confeſſed to the Prieſts, might be divulged. And ſome here note, that it belonged to the Prieſt to determine betwixt ſins, and treſpaſſes, between ſins of leſſe and greater weight (of which we may ſee Chap. 4.) and that according to the eſtimation of the treſpaſſe, a greater or leſſer ſacrifice might be preſcribed, for this was not left arbitrary to each private man, for ſo one ſacrifice might eaſily have been ſubſtituted in the place of another. Nor doth this confeſſion make for the private confeſſion of the Papiſts, for it ſeemeth this was not ſpoken of hidden faults, becauſe the matter was brought before the Judge, v. 1. See Num.5.7.

V. 6. treſpaſſe-offering] See Annot. on Chap. 7. 1. This no leſſe then the ſin-offering, typified Chriſt, whoſe ſoul was made an offering for ſin, Iſa. 53.10. where the word in the Original is the ſame with this here rendred Treſpaſſe-offering.

a female] The male is eſpecially to be offered in ſome caſes, yet ſometimes a female is not only allowed, but eſpecially preſcribed, as here, and Chap. 4. 32. to ſhew, that though God preferred the male, he did not reject the female, See Gal. 3.28.

the Prieſt] Not the High Prieſt only, but any of the inferiour Prieſts, for in this caſe there is no diſtinction, no exception of any as too mean, no exemption of any as too great.

V. 7. Turtle doves] Why they were uſed in ſacrifices, ſee Annot. on Chap. 1. 14.

V. 8. ſin-offering firſt] The particular known ſin muſt firſt be expiated, becauſe it is beſt known, and therefore ſhould be firſt repented of, and if it be not, it will provoke God to reject the burnt-offering, as Mat. 5.23, 24.

wring off his head] Of which, ſee Annot. on Chap. 1. v. 15.

V. 10. an atonement for him] Or declare him to be purged of his ſin, or the Prieſts mediation between God and the party, is a type of the true atonement betwixt God and man, made by Jeſus Chriſt; and ſo it may be called a typical atonement, as Chriſt is an atonement real.

V. 11. an Ephah] See Annot. on Exod. 16.16.

no oyl ——— neither frankincenſe] This is forbidden in the ſin-offering, if not only for diſtinction from the meat-offering, whereof ſee Lev. 2. 1. according to the will of the Law-maker; for ſignification, that oyl that ſerves for light to the eyes; and lightſomeneſs in the looks, was not ſo ſuitable for ſorrowful confeſſion of ſin, a deed of darkneſſe; and the ſweet frankincenſe might be forbidden, to make the offerer more apprehenſive of the unſavoury ſent of ſin in the noſtrils of the Almighty. Some think it might intimate, that neither by any grace in us, or any prayers proceeding from us, (which were ſignified by oyl and frankincenſe) ſee on chap. 2. 1. but only by Chriſt we are reconciled to God.

V. 12. a memorial] See Annot. on chap. 2. 2.

V. 13. ſhall be the Prieſts] In ſome ſin-offerings the Prieſt had nothing at all, chap. 4. 11. 21. and 16. 17. in others he had only the skin, as where the fleſh was wholly burnt, Levit. 7. 8. in other ſin-offerings, when the blood was ſprinkled upon the brazen Altar, the fat and blood were offered to the Lord, the fleſh reſerved for the Prieſts, Levit. 6. 26. In peace-offerings the fat and blood were offered, as before, but the breſt and right ſhoulder beſtowed upon the Prieſt, Lev. 7, 33, 34. the reſt remained, as of right, to him that brought the offering. In meat-offerings, an handful of the flour, and ſome of the ſalt, oyl, incenſe, and wine being offered, the Prieſt had all the reſt, Lev. 2. 3. & chap. 7. 9. & 9.17.

V. 15. in the holy things] By taking away the firſt-fruits, or tythes, or any other thing due unto the Prieſts and Levites, v. 16. Or by eating of things dedicated to God, as the ſhew-bread, or other things of like kind, which he ought not to do, which muſt be underſtood of ignorant or unadviſed, not preſumptuous defrauding of God of that that belonged to him. See chap. 22. 14.

a ram] This ſacrifice being greater then the former treſpaſſe-offerings, inſinuates the hainouſneſſe of the ſin of Sacriledge.

with thy eſtimation] The eſtimation of the Prieſt, Chap. 27. 12.

ſhekel of the Sanctuary] See Annot. on Gen. 23. 15.

V. 16. a fiſt part] In money, for a recompence of the wrong, for ſo much was added if any of the holy things were brought again by the owner, Lev. 27. 13, 15, 19. and to make men more careful to do all right unto his Sactuary.

V. 17. he ſhall bear his iniquity] Heb. hath born his iniquity.

V. 18. ignorance] Elſe it his ſin againſt God proceed from preſumption, he muſt die, Num. 15. 30.

CHAP. VI.

Verſ. 2. IF a ſoul ſin, and commit a treſpaſſe] This Law is concerning ſins done wittingly. See Num. 5. 6, 7, 8.

againſt the LORD] The particulars repeated are ſins againſt man, as Gen. 20. 6. yet they are ſaid to be againſt the Lord, becauſe againſt his Law; or becauſe thoſe ſins, which are ſecret to men, are yet done in his ſight; whence it is that Peter ſaith of the hypocriſie of Ananias, Thou haſt not lyed unto men, but unto God, Act. 5. 4.

V. 5. the principal] In kind, or in the full worth of it.

fiſt part] See Annot. on Chap. 5. 16. If he were convicted by the Law, he was by vertue of thoſe Judical Laws, Exod. 22. to pay double; but if, as here, out of conſcience he confeſſed what the Law could not convince him of, only a fiſt part was to be added.

V. 6. a ram] For a ſin of Ignorance the Oblation was a Goat, for a ſin of Knowledge a Ram: the more guilty, the more penalty, and the deeper damnation, without repentance.

with thy eſtimation] See the Annot. on Chap. 5. 15.

V. 9. law of the burnt-offering] That is, the ceremonies which ought to be obſerved therein.

burnt-offering] Though other offerings were burnt, at leaſt in part, this was called the burnt-offering before any other, becauſe it was wholly burnt, and it was the daily ſacrifice of a Lamb in the morning and a Lamb in the evening. See Num. 28 3.

all night] The Prieſt was to burn it with a ſlow fire, and by ſo many pieces one after another, that it might laſt all night, which required the intentive vigilancy upon the ſervice, and admoniſhed withal, that God was not to be honoured by day, and diſhonoured by works of darkneſſe in the night, but that men ſhould ſet their waking thoughts towards him upon their beds, who watched over them all the night, Pſa. 4. 4. And the morning ſacrifice was to be burned in the like leiſurely manner, unleſſe ſome other ſacrifice to be performed after it, required a greater and quicker fire.

V. 10. the aſhes which the fire hath conſumed] Aſhes are ſaid to be conſumed, when the conſuming fire hath burned the fewel into aſhes, as meal is ſaid to be ground, when corn by grinding is turned into meal, Iſa. 47. 2.

V. 11. a clean place] See Annot. on Num. 19. 9.

put off his garments] Becauſe the carrying of the aſhes out of the Camp, was not in it ſelf a ſacred action, for which the holy garments were ordained.

V. 12. not be put out] The fire that came down from heaven, and conſumed the burnt-offering, Lev. 9. 24. was to be kept perpetually burning, and neither to be put out, as it is here, nor yet by negligence ſuffered to go out: and this might ſignifie, 1. That no humane devices but onely that which comes by direction from heaven is to be admitted into Gods worſhip. 2. That God accepts no ſacrifice, but that which is offered by that fire from heaven, the Spirit, Matth.3.11. 3. Since it came down firſt as a teſtimony that God did graciouſly accept that firſt ſacrifice, the continuance of it might intimate, that ſtill he was well pleaſed with their ſacrifices, performed according to his direction. See on Chap.10 9.

fat of] The fat was not to be offered alone, but to be burnt upon the daily burnt-offering, for it was too ſmall a matter of it ſelf to be preſented to God.

V. 16. and his ſons] Unleſſe they were for ſome uncleanneſs to be debarred from that holy dyet, Chap. 22.6.

eaten in the holy place] it might be for theſe reaſons; 1. To mind them of ſober uſing theſe holy things, as eating them in Gods preſence. 2. To mind them of the ſingular purity required of thoſe that were honoured above the people. 3. It might intimate, that none without the pale of the Church ſhould be the better for Chriſt.

V. 17. not be baken with leaven] That is, kneaded with leaven, and after baked; and this is ordained not only for Gods peculiar part, but for that which was allotted to the Prieſts alſo; for that part given to God was in the name of the whole, and ſo the whole meat-offering was to be without leaven. See Annot. on Chap. 2 11.

V. 18. ſhall be holy] See Annot. on Exod. 29 37.

V. 20. Aaron and his ſons] That is, of the High Prieſts, and the Prieſts his ſons; this is not perſonal to the Prieſts that then were, but perpetual for ſucceſſion.

perpetual] So oft as the Prieſt ſhall be elected and anointed; yet it is held by ſome, that this meat-offering was a daily oblation, as the Lambe that was ſacrificed morning and evening, whether at the charge of the Prieſt, or whether (which is more probable) it was ſupplyed out of the publick Corban or Treaſury.

V. 22. of his ſons] That is, the eldeſt ſon, if he have no deformity or impediment, which by Law makes him uncapable of that holy calling; as Lev. 21.18. if he be, the ſecond brother is to ſucceed, and ſo in the like caſe the third, &c.

for ever] So long as the Livitical Prieſthood ſhall continue. See on Exod. 12.14.

V. 23. wholly burnt] The offering being made by the Prieſts, and for the Prieſt, his own ſervice was a dept, and ſo he was to have nothing for it; but when he offered for the people, he was for a recompence of his ſervice to have a portion of the ſacrifice; ſee ver. 26 of this Chapter. Or elſe becauſe he was a ſinner and could make no atonement for himſelf, therefore his meat-offering was wholly burnt, not eaten, to teach him to look for ſalvation by Chriſt.

V. 26. ſhall eat it] That is, the blood being ſprinkled, and the fat burnt, except ſuch ſin-offerings whereof the blood was carried into the Tabernacle, ver. 30.

V. 27. ſhall be holy] See Annot. on Exod. 29. 37. & Exod. 30 29.

upon any garment] Meaning the garment of the Prieſts.

waſh that] The blood was to be ſeparate from all profane, or common uſe, in reference to the blood of Chriſt who was holy, harmleſſe, undefiled, ſeparate from ſinners, in reſpect of ſociety in ſin, Heb. 7. 26. though ſometimes he was companion with great ſinners for their converſion from ſin, Matth. 9.12.

in the holy place] In the Court of the Tabernacle, where the waſhing Laver ſtood, and the garment waſhed from the blood, returned to a common uſe, and might be worn and uſed any where as occaſion required.

V. 28. earthen veſſel] The liquor that boyled the ſin offering might pierce into an earthen veſſel, and therefore it was broken; and the rather, becauſe the loſſe was not great, but if the pot wherein it was ſod, were iron or braſſe, it was to be ſcoured and rinſed; all which might ſhadow the infection of ſin.

water] Which was in the Laver neer unto the Altar, Exod. 30. 18.

V. 30. ſin offering] Which was offered by the High-prieſt and the whole Aſſembly, in the yearly expiation, Lev. 16. 27.

whereof the blood] Which was done in the ſacrifice for the Prieſt and all the people, Chap. 4. 6, 18.

burnt] Wholly burnt out of the Camp, Chap. 4 12, 21. nor yet was this a whole burnt-offering; becauſe it was not burned whole upon the Altar, as that was, but was divided into parts, as a ſacrifice for ſin, and ſo carried without the Camp, and burned.

CHAP. VII.

Verſ. 1. Treſpaſſe offering] The names of a ſin and treſpaſſe-offering are divers in the Original, yet not ſo divers in real ſenſe, as in verbal ſound; and ſo, though ſome will have the one, viz. Aſham rendred by Delictum, and the other, viz. Chattah by Peccatum, and underſtand peccatum to be a ſin of commiſſion, and delictum a ſin of omiſſion, yet the Original words are promiſcuouſly uſed and interpreted in the Hebrew Lexicons in the ſame acceptions; notwithſtanding by the difference of ſacrifices it appears by the Text, that there is a different degree of guilt; betwixt the offence which is called Chattah, and the other which is called Aſham, and that in this difference the aggravation lyes upon Aſham, becauſe to Aſham tranſlated treſpaſſe is required a greater and more coſtly ſacrifice, then to Chattah, rendred Sin: Now the aggravation or greater guilt might conſiſt in this, that Aſham, i. e. Treſpaſſe was committed againſt greater light, or with more deliberation, or with more conſent of will, or with inconvenience, or injury to another, which is agreeable to the word Treſpaſſe; for Sin may be immanent in us, but Treſpaſſe is a tranſient guilt, which hath an offenſive opperation upon others, and ſo becomes ſo much the more faulty, as it is more extenſive.

V. 2. place] At the Court gate. See Chap. 1. 3 5.11. & 4.24.29. 33.

V. 6. male] Except he be ceremonially unclean, as ver. 20.

among the Prieſts] The ſin-offering, and treſpaſſe-offering did properly belong unto the offerer, for one Law was for them both; yet the offerer might, and many times (it is like) did give part thereof unto the Prieſts, and to their ſons, but not to their females.

V. 7. one law] The ſame ceremonies, notwithſtading that this word treſpaſſe, ſignifieth leſſe then ſin.

ſhall have it] Meaning the reſt which is left, and not burnt, ſhall be the Prieſts, Lev. 6.26..

V. 10. dry] Becauſe it had no oyl put upon it, or offered with it, Lev 5.11.

as much as another] That is, every Prieſt in his turn of adminiſtration, ſhall have the ſame Oblations allowed him, which happened in his courſe; or, as the Jews expound it, the flower or meale which was offered, was equally to be divided among the Prieſts, but if it were baked, or any way hardned with fire, it was the proper portion of the Prieſts, that did officiate for that time, and every Prieſt according to the lot of his miniſtration, wherein they had an equal priviledge.

V. 11. ſacrifice of peace-offering] Whether it be to obtain a bleſſing, and ſo called an offering for peace or ſafety, or whether Euchariſticall for a bleſſing already received: the latter is ſpoken of, from the eleventh verſe to the ſixteenth; and from thence to the nineteenth of the former.

V. 13. leavened bread] Leaven was not allowed but in this kind of Oblation of giving of thanks, Lev. 2. 11, 12. which though it were given to the Prieſts, was not (as is thought by divers) offered upon the Altar, but tendred to them towards their maintenance onely.

of thankſgiving of his Peace-offering] Peace-offerings were diverſly diſtinguiſhed; ſome were Oblations tendred without a vow, others with a vow: thoſe without a vow, were either by way of abſolute devotion to God, in acknowledgment of his goodneſſe in general, or with reference to ſome precedent mercy received: the peace-offerings that were preſented with a vow, were either ſuch as were ſimply vowed, without reſpect of any, either foregoing, or future favour, or conditionally vowed, as when Jacob vowed, ſaying, If God will be with me, and will keep me in this way that I go, and will give me bread to eat, and raiment to put on, and that I come again to my fathers houſe in peace, then ſhall the Lord be my God, &c. Gen. 28. 20, 21. And as there was this difference in the offerings themſelves, ſo there was difference in the diſpoſal of them when they were offered; thoſe that were offered in reference to a precedent mercy, were to be eaten the ſame day they were offered, verſ. 15. Chap. 22. 30. and if any did eat of them afterward, the ſacrifices became voyd and fruitleſs, verſ. 18. and he that ſo did eat, became profane or unclean, Chap. 19. 7, 8. and was to be puniſhed with death: but thoſe which were for a vow or voluntary offering, might be reſerved till the next day, and no longer, as is expreſſed in the 16. and following verſes, and Chap. 19. 6. and Philo adds this reaſon, becauſe now they are not his that offered them, but Gods to whom they were offered, who ſince he is a beneficent and munificent God, will not have them thruſt into cupbards, but communicated to gueſts, eſpecially to the needy; but the true reaſon may be ſomething in the unrevealed will of the Law-maker. If it be demanded, in what place theſe were to be eaten, whether in the Court of the Temple; the Anſwer is, they might be eaten by the Prieſts, and people alſo, in any clean place, Chap. 10.14. that is, free from all legal uncleanneſſe: Therefore after they had committed to the fire the parts that were to be burned in ſacrifice to God, viz the fat and rump, &c. and given the Prieſt his due out of the ſacrifice, to wit, the right ſhoulder, and the breaſt, they carried the reſt, being boyled, (for nothing was roaſted in the Court of the Temple) to their home; where they ate it with their Family, and whomſoever elſe they would invite, provided that they were clean, verſ. 19.

V. 17. burnt] Both to ſhun ſuperſtition towards Gods holy meat, and to keep it from common and profane uſe.

V. 18. bear his iniquity] That is, he ſhall be puniſhed for his iniquity. In the ſame ſenſe is the phraſe uſed, Lev. 20 17, 19, 20.

V. 19. toucheth] After it is offered; (for being carried out of the holy place, it might caſually be touched by ſome unclean perſon or thing) and if it were polluted before, it ſhould not be offered to God at all; the touch of any unclean thing, or perſon, though but ceremonially unclean, polluteth it; Hagg. 2. 13. and it was not to be eaten, but to be burnt, not by the holy fire of the Altar, but by common fire; but if it were not yet offered, ſuch a touch did not ſo taint it, but it might be eaten, Deut. 12. 15. & 22.

V. 20. the ſoul that eateth] if any being unclean, whether perſonally, as here, or by touching any unclean thing, as in the following verſe, do wittingly eat of the peace-offering, they muſt dye; but if unwittingly, there was a ſacrifice of Atonement preſcribed for them, Chap. 5.2. And this might intimate to us, that they that have given up their names to Chriſt, and yet hate to be reformed, deſtruction will be their end, nor will God reckon them among his people, and more particularly, that they who partake of the ſeals of the Covenant of grace unworthily, eat and drink judgment to themſelves.

V. 21. cut off] See on Chap. 3 14.

V. 23. fat of oxe, &c.] Becauſe theſe three creatures were ſacrificed to God, the fat eſpecially, verſ. 25. See Annot on Chap. 3. 17.

V. 24. And the fat of the beaſt that dyeth of it ſelf &c. may be uſed in any other uſe] Hence ſome conceive, that though the touch of ſuch carkaſſes did render a man unclean, yet the touch of the fat of thoſe dead beaſts that dyed of themſelves did not defile him.

V. 26. blood] See on Chap. 3. 17.

V. 29. ſhall bring his oblation] Though the peace-offerings might be eaten in any clean place, yet they were to be brought to, and offered at the Altar.

V. 30. His own hands] That is, the hands of him that brought the Oblations, upon which the Prieſt put the breaſt of the ſacrifice with the fat, and it may be with them the ſhoulder alſo, and unleavened bread; as Exod. 29. 12. 23, 24. ſome ſilver charger being between his hands and the ſacrifice, and thus the Prieſt putting his hands under the hands of him that held them, lifted them up, and moved them to and fro, as many both Hebrew, and Chriſtian Writers have ſet forth.

wave-offerings] See on Exod. 29. 24.

V. 31. the breaſt ſhall be Aarons] The breaſt belonged to the High Prieſt, and his family, but the right ſhoulder was for the Prieſt that did officiate, or do the office of a Prieſt for that turn.

V. 32. heave-offering] See Annot. on Exod. 29. 24.

V. 35. the anointing of Aaron] That is, the priviledge, reward, or portion of his anointed function.

V. 37. of the conſecrations] Of the Sacrifice which was offered when the Prieſt was conſecrated, Exod. 29. 22.

CHAP. VIII.

THis Chapter, for the moſt part of it, containeth the ſame things which are before ſet down, and expounded, Chap. 29.

V. 8. Urim and thummim] See Annot. on Exod. 28. 30.

V. 9. holy crown] Or, plate of pure gold. So called, becauſe the Hebrew word Nezer, ſignifieth a crown, of which form this plate was; and it was called holy, becauſe it was ſeparated to an holy uſe; and becauſe on it was graven, holineſſe unto the Lord, Exod. 28. 36.

V. 10. anointing oyl] Of this, ſee Exod. 30. verſ. 23, 24, 25.

V. 11. ſeven times] That number commonly notes perfection, becauſe the ſeventh day, being a day of reſt after work, was a witneſſe that the work was done; and it is a number of holineſſe alſo, becauſe the ſeventh day was conſecrated to holy reſt, and ſo the fitter to be obſerved in conſecration of Prieſts to holy duties, principally to be performed on that day, See Annot. on 1 Chr. 15. 26. & on Joſh. 6. 13.

V. 14. bullock] For bullock, ſee Exod 29. 35, 36.

V. 15. Altar] That is, of the burnt-offering.

poured the blood at the bottom of the Altar] The Altar hath a twofold ſanctification; the one paſſive, whereby it is ſanctified, as in this place; the other active, whereby it ſanctifieth the gifts or oblations that are offered upon it, Mat. 23. 19.

reconciliation upon it] By offering for the ſins of the people.

V. 17. his hide] In other burnt-offerings which are not of conſecration; or offering for himſelf, the Prieſt hath the skin.

V. 19. he killed it] That is, Moſes, ſo alſo ver. 20. 23. which he did, becauſe yet the Prieſts were not eſtabliſhed in their office.

V. 24. tip of] See Annot. on Exod. 29. 20.

V. 27. wave-offering] See Annot. on Exod. 29. 24.

V. 39. anoynting oyl] That which was common to Aaron with the Inferiour Prieſts, was the ſprinkling of oyntment mingled with blood upon them, and their garments, and the anointing of the right ear, and right thum, and upon the great toe of the right foot, Exod. 29. 20. the compoſition whereof is preſcribed, Exod. 30. 23, 30. the conſecration peculiar to the High Prieſt, was by pouring out that precious oyntment upon his head, verſ. 12. of this Chapter, and Exod. 29. 7. Pſal. 133. 2.

V. 34. commanded to do] Hereafter, concerning the conſecration of the High Prieſt, and thoſe of inferiour order, both for conſecration and atonement here preſcribed.

V. 35. ſhall ye abide] Now they have what belongeth to conſecration for the Prieſts office, he requireth their diligent and conſtant reſidence upon their Charges.

day and night] During which time, though they went not to bed, they might take ſome refreſhing by ſleep in a ſitting poſture.

that ye dye not] Death is the due reward of diſobedience to God, though but in a ceremonial obſervance.

V. 36. by the hand] By commiſſion made to Moſes, as it were delivered into his hand, Mal. 1. 1.

CHAP. IX.

Verſ. 1. E*ighth day*] After ſeven dayes ſpent in the compleat conſecration of the Prieſts, and the Tabernacle. This fell in the firſt moneth of the ſecond year of the Iſraelites departure out of Egypt.

Elders of Iſrael] Who were called for the more ſolemn and honourable entrance of them into the execution of the Prieſtly function.

V. 2. Take thee] The High Prieſt was to begin his office with ſacrifice for himſelf, that he might mediate betwixt God and the people with more acceptation; in this, (though otherwiſe a Type of Chriſt) he was far inferiour to Chriſt, who was ſo holy, as not to need a ſacrifice for himſelf, Heb. 7. 27. ſo holy, as to ſanctifie the unholy by his ſacrifice.

ſinne-offering] Aaron entereth into the profeſſion of the Prieſthood, and offereth the four principal ſacrifices, to wit, the burnt-offering, the ſin-offering, the peace offering, and the meat-offering.

V. 3. of the firſt year] That is, that neither calf, nor kid, nor goat, muſt be above a year old.

V. 4 will appear] Sending fire from heaven to kindle and conſume the ſacrifice; ſee Annot. on verſe. 24.

V. 5. before the Lord] Or the door of the Tabernacle, where the glory of God appeareth.

V. 7. make an atonement] Read for the underſtanding of this place, Heb. 5. 3. & Chap. 7. 27.

V. 9. put it upon the hornes of the Altar] To wit, of the braſen Altar; which was firſt to be ſprinkled, and by that was paſſage made to the Altar of incenſe, as afterwards. See Chap. 4. 5, 6, 7. See alſo and compare, ver 15. of this Chapter, with Lev. 4. 13, 17. 18.

V. 10. he burnt] That is, he laid them in order, and ſo they were burnt, when the Lord ſent down fire upon them: ſo that what is ſet down, verſ. 10, 13, 17, 20. is brought in by way of anticipation before the 24. verſe.

V. 17. of the morning] The daily ſacrifice was firſt in the morning, and laſt in the evening; yet the burning of incenſe in the morning, was ever before the morning ſacrifice.

V. 20. upon the breaſt] Of the ſacrificed beaſt.

V. 21. waved] See Annot. on Exod. 29. 24.

V. 22. lifted up] His hands were lifted up towards God, and ſtretched out towards the people, to ſhew, that he expected from above the bleſſing which he deſired to beſtow upon the people, which, it may be, was in ſuch a form as is ſet down, Num. 6. 24.

came down] Becauſe the Altar was neerer the Sanctuary, which was the upper end; therefore he is ſaid to come down.

V. 32. went into] To carry the blood of the ſacrifice for ſin, according to the Ordinance, Lev. 4. 7, 16.

bleſſed the people] Or prayed for them; and withal he might ſpeak peace unto them in Gods Name.

the glory] That is, an extraordinary ſplendour, or brightneſs, appearing out of the cloudy pillar, as Exod. 16. 10.

V. 24. came a fire] For the ſeven dayes of ſacrifice before, Moſes uſed fire, but after the eighth day, fire in a miraculous manner deſcended from above, and conſumed the ſacrifice; to teſtifie Gods approbation of the inſtituted Prieſthood, and to breed more reverend acceptation of it among the people: this fire thus ſent from heaven was to be kept continually burning, that it might never go out, as God appointed, Chap. 6. and therefore it was charily carried in ſome veſſel for the purpoſe, when they journeyed in the wilderneſs; and ſo it continued untill the Temple of Solomon; and then fire came down again from heaven, 2 Chr. 7. 1. which continued untill the captivity of Babylon, and after that it was ſaid to have been miraculouſly renewed in the ſecond of Macc. 1. 18. See on Gen. 4. 4.

CHAP. X.

Verſ. 1. S*trange fire*] Not taken from the fire of the Altar, which was ſent from heaven, Chap. 9. 24. but from that fire wherewith the fleſh of the ſacrifices was boyled; which, as ſome conceive, was ſtrange, in reſpect of that which was cuſtomably uſed for burning of incenſe, Chap. 16. 10. and ſacrifices: ſo that is ſtrange in reſpect of God, which is moſt familiar with men; and contrariwiſe, as Luk. 16. 15.

commanded them not] In Gods worſhip God's command, not mans wit, or will, muſt be our rule. See Eccles. 5. 1.

V. 2. fire from the Lord] This either came from heaven, or from out of the Tabernacle. See Num. 16. 35. anſwerable to it: they that contemned the fire ſet down from heaven, by fire from heaven are conſumed, or rather killed, as with lightning; for their bodies were carried out of the Camp, and buried.

V. 3. I will be ſanctified] They that come neer me in an holy miniſtration, or profeſſion, muſt above others witneſs my holineſs in their reverend and religious handling of holy things; and if they do not, I will avow mine own holineſs in a juſt vengeance againſt their wickedneſſe.

and Aron held his peace] Pſal. 39. 9. In this ſtory concerning Aaron and his ſons, there are many things remarkable; as the great judgment of God, for a ſeeming light offence, upon his ſons; and Aarons ſilence, whether as oppreſſed with the greatneſſe of his grief, which oftentimes time wants the vent of anſwerable expreſſions ; or convinced of the juſtneſs of the puniſhment, and the good event which was to enſue upon it, as the glory of God, and converting the croſſe into a bleſſing to his poſterity.

V. 5. in their coats] That is, their linen garments, wherein they miniſtred ; for as in theſe they ſinned, ſo in theſe were they buried.

V. 6. Uncover not] Put not off your Mitres and Bonnets, to put on the covering of mourners (whoſe cuſtome is to have their heads covered in an eſpecial manner, 2 Sam. 15.30 & 19.4. Jer. 14.3, 4.) as though ye lamented for them, prefering your natural affections before the Divine judgements, Chap. 19.28 Deut. 14.1. & Chap. 33.9.

upon all the people] The Prieſts, if they be good, may bleſſe the people ; if bad, may be like to bring curſes upon them.

bewail the burning] Not ſo much in pity to them, as in devotion to God, whoſe honour impeached by their preſumption, is more cauſe of mourning then their death who juſtly deſerved it.

kindled] In deſtroying Nadab and Abihu, and menacing the reſt unleſs they repent.

V. 7. ye ſhall not go] See on Chap. 8 35.

V. 9. nor ſtrong drink] Leſt it ſhould ſo affect their heads or hearts, as to make them fail either in devotion, or in decency and decorum belonging to their holy miniſtration ; See on 1 King. 3.15. & Prov. 31. 4.5. & 1 Tim. 3.3. and from this ordinance, preſently made upon the act of Nadab and Abihu, it is thought, they were raiſed up to this preſumption, by the fume of ſtrong drink. The Divel is Gods Ape, by whom, in imitation of this, the Egyptian Prieſts were forbidden wine and fleſh continually : and ſo did he imitate the continual burning of the fire upon the Altar, Chap. 6.12. and that in divers places among the Heathens, as among the Perſians, who made a God of it ; and among Grecians, who at Delphi worſhippeth it in the Temple of Apollo ; and the Romans, who worſhipped it under the name of Veſta, committing the charge of it to the Veſtal Virgins ; where if it chanced to go out, it was held fatal to the City, Rhodigin : Antiq. Lect. l. 15. c. 14.

V. 12. Take the meat-offering that remaineth] That the ſevere judgement on Nadab and Abihu might not make them ſo to morn, as to neglect their meat, or to intermit their ſervice, or to be leſſe lightſome in it then before ; they are encouraged to their duty, as it were, by a kind invitation to participate of the proviſion of Gods Table ; for ſo the Altar is called. Mal. 1.7.

V. 13. the holy place] That is, in the court of the Tabernacle neer to the Altar of the burnt ſacrifice. See Chap. 6.26.

V. 14. daughters] For the breſt and ſhoulders of the peace-offering might be brought to the prieſts families, ſo that their daughters might eat of them ; as alſo of the offering of firſt fruits, and the Eaſter lamb.

V. 15. heave ſhoulder] See Annot. on Exod. 29.24.

V. 16. ſought the goat] Upon the ſudden and dreadfull death of Nadab and Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar their brethren, either by diſtraction, or conſideration, had burned the goat of the ſin-offering without the Camp, contrary to the due order, for it ſhould be eaten by the Prieſts. See Annot. on ver. 8. Moſes not knowing what was become of it, diligently ſought after it. out of a care that Gods Ordinance ſhould be obſerved, and the Prieſtly rights preſerved : read verſ. 17, 18.

left alive] And not conſumed by fire, as Nadab and Abihu their brethren were

V. 17. to bare the iniquity] That is, to appear in their ſtead, and to confeſſe their iniquity, and to make atonement for them. There is another bearing of iniquity, when the Prieſts make themſelves guilty of the peoples ſin by their ſilence, Ezek. 33.6. but that is not meant in this place.

V. 18. not brought in within] The goat of the ſin-offering was not of thoſe kinds of ſacrifices, whoſe blood was to be ſprinkled in the Sanctuary, upon the Altar of incenſe ; for ſuch ſacrifices were not be be eaten as this ſin-offering of the goat was, but to be burned without the Camp, Chap. 6 30.

V. 19. accepted] Aaron being paſſionately affected at the death of two ſons, and the chiding of other two by Moſes, intimates his unfitneſſe, in regard of his diſtemper of his mind, to do this office with acceptation to God, who would have them to eat with joyfulneſs in his preſence, Deut. 12.7. & 26.4. Hoſ. 9.4.

V. 20. content] Moſes conſidering his great ſorrow, bares with his infirmity, at leaſt for that time ; yet afterwards when he was in better temper, he might take opportunity to ſpeak that which then he could not well have born.

CHAP. XI.

IN this Chapter, the Hebrews are forbidden many ſorts of creatures for food ; not that any creature was evil or unclean of its own nature, for God made all things good at firſt, Gen. 1. verſ. laſt. Rom. 14. 14. 1 Tim. 4.4. Tit. 1.15. but for manifold reaſons : firſt, in reſpect of God ; ſecondly, in reſpect of men : Firſt, for God ; he hereby ſheweth his right to diſpoſe of the creatures, as well negatively, what they ſhall not do, as poſitively, what they ſhall do. Secondly for men ; this abſtinence was of uſe, both phyſically and morally : for the firſt ; many of theſe forbidden meats yeeld no good nouriſhment to the body, and ſo are not generally ſo wholeſome, as thoſe that are allowed : ſecondly, for the morall uſe of theſe prohibitions ; it was to exerciſe the Jews in obedience to God in forbearance of things in themſelves lawful, and many of them delightfull to the palate. Secondly, in the practice of temperance againſt the ranging of the appetite after exceſſive variety. Thirdly, in ſhuning the vices that were Symbolically ſignified in the qualities of the creatures ; as the filthineſſe of the dogg and ſwine, 2 Pet. 2. 22. Fourthly, in keeping the further diſtance from the Tables and communion of ſuch as Aliens from the true Religion, whereby they might be corrupted both in their conſciences and manners.

Verſ. 1. UNto Moſes and Aaron] The Civill and Eccleſiaſtical Governours, are both to have a care that the Ordinance of God be obſerved. See Ezek. 44. 23. & Num. 9.6.

V. 2. Theſe are the beaſts] This difference of clean and unclean beaſts was revealed to the Fathers from the begining. See Annot. on Gen. 7.2.

V. 3. parteth the hoof] He noteth four ſorts of beaſts ; ſome only chew the cud, and ſome have only the foot cleft ; others neither chew the cud. nor have the hoof cleft ; the fourth both cheweth the cud and hath the hoof divided ; of which laſt ſort onely, they were to take their food of fleſh.

V. 4. divideth not the hoof] The dividing of the hoof is to be underſtood of a dividing into two parts, as in the hoof of a Cow, or a Sheep ; not a ſubdividing into many parts, as in the foot of a Cony, See ver. 26. & Deut. 14.6.

V. 5. Cony] The Original word Shaphan, is a general name of fearful creatures, which run away and hide themſelves in holes, from the light and ſociety of man ; moſt take it for a Cony, which hath its hiding place in the rocks, Prov. 30. 26. Pſal. 104.18. but ſome take it for a creature in Paleſtine, about as big as an Hedg-hogg, but made partly like a Mouſe, partly like a Bear, that hides it ſelf in holes as Conies do.

V. 8. not touch] This prohibition requires a great eſtrangement from all pollution, which is morally to be obſerved at all times, Eſay. 52.11. though under the Goſpel ſuch Ceremonies be aboliſhed, Col. 2.20,21.

V. 9. fins and ſcales] Fins and ſcales in fiſhes, anſwer to wings and feathers in birds ; ſo they are more in motion and action, and are therefore wholeſomer then Eeles and Lampreys, which having neither, lye lazily in the mud.

V. 10. that move] As little fiſh engendered of the ſlime.

living thing] As they which come of generation.

V. 13. Oſſifrage] Some take the Oſſifrage to be a Griffin, which is a bird of an Eagles kind, but bigger then an ordinary Eagle, and is very ſtrong and ravenous, having a very crooked beak and talons, whereby it is able to take up the leſſer ſort of living creatures, and by daſhing them down to break their bones ; for which cauſe it is called an Oſſifrage, which ſignifieth a bone-breaker : and not onely ſo, but, as ſome report, ſome of the Eagles kind are found ſo great and ſtrong, that they can carry a whole Oxe or Horſe at once to their neaſt, to feed their young ; yea and take up an Elephant into the ayr, and when they have killed him, by letting him fall to the earth, they devour him ; as Ulyſſes Aldrovandus, and Paulus Venetus report.

Oſpray] Some take the Oſpray for the ſame thing with the Oſſifrage ; as if it were a changing of the word Osbreak into Oſpray. The name of it in Greek, , ſignifieth a Sea-Eagle, which is a bird of great bigneſs, and of ſharp ſight, whereby diſcerning the prey in the water, he ſuddenly ſtriketh at it, and ſeizeth on it, Plin. lib. 10. ch. 3.

V. 16. Owl] The word is rendred by ſome, an Oſtrich, which is a great bird of ſo heavy a body, that her wings will not bear her up in the ayr, and ſo they ſerve not for flying, though for flight or running faſt on foot ; the Hebrew is Daughter of the Owl : whereby the mother is not permitted to be eaten, but the rather prohibited ; becauſe the old is not ſo eaſily digeſted as the young.

the Night-hawke] That is, the Night-raven, which ſeeth to take his prey in the night ; theſe Night-birds might be the rather forbidden, to mind Gods people to avoid deeds of darkneſs, and to walk as children of light, Epheſ. 5.11.

V. 17. Cormorant] A bird which by driving into the water (as the name in Latine ſignifieth) taketh fiſhes ; the vulgar tranſlation renders the Originall word Shalach, by the word Ibis, which ſignifieth an Egyptian bird ſomewhat high with ſtiffe legges, and a long bill, which doth good ſervice in that Countrey, by killing the Serpents brought out of Lybia with Southern winds, againſt which the Egyptians were wont to make their prayers unto Ibis for preſervation from them, Plin. lib. 10. Chap. 28.

V. 18. Gier-Eagle] Though it may not be for food to the body it may be of uſe for inſtruction to the mind ; for according to the Original, the name Rahham ſignifieth tender love of the damme to the young.

V. 19. Stork] The nature of the Stork (as the name Hhaſidhah, importeth) is, on the contrary, to be kind to its damme, and it is noted to build high Pſal. 104.17. and to feed low on fiſhes, ſnakes, and frogs, for which cauſe it may be the rather rejected as unfit for food.

V. 20. All fowels that creep] As fowls they ſhould flye ; but creeping baſely on the ground, they may note the ambiguous, and earthly-minded diſpoſition of worldly men.

upon all four] Some things that flye have four feet ; ſome have more, as hornets, bees, flies ; and thoſe that have more things then two, have ſno fewer then four; and thoſe that have more then two are excluded from uſe of meat, (as unclean) when they who have four are mentioned in the prohibition of meats; ſee verſ.42.

V. 22. Locuſt] The Locuſt is of divers kinds, and of them the Graſhopper is one, ſo that ſome for Graſhopper read Locuſt; one ſort of them is called Ophiomachus, of making war with Serpents, whereof Ariſtotle maketh mention, *de hiſt. Animal.*l. 9.c.6. and though to us the Locuſt or Graſhopper be loathſome as for meat, yet in themſelves, and to all, they are not ſo, but ſerve for food to ſome people; as In India there be Locuſts of three foot long, whereof the Natives uſe the legges being dryed for ſauce, Plin. lib.11. ch.29,&c. the Ethiopians and Parthians, and ſome other people uſe them for meat, Ariſtot. hiſt. Animal.lib.6; ch.30. and with ſome, powdered Locuſts is their only food, Plin, lib.6. ch.30. And ſo do many eat froggs and ſnailes, forbidden: verſ.30. which afford ſo much good nouriſhment (being boyled in milk) as ſerves to repair the decay of the body, made by by a Cough and Conſumption: and in ſome places Piſmires are uſed for dainties, the different cuſtome of Nations becoming a kind of law, for the different uſe of the creatures for mans ſuſtenance; howſoever, though whatſoever God forbiddeth be not in it ſelf unfit for meat; as we ſee by our uſe of the Swine, the Swan, and other creatures; yet nothing that God allowed was unwholeſome to thoſe to whom it is allowed: Beſides, in divers Countries the kinds of creatures are ſo divers, as that which is very good in ſome places, is ſcarce tolerable in others. *S*ee. Matth.3.44.

Beetle] The Original word Hhargol, is not found in any other place.

V. 23. which have four feet] That is, if they had all four equal; but if the hinder feet be longer, whereby they might leap, they were clean as is expreſſed, verſ.21.

V. 24. untill the even] Not alwayes, and this limitation might mind the people of a ſtate of Religion where theſe Ceremonies ſhould ceaſe.

V. 25. beareth] That is, out of the Camp, or out of the way, as being offenſive to paſſengers.

V. 26. not cloven footed] See Annot. on ver. 5.

V. 27. pawes] Or, hands. That is, whoſe four-feet are in uſe like hands, as in an Ape, or Bear.

V. 29. after his kind] For the creatures were to ingender, and increaſe according to their own kind; and not by mixture with other kinds, Lev. 19.19.

V. 30. Camelion] A Camelion is a creature like unto a Lyzard, or Newt, in which two things are very ſtrange; the one, that he ſeemeth to live onely on the Ayr; which makes him for the moſt part to gape, and put his head upward to draw it in; the other, that it taketh what colour is next him by reſemblance, unleſſe it be red, or white, Ariſt. hiſt. Animal. lib.2. ch.11. Plin. hiſt. lib.8. c.33.

V. 31. unclean] Not only to eat, But to touch their dead bodies, verſ.34. 40. and this uncleanneſs, as long as it laſted, was a cauſe of prohibition to enter into the Sanctuary, and to partake of the ſacrifices.

V. 32. or skinne] Skinnes are uſed ſometimes for bottles, ſometimes for bagges, and thoſe ſerve either for moiſt or dry things.

unclean] This was onely a Ceremonial uncleaneſſe, not a Moral; and therefore Chriſtians are not defiled by ſuch means: yet while the touching of them was forbidden by God, though in it ſelf it did not defile the man in his body; much leſſe in his ſoul, the diſobedience even in ſuch a ſmall matter brought a guilt upon the ſoul, which did defile it, while the prohibition was in force.

untill the even] And at even the uncleaneſs expireth, or vaniſheth of it ſelf.

V. 33. ye ſhall break it] Why waſhing ſhould not ſerve the turn for cleanſing in earthen veſſels as well as others, no natural reaſon can be rendred: if by earthen veſſels we underſtand reprobates, as ſome do, the breaking of them may ſignifie their deſtruction, as Pſal. 2.9. Jer.9.11. as the waſhing of the other, and ſparing them, may note their cleanſing by the blood of Chriſt.

V. 34. ſuch water] That is, unclean water, coming from an unclean veſſel or place.

V. 36. that which toucheth] So much water of the fountain as toucheth the carcaſſe and no more ſhall be unclean; and though an unclean thing fell into a Fountain, or ciſtern, yet it is held by many not to be polluted, becauſe of the neceſſary uſe of water upon all occaſions.

V. 37. ſowing ſeed] Becauſe being ſown man had nothing to do with it for food, until it was dead and quickned again, Joh.12.24. 1 Cor.15.36. and ſo none uncleanneſs could be imputed unto it, that was not taken from it before it came to the uſe of meat.

V. 38. but if any water] That is, by ſteeping the ſeed, not for ſowing (as before) but for the uſe of meat, as Wheat is uſed for meat without grinding or baking, for that which is wet is more apt to take or retain any defilement that falls upon it, then that which is dry; in which caſe it was not to be eaten, but to be given to beaſts.

V. 39. if any beaſt of which ye may eat, dye] By inward ſickneſs, or outward violence, as of ſtrangling; (ſo that the blood were not let out of the veins) or of tearing by beaſts; ſuch a beaſt became ceremonially unclean, and might neither be eaten, nor touched; yet with exception of the fat, in ſuch a caſe; whereof ſee Annot. on Chap.7.24.

V. 40. he that eateth] That is, ignorantly; or of urgent neceſſity; for if he did it knowingly and with his will, his contempt was to be puniſhed with death, Num.15.30.

V. 43. defiled thereby] Either by eating or touching them.

V. 44. ſanctifie your ſelves] That is, you ſhall by application of theſe ceremonial ordinances to your ſouls, inure your ſelves to a carefulneſs in your converſation, that you be not polluted with the ſociety of ſinners, who are morally unclean, as creatures are unclean ceremonially; and as by touching them, there was contracted a ceremonial uncleaneſs, ſo may a man become morally defiled by familiarity with the wicked: this was the ſpiritual uſe of this carnal commandement, for meat in it ſelf was nothing to the ſanctity or ſin of the ſoul, Mark.7.15. Rom.14.14. 1 Cor.8.8.

V. 45. For I am holy] I hate all manner of uncleaneſſe; eſpecially, the Idolatry of the Gentiles, which they commit upon the creatures, even thoſe which are moſt baſe, as ſuch as creep or crawl upon the earth, and my holineſs muſt be to you a pattern for your imitation and practice.

CHAP. XII.

Verſ. 2. SEparation] The ſeparation for uncleanneſs was divers; for ſome were ſeparate, not onely from participation of holy things but from civil ſociety, as lepers; ſuch as had a flux of their natural ſeed, and thoſe that were polluted by the dead, Numb.5.2. Next unto theſe was the ſeparation of a woman upon her child-birth, or having her monethly courſes, during which time ſhe was ſhut up, at home, from all communion of company, ſave ſuch as were (out of charitable neceſſity) to miniſter unto her; for whatſoever, or whomſoever ſhe touched, contracted thereby a ceremonial uncleanneſs: Joſeph. l. 2. contr. Appion. Other inferiour or leſſer uncleanneſſes, (though they did ſhut the party out of the Sanctuary, and from touching or eating of holy things) did not excommunicate any from company with others; See on Deut. 12.22. this ceremonial uncleanneſs was taken notice of, where there was no moral impurity, nor could be, as in the *V*irgin Maries purification, Luk.2.22:

infirmity] That is, by her monethly purgings of blood, called commonly womens ſickneſſe, and for that women were unclean ſeven dayes, Chap. 15.verſ.19. during which time they were to be ſeparated at home from their husbands, and abroad from the Tabernacle, and from touching any hallowed thing; this was for their uncleanneſs without child-bearing, but with it, the firſt ſeven dayes the woman was to be ſeparated from all, but ſuch as were to do offices of neceſſary and charitable attendance on her perſon; and from familiarity with her husband, (as an husband) ſhe was to be ſeparated for a far longer time, as until the dayes of her purifying were fulfiled, as they are reckoned, verſ.4.& 5.

V. 2. on the eighth day] On this day was appointed circumciſion of the male children, which being a Sacrament was more ſeaſonably adminiſtred, when the ceremonial uncleanneſs, here mentioned, was paſt.

V. 3. threeſcore and ſix dayes] Which with the two weeks of ſtricteſt ſeparation, made up eighty dayes; juſt twice as long as for the birth of a male child; for this, ſome ſeek for reaſons in nature, and affirm, that after a female birth, the purgings ſometimes are not wholly ended until the eightieth day, whereas, after a male, they uſe not to continue aboue fourty dayes; So Hippocr. de natura pueri Valeſ. de ſacra philos. Chap.18. But others deny this, and hold it a vain thing, to ſearch for natural reaſons for this preſcript, as taking it to be purely ceremonial, (as circumciſion was) which yet may morally mind women of their original cauſuality in ſin, wherein they had the firſt hand, 1 Tim.2.14. which is the greateſt uncleanneſs of all others, that they may be leſs proud, and more holy; yet it might be, that the longer time was taken for a female birth then for a male, becauſe the male was circumciſed, the female was not; but this reaſon will not reach to the proportion forementioned.

V. 6. for a ſonne, or &c.] Not for the purification of the child, but of her ſelf the mother of it.

for a ſin-offering] That may be underſtood either ceremonially, becauſe, by the Livitical Law, ſhe was held unclean; or morally, becauſe, by natural corruption, ſhe might not onely be guilty of a ſinful conception, but by impatience under the pain of child-birth might ſin againſt God.

door of the Tabernacle] Where the burnt-offerings were wont to be offered.

V. 7. male or female] Though the uncleanneſs were different for male or female, the cleanſing was the ſame for both; one and the ſame Chriſt typified in the ſacrifice, is the ſame for juſtification to male and female, *G*al 3.28.

V. 8. clean] From that ceremonial uncleanneſs, ſo that ſhe may be reſtored to that from whence ſhe was before debarred.

CHAP. XIII.

IN this Chapter (ſaid a famous School-man, and Commentator of the Popiſh party, when he had rehearſed it) of the diſcerning of the Leproſie in men and in garments, there is nothing for me to expound; but I leave this charge to the Phyſicians: but Divines muſt not ſo paſs it over. The Leproſie treated of in this Chapter, ſeemeth to be, not onely that diſeaſe which is beſt known by that name in latter times, but as Valeſius obſerveth, de ſacra Philoſophia, Chap.19. by the various deſcription of it, it may be conceived to contain the ſeveral kinds of diſeaſes, at leaſt divers of them, which appear in the skin, as Morphew, Itch, Ring-worm, Scaldhead, and other breakings out of the skin, which overſpread or cruſt it with a kind of tetter, ſcab, or skurf; as alſo that diſeaſe which ariſing from a groſſe diſtemper of the humours, cauſeth the looſening of the hair of the head and beard, and the falling of it off from the roots : all which might be called leproſie, being one way or other like that which is commonly known by that name, which was more incident to ſuch as lived in hot regions,as Egypt ; eſpecially , if their multitude were great, and room little ; which might occaſion the ſlander of Juſtin the Hiſtorian againſt the Jews ; which was, that they were driven out of Egypt,becauſe they were infected with the ſcal,or itch ; So Juſtine hiſtor, lib. 36. p 28. There is another diſeaſe imputed to the Jews by Appion, to which Joſephus maketh Anſwer in his ſecond Book againſt that Grammarian, p. 783. but that is brought in upon another occaſion, which hath no affinity with the fiction of Juſtine.

Verſ. 2. B*Right ſpot*] Shining like the ſcale of a fiſh,for ſo the Leproſie ſometimes beginneth to appear.

V. 3 white] This is the firſt ſort of Leproſie obſerved, which is diſcerned by the white colour of the hair, and the degree of inherence of it below the ſkinne and within the fleſh : of this colour, was Moſes leprous hand, Exod. 4. 6. and Miriam his ſiſters leproſie , as ſiſter to his was of the ſame complection, Num. 12. 10.

deeper then the skin] Which eateth into the fleſh. See Num. 12. 12. and 2 King. 5. 14. The leproſie of the body is a reſemblance of the defilement of the ſoul, and the depth of it below the skin, though but one ſpot, is as ſin deeply rooted in the ſoul by habitual inherence, though but one. See v. 20, 25. 26. 30, 35.

the Prieſt ſhall look] The Prieſt rather then the Phyſician, becauſe it belonged to him to admit, or to keep back from the Sanctuary, and ſervices of Religion, 2 Chron 26. 20 and to ſee that the ceremonies of cleanſing were duly obſerved ; yet when he viewed the leproſie , he had (as ſome conceive) the advice of the Phyſician ; for the profeſſion of Phyſick is ancient , as appeareth, Gen. 50. 2. though the authority of pronouncing leprous or clean, belonged to the Prieſts onely. And for this diſcerning, or differencing between the ſound and infected, (touching this diſeaſe) they might have ſufficient knowledg, either by Art, or obſervation, and the direction of the rulers here delivered ; or, if need were,by revelation from God, for God would not call the Prieſts to an office, for which he would not ſee them furniſhed ſome way with gifts to diſcharge it ; and if the Prieſt pronounced any unclean, they were put out of the Camp, whoſoever he or ſhe were. See Matth. 8. 4. Job 33. 23.

pronounce him unclean] Heb make him unclean. But the meaning is, he ſhall declare or pronounce him ſo to be ; as Ezekiel is ſaid to deſtroy the City,by an aſſured prediction of the Cities deſtruction, Ezek. 43. 3. And ſo the miniſterial remiſſion of ſins, is ſometimes phraſed, as if it were Judicial, when it is but declarative ; which though another may do as fully as he, as another may ſprinkle water with the words of Baptiſm, yet it cometh with more aſſurance and comfort from him, who doth it with an eſpecial warrant from God. See Chap. 14. 11.

V. 6. and be clean] Though he be not clean from the ſcab , yet he ſhall be pronounced clean from the leproſie,and ſo not be ſhut out of the Campe , though he might keep in , becauſe , in ſuch a caſe , he could not be ſeen with acceptation of others , for humane ſociety.

V. 10. riſing be white] Phyſicians of latter times, make trial of leproſie by rubbing of the fleſh, and pricking with a needle : for if the fleſh being rubbed turn not red, and if pricked with a needle it bleed not, it is a ſign of leproſie in a deep degree of infection ; and if it eat into the fleſh and the bones, as ſometimes it doth, it is incurable.

quick raw fleſh] The former kind of leproſie appeared in the hair and skin,this ſheweth a deeper degree of malignity,fretting into the quick fleſh and making it raw.

V. 13. covered all his fleſh] Such a ſcurf, though it were a grievous plague,was not the infective plague of leproſie;and it argueth the ſtrength of naturall conſtitution within , when the venome of the diſeaſe was driven out, and diffuſed over the outward parts, except when here and there raw fleſh appeared , which was a token that it was not wholly driven out, but lurked ſtill in the fleſh.

V. 16. changed into white] When a white skin cometh upon the place that was raw, it is a ſign that the fleſh is healed.

V. 23. ſpread not] That is, a clearing ſign , becauſe the leproſie is a running or ſpreading diſeaſe. See verſ. 28, 34.

V. 29. head or beard] The head common to man and woman , the beard peculiar to the man, yet both ſeem to be ſaid of both.

V. 30. yellow] Verſ. 3. The leproſie of other parts was noted by a white hair, this of the head and beard by a yellow thin hair, in ſuch ſort,that if a man were of yellow hair before , it might be diſcerned what was natural to him,and what adventitious coming from the diſeaſe.

V. 33. ſhaven] That the hair taken away,it may the better appear whether the leproſie ſpread.

V. 36. not ſeek for yellow] That is, he ſhall not care whether yellow hair be there or no.

V. 39. freckled ſpot] Like the Morphew , which ſome conceive to be one of the fidiſgurings and diſeaſes here deſcribed in this Chapter.

V. 40. fallen off] This is thought by Phyſicians, to be properly that diſeaſe which is called Alopecia, a word derived from the name of a Fox, becauſe it is obſerved to belong to that kinde of creature more then others ; which ſometimes proceedeth from ſuch a degree of malignity , as is of like nature with, and ſo cometh under the name of Leproſie.

V. 41. he is bald] The hair, though it be an excrement , is an ornament to the head and to the face alſo,where there is maturity of age for a beard,and when it cometh kindly,it ſheweth a good temperament of heat and moiſture : and therein as many take a pride , which God ſometimes puniſheth that pride with a ſhameful bladneſſe, Iſa. 3. 24.

V. 45. clothes rent] Which might conduce to the cure of the diſeaſed ; for ſo the bad humours might the better evaporate and breath out ; and to the caution or ſafety of the ſound, who might thereby be warned to keep a due diſtance from the infected party ; for they did wear long garments cloſe before : and it might alſo ſignifie the ſorrow of the Leper, becauſe of his preſent ſenſe of ſin and miſery ; which is often ſignified by the rending of the garments in the Scriptures. See on Gen. 37. 2.

covering upon his upper lip] See Ezek. 24. 17. and Mic. 3. 7.

unclean, unclean] As lamenting his miſery , and giving warning to others againſt the infection. Such as leproſie is to the body, is ſin to the ſoul ; and therefore we muſt flee , from the infection of it , as a loathſom leproſie, Eſa. 52. 11. Lam. 4. 15. the cauſe of this diſeaſe here deſcribed, many times, did not ſo much proceed from a natural diſtemper, as (out of an exceſſe of flegme, or black melancholy blood) from a divine judgement for the ſin of man ; See 2 King. 15. 5. Eſpecially that kind of it, which ſet ſo deep an infection upon the clothes and walls, Lev. 14. 37. And it is obſerved to have moſt infected the Jewes upon their revoltings from Religion , and that Chriſtians took the infection of it from their Countrey, when they came thither to manage the war,undertaken for recovery of it out of the hands of the Turks.

V. 46. without the Camp] As Miriam was, Numb. 12. 14. This was during the peoples journeying in the wilderneſſe ; for afterward when they were ſettled in Canaan,the lepers were ſhut out of the Cities, Luk. 17. 12. 2 King. 7. 3 . at leaſt were confined to an houſe by themſelves, though Kings, as Azariah was; 2 King. 15. 5. and 2 Chron. 26. 21. yet upon neceſſary occaſions they were permitted to come into the ſtreets and high-wayes, obſerving a due diſtance,that they might neither give offence, nor others take offence from them, Luk. 17. 1. This may intimate how odious the ſpiritual leproſie is to God, and how infectious evil company is to men.

V. 55. not changed his colour] That is, ſo as to return to the colour it had, before it was infected ; for waſhing would make ſome change, but if a taint of the contagion yet apppeared in it, which could not by waſhing be got out of it, it was to be burned : at leaſt that part which was ſo deeply infected, that it could not be waſhed clean, was to be cut out, and caſt into the fire.

V. 58. the ſecond time] To the intent he might be ſure the leproſie was departed,and that all occaſion of infection might be taken away.

V. 59. the law of the plague] If the Chriſtians compare their condition with the Jews for laws and plagues in this and the 11. Chapter, they will find great cauſe to praiſe God for their better ſtate ; no ſuch prohibitions of meats as theſe , no ſuch plague , or not ſo common in moſt places, as the plague here very frequent among the Jewes.

CHAP. XIV.

Verſ. 3. GO forth] It is ſaid verſ. 2. the leper ſhall be brought unto the Prieſt ; here, that the Prieſt ſhall go forth to the leper ; yet no contradiction : for the lepper remained at ſome diſtance out of the Campe,and the prieſt coming to the out-ſide of it toward the leper , the leper made his approach unto him. See Matth. 1. 44. Luk. 5. 14. and 17. 14.

V. 4. and clean] That is, ſuch as by the law were permitted to be eaten ; the birds mentioned before for oblations,were Turtles and Pigeons ; theſe are taken to be Sparrowes , according to the other reading in the margin. See on Chap. 1 14.

V. 5 ſhall command] The Prieſt was not to kill the bird , for it was not properly for a ſacrifice, ſince it was to be done far from the Altar, and without the Camp ; but for expiation of the leprous perſon,by the ſprinkling of the blood of it upon him.

that one of the birds be killed in an earthen veſſel over running water] Water and blood are here to be mingled together ; for Chriſt (whoſe Paſſion was typified by theſe ſacrifices) came by water and blood ; 1 Joh. 5. 6.

V. 6. and the Cedar-wood] The manner of this ſprinkling is conceived to be thus ;there was a rod or ſtick of Cedar-wood,to the top whereof was tyed the live bird with the tail upward , and the head towards the handle of the ſtick ; with the bird was tied Scarlet wool ; then was the bird,both wings and tail plunged into the water, coloured with the blood of the killed bird , and therewith was the leper ſprinkled ; and after that the live bird ſprinkled with the blood of the killed bird, was ſet at liberty to flie away. In this expiation , ſome obſerve this conformity betwixt the leprous contagion, and the law of cleanſing ; as firſt, the leproſie did corrupt and putrefie the skin ; oppoſite to that was Cedar-wood , which is commended for firmneſſe and ſoundneſſe againſt putrefaction. Secondly the leproſie was of a very foul and offenſive colour ; contrary to that was the freſh and fair colour of Scarlet. Thirdly, the leproſie had a very ill and unſavory ſent ; the ſweetneſſe of Hyſſop was a remedy againſt that. See Exod. 12. 22. Pſal. 51. 7. Fourthly , the leproſie did eat up the body, by a conſumption of the fleſh , and it may be , cauſed death ; the Sparrow let looſe and flying abroad , was a ſymbole , or ſignificant ſign of the recovery of the health ; and conſequently of the continuance of the life of the leprous.

V. 7. ſeven

V. 7. ſeven times] That number is often uſed in holy miniſtrations, as alſo in miraculous operations, 2 King. 5. 10, 14. by reaſon of Gods reſting on the ſeventh day, as witneſſing the perfection of his creatures, made the ſix dayes before; ſo that there was no need of any more to be done: ſee Annot. on Chap. 8. v. 11. yet ſometimes ſeven is taken for many.

living bird looſe] Signifying that he that was made clean was ſet at liberty and reſtored to the company of others. By theſe two birds, ſome conceive to be ſignified the two natures of Chriſt, the one ſubject to death, the other ſecured from death. See the like Chap. 16. 8.

V. 8. ſeven dayes] Though he were admitted to come into the Camp, yet muſt he not for ſeven dayes return to his own tent, leſt ſome remainders of the leproſie ſhould lye hid, and by familiar ſociety ſhould be tranſmitted to the infection of his wife, or any of the family. See Num. 12. 14.

V. 9. ſhave] He was ſhaven before, v. 8. and at ſeven dayes end was to be ſhaven again; for waſhing and ſhaving were of uſe for the clearing of the party from his leproſie.

V. 10. log of oyl] A Log was the leaſt meaſure for moiſt things, containing the quantity of five egges; or as ſome ſay, ſix of ordinary bigneſſe. See on Exod. 29. 40.

V. 11. maketh him clean] That is, pronounceth him. See Annot 3. on Chap. 13. 3.

V. 13. Holy place] In the Court of the Tabernacle, Beſide the Altar of burnt-offerings. Chap. 3. 8. & 44. 24.

* is the Prieſts] * Chap. 6. 26, 27.

moſt holy] Of oblations that were to be eaten, none were more holy.

V. 14. tip of] See Annot. on Exod. 29. 20.

V. 16. before the Lord] Before the door of the Tabernacle where God gave evidence of his eſpecial preſence.

V. 19. the burnt offering] That is, the Lambe of the firſt year; the ſin-offering was to be made for reconciliation with God, before he would accept an oblation of thankſgiving from man. Some demand, why there ſhould be an offering for leproſie, it being no ſin? the Anſwer is, that though it be not a ſin in it ſelf; that is, no breach of the morral law, yet the Ceremoniall law requireth a cleanneſſe to which the leproſie is contrary; and ſo it may be ſaid to be ceremonially a ſin; or it may require a ſacrifice, becauſe it many times preſuppoſeth a guilt of ſin which did deſerve ſuch a ſhameful curſe; as you may ſee in the caſe of Miriam, Numbers 12. v. 10.

V. 21. waved] Of the waving of the offering, ſee Annot. on Exod. 29. 24.

V. 34. I put the plague] See Annot. on Chap. 13. 59.

V. 36. that all that is in the houſe be not made unclean] To wit, upon the Prieſts pronounciation of the uncleanneſſe; from whence, and not before, the ceremonial uncleanneſſe was contracted: the like is to be believed of company with the leprous perſon before his uncleanneſſe be legally proclamed.

V. 37. in the walls] Which argued a ſtrong and ſtrange infection, whether of the ayr, or breath of the lepper; which is ſo much the fitter to ſet forth the infection of ſin, whereof leproſie is both an effect & a type, for as the leproſie is ſo infective that it reacheth even to the walls of the houſe, and fretteth and corrupteth them even to their ruine; ſo doth the guilt of ſin bring judgement, not onely upon the perſon of the ſinner, but upon the timber and ſtones of the houſe. See Zach. 5. ver. 4.

V. 41. an unclean place] Where carrions were caſt, and other filth that the people might not be therewith infected. See Chap. 41. 2.

V. 45. he ſhall break] That is, he ſhall command it to be pulled down; as v. 40. See on Chap. 16. 32.

V. 49. ſcarlet] It ſeemeth that this was a ſcarlet-coloured lace, or twiſted ſtring, to bind the hyſſop to the wood; the Apoſtle to the Hebrewes, calleth it ſcarlet wooll, Heb. 9. 19.

CHAP. XV.

Verſ. 2. OUt of his fleſh,] This is meant chiefly of a diſeaſe by Phyſicians called Gonorrhœa, but is more ordinarily known by the name in the margin of the Bible; which proceedeth from a weakneſſe of nature, cauſing a feebleneſſe in the retentive facultiy, which may proceed from overſtraining the ſtrength in any wiſe; but eſpecially by contemning the counſel of the wiſe man, Prov. 31. 3. This differs from that emiſſion of the ſeed which is caſual in ſleep, v. 16. Deut. 23. 10. yet both did make a man ceremonially unclean,

V. 3. be ſtopped] If it have run, and afterewards be ſtopped, yet the precedent running ſhall be judged an uncleanneſſe; or if by obſtruction of ſtoppage, the abundance of it be irritated, or provoked with more violence to iſſue out.

V. 4. every bed whereon he lyeth] Such as this diſeaſe of leproſie is, is the infectious nature of ſin, defiling all that the wicked hath to do withall, Tit. 1. 15. See Chap. 18. 25, 27, 28. Gen 2. 17.

V. 8. he ſhall waſh] That is, he that is ſpit upon.

V. 15. a ſin offering] In reſpect of the ceremonial uncleanneſs; if it proceed merely of infirmity, of the retentive faculty, without the fault of the perſon, it is rather a ſickneſs of weakneſs, then a ſickneſs of wickedneſs.

V. 16. waſh] The time is not ſet down for waſhing, but ſince the uncleanneſs is limited to the evening, it is like the waſhing was to be the next morning after that the uncleanneſs happened.

uncleanneſſes] Theſe ſeveral caſes of uncleanneſſe ſerve for humiliation & caution, in regard of the implyed defilement and corruption cleaving to natural actions, eſpecially thoſe which moſt appertain to the propogation of mankind.

V. 18. The woman alſo] Though marriage be Gods holy Ordinance made in the ſtate of innocency, Gen. 2. 24. and in that reſpect it be honourabe in all, and the bed undefiled, Heb. 13. 4. yet the excerciſe is not ſo undefiled in any, but that ſome imputations of guilt may be charged upon it, See 1 Sam. 21. 4.

V. 19. whoſoevar toucheth] This is to be meant of ſuch as were of years of diſcretion, and were not to perform a neceſſary and charitable miniſtration to her perſon; not of infants or children in their minority, who were not capable of ſuch prohibitions.

V. 20. in her ſeparation] Whereby ſhe is ſeparate from her huſband, from the Tabernacle, and from touching any holy thing.

V. 24 ſeven dayes] This is meant of mere lying with her, and of the uncleanneſſe which might be taken as a bed-fellow only, without any more familiarity with her; for if in ſuch a caſe he lay with her as with a wife, if the fact would be proved, they were to be put to death, Chap. 20. 18. and this the rather, becauſe by ſuch commixtion a monſtrous and leprous birth might be gotten.

V. 25. beyond the time] That is, beyond the uſuall time of her female fluxes, this diſeaſe is called by Phyſicians Hemorrhoides, more vulgarly Emerods.

V. 30. uncleanneſſe] Not that it is a moral, and conſequently a ſinfull, but a mere ceremonial uncleanneſs.

V. 31. that they die not] There was danger of death in the breach of a ceremoniall law, that ceremonial uncleanneſs, (eſpecially if to it were joyned a careleſs neglect, or wilfull contempt) was capital and deadly to the offending perſon; which may be a good admonition to Chriſtians when they appear before the Lord, eſpecially in prayer, to beware of all moral pollution which may not only ſhut Gods ear againſt their ſuits, Pſal. 66. 18. but move him when they ask bread and fiſh to feed them, to anſwer them with a ſtone to bruiſe them, or a ſerpent to bite them.

V. 31. defile my Tabernacle] By coming unto it, when by reaſon of their uncleeanneſs they are by theſe ceremonial ordinances to be ſeparated from it.

CHAP. XVI.

IN this Chapter is inſtituted the Feaſt of expiation; whereof one occaſion was the ſinne and puniſhment of Nadab and Abihu; and the end was for the preſervation of the reverence of the Tabernacle, and of the holy ſervices belonging unto it, that none might preſume, as they had done, to do any thing in ſuch matters, but according as the Lord had expreſly preſcribed.

Verſ. 2. NOt at all times] Into the moſt holy place; for that was the place which God did moſt appropriate to his own preſence; into which none was to come but by his eſpecial appointment: and he appointed the High-prieſt only, and him but once a year, ver. 34. and Heb. 9. 7. Exod. 30. 10. and that was in the moneth of September: but this is to be underſtood with reſpect to his Prieſtly miniſtration, which was but once a year, as figuring the ſacrifice of Chriſt once made in the time of his life, and no more, Heb. 9. 7, 8, 11, 12. but upon other neceſſary occaſions, the Prieſt might enter into the moſt holy place, as when the Tabernacle was to be taken down, and removed.

for I will appear] The reaſon ſeemeth to contradict the rule; for if God appear there, there is more cauſe for Aaron to make his addreſs thither to conſult with him, and to receive revelations from him; but the meaning is, that Gods appearance there ſhould be at ſuch a time, as Aaron might make his approach thither, as the next words maniſeſt.

V. 3. with a young bullock] That is, with the bloud of a young bullock, not with the body of it; which was to be offered for the ſins of the High prieſt and his family, v. 6. for, for the ſin of the people he was to offer a goat, v. 5.

and a ram] This ram was not to be ſacrificed at his entrance into the Holy of holies, but afterward, upon his return, it was to be wholly burnt upon the Altar of burnt-offering: the young bullock and the ram, were for the ſolemnity of the High-prieſts entrance into the moſt holy place; but the two lambes for the daily burnt-offering, Num. 28. 3. and the bullock, ram, and ſeven lambes, and he-goat, Num. 29. 7, 8, 11. were for the ſacred ſolemnity of the day of expiation, which followed the oblations of the bullock and ram here mentioned.

V. 4. put on] Not thoſe glorious garments which were peculiar to the High-prieſts, but thoſe which were common to him with inferiour Prieſts, verſ. 23. becauſe this was a day, not of jubilation or gladneſs, but of humiliation and ſorrow, and ſo rather a faſt, then a feaſt, Num. 29. 7. though uſually called the Feaſt of expiation. Yet ſome conceive from v. 24. that in the latter part of the ſolemn ſervice he wore his more glorious robes; which were peculiar to him as High prieſt, See Exod. 28. 29, 30, 35. And by theſe diſtinct habits, the one ſort mean, the other eminently glorious, might be repreſented the double ſtate of Chriſt, the one of humiliation, the other of Majeſty, the one Temporal, the other Spiritual.

V. 5. And he ſhall take] In this day of reconcilliation, the High-prieſt did all the ſervice in the Holy of holies himſelf; figuring the ſole reconciliation of us unto God by Chriſt onely.

V. 6. Offer] In the wilderneſs there was not any ſacrificing, but at Mount Sinai, for fourty years together, Exod. 16. neither were the people furniſhed with frankinſence, honey, wine, or cattel for ſacrifice; ſo that in the wilderneſs onely, the Judicial and Moral laws did bind, as ſome hold, except ſome expiations, Numb. 5. 2. neither in the deſert were any feaſts obſerved but the Sabbath.

his houſe] To which were referred all the Prieſts and Levites; for theſe were not reckoned among the people, but appertained to the family of the High-prieſt, whoſe ſons the Prieſts were, and the reſt of the Levites his kinſmen. See 1 Tim. 3. 4, 5.

V. 8. lots] By which the Lord made choice of what he would have done, Prov. 16. 33. according to whoſe Counſel and Will alone, not by the appointment of any humane policy, or prudence, the whole work of Chriſts Mediation, and mans Redemption was accompliſhed.

one for the Lord] One of the goats was to be ſacrificed unto him, the other, as making an eſcape from death, being ſent into the deſert, verſ. 10. and 21. was called the ſcape-goat; they were both alike in themſelves, and by caſting lots, the Lord made a choyce which of the two ſhould die, or be reprieved, or delivered from death, for the lot is at his diſpoſall, Prov. 16. 33. Of which two, the one is conceived to be a type of Chriſt his immortal Deity; the other, of his mortal Humanity; or the one of his death, the other of his living again by his reſurrection. See on verſ. 21.

V. 10. ſcape-goat] See Annot. on vers 8.

to make an atonement] By confeſſing of ſin in the name of the people, and praying that God would transfer their guilt upon the goat, before he were ſent away into the wilderneſs. See verſ. 21, 22.

V. 11. the bullock] Some read the calf, or heifer; but this was not that red heifeir mentioned, Numb. 19. for that was offered for the people without the Camp; this, for the Prieſts upon the Altar within the Court of the Tabernacle.

V. 12. a cenſer] That is, a fire-pan, or purfuming-diſh, to hold coals for the burning of incenſe; the compoſition whereof is ſet down, Exod. 30. 34, 35.

within the vail] Into the Holy of holies.

V. 13. the cloud] That is, the vapour or ſmoke aſcending from the perfume, to cover the Mercy-ſeat, that there might be no curious prying into divine ſecrets, Deut. 29. 29.

upon the Teſtimony] That is, the Ark, where was laid the Law, the Teſtimony of Gods covenant with his people, verſ. 13. See on Exod. 16. 34. and 25. 16.

that he dye not] As Nadab and Abihu did, by contempt, or neglect of thoſe obſervances, which God preſcribeth: Which ſheweth, that mans obedience muſt be ordered by the Majeſty of the Author, rather then the meaneſs of the matter which is preſcribed, or prohibited. See Exod. 4. 24, 25.

V. 14. upon the Mercy-ſeat] The bloud was ſprinkled upon the Mercy-ſeat, to ſhew, that by the bloud of Chriſt Gods mercy and juſtice were reconciled, and ſo his people ſaved from deſtroying indignation.

upon the Mercy-ſeat] Some read, over againſt the Mercy-ſeat; or towards it; ſo that the bloud muſt not touch it.

Eaſtward] That is, with his face Eaſtward, towards the people, for the head of the Sanctuary ſtood Weſtward. This ſignified, that as the Prieſts had need of this ſacrifice as well as the people, verſ. 6. ſo the people had a right in it, as well as the Prieſt, v. 15.

V. 15. Then ſhall he kill] This, though here mentioned, was done before Aarons entrance into the Holy of holies; (though after the killing of the bullock) for Aaron being to go into it but once a year, Heb. 9. 7. was not to go into it twice a day, though he were allowed entrance into it one day onely.

V. 16. for the holy place] The holy place was to be purged from the pollution of the people, though they came not into it; becauſe they had their part or intereſt in the ſervices there performed, which though offered unto God, by the Prieſt, were moſt of them preſented as from, and for the people; wherein appeareth the extreme pollution of ſin, like that of leproſie, Chap. 13. which tainteth, not onely the perſons of ſinners, but places alſo to where they have a reference, though it be not immediate.

V. 17. Tabernacle] That is, in the Holy place which was Eaſtward, on this ſide of the Holy of holies, where the High-prieſt onely was allowed to enter.

V. 18. unto the Altar] That is, the Altar of Incenſe.

V. 20. reconciling the Holy place] See Annot. on v. 16.

V. 21. head of the live-goat] The live-goat, or ſcape-goat was a type of Chriſt, as well as that which was ſacrificed; the ſacrificed goat ſignified dying Chriſt; the ſcape-goat alive in the wilderneſs, ſignified Chriſts deliverance from death, and living, as the ſeparated goat, out of the communion of men, with whom he formerly converſed. See Annot. on v. 8. 10. Yet ſome hold that this ſcape-goat was not to eſcape death, but to be killed and devoured by the wild beaſts of the wilderneſs; and that the one goat ſignified our Saviours ſufferings in the City of Jeruſalem, the other his ſufferings out of it, by Barbarous and brutiſh men. The Devil, as Gods Ape, ſometimes enjoyned his Prieſts this expiation; for Herodotus reports, that the Egyptians were wont to heap up imprecations and curſes upon the head of a ſacrifice, ſelected for the purpoſe; that if any evil impendent over them, or the Egyptians, it might be turned upon the head of the ſacrifice: and then they caſt it headlong into the River Nilus to be drowned; or ſold it in the market to ſome Grecian, or other profane perſon.

V. 23. leave them there] Thoſe garments were peculiar for that dayes ſervice, in the moſt Holy place; which done, they were not to be worn until the like occaſion returned, and then he was to put on the ſame, or the like were to be put on.

V. 24. in the Holy place] In the Court of the Tabernacle, where was the Lavery, Exod. 30. 18. Yet ſome conceive this waſhing was before he came forth into the Court of the Tabernacle, as the words of this verſe do ſeem to import.

put on his garments] That is, his glorious garments proper to the High-prieſts: for now the proper office of expiation was paſt, and the reſt of the day was allowed to be ſpent in more chearful ſolemnity.

V. 26. ſhall waſh] To put away the ceremonial impurity or uncleanneſſe, which he contracted by touching the goat, ceremonially laden with the guilt of the peoples ſin, and with the imprecation belonging to them.

V. 28. he that burneth] He to whom that ſervice was committed; which was not performed by the Prieſts, but by another upon their appointment.

V. 29. for ever] See Annot. on Exod. 12. 14.

ſeventh moneth] That is, as the Hebrews call it, Tizri, anſwering to our September. See on Gen. 7. 11.

upon the tenth day] The ſolemnity began the ninth day at even, Chap. 23. 32. but the tenth day was moſt obſervable for the ſacrifices of expiation, or atonement.

afflict your ſouls] Though the affection to, and fruition of ſin be pleaſant, the humiliation for it is very bitter; and an affliction, not of the body onely by faſting, Pſal. 35. 13. Act. 27. 9. but of the ſoul, by anguiſh and ſorrow for ſin.

V. 31. a ſabbath] This day of ſolemn humiliation, wherein they were to afflict their ſouls, v. 29. Pſal 35. 13. by faſting and mourning, was to be obſerved as a Sabbath, with ceſſation from all manner of work, v. 29.

V. 32. he ſhall anoint] It is not ſaid, who ſhall anoint; but it may be meant of God, by whoſe authority or command he was to be anointed; as the Prieſt is ſaid to break down the houſe, Chap. 14. 45, which he doth but command to be broken down, verſ 40. Or the High Prieſt in being is to anoint his ſucceſſour in that office, that he may ſervo in his fathers ſtead, when he is dead.

V. 34. everlaſting ſtatute] See on Exod. 12. 14.

CHAP. XVII.

Verſ. 3. T*Hat killeth*] Not for the common uſe of meat, but for the religious uſe of ſacrifice; which though others could do as well as the Prieſt, (as Butchers and Cooks) yet ſince the doing thereof was the proper office of the Prieſt, none might uſurp it, that was not of that function, and God would have good things done in a good manner; and hereby alſo he would prevent Idolatry, which would eaſily have crept in, if every one were left to his own private way of Sacrifice, or ſerving of God. See Deut. 12. 13. 15, 16.

V. 4. and bringeth it not] This is not onely a prohibition of the people from uſurping of the Prieſts office, but a limitation of Sacrifices to the place expreſly preſcribed; yet by inſpiration from God, ſometimes other places were uſed for ſuch holy Oblations, as by Manoah, Judg. 13. 19. by *S*amuel, 1. Sam. 7. 9. and Chap. 11. 15. and Chap. 16. 2. and by David. 2. Sam. 24. 18. and by Elias, 1 King. 18. 23. Notwithſtanding regularly they were to bring their ſacrifices unto the door of the Tabernacle as a type of Chriſt, Heb. 9. 11. but the antitype now exhibited, that type, and the limitation of local liberty is aboliſhed; ſo that now a ſpiritual ſacrifice, offered in ſincerity, will be accepted every where, Joh. 4. 21, 24. Mal. 1. 11. 1 Tim. 2. 8. See on Exod. 20. 24.

Bloud ſhall be] He ſhall be reputed as guilty, as worthy of death, as if he had killed a man, Iſa. 66. 3. becauſe the bloud of the ſacrifices, is in equivalence the bloud of man, which was to be redeemed thereby, (as the water of the Well of Bethlehem is called the bloud of thoſe men, who hazarded their lives to break through the hoſt of the enemies, to fetch it for David, 2 Sam. 23. 17.) therefore the ſhedding of that bloud, otherwiſe then God did warrant, was accounted as the ſhedding of mans bloud.

cut off] He ſhall be puniſhed by death, by the ſentence of the Judg, if it be known; if it be ſecret, by the Judgement of God: upon ſuppoſition of this ſin, the Iſraelites prepared war againſt the Reubenites, Joſh. 22. 12. Some underſtand this cutting off to be the ſentence of Excommunication, whereby the offender is put out of the ſociety of Iſrael, and put into the ſtate of an Heathen or publicane, though the Jews underſtand it ordinarily of an extraordinary death, by divine vengeance.

V. 5. open field] Before the Tabernacle was built, they uſed to offer ſacrifices abroad, ſometimes in fields, ſometimes on mountains, and in groves; but they are charged now to bring them unto the door of the Tabernacle.

peace-offerings] The like is to be underſtood of ſin-offerings, and whole burnt-offerings, though they be not expreſſed for peace-offerings, which are not therefore particularly named, becauſe they were more limited for theſe Oblations then for others; but leſt they ſhould take more liberty in theſe then in others; becauſe they were moſt frequent, and were in part applyed to feaſt the offerer; and in this preciſe caution for that which was more common, the whole burnt-offering was the better ſecured from contempt, which might befall it, if it ſhould be offered any where, but in an holy place appointed for that purpoſe.

V. 7. No more] Here it appeares that the Jews were much addicted to Idolatry; and it is like they both learned it, and practiſed it in Egypt, Ezek. 23. 8. Act. 7.42.

unto Devils] Meaning whatſoever is not the true God, Deut. 32. 17. Pſal. 106. 37. 1 Cor. 10. 20. 2 Cor. 11. 15. Revel. 9. 20. but yet taken for a God, and worſhipped as a God: The Hebrew word Sebbirim or Segnirim, ſignifieth hair, and goatiſh, of Sabbar or Sagnar an hair, or hairy creature, or goat; by which may be meant thoſe devils, who appeared rough and hairy, as the Satyrs, or Fauns, Eſay. 34. 14. or becauſe the apparation of ſuch, through fear made the hair ſtand on end; as Job 4. 15.

after whom] for Idolatry is ſpiritual whoredom, becauſe of the Covenant betwixt God and his people, as betwixt an husband and his wife, Hoſ. 2. 16, 18, 19: and the Covenant is broken on their part, when they like Ephraim, joyn themſelves to Idols, Hoſ. 4. 17. See Annot. on Exod. 34. 15.

V. 10. face againſt] That is, I will apparently declare my wrath, by taking vengeance on him, as Chap. 20. v. 3. See Deut. 22. 10. Pſal. 34. 16. Jer. 44. 11.

V. 11. in the bloud] Becauſe blood is the ſeat of the vital ſpirits, from the purer part whereof the ſpirits are ingendred; and without which they cannot continue, though the bloud may continue in the body when the life is gone by ſtopping of the breath; beſides other reaſons there rendred here is an eſpecial conſideration of the propriety of blood of Atonement by ſacrifice, Heb. 9. 22. whereby, being conſecrated to God, it is ſeparated from Common uſe. *S*ee on Gen. 49. and 1 *S*am. 14. 32.

V. 13. or of the ſtrangers that ſojourn] There was a ſtranger in bloud, that is none of their kinred; a ſtranger in habitation, that is, a *S*ojourner rather then a dweller amongſt them; and a ſtranger in Religion, that is a worſhipper of a ſtrange god, or of the true God in a ſtrange manner to that which God preſcribed: He that was a ſtranger in bloud, might be no ſtranger in religion; ſuch were divers convert Proſelytes who were of the ſame faith and profeſſion of the natural Jews; and theſe were to obey the ſame Lawes, or elſe to bear the ſame puniſhments which belonged to the violation of them. *S*ee ver. 8, 10.

cover it] Leſt beaſts ſhould lick it up, and by taking delight in the ſweetneſſe thereof, ſhould become more cruel, either to their own, or to any other kind.

V. 15. ſoul that eateth] *S*ee Annot. on Chap. 5. 1. *S*ee alſo on Exod. 22. 31.

V. 15. his iniquity] That is, the puniſhment of his diſobedience in that behalf; for there is ſuch affinity betwixt wickedneſs, and the reward due unto it, that one name is many times uſed for both.

CHAP. XVIII.

Verſ. 3. D*Oings*] Ye ſhall preſerve your ſelves from the abominations following, with the Egyptians and Canaanites uſed.

V. 4. judgements] judicial lawes.

ordinances] Whether Moral, or Ceremonial precepts.

V. 5. which if a man do, he ſhall live] But ever ſince the fall he was diſabled to do what the Law required; therefore the failing of juſtification and ſalvation, by what is in a mans ſelf, ſerveth 1. to ſhew how perfect our condition was before the fall: 2. what God might expect of us ſince we have fallen, in that we fell not by his, but by our own default: 3. to direct us whither to have recourſe, viz. from the Law, to Chriſt, Gal. 3. 24. by whoſe merit and mediation we may be accquitted, when by the Law we are condemned. See Ezech. 20. 11, 13. Luk. 10. 28. Rom. 10. 5.

I am the Lord] And therefore ye ought to ſerve me alone, as my people; this is often repeated, as ver. 2. 4, 5, 6, 21, 30. and ſixteen times in the next Chap. to mind the people of Gods right of command, and power to puniſh; and to admoniſh men to mark and conſider not ſo much what it is, as who it is, by whom any thing is commanded, or forbidden.

V. 6. None of you, &c.] Heb. man, man. That is, not any man ſhall approach any that is neer of kin to him. See on Joſ. 15.

Near of kin] As according to the degrees after mentioned.

uncover their nakedneſs] By this phraſe is ſometimes meant, the laying open of ſecret faults, or infirmities; but here it ſignifieth a literal uncovering of the body, for ſuch familiarity with it as properly belongeth to lawful marriage.

V. 8. fathers wife] That is, not thine own mother, but thy ſtepmother of this inceſt you may ſee 1. Cor. 5. 1. it was Reubens ſin, Gen. 35. 22. *S*ee Deut. 22. 30. 27. 20. Amos. 2. 7.

thy fathers nakedneſſe] That which none but thy Father may uncover: and it may be called the fathers nakedneſſe, becauſe the husband and wife, though they be two perſons, are by the bond of matrimony but one fleſh: *S*o that any fleſhly action towards the one, hath a guilty offenſiveneſſe towards the other.

V. 9. thy ſiſter] By both parents, or by the mother only: (for of ſiſters by a ſtepmother order is ſet down ver. 11.) born in marriage, or out of marriage, (by fornication, as a baſtard,) yet it was not generally ſo taken, for Thamar thought that David would have given her for a wife to Ammon, if he had made requeſt for her, 2 *S*am. 13. 13. See Ezek. 22. 11.

V. 10. thine own nakedneſſe] That is, ſo neer of kin unto thee, deſcending from thee in a right line, that beſides thine own perſonal ſin and ſhame, thou wilt have ſo much more part and guilt in theirs, as they are more thine then others: ſo that their fault will be thine infamie, See Gen. 34. 30. and by ſuch an act, as her nakedneſſe is uncovered, ſo thy naughtineſſe may be diſcovered by an inceſtuous birth.

V. 14. approach] By this is here meant, the neereſt degr[illegible] naked communion.

thine aunt] When thine uncle is dead; by the ſame reaſon that a man is forbidden the bed of his fathers brothers or uncles wife, or aunt, a woman is forbidden the like neerneſſe to her aunts husband; for as in Logick, ſo in divinity the difference of ſex varieth not the caſe ſo much as to make it unlawful in the one land, lawful in the other: ſomewhat it doth, for where the Aunt is married by the Couſen or nephew, there a ſuperior relation is brought under an inferior; but where the uncle marrieth his neece, there a ſuperior is made head of an inferior, which is more decent; but that which here is moſt reſpected, is not ſo much the relation of a ſuperior and inferior, (for a miſtris might marry a ſervant of the ſame religion and tribe, as well as a maſter might marry a maid-ſervant) but the neerneſſe of blood, which is the ſame betwixt Aunt and nephew, as betwixt Uncle and Neece; ſo much the Hebrew phraſe imports, verſ. 6. ſee the text and margin, and therefore it is as unlawful for the father to marry his own daughter, as for the mother to marry her own ſon; yet of the marriage of the Uncle and Neece there are divers examples, as of Nachor with his neece Milcah, Abraham with Sarah his neece, (as is moſt probable) and Amram, the father of Moſes, married his Aunt; Exod. 6. 20. but this was before this law was made; and for the Jews, who at this day obſerve it not, it may be thought to be a part of their apoſtaſie from true religion. By this prohibition of marriage with the Aunt, ſome conceive the marriage with Couſen Germans is forbidden, becauſe there is conſanguinitie betwixt them, but onely affinity betwixt the Aunt and the husbands brothers ſon; but the husband and wife being one fleſh, Gen. 2. 24. this affinity may make more for prohibition of marriage then any other; howſoever, it is ſafe to forbear what is doubtful, and to keep aloof from what is unlawful; eſpecially the choice of lawful marriages being large enough, without the hazard of ſo great a ſin as Inceſt. If it be ſaid, that this is a Levitical Law, which doth not oblige us under our Chriſtian condition; it may be anſwered, that the Jews had allowance for neerer matches then other people, eſpecially Chriſtians, for among them a man might, or rather muſt marry his dead brothers wife, to raiſe up ſeed unto him, Deut. 25. 5. which in Chriſtianity is condemned. Matth. 14. 3, 4. as well as marrying the fathers wife, 1 Cor. 5. 1. But what in this is forbidden to the Jews, is much more forbidden to the Chriſtians; who, having more latitude, and liberty of choice then they had, who were to marry, not onely with their own Nation, but with their own Tribe, and ſometimes (as hath been ſaid) two brothers muſt ſucceſſively be husbands to one wife; are leſſe capable of excuſe, if in carnal concupiſcence they tranſgreſſe their prohibitions: and in the generall, (ſince the goſpel is the law of love and charity, not to one Nation only, but all the world over) as far as conſanguinity, or affinity will work in affection, without a new tye of matrimony, ſo far reacheth matrimonial prohibition, and ſhould there firſt begin, where the relations are ſo remote, that they have little, or no operations of love that ſo charity might be more diffuſive, and not ſo contracted to one kindred, as it was among the Jews.

V. 15. ſons wife] When he is dead, much leſſe mayeſt thou do it when he is alive.

V. 16. Brothers wife] Neither while he is alive, nor when he is dead except in an eſpecial caſe, and upon an eſpecial warrant, Deut. 25. 5.

V. 18. to her ſiſter] This is to be underſtood not onely of another natural ſiſter, as if a man might have two wives, ſo they were not ſuch ſiſters; or two ſiſters one after another to wive, the latter upon the death of the former; for the marriage of the brothers wife is forbidded before, ver. 16. and by conſequence, a woman muſt not marry her ſiſters husband; and ſo two ſiſters are already forbidden to be marryed to one man, ver. 16. Wherefore it is moſt probable, that this is a prohibition of Polygamie: that is, of having more wives then one at once: and the reaſon ſheweth it, that the one may not be a vexation to the other, which is like to fall out not onely betwixt natural ſiſters, as Leah and Rachel, Gen. 31. 1, 14: but betwixt thoſe that are not of kin, as betwixt Hannah, and Peninnah, 1. Sam. 1. 6. And for the word Siſter, in a general acceptation it may be applyed to any woman; as the word Brother, to any man, Gen. 19. 7. & it is to be noted, that it is ſometimes applyed to things, which in propriety of ſpeech, come not under ſuch a ti tle or denomination ; as the wings of the beaſt. Ezek. 1.9. are ſaid to touch a woman to her ſiſter, as the Hebrew phraſeth it. See Exod 26.3.

V. 21. paſſe through] The children dedicated to the Idoll Molech paſſe through two fires, made on each ſide their way to it, that by that paſſage they may be purged, and ſo prepared for a ſacrifice to the Idol: all but the head of this Idol repreſented a man, and being made of braſſe, and hollow, fire was put into it, and children put into the armes of it; wherein with the burning heat they were tormented to death, while their peluded parents danced about them, with the noiſe of Drums, and other loud Inſtruments, which might out-ſound their lamentable cries. This Idol was called ſometimes Molech, and ſometimes Moloch, Amos 5.27. ſometimes Melchom; ſometimes Malcham. Zeph.1.5. all having a conformity in ſenſe and ſound with Melech, a King: and this was the principal Idol of the Ammonites, 1 King. 11.7. and of their Neighbours the Phœnicians, and from thence it came unto the Canaanites, called alſo Baal: compare 2 King. 23.10. Jer.19.5. & Chap 7.31. & Chap.32,35. See on Deut.12.31. 2 King.3.27. Ezek.16.21.

profane the Name] That is, diſhonour it by departing from God, to ſerve ſuch an Idol, in ſuch an abominable manner. See Jer.2.7,8. Rom.2.24.

V. 22. mankind] See on Gen. 9.5. 1 King. 14.24. 1 Tim. 1.10.

V. 24. which I caſt out before you] The ſins of the Gentiles which had not the Law in Tables of ſtone, were ſins againſt the Law of Nature, written in the fleſhly tables of the heart; wherein their conſciences might accuſe them, Rom.2.14. and juſtifie God in his juſt judgments upon them.

V. 25. viſit] I will puniſh the Land, where ſuch inceſtuous marriages, and pollutions, are acted and permitted.

vomiteth] He compareth the wicked to evil humours, and ſurfetting, which corrupt the ſtomach, and oppreſſe nature, and therefore muſt be caſt out by vomit. See Jer. 9.19. Mich. 2.10.

V. 26. ſtranger] Some take a ſtranger here, for a ſtranger in Nation, but not in Religion, which ingageth him to the ſame Lawes and penalties with the native Hebrewes; but the ſinnes here mentioned, were ſome of them ſo abominable, that they were to be puniſhed with death in whomſoever. See Annot.on Chap. 17.13. & on Chap. 20.2.

V. 28. ſpued out] Both for their wicked marriages, unnatural copulations; and for their Idolatry, or ſpiritual whoredome with Molech, and like abominations. See Levit.20. ver 3.5.

V. 29. the ſoules] That is, the perſons: See Annot.on Chap. 17.15.

cut off] Either by the Civil Sword, or by ſome plague, that God will ſend upon ſuch wicked people. See Chap. 17.ver. 4.

CHAP. XIX.

Verſ. 3. H*Is mother and his father*] The mother is named firſt, becauſe children being moſt familiar with their mothers, are moſt apt to contemn them; and therefore to make them the more to reverence them, they are required to hearken to the words of their mother as to a law, Prov.1.8. but to the words of their Father as to an inſtruction; the tie of obedience being for caution, made moſt ſtrict, where diſobedience was moſt like to break out.

and keep my Sabbaths] In the Decalogue or ten Commandements, the Commandament of the Sabbath is ſet before the Commandement of honouring of Parents; becauſe that of the Sabbath is a duty of the firſt Table, and the Commandement for obedience to parents is a duty of the ſecond Table; but here the order is firſt for obedience to parents, becauſe they are charged with the obſervation of the Sabbath, both for themſelves, and for their children, and ſervants, Exod.20. ver. 10.

V 4. molten Gods] Here by a Synechdoche all ſorts of Idols are forbidden; and it may be, the rather under this name and notion, becauſe of the golden Calf which was a molten Image. Exod. 32.4.

V. 6. the ſame day, and one the morrow] Of peace-offerings there were two ſorts: the one is for impetration or obtainment of good, and for that there was no ſet time preſcribed; for it is ſaid, ye ſhall offer it at your own will, and that was to be eaten the ſame day it was offered, and on the morrow: the other was for thankſgiving, and that was to be eaten the ſame day. See on Chap.7.12.

V. 12. neither——profane] Not uſe it for a common name, without reverence, whereby it may come into contempt.

V. 13. not abide] Becauſe he that worketh for hire, is commonly ſo poor, that he hath not proviſion for a day beforehand. See Job. 24.10. Mal.3.5.

V. 14. not curſe] Not ſpeak evil of the deaf, not of the abſent, who is a deaf man to that which is ſpoken out of his hearing, as a deaf man to what is ſpoken in his preſence is as one that is abſent.

before the blind] Though men neither here what we ſay, nor ſee what we do: the awe of Gods omniſcience, and of our own conſcience, muſt binde us to our good behaviour towards them, not onely from open, but from ſecret injuries. Deut.27.18.

V. 15. perſon of the poor] That is, not ſo reſpect the poor in his poverty, as in pity to him, to wrong the rich, or mighty; nor ſo fear or honour the mighty, as to comply with his oppreſſion of the poor, againſt right and juſtice. See Exod. 23. verſe. 3. Deut.1. 17. & 16.19 & 27.19. Prov.24.23.

V. 16. ſtand againſt the blood] By telling tales, which may inrage others to his ruine, Ezek.22.9. as by Doegs Example is evident, 1 Sam.22.9,18. Pſal. 52.18. Or by conſenting to the death of the innocent, or conſpiring with the wicked to that purpoſe.

V. 17. in any wiſe rebuke] Hatred is forbidden, and rebuke preſcribed as contrary to it, and this according to the dealing of God himſelf with his dear children, Prov. 3.12. Heb 12.16. therefore rebukes muſt not be given in hatred, or wrath, but in love; and when they are lovingly tendered, they muſt be kindly entertained. See on Gen.38. Matth.18.15. Luk.17.3.

V. 18. as thy ſelf] Which requireth a conformity in quality, not a correſpondence of equality; as Joh.17.21. the love to another muſt be like in kind, for ſincerity, without deceit, 1 Joh.3.18 and for efficacy, without defect, when we have oppertunity to do others good, or to ſave them from hurt. See Matth,5.43. & 22.39. Rom.13.9 Gal. 15.14.

V. 19. divers kind] The reaſon of this was; that the order of nature, in the diſtinct kinds of creatures, might be preſerved; and with this there was implyed an inſtruction againſt mixtures of Religion, as the prohibition of mingling of ſeed of ſeveral ſorts, and the wearing of a Linſey-woolſey garment, in this verſe was a document or leſſon of ſimplicity, or ſincerity, againſt double dealing. See.2 Cor.6.14. Object. But the Jewes had many Mules, which proceed from the Mixture of an Horſe and an Aſſe, and therefore it is like, they obſerved not this rule: Anſw. There are, that do affirm, that Mules are male and female, and do ingender in their own kind; but if they do not, they might be ſtored with Mules in Faires and Markets, Ezek.27.14. See on Pſal.32.9. & Gen. 36.24.

V. 20. becauſe ſhe was not free] Freedome was a great priviledge, as bondage a grievous preſſure; but note that priviledges do more oblige, and more ſtrictly bind men to their good behaviour; and bind them over to ſeverer puniſhment, if they break it, as unto death, if the woman were not bound, but free, the offence was capital. Deut.22.23.

V. 23. as uncircumciſed] As thoſe Nations which were uncircumciſed; that is, legally unclean.

three yeers] Whether this was for a natural reaſon, becauſe the fruits of a new plantation were weak, and wateriſh; or for ſome myſtical cauſe, it is uncertain: but certainly God had power, to make his allowance, or reſtraint of fruits, as well as of other creatures, Levit. Chap. 11. whereby the appetite was to be curbed, and the people enured to forbeare lawfull things, that they might be the further eſtranged from things unlawfull: and withall, the fruits in the fourth year coming to more maturity and perfection, were the fitter to be offered up unto God, who is alwayes worthy to be ſerved with the beſt.

V. 24. all the fruit] Beſide the firſt-fruits, which were given to the Prieſts, and the common Tithes given to the Levites, and the Tythes of tythes which the Levites give to the Prieſts; there were two ſorts of tythes enjoyned the Jewes: Firſt, the yearly Tythes mentioned Deut 12.12,17. & Chap.14.22. and of theſe there was an holy feaſt made at Jeruſalem, Deut.12.14. at which the Levites, Orphans and Widows were to be, and their domeſticks, and friends, might be preſent; and among theſe Tythes were reckoned theſe fruits of the fourth yeare here mentioned. Secondly, thoſe that were ſet apart every third year, as is preſcribed, Deut.14.28. & Chap.26.12 and theſe were onely to feaſt the Levites, and the poor widows; and orphans, and needy ſtrangers; and theſe were not eaten at Jeruſalem (as the former) but by every one in his own Citie, Deut.14.28.

V. 25. that it may yield unto you the increaſe] The way to be rich is to obey Gods command, though for the preſent it may ſeem to tend to poverty; as to give a portion to ſeven, and alſo to eight, Eccleſ.11.2. that is, to many; though no more be to be expected of them, then by caſting bread upon the waters, as in the precedent verſe, to give plentifully, Luk.16.38. which in a way of charity is not a caſting away, but a ſowing, which will be reaped in a plentifull increaſe as at the harveſt, 2 Cor.9.6. to pay tythes freely, is more profitable for the giver, then for the receiver, Mal.3.10. to ceaſe from traffique, or queſtuous commerce upon the Sabbath, for though worldlings account the Sabbath a great interruption to their profit, and cry out of it, as if on that day the Sun proceeded a ſlower pace then on others Amos.8.5. yet to thoſe that conſcionably keep it, it is a day, not only of glory to God, but of benefit to themſelves; and that not only ſpiritual to their ſouls, but alſo temporal in their eſtates; which, (if they religiouſly obſerve that day in the Sanctuary, and in their families,) are like to proſper the better all the week after: ſo though the forbearing of the firſt three years fruit ſeem to be matter of damage, by Gods bleſſing upon their obedience, it ſhall turn to their advantage.

V. 26. nor obſerve] Superſtitiouſly; as thoſe do, who acount ſome dayes lucky, ſome unlucky. See Annotat. on Gen.1. 14.

V. 27. not round the corners] The word round, in the Original, ſignifies ſuch a rounding, as may be without cutting, a rounding in general, which ſome take to be a compaſſing the head with a Garland, as was in uſe among them that celebrated the Feaſts of Bacchus; and the word Corners, in the Originall, is in the Singular number; and being ſo it may note ſome ſingular cutting of one corner of the head round, in the manner of a circle. (as the Egyptians, it may be, had their crowns ſhaven, as now is in uſe with the Popiſh-Prieſts) or elſe in the manner of an half-Moon. Or taking the Singular number for the Plurall, the prohibition may be meant, as ſome conceive, of criſping, or curling round the hair in ſome corners of the head; or cutting off the longeſt of the hair, to offer tuffs or locks of it as a devoted oblation to Idols, as many Heathens did, making the bare places round, with a ſuperſtitious conceit of a round figure, as moſt pleaſing to God, and moſt like God, whom ſome Phyloſophers defining, ſaid, God is a Circle, whoſe Center is every where, and his Circumference no where: or of cutting the hair, as the Egyptian Prieſts did, who worſhipped the Idols, Anubis, and Iſis, ſhaving round their heads, and the hair of their eye-browes; or of cutting round the hair in mourning, to which may be applyed, Iſa. 15. 2. and Jer. 48. 37. which the Egyptians required even of their women, when their Idolized Oxe, called Apis, died. But hereby was not forbidden to the Jews, much leſſe to Chriſtian men, to wear the hair in a moderate meaſure, betwixt ſhaving of the head, and nouriſhing the locks, Ezek. 44. 20. See 1 Cor. 11. 14.

V. 27. Of the beard] Becauſe a decent growth of the beard, is a ſign of manhood, and a remarkable difference of the male, from the female ſex; and this was forbidden to be done in that ſuperſtitious manner which Heathens uſed; who conſecrated to their gods not onely their locks, but their beards alſo; eſpecially the firſt doune of it. Plutarch. in Theſeo, and Sueton. in Nerone. 1. 12.

V. 28. nor print any markes] That is, you ſhall not make or receive any impreſſion upon your fleſh, or skin, as tokens of Idolatry, or ſuperſtition. See Deut. 14. 1. 1 King. 18. 28. Jer. 16. 6.

V. 30. and reverence my Sanctuary] Or, fear my ſanctuary. The Sabbath is not to be profaned, becauſe it is Gods holy day; nor the Sanctuary, becauſe it is the place of his eſpecial preſence, Gen 28. 16, 17. and Eccleſ. 5. 1. Some of the Hebrewes expound it thus; that though every place where prayer was made, and the law taught, were to be reverenced, yet eſpecially was Jeruſalem, becauſe the Sanctuary was there; whence they gather, that a dead man ought not to abide there all night, nor the bones of a dead man to be carryed through it. But though both Sabbath and Sanctuary were to be uſed with reverence, the Sabbath was firſt and chiefly to be regarded; for there was a Sabbath before the Sanctuary was made; and for the keeping of the Sabbath holy, there was, and is an expreſſe precept in the Decalogue, not ſo for the Sanctuary. 3 The holineſſe of the Sanctuary is gone, and the Sanctuary it ſelf; therefore now in every place God will accept of a ſincere ſervice, Joh. 4. 21, 23, 24. of every one, 1 Tim. 2. 8. It was therefore an abſurd ſuperſtition in the one and profaneneſſe in the other, when the Sanctuary, the place of worſhip was held in ſo great reverence by many of latter times, that they would not come into it without demonſtration, or oſtentation of devotion, and reverence; ſpecially in their approaches to the Altar, (as they Jewiſhly, or Popiſhly called the Lords Table) when they allowed carnall recreations on the Sabbath day, and thoſe of that ſort, whereof there is queſtion at leaſt, whether they were lawfull any day.

V. 32. riſe up] In token of reverence. See Chap. 23. 19. Gen. 31. 35.

V. 34. as one born among you] That is, if he be not of the Canaanites, who were to be deſtroyed; but a Proſelyte; that is, a circumciſed convert, profeſſing the Religion of the Hebrews.

V, 35 mete-yard] Or line, for the meaſuring of ground. The Hebrewes ſay, there was injuſtice in the mete-yard, when a man meaſured ground for one in fair weather, for another in foul; for in rainy weather it was longer, and in fair weather ſhorter: which may be true if the Line were of Leather, or of ſuch matter as the ſtring of a Watch: but the ordinary lines, ropes, or cords of hair, or hemp, or flax, flagg more in dry weather, and ſo are longer then in wet.

in weight] Wherein (as ſome of the Hebrewes ſay) not onely he offended that uſed an unjuſt weight and ballance, but he alſo that had them at home, though he uſed them not; perhaps, becauſe having them by him, he might ſometimes be tempted to make ill uſe of them; at leaſt it argued too little zeal againſt injuſtice in him who would keep them neer him, when with deteſtation he ſhould caſt them from him, as we are bid to do the monuments, and inticements to Idolatry, Iſa. 30. 22.

meaſure] There may be a two-fold unrighteouſneſſe in meaſure; the one when it was not of a juſt capacity, the other when it was ſo filled with liquid things, by pouring them out with an high hand, that there was much froth in ſtead of ſubſtantial liquor; which after a while would ſhrink, and ſo the want of due meaſure would be manifeſt.

V. 36. a juſt Ephah, and a juſt Hin] Of the Ephah, ſee Exod. 16, 36. and of the Hin, ſee Exod. 29. 40.

CHAP. XX.

Verſ. 2. S*Trangers*] Where there is mention of penalties for ceremonial matters. By ſtrangers are to be underſtood Proſelytes, or Converts; as Chap. 17. 15. but for moral, and capital crimes and puniſhments, (eſpecially ſuch as was the ſervice of Molech) the word Stranger, might comprehend all aliens from the Common-weal of Iſrael, whether Converts or no. See on Chap. 24. 22.

Molech] By Molech are here meant all kind of Idols; of Molech in particular, ſee Annot. on Chap. 18. 21.

V. 3. defile my Sanctuary] Though Molech was not honoured either in the Tabernacle, or Temple, which were the Sanctuaries of the Lord; the former in Moſes time, the latter from Solomons time; yet this Sanctuary was defiled, and defamed; when the people of his Covenant rejecting that, revolted to Idolatry; or with that, did exerciſe Idolatry in other places, and then came with polluted hearts and hands, to worſhip in his ſanctuary; as Jer. 7. 9, 10. And ſo for the like reaſon his Name is ſaid to be profaned. See Annot on Chap. 18. 21.

V. 4. hide their eyes] Though the people be negligent in their duty, to defend Gods right, yet he will not ſuffer wickedneſs to go unpuniſhed; or if men know it not, or could not legally convince the offender, by evident proofes, God himſelf will both find him out, and cut him off.

V. 5. againſt his family] By family in the general, may be meant any one of the ſame Nation; as by neighbour in the ninth and tenth Commandment is meant not onely he that dwells nigh us, but any one with whom we have to do: or more particularly, his kindred, who either by conformity to his practice, or connivence at his ſin, might contract to themſelves a participation of guilt.

cut him off] By ſome divine vengeance, if the hand of man, by courſe of juſtice, do not avenge the quarrel of my Covenant, by putting him to death.

V. 8. will ſanctifie you] In the precedent verſ, they are commanded to ſanctifie themſelves ſo far, as by uſing outward meanes, and helpes, they may become good, and do good, and ſhun ſin; but it is God that worketh the inherent holineſſe of the heart, and outwardly ſanctifieth, and ſeparateth them by holy obſervations from other people, ver. 24. 26. and Chap. 22. v. 9.

V. 9. that curſeth] By curſing is meant all manner of reviling, or reproaching of natural parents. See Exod. 21. 17. Deut. 27. 16.

put to death] It is like by ſtoning; as Deut. 21. 20, 21. which puniſhment, for more reproach, was, as ſome obſerve, inflicted on offenders ſtripped of their clothing.

his bloud ſhall be upon him] That is, the guilt of his own bloud, which, but for his ſinne, would not have been ſhed in this caſe. Ezech. 18. 13.

V. 10. the adulterer, and the adultereſſe ſhall ſurely be put to death] Both are faulty in the ſin, therefore both muſt fall by the puniſhment, which was equal, though the ſin were unequal; for in ſome reſpects the man might be the greater ſinner as if he acted the Devils part to tempt the woman; and in ſome reſpects the womans ſin might be the greater, becauſe by adultery ſhe might ſteal in a falſe heir to the eſtate of her husband; and becauſe it was neither lawful, nor tolerated one woman to have the uſe of many men, as it was for a time tolerated for one man to have the uſe of many women: yet which ſoever ſinned leſt deſerved death; and there was not ſo much ſeverity in inflicting death upon that degree, as mercy in laying no more weight of puniſhment upon the greater guilt.

V. 11. fathers nakedneſſe] See Annot. on Chap. 18. 8.

V. 14. it is wickedneſſe] That is, an execrable and deteſtable degree of wickedneſſe.

V. 15 and the beaſt] Though beaſts cannot commit ſin, (becauſe the law of holineſſe is not given to them) yet ſuch is Gods hatred againſt it, that he puniſheth the appurtenances unto it, to make it as odious unto men, as it is to himſelf; and to take away the memorial of ſo abominable a villany, the offender, and his partner, in that impurity muſt be taken away by fire, that nothing may remain of them. See Gen. 3. 14. and 9. 5. Exod. 21. 28.

ſee her] The ſenſe of ſeeing in regard of the excellency, and certainty of it, is put many times for other ſenſes; as Exod. 20. 18. Rev. 1. 12. for hearing, and here for touching.

V. 17. in the ſight] That others may ſee, and fear, what the guilty do feel; which is the chief end of ſuch open and exemplary puniſhments.

V. 18. in her ſickneſſe] That is, in her monethly infirmity, fountain] Or, iſſue. For of the ſame thing, the phraſe is ſo varied, Mar. 9. 29. Luk. 8. 44.

both] This ſeemes to be too ſevere a ſentence, if ſuch a thing were done of ignorance; therefore it is probable, this puniſhment was the reward of a witting and willing tranſgreſſion. See on Chap. 15. 24.

cut off] See Annot. on v. 5.

V. 19. bear their iniquity] When God will not bear with them, but bringeth the reward of their ſin upon them.

V. 20. childleſſe] Either their lives were to be cut off before they became parents, by the ſeverity of this Decree, or God would not bleſſe their bed with ſucceſſeful conception: Or, if they had children, they ſhould outlive them, and die childleſſe, v. 1. and if their children lived, they ſhould be reputed as baſtards, and not minded among the Iſraelite. See on Num. 1. 21.

CHAP. XXI.

Verſ. 1. D*Efiled*] It is conſiderable; firſt, how this uncleanneſs was contracted, viz. by touching the dead, lamenting, or being at their burial, or within the place, or Tent, where any lay dead; by which was contracted a ceremonial uncleanneſs for ſeven daies, Num. 19. 14, 16. Secondly, why the Prieſts were prohibited this ſad approach, with reference to the dead; and that was upon reaſons, partly general, belonging to all the righteous, as to profeſs their faith and hope of the reſurrection of the dead, 1 Theſſ. 4. 13. and partly particular, for eſpecial admonithion of purity to the Prieſts, as being types of Chriſt, and by nearer and more frequent communion with God, profeſſing more godlineſs then other men.

for the dead] Heb. for the ſoul. The ſoul is put by a Synecdoche (of part for the whole man) and by a Metonymie, one part for another, the ſoul for the body; ſo alſo, v. 11. ſee chap. 17. 15.

V. 3. virgin] For if ſhe were married ſhed was of another family, and to be buried, and mourned for by her husbands kindred of that family; but the Prieſt was permitted to mourn for his next kindred only, and of his kindred only for ſix of both Sexes, viz. his father and mother, for his ſon and his daughter, his brother and ſiſter, if ſhe were a Virgin, elſe not; the wife is not mentioned; yet ſince none of theſe is ſo near as the wife, (for man and wife are one fleſh) ſhe is to be conceived as virtually included, or reaſonably preſuppoſed in the naming of the reſt: and whereas Ezekiel is forbidden to mourn for his wife, chap. 24. 16, 17, 18. it ſeems by expreſſe prohibition, to be an extraordinary exception, from an ordinary rule, or practice, ſee on v. 4. And whereas Eleazar and Ithamar, were forbidden to lament the death of Nadab and Abihu their brethren, chap. 10. 6. the reaſon is, becauſe they dyed as malefactors, by divine vengeance; in which reſpect their mourning for them would have been a kind of murmuring againſt God himſelf; beſides, if they had defiled themſelves, the ſervice of God muſt have been intermitted longer then was meet for their ſakes, there being no other at that time to perform ſervice in that kind.

V. 4. being a chief man] The preeminence of his place and calling, muſt exempt him from the common condition of the people. The words are alſo rendred, for a chief man, and then the meaning is, that though a chief man die, he may not accompany his body to burial.

V. 5. nor ſhave off the corner] See on Chapter 19. verſe 27, 28.

V. 6. the bread] The ſhew-bread, or meat offerings; or all the food that came by way of Oblation, to the Prieſts his ſervants, might be called Gods bread; for in Scripture, whatſoever ſerveth for mans ſuſtenance, is often ſo called, ſee v. 17. 21. & chap. 3. 11.

therefore] Holineſſe is preſſed upon the Prieſts in eſpecial manner, becauſe they muſt both by doctrine, and example work upon the people to be holy alſo; and if they be profane, their ſcandalous lives bring contempt on the name and ſervice of God, as if they were profane or common things.

holy] Heb. holineſs in the abſtract, importing an extraordinary degree of holineſs, as if they ſhould not be carnal at all, but meer ſpiritual, all holy, even as holineſs it ſelf.

V. 8. ſanctifie him] The ſenſe of theſe words is varied with reference to the perſon to whom they were ſpoken; if to Moſes, the meaning may be, that he was to take care of their holy carriage, as much as in him lay: if to the people, the meaning is, that their opinion of them, and behaviour towards them ſhould be ſuch, as hath a ſavour of holy reverence with reſpect of their calling, in reference to God.

V. 9. burnt] Burning was the ſevereſt kind of death: to this the Prieſts daughter was doomed, when others were not, for fornication barely, to die at all, Exod. 22. 16, 17. now ſince this penalty was not impoſed with any eſpecial reſpect to age or ſexe, it is like, the Prieſts wife or ſon, if guilty of the ſame ſin, was to be puniſhed in like ſort, becauſe of the diſhonour done to the Prieſthood by their means, for which cauſe the connivance, or indulgence of old Eli to his wicked ſons, was the more diſpleaſing to God.

V. 10. High-prieſt] The High-Prieſt might not mourn for the dead, though of his neareſt kindred; in this he was differenced from the inferiour Prieſts; as alſo, firſt, in that they miniſtred daily, he but on the ſolemn day of expiation: Secondly, the holy anointing oyl was poured on his head, Chap. 8. v. 12. the reſt were but ſprinkled, and that not with pure oyl, but with oyl mingled with blood, v. 30. Thirdly, he had eight holy garments, they not ſo many, nor any ſo glorious as ſome of his. The High-prieſts refraining from mourning and funerals, was apiſhly followed by the Divels prieſts, Gell. lib. 10. cap. 15. Noct. Attic.

uncover his head] See Annot. on Chap. 10. 16.

V. 11. go into] He ſhall not go into the houſe where any dead body is.

for his father, or for his mother] Though out of natural affection he may be ſorry for them, he muſt not by any external token of mourning profeſs it, no, not ſo much as by his preſence at their funeral; becauſe he was to be obſerved, or noted, rather qualifications of grace and holineſſe, then for the affections of fleſh and blood.

V. 12. profane my Sanctuary] Either by forſaking the Sanctuary for a ceremonial or immoderate mourning, or by ſtaying from the Sanctuary for a ceremonial uncleanneſſe, or by coming to it again before the time preſcribed for cleanſing, be expired.

crown] By this Crown may be underſtood, either the golden plate upon the Mitre, Exod. 29. 6. or the oyl, called by the ſame name, which ſerved for ſeparation from others, and for prelation above them, eſpecially in reference to the typical repreſentation of Chriſts royall Prieſthood.

V. 13. in her virginity] Ezek. 44. 22. The High-prieſts wife was therefore to be ſo pure, becauſe ſhe was a type of the Church, 2 Cor. 11. 2. Revel. 14. 4. as the High Prieſt her husband was of Chriſt.

V. 14. a widow] In this the mariage of the High-Prieſt (for in this particular, the prohibition is not given to inferiour Prieſts) was more preciſe, then the Miniſters of the Goſpel need to be; but in the other exceptions, there is a moral reaſon for them, which was not peculiar to the Prieſt-hood, but belongeth to modeſty, honeſty, and decency of the Evangelical Miniſtry.

of his own people] Whereby, though it be meant, that uſually the Levites ſhould marry within their own Tribes, as the reſt did; yet becauſe they had no ſeparate portion of the land of Canaan by themſelves, as the other Tribes had, but were in a manner mingled among them by their dwellings; this reſtraint of marriage was not ſo ſtrictly obſerved among them, but that they might ſometimes marry with daughters that were not of their own Tribe; as Jehoiada married Jehoſhabeath the daughter of Jehoram King of Judah, 2 Chron 22. 11.

V. 15. profane his ſeed] Making them unfit for the holy Prieſthood, by marrying any unchaſte, or defamed woman; that upholding the holineſſe, and purity of his Prieſt-hood, he may breed the more reverence in the people, to the religion and worſhip, wherein he was a principal and moſt eminent agent: and therefore he was not to marry a woman, either corrupted by whordome, or defamed by report; no, nor an honeſt widow (but a virgin only) unleſs her decaſed husband were a Prieſt, Ezek. 44. 22. nor a woman divorced for what cauſe ſoever.

V. 17. any blemiſh] For as the ſacrifice by death was a type of Chriſt, and therefore muſt be without blemiſh, Exod. 12. 5. Levit. 22. 19, 1 Pet. 1. 19. ſo the Prieſt by oblation was a type of Chriſts free-offering up of himſelf, and therefore he was to be without blemiſh alſo. And now though bodily blemiſhes do not diſable men from the miniſtry of the Goſpel, ſuch remarkable deformities, as apparantly procure contempt, ſhould diſcourage any from undertaking that calling, eſpecially when they are to be ſet up to the publick view, and therewithal to diſdain; whereby the miniſtry is neither ſo awful or fruitful, as by another it might be: but that which in the Evangelical miniſtry is moſt liable to exception, is ſuch blemiſhes in the mind, or manners, as make them unable to be teachers, unfit to be examples to their flocks, as is required, 1 Pet. 5. 2, 3. See 1 Tim. 3. 2.

bread] By which is meant all Oblations allowed for food, eſpecially the ſhew-bread, which the inferiour prieſts every Sabbath brought new, and ſet upon the Table of the ſhew-bread, and took away the old. See v. 6.

V. 18. flat noſe] The Original word Bharum, in the radical ſenſe of it, ſignifieth rather cut off, then diſperſed or flat.

V. 22. he ſhall eat] Though the blemiſhed Prieſt may not offer, he may eat of the offerings; becauſe eating was no type of Chriſts perſon, or his actions; in not being allowed to offer, he was in worſe condition then other Prieſts; in being allowed to eat, he was in a better ſtate then they that were unclean, for they might not, Chap. 22. 3.

both of the moſt holy] There was a difference, and kind of pre-eminence in things dedicated to God that had a blemiſh, but if they were to be eaten, he was to have his part, how holy ſoever they were.

V. 23. nor come nigh] The Altar was without the Tabernacle, and by the door of it, he that had a blemiſh might not come ſo far as to the Altar which was without the Tabernacle, much leſſe might he come into the Sanctuary, or do any prieſtly office there, though by birth he were of the Prieſty kindred.

CHAP. XXII.

Verſ. 2. S*Eparate themſelves*] That the Prieſts that are polluted, muſt abſtain from eating holy things. See v. 4.

V. 3. goeth unto] That is, to eat thereof.

from my preſence] Heb. from my face. That is, from me, or by me; ſo that he ſhall not live in my ſight, nor have a being as he hath had.

V. 4. What man ſoever] The Hebrew is, man, man; That is, any man, this or that, if he may be called man, and be of mankind; and ſo it extends to women alſo, who had no more priviledg of eating holy things in a condition of uncleanneſſe, then men had.

that is unclean] By touching any dead thing, or being at the burial of any dead body. See Num. 19. 11.

or a man whoſe] That man ſhall be unclean, not he that toucheth him, though touching other unclean things, do cauſe a ceremonial uncleanneſſe.

V. 6. The ſoul] See on Chap. 21. 1.

V. 10. no ſtranger] That is, not a Prieſt, or of the family of the Prieſts, though living in the ſame houſe, for ſometimes in one houſe there may be two families; and herein there is difference between the portion of the Prieſt, and of the people, though in the ſame ſacrifice, that the Prieſts portion is to be eaten only by them of his family, but the portion which belonged to him who brought the offering, might be imparted to any Hebrews, if they were not debarred from a part by ſome legal uncleanneſs.

V. 11. he ſhall eat] He that was but a ſojourner, or gueſt, may not eat of the holy things; nor that was hired by the day, for ſuch an hired ſervant is meant, verſe 10. but the bought ſervant, and he that was born in his houſe, as conſtant perſons in the Prieſts family, might eat thereof.

V. 12. ſtranger] See Annot. on v. 10.

ſhe may not eat] But the Prieſts wife may eat, as in the right of her husband, being one fleſh with him by marriage.

V. 14. fifth part] That is, he ſhall repay the principal, and a fift part over and above, as a forfeiture for the offence, and a caveat againſt the like in future time: See chap. 5. 15. & 16. And this ſatisfaction was to be made to the Sanctuary, if the wrong were in any thing belonging to it, and to the Prieſt, if it were in that which was his peculiar portion.

V. 16. or ſuffer them] Or load themſelves with the iniquity of treſpaſs in their eating what they ſhould not.

V. 11. ſtrangers] That is, Proſelites, or Converts to the Religion of the Hebrews. See on chap. 17. 13.

V. 19. a male] The whole burnt-offering was to be only of the male kind, chap. 1. 10. the peace-offering, chap. 3. 1. and ſin-offering might be of the females, chapt. 4. 32. and chap. 5. 6. See Mal. 1. 14.

V. 23. but for a vow] The leſſer blemiſhes, as the lack of a tayl, (which in ſtinted ſacrifices was not to be wanting, Exod. 29. 22. Lev. 8. 25. and Lev. 9. 19. and the like may be ſaid of the ears) did not hinder the acceptation of a free-will-offering; but that which was offered by vow, was to be perfect, as that which was required by oblation of the law, which was to mind the offerer of the perfection of Chriſt, of whom the ſacrifice was a figure; and of that perfection which every one was to preſs after, as in imitation of him. Some take this exception to be only of ſuch as had ſome part either exceſſive or defective in quantity, for length or ſhortneſſe, for greatneſs or ſmalneſs; but if there were any exceſſe or defect in the number of parts, as if a ſheep had more or fewer then four legs, it was to be rejected as monſtrouſly miſ-ſhapen. And there be ſome, who take this free-will-offering for a gift for the uſe of the Prieſt, not to be ſacrificed unto God; not ſo tendred, as to be turned into mony to buy ſomewhat which is fit to be preſented in ſacrifice unto God; if that which was offered were in its own kind fit to be rejected.

V. 25. ſtrangers hands] The ſacrifices of God muſt be offered, and are accepted without reſpect of any perſon, but his whom they typifie, Jeſus Chriſt; therefore a blemiſhed ſacrifice will not ſerve, or be received from an Iſraelite, or from a Proſelite; but the Prieſt might receive mony from ſtrangers, whether in Nation or Religion, which might be converted to ſome ſervice of the Sanctuary, whether for ſacrifice or otherwiſe; Joſephus lib. 2. of the Wars of the Jews, Chap. 17. But no uncircumciſed perſon might by himſelf preſent any thing, though in it ſelf perfect, to be offered to God.

V. 27. ſeven dayes] See Annotat. on Exod. 22. 30. and 23. 19.

V. 28. in one day] By this, as by the ordinance againſt eating blood, God meant to admoniſh his people of mercy, and to reſtrain them from cruelty, ſee on Deut. 22. 6. Gen. 32. 11.

V. 30. leave none] See on Chap. 7. v. 15.

V. 32. profane my holy Name] By bringing it into contempt with the Nations, by your profane and corrupt manners. See Annot. on chap. 18. 21.

which hallow you] Who giveth you holy Laws to live by, and the grace you have to live according to thoſe Laws.

CHAP. XXIII.

Verſ. 2. HOly convocations] Called and met together for an holy buſineſs; for hearing of the Law, and for putting up prayers, and giving praiſes to God.

V. 3. Sabbath of reſt] Heb. reſt of reſt.

no work] Work in the general is forbidden on the Sabbath, and in particular the dreſſing of meat on the Sabbath is forbidden; and the like reſtraint is partly expreſt, and partly underſtood of the day of expiation. But on other Feſtivals, work in general is not forbidded, but ſervile work; that is, work of a mans worldly calling, wherein ſervants chiefly, though not only, were imployed.

in all your dwellings] The obſervation of the Sabbath, was not only in the Sanctuary, as other Feaſts were, but in private habitations, tents or houſes, as other Feaſts were not: for that purpoſe there were built divers Synagogues, not only in Jeruſalem, but in divers other Cities, Act. 15. 21. ſee on 2 King. 4. 23. & Luk. 7. 5.

V. 4. ſeaſons] The Sabbath was kept every week, and the other Convocations, mentioned in this Chapter, but once a year.

V. 5. firſt moneth] See Exod. 12. 2. & 13. 15. & 23. 15. & 34. 18. Num. 9. 2. & 28. 16. & Deut. 16. 1.

at even] The feaſt of unleavened bread began with the Paſſeover, on the fourteenth day of the moneth, but at the ſecond of the two evenings (whereof ſee Annot. on Exod. 12. 6) which was the beginning of the fifteenth day, and continued ſeven dayes, during which time, no bread but unleavened was to be eaten, ſee on Deut. 16. 8.

V. 7. ſervile work] Or bodily labour, ſaving about that which every one muſt eat, Exod. 12. 26.

V. 8. ſeventh day] The firſt day of the feaſt, and the ſeventh were to be kept holy; in the reſt they might work, unleſſe the Sabbath fell on any of them; yet all of them had the ſame number of ſacrifices, above the ordinary preparation of every day. See Num. 28. 24. ſee Exod. 23. 16. & 34. 22. Num. 28. 26. Deut. 16. 9.

V. 10. When ye be come] It appeareth hereby, that though theſe Laws were ordained in the Deſert, they were not generally and punctually to be obſerved there (though ſome of them were, as that of the Sabbath) but in the Land of Canaan.

harveſt] That is, Barly harveſt, which in that Country, is ripe about the end of March, and the beginning of April, but eſpecially about Jerico, for there the corn is ripe ſooner by fifteen dayes, then about Jeruſalem, or any other part of the Land of Canaan; Joſeph. Antiq. lib. 3 cap. 10. See on 1 Sam. 6. 13. Judg. 21. 19, 23.

a ſheaf of] Heb. an Omer. For before it was offered, it was dryed, and threſhed, and the graine ſeparated from the chaff, as Joſeph. ſheweth, lib. 3. cap. 10. and punned or ground to meal, and that ſifted, that only the fine flowre might be offered; and ſo it might be meaſured in an Omer: and after this they were allowed to reap for themſelves, which before they might not do; at leaſt they might not dreſſe any of the new corn for food, before this oblation were made. But ſince the word Omer, ſignifieth alſo an handful, Deut. 24. 19. ſome would have it taken here for a ſheaf, as v. 14.

11. on the morrow after the Sabbath] Not the weekly Sabbath, but the firſt day of the feaſt of unleavened bread, called a ſabbath, v. 7. from this ſecond day of the feaſt, which is the ſixteenth day of the moneth Niſan; from which day were reckoned the fifty dayes ended at Pentecoſt, or Whitſontide, reckoning that ſecond day incluſively. Penticoſt, or Whitſontide was kept in memorial; firſt, of the Iſraelites coming out of Egypt, Deut 16. 10, 12. ſecondly, of the Law given at Mount Sinai; thirdly, for grateful acknowledgment of the fruitfulneſſe of the Land of Canaan. Some make a myſtical alluſion hereof, to the giving of the Evangelical Law at Jeruſalem, at the Feaſt of Pentecoſt, Act. 2. 1, 2, 3. and to the firſt fruits of the Chriſtian converts, repeated by the Miniſtry of the Apoſtles, according to our Saviours ſaying, Joh. 4. 37, 38.

V. 12. an he-lamb] And this feaſt were ſerved in three courſes of ſacrifices; firſt, the continual daily ſacrifice: ſecondly, the ſeptenary ſacrifice offered every of the ſeven daies: and thirdly, this hee-lamb offered with the firſt-fruits, prefiguring Chriſt, who was the firſt-born of every creature, Col. 1. 15. and the firſt-fruits of them that ſlept 1 Cor. 15. 20. Col. 1. 18. and by whom theſe firſt-fruits were ſanctified.

V. 13. two tenth deales] Which is the fifth part of an Ephah, or two Omers: ſee Annot. on Exod. 16. v. 16. and therefore two or double to the uſual proportion of a lamb, Num. 15. 4. becauſe here was added another occaſion of the ſacrifice, viz. a gratulation for the fruits of the earth, and therefore was the meal doubled, not the Lamb, becauſe it came of the fruits of the earth, as the Lamb did not.

Hin] See on Exod. 29. 40.

V. 14. until] Until they have offered unto God, as to their Maker, and maintainer, a portion of his own increaſe, as a tribute, or chief rent, for that they have and hold under him; they were not to take any thing for their own uſe. See Rom. 11. 16.

V. 15. morrow after] See Annot. on ver. 11.

ſeven Sabbaths] That is, ſeven weeks; for the Sabbath being the principal day in the week, carrieth the name of the whole week (as the ſoul the chief part of the man, ſtands often for the whole man) ſo the Phariſee is to be underſtood, when he ſaith, he faſted twice a Sabbath, that is, twice a week, Luk. 18. 12. for twice a day he could not keep a Faſt. See Annot, 3. on Gen. 1. 5.

V. 17. Two wave loaves] Some conceive that at the Feaſt of Pentecoſt every family was to bring two leavened loaves, as the firſt fruits of their increaſe to the Prieſts, becauſe it is ſaid, they ſhould bring them out of their habitations, but that notwithſtanding, others take it, that it would be too great a proportion of bread for them, that ſo many could not be waved by the Prieſt with the Peace-offering, as is appointed, ver. 20. therefore it is more probable, that they were a common Oblation, made at the publick charge, and offered alſo in the name of all the people in Covenant with God. Againſt this is objected, that they were to bring them out of their habitations, which imports a pluralitie; for two loaves were too few to come out of many habitations: to which it is anſwered, that it muſt be of the wheat of the Land of Canaan, not of a forraign Country, where they had no habitations; and yet it might be, that this common charge, might by courſe be ſo diſtributed among the people, that it might be rather accounted a common or general thing, then of particular coſt or concernment of particular perſons.

with leaven,] See on chap. 2. 11. & 7. 13.

V. 18. ſeven Lambs] To theſe in the Feaſt of Pentecoſt were added other oblations, whereof ſee Num. 28. 27.

V. 20. Wave them] See on Exod. 29. 24.

holy to the Lord] They were ſaid to be holy to the Lord, becauſe the Prieſt as his ſervant, ſhould be maintained by the wages and allowance of his Lord and Maſter.

for the Prieſts] Wholly for the Prieſt, becauſe being offered for the whole Congregation, it was too little for every one to have a part, and no man in ſuch a common intereſt, having right to challenge a ſingular portion to himſelf, all was aſſigned to the Prieſt, though in other Peace offerings he had only a part, chap.7.32,33.

V.22. Thou when thou reapeſt] The charge is intimated firſt in the plural number, when ye; but preſently changed to the ſingular number, thou, to direct every one to make a particular application of the general to himſelf.

a Sabbath] Or an holy day, or ſolemn feaſt unto the Lord, Num. 29.1.

Trumpets] This was on the firſt day of the month Tizri, that is, of September, the firſt month for civil account. See Annot. on Chap. 25. 3. And yet this ſeventh month, as if it had been the Sabbath of months, as the ſeventh day is the weekly Sabbath, was eminent for the multitude of Solemnities above any other; for in that month was the Feaſt of Trumpets, of Tabernacles, and the ſolemn Atonement or Expiation obſerved. This Feaſt of Trumpets was kept at leaſt the firſt day of it, (as it is received by tradition among the Jewes) in remembrance of Iſaacs deliverance from ſlaughter, when his father was ready to offer him up in ſacrifice, Gen.22.11,12. and it is called a memorial of blowing of Trumpets, becauſe it was in the beginning of that month, which had many Feaſts in it, to which the people were to be called together by blowing of Trumpets; and for that the Trumpets were to ſound at the oblation of the ſacrifice on dayes of rejoycing and other ſolemn times, eſpecially in the New Moon, Num.10.10. Pſalm 81.3. and this joyful noyſe was made, with a ſpecial memorial of the year of Jubilee, which was begun in this month; and when it begun, the ſolemnitie of it is ſuppoſed to be ſuch, that the Trumpets were ſounded not at Jeruſalem only where the ſacrifices were offered, but throughout all the Cities of Iſrael. Some think it was called the Feaſt of Trumpets, with reference to the Ram by which Iſaac was ranſomed from death; becauſe ſome Trumpets were made of Rams hornes, Joſh.6.20. Others ſay, this Feaſt bears the memorial of the miraculous victory over Jericho, at the Iſraelites firſt entrance into the Land of Canaan, when the wals of it fell down at the ſound of Rams hornes, Joſh. in the place forementioned.

V.27. Afflict your ſouls] By faſting, mourning, in confeſſion of ſin, and ſupplication for pardon; ſee Lev.16.29.Num.23.7. This is thought to be the memorial of the ſin about the golden Calf, and of the pardon granted upon the repentance of the people.

V.32. From Even to] That is, from Sun-ſetting, to Sun-ſetting; ſo was the old Sabbath and other Feaſts meaſured, in Chriſtianity as the day is changed, by occaſion of the Reſurrection of Chriſt: ſo alſo is the time of the beginning of it changed from evening to morning, and that upon the ſame ground, for Chriſt roſe not in the evening, but in the morning, Mat. 28.1.

V.34. Tabernacles] Joh.7.2. This Feaſt was to be kept in grateful memorial of Gods providence and protection of the Iſraelites in the wilderneſs, where they had no houſes, but moveable habitations, as Tabernacles, Tents, and Booths, Winter and Summer, for fortie yeears together, ver.43. And it was inſtituted alſo, for thankſgiving to God for the fruits which the year before brought forth, not only their corn, but the fruits of the vines and olives, which were all uſually gathered before this Feaſt was celebrated, Deut. 16. 13,14. See Exod. 23. 16. Some that turn this Hiſtory into myſtery, make an alluſion of it to Chriſt and to Chriſtians; to Chriſt, taking our Tabernacle of fleſh, Joh.1.14. to Chriſtians, as they are pilgrims and ſtrangers in the world, having no certain habitation, Heb.11.13. but travelling in this world toward heaven, as the Iſraelites in the wilderneſſe towards Canaan. See Zach. 14 16,19. 2 Cor.5.1.

V.36. On the eight day] The Feaſt of Tabernacles conſiſted of ſeven dayes, ver.34. yet when thoſe were paſt, (though the formaility of the Feaſt were finiſhed) the eighth day was kept with publick ſolemnity, and it may be with ſo much the more, becauſe until that time twelve month it was not to return; for that reaſon, (though in conſtitution it were but equal with the firſt day) in obſervation it might exceed it, and ſo be called the great day of the Feaſt, Joh.7.37. In this it is probable, they had a grateful remembrance of their peaceable ſettlement in the land of Canaan, after their many intricate and troubleſom windings aud wanderings in the Wilderneſs.

V.38. Beſides the Sabbaths of the Lord] If any other ſolemnities were coincident with the Sabbath, the oblations belonging to the Sabbath, did not excuſe the coſt of the concurrent feſtival; for the oblations belonging to it, were to be performed, as if it had happened ſingly by it ſelf.

beſide your gifts, and beſide all your vows] No voluntary oblations, whether with vow, or without vow, would ſuffice to diſcharge the coſt of the ſacrifice, due to the ſolemnity of any ſpecial feſtivity.

V.43. Boothes] Built of boughs, which in the general were made of goodly trees, and thick trees, ver.40. fit for ſhelter and ſhadow againſt the weather, in particular they are named Palme trees, and Willows of the Brook in the ſame verſe, which might be uſeful to bind the boughs together; and in Nehemiah, there are mentioned branches of thick trees in general: and in ſpecial, Olive branches, and Myrtle branches, Neh. 8.15. theſe were ſet upon the roofs of their houſes, and in their courts, and in the courts of the Houſe of God, and in the ſtreets, Neh.8.16. their uſe was as hath been noted, ver.34. In this Feaſt of Tabernacles they carried boughs in their hands, Joſeph. Antiq. lib.3. cap.10. Theſe Booths were not to be ſet up out of their Towns or Cities, but out of their houſes in the ſtreets, and in gardens; and ſometimes they were placed on the tops of houſes, as Neh. 8.16. and this Feaſt of Tabernacles continued ſeven dayes, during all which time, they did not wholly forbear all bodily labour, but ſpent the moſt of it in feaſting and rejoycing. Among theſe Feaſts is no mention of New Moons; whereof ſee Num.20.11. To all theſe in after times were added the Feaſt of Purim, Eſth.9.17, 26,28. and two more of leſſe warrant, 1 Maccab.4.56. and 2 Maccab. 1.18.

CHAP. XXIV.

Ver. 2. THat they bring] The Prieſts and Levites were to do the ſervice of the Sanctuary, but the people were to bear the charge; ſince the miniſtration was not for the Miniſters themſelves, but for the people alſo; hence were their oblations, Exod.23.15. and chap.30.13. and it is like the treaſury, Luk.21.1. was to receive the gifts and oblation of well-diſpoſed perſons for the maintenance of the Temple, and for the ſuſtenance of them that did ſervice in it.

V.3. Vail] Which vail ſeparated the Holieſt of all (where was the Ark of the Teſtimony) from the Sanctuary; ſo it is without the Holy of Holies.

V.5. Bake] It ſeemeth by 1 Chro.9.32. & Chap.23.29. to be the ſervice of the Cohathites, which was one of the Families of the Tribe of Levi, to bake the bread.

two tenths] That is in meaſure two Omers; of which ſee Annot. on Exod.16.16. and in weight every cake was thirteen pound and an half, allowing for every three ounces of flower, one ounce of water to temper it withal.

V.6. two rowes, ſix on a row] They might be variouſly diſpoſed, either in longitude one by another, or in altitude, one upon another, as in the Scheme in the Geneva Bible.

V.7. On the bread for] Or, in ſtead of the bread; for it was burnt every Sabbath, when the bread was taken away.

memorial] See on Gen.9.15,16.

V.8. Every Sabbath] That there may be the more ſtore for the maintenance of the Prieſts, and that it be not too ſtale by ſtaying too long unchanged; and the new that was brought, was, it is like, hot from the Oven, that it might not be too dry before the weeks end.

from the children of Iſrael] Being twelve, it is like that they had one from every Tribe.

everlaſting Covenant] So perpetual Statute, v.19. See Chap.3.17. & Num.19.21.

V.9. made by fire] The bread in this reſpect may be ſaid to be holier then other oblations, becauſe it is conſtantly and continually preſented to God, and as in his preſence, is called, ver.10. in Hebrew, the bread of faces. Queſt. But how is it made by fire? Anſw. It is not ſaid, That it is made by fire, but it is compared with thoſe that are made with fire; or they may be ſaid to be offered with fire, becauſe that which was laid upon them was burnt with fire, and that, it may be, with ſome reference to them in their ſtead. Of eating the Shew-bread, ſee 1 Sam. 21 4,5.

V.10. Whoſe father was an Egyptian] When the Iſraelites came out of Egypt, there came with them a mixed multitude of ſtrangers, Exod. 12.38. whereof the greateſt number of ſtrangers were (no doubt) Egyptians, ſuch a one by his fathers ſide (though by his mothers ſide an Iſraelite) was the Blaſphemer. It is like his mother taught him to ſpeak, his father to blaſpheme; that is the danger of mixed marriages, for the children, like the concluſion of a Syllogiſm, follow the worſer part.

V.11. blaſphemed] Heb. Bored thorough. For the blaſphemer that is ſo minded, would both bore Gods name, and gore his perſon if he could.

V.12. That the mind] Moſes might have put him to death by vertue of the law againſt curſing father or mother, Exod.21.17. but becauſe the particular puniſhment for blaſphemy was not yet appointed, he conſulted with God about it.

V.14. laid their hands] To teſtifie their perſonal charge of the ſin upon him, and to expreſs their deſire, that the evil of puniſhment may light upon his head, who is guilty of the evil of ſin; but on their own, if they in this accuſation ſhould by ſlander and murder, take away firſt his innocency, then his life.

V.15. Curſeth] This ſeemeth to be a more hainous ſin then blaſphemy fore-mentioned; betwixt which there may be this difference, that blaſphemy may be any impeachment of the divine honour, whether inconſiderately or deliberately, whether with malice, or without: but curſing implies an inteſtine and deep malignity: howſoever in this place they were both capital to the offender.

bear his ſin] That is, ſhal be puniſhed.

V.16. ſtone him] Death was inflicted for the like offence againſt man chap.20.9. and God inflicts no more for blaſphemy againſt himſelfe, though the ſin be infinitely more hainous; an example againſt partialitie to our ſelves, and too much ſeverity in proſecution or puniſhment of thoſe that offend us.

V.19. So ſhall it be done] See Annot. on Exod 21.24.

V.20. Breach for breach] Not according to every mans grudg, or deſire of revenge; but as the Magiſtrate ſhall award upon the hearing of the cauſe.

V.22. For the ſtranger] Though in ceremonials the ſtrangers, had neither priviledge in the uſe, nor prejudice by the omiſſion of them, yet in capital crimes, if they and the Iſraelites ſinned alike, they muſt be puniſhed alike. See on chap.20.2.

CHAP. XXV.

Ver.2. A Sabbath] That is, a reſt from the toyl of tillage and culture both of fields and vineyards. Of the reaſons of this, ſee Annot.on Exod.23.11. This Law was dated at Sinai, for thence, and then it was delivered, when Moſes abode ſo long with God in the Mount; but it was not to be put in execution, until the people had been ſix years in poſſeſſion of the Land of Canaan; in the Sabbatical year Deuteronomy was to be read unto the people, Deut.31.10,11. Hebrew ſervants were to be releaſed; Exod.21.2. debts were to be remitted, Deut.15.2. and the ground left untilled: and whatſoever fruits it brought forth, they muſt not be gathered as any ones proper goods, but left to common uſe.

V.3. Six years] The Jewes begin their Civil year in September, for then all their fruits were gathered for the year following; the Sacred, which ſerved for the Anniverſary order of the Feſtivals, and other Eccleſiaſtical matters, was from the month Niſan, which anſwereth to part of March, and part of April. See on Gen.7.11. and on Exod.23.11.

V.5. Own accord] By reaſon of the corn that fell out of the eares the year paſt. See 2 Kings 19.29.

undreſſed] Heb. Of thy ſeparation That is, which thou haſt ſeparated from thy ſelf principally, and left free for common uſe, ver.16. or which thou hadſt wont in the ſix years to appropriate, or ſeparate to thine own uſe; or (as ſome conceive, according to the Hebrew word, Nezirecha) becauſe the fruits ungathered, make a ſhew or reſemblance of the Nazarites, whoſe locks were worn long, without any cutting.

V.6. The Sabbath] The reſt of the Land; that is, that fruit which the Land bringeth forth in the year of her reſt from the labor of the husband-man.

V.8. Seven Sabbaths of yeers] That is, fortie nine yeers; and in the beginning of the fiftieth year was the Jubilee, ſo called, becauſe the joyful tydings of libertie were publickly proclaimed by the ſound of the Trumpet or Cornet made of a Rams horne, at the end of the fortie ninth year for the releaſe of men from ſervitude, debts mortgage, and the reſtitution of eſtates to the firſt owners, from whom in the former years they had been alienated. During this whole year there was neither ſowing nor reaping, and when it was expired, the next year, which was fiftie one, began the reckoning for the ſucceeding Jubile.

V.9. the tenth day of the ſeventh month] The Jewes antedate the beginning of the Jubile ten dayes ſooner, but if the Trumpet were not ſounded till the tenth day, it is like the ſolemnitie began not till then; and the day of expiation led the way to the Jubile ſucceeding, which might mind the people of ſowing in tears, before reaping in joy, Pſal.126.5. and of a diſpoſition to pardon their offending brethren, as they expected pardon for themſelves in the day of expiation.

day of atonement] That is, the day of reconciliation with God, which was celebrated on the tenth day of the ſeventh month.

V.10. Inhabitants] Which were in bondage.

a Jubile unto you] Some derive the word from Jubal, the firſt Inventor of Inſtruments of muſick, Gen.4.21. becauſe it was a year of rejoycing but the more received etymology is from Jobel, which ſignifieth a Ram, becauſe the Jubile was proclaimed in the towns and Cities of Iſrael with the ſound of the Trumpets made of Rams horns. The firſt Moſaical Jubile was about the year of the world 2501, ſee on Exod. 19.13.

his poſſeſſion] Of immoveable goods, as lands and houſes, which was no wrong to them that bought or took them before, becauſe they were not put over from one to another without the condition of reſtitution (either expreſſed or implyed) in the year of Jubile; and the price was proportionable, more or leſs, according to the diſtance or neerneſs of the year of releaſe: and this God ordained, partly for reſtraint of concupiſcence of others eſtates (for men would not ſo much deſire them upon theſe terms, as if they might purchaſe them to perpetuity, to them and their heirs for ever) and partly that they ſhould not be too proud of what they obtained ſince they muſt be ſure to part with it again; and it was likewiſe for the comfort of ſuch as were decayed and impoveriſhed, and to preſerve ſuch an equality, as might keep out Tyranny and confuſion of Tribes and Families, which were to be upheld in their eſtate and condition, whether of ſufficiencie or plenty and dignity, wherein they had formerly been. Beſides this, it may be (as ſome conceive) that this reſtitution in the year of Jubile, was a type of reſtitution to a right and poſſeſſion of the celeſtial Canaan, upon the ſound of the Trumpet of the Reſurrection, though men forfeited their right by ſin, and were (as it were) caſt out of it by excommunication out of the Church below, a type, as wel as a part of the Congregation of the firſt-born above, Heb.12.23. See on ver.22. & 50.

V.12. holy unto you] Firſt in the general, for that which gives occaſion of ſo much rejoycing to men, is cauſe of much thankſgiving to God, and of ſo much more holy ſervice to him, as they receive beneficence from him. Secondly, with eſpecial reference to the great joy of the acceptable year of the Lord by the redemption of Chriſt, of which this year of Jubile was a type. See Iſai 62 2. & 63.4. 2 Cor.6.2.

out of the field] Whence it was not to be changed from a common to a proper right or uſe, as when it was laid up in the barn, but was to be left free for every one to eat; wherein for that year, no mans intereſt was more then anothers; and therefore it was to be left there, where any might have, and no man debarred from his portion.

V.15. according to the number of yeers] If the Jubile to come be neer, thou, ſhalt ſel better cheap; if it be far off, dearer; and ſo the ſeller or ſetter muſt not demand too much, the buyer or taker muſt not bid or give too little See the next verſe.

V,20. What ſhal we eat the ſeventh yeer?] There was the more cauſe of this doubt, becauſe the Sabatical year and the year of Jubile coming together, they were ſuſpended from ſowing and reaping both thoſe yeers: but it was as eaſie for God to make them amends for that long forbearance, by a more abundant bleſſing, as Mal 3 10. as for a ſhorter time. See Annot.on Exod.23.11. See Mat.6.31.

V.21. Command my bleſſing] God hath an abſolute power of bleſſing; when men bleſs, they do but pray that God would bleſſe, but God bleſſeth by authoritie, and if he command ſtones to be made bread, Mat.4.3. the ſtones ſhal relent, and become both ſoft to the teeth, and ſatisfactory to the ſtomach: this command of Gods bleſſing upon the ſixth and the eighth year, to bring forth enough for it ſelfe and the ſeventh, ſheweth, that beſides the natural, there was a ſupernatural fruitfulneſſe in the land of Canaan. See Exod.34. and 24. 2 Kings 19.29 Hoſ.2.21.

V.23. For ever] But in the yeer of Jubile, it muſt return to the Family to which it formerly belonged.

V.24. A redemption] It ſhal not be ſold, but with covenant of redemption, or he that taketh it to mortgage, ſhal yeild to a redemption, if not ſooner, yet at the year of Jubile.

V.27. Count the yeers] He that enjoyed it abating the money for the years paſt, he that redeemed it, was to pay for the years to come, according to the ſum received, at the former contract of alienation.

V.28. Go out] From his hands that bought it.

V.31. But the houſes] There is no general rule but hath ſome exception; and here is one (of great moment) from the ordinary redemption at the year of Jubile; houſes in (unwalled) Villages that had no walls, were to be redeemed in that yeer, but not houſes in walled Cities, for they muſt be redeemed within a full year, or not at al: and this was either in favour to cities the better to furniſh them with inhabitants, and to keep the houſes in good repair; or for caution to the owners, that by ill husbandry they might not be put to part with them; or elſe, becauſe neither houſes in cities, no nor cities themſelves were ſo diſtinctly ſorted to tribes, as houſes in the country, and the Lands annexed to them were, for the Levites had cities in ſundry tribes, and yet had no divided portion of land allotted to them, as the other tribes had. What is here ſaid of houſes, may be applied to ſome parcels of ground in walled Towns; as Mount Moriah which David bought for the building of the Temple in Jeruſalem, 2 Sam.24.22,24. the like is held of ſuch grounds as yeeld no profit, as gardens of pleaſure, and the potters field for burial. Mat.27:27.

V.32. At any time] Others could not redeem their alienated lands or houſes, but at the year of Jubile, if the taker would not releaſe them ſooner; but the Levites had a priviledg for recovery of their poſſeſſions at any time. See on Joſh.21.4.

V.33. Their poſſeſſion] Which conſiſted in houſes, cities and their ſuburbs, which were meaſured to a certain number of cubits round about them; not ample portions of lands, corn fields, paſtures and vineyards, as the other tribes had.

V.34. Suburbs] Of theſe ſuburbs, ſee Annot. on Num.35 5. there is ſomewhat contrary to this practice, Jer.32.7,8. Act.4.36,37. but by thoſe times the conſtitution of the Jewiſh ſtate was much changed.

V.36. Uſury] See Annot.on Exod.22.25.

V.40. Unto the year of Jubile] If before that time, he had not made uſe of his Hebrew priviledg of his releaſe in the ſeventh year, Exod.21.2. yea thoſe that had their ears bored through as a ſign of their perpetual bondage, were now ſet at liberty. See Annot.on Exod.21.6. and the Annot. on Exod.12.14.

V.41. He and his children] And his wife, if he came in married, elſe not. See Annot.on Exod.21.4.

V.42. My ſervant] So were the Hebrews, not only by the common right of creation, but by particular right of redemption from tyrannical ſervitude in Egypt.

as bondmen] That is, unto perpetual ſervitude; for an Hebrew might not be brought under ſuch bondage by another, ver.46. and that they might be more willing to exempt their brethren from ſuch an heavy and long-laſting yoak, God giveth them leave to lay it on the necks of heathens, ver.44.

V.45. Your poſſeſſion] A perpetual poſſeſſion; for they ſhall not be bought out at the year of Jubile, though they were proſelytes or converts to the Jewiſh religion: for the difference betwixt an Iſraelite, and one of another nation, and the preeminence of the one above the other, was a priviledge of pedigree, from Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob, and not of profeſſion, though he that forſook his religion, was not worthy to enjoy this priviledg; and he that ſincerely imbraced religion (though an alien in nation and nature from the Iſraelites) no doubt had a more eaſie bondage then another bondman.

V.46. For ever] When their maſters dye, their children ſhall inherit the maſterly power over them, and they ſhal abide in bondage as long as they live.

V.50. Year of Jubile] This was a figure of our freedom purchaſed by Chriſt, Joh 8.36. and of reſt and relief from all agrievances in the Kingdom of heaven, for the Jubile had all the priviledges of the Sabbatical year; and beſides them, in his fiftieth year, all fruitful lands and houſes in the country returned to their firſt owners, though they had been ſold over and over, an hundred times.

number of yeers] Which remain yet to the Jubile, as if a man ſhould ſell himſelfe for 50 ſhekels, to ſerve from one Jubile to another, and from the bargain making, had ſerved ten of the yeers, he muſt be redeemed for 40 ſhekels; and ſo in proportion according to the rate payed and time run up.

V.53. in thy ſight] Thou ſhalt not ſuffer him to intreat him rigorouſly, if thou know it, and canſt help it.

V.55. Whom I brought] God renders this for a reaſon, why they ſhould not be perpetual bond-ſlaves, becauſe they were his redeemed from the ſore-bondage of Egypt: So the great Redemption of Gods elect from the ſpiritual Pharaoh the divel, carrieth with it a comfortable expectation of leſſer deliverances, ſo far as may ſerve for Gods glory, and his ſervants good.

CHAP. XXVI.

Ver.2. A*Nd reverence*] See Annot. on chap.19.30.

V.4. Rain] By promiſing abundance of earthly things, he ſtirreth up their minds to conſider the rich Treaſures of ſpiritual bleſſings See 1 Tim.4.8.

V.5 Your threſhing ſhall reach unto the vintage] Your old ſtore ſhal be ſo much, and the new return ſo ſoon, and be ſo plentiful, that before you have threſhed up your former proviſion of corn, you ſhal be invited to the vintage; and before that be gathered in, the new ſeed time will come upon you. See Amos 9.13.

V 6. through your land] In the furious march of a warlike enemy, who rangeth up and down a land, to ruine and root out the people.

V.8. Five of you] A ſmal number of yours, ſhall put to flight many troops of your enemies, as Judg.7.22. See Deut.30.30.

V.9. eſtabliſh] By real and ſettled performance of what I have promiſed.

V.10. Becauſe of the new] Either becauſe now the new will ſecure them from want, though they liberally ſpend up the old, or becauſe by the abundance of new, they ſhall want room to lay it up, unleſſe they take away the old. Luke 12.18.

V.13. Upright] The yoak boweth down the head and neck, and maketh men rather of a groveling, then upright posture, but they that are freed from the yoak, go upright.

V.15. Break my Covenant] Mine, becauſe I firſt propounded it, and have authoritie to require it, and for my part ſhall aſſuredly keep it, if you do not ſet me free, by your revolt from your undertaking, for thereby you break it, and I am not bound, if you forſake me, to cleave ſtil unto you

V.16. Conſume the eyes] Or, Over-heat the eyes. The word Kaddahhah, in the Original, ſignifieth the diſeaſe called the Jandies, but by Latin Authors the Kings Evil, which ariſeth from a diſtempered head, and turneth the colour of the eyes.

V.18. Seven times] That is, many times more, or more extremely. See Annot. on ver.24.

V.19. As iron] Neither heaven ſhal diſtil a ſoftening rain, nor the earth be in any diſpoſition to receive it; neither of them ſhall be of any more uſe to help forward the fruits of the earth, then if they were the one iron, the other braſs.

V.24. ſeven times] It is often in this chapter uſed for many times; as ver.18, 21, 24, 28 ſo Pro.24.16, & chap.26.16. Pſal.119.164.

V.25. Quarrel of my Covenant] Breach of covenant betwixt God and man breaks the peace, and breeds a quarrel betwixt them, in which he will take vengeance of mans revolt, if by repentance and reformation his wrath be not appeaſed.

V.26. ſtaff of your bread] That is, the ſtrength whereby the life is ſuſtained or ſupported from falling into the grave, as a ſtaff upholdeth a feeble body, which otherwiſe would fall to the grouud. Pſal.104.15. and 105.16. Ezek.4.16. & 5.26. & 14.13.

ten] That is many. See Annot. on Gen.31.7.

one oven] One oven ſhal be ſufficient for ten families, not for the greatneſs of the oven, but for the ſcantneſs of proviſion.

by weight] Too light weight, either to ſatisfie the appetite, or to ſuſtain the ſtrength. This is a great token of ſcarcitie, Ezek.4.16. Neh.5.6.

V.29. Of your ſons, and of, &c.] The extremitie of hunger breaks the ſtrongeſt bonds of law or nature, and turns the kindeſt kiſſes of the lips, to biting with the teeth. See Lam.4 10.

V 30. High places] Where, after the manner of the Gentiles, the Jewes ſet up memorials and altars for Idols.

upon the carkaſſes] Images are called carkaſſes, becauſe they are bodies without ſouls, as Pſal.115.4. yet ſo, that Idolaters are often ſo deluded, as to think the falſe gods do animate them, inform, and quicken them, and becauſe they are as loathſom unto God, as dead and ſtinking carkaſſes to men. See Ezek.6.4, 5, 13.

my ſoul] God is not as man compoſed of eſſential and integral parts, a bodie and a ſoul, and ſeveral members, but in the Scripture, condeſcending to our capacity, both a ſoul, and paſſions of the mind, and parts of the bodie are aſcribed unto him.

V.31. Sanctuaries waſte] All places of publick worſhip (wherein you either diſhonor me by your hypocriſie,) as the Tabernacle, Exod.25.8. & the Temple, 1 Chro.22.19. or honour your Idols by your Idolatry. See Pſal.74.7. Lam.1.10. Ezek.9.6. & 21 7.

not ſmell] I will not ſhew any acceptance of your ſweeteſt oblations. See Gen.8.21.

V.33. A ſword after you] You ſhal have enemies, and no heart to fight with them, nor ſafety by flying from them.

V.34. enjoy her Sabbaths] Being eaſed from the wicked weight of ſuch Inhabitants, which brought upon it heavy curſes, and toiled and tired it out with continual tillage.

V.36. The ſound of a ſhaken leaf ſhal chaſe them] See 2 King.7.6. Pro.28.1. 2 Sam.5.24.

V.39. Of their fathers] For as much as they are guilty of their fathers faults, they ſhall be puniſhed, as well as their fathers.

V.41. Accept of the puniſhment] As throughly deſerved on their part, and juſtly inflicted on Gods part; ſo that they glorifie his juſtice, and kiſſing the rod of their correction, implore his mercie.

V.43. While ſhe lieth] See Annot. on ver.34.

CHAP. XXVII.

Ver.2. A Singular vow] Vowes are religious promiſes of our ſelves, or thoſe perſons or things which are in our diſpoſal and power, with reference unto God, and with a purpoſe to bind our ſelves by the vow for that, wherein before we were free. A ſingular vow, is a vow of a ſingular perſon, for himſelf, or for any thing by vow ſeparate, and ſet apart from common to a ſacred uſe; the word in the Original hath a more emphatical ſignification then is expreſt (in the tranſlation) importing ſomewhat of a miracle. Of vowes. See. Eccles.5.4, 7.

the perſons] For of ſuch were vows ſomtimes, as 1 Sam.1.11. It was alſo a perſonal vow, when a man vowed abſtinence from ſome things (otherwiſe lawful) with reſpect unto God (as in the vow of the Nazarites to forbear wine, ſtrong drink, and the eating of grapes, moiſt or dry, Num.6.3.) or to ſerve at the Tabernacle by carrying of water, or wood, or aſhes, or ſweeping the court, or by any other miniſterial attendance upon the Levites, in their ſervice of the Sanctuary; as the Gibeonites and Nethenims, Joſh.9.12, 27. So might women vow their aſſiſtance, as by weaving, waſhing, making or mending the garments of the Prieſts. Now if a Levite vowed any thing above the duty of his place in his ordinary courſe, he was to perform both his ordinary duty whereto his calling did oblige him, and that whereto by vow he was engaged afterward.

V. 3. thy eſtimation] The order propoſed in general, is applied to every one in particular, according to the different eſtimation of his perſon, whereof the rules and rates follow afterwards; or thy eſtimation, may be the eſtimation of the Prieſt, in ſuch caſes as are not punctually determined.

thy eſtimation ſhall be] That is, if he will redeem his vow, he ſhall pay ſo much for the maintenance of the Prieſt, and ſervice and repair of the Sanctuary.

fifty ſhekels] By the year, that is, for every year 50. ſhekels; (as is conceived) for if the ſhekels had been rated by the year, a ſingle ſhekel for every ſeveral year, it ſhould have been rather fourty ſhekels for the fourty years, then fifty.

ſhekel of the Sanctuary] See Annot. on Exod. 30.13.

V. 4. thirty ſhekels] We are not by the different rate ſet upon a male and female, to value the difference of their perſons or ſexes, but rather their ſervice, becauſe a man for the moſt part is able to do more profitable and advantageous ſervice then a woman; ſo alſo ver. 5. yet there is a different price, verſ. 6. where there ſeems to be no preeminence in ability for uſe and ſervice.

V. 5. five year old] If his parents have made a vow concerning him; for one ſo young could not by vow diſpoſe of himſelf.

V. 6. from a moneth old] See Annot. on ver.5.

V. 8. poorer] Then that he can bear, or pay the eſtimation or rate according to his age, then the Prieſts ſhall value him, &c. this may be meant chiefly of ſuch a one as was of ability when he vowed, but was by miſhap made poorer when he ſhould have performed what he had formerly vowed.

before the Prieſt] That may be inferiour Prieſts; for there is nothing to make the matter particular to the office of the High-prieſt.

V. 11. unclean beaſt] Unleſs the Dog were excepted, Deut.23.18.

V. 12. good or bad] That according to the quality of it, the Prieſt may make the value more or leſſe.

V. 13. a fifth part] This was ſet down to make men ſtedfaſt in their vowes; and if they be not, for a penalty of their levity, if they fail, or fall off: the like addition was to be made for redemption of an houſe, verſ.15. which they might be willing to give, becauſe otherwiſe it could not be redeemed, no not in the year of Jubile; and alſo for dealing falſly in the holy things, See. ver.27. & 31

V.14. ſanctifie] Or dedicate as by a vow, ſaying; This houſe ſhall be holy unto the Lord, and ſo ſeparated for an holy uſe; if he redeem his vow, or his houſe from his vow, he ſhall pay the rate which the Prieſt ſet upon him; elſe the Prieſt was to keep the poſſeſſion of it for perpetuity.

V. 15. fifth part] See Annot. on ver.13.

V. 16. according to the ſeed] That is, according to the proportion and value of the ſeed, which is fit to be ſown upon ſuch a parcel of ground; as if he will take an Omer of Barley, it ſhall be valued at fifty ſhekels of ſilver from Jubile to Jubile; that is, a ſhekel for a year; and this was ſo low a price, that the worſt ground was worth it. Some take it, that the fifty ſhekels were to be for one years rent, and ſo the rent whole time from Jubile to Jubile, would be about two thouſand five hundreth ſhekels; but the former rate is more received. See on 2 Kin.4.22.

of barley] That grain is eſpecially mentioned, becauſe it was moſt uſuall in Africa, and other Eaſtern Countries.

V. 17. ſanctifie his field] That is, dedicate his field by a vow, to beſtow the price or profit of it to the ſervice of the Sanctuary.

from the year of Jubile] That is,as ſoon as the Jubile is paſt,and on ward towards another Jubile.

V.18. After the Jubile] That is, at ſome yeers diſtance after the former Jubile.

it ſhal be abated] The year of Jubile ſhal be abated, and no price reckoned for that, becauſe that year the land was to be free ; nor is more price reckoned for the reſt of the yeers, then according to the number of them,after the vow to the yeer of Jubile.

V. 19. fifth part] See Annot.on ver.13.

V.20. Not redeem] Neither he, nor his next kinſman,Chap.25.25. See Gen.7.3. and Ruth 4 4,9.

or if he have ſold it] This is not meant, as ſome conceive, of him that dedicated the field by vow, for he could not ſell it,having vowed it before (unleſſe he had redeemed it,which is here denyed) but of ſome officer of the Sanctuary, as a Steward or Treaſurer, who managed ſuch matters for the beſt behoof and benefit thereof: ſo that though (he) be the ſame word, the perſon may be varied : yet others conceive it to be meant of the perſon vowing,when either he neglected to redeem his vow, or fraudulently ſought to transfer the title of the field vowed, from God to another,in which caſes he loſt all libertie of redemption ; and though he that bought it,might poſſeſſe it until the yeer of Jubile,yet then it was not to return to the ſeller, but to the Prieſts by vertue of the precedent vow ; yet ſo; that the Prieſts were to transfer the right of it to ſome of the ſame Tribe, and firſt of all to the neereſt kinſman of him that vowed it , becauſe the land was divided among the other Tribes,among whom the Levites having no part alotted,Num.18.20. and their portions were not to be conſounded.

V.2 which is not of the fields of his poſſeſſion] Wherein he had rather a tenant right as a Leſſee,then a right of inheritance ; and in ſuch a caſe he was not to add a fifth part,as in the redemption,ver.19.

V.23. thy eſtimation] He gave the rule in general in the firſt part of the verſe, of the Prieſt in the third perſon ; but puts it afterwards,for inſtance, to preſent application of the Prieſt in being ; ſo the meaning is, the Prieſt ſhal reckon,as thou for example who art the Prieſt, for the preſent ſhalt value it,ſo ſhall it be. So it is ver.12.

V.24. ſhall return] This and the two precedent verſes, may beſt be joyned together in one continued expoſition, thus ; If any man have bought a field, and before it be redeemed, have vowed it unto the Lord, when the year of Jubile is come , then he ſhal give the worth of it from the time of his vow to the yeer of Jubile,unto the Lord,and the field ſhal return to the firſt owner,the vow of the buyer cannot alienate it from him becauſe it was not in his power to give away that right, which was by Gods expreſs law in the year of jubile due to another , for though it had paſſed by ſale through never ſo many hands,it muſt be his at the laſt, to whom it belonged at the firſt.

V.25. Gerahs] A Gerah was a piece of ſilver, weighing ſixteen grains of Barley corn. See on Exod.30.13. Ezek.45.12.

V.26. It is the Lords] It is his already, by his expreſſe law deſigned for ſacrifice, Exod.13.2. Num.8.17. therefore not to be dedicated to him by a vow. Becauſe a vow muſt be of ſuch things as wherein the vower hath a particular intereſt, as his own, though that intereſt cannot be any other then derivative from, and dependant on God ; but ſuch things as were not dedicated to God for ſacrifice, might, or rather muſt be redeemed,whether of man or unclean beaſts. And though vowing and redeeming ſeem contrary acts ; yet a vow in one ſenſe might be made with a purpoſe of redemption in another ſenſe ; as Samuel was vowed to God for ſervice, yet with an intent to redeem him from ſacrifice,1 Sam.1.11.

V.27. An unclean beaſt] Which though it might not be offered in ſacrifice to the Lord,the price of it might be of uſe to the repair of the Sanctuary,and the maintenance of the Prieſt.

ſhall add] That is, if he will redeem it. This is not to be underſtood of the firſt-born of unclean beaſts,which the poſſeſſor was to redeem by law, (without the addition of a fifth part) becauſe as firſt born, they were generally belonging unto God,though not by way of ſacrifice, Exod. 34.19,20. but of other unclean beaſts which were vowed voluntary,ver. 11. See Annot.on ver. 13.

V.28. Devoted nothing] That is,ſo abſolutely devoted unto God, as that it is not ſubject to redemption ; but they rather devoted it to execration,that ſhall alienate it to any other uſe,then that whereby God may be glorified,whether in his ſervice, or by his juſtice : hence the gifts are ſtyled Anathemata, Luk.21.6. gifts hanged upon the walls or pillars of the Temple.

V.29. Put to death] The Hebrew word *Hherem,*which is rendred by devoted, coming from Hharam, which ſignifieth to conſecrate or curſe, (but moſt uſually to kil, or to deſtroy) may be varied in the expoſition of it, according to the difference of things or perſons to which it is applied ; for applied to a thing without life, (as a field is ſaid to be Hherem, v.28 and the caſe is alike in other things alſo,ſet apart for Gods portion, Joſh.6.19)it ſignifies either the alienation of it from all Civil right, and the perpetual conſecration or dedication of it to the maintenance of Gods ſervice and Sanctuary (and if it were ſold or let out by the Steward or ſome Officer belonging to the Sanctuary ; for ſuch dealing in ſuch affaires, it was in the year of jubile to return to the right of the Sanctuary again,and to be diſpoſed of for the uſe and ſervice thereof) or the execration and deſtruction of it. If the thing called Hherem, were a living creature,and *not of mankind,*it was either clean or unclean ; if clean, it was to be offered in ſacrifice to God ; if unclean, the neck of it was to be broken.See Annot.on Exod.13.13.*If of mankind,*it was either of ſuch as were acceptable to God,or execrable to him ; of the former ſort were the Levites,who were choſen by God for the ſervice of the Sanctury all the dayes of their lives, in which reſpect they were civilly dead, that is, ſo eſtranged from other worldly callings and commerce, as if they were dead ; and to continue ſo long in that ſervice as that they muſt die in it ; and in this reſpect only is the word Hherem, for the latter acception applied to them ; if they were ſuch as were odious to God, as wicked men,and things belonging to them,which were abhorred of God for their ſakes, then if he devoted them to deſtruction,there was no reprieve or preſervation of them : Hherem applied to them was a fixed doom of their deſtruction, as of Idolaters Exod.22.20. Deut.23.15. the Canaanites, Deut.20.17. eſpecially the Amalekites, Deut.25.19. See alſo 1 Sam.15.3,26. So that the manner of devoted things or perſons called Hherem, was different from all others which might be redeemed, theſe being devoted abſolutely and perfectly, with a reſolution either expreſſe or implicite,to be irrevocable,and never to be redeemed. See on Iudg.11.30. and on Ioſ.6.17.

V.30. All the tithes] Out of the yearly increaſe,the firſt-fruits were deducted ; out of the reſt the tenths were taken for the Levites, Numb. 18.21. out of the nine parts remaining, was another tenth taken, and brought to Jeruſalem ; and there eaten by the Owners, Deut.12.6,7.and this ſecond tythe was every third year diſtributed to the poor, Deut.14. 28,29.The tythe here meant is of the firſt ſort,becauſe if it were redeemed a fifth part muſt be added.

V.31 Fifth part] Beſides the value of the thing it ſelf. See Annot. on ver.13.

V.32.Rod] The rod was coloured at the further end with red,to mark the tenth of the cattle,that came out of the fold ; whoſe door was ſo little that only one could come out at once,and ſo counting one,two,three,&c. the tenth was touched with the red rod,and marked for the tythe. See Jer. 33.13. Ezek.20.37.

V.33. both it,and &c.] This penalty was to prevent the charge ; as ver.10.

The Argument.

For the Title of this Book of Numbers, *moſt in uſe amongſt all Authors except the Hebrewes, it is given it from the many Numbrings reported in it; the firſt whereof is moſt memorable, wherein the men of War from twenty years old and upward, in the ſecond year of their departure out of Egypt, are reckoned to ſix hundred thouſand, three thouſand five hundred and fiftie, beſides the Levites who are not comprehended in that account, Chap.*41.46,47. To this number are added many more, as, 1. Of the Levites, chap. 3. 2. Of the Miniſters of the Tabernacle, chap. 4. 3. *Of the Offerings of the Princes, chap.*7. 4. Of the Searchers ſent to diſcover the Land of Canaan. 5. *Of the Rebels, Korah and his company, Chap.*16. 6. Of the Fornicators joyned to Baal-Peor. 7 Of thoſe that were new born in the wilderneſſe, the old ſtock being conſumed, before the poſſeſſion of the Land of Canaan. 8. *Of their journeyes, chap.*33. 9. *Of the Levites Cities, and Cities of Refuge, chap.*35. *That for the Title. And for the Contents of the Book, it is partly Hiſtorical, partly Doctrinal: For the Hiſtorical part, beſides the Record of theſe Numbrings, we have the ſtory of the peoples travels, their troubles, their murmurings and rebellions, their puniſhments, their ſtraights and enlargements, dangers and deliverances, combats and Conqueſts, and the moſt notable things they did or ſuffered by the ſpace of thirtie nine years, wherein they rather wandred, then regularly journied in the Deſart, their ſins caſting them back from the borders of Canaan, when they were near the poſſeſſion of it. In this Story the order of time is not noted, ſave what belongeth to the ſecond year of the peoples journying from Egypt towards the Land of Promiſe, and endeth at the eleventh month of the fortieth year, for with that beginneth the ſtory of the Book of Deuteronomy, as is evident by comparing of Numb.*1.1. *with Deut.*1.3. *For the ſtory of the time betwixt theſe termes, there is little or no mention of any Chronological note, though there be many remarkable Occurrences delivered, as Chap.*16,17,18,19. The Doctrinal part containeth additions and explanations of ſundry Lawes, ſome Moral, ſome Judicial, but moſt of all Ceremonial, given by God for the Sanctification and preparation of the people for the Land of Canaan, eſpecially for their obſervation when they were poſſeſſed of it. Some obſerve many parallel references of the New Teſtament to this Book, which are not unworthy of a ſerious conſideration; as,

CHAP. I.

Verſ. 1. O*F Sinai*] In that place of the Wilderneſſe that was neer to Mount Sinai, which was the twelfth manſion of the Iſraelites, where hapned all that which is ſet down from hence to the 11. verſe of the tenth chapter of this Book.

in the Tabernacle] Not in the door of the Tabernacle, in the preſence of the people (as at ſome other times) but in the holy of holies, whereof more particular mention is made, chap.7.8,9.

ſecond month] Which containeth part of April, and part of May.

V.2. Take ye the ſum] There was one numbring of the people before this, and another after it, three in all; the firſt is that of Exod.30.11, 12. & chap.38.25. when they were called and numbred for contribution to the building of the Tabernacle, when every one gave half a ſhekel for an offering to the Lord, as a ranſom for his ſoul, figuring thereby the redemption of Chriſt. The next numbring was that of this place, which was done, not only that the number of the people might be known but that they might be the more orderly diſpoſed, and placed about the Tabernacle; and the third and laſt was in the laſt year of their travel, viz. the 40. when the former generation was worn out; for there was not a man of them remaining except Joſhua and Caleb, whom Moſes and Aaron numbred in the wilderneſs of Sinai, Num.26.63,64. their poſterity was numbred for poſſeſſion and partion of the land of Canaan, and this was in the plaines of Moab, Num.26.3. & 63. in the fortieth and laſt year of their travel.

of the children of Iſrael] None are numbred but the Iſraelites, though there came with them out of Egypt, a mixed multitude of people, neither were all numbred that were Iſraelites, but only ſuch as were able for war, women, children, ſick perſons, and decrepit old men being omitted, of which ſort it is like there were not many, ſince at their coming out of Egypt, there was not a feeble perſon among their Tribes, Pſal. 105.37. Some ſuppoſe they were not numbred, becauſe God had promiſed an innumerable multiplication of them as of the ſtars, Gen 15.5. and (which much more over-reacheth all reckonings of Arithmetick) as of the duſt of the earth, Gen.13.16. which ſeemeth to have warrant from theſe words But David took not the number of them from twenty yeers old and under, becauſe the Lord had ſaid, he would increaſe Iſrael like to the ſtars of the heavens, 1 Chr.27.23.

their poll] In Hebrew their ſkuls for their heads, their heads for their bodies, their bodies for their perſons, by a Synecdoche; the meaning is, man by man.

V.3. Upward] How far upward is not ſpecified, but the Jews began the account at 20, and ended at 60.

V.4. head of] Who was the firſt born of his tribe lineally derived by ſucceſſion from one of the Patriarchs, the ſons of Jacob, from firſt-born to firſt-born, by a direct line of deſcent.

V.5. ſtand with you] That is, aſſiſt you Moſes and Aaron, when you number the people.

of Reuben] The Tribes were ranked partly by ſeniority, partly by dignity of their birth; firſt the iſſue of Jacob and his wives, then thoſe that came of the hand-maids; and of the wives, firſt the ſons of Leah, then of Rachel. See on Gen.49.28.

V.11, Benjamin] Benjamin is named before thoſe who were elder then he, becauſe they were the ſons of hand maids.

V.16. Renowned] For their wiſdom, gravity and goodneſs, and ſo meet to be Stateſmen, and to ſtand for their tribes in any common conſultation or reſolution that might concern them.

Princes] Or Captains or Governors.

V.18. declared their pedegrees] Shewing every man his tribe, and his anceſtors, whereby they might the better obſerve the rules of marriage in their tribes, the redemption of their eſtates, and might obſerve the fulfilling of the predictions of them, Gen.49.

V.21. Of the tribe of Reuben 46500] Though Reuben were the Arch-Patriarch, Jacobs firſt-born, the beginning of his ſtrength, and the excellency of dignity of power, as he ſtyles him, Gen.49.3. (for that had been the privileag of his birth-right, had he not forfeited it by his inceſtuous incontinence with Bilhah his fathers concubine) yet ſince he committed that offence, Gen.35.22. he foretold him that he ſhould not excel; which may be meant divers wayes, and particularly in reſpect of the paucity of his tribe, being here over-numbred by all his brethren but three, Gad, Aſher and Benjamin, and ſo ſome part of the curſe of inceſt, Lev.20.20. came upon his poſterity.

V.22. generations] The word here is of a larger acceptation then a family or houſhold; for it may comprehend the deſcendant off-ſpring, which may people a whole province or country: for to inſtance in the Tribe of Judah, there were of them that were fit for war, 74 thouſand, which, withal the reſt not reckoned in the muſter, will be much too many for one houſe or family, and enow to ſtore divers townes with a ſufficient number of inhabitants.

V.27. Threeſcore and fourteen thouſand, and ſix hundred] Profane Infidels will not believe that one man ſhould have ſo great an increaſe in 250 years ſpace; but how eaſie was it for him to multiply one into ſo many, in ſo many years, who out of nothing made all things in ſix daies ſpace? Gen.1. See Annot. on Exod. chap.1.12. This is the greateſt number of the progeny of any of the Tribes, whereby it appeareth that Judah had the preeminence, not only of dignity royal, but of a numerous offſpring above the other Tribes; to which may be added, that from his Tribe deſcended the Saviour of the world, called the Lion of the Tribe of Judah, Rev.5.5. with reference to this Patriarch compared to a lion, Gen.49.9. Num.24.9. and that very fitly, becauſe of the courage of that tribe. See Annot. on Gen.49.9.

V.37. Of the tribe of Benjamin, thirty five thouſand and four hundred] In Gen.46.21. his ſons are reckoned more, as here the deſcendents from him are fewer then of any of the Patriarchs; there is a tyde and an ebb in the multiplication of families, as God pleaſeth to enlarge or contract their numbers; ſo that he who at firſt might be called great Benjamin, for his many children, is now but little Benjamin, Pſal.68.28. in reſpect of the ſmalneſs of his increaſe, and at one time this Tribe was neer to a nullity, Judg.21,3.

V.46 ſix hundred thouſand, &c.] Exod.38.26. A very great multitude from 70 perſons, which was all the ſtock from whence it multiplied in Egypt, Gen.46.22. See Annot, on v.27.

V.47. But the Levites] They were exempted from theſe muſters, being conſecrated and ſeparated for the ſervice of the Sanctuary; for which cauſe they were to encamp about the Tabernacle next unto it, verſ.50. yet that it might appear it was no loſs to ſerve the Lord; (though wicked worldlings think otherwiſe, Job 21.15. Mal.3.14. Amos 8.5.) when their tribe was kept out of the accompt, the number was no leſs; for at a former computation, the Levites numbred with the other Tribes about a year before this, the total ſum was 603550, Exod.38.26. and now at this time juſt the ſame number, the Levites left out; yet were the Levites numbred afterward, but neither with the reſt of the Tribes, but by themſelves, nor from twenty years old and upward, as for the ſervice of war, but from a month old, and upward, Num.3.15. with reference to the Sanctuary, either for ſervice to it, or maintenance from it; and that Gods bleſſing might appear in the multiplication of that Tribe, as well as in the reſt.

V.51. ſtranger] Ch.3.10. Whoſoever was not of the Tribe of Levi, (in reſpect of this office or ſervice) was a ſtranger, but in reſpect of offering incenſe, he that was not of the ſeed of Aaron, (though a Levite) was a ſtranger, Num. 16. 40.

put to death] See alſo, Chap. 3. 10. either by humane puniſhment, or divine vengeance; as Chap. 16. 32. 2 Sam. 6. 6. So alſo Chap. 3. 10.

CHAP. II.

Verſ. 2. O*Wn ſtandard*] In the whole hoſt were four principal ſtandards, under each whereof were three Tribes who had every one their ſeveral Banner flag, See on verſ. 34. for the Iſraelites, above others, were the Church Militant, being to make room for themſelves in Canaan, by expelling the Canaanites; and of that Church it might eſpecially be ſaid, That it was terrible as an army with Banners, Cant. 6. 4, 10. for the hearts of the enemies melted at the tydings of them, Joſh. 7. 5. How theſe Enſigns were differenced we find not in Scripture; ſome Jewiſh Writers affirm, that they were diſtinguiſhed according to the colours of the precious ſtones, that had the names of the Tribes engraven on them, Exod. 28. 21. And ſome think they were didinguiſhed by the portraiture of beaſts, or other things, to which they are likened in the Scripture; eſpecially in the 49. of Geneſis, where Judah is compared to a Lyon, Iſſachar to an Aſſe, Dan to a Serpent, Naphtali to an Hinde, Benjamin to a Wolf, &c. under one ſtandard, the middle Tribe had the preeminence, to which the two Tribes on each hand were, if not ſubject in power, yet ſomewhat inferiour in honour.

far off] About two thouſand cubits; that diſtance was to be kept betwixt the people and the Ark, Joſh. 3. 4. which is thought to be the meaſure of a Sabbath dayes journey, Act. 1. 12. the diſtance betwixt Mount Olivet and Jeruſalem, which was ſeven or eight furlongs, which make an Engliſh mile: thus far they were to keep aloof for reverence; and no further, for Religions ſake, that the Tabernacle might be within their view, and they ready for recourſe unto it (eſpecially on the Sabbath day.) and it is like (as ſome conjecture) that the doores of their Tents were ſo ſet, that being opened, they might ſet their faces towards the Tabernacle.

about] For better defence, more ready acceſſe, and proſpect; which betokened Gods gracious preſence in the midſt of his people, Ezek. 43. 7. and his ſaving protection of his Church, and guarding it on every ſide.

V. 5. Iſſachar] Judah, Iſſachar, and Zebulum, the ſonnes of Leah, were of the firſt ſtandard on the Eaſt.

V. 9. all that were numbered] This firſt camp was neer thirty thouſand more then any of the other ſtandards; theſe went foremoſt, the Tribe of Judah being of a Lyon-like boldneſſe, fit to be the Leader: the Tribe of Dan was next in number, and laſt in order, that both before and behind, there might be the greateſt force; the one to encounter all dangers in the front of the army, the other to withſtand the purſuit of enemies in the rere.

of Judah] Thoſe three Tribes under one ſtandard, took their denomination from the chief, which was Judah.

V. 10. of Reuben] Reuben, and Simeon, the ſonnes of Leah, and Gad the ſonne of Zilpah her maid, were of the ſecond ſtandard.

V. 14. Revel] The ſame man is called Devil, Chap. 1. verſ. 24 which difference proceedeth of the ſimilitude of two Hebrew letters, Daleth and Reſh: which ſheweth that the Hebrew letters were the ſame in forme, and figure anciently, which we have at the preſent: this difference in proper names altereth not the ſenſe, and in other words the ſenſe will ſhew which is the right writings.

V. 17. ſhall ſet forward] Being taken in pieces, and carried (by parts) by the Levites, according as it was diſtributed among them, who were to take it down, and ſet it up, Chap. 1. v. 51. in the Hebrew, it is to diſſolve, and build up.

V. 17. midſt] That it might be in equal diſtance from, and equal nearneſs to each one; and that all might have indifferent recourſe unto it: and about the ark, and next unto it were the Levites placed. See on Joſ. 3. 3.

V. 18. on the Weſt] Heb. toward the ſea. For the Mediterranean Sea lyeth on the Weſt-ſide of Paleſtine.

Ephraim] Becauſe Ephraim and Manaſſes ſupplied the place of Joſeph their father, they are taken as Rachels children; ſo they and Benjamin make the third ſtandard on the Weſt, V. 25. Dan and Naphtali] The ſonnes of Billah Rachels hand-maid, with Aſher the ſon of Zilpah, Leahs hand-maid, made the fourth ſtandard on the North.

V. 43. ſtandards] For under every one of the four principall ſtandards; beſides which it is like there were others of leſſe eminencie, yet ſufficient for the diſtinction of the ſeveral Regiments, and for direction of the ſouldiers in their march: for though they were very many, yet were they put into very good order, wherein conſiſteth both the beauty, and uſefulneſſe of any great aſſembly, whether in the Church, Lev. 24. 4, 6, 8. Col. 2. 5. 1 Cor. 14. laſt: or in the Campe, 1 King. 20. 14. 1 Chr. 6. 32. or in the Common-weal, Exod. 18. 21, 22.

CHAP. III.

Verſ. 1. G*Enerations*] Families, and kinreds; not ſimply the Children; for the deſcendents or poſterity of Moſes are not here ſet down, but of Aarons

Aaron and Moſes] Though Moſes were the Civill Magiſtrate, Exod. 18. 21, 22. Aaron was the Prieſt, whoſe ſons, and not the ſons of Moſes, are here ſet down; becauſe the Prieſthood went by natural deſcent from Aaron, and ſo did not the government deſcend upon the ſonnes of Moſes; therefore Gerſon mentioned ver. 17. was not Gerſon, or Gerſhom the ſonne of Moſes mentioned, Exod. 2. ver. 22. but Moſes his great Uncle, as appeareth by compariſon of Exod. 6. 16, &c. and Num. 3. 17, &c.

V. 3. conſecrated] Heb. whoſe hands be filled. The reaſon of the phraſe, ſee Annot. on Exod. 28. 41.

V. 4. before the Lord] This is, when they came before the Lord to offer ſtrange fire, by fire from the Lord they were deſtroyed, Lev 10. 1, 2.

ſight of Aaron] While their father lived.

V. 6 preſent them] Offer them by Aaron, for the uſe of the Tabernacle.

miniſter unto him] By doing ſervice, and giving aſſiſtance in the holy miniſtration.

V. 7. his charge] That is, Aarons, in executing his commandment, and a careful over-ſight of the things of the Tabernacle, principally committed to Aarons truſt.

whole Congregation] In a watchful care over them, to keep them in order.

V. 9. and to his ſons] Aarons ſons the Prieſts ſerved in the Sanctuary, in praying for the people, and offering incenſe, and ſacrifice; the reſt of the Tribe of Levi ſerved for inferiour officers unto them.

wholly given] Given given, according to the Hebrew which doubleth the word, to ſignifie an univerſality in the perſons; as wholly given without exception of any one; and an intireneſs and intentiveneſs in the ſervice, ſo as that they are given wholly, and onely to attend the ſervice of the Sanctuary, according to the command of Aaron, and his ſons the Prieſts.

V. 10 ſtranger] The Levite in reſpect of the Prieſts peculiar office was a ſtranger; and the other Iſraelites were ſtrangers in reſpect of the office of the Levites; and the uſurper of either was puniſhed with death, ver. 38. being convicted of his fault before, and judicially condemned. See Annotations on Chap. 1. ver. 51.

V. 12. in ſtead] The firſt-born were Gods, not onely by a general right of Creation, but by a particular right of Redemption from the deſtroying Angel, Exod. 12. 23. who in mankind were in eſpecial manner to ſerve him; in other creatures, the firſt-born were to be ſacrificed unto him, if they were clean beaſts; and if they were not, they were to be ranſomed at a price for the maintenance of the Tabernacle; but from henceforth, for the firſt-born, I have choſen the Levites to my ſervice in their ſtead; and he choſe rather to be ſerved by one Tribe, then by a number taken out of many Tribes, for prevention of Idolatry, and diviſion in Religion; and by the Tribe of Levi rather then any other, for their zeal of his glory in revenging the indignity done unto him, in worſhipping the golden Calf, Exods 32. 26, 28.

V. 15. from a moneth] See on chap. 26, 62. They were numbered in their childhood, becauſe they were choſen for the firſt-born; but not untill they were a moneth old, for then were they firſt purged from the impurity of their birth, Lev. 12. 4. and ſo the fitter to be dedicated to the Sanctuary; but they began not their ſervice untill they were twenty five yeares old, Num. 8. 24. and from thirty to fifty, they were to bear the burdens of the Tabernacle, Num. 4. 3. but in Davids time, and afterward they were to begin their ſervice of the Tabernacle at twenty yeares old, 1 Chron. 23. 24. Ezra. 3. 8. but then either they were trained up untill twenty five, and then firſt truſted with any charge; or the ſcarcity of the ancient men, or forwardneſs of the younger, might bring them the ſooner to that ſervice. See on 2. Chr. 31. 16.

V. 25. The charge] To keep, care for, or to look to, and to carry the Tabernacle and its furniture when it was removed.

in the Tabernacle] They were not (when they watched) in the Tabernacle, but had their ſtations in convenient places about the Tabernacle, for the ſafegard of it, and the things that were in it; for the Levites might not enter into it at all, but the Prieſts onely who there performed their miniſtery by courſe.

V. 31 their charge] See on Joſ. 33. and Deut. 38. 9. The chief things in the Sanctuary were committed to the Cohathites; perhaps becauſe Moſes and Aaron were of that Family, from whence all the Prieſts conſequently were deſcended.

V. 32. chief over the chief] That is, next unto the High-prieſt, he ſhall have the preeminence and over-ſight of the Princes, or chief of all the Families of the Levites. See 1 Chr. 9. 11. and 12. 27. 2 Chr. 31. 13. Neh. 11. 11. 2 King. 25. 18.

V. 36. boards] The wooden work and the reſt of the inſtruments were committed to the ſons of Merari; and becauſe they were heavie, they had four Waggons and Oxen allowed for carriage of them, Chap. 7. 8.

V. 37. pins] Which faſtned in the ground, ſerved to ſtretch and ſtay the cords, ſtrengthen the pillars, and to keep the curtains from waving to and fro with the wind. Exod. 35, 18.

cords] There were two ſorts of cords, for ſeveral uſes; the one ſort was carried by the Gerſhonites, ver. 26. the other by the Merarites in this place.

V. 28. Of the children of Iſrael] That none of them ſhould enter into the Tabernacle, without Gods appointment.

V. 39. twenty and two thouſand] The particulars forementioned are more by three hundred then this total ſum, out of which Aaron the Prieſt, and the firſt-born of the Levites, born ſince their coming out of Egypt, are thought to be deducted, as being Gods own portion in a more ſpecial manner then the reſt; or if in ſo great a number it be like that there were more then 300 firſt-born, it may be ſome of them might be omitted, becauſe they were for remarkable blemiſhes not to be permitted to ſerve with others at the Sanctuary; and ſome, for ſome other reaſons might be left out, or the leſſer number might be omitted, as not conſiderable in reſpect of the greater, as Gen. Chap. 15. v. 13. but 400 yeares are mentioned which in exact account were 405.

V. 41. cattell of the Levites] Not that they were to be offered up in ſacrifice; for they were the Lords portion, though they were reſerved, and ſerved onely for the Levites proviſion, Lev. 27. 30.

V. 43. twenty and two thouſand two hundred ſeventy three] Unleſs they abounded in females (who had nothing to do in the ſervice of the Sanctuary) this was no very great increaſe for ſuch a number, as is reckoned, Chap. 1. 46. yet it is more then the Levites (who were taken in ſtead of the firſt-born) by two hundred ſeventy three, for the redemption of which a price is ſet down, ver. 46, 47. the total whereof amounted to 1365. ſhekels which were to be given to Aaron and his ſons, ver. 48. and to be proportioned (for the payment) to the Iſraelites, either by lot, or ſome other rule, which might be received, and approved by the Prieſts and people.

V. 45. ſhekel of the Sanctuary] See Annot. on Exod. 30. 13.

twenty Gerahs] See Annot. on Lev. 27. 25.

CHAP. IV.

Verſ. 3. FRom thirty] See on Chap. 3. 15. Gen. 41. 46.

V. 5. take down] viz. When the Tabernacle was to be removed; it is hence probable that the inferior Prieſts might come into the Holy of Holies, (though not to miniſter, for that was Peculiar to the High prieſt,) to remove it, and the things that were in it.

covering vail] Which divided the Sanctuary from the Holyeſt of all. What a covering this was; ſee Exod. 26. v. 31, 32, 33.

V. 6. ſtaves thereof] Or, bars: That is, put them upon their ſhoulders to carry it, for the ſtaves of the Ark were not to be removed.

continuall bread] The Shew-bread was called continual bread, becauſe it was to continue on the Table all the week, untill the Sabbath; and then the old was taken away, and the new ſet in the place thereof, Exod. 25. 30. Levi. 24. 8.

V. 11. golden Altar] Which was for the burning of Incence Exod. 30. 1. 3.

V. 13. Altar] The Altar of braſs, which was placed in the open Court, where all might ſee it, yet when the Tabernacle was removed, that was to be covered as well as other holy things.

not touch] Nor offer to beer them, before they be covered.

die] For that fault Uzzah (though a Levite) was ſmitten dead by the Ark ſide, 2 Sam. 6, 7.

V. 15. burden] Theſe were to be carried on the ſhoulders of the Levites, and not to be carried on Carts, as the wooden works, Num. 7, 8. God was diſpleaſed not onely with Uzzah his touching of the Ark, but that it was carried in a Cart, 2 Sam. 6. which ſhould have been carryed onely on the ſhoulders of the Cohathites, Num. 7. 9. See on Deut. 31. 9.

V. 16. ſweet incenſe] Whereby is not meant that Eleazer alone was to offer incenſe, or ſacrifice, but that it was his office to provide, and to take care that neither meats, nor oyl, nor incenſe to be offered ſhould be wanting.

daily meat-offering] That is, the offering of flowre, which was kept to be offered with the continual or daily burnt-offering.

V. 18. cut ye not off] That is, be not ye an occaſion, or permit none occaſion by your negligence (in keeping or covering the holy things) that the Cohathites may either ſee, or touch what they ſhould not, whereby they may be cut off, and die for it: So Jer. 38. 23. burning the city, for cauſing it to be burned. See. Neh. 14, 15.

V. 19. to his burden] Shewing what part every one ſhould bear.

V. 26. hanging] Or vail which hanged between the Sanctuary and the Court, Exod. 26. 36.

V. 26. which is by the Tabernacle] Which Court compaſſed both the Tabernacle of the Congregation, and the Altar of burnt-offering. Exod. 27. 16.

V. 32. by name] That is, ye ſhall make an inventory of all things ye commit to their charge.

V. 41. do ſervice] Which were of competent age to ſerve therein; that is, betwixt thirty and fifty; which was ſo ordered by divine providence, that that family which had the greateſt and heavieſt burden, had the moſt ſerviceable men, to wit, thoſe of the Merarites though in their total number were fewer then the other Families, chap. 3. 22, 28, 34. yet exceeded any one of them in the number of thoſe who were neither too young to begin the ſervice, nor too old to continue it.

V. 49. as the Lord commanded] So that Moſes neither added, nor diminiſhed from that which the Lord commanded him.

CHAP: V.

Verſ. 2. P*ut out*] By thoſe excommunications, or ſhuttings out of humane communion, God taught his people how pure he would have them to be, eſpecially from all defilement of the ſoul, which was much worſe then any uncleanneſs of the body; (that of leproſie not excepted, though ſo like it, that the one is ſignified by the other.) There were other legall uncleanneſſes of leſſe offence, which did not defile by touching, nor ſhut men out of any ſociety, but ſacred.

V. 6. that men commit] That is, of humane errour, or common frailty; otherwiſe, if it were a witting and a willing wrong, the recompence muſt be made in further meaſure then a fifth part. See Levit. 6. 2. 5

V. 7. with the principal] That is, by returning full recompence for the wrong, and a fifth part above that the fear of lawfull looſing may make him leſſe greedy after unlawfull getting: this order of reſtitution ſheweth the fault to be (as the Hebrew word Mahal, or Magnal, ſignifieth) theft, or ſome ſuch like fault, as tends to a Neighbours hurt in his eſtate, See Luk. 19. 8.

unto him] Verſ. 6. it is called a treſpaſs againſt the Lord, here it appears to be a treſpaſs againſt man, and indeed is both; for when man is unjuſtly endamaged, God is impiouſly diſobeyed, who would have all to do no worſe to others, then they would have others to do unto them, Mat. 7. 12.

V. 8. But if] If the man be not alive, or not to be had, againſt whom the treſpaſs is committed, then the recompence muſt be tendered to his kinſman; that is implyed in theſe words, but if the man have no kinſman, &c.

unto the Lord, even to the Prieſt] What is given to the Lords Miniſter, is given to the Lord; and ſo a defrauding of him of his due, is a ſacriledge againſt the Lord, Mal. 3. 8.

V. 10. ſhall be his] The firſt-fruits and Tithes appertained to the Prieſts in common, other oblations belonged to the Prieſts in particular who did adminiſter; unleſs the party (that brought an oblation) mention, that he gave it for the ſervice of the Sanctuary. See Ezek. 44. 30.

V. 15. no oyl] Onely in the ſin-offering of jealouſie was neither oyl nor incenſe offered, not oyl, (as ſome conceive) becauſe it betokens mercy, and tenderneſs, (becauſe it ſofteneth, and maketh ſtiffneſs plyable) but a jealous man will ſhew no mercy, Prov. 6. 34, 35. not incenſe, becauſe that is a ſymbole or figure of a good name and fame, and jealouſie is for a matter of reproach and infamy. See on Levit. 5. 11.

V. 17. holy water] That is, the water taken out of the laver, placed betwixt the Tabernacle and the Altar of burnt-ſacrifice, Exod. 30. 18. or the water of ſeparation, or a purification for ſin, Chap. 19. 9.

duſt] That might be called holy duſt, for the place of Gods eſpecial preſence was holy ground, Exod. 3. 5. yet the taking of duſt, might admoniſh her of the doom of death upon the guilt of ſin, Gen. 3. 19. Or of the baſeneſs of ſuch as gave themſelves to unlawful luſts, worthy, as duſt, to be troden under foot; for duſt was ever a ſign of baſeneſs, and grief, Lam. 3. 29. Pſal. 7. 5. and 22. 15. Job. 2. 12.

V. 18. uncover] It is as great a ſhame for a woman to be uncovered, as to be ſhorn, 1 Cor. 11. 5, 6, this then was for her ſhame; or it might admoniſh her; (being now to come to tryall of her innocency, or guilt) of Gods all-ſeeing eye, who ſeeth the moſt ſecret ſin, all things being uncovered and naked in his ſight, Heb. 4. 13.

bitter water] verſ. 24. not called ſo, as Exod. 15. 23. and 2 King. 2. 19. (Though it could not be of any good taſte;) but it was bitter in the effect, if the woman were guilty, very bitter, for it was bitter as death, 1 Sam. 15. 32. and unholy to her; though called holy before, v. 17.

V. 19. cauſeth the curſe] A double curſe if the woman hath been an adultereſſe, and denyed it upon oath; one for adultery, another for perjury; yet thee water did rather diſcover the curſe, then cauſe it; for the efficacy was from Gods juſtice, not from that ceremony.

V. 21. curſe and an oath] That is, accurſed, and deteſtable for the oath. See on Iſa. 65. 15. Ezech. 8. 13.

thigh to rot] By the thigh here may be underſtood a like meaning to thoſe words in the other ſex, Gen. 46. 26. and ſo the juſtice of God appears, in matching the puniſhment to the ſin, as well for the part, as the perſon offending, as Judg. 1. 7.

belly to ſwell] Not as women with child, by a gradual increaſe; but it was a ſudden ſwelling, with ſuch a violent extention of it, that it was neer to burſting: and this was an uſuall miracle among the Jews, and an undoubted aſſurance that their Religion was of God.

V. 22. Amen, Amen] That is, be it ſo as thou denounceſt, Pſal. 41. 13. Deut. 27. 15, &c. This doubling importeth vehemency and aſſurance, Neh. 8. 6. Pſal. 41. 13. and 72. 19. & 89. 32.

V. 23. theſe curſes] That is, the words whereby ſhe curſed her ſelf.

in a book] Or, paper, The Hebrews uſe to call any writing a book.

blot them out] Of the Table-book, with the water in a ſpunge, or linnen cloth.

V. 28. free] The water of it ſelf had none either diſcerning virtue, or deſtroying vigour; but God uſed the ſame potion both for poyſon, and for medicine, thereafter as the woman was innocent, or guilty.

V. 30. ſpirit of jealouſie] So verſ. 14 That is, a jealouſie ſo violent, as if it were carried along with a ſpirit, or ſome ſupernatural cauſe.

V. 31. guiltleſſe] Though the woman be innocent, his ſuſpition ſhall not bring him in guilty, if he had probable reaſon to induce him to it.

CHAP. VI.

Verſ.2. M*An or woman*] Then were Nazarites of both ſexes.

Nazarite] See on verſ.4. & on. Judg.13.5.

V. 3. ſtrong drink] All liquor that doth inebriate, or incline to drunkenneſs. Levit.10.9 Luk.1.15.

moyeſt grapes, or dryed] The abſtinence was ſo ſtrict, that he muſt have neither meat nor drink from the Vine; and ſo muſt neither drink wine, nor ſip vineger, or dip in it; nor eat grapes, though dryed up into rayſons.

V. 4, ſeparation] Or, Nazariteſhip. Nazir is one ſeparated from the common ſtate and liberty of this life, with ſpecial dedication of himſelf unto God; ſome Nazarites were ſeparated by a voluntary vow, for a certain time of their own ſetting, (concerning which the Law determineth nothing) others were Nazarites for their whole life, ſuch an one was Sampſon, Judg.13.5 and Samuel, 1 Sam.1.11. Of the former ſort Moſes treateth here, and Luke, Act.21.23.

V. 5. no raſour] Nor Ciſers, for by them the locks might be cut off as well as by a raſour.

V. 6. no dead body] Neither to mourn over it, nor to bury it; the word in the Original ſignifieth Soul, but it is taken for the perſon, and in this caſe the perſon is taken for the body; ſee Lev.21.1. in this the Nazarite was like unto the High Prieſt. Lev.21.11.

V. 7. unclean] See Annot. on Lev.21.1.

father] Having vowed himſelf to God, he muſt prefer his vow to him, above any ceremonious obſervances to his neereſt kindred, Mat. 8.21,22.

upon his head] The ſuffering of his hair to grow, was a ſigne of his conſecration to God.

V. 9. ſhave his head] His hair by the dead being legally defiled.

ſeventh day] From the pollution; for uncleanneſs is contracted by a dead body and continued for ſeven dayes, Num. 19.11. and on the ſeventh day, he that was before ceremonially unclean, was ceremoniouſly cleanſed, ver.12. Chap.19.11.12.

V. 11. hallow his head] Beginning his vow again the eighth day, when he is purified; for the dayes that were before ſhall be loſt, becauſe his ſeparation was defiled, ver.12.

V. 14. he ſhall offer] Upon a ſudden, unwitting, and unwilling defilement by the dead, the Nazarite was to offer for his purging, ver.10. but though he knew nothing by himſelf, he muſt end his vow with manifold oblations; among which a ſin-offering muſt be one, ſince no votary is ſo ſincere, and preciſe, but he may offend, though he knew it not; and therefore by this he did acknowledge himſelf a ſinful man.

V, 18. at the door] Publickly, to teſtifie that now his vow was at an end.

in the fire] Some take this fire to be the fire of the Altar: others think it was the fire of the kitchin which ſerved to boyl the peace-offerings, which yet was no profane fire, though not ſo holy as that of the Altar; for the hair which was conſecrated to the Lord might not be put into any profane place: and this ſheweth that the whole man ſhould be holy to the Lord, even to an hair; as his providence reacheth to the numbring of our hairs, Mat.10.30.

V. 19. ſodden ſhoulder] The right ſhoulder was due to the Prieſt raw, Lev.7.32. but in the offering he was to have the left ſhoulder ſodden, and this was his peculiar portion of the Ram of the Nazarite, which in other oblations was not his due.

V. 20. wave-offering] See on Exod.29.24.

after that] Not after the term of his vow, but after the performances formerly required for his releaſe; for as his vow was made ſolemnly to God, ſo he cannot be fairly diſcharged of it, without a ſolemn diſmiſſion from God.

drink wine] Though wine onely be mentioned, yet is he for other particulars of the vow of a Nazarite reſtored to his liberty, as before he vowed.

V.21. beſides that] At leaſt he ſhall do this, if he be able to do no more.

V. 23. on this wiſe] Or in this ſet form of words.

ye ſhall bleſſe] See Annot. on ver 24.

V. 24. The Lord bleſſe] It is ye ſhall bleſſe, verſe.23. in the precedent verſ; the Prieſts bleſſing was Optative; and yet it was more then an ordinary praying; becauſe it was a part of their Prieſtly calling to bleſſe in the name of the Lord, or by his command, Deut.21.5. and for that they had with the command a promiſe, verſe.27. See. on Joſh. 22 6.

V. 27. put my Name] They ſhall pray in my Name for them.

CHAP. VII.

Verſ.3. C*Overed wagons*] That the people might not ſee what was carried in them, and that the carriages might not be hurt by rain, or hail, or ſnow.

V. 8. ſons of Merar] See on Chap.3.36.

V. 9 their ſhoulders] See Annot. on Chap.4.15.

V. 10. for dedicating] That is, when the Prieſts firſt ſacrifice was offered upon the Altar by Aaron, Lev.9.1.

V. 11. dedicating of the Altar] The Altar of the whole burnt offerings, which was anointed, as the veſſels of the Sanctuary were but beſides that, it had an eſpecial dedication, and that was by daily anointing and oblation of ſacrifice, according to the preſcript, Exod 29 36,37. therefore for the dedication of the Tabernacle; (but eſpecially of the Altar,) did the Princes daily preſent their oblations,

V. 12. offered his offering] This offering was made the firſt day, of the firſt moneth, of the ſecond year, when the Tabernacle was erected and conſecrated, *Exod.*40.17. though the mention of it (for ſpecial cauſe no doubt, albeit it appear not unto us) be brought in in this place: they offered in the ſame order wherein they encamped about the Tabernacle; and each chief Captain offered not for himſelf onely, but for his Tribe; and every one is called Prince but the firſt, whereof the reaſon may be, for that having the honour to be the firſt, it could not be doubted but that the title was due unto him, as well as to the reſt.

V. 13. ſilver chargers] Theſe were not for the uſe of the Sanctuary, (where were uſed golden veſſels onely) but for ſome ſervice of the Court, or Altar of burnt offerings, as for the ſhoulder and the breſt of the ſacrifice beaſts, and the offerings of meal, and oyl, and wine, &c.

V. 14. gold] As the principal perſons, ſo the principal things, are not too good for the ſervice of God.

V. 84. the dedication] This was the offering of the Princes, when Aaron did dedicate the Altar.

in the day] That is, in the time; for this dedication continued for twelve years.

V. 87. meat-offering] By the Law every burnt-offering was to have a meat-offering of flower, and oyl mingled, and wine for a drink-offering, whereof ſee Ceap.15. verſ.34.5.

V. 89. between] According as he had promiſed, Exod.25. verſ. 22.

him] i. e. God. See on Exod.3.17.

CHAP: VIII.

Verſ. 2. O*Ver againſt*] On every ſide of the bulk, or ſhaft of the candleſtick; there was no window in the Tabernacle, therfore there was need of artificial lights.

V. 4. beaten work] Beaten out of one piece, and not made up of divers pieces; Of this candleſtick, ſee Exod: 25. 31. & Chap. 37.17.

V. 6. cleanſe them] All the Nation was to be holy, Exod.19. 6. but eſpecially the Levites who were to make ſo neer approach unto God, Lev.10.3.

V. 7. water of purifying] In Hebrew it is called the water of ſin, becauſe it is made to purge from ſins; it was mixt with the aſhes of a red Cow, Chap.19.9.

V. 10. the children] Meaning ſome of the chief among them, in the name of the whole.

their hands] The impoſition of hands was uſed in benedictions, and ordinations, not only in the Old Teſtament, as Gen.48.17,20. Num. 27.23. but in the New. See. Act. 6. 6. and. 13.3. 1 Tim. 4. 14. 2 Tim.1.6 The peoples putting their hands upon the Levites, was partly to teſtifie that they give up all carnal and wordly reſpects and intereſts in them, and bequeathed them wholly to God, and that they did approve of their office in behalf of themſelves in whoſe ſtead they ſtood in, the performance of many of their miniſtrations. See on Gen. 48 14.

V. 12. thou ſhalt offer] By Aaron the High-Prieſt, who was to offer the Levites, verſ. 11. Or it might be Moſes himſelf offered, and might therefore be numbred among the Prieſts, Pſal.99.6.

V. 15. go in, to do] The ſervice of the Levites in the Tabernacle, ſtrictly and properly taken, was but to take, and carry the things thereof; but here the Tabernacle is taken more largely, not onely for the curious work, which was carried from place to place, but for the outward Court, where ſtood the Altar of burnt-offering; where the Levites were to be ſerviceably aſſiſtant to the Prieſts in their office; but otherwiſe into the Sanctuary came onely the Prieſts to miniſter, and not the Levites.

V. 19. the ſervice of] Which ſervice the Iſraelites ſhould do themſelves, if the Levites did it not for them.

Sanctuary] Becauſe the Levites go into the Sanctuary in the peoples name, as well as in their own.

V. 21. offered] Heb. lifted them up. The word is the ſame which is uſed of lifting up of oblations, Exod,29.28. and it may be the ceremony was the ſame; at leaſt the Levites were ſet up in eminent view, that all might ſee them when they entred upon their function, which it may be they did not all at once, at the firſt conſecration of them, but ſo many as the ſervice of the Tabernacle for the preſent required.

V. 24. twenty and five] At that time they were entred into the Tabernacle, to be trained up, both by inſtitution, and example; and at thirty years of age, they were to officiate and undertake the execution of their charge.

V. 25. ceaſe] From ſuch ſervices as were toylſome, and required much ſtrength of body to undergo them.

V.26. But ſhall miniſter] In ſinging Pſalmes, inſtructing, counſelling, ling, and keeping things in order; for ſuch offices they might do ſo much the better, as yeares and experience made them the wiſer.

CHAP. IX.

Verſ. 1. IN the wilderneſſe] The Paſſeover was kept but this once in the wilderneſſe; and then (as ſome think) for want of meal to make unleavened bread, they kept it with Manna; yet being here not very far from Midian, they might be furniſhed thence with ſo much as might ſerve the turn for one Paſſeover; which is brought in here, though it were celebrated before the numbring of the people in the beginning of this Book; for this was in the firſt moneth of the ſecond year after the peoples departure out of Egypt; and the numbring of the people was in the ſecond moneth of the ſecond year, as appeareth by comparing Chap. 1.1. with this place. For the Spirit that indicted this Book, with the reſt of the Scripture, tyeth himſelf to the obſervation of truth, not to the order of time, which upon good reaſon may be ſometimes left, though that reaſon do not appear. See on Chap.7.12.

V. 2. appointed ſeaſon] Though time be but a cricumſtance the command of God maketh obſervation of it, a neceſſary part of mans obedience, Mat. 5. 23, 24, 25. compare Levit. 23. 4. with 1 King. 12. 33.

V. 3. at even] Heb. between the two evenings. See Annot. on Exod. 12. 6.

V. 6. by the dead] By touching of a dead corps, or being at the burial of it; by that the party was unclean ſeven dayes, Num. 19.11. and an unclean perſon might not eat of the holy things, Lev. 7.20. & 2.4.7.

V. 7. wherefore are we] They have given the reaſons before; yet that doth not ſatisfie them; their zeal of the Paſſeover was ſuch, that they would either have that ſtand for no reaſon, or elſe that they might in ſuch a caſe have ſome diſpenſation, that they might not be debarred from it untill another year.

offer an offering] The celebration of the Paſſeover, by the ſlaying of the Paſchal Lamb, was the offering of a ſacrifice unto God, Exod. 12. 27.

V. 8. what the Lord] Religious doubts are to be reſolved by God and now he ſpeaketh not in an extraordinary manner, as he did to Moſes; we muſt take, Gods written Word, for our Oracle, and rely upon that, not on any mans word without it, much leſſe againſt it, Eſa. 8. 20.

V. 10. unclean] Uncleanneſs, and abſence from home, are only mentioned; but there are other impediments as great as theſe, as ſickneſs, eſpecially the peſtilence, war, captivity, child-bearing, &c. which may be reaſonably underſtood here, though not expreſt.

V. 11. ſecond moneth] So that they that have lawfull lets have a moneth longer granted unto them, 2 Chron. 30. 2. 15. but no more; for if in the firſt and ſecond moneth the paſſeover were not kept it muſt be forborn until the return of the year.

V. 12. ordinances] Even in all points, as the Lord hath inſtituted.

V. 13. bear his ſin] That is, his puniſhment; and his puniſhment ſhall be to be cut off for neglect, but eſpecially for contempt of the Lords holy ordinance; for that omiſſion of duty is dangerous (as well as commiſſion of ſin againſt God.)

V. 14. one ordinance] See Annot. on Exod. 12.49.

V. 15. and at Even] See Annot. on Exod. 13.21. & 40.38.

appearance of fire] So it was in the night; and in the day the Lord guided them by a cloud, for that was beſt diſcerned in the day, as the other in the night.

V. 18. At the commandemant of the Lord] As it was viſibly ſignified unto them for their emcamping, or journeying thereafter, as the cloud remained on, or removed from the Tabernacle; which appeared openly and evidently in their ſight.

V. 21. by day or by night] God muſt be obeyed without any exception of time or ſeaſon.

V. 23. by the hand] Under the charge, and by the miniſtery of Moſes, Mal. 1. 1.

CHAP. X.

Verſ. 2. TWo] No more are here commanded, yet more were afterwards uſed; yea, Solomon (as Joſephus ſaith) made two hundred thouſand trumpets, according to the ordinance of Moſes, Joſeph. Antiq. lib. 8. Chap. 2. therefore the mention of two, is no prohibition of more.

of ſilver] Becauſe the metal gives a better ſound then gould, and more precious then any other metal; and therefore the beſt for price, and uſe, both together.

of one whole piece] That is, of ſuch a piece of ſilver, as by beating out with the hammar may be ſufficient, without any piecing; ſo was the golden candleſtick to be made, Exod. 25.31. The faſhion of theſe Trumpets is deſcribed by Joſephus Antiq. lib. 3. cap. 11.

thou maiſt uſe] By make thee, and thou maiſt uſe them, we muſt not underſtand, that Moſes himſelf muſt either make or ſound the trumpets, but that by his appointment they were to be made aud ſounded; as when we ſay, ſuch a Lord, or ſuch a great man built a Caſtle, or a City; the meaning is not, that he was either Maſon, or Carpenter, but that he cauſed it to be built, 1 King. 8.43. Gen. 10.11. And David is charged to have killed Uriah with his ſword, in that he was the cauſe of his killing, but the deed was done by the hand and ſword of an Ammonite, 2 Sam. 12.9.

V. 3. they ſhall blow] That is, the Prieſts the ſons of Aaron, the High-Prieſt, verſ. 8. and they ſhall blow; firſt, at the removal of the Camp: ſecondly, at the ſolemnity of Feaſts, to ſummon and call the people to them: thirdly, at the oblation of Sacrifices: fourth, at the denunciation of War. Of their uſe Joſephus ſaith, that one of them was to call the people together, the others, the Rulers; and when both were ſounded, both Rulers and people were come together, Joſeph. Antiq. lib. 3. cap. 11.

V. 4. are heads] That is, above the reſt of ten Tribes, (as the head is above the reſt of the body) whether in preminence of ſite or place, or of power and authority.

V. 5. Eaſt part] That is, the hoſt of Judah, and they that are under his enſigne. Chap. 2. 3.

V. 6. South ſide] Meaning the hoſt of Ruben, and thoſe that are under his enſigne. Chap. 2. 10.

V. 7. not ſound alarme] In Wars there are diſtinct ſounds, both for marching forward, and retreating back; this alarm was for preparation, to march with arms againſt the enemy; and it was a ſhril broken ſound, ſo diſtinct from all others, that they that heard it might know what it meant, and ſo prepare themſelves for the battel, verſ. 9. 1 Cor. 14.8. therefore when the people were to be gathered for any aſſembly of peace, the Prieſts were not to ſound an alarm of war.

V. 8. the Prieſts ſhall blow] Onely the Prieſts muſt blow the Trumpet, ſo long as the Prieſthood laſted.

V. 10. of your gladneſs] In the feaſt after your peace-offerings, when ye rejoyce for any bleſſings beſtowed, or for any peril or plague removed: It was blown alſo at times of preſent or imminent miſery, for ſolemn humiliation, Joel. 2. 15.

beginning] In the new Moon, Pſal. 81. 3. rather in the new, then at the full Moon, leſt it ſhould be taken to be an honour to the Moon, becauſe it is then moſt glorious; and becauſe they counted their moneths from the firſt day of the new Moon, when looking back upon the moneth paſt, they might be remembred of precedent favours from God, or of their offences againſt God, and ſo admoniſhed of thankfulneſs, and repentance; and looking forward to the new recourſe of time, might by prayers to God, and watchfulneſs over themſelves, be comfortably carried on from one new Moon to another.

V. 11. the twentieth day] The Iſraelites kept this ſtation at Sinai, almoſt a whole year, abating about thirteen dayes; as appeareth by comparing, Exod. 9. 1. with this verſe.

V. 12. Paran] Paran is the general name of a great wilderneſs, of the length of eleven dayes journey, of which the wilderneſs of Sinai is a part; but is taken ſometimes particularly, for the firſt part of the deſert next Arabia; ſometimes for the laſt part, next to the land of Promiſe, and ſo it may here be underſtood; the whole was a moſt barren and fruitleſs place, which made Gods maintenance of ſo great a number, for ſo many years together, moſt miraculous.

V. 13. firſt took] They firſt of their Camp, in the order forementioned, Chap. 2. and by the ſound of the Trumpet commanded, ver. 2.

V. 17. bearing the Tabernacle] With all the appurtenances thereof, except the heavier part thereof, which was carried on waggons, Num. 7. verſ. 6, 7, 8. Which ſheweth, that the Church (whereof the Tabernacle is a type or figure) is both military, and moveable, not fixed to any place.

V. 20. Devel] See Annot. on Chap. 2. verſ. 14.

V. 21. Sanctuary] That is, the moſt precious furniture thereof, which was to be borne upon the ſhoulders of the Cohathites, ſuch are named, Chap. 3. verſ. 31.

againſt they came] The Gerſhonites and Merarites went before with the Tabernacle it ſelf, according to their charge, Chap. 3. verſ. 25. & verſ. 35. 36. that it might be ſet up, againſt the Cohathites came with their burden of ſacred utenſils, or things to be uſed for the ſervice of the Tabernacle.

V. 29. Hobab] Was one of the names of Jethro, Moſes father in law, Judg. 4. 11. who is ſaid to have had three or four names, Revel or Raguel, Jethro, Exod. 3. 1. and Hobab, Judg. 4. 11.) but here it ſeems to be the name of Jethros ſon, and brother to Zipporah Moſes wife, who might have the ſame name with his father; and that he, rather then his father, is here meant, there be two reaſons; firſt, becauſe Jethro Moſes father in law, is called Revel, Exod. 2. 18. but this Hobab is here called the ſon of Raguel, or Revel: (for the word in the Original is the ſame) Secondly, becauſe Jethro Moſes father in law, was by Moſes diſmiſſed into his countrey of Midian, Exod. 18. 27. but this Hobab Moſes would not diſmiſs, though he deſired to depart, verſ. 30, 31: and that he did not depart, appears in the next verſe.

V. 30. not go] That is, not yet; becauſe it appears that his poſterity and kindred dwelled in the Land of Canaan, among the Iſraelites, Judg. 1. 16. & Chap. 4. 11. 1 Sam. 15. 6. 2 Kings. 10. 15. 1 Chr. 2. 55. Jer. 35. 2. ſo that either he was perſwaded to go with them, or elſe to come into the Land of Canaan after them: See on verſ. 29.

to mine own hand] The Land of Midian.

V. 31. in ſtead of eyes] That is, to ſee about; being better acquainted with the condition of the wilderneſs then they, yea, then Moſes himſelf, though he had lived thereabouts about fourty years; becauſe many particular paſſages might be forgotten, and ſome changed ſo, as to need a new direction; and though they were to be guided in their journey not by him, but by the cloud and fiery pillar, chap.9.v.18. which was a general conduct; yet for that in the particular accommodation of ſo great a company, Hobab might adviſe and direct many wayes for the beſt conveniency of the people; and to this, becauſe he holdeth his peace it ſeemeth he conſented.

V.33. Mount] That is, Mount Sinai or Horeb.

before them in the three days journey] Though when they encamped, the Ark was placed in the midſt of the Tribes; yet when they marched forward, it might be (as ſome hold it was at all times) carried before them, and for theſe three dayes journey, it muſt not be underſtood as if the Ark was before the reſt of the Troops the diſtance of three daies journey; but that for three daies ſpace, it was carried before them in the way they went, the cloud ſtaying over the Ark, where God choſe a ſtation or reſting place for the people.

to ſearch] Searching implieth ſome knowledg which the Ark had not; ſome doubting and uncertainty, which God, who led the Iſraelites could not have: this ſearching then is to be referred to the people, who had knowledg to follow their guide, but did not know whither he would diſpoſe of their reſt. See Ezek. 20.6. Jer.31.2.

V.35. Riſe up Lord] As chap.6.43. there is a ſet form of bleſſing the people, ſo here a ſet form of praying to the Lord, both when they moved, and when they reſted; ver.36. See Pſal.68.1.

CHAP. XI.

Verſ. 1. Complained] Of what they complained, whether of the barrenneis of the wilderneſs, or of weariſomneſs of their way, by journeying three dayes together, with their little ones, or of want of fleſh, (for that is here thought to be their ſin, though particularly ſet down afterwards, ver.4.) is not very clear; but that their complaining was wicked, is plain by their puniſhment, which was an hot vengeance from the Lord, for breaking of his Law, which being publiſhed by fire, the tranſgreſſion of it was puniſhed by fire.

uttermoſt part] There (it is like) the murmuring began, among the mixed multitude, therefore there God firſt beginneth the puniſhment with them.

V.3. The name of the place Taberah] But ver. 34. it hath another name given unto it, and it is not ſtrange that one place hath ſeveral names, upon ſeveral occaſions; as this from the puniſhment is called Taberah, that is, burning, and from the cauſe and the effect Kibroth Hattavah, that is, the graves of concupiſcence; which ſheweth, that the burning was not an utter conſuming, for ſo there would be no uſe of graves; but a dead blaſting as by lightning; or ſome might be utterly conſumed by fire, and others ſo killed that their bodies might be reſerved for burial afterwards. Yet ſome conceive, that this Taberah, or burning, was in the three dayes journey before their coming to Kibroth Hattavah, and ſo they preſuppoſe a double murmuring, out of verſ.4. whereas others take both their murmurings to be one, as Pſal. 78. 19,20,21. is the place one; the difference is not of any great moment, nor is there any more then twilight, or probable conjecture to clear it; which may vary the reſolution according to the capacity or affection of the reader.

V.4. mixt multitude] Conſiſting of Iſraelites, and thoſe ſtrangers that came out of Egypt with them, Exod.12.38.

who ſhall give us fleſh] They had herds and flocks, but not enow, both to give them milk and furniſh them with fleſh, having beſides their own great multitude, a mixed multitude of Egyptians, and other people, Exo. 12.38. ſee ver. 22. of this chapter.

V.6. dryed away] The vehemence of their concupiſcence to fleſh, made them fret and pine away, as Amnons luſt to Tamar made him lean from day to day, 2 Sam.13.4.

V.7. Manna] See Annot. on Exod.16.15.

Bdelium] (As ſome take it) is a white Peaſe; others ſay it is yellow, but is an odoriferous and ſweet ſmelling white gum of a tree in Arabia, ſo called, Plin. Nat. hiſt lib.12.cap.9. See on Gen.2.12.

V.12. conceived] Am I their parent? are they begotten or conceived by me, that none may have the care of them but I?

V.14. bear all] The burden of government of them, or proviſion for them. Exod.18.18.

V.15. kill me] I had rather dye, then ſee my grief and miſery thus daily increaſed by their rebellions, which maketh the condition of Governors many times rather an object of pity then of envy. See 1 Kings 19.4.

V.16. gather unto me ſeventy] Moſes had before, by the advice of Jethro, Exod.18. taken up ſome ſubordinate aſſiſtance in Government under him; reſerving matter of the worſhip of God, and greater cauſes to himſelf; now theſe prove too many, and too heavy for him, therefore he hath other aſſiſtants aſſigned him by God.

V.17. take of the Spirit] By the Spirit is meant the gifts of the Spirit, ver.14. 1 Cor.14.32. and ver.25. of this Chapter; and taking of the ſame ſpirit, is not meant, taking away from one to give to another, but a communication of the ſame graces, and of the ſpirit in Moſes, or his ſpiritual gifts; whereby he had not the leſs; as a candle which lighteth another hath not the leſs, either heat or light, then it had before.

upon them] He will firſt put gifts upon men, before he put them upon an office, Gen.41.40. yet theſe ſeventy Elders afterwards were a ſetled councel, for the Government of the people in the Land of Canaan, and were called the Sanhedrim, or Synedrion; yet they that ſucceeded theſe in place, did not ſucceed them in gifts, nor did theſe firſt ſeventy alwayes enjoy their gifts.

V.18. Sanctifie your ſelves] By this is meant, that they ſhould do their parts, for an holy preparation of themſelves to receive both abilitie, and authority to govern the people.

wept in the ears] The weeping of the eyes is moſt apparent to the eye, but weeping with a noiſe (as there might be) was to be perceived by the ear: but this is a ſpeech after the manner of men, for God hath neither ears nor eyes, nor any ſuch carnal part as we have, ſince he is a moſt pure ſpiritual eſſence. See on Exod. 31. 18. and 33.11.

V.20. A whole month] Heb. A month of days. That is, an intire month, not abating or wanting one day.

at your noſtrils] The offenſiveneſs of it ſhal fume out of your ſtomach, with an unſavoury ſent at your noſtrils.

deſpiſed the Lord] By contempt of the Manna, which in a miraculous manner he beſtowed on you.

V.21. And Moſes ſaid] A little before his paſſion was too ſtrong, ver.15. now his faith was too weak; the worthieſt of Gods ſervants, are ſubject to faults and failings in this life.

V.24. gathered the ſeventy] There were wanting two of this number (as is plain by verſ.26) yet the full number is noted, the name of the whole given to the greater part. See Annot. on chap.14.33. and 2 Sam. 23.24.

V.25. And took] See ver.17.

and did not ceaſe] Their gifts did not ceaſe, or depart from them, nor they ceaſe, upon all fit oportunities, to make uſe of them, yet ſome hold, they had not this aſſiſtance of the Spirit in the Land of Canaan.

V.26. Written] That is inrolled, or written in ſome book, as men fit for the imployment forementioned.

but went not out] That is, not out of their Tents unto the Tabernacle of the Congregation, as was required, ver.16. delivered by ſome ceremonial uncleanneſs, as 1 Sam.20.26. Jer.36.5.

V.28. forbid them] Beſides the ſixtie eight which propheſied in Moſes his preſence, and were joyned to him, there were two more, who out of Moſes his ſight, and without his knowledg, propheſied; which Joſhua ſuſpecting to be prejudicial to the right and reputation of Moſes, he deſires they may be ſilenced. Such blind zeal was in the Apoſtles, Mar.9. 38. Luke 4.49. Joh.3. 26.

V.30. into the camp] Out of the Tabernacle, into ſome of the Tents about it.

and the elders] Who were enabled by the ſame Spirit, and called by the ſame authoritie to be Aſſiſtants in Government to Moſes. See Annot. on ver.17.

V.31. A wind] A South wind, Pſal 78.26. which ſheweth that it was a miraculous wind, for though Quailes fly with the wind, yet not with ſuch a wind, but with the North wind, as Pliny obſerveth, *lib.*10. *cap.*15.

Quailes] This is the ſecond time that they were fed with fleſh in a miraculous manner. Of the former time, ſee Exod.16.13.&c.

a dayes journey] In circuit or compaſs about the camp, not a dayes journey by diſtance from the Camp.

V.32. ſtood up] Or, roſe up. Whereby is not alwaies meant an upright poſture of the body, which was not ſutable to this action; for the Fowl was but two cubits above the earth, ſo that they muſt rather ſtoop down then riſe up to take them; but by this word is ſometimes noted a riſing up from what was in doing before, & a ready addreſs to ſome other action, ſo here.

night, and all the next day] The ſame men (though never ſo fleſhly minded) could not endure ſo long labour, yet ſome might be ſo greedy, as to defraud themſelves of their natural reſt, to be plentifully furniſhed for their luſt; but it is like that when ſome were weary, others came in their ſtead, and ſo the gathering continued all the while.

ten homers] Or heaps, for ſo the word is ſometimes taken, as Exod.8. 14. G.pag.74.

ſpread them] As in their coming, ſo in their keeping there was an extraordinary providence of God; for if they were killed when they were ſpread round about the Camp, it was ſtrange that they were preſerved ſweet, until they were to be eaten; if kept alive in pens or cages, it was more ſtrange, that they were ſupplyed with ſufficient proviſion to nouriſh them, unleſs we ſay they were every day furniſhed with new ſtore (as with Manna) except the Sabbath, Exod.16.18.&c. which ſeemeth not to be ſo in this place.

V.33. And while] This was at the months end, for ſo long God promiſed to feed them with fleſh, ver. 20.

plague] God ſometimes granteth mens deſires in judgment, Hoſ. 13.11. and ſometimes denyeth them in mercy, 2 Cor.12.9. Some think, This plague is the burning vengeance, as ver.3. the ſame puniſhment for the ſame murmuring, whereof in the beginning of the chapter the ſin is ſet down in general, and the plague in particular. See on ver.1,3.

V.34. Kibroth Hattavah] See on ver.3.

CHAP. XII.

Ver. 1. M*iriam and Aaron*] A ſiſter, a brother; a Propheteſſe and a Prieſt, againſt their brother a Prophet and chief Magiſtrate; What relations and endowments can ſecure a man from offenſive exceptions?

Ethiopian woman] Or, Cuſhite. There was an Eaſtern Ethiopia, ſo was Arabia called: See on Gen.2.13. In that was Madian (the country of Moſes his wife) or bordering ſo neer upon it, as to borrow the name of it; but in later times the weſtern Ethiopia (which is beyond Egypt) is only called by that name. The offence it is like, was moſt betwixt the woman, and (as is probably thought) Zipporah, as Moſes his wife, becauſe of the honour of her husband, took too much upon her, and gave too little reſpect to Miriam, who looked for much, becauſe ſhe was a Propheteſs.

V.3. Very meek] And ſo bare with their murmurings, although he knew them, Moſes was ſo modeſt, that he would not thus have praiſed himſelf, but that the Spirit over ruled his mind, and guided his hand unto it; ſo that it is not ſo much Moſes his commendation of himſelf, as the Spirits commendation of Moſes.

V.6. Viſion] Viſions and dreames were the meanes whereby God, in thoſe times did oft reveal himſelf unto his Prophets: viſions were revelations to ſuch as were awake; dreames to thoſe that were aſleep. See on Gen.15.1.

V.7. In all mine houſe] That is, in all Iſrael, which was Gods Church, or in all the offices and acts of a good man and a juſt Steward, faithfully and fully diſcharging the truſt repoſed in him. Hebr. 3. 2.

V.8. Mouth to mouth] That is, more familiarly and frequently then by viſions, and more clearly and aſſuredly then by dreams, and as by way of friendly and conſtant conference, whereby full information may be given and received, rather then in viſions and dreams, which were tranſient. Exod.33.11.

ſimilitude] So far as any man was able to apprehend, which he calleth his back parts. See on Exod.33.23.

V.9.departed] Removing the cloud, the ſign of his preſence; but not forward as by way of conduct, but upward, over the Tabernacle, where it uſually did hang.

V. 10. Tabernacle] From the door or entrance into the Tabernacle, whither the cloud came down, when the Lord ſpake to them.

leprous] Miriam, and not Aaron, is leprous, becauſe ſhe was firſt in the fault, and (it may be) alſo a mover of Aaron to it; or more paſſionate and peremptory in her reproofs of Moſes, or reproaches againſt him then Aaron was.

V.12. As one dead] As excluded from humane ſocietie by the law of ſeparation of lepers, Lev.13.46. and ſo in reſpect of ſocietie, as dead and out of the world.

half conſumed] As a child half conſumed by the corruption and rottenneſs in his fleſh, is a very loathſom thing to look upon, when he is new born, ſo is a leper.

V.14. ſpit in her face] In his diſpleaſure, Heb.12.9. the face is the table of beautie or comelineſs, and when it is ſpit upon, it is made the ſeat of ſhame; and if ſpitting on the face be cauſe of ſhame, ſee Iſai. 50.6. and ſeparation, much more if the heavenly Father caſt contempt upon his undutiful daughter, and defile her face with ſuch a filthy diſeaſe as leproſie, muſt ſhe be aſhamed to be ſeen, and ſo ſhut out of the ſociety of Iſrael.

V.15.brought in again] Which was done without the ceremonial expiations, preſcribed in the caſe of leproſie, Lev.14. becauſe her cure was as miraculous as her diſeaſe; and therewithal her reſtoring to ſociety, as authentick as her ſeparation from it.

V.16. In the wilderneſſe of Paran] To which they paſſed from the wilderneſs of Sinai. There is a mountain called Paran, and that mountain, and the plain under it, might be called Paran, as by a more ſpecial name; but this part of Paran, the place of their pitching, was by an eſpecial title, called Rithmah, chap.33.18. Of Paran, ſee Annot.on chap.10. v.12. Deut.33.2. Hab.2.33.

CHAP. XIII.

Ver. 2. S*End*] After the people had required it of Moſes, as it is Deut. 1.22. and Moſes had conſulted with the Lord about their motion he gave order ſo to do. See on Joſh.2.1.

ſend thou] That is, Moſes was to give them their charge and warrant from the Lord, v.3. to take a ſurvey of the Land.

of their fathers] That is, of the Iſraelites. See on Gen.42.11.

ſhall ye ſend] The number being changed from the ſingular to the plural, we muſt underſtand Aaron as joyned with Moſes, or that the people were to make choice of fit men, and preſent them unto Moſes, by him to be ſent to view the land.

V.16. Jehoſhua] His name before was Oſhea, which ſignifieth, to ſave, Jehoſhua, he ſhall ſave, in Hebrew, which in Greek and Latin Authors, is rendred Jeſus, and therefore many of the ancient Writers call Joſhua, Jeſus: this name might give him heart and hope of good ſucceſs in battel, thereby to ſave Gods people, and deſtroy their enemies, as our JESUS did.

V.18. See the land] It is like they went not all together, but rather each man ſeverally; or two and two, went to divers quarters, that with more ſpeed, and leſſe ſuſpicion, they might make the diſcovery. See Gen.42.11.

V.19. Good or bad] As for ſituation, whether pleaſant or wholſom, (or to the contrary) or for ſtore, whether plentiful, or barren of fruit, of wood and water; and for the breeding of cattel, whether they were great or little, apt to miſcarry, or uſually proſperous: ſee 2 Kings 2. 19. text and margine, and the 20 verſe. This might be learned by inquiry, but not upon a ſudden view. See the like Legation, Matth. 11.2,3.

V.21. Zin] Which was in the wilderneſs of Paran.

Rehob] A City in the weſt part of the land of Canaan, belonging to the lot and Tribe of Aſhur, and coaſting towards Sidon, Joſh. 19.28.

V.22. Hebron] Where Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob with their wives were buried, Gen.23.19. & 49.31. this was alſo called Kiriatharba, Gen.23.2.

V.23. between two] Theſe two are thought to be Caleb and Joſhua becauſe they were moſt forward to commend the fruitfulneſſe of the Land: but what need two to carry one cluſter of grapes? Anſw. They might be beſt carried whole between two, though they were not too heavy for one to carry, yet one might be weary in carrying them far, ſince it is like they were great, and bigger haply then thoſe which grow in ſome part of Aſia, as big as a Cowes udder, or little child, *Plin.lib.*14. *cap.*1.

V.27. him] That is, Moſes.

V.28. Children of Anak] Which were taken to be a generation of Giants, ver.33.

V.29. Amalekites dwel] Not in the land of Canaan, but they ſo neerly border upon it, that they may hinder the Iſraelites paſſage into it, or be ill neighbours to them when they are in it: or they might be ſaid to dwell there, if they lodged in their Tents, pitched in a convenient place, to withſtand the paſſage of the Iſraelites. This is ſpoken for diſcouragement, to which end they tell ſome very great untruths, ver.32,33. and therefore we need not labor much to make good theſe words.

V.30. Caleb ſtilled] They began to murmur againſt Moſes upon that report, and Caleb (who with Joſhua) was of the number of the Spies, pacified them, chap.14.6.

V.32. eateth up] Meaning the Giants were ſo cruel, that they ſpoiled and killed one another, and thoſe that came to them; or they might by that imply, that the land was ſo barren, that with the great pains, and ſmall return for their ſeed and tillage, the Inhabitants were toyled out, and in a manner eaten up; or that the air was unwholſom, and ſo the people were deſtroyed by diſeaſes.

V.33. Giants] See Annot.on Gen.6.4.

CHAP. XIV.

Ver. 1. W*Ept*] That is, ſuch as believed the lies of the Spies, and were diſcouraged by them.

*V.*4. A captain] Their great paſſion putteth them upon a very mad motion, for who could conduct them back into Egypt? how could they be furniſhed with food in that deſolate wilderneſſe? would God againe rain down Manna for rebels, or ſend Quailes to ſuſtain them? and by what means would they paſſe the red Sea? would it againe ſtand on heaps that they might paſſe on dry ground? God would not ſurely work any ſaving wonders for ſuch deſperate Apoſtates, who thus returning toward Egypt, would deſerve all the plagues of Egypt to way-lay them, and overwhelm them.

*V.*5. fell on their faces] By ſuch humility they might pacifie their murmuring, eſpecially it being publick, before all the Congregation, and with that geſture they might joyn in ſupplication to God, to pacifie the people, and to ſpare them, that they might not be deſtroyed, as in ver.33.

*V.*6. Rent their clothes] See Annot.on Gen.37.29.

*V.*9. bread for us] We ſhal as ſurely cut and kil them with our ſwords, as with our knives or teeth we cut the bread we eat, and ſhall root them out, as we eat up this: agreeable to that manner of ſpeaking is Deut.31.42.

*V.*10. All the Congregation] The greater number are moſt out of order.

ſtone them] It is the condition of them, who would perſwade in Gods cauſe, to be perſecuted by the multitude, who through ignorance, inconſideration and unruly paſſions, (wherein they are examples and incitements to each other) miſtake good men, and good meanings, to the danger of their lives, for whoſe ſafety they ſhould ſacrifice their own.

the glory of the Lord] A bright cloud appeared, ſignifying the eſpecial preſence of the Lord.

*V.*13. Then the Egyptians] The ſpeech through height of paſſion is ſuſpended, and may be thus ſupplyed; If thou deſtroy the people, the Egyptians will hear of it, and take occaſion to blaſpheme thee, as verſ.16.

*V.*15 as one man] Not caring for a multitude, more then for one ſingle man; or deſtroying them as ſuddenly, as if ſo many heads had but one neck to be cut off at once.

V. 17. the power] He deſires mercy, yet willeth God to declare his power; but he meaneth, his mercy to the Iſraelites, and his power in aſſiſting them to conquer the Canaanites.

V.18. by no means clearing] Moſes pleading with God for mercy, bringeth in a diſcription of God, ſet down by God himſelf, Exod. 34.6.7. which he impartially repeateth, becauſe God in prayer would be ſpoken of in ſuch manner; yet Moſes while he ſueth for mercy to many, may hereby intimate an aſſent to Gods juſtice, if he pleaſe to exerciſe it upon ſome principal offenders in this rebellion; which if they were cut off, there might be more ſafety for the reſt: or he might, by the words next following, intimate a deferring of Gods juſtice, until the third and fourth generation. Read Exod. 32. which will clear this doubt, touching this mention of mercy and juſtice together. See on Exod. 34.7.

V.20 thy word] In that he deſtroyed them not all nor preſently, conſuming the men by degrees, and ſparing their children.

V.21. But as truly] Notwithſtanding I ſhew favour to the Nation upon this thy requeſt, I will puniſh rebellion; and ſo by undoubted evidences of my juſtice, and mercy, and miraculous power, will fully ſhew forth my glory throughout the earth.

V.22. ten times] That is, many times; a certain number for an uncertain, as Gen. 31.7.

V.23. they ſhall not ſee] This commination is not made againſt all, but in probability, onely, or chiefly againſt thoſe men who were murmurers, betwixt the age of twenty, and fifty, See on Chap. 26. 64.

V.24. Caleb] Joſhua was joyned with him; for though he be not mentioned here, he is verſ. 30,38. & Chap. 32.12.

another ſpirit] Caleb and Joſhua were more faithful ſpyes, and reporters, then the other ten; and were both more patient to ſuffer adverſity, and more valiant to offer an aſſault upon the enemy.

V.25. into the wilderneſſe] They are now come to Rithma Cades, ſo neer the promiſed Land, that only the Mountains of Idumea were betwixt them, and it; and God biddeth them go back towards the Red Sea, as it were renouncing their conduct, becauſe they deſired a Captain to bring them back into Egypt, verſ. 4.

V.30. I ſware] Yet was not God forſworn, becauſe he promiſed but upon condition, and the condition on the peoples part was obedience, as Pſal. 89.30,31. Deut. 31.16, 17. and that condition was now broken.

V.33. fourty years] Wanting five dayes; for they came out of Egypt the fifteenth day of the firſt moneth, Chap. 33.3. and they entred into Canaan the tenth day of the firſt moneth of the fourty firſt year of their departure, Joſh. 4.19. but in ſo many years ſo few dayes are not conſiderable. See Annot. on Chap. 11.24.

bear your whoredomes] That is, the puniſhment of your ſpiritual unfaithfulneſſe, diſloyalty, and diſobedience, contrary to the duty of a wife to her husband; before you come into the promiſed Land, you ſhall (for the wickedneſſe of your revolts, and rebellions, that you may be puniſhed in them) wander in the wilderneſſe untill your carkaſſes be there conſumed. See Chap. 15. 39. Deut. 32. 17 Joſh. 5. 9. Amos. 5. 25.

V.34. My breach of promiſe] Becauſe a covenant made upon condition betwixt two parties, when it is broken on the one ſide, cannot be whole on the other; which, ſpeaking after the manner of men, may be called a breach of promiſe; though God be ſo faithful and firm in his promiſe, as that he will never break for his part, unleſs the failing of his people (for their part) ſet him free.

V.37. by the plague] Threatned, ver. 12. or ſome other ſudden vengeance from God.

before the Lord] That is, at the place of Gods eſpecial preſence; ſee verſ. 10. 1 Chr. 13.10. Or, before the Lord. That is, they dye ſuch a death, as that it was evident Gods eſpecial hand was with it, as the immediate executioner of it.

V.41. Tranſgreſſe] they confeſſe they ſinned by rebelling againſt God, but conſidered not they offended in going up without Gods commandement; for in that guidance or leading which he had appointed for them, he did expreſly command that they ſhould obey, and follow; and implicitely forbid that they ſhould be leaders of themſelves; much more was their wickedneſſe to go up againſt the expreſſe prohibition, as they preſumed to do, ver. 44.

V.45. Hormah] Which name was afterwards given to the place. See Chap. 21.3.

CHAP. XV.

Verſ. 2. Y*Our habitations*] In the Land of Canaan, where ye ſhall have fixed dwellings, and not wander nor dwell in Tents, as now you do.

V. 4. tenth deal] That is, the tenth part of an Ephah, to wit, an Omer; what that is, ſee on Exod. 16.36. Lev. 23.13.

V.4. of flower] Which is offered only with the holocauſt, or whole burnt-offering, and with the peace-offerings; but not with the ſin-offering, or treſpaſſe-offering.

Hin of oyl] See Annot. on Exod, 29.40. The fourth part of an Hin is fourty ounces, that is, three pound and four ounces Troy weight, reckoning twelve ounces to the pound; according to this, gold, ſilver, pearles, precious ſtones, electuaries, and bread are weighed.

V. 9. three tenth deales] See the firſt Annot. on verſ, 4.

V.14. ſo ſhall he do] If he be a Proſelyte, and embrace the ſame belief and religion with you. *S*ee on Lev. 17.13.

V.15. One ordinance] One ordinance here, and one law, ver. 16. are to be underſtood for matters of religion, wherein an Iſraelite and a ſtranger came under one rule, Exod. 12.49. for in Civil matters there was much difference; for which, ſee Lev. 20. 44,45,46. & Deut. 23.20.

V.20. firſt of your dough] Which is made of the firſt corn ye gather and bake; but not onely was that to be given, (as ſome reſolve) but as they were to ſet apart at leaſt the ſixtieth part of their harveſt fruits, to be given in the name of the firſt-fruits unto the Prieſts; ſo as often as they baked, they were to give a cake unto the Prieſt, which was not to be ſent to Jeruſalem, nor were the firſt fruits to be ſent thither, but to be given to the Prieſts, where they dwelled and performed ſome of their holy miniſtration. See Annot. on Num 35.2.

V.22. if ye have erred] As by over-ſight and ignorance. See Lev. 4.2,13.

V.24. burnt-offering] This bullock for a burnt-offering, and the goat for a ſin-offering, are added to the ordinance, Lev. 4. 13. for the ſin of the whole Congregation. Lev. 4.13.

V.30. reproacheth the Lord] For by this preſumption, he maketh as if God were an ignorant God, that did not know his wickedneſs; or a careleſs God, that would not; or an impotent God, that could not puniſh his rebellion. Job. 15.25. Pſal. 19.13.

that ſoul] That is, that perſon. See on Lev. 5.1.

cut off] Either by the hand of the magiſtrate, where his preſumption deſerveth death by the law; or by immediate vengeance from the hand of God, as Chap. 14.37.

V.32. gathered ſticks] The Sabbath in reſpect of ceſſation from works, was preciſely obſerved in the wilderneſs; but ſo were not ſacrifices.

V.34. not declared] But was it not declared what ſhould be done, when it was expreſly decreed that the Sabbath-breaker ſhould be put to death? Exod. 31.14. & 35.2. Anſw. Firſt, though the Law was a killing letter in the rigour of it, yet it might admit ſometimes of favourable conſtruction of neceſſity, which might make the offender capable of pardon. Secondly, (which is more certain) though there were a law to put to death a Sabbath-breaker, yet it was not declared what manner of death he ſhould dye; and of that the queſtion being propoſed the anſwer is made by declaring the kind of death he muſt ſuffer, which is ſet down in the next verſe.

V.35. ſtone him] Capital puniſhments among the Jews were either, 1. by ſtrangling; (which was not done by hanging, as ſome conceive, (though it ſeem otherwiſe, Deut. 21.22,23.) but by putting a towel about the neck of him that was to dye, ſtanding two executioners plucking the towel contrary wayes untill he were ſtifled; yet when execution was done, in ſome caſes, viz. in the fourth of thoſe that follow, the dead body was to be hanged up for a time for caution to others, for the time limitted in the place fore-cited) or 2. by ſlaying with the ſword: 3. by burning: or 4 by ſtoning: of theſe, the two laſt were moſt painſul, and therefore inflicted upon the greateſt offenders. This ſtoning may ſeem too ſevere a puniſhment for ſo ſmall a treſpaſſe, but it may be it was done preſumptuouſly, or with publick ſcandal; howſoever, it is not a light offence, (though many make little of it) to do needleſſe works upon the *S*abbath day.

V.38. fringe] The fringe and riband on the border of the garment were helps to memory; ſo that when men looked on them, they might be admoniſhed of their duty to God; which being upon the borders of their garment, or upon the four quarters, they could not, which way ſoever they went in company but be in the view of thoſe that met or followed them. It is thought our Saviour wore ſuch, which was touched by the woman, who by a touch was cured of her diſeaſe, Luk. 8.44. *S*ee on Exod. 13.9.

V.39. after which ye uſe] That is, after thoſe things which are the delightful objects of your hearts, and eyes, ye go a whoring; that is, you break your vowes of loyall love and affection to me, who have married you to my ſelf, and like whoriſh wives, poſtitute your ſelves to Idols. See Hoſ. 2. verſ. 2. & 19. See on Chap. 15. 3. Hoſ. 2 2, 19.

CHAP. XVI.

Verſ. 1. K*Orah the ſon*] Being in the ſon of Izhar, he was couzen-german to Moſes and Aaron; for his father Izhar was brother to their father Amram; compare this place with Exod. 6.18.

ſons of Reuben] See Annot. on verſ. 7.

V.2. before Moſes] And not only before him, but (as it is in the third verſe) againſt him and Aaron. This ſheweth the boldneſſe of their rebellion, that they were not a afraid to begin it in his preſence.

men of renown] Men of note, and name, for their parentage, and parts; and now notorious for the abuſe of them by an impious conſpiracy and rebellion. See Gen. 6.4.

V.3. Ye take too much] Too much ſtate, too much power, too much honour, too muſt holineſs, in appropriating thoſe adminiſtrations to your ſelves, wherein all the people might partake with you, and make as neer approaches to God, and with as much acceptance, as you do, and therefore they may offer incenſe, and preſent their own oblations, and offer their own ſacrifices as well as you; which may be probably collected from the prayer of Moſes verſ. 15. Reſpect not thou their offerings, which, though it may be firſt meant of the incenſe mentioned in the following Chapter, becauſe they began their uſurpation with that, yet it is like they meant to go on with the like intruſion into the Prieſtly office in other ſervices appropriate unto it. This preſumption was not ended with Korah and his company, we ſee the practice of it in the preſent ages among the people of ſeveral ſects, taking upon them the preaching of the Word, and miniſtration of the Sacraments, and the exerciſe of Eccleſiaſtical diſcipline, which belongeth not to them.

holy every one] They flatter the people, while they ſlander their Governours, to ſtir them up to ſedition againſt them; and their flattery aſcribeth that praiſe to all, which is to be found but in very few, the praiſe of holineſſe; perhaps becauſe God required they ſhould be ſo, Exod.19.5,6. and they promiſed they would be ſo, becauſe of his eſpecial preſence among them.

V.4. fell upon his face] See *Annot.*on Chap.14.5.

to Korah] As the Ringleader of this rebellion, which he is thought to have raiſed out of indignation, and diſdaine, that Elizaphan, Exod. 6.18.22. ſon of the fourth or youngeſt Family of the Cohathites, was made a Prince of his Tribe, Chap. 3.30. and that himſelf, being of the ſecond Family and his elder, was neglected. Compare Exod.6.18. with Num.3.30. And he exaſperated Dathan, Abiram, and On, with this pretence, that they being of the Tribe of Reuben the firſt born of Jacob, had more right to the ſupreme authority then Moſes.

V.5.to morrow] To morrow the Lord will manifeſtly declare whether he hath made choyce of us for his chiefeſt ſervices or no, and whether he accountall the Congregation ſo holy, that they may come as neer the Altar as we, and offer ſacrifices as well as we.

V.7. ye take too much] He layeth the ſame fault to their charge juſtly, wherewith they wrongfully charged him; ſo did Elijah retort the accuſation upon Ahab, 1 King.18.17,18.

ye ſons of Levi] Korah was a Levite, and he had others of his Tribe of the ſame conſpiracy, but Dathan, Abiram, and On, were Reubenites, verſ.1.

Verſ.8. ye ſons of Levi] He addreſſed his ſpeech principally to Korah Captain of the Conſpiracy; yet ſo, as that what he ſaid to him concerned all of them; and therefore though he began with Korah in the ſingular number, he preſently turneth his ſpeech unto the plural.

V.9. ſeemeth it a ſmall thing] The loweſt degree of peculiar ſervice unto God, is a great honour to the ſons of men, though men of renown, ver. 2. So that he that was in dignity a King, diſdained not the office of a door-keeper in the houſe of the Lord. Pſal.84.10.

V.10. neer] Neerer then the other Tribes, to do ſervice at the Tabernacle; though not ſo neer as the Prieſts, to offer ſacrifice to God; for the Levites were to miniſter unto the Prieſt, the Prieſt unto God by offering incenſe, ver.40. and ſacrifice: See Chap.18.2,3,7.

V.11. againſt the Lord] See *Annot.*on Exod.16.7.

what is Aaron] What hath he done, what hath he aſſumed, but what the Lord hath put upon him? and what is he in compariſon of him? if you take offence at the ſetling of the Preiſt-hood upon Aaron, and his poſterity, it is Gods doing, not Aarons, and what is he to God?

V.12. Moſes ſent] Korah was preſent with Moſes, and he ſent for theſe Conſpirators, who were abſent, to wit, Dathan, Abiram, and (it is like) On, named in the firſt verſe, though here he be not.

V.13. with milk and honey] That which Joſhua and Caleb ſaid in commendation of the Land of Canaan, Chap.14.8. they ſpeak in the praiſe of Egypt; and ſo both ungratefully, and preſumptuouſly they prefer the land of their cruel bondage, before that of Gods gratious promiſe.

V.14. put out the eyes] Wilt thou make them that ſearched the Land believe that they ſaw not that which they ſaw, or make us ſo blind, as not to ſee how thou haſt deceived us, in promiſing us plenty in a fruitful land, and leading us up and down in a wild and diſolate wilderneſſe, where there is neither milk nor honey, but an extreame want of all neceſſary ſuſtenance? and wilt thou not only afflict us with Famine, but domineer over us with pride, as if thou wert not a brother, or companion among us, but a Prince over us?

V.15. neither have] He refutes their objection, by alledging his moderation and equity toward them, neither taking any of their goods from them, nor doing any hurt to them; which is not their manner who uſurp authority over others, or who have it and abuſe it. See the 1 Sam.8.11. & 12.3 Act.20.33.

V.16. before the Lord] At the door, or entrance of the Tabernacle.

V.19. all the Congregation] That is, that were of their faction.

glory of the Lord] Shining in the cloud over the Sanctuary; See ver. 24. & Chap.14.10.

V.21. conſume them] Society with ſinners is dangerous to the godly, Gen.19.15. and ſeparation of the godly is dangerous for the wicked, Gen.19.22. See Jer.51.6. Rev.18.4.

V.22. one man ſin] Meaning Korah the principal incendiary, who inflamed all the reſt into an heat of rebellion; in compariſon of whoſe wickedneſſe all the reſt were in a manner innocent.

V.24. and Abiram] On here again muſt be underſtood, though he be not mentioned, as ver.1.

V.26. in all their ſins] That is, puniſhments; by a figurative ſpeech, whereby the cauſe is put for the effect; and ſo neer of kin is the guilt of ſin, and ſmart of pain, that one term may ſtand for them both. See Chap.18.32. & Gen. 4.13. text and margin. & Chap. 18. ver. 1. & 32. of this Book.

V.29. if theſe men] Moſes ingageth the truth and honour of his office upon a miracle to be wrought for the ruine of preſumptuous Rebels, and that preſently to come to paſſe, verſ.5. in the ſight and view of many hundred thouſands of peoples; an undoubted evidence of Gods concurrence with the Miniſtry of Moſes, and therewithal an undoubted aſſurance of the Divine truth of Moſes his writings.

V.31. as he had made] Moſes had no ſooner ſpoken the word, but God made it good by his deed; at once avowing Moſes and Aarons authority and integrity, and avenging his own and their cauſe, in the juſt and miraculous puniſhment of the conſpirators impiety.

V.32. their houſes] That is, their Families, or houſholds, for they had no houſes in the Wilderneſſe, but onely Tents; or their Tents and what was in them; ſee Joſh.7.15,24.

V. 33. all that pertained] Little Infants not excepted; who though not guilty of their ſin, were taken in their ſnare; their parents being puniſhed in them, in whom their memory might have flouriſhed, after a well-led life, and natural death: and though they were little, they had ſin enough in their nature to deſerve the ſhortening of their lives; yet God, while in juſtice he killed their bodies, might in mercy ſave their ſoules. See Chap.26.10.11.

V.35. that offered incenſe] Uſurping the Prieſts office, they are puniſhed by fire wherein they offended. See *Annot.*on Lev. 10.2. by the fire of the Lords Altar, whence they kindled the incenſe of their Cenſers See on Levit.10.2. It is conceived and probably that Korah was not one of thoſe that were ſwallowed up verſ.32. but one of them that were burned.

V.37. ſcatter thou the fire] That is, the fire of their cenſers, as ſhewing that the Lord rejected it.

hallowed] That is, ſeparated from common uſe; the reaſon is rendred in the next verſe, becauſe they were offered before the Lord.

V.38. a ſign] Or memorial of Gods judgment againſt the preſumptuous conſpirators; and of his vindication and clearing of the innocency of his moſt faithful ſervants. See Chap.26.10. 2 Pet.2.6.

V.40. no ſtranger] All the Levites (except the ſons of Aaron) were ſtrangers in reſpect of the Prieſts office, or ſervice, and in reſpect of the Levites office, all the other. See upon Chap. 1.51.

as Korah] In uſurping an office, or ſervice, without the warrant of a lawfull calling unto it, and doing it in other manner then the Lord allowed it.

V.41. But on the morrow] In this murmuring of the people ſo ſoon after ſuch a miraculous judgment, both by deſtroying fire from above, and a devouring vengeance from the earth below; the Devil may be thought to ſet himſelf againſt God, as the Inchanters of Egypt did againſt Moſes, 2 Tim.3.8. to make the contumacy and rebellion of the people a miracle, as well as Gods judgement upon the rebellious.

V.45. conſume them] There were two deadly plagues before; the ſwallowing up of Corah, and that which appertained to him, ver. 33. and the burning of thoſe conſpirators which offered incenſe, ver. 35. and now a third is threatned, and in part executed, verſ.45,46. for murmuring againſt Moſes and Aaron, and charging them with murdering the people of the Lord, ver.41.

V.46. from off the Altar] For it was not lawfull for that purpoſe to take of any other fire, but that on the Altar of burnt-offerings; ſee Lev. 10.1,2.

V.47. put on incenſe] Incenſe was to be offered onely upon the Altar of incenſe in the Tabernacle; but this was done as upon an extraordinary occaſion, ſo by extraordinary warrant of Divine inſpiration.

V.48. between the dead and the living] The plague ſeemeth to have been a preſent and ſpeedy peſtilence, going along among the company, as fire in a field of Corn; ſo Aaron ſtanding betwixt thoſe that were already dead, and thoſe who yet alive were in greateſt danger of preſent death, by his Mediation (wherein as High Prieſt he repreſenteth Chriſt) pacified Gods wrath, and ſtayed the Plague that it proceeded no further.

CHAP. XVII.

Verſ.3. Aarons name] Why not Levies name, as well as Reubens, Simeon, &c? Becauſe the queſtion was not ſo much whether the Tribe of Levi ſhould miniſter unto the Lord, as whether the Prieſthood ſhould be ſetled on Aaron, and his ſons.

rod of Levi] Though Aarons name were written on a rod, it was not that rod which he uſed in working miracles, but an ordinary rod, like thoſe of the other Tribes; for ſo the buds, and bloſſomes, and Almonds that came out of it, might appear more miraculous: yet ſome think it was the ſame miraculous rod uſed in miraculous operations before Pharaoh, becauſe that was laid up before the Lord, Num. 20.9. and that rod which was laid up before the Lord, was Aarons rod that budded, Heb.9.4. unleſſe there were two rods laid up, and but one expreſly mentioned.

V. 9. before the Teſtimony] See on Exod.16.34. & 25.16.

V. 6 twelve rods] There is uſually twelve Tribes without that of Levi, and with him there was thirteen, Chap.1. but then Joſeph is divided into two, which here, though two was to be reckoned but for one, yet ſome conceive there were twelve rods beſides the rod of Aaron, though it cannot be gathered from the Hebrew Text.

V. 7. of witneſſe] Or, teſtimony. See on verſ.4.

V. 8. for the houſe of] To declare that God did chooſe the houſe of Levi, to ſerve him in the Tabernacle ; and ſince it is called the Rod of Aaron, it notes the preeminence of the Prieſts, the ſons of Aaron, above the other Levites.

V. 8. almonds] a miraculous ſpring, for a dry Rod to bring forth buds, and bloſſoms, and fruit, and all at once, or all within a very little ſpace.

V.10. againſt the rebells] That others preſume not to uſurp the office of the Prieſthood, as Korah and his company had done ; for (when the judgment by fire, and ſwallowing up of the earth, being out of ſight would be out of mind) that Rod would be of ready uſe to correct the preſumption of thoſe that would adventure upon the like in after times ; and it might prove a bar to keep them back from ſuch over-bold undertakings.

V.12. all periſh] So many ſorts of death, by the ſword, by fire, by the opening of the earth, by the peſtilence, making quick riddance of ſo many, will (if it hold) in a while leave none of us alive.

V.13. any thing neer] Extreme fear makes them agravate the danger above meaſure; or elſe they mean it onely of ſuch as being no Levites, make too neer approaches to the Tabernacle, or meddle with holy things, without ſufficient warrant for that purpoſe.

with dying] The words are a paſſionate expoſtulation with God, in ſenſe thus ; Wilt thou not, O God, withdraw thine indignation from us, untill by killing, thou haſt conſumed us ? and ſuch an Interrogation is virtually an ardent deprecation of danger, as Pſal.85.5,6. Eſay 64.12.

CHAP. XVIII.

Verſ.1. Bear the iniquity] I ſpeak to you that be Prieſts, not to the Levites ; if you treſpaſſe in any thing concerning the ceremonies of the Sanctuary, or your office, or ſuffer any one to uſurp the ſervice of my Sanctuary, againſt mine order, or to make neerer approaches to any holy thing then I permit, the offence ſhall be imputed unto you, and you ſhall be puniſhed.

V.2. of witneſſe] See Annot. on Chap.17.4,7.

V.3. thy charge] Touching the ſervices of the Sanctuary.

and the charge] Of the Tabernacle, as it is diſtributed among them, Chap.3.

nor you] To ſuffer others to offend, whom we may hinder, is to be guilty of their ſin, and liable to their puniſhment.

V.4. a ſtranger] See Annot. on Chap.16.40.

V.7. within the vail] Of the Sanctuary, for the inferiour Prieſt ; within the vail of the Holy of Holies, for the High-prieſt.

V.8. by reaſon of the anoynting] That is, of the ſervice or office, to which by anoynting thou art conſecrated.

V.9. from the fire] That which was not burned by way of Oblation to God

V.10. moſt holy place] That is, for eating ; for that which was indeed the moſt Holy place, or the Holy of Holies, was within the ſecond vail of the Tabernacle, into which none might enter but the High Prieſt, and he only once a year, not to eat, but to make a ſolemn atonement; but among the places where men might eat, ſome were held holier then others, as Jeruſalem is called the holy City, Math.4.5. where the Paſſeover was eaten, thouhg in private houſes ; and in reſpect thereof, and of any part of the Camp, the Prieſts Court was the moſt holy place for eating.

male] Of the ſin-offering and treſpaſſe-offering onely males might eat, but to the peace-offerings women were admitted, Lev.10.14. Deut. 12.18. & Chap.16.11.

V.13. firſt ripe] The firſt fruits and tenths are diſtinct tythes of different revenues of the Sanctuary, the tenths are better known then the firſt fruits, therefore of theſe it is to be obſerved, that they are of four ſorts ; Firſt, a ſheaf of the firſt ripe corn preſented the ſecond day of the Feaſt of unleavened bread, Lev. 23. 10. Secondly, two wave loaves at the Feaſt of Pentecoſt, Lev 23.17. Thirdly, a cake taken firſt out of their dough, before they made uſe of their weekly baking, Num.15.21. Fourthly, in the moneth of September, when all their fruits were gathered in, they were to pay a part in the name of firſt fruits of all their increaſe, before they ſerved themſelves with any of them ; and this was paid not in the proportion of tythe one for ten, but one for fourty at the moſt, and for ſixty at the leaſt, uſually betwixt fourty and ſixty.

clean] This limitation was obſerved, when any of the firſt fruits were offered in ſacrifice to God ; otherwiſe if they were given only for the uſe of the Prieſts, they might be eaten by any to whom he allowed them, whether ceremonially clean or unclean.

V.14. devoted] That is, ſeparate from common uſe, and fit and profitable for the uſe of the Prieſts ; unleſs it be devoted as a ſacrifice to God.

V.15. firſt born] See Annot. on Exod.13.2.

of unclean beaſts] Some think the uncleanneſſe here mentioned, is not in reſpect of kind, as the Horſe, and Mule ; but in reſpect of accidental quality, as when a ſheep is blind, or lame : but it is more probable, it is to be underſtood of both.

V. 16. redeemed] That is, of mankind, not of other creatures.

a moneth old] The firſt born might be redeemed of this law before the mother was purified, viz. before the fourtieth day ; though commonly their redemption was deferred till then.

V.17. Holy] That is, appointed for ſacrifice, and therefore not to be redeemed from death.

V.19. of ſalt] That is, ſure and ſtable ; becauſe ſault makes things to keep or laſt long without corruption. See on Gen 19.26. Lev 2. 13.

V. 20. in their land] In the Land of the Hebrews thy brethren.

I am thy part] Thou ſhalt ſet thy heart upon me, as thy moſt precious portion and inheritance ; I will make ſuffiicient proviſion for thy maintenance, though thou have not a particular ſhare of land, as other Tribes have. Or, I am thy part, that is, I will ingage my ſelfe for thy ſupply, and thou ſhalt have allowance out of my portion. See Joſh.13 14,33.

V.21. Levi all the tenth] All the tythes were paid to the Levites, not to the Prieſts, and out of them the Levites paid a tenth to the Prieſts, Nehem.10.37,38. See verſ.26. of this Chapter.

V.22. bear ſin and dye] Diſobedience to God, though in a ſmall matter, brings deadly danger upon man.

V.23. they ſhall bear] See Annot. on ver.1.

V.27. as though it] As profitable, and acceptable as the fruit of your own ground, or vineyard ; haſt you an equal portion with the reſt of your brethren.

V.28. to Aaron the Prieſt] That he may make diſtribution therof among the Prieſts.

V.29. out of all] The Levites were not onely to pay a tenth out of their tenth to the Prieſts, Nehem.10.37,38. but the tenth alſo of other things, as of the ſuburbs of thoſe Cities (which belonged to them) reaching from the walls to a thouſand cubits round about, Num.35.4. The Tribe of Levi was ſo much leſſe then any other Tribes, that they were every one of them three or four times greater, Num. Chap.3.& 4. yet they had the tenth of all, ver. 21. of this Chapter ; ſo that though they were fewer in number, they had more means or maintenance then any other Tribe : the Prieſts who were now but two (of full age) beſides Aaron, had the tenth of the Levites, who were 8580. Num.4.48. and this was about the hundredth part of the profits of above ſix hundred thouſand men : moreover they had firſt-fruits of the yearly increaſe, which at leaſt were a ſixtieth part, which was more then the tenth; they had alſo votive, and free will-offerings, redemption money of perſons, and things devoted unto God ; the firſt-born alſo of oxen, ſheep, and goats in kind ; together with the ſin-offering, and treſpaſſe-offering, they had the firſt-fruits of the bread of the Families of the people ; and of whole burnt-offerings they had the skin : yet more, they had ſome Cities and ſuburbs ; and whatſoever oblations they had, they were all of the beſt. See Jer.31.14.

V.30. heaved the beſt thereof] That is, given the beſt for an heave-offering.

V.31. In every place] Some Tythes, as common things, might be eaten in any place ; ſuch were theſe : but ſome were limitted both for place and perſons, ver.10.

V.32 bear no ſin] See Annot. on Chap.16.26.

neither ſhall ye pollute] By giving the worſt things unto the High-prieſts, having received of the beſt ſort from the people.

CHAP. XIX.

Verſ.2. Ordinance] According to the Law and Ceremony ye ſhall ſacrifice the red Cow ; this Heifer, as a beaſt without blemiſh, holds conformity with other ſacrifices, (as they with Chriſt, whereof they were figures) for he was without blemiſh or ſpot of ſin, 1 Pet.1.9. but as red, and free from the yoke, it differed from other ſacrifices ; yet agreed more with the Antitype Chriſt, who was covered with his own blood, iſſuing from the many wounds on his head and body : And in that the Heifer was to be free from the yoke, it was becauſe being diſtinate for a ſacrifice of expiating of ſin before God, it was not fit it ſhould firſt be imployed in the ſervice of man ; and it noted Chriſts freedome from the yoke and bondage of ſin ; as it is phraſed, Lam.1.14. and from ſubjection to men, Mat.27.26,27. Joh.10.17,18.

V.3. without the Camp] Becauſe ſhe was to be ſacrificed for the ſins of all the people ; and therefore being figuratively under the guilt of ſo great iniquity, it was held very unclean ; in ſo much that the Prieſt that killed her, and he that burned her, were to be unclean until the evening. And if we conſider this ſacrifice as a Type of Chriſt, as it was, it holds conformity with him, who ſuffered as a Malefactor without the gate of Jeruſalem, Heb.13.12. as Malefactors did without the Camp, Lev.24.14. and as bearing the guilt of all the Iſrael of God, Iſa. 53.6. and yet in himſelf the Holy one of God, Act.4.27.

one ſhall ſlay] It is not ſaid the Heifer ſhould be ſlain, or burnt, ver. 5. and for the word One, though it be not in the Hebrew Text, yet it is ſupplyed in the tranſlation for the congruity of the ſentence which runs better in ſenſe with it then it would do without it. It ſeemes it was not Aaron the High-Prieſt that was to do it, but rather Eleazer, to whom the Heifer was preſented, by whom it was brought without the Camp, and the blood ſprinkled, ver. 4. and who was next in dignity to Aaron, Chap.3.32. and at this time the number of inferiour Prieſts (beſides them) was very few, if it were a number, for ſome think they were but three that were of full age; yet in that it is ſaid, [ſhall ſlay her before his face] (that is, Eleazars face,) it appears to be ſome other other, and not Eleazar ; ſo alſo do the words [in his ſight, ver.5.] import.

V. 4. before the Tabernacle] That is, turning his face toward it; though being out of the Camp, he were a good way from the Tabernacle.

V. 6. skarlet] By that deep red colour is ſometimes ſignified the great guilt of ſin, Iſa.1.18. eſpecially of cruelty and bloodſhed, Iſa.1.15.18. the blood of Chriſt waſhing away that guilt ; and though red it ſelf, yet making the ſinner white, Rev.7.14.

V. 7. the Prieſt] That is, Eleazar, ſignifying that uncleanneſſe cleaveth to the moſt holy actions of the moſt holy perſons, Heb.7.27,28.

V. 8. he that burneth] That is, an inferiour Prieſt.

V. 9. clean place] Where no dead carkaſſe, dung, or other filth was laid ; as on the contrary the ſtones, rubbiſh, and duſt of a leprous houſe were to be put in an unclean place, Levit.14.40 41. whence the aſhes were yearly to be diſtributed in the Cities of Canaan, and ſo kept, that they might be in readineſs for generall uſe.

it ſhall be kept] That is, the aſhes, (for in the Hebrew the word is in the ſingular number) or part of the aſhes ſhall be kept to mingle with water : See verſ.17. & Heb.9.13.

a water of ſeparation] Becauſe they that were ſeparated for ceremoniall uncleanneſs were ſprinkled with it, and made clean by it, Chap 8.7. from a ceremonial pollution. It is alſo called holy water, becauſe it is ordained to an holy uſe, Chap. 5.17. and uſed in an holy manner.

V. 12. with it] Some think the water of ſeparation, which ſome think did not ſerve onely to purge the uncleanneſs contracted by touching the dead : others extend it to all ceremonial uncleanneſs whatſoever.

third day] He was to be ſprinkled with this water of ſeparation the third day after his pollution was known, and the ſeventh day, ver. 19. and if he omitted ſprinkling on the third day, he had no benefit by the ſecond on the ſeventh day ; yet the firſt ſprinkling might be, (if the third day were omitted) on the fourth or the fifth day, and yet ſtands as for the third, and from thence he muſt expect the ſeventh day ſo much the latter, as it was longer before he had his firſt ſprinkling.

V. 13. cut off] So that he ſhould not be eſteemed to be of the holy people, but as a polluted and excommunicated perſon : ſome hold that if it were known, he was to be put to death by the Sentence of the Judge, if unknown by the Judgment of God; except in caſe of ignorance, For then if any one touched any unclean thing, and knew it not, he was (when he knew it) to offer a ſacrifice for it. Lev.5.3,6.

V. 14. all that is in] By this preciſe ordinance touching the dead, a caveat was given againſt all guilt of blood : for if to come into the place where a dead man lay, rendred a man unclean, how unclean muſt he be, who made a living man a dead carkaſs by a murderous act ? See Gen.4.10. & Eſa.1.15. Num.31.19.

V. 15. open veſſel] Which taketh in the ayr of the Tent ceremoniouſly tainted or unclean, when they left dwelling in Tents ; the ſame Law in proportion ſerved for houſes, at leaſt for the room or chamber where the dead was laid, or through which he was brought.

V. 18. a clean perſon] One of the Prieſts that is clean.

V. 19. waſh his clothes] Becauſe he had been among them that were unclean, or elſe had touched the water wherewith another had been ſprinkled, ver.21.

V. 20. purifie himſelf] By undergoing the ceremony of purification, for he was rather paſſive then active in it.

cut off] See Annot. on ver.13.

V. 21. waſh his clothes] See Annot. on ver.7.

toucheth] Except for the ordinary and legal uſe of cleanſing others by it from ceremonial uncleanneſs.

V. 22. untill even] He that touched an unclean thing was to be unclean ſeven dayes, ver.14. but ſuch a perſon or thing touched at the ſecond hand by another, could make him or it unclean but until Even.

CHAP. XX.

Verſ. 1. OF Zin] Some read Sin, as the vulgar Latine, but corruptly ; for it is not the ſame word, as the difference of the firſt letters ſhew, for the former is written with Samech, this with Tſadi ; nor the ſame place mentioned, Exod.16.1. where it rained Manna, for that was but the eighth manſion, that is the thirty third, but as ſome reckon it, the twenty third. See Chap. 33.36.

firſt moneth] This was the firſt moneth of the fourtiethe year after their departure, out of Egypt ; their next removal was from Kadeſh to Hor, which ſeemeth to be in the ſame year when Aaron dyed, and he dyed in the firſt day of the fifth moneth of the fourtieth year, after the children of Iſrael were come out of the Land of Egypt, as is expreſly ſaid, Num.33.38. ſo that from this Chapter to the end of Deuteronomy, are diſcribed the paſſages of the fourtieth or laſt year of the journeying of the Hebrews in the wilderneſs.

Kadeſh] As this was another deſert from Zin in the eighth manſion, ſo this was another Kadeſh then that which is called Kadeſh Barnea, for Kadeſh Barnea, was in the Southern confines of the Land of Canaan ; but the Kadeſh here ſpoken of, was (though Southward alſo) far off, in the confines of Idumea, or uttermoſt border of the King of Edom, verſ.14.16, of this Chapter.

Miriam dyed] The ſiſter of Aaron and Moſes, ſhe dyed four moneths before her brother Aaron, when he was of the age of one hundred and thirty years, and about the year of the worlds 2514.

V. 5. wherefore have ye] This people was very prone to murmure againſt their Governours, and that moſt of all in the cauſe and quarrel of the belly, when they wanted proviſion of meat and drink, and the verſe ſheweth the wilderneſſe wanted both ; and they wanted patience to keep the peace with their Superiours ; O how unquiet a thing is war, which cauſeth famine, and by that wherein it ends begins new brabbles! See Joſeph of the Wars of the Jews, lib.6. cap.11.

V. 8. rod] It is not certain whether this was Moſes his rod wherewith he wrought wonders in Egypt, and ſmote the rock in Horeb, Exod. 17.5. (although ſome without doubt affirm it was that) or Aarons rod that budded, and brought forth Almonds, and was laid up before the Lord in the Sanctuary, Num.17.8,10. but the difference is not great, the miracle lyeth not in the rod, or the relation to Moſes and Aaron, but in the power of God. See on chap. 17. 3.

V. 8. ſpeak] Command it to give water.

V. 10. muſt we fetch] By this queſtion he ſeemeth to bewray ſome diſtruſt of ſuch a ſupply of drink, as he did of ſupply of fleſh, Num.11.22,23. and what is probable of him by this verſe is charged upon him and Aaron both, verſ.12,24. The errours of Moſes in this particular paſſage are conceived by ſome to be 1. his immoderate anger ; 2. his ſpeaking to the people, when he ſhould have ſpoken to the rock, ver. 8. 3. his ſmiting of the rock, when he ſhould only have ſpoken to it with the rod in his hand, or ſtretched the rod towards it ; and ſmiting it twice as in a pang of paſſion ; but others excuſe him, and ſay, he did not know whether God promiſed water upon condition the people would ceaſe from murmuring : but the next words ſhew that both he and Aaron were in fault.

V. 12. ye believed me not] They did not doubt of the power of God whereof they had ſufficient evidence, even for ſuch a miracle as this, *Exod.*17.6. nor of his will ; but in regard of the wilfulneſs and murmuring of the people unworthy to be ſupplyed in ſuch a miraculous ſort, and in this doubt and diſpleaſure at the people ſomething was too paſſionately ſaid or done which might occaſion or confirm incredulity in them. See Pſal.106.32,33.

Sanctifie me] That is, honour me, becauſe God is moſt to be honoured for his own holineſſe, and by the holineſſe of men, which conſiſteth in beleeving his Word, and obeying his command.

which I have given] By which is not meant the whole Land of Canaan, but that which was beyond Jordan in their paſſage out of Egypt, for then they were in that part on this ſide Jordan, which was given to the Tribe of Reuben and Gad, and half Tribe of Manaſſeh.

V. 13. Sanctiſied in them] That is, in Moſes and Aaron by ſhewing himſelf mighty, and maintaining his glory, which ſhineth moſt in holineſs, for his power is an holy power ; his wiſdome is an holy wiſdome ; his juſtice an holy juſtice ; and ſo he getteth himſelf honour above all Potentates, cruel Tyrants, crafty Politicians, and unjuſt Judges.

V. 14. thy brother Iſrael] Becauſe Jacob (of whom came the Iſraelites) and Edom (of whom came the Edomites) were Brethren, See on Gen.36.40.

V. 16. an Angel] Which conducted them in their way by the cloud and pillar of fire : yet ſome by this Angel or meſſenger, underſtand Moſes.

in Kadeſh, a city] Or at Kadeſh, that is, hard by it, in that part of the Deſert which is ſo neer it, that it taketh the name from it, Chap. 33.36.

V. 17. neither will we drink] As thine, but when we have made them our own by paying for them. verſ.19.

V. 18. leſt I come] A threatning denyal, as if he had ſaid, Do not paſſe by me leſt I come, &c. or, if thou offereſt to paſs, I will reſiſt thee with the ſword.

V. 21. turned away] Went another way toward Canaan, fetching a compaſs about the Land of Edom and Moab, Judg. 11. 18. and ſo paſſed not the next way through his land, as they deſired, but through the Coaſt that bordered upon it. Deut. 2. ver. 4. which was a way rather round about, then through it. See on Deut.2.29.

V. 24. ye rebelled] Why then was not Moſes as well as Aaron doomed to death, ſince both are charged with the ſame ſin, ver. 12. and it is ſaid of both, it is ſaid in the ſame place, that they ſhould not bring the people into the promiſed Land. V. 12. Anſw. God prolongeth Moſes life a little further, yet ſo, as that he did but ſee the Land from Mount Nebo, Deut.34.4. where he died ; and ſo of him, as well as of Aaron, was the prediction, ver. 12. verefied.

V. 26. upon Eleazar] Who was to ſucceed his Father Aaron in the Prieſthood, and ſo did his ſons ſucceed him untill the time of the Judges, but then (for what cauſe it doth not appear) the Prieſthood was tranſlated to the poſterity of Ithamar, the other ſon of Aaron, Joſeph. lib. 1. Antiq. Chap. laſt ; but it never went quite out of his Family; as Joſephus ſaith, Antiq. lib. 20. cap. 8. which is denyed by Sigonius de Repub. Heb. lib. 1. cap. 2.

V. 28. dyed] In the one hundred twenty third years of his age.

there] That is, in Mount Hor ; and whereas it is ſaid, Deut.10.6. that he dyed in Moſera, the anſwer is, that Hor and Moſera are the ſame place. for Hor is an hill in Moſera, which is the place round about it, and where the Iſraelites pitched, Num.33.30. & 37. for when they had thence journeyed in the wilderneſſe to and fro for fourty years together, it is very like they came more then once to the ſame place.

CHAP. XXI.

Verſ. 1. THe way of the ſpies] By that way which the Spies (which ſearched the Land in the ſecond year of their journeying from Egypt, that is, thirty eight years before this time) ſome underſtand it of the way which King Arad had ſent Spies to ſee which way Iſrael would go, who (by intelligence) had learned that they were returned from the Red *S*ea. See Chap. 33. 40.

V. 2. vowed a vow] Of vowing, ſee Annot. on Gen. 28. 20. Of this kind of vow, ſee Lev. 27. 29.

V. 4. the land of Edom] They were to compaſs it, (but not to paſs through it) and deſtroy it, for ſo were they charged, Deut. 2. 5. though by the name not of Edom, but of Seir, for ſo was Eſaus or Edoms Countrey called.

V. 5. light bread] Meaning Manna, which they account light, as if it had little ſubſtance in it for their nouriſhment, in compariſon of the more ſolid and ſubſtancial diet which they had in Egypt; and which now by common uſe was to them as unpleaſant as they thought it unprofitable. See Prov. 27. 7.

V. 6. fiery Serpents] So called, becauſe thoſe who were bitten or ſtung with them, were ſo enflamed with the heat thereof that they died. See 1 Cor. 10. 9.

V. 8. fiery Serpent] That is, a Serpent of the colour of fire, as burniſht braſs is, Rev. 1. 15. Ezek. 1. 7. This was a figure of Chriſt, for as they that looked upon the braſen Serpent lifted up upon a pole, were cured of the hurt they received of the fiery Serpents, ver. 9. ſo they that fixed the eye of faith on Chriſt, lifted up alſo, Joh. 3. 14. upon the Croſs, are cured of the biting or ſting of that old Serpent, who hath many ſtings, which he ſhooteth out like darts, and thoſe darts are fiery, Epheſ. 6. 16. See 1. Kings. 18. 4.

V. 13. Arnon] Some take Arnon for a rock, ſome for a brook running betwixt the Moabites, and Amorites.

V. 14. Wherefore it is ſaid] Theſe two verſes import ſome miraculous conformity betwixt what God did at the Red-Sea, and what he did at Arnon in the borders of Moab: what the former were we find Exodus 14. for the latter there is reference made to a book which is not extant, or elſe latent, that we know not where to find it. See on Joſ. 10. 13. Some ſay, that as the Red Sea ſerved for a paſſage to the Iſraelites, yet drowned the Egyptians, ſo the high rocks at the brook of Arnon fell upon the enemies of Iſrael, and made a more eaſie and even paſſage for the Iſraelites; ſo the Jewiſh Rabbins relate, and ſome Chriſtian Writers too eaſily believe them.

V. 17. Spring up, O well] In the Hebrew it is aſcend; for fruitful ſprings bubble and riſe up, like a ſeething pot.

ſing ye] Ye that receive the commodity thereof, give praiſe to God for it, or with reſpect unto it; or ſing ye at it, or about it.

V. 18. the Princes digged] That is, cauſed it to be digged, the principal men of the Tribes, the chief Magiſtrate, and chief *M*iniſter ſmote the ground with their rods or ſtaves, the enſignes of their dignity, (as Moſes did the rock,) or with their journeying ſtaves they began to dig, and God cauſed thereupon a well to ſpring up as water iſſued out of the rock, Num. 20. 11. or they digged places to receive the water that came out of the rock, 2 King. 3. 16, 17.

of the Law-giver] The Lord himſelf, Iſa. 33. 22. or Moſes under God.

V. 24. Jabbock] The name of a River riſing out of Arabia, and watering the Region of the Ammonites.

ſtrong] For the people were tall and ſtrong like Giants, Deut. 2. 20.

V. 26. of the Amorites] For if it had been the Moabites, the Iſraelites might not have poſſeſſed it, Deut. 2. 9. yet that which the Amorites had taken from the Moabites, the Iſraelites received and poſſeſſed, ver. 31. Num. Chap. 32. 33.

V. 27. in Proverbs] A Proverb made in ſcorn of Sihon King of Heſhbon, (a City of the Land of the Amorites, ſee Judg. 11. 18, 19. over whom Sihon was King) which is part of the curſe threatened to the wicked, Deut. 28. 37. the Proverb then uſed ran in theſe words [Come unto Heſhbon, &c.] and thoſe times.

V. 28. a fire] That is, war; ſo called, becauſe it is raiſed and purſued in heat of wrath, or, (as the common ſaying is,) with fire and ſword. See. Jer. 48. 45.

V. 29. Chemoſh] Who worſhippeſt the Idol Chemoſh for a God; Chemoſh was the Idol of the Moabites. 1 King. 11. 7. who was not able to defend his Worſhippers which took the Idol for their Father: Some take this to be the Idol Bacchus.

he hath given] That is, the Idol Chemoſh hath given thoſe that eſcaped the ſword, to be captives; which is aſcribed to the Idol by way of deriſion both of him and of the opinion of the people, who conceived there was ſuch power in him. See Judg. 11. 24.

V. 30. we have ſhot] Bragging words of Sihon and his party, concerning the conqueſt of Moab.

CHAP. XXII.

Verſ. 1. P*Lains of Moab*] Once belonging to the Moabites, ſince to the Amorites, and from them won by the Iſraelites, and in their preſent poſſeſſion.

on this ſide Jordan] the plaines of Moab where the Iſraelites now encamped are on the eaſt ſide of Jordan and beyond that in reſpect of Canaan. See on Deut. 1. 1.

by Jericho] Jericho was ſituate about 7 or 8 miles from Jordan over againſt the place where the people pitched. See on Chap. 26. 3.

V. 2. Balak] king of Moab, ver. 4.

V. 3 Moab] The Moabites, or people of Moab.

V. 4. Moab] The king of Moab, or the Moabites.

of Midian] Who Were the Senate or Governors of the Midianites, this people deſcended from Abraham by Keturah, Gen. 25. 1, 2. but now having made defection from their Faith, they take part with the Moabites their Neighbours, and it ſeemes alſo their confederates, Num. 25. 17, 18. This Midian is not that which is ſituate toward Mount Sinai, where Moſes kept the flocks of Jethro; but another Midian far off that place, neer unto the Moabites; with theſe Midianites his neighbours doth the King of Moab conſult.

V. 5. Balaam] The Diviner or Sooth-ſayer, Joſh. 13. 22. proved to be a bad man by his following of enchantments, Numb. 24. 1. and by his deſire to curſe Iſrael, and by building of Altars unto Baal, whereof in this and the next Chapter; yet ſome take him to be a Prophet (as he is ſtyled, 2 Pet. 2. 16.) and a Prophet of God, becauſe God had ſuch entercourſe with him, and becauſe he particularly prophecied of Chriſt to come, and becauſe he ſpeaketh of God as his God, Chap. 24. verſ. 13. yet they acknowledg him a wicked man, for ſuch may prophecy in Gods name, as well as in Chriſts, Matth. 7. 22. See on Joſ. 13. 22.

river] Euphrates.

V. 6. whom thou bleſſeſt] Either the King of Moab flattered him exceedingly, or God ſuffered his ſorceries to prevail very much, as he did thoſe of Simon Magus. Act. 8, 9, 10. which they do the more, becauſe they are the cauſes of many evils, which by evil ſpirits they bring upon men, and they ſometime take them away to ſeem good; and ſo the Devil doth more hurt as an Angel of light, then as the Prince of darkneſs.

V. 7. reward] Thinking to bribe him with gifts to curſe the Iſraelites. See 1 Sam. 9. 7.

V. 8. this night] He taketh time to conſult with his deviliſh Oracles, Though he pretend the direction of a better Spirit.

as the Lord ſhall ſpeak] Though he were a prophet of the Devil, he would ſeem to receive the revelation from God.

V. 9. God came] Though the Devil be, to many, in ſtead of God, 2 Cor. 4. 4. yet God will keep an over-ruling power in his own hand, and both reveal his mind to whom he will, as Matth. 7. 22. and reſtrain their wils as pleaſeth himſelf.

what men are] God putteth this queſtion, not that he needeth information, but to draw from Balaam a ground of his treaty and proceeding with him, as he dealt with Adam, Gen. 3. 9. and with Cain Gen. 4. 9.

V. 12. God ſaid] God warned him in a dream that he ſhould not conſent to Balacks wicked requeſt.

V. 16. let nothing] The wicked ſeek by all means to promote their naughty purpoſes, though they know that God is againſt them.

V. 17. great honour] He thinks Balaams ambition would be bribed with honour, though he were not ſo covetous, as to be won with rewards.

V. 19. more] He knew he could do nothing without the Lords leave and help, yet he hoped that God might yeeld to him, and then for advantage and advancement he would yield to the King of Moab.

V. 22. kindled] God granted his requeſt in his wrath, being angry with his motion againſt his revealed will, ver. 12, 13, 32. and for that (though God bad him) he went upon his own Errand with a mind (for gain, or glory) to curſe Gods peculiar people, whom he had bleſſed, verſ. 21. See Chap. 11. verſ. 19, and 20.

V. 24. the Angel] Appearing to him the ſecond time, in another place.

V. 28. opened] God gave her power to ſpeak; or the Angel of the Lord formed his own words by the mouth of the Aſs, as the Devil did his by the mouth of the ſerpent, Gen. 3. So at this time the Aſs was wiſer then her rider, though a Prophet; according to that, 1 Cor. 1. 27.

V. 29. a ſword] The Apoſtle chargeth this Prophet with madneſſe, 2 Pet. 2. 16. And it is plain his preſent anger was a fit of madneſſe, or elſe the ſtrangneſſe of the ſpeech, being no leſſe then miraculous, would have affected him with fear, and have made him as patient as his beaſt; but his fury was his frenzy, and in his fit he cals for a ſword to be put into the hand of a mad man, to kill his Aſs for ſaving his life from the ſword of the Angel.

V. 31. opened the eyes] For whoſe eyes the Lord doth not open, they can neither ſee his anger, nor his love. The angel appearing in a viſible ſhape to the aſs, was not ſeen by Balaam, till the Lord opened his eyes, which (as to that object) were as ſhut or blinde, though not to other things, Luk. 24. 16. Deut. 10. 7.

V, 33. ſlain thee] For thou wouldeſt have ſlain thine aſs, for going a little aſide from thy way, how much more doeſt thou deſerve to be killed, for going ſo croſs and contrary to Gods will?

V. 36. border of Arnon]Neer to the place where the Iſraelites were incamped.

V. 40. offered oxen] Or ſlew oxen and ſheep uſually Offering, implieth uſually ſacrificing, though the ſame word be uſed alſo for killing onely; and ſo the killing yet might be for a preſent to entertain Balaam, and the Princes, and the elders of Moab and Midian together; and as ſacrifices to God were attended and followed, ſometimes with feaſtings among men; ſo was it with Idolaters, the Devil and his ſervants being apes in imitation of God, and his ſervants, for outward obſervances. See Chap. 25. 1, 2.

V. 41. high places of Baal] To a Chappel built to Baal on Mount Abarim, which divided the Moabites from the Kingdom of Sihon and Og. Idolaters ſet their ſinne on high, being no more aſhamed to ſerve Idols, then the godly to do ſervice, or offer ſacrifice to the true God. In the Plain neer this Mount the people of Iſrael pitched their Tents. See on Joſ. 13. 17.

CHAP. XXIII.

Verſ. 1. SEven altars] He builds altars to conſult with God, he ſhould firſt have conſulted with God about the building of his altars.

V. 2. Balak and Balaam] Among the Gentiles, Kings oft-times uſed to ſacrifice, as did the Prieſts.

offered] It is not ſaid to whom they offered; but it ſeemeth it was not to Chemoſh, the god of the Moabites, Chap. 21. 29. But to the God that ſpake unto Balaam, verſ. 4.

V. 4. met Balaam] In ſome evident apparition, whereby he might know who it was that ſpake to him.

I have offered] He would bribe God with ſacrifices, (as the King of Moab would do him with offers of reward, and worſhip) to turn the bleſſing of his people into curſes.

V. 5. thus ſhalt thou ſpeak] As it followeth, v. 8, &c.

V. 7. of the Eaſt] Aram, or Syria; of which name there were divers Countries, but this is that which was called Aram Naharam, or according to the Greeks. Meſopotamia, Joſeph. Antiq. lib. 4. cap. 6. Both which words note the ſituation of it betwixt two rivers, and the rivers are Tigris and Euphrates. This Aram is in ſituation Eaſtward from the land of Moab. See Deut. 23. 4. and Iſa. 2. 6. and on Joſ. 13. 22.

V. 8. How ſhall I curſe] How eaſie a thing is it to wagge a wicked tongue? yet without Gods will, neither King nor Prophet can have ſo much power againſt his people! How eaſie is it for him to bind their hands to the peace, who ſo binds their tongues to the good behaviour towards them, as to make them fall to bleſſing, when they would be curſing?

V. 9. dwell alone] They ſhall have their Religion and Lawes apart, not communicating therein with other Nations, Eſth. 3. 8. Deut. 33. 28.

among the nations] Among the prophane or idolatrous Nations; ſevered from them as Gods peculiar people.

V. 10. duſt of Jacob] The infenite multitude of Jacobs or Iſraels poſterity are as the duſt of the earth, Gen. 13. 16. & 22. 17.

let me die] He would be like the godly in an happy death, but he cared not to be like them in an holy life; but his end is not like to be the ſame with theirs, who walketh not in the ſame way with them, Prov. 11. 7. Num. 31. 8. ſee on Pſal. 116. 15.

V. 13. but the utmoſt part] Chap. 22. verſ. 41. There are the ſame words without the word but;] The meaning is, that in his former proſpect, Chap. 22. he ſo ſaw the utmoſt part, and that he ſaw on each ſide, and the middle within; but here he had but a view of a part of the utmoſt part, and he would have him curſe that in the name of the whole.

not ſee them all] For being ſo many, as to be compared to the duſt of the earth, too many for the fourth part of them to be counted, verſ. 10. the number might diſmay him; therefore he muſt ſee but a part, and in that curſe the whole.

V. 14. Piſgah] Is a place of heighth or exaltation, and ſo is taken for an hill, in general; yet there was an hill in the Land of Moab, called Piſgah in particular, Deut. 3. 27. and Chap. 34. verſ. 1.

V. 19. hath he ſpoken] He hath ſaid I ſhall not curſe, and if he ſaid it, he will make me make good what he hath ſaid; and I cannot ſay more or leſſe in this matter, then he is pleaſed to put into my mouth, verſ. 20.

V. 20. to bleſſe] The bleſſing as from Balaam was vain, becauſe he was a wicked man; but as he was commanded by God to bleſſe, ſo it was not vain, though he were a wicked man.

V. 21. He hath not beheld iniquity in Jacob, neither hath he ſeen perverſneſs in Iſrael] The divers readings of theſe words, and the abuſe of them to countenance ſome new conceipts, tending to corruption in Doctrine, and diſſoluteneſs of life, hath made the clearing of them ſomewhat difficult. If we ſhould take them for the words of Balaam (as a wicked man loving the wages of unrighteouſneſſe, and deſirous to curſe where the Lord hath bleſſed) we might paſs them over without any great ſcruple, and not need we be ſollicitous to ſuit them with an Orthodox expoſition; But they are generally conceived to be the words, not ſo much of Balaam, as of the holy Spirit, which over-ruled the ſpirit, at leaſt the tongue of the mad Prophet, and made him ſpeak the wiſdom of God in a myſtery; which ſome heritical Novliſts would turn to a myſtery of iniquity, ſuppoſing the meaning of the words to be; That God ſaw no ſinne at all in Jacob, nor any tranſgreſſion in Iſrael. For refutation of which wicked Gloſſe, we are to diſtinguiſh of the ambiguities of terms in this Sentence, whereof the parts are, 1. The Perſons. 2 That which is attributed to them. 1. For the Perſons, they are two, God, and Jacob or Iſrael. For the firſt, there is no doubt, but the firſt word he, referreth to God, called El, verſ. 19. and in the 21. verſ. Jehovah. 2. For the other Perſon, it is noted by two Titles, Jacob and Iſrael: for the great Patriarch of that Nation had thoſe two names, and in this order, for he was firſt called Jacob, and afterward Iſrael, of which names you may read, Gen. 25. 26. & 32. 28. and the reaſon of them, Gen. 27. 36. & Chap. 32. 28. by both may be underſtood, either the perſon of Jacob or Iſrael, or his poſterity; and the poſterity may be conceived under a double diſtinction, the one as taken totally for the whole body of the people, or particularly for ſome eminent perſons among their Tribes: the other diſtinction is, that it may be taken ſubjectively or objectively; ſubjectively, as ſuppoſing Iſrael to be the ſubject in whom that evil is inherent; or objectively, that it is the object againſt which that is committed. This for the perſons; Now for the attributes, they are various, according to the difference of the perſons, to whom they are aſcribed; as to God ſeeing, and that may be interpreted three wayes; 1. For a ſenſible apprehenſion; 2. For an intellectual contemplation; 3. For a moral approbation. Secondly, for that which is atributed to Jacob or Iſrael, all that is ſet down under two Titles, iniquity and perverſeneſſe, of which the Original words are to be explained, and for them, the former of them rendered iniquity is Aven, and Avin ſignifieth, as Schindler ſheweth, Pentaglot. col. 38. Firſt of all, grief, ſorrow, ſadneſs; Gen. 35. 18. Secondly, it ſignifieth ſtrength, Gen. 49. 3. Deut. 21. 17. Thirdly, violent ſtrength, injury, injuſtice, (which cauſeth grief alſo,) and iniquity, Job 11. 14. Prov. 30. 20. Pſal. 5. 5. Fourthly, ſome take it for ſome hainous iniquity, for kinde or for degree; in particular, for Idolatry, and for an Idol in paticular, Eſa. 66. 3. as our tranſlation hath it, and ſo the Chaldee renders it, and Schindly. Pentagl. col. 39. but Arias Montanus tranſlates it, vanity, and there may well be a communication of theſe two, for an Idol is nothing in the world, 1 Cor. 8. 4. and ſo we find that Bethel when it had been the habitation of the golden Calf, 1 King. 12. 28, 29. and afterwards was called not Bethel, but Beth-aven, that is, the houſe of vanity. Hoſ. 4. 15. the like ſenſe is to be given it upon the ſame ground, Amos 5. 5. The other word which is here turned perverſeneſſe, is Hhamal or Ghnamal, which ſignifieth toylſom labour, or moleſtation of the body and minde, both paſſively, Pſal. 25. 18. & 73. 5. and actively, Pſal. 94. 20. & 55. 11. & 7. 15. ſo according to the Greek verſion, and the French expreſſeth it by extortion.

Now out of Application of theſe diſtinctions, we ſhall deduce the explication of the words, which we will ſet down; Firſt, by way of Refutation of the falſe Expoſitions that are put upon the Text: Secondly, by ſetting down and aſſerting the true ſenſe of it.

For the firſt, we ſay, that by Jacob or Iſrael in this place, is not meant the perſon of Jacob or Iſrael, the ſon of Iſaac, the father of the twelve Patriarchs, but the people or nation deſcending from him

Secondly, that not ſome few of the better ſort of the people are here meant, who as juſtified by faith, and walking with God, in an holy life, might be reputed righteous, as Enoch, Gen. 5. 22. Noah, Gen. 6. 9. Job 1. 1. and Zachary and Elizabeth, Luk. 1. but the body of the people, becauſe they were the object, Both of Balaams ſight, and of Balaks ſpite, whom he deſired ſhould be curſed.

Thirdly, it is not ſaid, nor could be ſaid, that theſe had none Iniquity, nor that they were chargeable with no hainous iniquity, nor that they were free from Idolatry, for they were guilty of hainous iniquity, of groſs and brutiſh and bloody Idolatry. See Act. 7. 42. Exod. 32. 32. Pſal. 106. 37.

Fourthly, nor is the meaning, that God did not ſee that evil that was in them, or done by them: for though in a literal and Phyſical ſenſe, he doth not ſee as we do, becauſe he hath not a body or organs or inſtruments of ſenſe, as we have, yet he diſcerneth all things better by his intelligence, then we do any thing that is obvious to all our ſenſes, Eſa. 38. 17.

Fifthly, not that God did take no notice of their wickedneſſe; for he did ſo, and puniſhed them for it, Deut. 32. 27, 28. and Pſal. 78. 60, 61.

Sixthly, nor is it to be thought, that God having taken notice of their ſinnes and chaſtiſed them for them, he forgat what they or himſelf had done: for though forgetfulneſſe be ſometime aſcribed to God, as Jer. 31. 34. and elſewhere, and it be ſaid of him, that he caſteth the ſinnes of his ſervants behind his back, Eſa. 38. 17. and into the depth of the Sea, Micah, 7. 19. by ſuch expreſſions, we are to underſtand a gracious forgiving, not an oblivion or forgetting; for if God could be ignorant of any thing, or forget what he hath known, he could not be Omniſcient, as he is, knowing all things as he doth, Heb. 4. 13.

Seventhly, there is one interpretation more, which hath a truth in the thing it ſelf, viz. that God looking on his choſen through Chriſt, ſeeth no more ſinne in them, then is inherent in him; for they are made the righteouſneſs of God in him by imputation, as he was made unrighteous by imputation of their tranſgreſſions, 2 Cor. 5. 21. but this though very true in theſi, as to this Text may be impertinent. This for the erroneous Expoſitions of the words, now for the Orthodox interpretation of them.

Firſt, Both the Hebrew word, Aven, which in our Engliſh Tranſlation, is rendred iniquity, and vanity, and Hhamal, or Ghnamal, which is expreſſed by Tranſgreſſion and perverſeneſſe, ſignifie in their Primative ſenſe, rather moleſtation, grief, wrong, violent ſtrength, injury, miſery, then ſin; and ſo they are to be taken in this place.

Secondly, they ſignifie paſſively, and ſo the meaning is not actively, that they do no evil, or wrong, or violence, or moleſtation to others, but that others ſhall not do any thing to them; or that if they do, God will not ſo ſee it as to approve of it, but will ſhew himſelf in their defence, by way of oppoſition, to the puniſhment of thoſe that do oppoſe them, to oppreſſe them, Pſal. 105. 14, 15.

Thirdly and laſtly, the words may be expounded, either of the time paſt, preſent or to come, as if he had ſaid, God neither hath, nor can, nor will give up his people to the wicked will of their enemies, becauſe he loves them, and becauſe, ſhould he deſert them, and give them over to their enemies hands, they would exalt themſelves, not onely above his people, but againſt himſelf, and would break out into blaſphemous brags of themſelves, and reproaches of him, Iſa. 36. Exod. 32. 12.

V. 21. the ſhout] That is, a valorous ſhout of a puiſſant King and his people, encouraging each other to the Battel; and a victorious ſhout, as having obtained the victory in the battel,

V. 22. an Unicorne] Or, Licorne as pliny calleth him, lib. 8. cap. 21. is a very ſtrong beaſt, Job 39. 10, 11. and armed with a dangerous weapon againſt any adverſary, Deut 33. 17. There are two kinds of Unicorns, the one is called Rhinoceros, which hath an horn on his noſe, Plin. Hiſt. l. 8. c. 20. the other on his head, Ibid. c. 21.

V. 23. againſt Jacob] Or, in Iſrael. None againſt Iſrael ſhall be of force, or take effect to do the poſterity of Jacob, or Iſrael any hurt; or none in Jacob, or among the poſterity of Jacob ſhall either need, or uſe ſuch unlawful meanes, either of telling, or fore-telling, or of effecting any thing by deviliſh arts or meanes, as the Gentiles do; ſince they ſhall have God to conſult with, and ready both to counſel them in doubtfull caſes, and to defend them againſt all their enemies.

What hath God wrought] Men ſhall by way of wonder at Gods doing on their behalf, at this time, ask, What hath God wrought?

V. 27. another place] It it an old ſuperſtition to aſcribe the efficacy of religious ſervices to places, and to think that Gods preſence or power, admits of any local limitation, ſo that he is not preſent, or favourable, or powerful, as well in one place as another.

CHAP. XXIV.

Verſ. 1. AS at other times] His manner was till now to ſeek after enchantments; and when he turned from them to ſeek the true God; his ſervice it is like had a ſmack of his old ſuperſtition, in the number of Altars, and ſacrifices, in their ſcite or poſture towards the points of heaven, in his geſtures and ſet forms of words.

towards the wilderneſſe] Where the Iſraelites were encamped.

V. 2 the Spirit of God] That is, an inſpiration of prophecy, which is the operation and gift of Gods Spirit; for in ſuch matters God may, and doth many times reveal himſelf to wicked men, to whom any but ſaving graces may be imparted. Annot. on Chap. 22. 9. Joh. 11. 15.

V. 4. viſion] Revelations by viſions, are properly ſuch as are when their eyes are open or awake, and revelations by dreams, when their eyes are ſhut or aſleep; and yet thoſe dreams may be called viſions of the ſoul, when the eyes of the body are cloſed.

eyes open] Heb. who had his eyes ſhut, but now open. This may be meant literally of the eyes of his body, according to the former Note; or figuratively of the eyes of his mind, which (though before this they were ſhut, ſeeing nothing at all of ſuch future events) might be awake, albeit he was in a trance, as one aſleep, Gen 15. 12. Dan. 8. 17. 18. &c.

V. 5. thy Tabernacles] By theſe two words, Tents, Tabernacles, are underſtood moveable houſes; but the latter in the Original, imports a vicinity, or neerneſſe of abode.

V. 6. Lign-aloes] Or the aloes trees; an odoriferous and ſweet ſmelling wood, or tree, growing in Arabia, and India. See Pſal. 45. 8.

as Cedar-trees] Commendable for their ſtrength and growth, by the abundance of ſap, in reſpect whereof they are called the trees of the Lord, and are ſaid to be planted by him, Pſal. 104. 16. for things eminent in their kinde are aſcribed to him. See Pſal. 104. 16. becauſe he is moſt worthy of ſuch.

V. 7. pour the water] Plenty of water is here promiſed; and that is a great bleſſing on mans habitation, Pſal. 1. 3, and 23. 2.

many waters] By waters may be underſtood people, as the word is expounded, Revel. 17. 15. and his ſeed may be ſaid to be in many waters, to note the numerous increaſe of it; according to the ſpawn, which is the ſeed of fiſhes in the waters.

his King ſhall be higher then Agag] Or, taken away for Agag; and ſo it is underſtood of Saul, from whom the Kingdom was rent for ſparing Agag, whom by the Lords command he ſhould have killed, 1 Sam. 15. 9, 10, 11.

Agag] That was the ordinary name of the Kings of the Amalekites, as Pharaoh of the Egyptians; and their Kingdom then moſt flouriſhed. See on Eſther 3. 1.

V. 9. who ſhall ſtirre] See Annot. on Gen. 49. 9.

V. 17. I ſhall ſee him, but not now] This prophecy is of Chriſt his coming in the fleſh, whom Balaam foreſeeth that he ſhall ſee him, but not now, ſaith he, not in this life, and not till Balaam riſe again, and Chriſt come down again: or he propheſieth this in the perſon of poſterity, in reſpect unto the wiſe men (of his profeſſion) of the Eaſt, who came from the Eaſt to worſhip Chriſt, Matth. 2. 2.

not nigh] Neither of his comings are nigh, but afar off.

a ſtar] Meaning Chriſt; at his firſt appearance he ſeemed little, like the ſtar, Matth. 2. 2. which brought the tidings of his coming Matth. 2. 2. though glorious, Revel. 22. 16. but afterward his glory increaſed to the brightneſſe of the Sun, Mal. 4. 2.

Scepter] See Annot. on Gen. 49. 10.

corners of Moab] That is, from one ſide to another, round about; as the houſe ſupplanted in the four corners, is utterly ruined, Job. 1. 19. Some apply this to Davids ſubduing the Moabites and Idumeans, 1 Sam. 8. whereof afterward: but it reacheth far beyond his time, to the prevailing of the Chriſtian Religion, over Pagan opinions and people.

of Sheth] The word may be rendred, thoſe who are behind; that is when Balaam turned his face toward Iſrael, verſ. 1. the Eaſtern people were behind him, as the Amonites, and Midianites, &c. but if we take Seth for a proper name, as Gen. 4. 25. viz. for the third ſon of Adam Abel being ſlain, the poſterity of Cain drowned; by Seth may be underſtood all the race of Adam; but then the word deſtroy, belonging to the wicked, muſt limit the word all, only to all the ungodly of the world, or to the world of the ungodly, eſpecially of the Edomites, 1 King. 11 15.

V. 18. Seir alſo] Edom and Seir were both names of Eſau and his poſterity, and of his Countrey: and he was called Seir, becauſe he was hairy, See on Gen. 25. 30. as the word Sehhir, or Segnir ſignifieth; In that the commination is made in both his names, it imports aſſurance of the thing: and if we take the words with any other, but a verbal diſtinction, it may be this; by Edom may be meant the whole Countrey of Eſau; and by Seir, the place of his dwelling, his Court where he kept his reſidence; and ſo the Prophecy imports the total conqueſt over the Edomites, ſince not ſo much as the Court or Palace of Edom, which was moſt ſtrongly fortified, and carefully kept, ſhould keep out the power of Iſrael or Jacob; which was litterally fulfilled by David, 1 Chron. 18. 13. but is chiefly to be underſtood in a ſpiritual ſence, for a compleat victory of the Iſrael of God over all their enemies.

V. 19. of the city] The City of Seir, or ſome other City, or Cities of note, which were adverſe to the people of God; over whom Chriſts Kingdom, ſhall univerſally and glorioſly triumph.

V. 20. firſt of the Nations] The Amalakites firſt made war againſt Iſrael, Exod. 17. 8. 1 Sam. 15. 1. Or Amalek was a principal Nation.

V. 21. the Kenites] Were a people mingled with the Amalekites, 1 Sam. 15 6.

V. 22. the Kenite] Or, Kain; which may either be the name of ſome famous progenitour, of whom the Kenites deſcended; or of ſome City of note where they dwelt; ſome take it to be meant of the poſterity of Jethro, Judg. 4. 11.

Aſhur] That is, the Aſſyrian ſhall carry the Kenites, and other people captives, as well as the Iſraelites; which came to paſs, when Salmanaſe King of Aſſyria carried the Ten Tribes away into his Countrey, in the dayes of Hoſhea, 2 King. 17. 6. among whom the Kenites dwelt.

V. 23. who ſhall live when] The calamity ſhall be ſo great, that a few ſhall ſurvive it; or, who ſhall deſire to live, when ſuch a deſolation ſhall come upon ſo many?

V. 24. Chittim] Was the grand-child of Japhet; a people deſcended from him is here meant, planted in Greece and Italy: for Alexander the Greek Monarch, who is ſaid to come out of the land of Chittim, 1 Mac. 1. 1. ſubdued the Aſſyrians and their ſucceſſours, the Medes and Perſians; and the Romanes, who are Italians, often infeſted them, and finally overthrew them by the wars of Veſpaſian the Emperour, and Titus his ſon: whereof ſee Joſephus of the wars of the Jews, eſpecially the ſeventh Book. See on Dan. 11. 30.

Heber] The poſterity of Heber, that is, the Hebrews, againſt whom the Greeks warred, and for a time prevailed: ſee Joſeph. Antiq. l. 11, cap. 8.

V. 24. he ſhall periſh] Some expound it of the Jews, others of the deſcendents or off-ſpring of Chittim, which is moſt like: for the Grecian Empire is overthrown by the Romane, and the Romane which came from Chittim, as the Grecian did, is much impaired by the Papacy, and that uſurping State and power is in a great part ruined, and the ruine of it ſhall be further accompliſhed, 2 Theſſ. 2. 8.

V. 25. to his place] Homeward, But was killed in the way among the Midianites, Chap. 31. 8.

CHAP. XXV.

Verſ. 1. SHittim] This was the fourty ſecond, and laſt Manſion or reſting place of the Iſraelites, in their paſſage toward Canaan out of Egypt. Sixtie furlongs from Jordan.

daughters of Moab] And of Midian alſo, verſ. 17. and 18.

V. 3. Baal-Peor] Baal of the Idol of the Moabites, which was on the hill Peor, or Phegnor, Chap. 23. 28. ſo called from the manner of the Idol, worſhipped upon that mountain; and the manner was ſuch, that in it, both ſpirituall and carnall uncleanneſs met together, as vice and impudence. Heb. the God of opening, or nakedneſſe: by which is meant the abominable and ſhameleſs Idolatry of Priapus, Iſid. Etymol. l. 8. c. 11.

V. 4. heads] The capital offenders in that Treſpaſs; or the chief Rulers, who gave way to ſuch wickedneſs.

againſt the Sun] Openly, in the (ſight of all, as Sauls ſonnes 2. Sam 21. 8.) for example or caution or warning to the reſt; for things that are ſo done, are ſaid in the Hebrew phraſe, to be done in the ſight of the Sun. See 2 Sam. 12. 11.

V. 5. Slay you every one] Let him ſee execution done on them that are under his charge. See the like Exod. 32. 27.

V. 6. one of the children] Named Zimri, verſ. 14.

Midianitiſh woman] For fleſhly abuſe; which ſheweth that ſpiritual and corporal whoredom are ſiſter ſins.

weeping] For the offence and puniſhment in the matter of Baal-Peor, verſ. 3.

V. 9. twenty and four thouſand] Of theſe, twenty and three thouſand died by the immediate hand of God, and thoſe are reckoned to twenty three thouſand, who fell in one day, 1. Cor. 10. 8. but beſides theſe, there was execution done upon others, verſ. 4, 5. which might make up another thouſand; and though it be ſaid, that 24. thouſand died of the Plague, the word rendred Plague; by the beſt Interpreters of the Original, may be read, ſtroke, there dyed of that ſtroke of Divine juſtice (for all was either of Gods bidding or his doing) twenty four thouſand; the leſſer number taken away by mans hand caſt into the greater number, and ſo making up the total of twenty four thouſand, there is rather a ſubordination then a contradiction, for the leſſer number is contained in the greater.

V. 11. that I conſumed not] Zeal of juſtice in the cauſe of God, is a means to procure Gods mercy to man.

V. 13. everlaſting Prieſt-hood] The word everlaſting, as the words for ever, when applyed to the Ceremonial Law, and Prieſt-hood, import not either a duration of time without end, or a perpetuity without interruption; for both the Law and Prieſt-hood expired, when Chriſt, the end of both, (prefigured by them) was exhibited, but a long continuance of time; and ſo it was in the High-prieſt-hood of Phinehas. The prieſt-hood of Phineas was an everlaſting prieſthood, for though for the fayling of ſome of his ſucceſſours it paſſed over Elies familie of the line of Ithamar and there continued for 3 or 4 ſucceſſours. See on 1 Sam. 1. 3. yet afterward Elies race being corrupted, and the other reformed, it returned to the poſterity of Phinehas again; which return began in Davids time who equally accepted of Abiathar of the poſterity of Eli, & of Zadok of the ſtock of Phinehas (2 Sam. 15. 35. and 1 Chron. 15. 11.) and was protected by Solomon when he put down Abiathar, and ſet up Zadok in his ſtead, 1 King. 2. 11. & thus belonging to the familie of Phineas the ſon of Eleazar to whoſe Family when it was reſtored, it there continued (as ſome make the meaſure) to the coming of Chriſt; but certainly it held out a great while, whether we conſider the perſon of Phinehas, who was yet alive at the Battel betwixt the Benjamites, and the reſt of the Iſraelites, Judg. 20. 28. or his poſterity, who had a ſucceſſion of the Prieſt-hood, (except for the interpoſition for-mentioned) even after the captivity, Ezra. 7. 1, &c. until, or very neer the approach of our Evangelical High-Prieſt after the order of Melchiſedec (as our Saviour is called, Heb. 5. 6.) See on Chap. 20. verſ. 16. 1. Chap. 6. 4.

V. 17. vex the Midianites] Take them for your enemies, and uſe them as enemies, becauſe they cunningly plotted to inſnare you in ſin, and to bring you to ruine; he ſaith not ſo of the Moabites, (though they were very faulty in corrupting the Iſraelites, ver. 2 which may be either in favour to Lot, (Deut. 2. 9. 19.) or becauſe Chriſt was to come of Ruth a Moabiteſs; or becauſe they were not ſo full of malignity as the Midianites were, yet afterwards the Moabites never the better for any favour ſhewed them, were ſeverely chaſtiſed by David, 2. Sam. 8. 1.

V. 18. beguiled you] cauſing you to commit both corporal and ſpiritual fornication by Balaams councel, Chap. 31. 16. Rev. 2. 14.

CHAP. XXVI.

Verſ. 1. After the plague] Which came upon them for their double pollution, by fornication, and Idolatry, noted in the precedent Chapter. v. 2.

V. 2. Take the ſum] This third numbering of the people, (now in the limits of the Land of promiſe) was for more commodious diſtribution and diſpoſal of them in their ſeveral portions. See ver. 53. 54. and Chap. 1. 2.

V. 3. neer Jericho] Where the River in its courſe turneth towards Jericho. See on Chap. 22. 1.

V. 10. a ſign] Or monument of their wickedneſſe and Gods juſtice, for warning to others. Chap. 13. 38.

V. 11. died not] Neither by the fall of fire from heaven above, nor by the opening of the earth below; being either not guilty of their fathers tranſgreſſion, or repenting of that guilt to their preſervation. See 1 Chron. 6. 22.

V. 12. The ſons of Simeon] Gen. 46. 10. & Exod. 6. 15. there are ſix ſons of Simeon numbered; but in this place, as alſo 1 Chr. 4. 24. onely five are named, for Obed the ſixth is omitted, whereof the reaſon was, becauſe he died without iſſue; and ſo without a Familie and a portion in the Land of Canaan. Gen. 38. 11. & 46. 12.

V. 19. in the land of Canaan] Where Jacob ſojourned before he went into Egypt Gen. 37. 1.

V. 36. Eran, or Edan] As the name is varied, by reaſon of the ſimilitude of the two Hebrew letters. Daleth and Reſh.

V. 38. The ſonns of Benjamin] They were ten, Gen. 46. 21. of whom divers are here left out becauſe perhaps they dyed, onely five are mentioned; it is like the reſt were dead without iſſue, or their poſterity did not long continue. See on Gen. 46. 27.

V. 54. Thou] That is, not Moſes for he lived not to divide the land on the other ſide of Jordan; but he to whom the government of the people was committed after his deceaſe, that was Joſhua.

V. 56. according to the lot] Verſ. 54 it is ſaid, To many thou ſhalt give the more inheritance, and to few thou ſhalt give the leſſe inheritance; which ſheweth that the partition of the land was to be made with proportion to the people: how then was it to be divided by lots? Anſw. Part of the land on the one ſide Jordan Moſes divided, (without lot.) betwixt the children of Reuben and Gad, and the half Tribe of Manaſſeh, beyond Jordan to them that come of Egypt, Num. 32. 4, 5. The other part was by Geometrical skill (as Joſephus obſerveth, Antiq. lib. 5. cap. 1.) to be divided into nine parts and an half; which parts ſome conceive to have been made Geometrically equal, yet ſo as that according to the fruitfulneſſe or unfruitfulneſſe of the ground, the proportion was more or leſſe; whence Benjamin had more company and leſſe land then other Tribes; becauſe his portion fell in a more fertill ſoyl: but it may be the parts were unequally divided, & made proportionable to the Tribes, that is, for the Tribes of the greateſt number the greateſt proportion, & ſo deſcending by leſſe meaſure to the leaſt, according to the number of the Tribes, & the goodneſs of the ground; after this diviſion, equal or unequal, the lots were caſt, and each Tribe having taken his lot, if the diviſion were in two unequal parts (unequal among themſelves, but equal according to the proportion of the Tribes (then it was both by proportion and by lot alſo, the Lord directing the lot to light according to the proportinable diviſion before mentioned; but if the parts were equal, then if the lots being caſt, and any one had leſs then ſufficient, there was an addition made by eſtimation without lot, as to the children of Joſeph, Joſh. 17. ſo Judah having a large proportion partly by the favour of his lot, and partly by valour making himſelf more room by removing and rooting out the Canaanites, parted with ſome of his portion to the tribe of Simeon which needed an augumentation of meaſure in regard of their number. Or taking the firſt aſſignation of portions (after the generall and Geometrical diviſion of the land) to be by lot, the ſubdiviſion into families might be by particular eſtimation and proportion, according to verſ. 54. and by that the meaſure being made as equal as might be, if yet any were not pleaſed to take his part by ſuch a partition according to anothers diſcretion and appointment, they might have recourſe to lots again and ſo take their ſhare by the diſpoſition of Gods providence, Prov. 16. 33. and ſo be quiet, occaſion of ſtrife being by that meanes cut off, Prov. 18. 18. Now though the diviſion at firſt were made into nine parts and an half (as hath been ſaid) yet the particular poſſeſſion and acceptation of theſe parts was put off for ſome yeares; either becauſe the firſt diviſion was not thought, for want of fidelity or skill, to be rightly made, or becauſe the Canaanites were not preſently driven out from among them; there was afterward another ſurveigh and partition made into ſeven parts, for there were ſeven Tribes which yet had not received their inheritance, and it was brought to Joſhua in a book, concerning which he was by lot to make a diſtribution among the Tribes, which yet were not accommodated to their content, whereof ſee Joſh. 18. 6, 8, 9, 10.

V. 57. of the Levites] The ſons of Levi were eleven, Exod. 6. 17, 18, 19. 1 Chr. 23. but here onely eight of the principal Families are mentioned, the reſt might be omitted, becauſe the Levites had not ſeveral portions in the land of Canaan, as the other Tribes had,

V. 62. from a moneth old] The other Tribes were reckoned from twenty yeares old and upwards, as ſerviceable for the wars, from which the Levites were exempt; and they were reckoned from a moneth old, becauſe they were taken in ſtead of the firſt born, who at that age were offered unto the Lord. See Annot. on Chap. 3. 15. the number of the Levites is more here by a thouſand then Chap. 3. 39.

V. 65. not a man] Wherein the verity of Gods prediction and commination was manifeſted. Chap. 14. 28. but it is to be underſtood.

ſave Caleb] That is, of the Tribes among whom the land of Canaan was to be divided, of whom not a man was left ſave Caleb and Joſua; but of the Levites there remained Moſes, Eleazer, Ithamar, and it may be ſome more of thoſe who were numbered at Mount Sinai.

CHAP. XXVII.

Verſ. 1. D*aughters of*] Their names are ſet down, Chap. 36. 11. in another order then here, here according to their age, there according to their time and order in marriage.

V. 2. at the door of the Tabernacle] Neer unto the door of the Tabernacle was Moſes his Tent, that the Elders of the Tribes aſſembled to conſult with Moſes and determine of matters of moment; or in fair weather they might meet in the court of the Tabernacle, neer the door of it.

V. 3. in his own ſin] His own ſin is oppoſed to the ſin of Korah, which was not onely his own, that is, not confined to himſelf by his own ſufferings, but had a malignant and deadly operation upon others for his ſake; ſuch a ſin did not Zelophehad their Father commit; he had his part in the common fault of murmuring upon the report of the Spies, coming out of Canaan, and in that he dyed, and with him dyed the puniſhment of his ſin, which was ſo his own, that his poſterity ſhould not ſuffer for that fault, Deut. 1. 39.

V. 11. Statute of judgement] According to which judgement ſhall be given in all caſes of like kind in time to come. See Chap. 35. 29. & 36. 6.

V. 12. mount Abarim] Abarim is a word of the plural number, and it is a continuation of divers hills together, Chap. 33. 47 whereof the tops or higher parts had ſeveral names; as Nebo, from whence Moſes had his proſpect into the land of Canaan; Sinai, from whence the law was given; Piſgah, where Balak, and Balaam offered ſacrifice; Phegnor, where the abominable Idol of the Moabites was worſhipped; whereof ſee Chap. 25. 3.

V. 13. gathered unto thy people] See on Gen. 25. 8. on the top of the Mount Moſes muſt die, not among the Iſraelites, leſt they who honoured him ſometimes too little, being alive, ſhould honour him at any time too much, when he was dead. Why he was not ſuffered to paſs over Jordan into Canaan, ſee Chap. 20 12.

V. 14. for ye rebelled] That is, obeyed not; for rebellion is put for the contrary to obedience, whether it be with contumacie or not. See Eſa. 1. 19, 10.

waters of Meribah,] There were two Meribahs, the one mentioned, Exod. 17. 7. where the waters which came out of the rock at Horeb, are called the waters of Meribah, becauſe of the chiding of the people for want of water; for Meribah ſignifieth chiding or ſtrife: at that Meribah Moſes and Aaron are not charged with any diſobedience, but at the other (which here and Num. 20. 12. for diſtinction ſake is called Meribah in Kadeſh) they are blamed. What their fault was in particular, ſee Annot. on Chap. 20. 10.

V. 16. God of the ſpirits] Who is the Father of Spirits, Heb. 12. 9. and therefore beſt able to judge whoſe ſpirit is moſt fitly qualified for the office of a Captain, Conductor, or Governour of ſo great a people; and who can give him a ſpirit anſwerable to ſo great a charge.

V. 18. Joſhua] Moſes had ſons, yet of them God chuſeth none to ſucceed their father; happly becauſe they were Midianites by the mothers ſide, and not by both Parents Hebrews, as Joſhua was; and becauſe God foreſaw the detection of Moſes poſterity, Judg. 18. 30. where we read of Micahs graven Image of the Tribe of Dan, and of the Idolatrous and ſuperſtitious ſervice of that Idol by Levites of the poſterity of Moſes, for ſo were Jonathan and Gerſhom; Jonathan, is called in the Text forecited, the ſon of Manaſſeh; but as ſome rather read, Moſes, ſuppoſing the Jews inſerted the letter Nun to make the word Manaſſeh, to preſerve the honour of Moſes; and in Arias Montanus, the letter Nun is ſet above the line, and the letters directly in the line without pricks, are the ſame with the name Moſes.

lay thine hand] By which he reſigned up his office unto him; and withall, no doubt, he prayed to God to put his Spirit upon him, whence is that ſaying of the conſecrating of Joſhua, Deut. 34. 9.

V. 20. Put ſome of thine honour] Uſe him no more as a miniſter, or ſervant, nor let the people eſteem of him as ſuch a one; but commend him to the people as meet for the office, and appointed thereunto by God, and give up thine authority to him, that he may be honoured as thy ſucceſſour, though not in the ſame degree of honour which thou haſt had, (for Moſes knew the mind of God immediately, but Joſhua was to learn of the High Prieſt, v. 21. ſee Deut. 34. 10.) for ſome of it wil be ſufficient to qualifie him both for execution of his charge, and acceptation with his people.

V. 21 Urim] 1. Sam. 23. 9. See on Exod. 28. 30.

his word] That is, Eleazer the Prieſt, having inquired of the Lord with the breſt-plate of Urim and Thummim.

CHAP. XXVIII.

Verſ. 2. MY offering] Many of the ordinances for Gods ſolemn ſervice had been intermitted many yeares in the Wilderneſſe which now are repeated; both becauſe the generation of men to whom they were firſt given, were now dead, and becauſe now, being ready to enter into the Land of Canaan, they were upon neerer apprehenſion of the poſſeſſion of Gods promiſe, to be the more careful to keep his commandments.

my bread] He meaneth his ſacrifices and oblations, becauſe they ſerved not onely for his honour, but for the ſuſtenance of his ſervants, whereof bread is the chief, and the Shew-bread the chief bread. See on Lev. 3. 11.

V. 3. This is the offering] In the twenty third of Levit. the Feaſts were preſcribed, but not the ſacrifices belonging to them; here the ſacrifices are particularly appointed.

two lambs] Whereof ſee Exod. 29. 48, &c.

V. 5. meat-offerings] Which was an acceſſory ſacrifice to the burnt-offering, ſee Chap. 15. 4.

V. 6. in Mount Sinai] Untill they came thither (which was 38 years after their departure out of Egypt) they offered no ſuch ſacrifices; and (as ſome ſay) none at all, of this daily ſacrifice: ſee Lev. 9. 16.

V. 7. ſtrong wine] The word Shechar, here uſed, whence cometh the word Sicera, is uſually taken for ſtrong drink, as diſtinguiſhed from Wine; but here it is taken for Wine, for no ſtrong drink, but wine was uſed in Oblations.

V. 9. On the Sabbath day] In the morning of the Sabbath were offered three Lambes; two for the Sabbath, and one for the daily ſacrifice.

V. 10. beſide the continuall] Sacrifice was to be offered unto God day by day, both morning and evening, verſ. 3. but on the Sabbath more was to be done, and nothing of the weekly devotion to be left undone.

V. 11. beginning of] The new moons are not numbered among the Feaſts, Levit. 23. for ſome reaſon which is not revealed; yet they are ſufficiently authorized by this Text, and by Num. 10. 10. and they were obſerved for gratefull remembrance of Gods Goverment of the world, as the Sabbath is a remembrance of the worlds creation. See on 1 Sam. 20. 5.

V. 13. A ſeveral tenth deal] a tenth of tenth, as ſome render the words, and expound them to be an Omer, the tenth part of an ephah, which Ephah is the tenth part of another meaſure, called in Hebrew Cor. See on 1 King. 4. 22. & Ezek. 45. 1.

V. 14. drink offering] That is, the offering of wine, which yet was not to be drunk, but poured out upon the ſacrifice.

V. 15. ſin-offering] That is, for the ſin of the people in generall.

V. 17. in the fifteenth day] Which was the day of eating the Lamb, for it was killed on the fourteenth day between two evenings: ſee Exod. 12. 6. and with the latter evening began the fifteenth day, when it was to be eaten at night, without reſervation of any part of it untill the morning.

V. 23. is the morning] The like proportion is to be underſtood for the evening, though it be not expreſſed; becauſe it is not to be doubted but it was to be anſwerable to the morning, but of the morning there might be doubt, becauſe in the morning divers other ſacrifices were to be offered.

V. 24. continual burnt-offering] That is, the daily Sacrifice.

V. 26. of the firſt-fruits] That is, all the Feaſt of Pentecoſt, when cakes or loaves made of the firſt ripe fruits were offered.

after your weeks] Counting ſeven weeks, or fifty dayes from the Paſſeover to Whitſontide, as Lev. 23. 15. which was called the Feaſt of Weeks, Exod. 34. 22. becauſe it was to be ſeven weeks after the Paſſeover.

V. 27. ye ſhall offer] The ſame ſacrifices are appointed for the Feaſt of Pentecoſt, which were offered at the Paſſeover. See ver. 19.

V. 31. without blemiſh] Whatſoever was offered to God muſt be of the beſt; the beaſts without blemiſh; the flour fine and not courſe, ſweet and not muſty; the drink not ſower, nor the oyl with dregs: all betokening the purity and perfection of him of whom they were types, to wit, Jeſus Chriſt our propitiatory *S*acrifice, and *S*aviour, and beſeeming the excellency of him to whom they were offered. See Mal. 1. 8. 14.

blowing the Trumpets] The Hebrews account their moneth, (making the firſt day of the new moon the firſt day of the moneth) and in the new moon the trumpet was to be blown, Num. 10. 10. Pſal. 81. 3. eſpecially in this moneth, wherein (beſides this Feaſt) was the Feaſt of expiation v. 7. the Feaſt of Tabernacles, v. 12. at which the people were aſſembled by the ſound of the Trumpet; and this Feaſt of Trumpets was inſtituted, and ſo called in memorial of the giving of the Law at mount Sinai, with the ſhrill and dreadful ſound of a trumpet, Exod. 19. 19. See Annot. on Lev. 23. 24.

V. 6. his meat-offering] His in the maſculine gender, becauſe the offering was a male without blemiſh.

V. 7. afflict your ſoules] This is on the Feaſt of expiation; whereof ſee Lev. 23. 27.

V. 11. continual burnt-offering] That is offered every morning, and every evening. See Chap. 28. 29.

V. 12. fifteenth day] That is, The Feaſt of Tabernacles celebrated the fifteenth day of the moneth Tizri; ſee verſ. 1. and on Lev. 22. 34.

V. 13. thirteen The] number of the beaſts are increaſed becauſe of the ſolemnity of the Feaſt, being a memoriall of the peoples ſafe protection thoſe fourty yeares in the deſart, and becauſe the yearly increaſe being come in, they had both the more cauſe, and the more ſtore for the excerciſe of religious liberality, Deut. 16. 13, 15.

V. 17. ſecond day] Of the Feaſt of Tabernacles.

V. 18. after the manner] That is, according to the ceremonies appointed, v. 14. 15. & Chap. 28. 14. ſo alſo ver. 21, 24, 27, 30, 33, 37.

V. 32. on the ſeventh day ſeven bullocks] From thirteen young bullocks, ver. 12. every day was one abated untill the ſeventh, and ſeven muſt then be offered, and no fewer, beſides other oblations offered in a conſtant and certain number.

Verſ. 2. V*Ow a vow*] Of the conditions of a lawful vow, ſee Annot. on Gen. 28. 20.

V. 3. in her fathers houſe] So in his houſe, as to be under his government, and not diſpoſed of in marriage; and what is ſaid of a young maid, is to be underſtood of a boy under age at his Fathers diſpoſal; and as fathers, ſo mothers when the father is dead, and when both are dead, other governours to whom children in their minority are committed, are by the reaſon of the Law comprehended in it.

V. 4. hold his peace] Silence in this caſe implyeth a conſent: Severſ. 14.

V. 5. ſhall forgive her] So ver. 8. 12. which ſheweth that the Lord is indulgent to well diſpoſed perſons, though there be a mixture of inconſideration, or errour, with their good meaning.

V. 10. husbands houſe] That is, while her husband was alive.

V. 13. Oath] To afflict her ſoul by abſtinence and faſting, which though it be particularly mentioned, oathes concerning other matters are in like manner ratified or diſannulled under the general terms, verſ. 5, 8, 10, 12.

V. 14. from day to day] He ſhould allow or diſallow the ſame day he firſt heareth them, as verſ. 8. as the latter end of the verſe ſheweth; but if he held his peace from day to day, he more and more confirmed and eſtabliſhed them.

V. 15. bear her iniquity] That is, the guilt which would have been imputed to her, if ſhe had of her own accord tranſgreſſed by her breach of vow, (for any good or lawful thing) ſhall be imputed unto him, who (without juſt cauſe) hindered the performance thereof; eſpecially if he did not diſallow it the ſame day it was made, but ſome dayes after: See ver. 5. This ſheweth that if the parents will not permit the performance of the vow, being in their own power to hinder it, they who have vowed being under their power muſt ſubmit to their pleaſure; but if it be of a a thing within the power of them who thus vow, and they can perform it privately without offence to their Governours, they muſt perform it.

V. 16. her fathers houſe] See Annot. on verſ. 3.

CHAP. XXXI.

Verſ. 2. G*athered unto thy people*] See Annot. on Chap. 27 13.

V. 3. avenge the Lord] As he had commanded, Chap. 25. 17, 18. declaring alſo that the injury done againſt his people, is done againſt himſelf; and as God ſhewed himſelf a preſerver of his people, in appointing a revenge in their names; ſo Moſes required that they ſhould take up arms, not ſo much for their own cauſe, as for Gods, who was not leſſe diſhonoured, then the people were indangered by their ſin.

V. 6. and Phinehas] Becauſe of the great zeal he bare to the Lord, Chap. 25. 7. yet though Joſhua be not mentioned, it is probable that he was General of the Army, and not Phinehas; who yet in the affaires of God, and the holy things of the Tabernacle had moſt to do.

with the holy inſtruments] The Ark, with the Tables of the Law, the Cherubims and Mercy-ſeat; for theſe (as the Heathens brought their Idols to the Battel) the Jews carried with them when they went to war, Joſ. 6. 9. 1 Sam. 4. 4. and 14. 18. as the remembrances of Gods eſpecial preſence, and incentives of courage to fight for his cauſe; this was when the War was undertaken with command or allowance from God, otherwiſe the Prieſts were not permitted to carry the Ark out of the Camp to Battel with the enemy, Chap. 14. 44.

and the Trumpets] The two ſilver Trumpets, whereof See Chap. 10. 2.

all the males] But ſuch as ſaved themſelves by flight; who running for refuge into another Region, afterwards in the time of Gideon returned, and vexed the Iſraelites, Judg. 6. See Deut. 20. 13. Judg. 21. 11. 1 Sam. 44. and 14. 18.

V. 7. and Zur] He was the father of the Midianitiſh woman, whom Phinehas ſlew, Chap. 25. 15, 18.

V. 8. Balaam alſo] Chap. 24. 25. he is ſaid to return to his place; that is, to his Countrey; but he either ſtaid with the Midianites in his way homeward from the King of Moab, or returned to them again from his Countrey of Syria, or Meſopotamia; howſoever it was juſt with God that he ſhould be a partner with them in puniſhment, who was their counſellour in ſin, ver. 16. See Annot on Chap. 25. 18.

V. 13. Moſes and Eleaſar] To congratulate their return with victorious revenge.

V. 17. and every woman] Women children in regard of their impotency to aſſault, or reſiſt, are uſually priviledged from the deſtruction of the ſword; yet Moſes by warrant from God might juſtly command them to be killed, ſince they are by ſin liable to his juſtice at all times, and are to give up their lives by what kind of death he pleaſeth.

V. 18. that have not known] As far as they could conjecture by their age; theſe were to be reſerved for marriage, if they would embrace the religion of the Hebrews, or for the ſervice of hand-maids: or if they had more then were needful to ſuch purpoſes, they might ſet them to ſale and make money of them.

V. 19 whoſoever hath killed] Though the war were lawfull, and taken up upon Gods own command, yet that men ſhould not have ſwift feet to ſhed blood, there is a ceremoniall uncleanneſs contracted by him that killeth, as well as by him that toucheth the party killed, Chap. 19. 14. See on 1 Chron. 22. 8.

V. 20. and purifie all] Se Annot. on ver. 23.

V. 23. abide the fire] Metals were to be purged by paſſing through the fire, and by ſprinkling the water of ſeparation upon them; other things were purified by waſhing in ordinary water.

V. 27 All the Congregation] The parts of the prey were made equal, the parties betwixt whom they were divided but very unequal, for a few Warriers had as much as all that ſtaid from the War, becauſe they did hazzard their lives in the Battel, which the others did not; afterwards David ſet down an order of diviſion of the ſpoyls of War, which was, that they that tarried with the ſtuff to watch and guard it, ſhould have an equal ſhare of the ſpoiles with thoſe that fought, 1 Sam, 30. 24. and the reaſon is, (which much varieth the caſe and courſe he reſolved on) for that ſuch as ſtay ſo neer the enemy as the carriages, are expoſed to the perill of their lives, as well as thoſe that go forth to battel; and when they have an enemy more covetous then valorous, they are in greater danger then they that manage the Warre. See on Joſ. 22. 8.

V. 28. one ſoul] That is, one perſon, as verſ. 30. See verſ. 47.

of the perſons] To wit, which were taken in Warre as well as of the other ſpoyles.

V. 29. of their half] The prey was firſt divided into two parts, the one part was for the Souldiers, the other for the reſt of the people: this tribute is of the Souldiers part or half, who (though they were but twelve thouſand) had as great a ſhare, then they that ſtaid at home and made no ſuch adventure of their perſons, as the ſouldiers did; and therefore alſo was their tribute but one of five hundred, whereas of the peoples part, verſ. 30. was taken one of fifty.

V. 40. thirty and two perſons] Taking one for every five hundred, as verſ. 28.

V. 49. not one] It is a ſtrange battel (they ſay) where no man eſcapes, but this was more ſtrange on that ſide where no man periſheth, and many are ſlain on the adverſe party, eſpecially a whole Nation on the one ſide (and that populous) being againſt twelve thouſand on the other.

V. 50. We have therefore] This was a free-offering over and beſides the tribute before impoſed, whereby the Captains acknowledge the great benefit of God in preſerving his people.

for our ſouls] Fearing (belike) that God might inflict ſome deadly judgement upon them, for ſhewing two much mercy in ſparing from death the Midianitiſh women. See ver. 15.

V. 53. had taken] Spoyles of ſuch things for themſelves as they could conveniently carry away; for that which was communicated with the multitude, was but the prey of men and beaſts, verſ. 11, 12. and for the oblation of gold, that was made by the Captaines, but the common ſouldiers kept what they caught to themſelves.

V. 54. for a memorial] A memorial that God had given them victory in battel, and that he would graciouſly accept of their oblation, and ſhew himſelf mindful of it, when they had moſt need of his aſſiſtance.

CHAP. XXXII.

Verſ. 6. S*hall ye ſit here*] By this Moſes ſheweth himſelf much moved againſt their motion, as if it ſavoured of too much love to themſelves, and too little to their brethren, and of as little belief in God, and obedience to his Word; who had given order for diviſion of the land by lot, Chap. 26. 55 & 33. 54.

V. 9. that they ſhould not] That might be their intent, who would not have the people ſhould not attempt to take poſſeſſion of the land of promiſe; at leaſt it was the event, which followed upon their falſe reports of it.

V. 11. Surely none] Others render the words, (if theſe men) as more exactly agreeing with the Original, and the beſt Tranſlations; and they take the words by a figure called Apoſiopeſis, which pathetically withholds ſome words (out of an averſion to name them) which ſhould make up the ſentence; as thus, if theſe men live to ſee and poſſeſs the land of Canaan, let not me be held a God, or to have any truth in me. See the like ſuſpenſive Oath or Proteſtation of God, Pſal. 94. laſt. in the margin. See on Gen. 14. 23.

V. 12. Kenezite] Caleb is mentioned by Moſes many times with this addition, the ſon of Jephunneh, either for diſtinction ſake, (for there was another Caleb, 1 Chron. 2. 18, 42.) or for explication of his pedigree, for which cauſe his original is fetched higher from Kenaz, who might be one of the Anceſtors of Jephunneh, whoſe Father (unleſs there were another Jephunueh, but the Scripture commonly brings him in as a Father of Caleb) was Jether, 1 Chr. 7. 38. and as he is called the ſon of Jephunneh, ſo he is named the brother of Othniel, and Othniel the ſon of Kenaz. Joſh. 15. 17. Judg. 3. 9. which is not to be underſtood in the ſtricteſt acceptation of the word Brother, as if they had both the ſame Father, becauſe in Scripture conſtantly the one is called the ſon of Kenaz, the other of Jephunneh; and that when in the ſame place both of them are ſpoken of together, as in the afore-cited place of Joſhua, and Othniel married Calebs daughter; ſee the ſame place of Joſh. and therefore they were not brethren by the ſame Father, for albeit before the Law it were not prohibited the uncle to marry his neece, yet by Moſes Law it was. See Annot. on Lev. 18. 14. ſo that rather Othniel is called Calebs younger brother,as his nephew,the ſon of Kenaz his brother,for it is not ſtrange in Scripture, to call nephewes,coſen-germans or kinſmen, brethren. See on Joſh.15.17. 1 Chron.4.13,15.

V.13. Done evil] Chiefly in murmuring, and not believing their report,who told the truth concerning the Land of Canaan, though but two for ten,that ſpake contrary to it, raiſing falſe reports, to caſt diſcouragements upon the people.

V.17. becauſe of the inhabitants] The Reubenites and Gadites,were neer to the Moabites, Idumeans and Canaanites their enemies.

V.20. before the Lord] That is, a ſetting your ſelves in his ſight,and ſincerely doing the ſervice to his glory: or, before the Lord, may be in the fore-front of the Lords Army, as is ſaid Joſh.4.12. or before the Ark, the place of the Lords eſpecial preſence. See on Joſh.1.14. & 4.13.

V.21. All of you armed] Which is not to be underſtood univerſally, for all the able Warriors of the two Tribes and an half; but that all thoſe that went ſhould go armed, and there went about forty thouſand, Joſh. 4.3. which was not half of their Military number, for the whole was one hundred and ten thouſand fighting men, Num.26. the reſt ſtayed with the women and children to guard them, and keep their portion from being ſurpriſed, and to repair ſome cities,and build others. See on Joſh.22.8.

V.22. Your poſſeſſion before the Lord] That is, the Lord will take notice of it, and will give his approbation to it, as if it had hapned to be your part by lot; yet it is probable they were to much ſet upon that portion of earth, for it is not without ſome note of their fault and puniſhment, that as they were the firſt that had their portion of inheritance aſſigned them, ſo they were the firſt that were carried captives out of their land,1 Chron.5.25,26.

V.23. Your ſin will] That is, the puniſhment of your ſin, as chap 16.26.

V.26. in the cities of Gilead] In them chiefly, not only, but in other Cities alſo of the Reubenites, Gadites, and half Tribe of Manaſſeh.

V.29. Ye ſhall give them] It was at the Lords diſpoſal how the land ſhould be divided; yet that this occaſion might make no diviſion nor emulation among the Tribes, he maketh the people parties to the grant of their requeſt; as before,ver.22.

V.30. They ſhall have] That is, if they will not perform their promiſe, you ſhall not give them Gilead; but you ſhal make them go over Jordan, and to fight for portions for themſelves againſt their and your enemies.

V.31. As the Lord hath ſaid] That is attributed to the Lord,which his Meſſengers ſpeaketh; and therefore they were the more like to reſt contented with his reſolution.

V.33. Half the tribe of Manaſſeh] The Tribe of Manaſſeh was divided,the one half had his portion with the children of Gad and of Reuben, on the one ſide of Jordan, the other on the other ſide; and this half which was ſharer with the two Tribes forementioned,was to undergo the ſame conditions with them,Joſh.4.12.

Amorites] The Amorites dwelled on both ſides Jordan,but here he maketh mention of them that dwelt on this ſide (that is, neerer to the wilderneſs in which the people wandered) and Joſh.10.12. he ſpeaketh of them that inhabited beyond Jordan.

V.34. built] That is,re-edified or repaired thoſe places, which were built before,but were now in decay; for they tarried not there long enough to build new Cities or Towns.

V.38. their names being changed] That is,of ſome of them; partly becauſe ſome of them imported Idolatrous notions, as Nebo, Iſai.46.1. and Bamoth, Baal, Baal-meon; haply for that prohibition, Exod.23.13. See Pſal.16.4. Hoſ.2.17.. Zech.13.2. and Joſh.18.14. and partly, for remembrance of ſome remarkable thing done in them, or hapning to them, eſpecially for an honourable remembrance of thoſe who won them or were at coſt to repair them; though the old names were not quite out of uſe; as Joſh.13. Jer.48. Ezek.25.9. yet they might be changed; as Jacobs name was changed into Iſrael, yet is the name of Jacob often mentioned afterwards; the like is obſerved of Kiriath-arba,called afterward Hebron,yet ſo, that the old name was ſometimes renewed, Neh.11.25. And as there was a change of names of places,ſo thoſe names (as the name of Gilead) were taken ſometimes for a larger,ſometimes for a narrower portion of land.

V.40. Gilead to Machir] If Machir the eldeſt ſon of Manaſſeh were dead by this time, (and ſo he was, or elſe he was very old) his ſons mentioned ver.39. might be entitled to his name, as taking Machir for the iſſue of Machir; as Jacobs poſterity is called by the name of Iſrael or Jacob; and Ephraims by the name of Ephraim. See Annot. on Deut. 3.12.

V.41. Jair the ſon of Manaſſeh] He was a Manaſſite by his mother ſide, 1 Chron.2.21,22. And ſometimes the denomination was taken from the female ſex, 1 Chr.2.26,22. and Ezra 2.61. Or the ſon of Manaſſeh may be one deſcended from him, in a remote degree, as the Iſraelites are called the children of Iſrael many hundred years after Iſrael or Jacob was dead; and Chriſt is called the ſon of David,who was his progenitor a great way off,ſee Mat.1.1.ſo that every Anceſtor in a direct line is called a Father,ſo every one of the poſterity in a direct line is called a ſon. See on Joſh.13.30.

CHAP. XXXIII.

Ver. 1. UNder the hand] That is, by conduct and guidance of Moſes and Aaron,by whoſe word they were to be led,as a child held by the hands of his father.

V.2. Their journeyes] Wherein the places of the Iſraelites manſion, mentioned by particular names, given them partly by God, and partly by the people upon particular occaſions; for it is not like, that the places of the deſart had ſo many diſtinct appellations before their travels and encampings there: of divers of them there is no mention in the former ſtory, as of their encamping by the red Sea, ver.10. of their encamping at Dophkah, ver.12. at Riſſah, ver.21. and Ebronah, ver. 34. in this various wandring the condition of the Church (which is a pilgrimage) is prefigured; for thoſe who are heirs of heaven, are as younger brothers on earth, without any fixed ſeat, and as pilgrims and ſojourners are put to ſhift from place to place. See Gen.47.9. 1 Chro.29.15. 1 Pet.1.17. Heb.11.9,10,13,14.

V.3. Rameſes] A Province or country in the land of Egypt, Gen. 47.11. there was a City of that name in the utmoſt parts of Egypt,built by the Iſraelites during their ſervitude,and this was the place here ſpoken of. See on Exod.12.37.

firſt moneth] Anſwering to part of March, and firſt of April.

the morrow after] That is, after the killing of the Paſchal Lamb.

V.4. their gods] That is, their men of authoritie, or their Idols, of which their cattel killed with the murrain were ſome part,and but a part, for Egypt abounded with the multitude of Idols,upon which (of what ſort ſoever they were) God executed judgment,Exo.12.12. What is here from the 5. ver. to the 18. is in Exod.12. to the 18.

V.6. Etham] Where their guidance by the cloudy pillar is firſt mentioned. See Annot.on Exod.13.22.

V.8. Sea] That is the Red Sea, through which the Iſraelites ſafely paſſed, and in which the Egyptians were overwhelmed. Exod. 14.22.

Marah] See Annot.on Exod.15.23.

V.11. Sin] See Annot.on Exod.16.1.

V.14. Rephidim] See Exod.17.1.

V.15 wilderneſs of Sinai] See Exod.19.1.

V.16. Kibroth Hattaavah] See Num.11.34.

V.17. Hazeroth] See chap.11.35.

V.18. Rithmah] See chap 13.1.

V.38. fifth month] The Hebrew word is Ab; this month anſwereth to part of July, and to part of Auguſt.

V.39. when he dyed] Moſes dyed in the 120 year of his age, being younger then Aaron by three years; ſo Aaron dying (as here is ſaid) in his 123 year: it appeareth they died both in one year,which was the fortieth year from their departure out of Egypt.

V.45. Dibon Gad] So called,becauſe the Gadites built it,Num.32. 34. and to diſtinguiſh it from another Dibon, which the Reubenites poſſeſſed,Joſh. 13.15,17. See on Iſai.15.2.

V.47. Nebo] The name of a part of the mountains of Abarim, on which Nebo, Moſes dyed. See Annot.on chap.27.12. & Deut.32. 49,50.

V.49. Beth-jeſhimoth, even unto Abel-Shittim] Staying firſt a time at Beth-jeſhimoth, where they made one manſion, and then going to Abel-Shittim,where they made another. See on Joſh.12.13.

V.52. Pictures] Statues,or Idolatrous repreſentations,which were ſet up in their high-places to worſhip.

high-places] That is,Idolatrous Chappels,and Altars built on high hils where the Heathens celebrated their Idolatrous rites and ceremonies to their falſe gods,Deut.12.2.

V.55. Pricks in your eyes] They wil not ſpare your moſt tender parts, if you ſpare them, but with ſharpeſt weapons will prick and gore you without mercy or meaſure, if you ſuffer them to remain among you. Joſh.23.13. Judg.2.3.

CHAP. XXXIV.

Ver.2. THat is the Land] That is,the deſcription of the limits and borders of the Land,whereby the Iſraelites may know what inhabitants were to be turned out of their poſſeſſion.

V.3. Salt Sea] Sea water is generally ſalt, but this lake called the lake of Sodom, was ſo called for eſpecial ſaltneſs, by reaſon of the ſalt and ſulphureous ſprings which feed it, and from the ſhowre of ſulphur which fell upon it: It is alſo called the dead Sea,becauſe (as ſome write) it hath no fiſh or living creature in it, and that if upon an overflowing of Jordan,fiſhes be carryed into it,yet they will not live in it.

V.4. Akrabbim] Called Maalehakrabbim Joſh.15.3.

Hazar-adder] Which is counted as two places,Joſh 15.3.

V.5. River of Egypt] By which is uſually meant the River Nilus, which cannot be meant of the main River in this place,becauſe the border of Canaan did not reach ſo far, but the River called Rhinocorura, or Rhinocotura, taking its name from the City by which it runneth; or a brook or torrent, which riſing out of the mountains of Kedar, and running through the Deſart,paſſeth into the Mediterranean Sea, and in its way, coaſteth upon the Tribe of Judah and Simeon, and ſeparateth it from the wilderneſs, and the way to Egypt. See Annot.on Gen.15 ver.18.

V.6. great Sea] The Mediterranean Sea, called great, not ſimply, but in compariſon of the Salt Sea, and the ſea of Tiberias. See Annot. on ver. 3.

for your border] Not meaning that all the Sea coaſt ſhould be theirs, but that part which anſwereth to its ſituation to Mount Libanus, and mount Hor.

V.7. Hor] Which is a mountain neer Tyre and Sidon, and not that Hor in the wilderneſs,where Aaron died; for the mount on which Aaron dyed was South, or South-eaſt in reſpect of Canaan, but this here mentioned was North or North-weſt, quite oppoſite to that other. See on Deut.3.8.

V.11. Chinnereth] Which in the Goſpel is called the Lake of Geneſareth, &c.See Annot on ver. 3.

V.12. Jordan] This River is diſtinguiſhed by the meaſure of the ſtream ,and is called Jordan the leſs, until it mingle with other waters; and after that ſwelling to a greater height,and ſpreading in breadth until it run into the red Sea,it is called,Jordan the great.Joſephus of the Wars of the Jews.lib.4.cap.1.

this ſhall be your] The like limits (with a little variation (for Iſraels portion in it, was not alwayes of one meaſure) are ſet down by Ezek. chap.47. theſe are the chief limits on the North and Eaſt part of Judea; but if we take all the land together, which was poſſeſſed by all the children of Iſrael, comprehending in the compaſs the portion of the Reubenites, Gadites, and half Tribe of Manaſſeh beyond Jordan, towards the eaſt, and the Tribe of Napthali beyond the Lake of Genneſareth, towards the North: the limits of the land of Promiſe are theſe; on the North ſide it is bounded by Phenicia, Syria, Libanra, and Syria of Damaſcus; on the Eaſt ſide by Arabia; on the South ſide by the deſart of Sin, the country of Cedar or Kedar,and Egypt; and on the Weſt by the Mediterranean Sea,called the Great Sea. See other limits, Deut. 1.7.

V.13. inherit by lot] This and ver.18. agree. See the Annot. on chap 26.56. Joſ.14.2. & 15.1.

V.18 Prince of] Not the principal man of the whole Tribe,but a chief man of ſome family in his Tribe.

by inheritance] They were to take the Land in the name of the Tribes, and to diſtribute each Tribe his portion to be held by inheritance, though the diſtribution (for the moſt part) were made by Lot, Joſh.19.51.

V.21.divide] And to decide any difference that might ariſe, if any were not pleaſed with their portion.

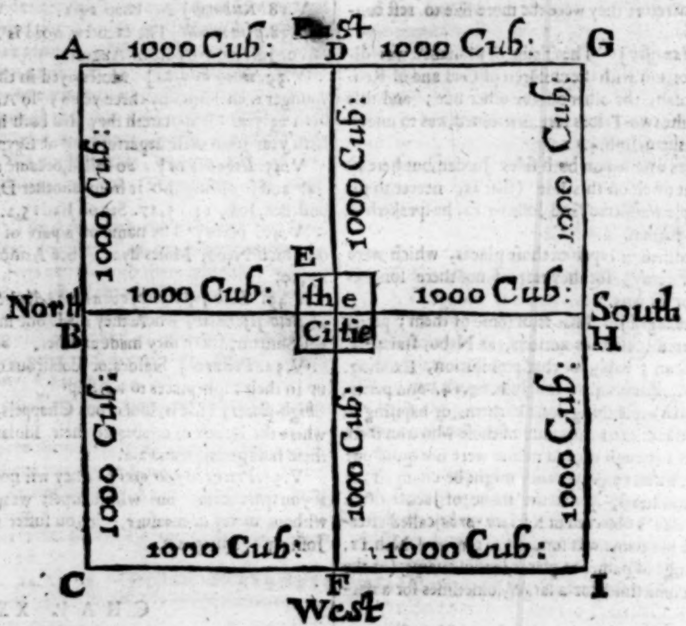
CHAP. XXXV.

Verſ. 2. UNto the Levites] By Levites here muſt be underſtood the whole Tribe of Levi, as comprehending alſo the Prieſts; becauſe they had no inheritance aſſigned them in the Land of Canaan; and they had none inheritance diſtinct and apart from the reſt of the Tribe, but were to be diſperſed throughout the Land for inſtruction of the people,and exhortation to obedience to the Law of God; and herein that malediction, Gen.49.7. was turned into an honourable bleſſing.

V.3. Cities] Fortie eight in number, ver. 7. Joſh.21.41. In one of theſe Cities for the moſt part was the Tabernacle placed, whither the Prieſts and Levites came to miniſter,as their courſe required; and that done, they returned to the Cities of their ſettled habitations and poſſeſſions, ſuch as were thoſe which are mentioned,Lev.25.32.

to dwel in] For them their wives, and children, and ſervants; yet not for them only, (though for them chiefly) for a Citie cannot well be furniſhed without men of ſeveral Arts and Occupacions,which might live among the Levites, and be ſo far partakers with them, as that they might take their houſes by way of mortgage, and hold them (if the Levites did not redeem them) until the year of Jubile. See Annot. on Lev.25.33.

V.5. two thouſand cubits] Ver.4. are mentioned but a thouſand cubits, in this two thouſand, which ſome take for the ſame meaſure, making the word Ammah, in the fourth verſe to ſignifie a paſe,and the ſame word in this verſe a cubit, (as the word Nahal in the ſame verſe, viz. Deut.2.36. in the Hebrew, is put for a brook and for a valley) and allowing to every pace two cubits. Some take the word cubit for an ordinary cubit in this verſe, and for a cubit of the Sanctuary (which is thought to be twice as much) in the precedent verſe,is brought by ſome to clear this ſeeming contradiction; others affirm, they had from the walls of the City a thouſand cubits allowed for paſture of cattel,and two thouſand cubits more for corn fields and vineyards: but the cleareſt way for avoiding this ſeeming difference is this, they had a thouſand cubits from the walls of the City out-right in length, and two thouſand in compaſs on each ſide, Eaſt, Weſt, North and South, which taken together, made up the whole compaſſe eight thouſand cubits, which may be beſt diſcerned by this Figure;



In which it plainly appeareth, that the Lines ſtretched out four ſeveral wayes from the Citie, are each of them a thouſand cubits diſtant from the City, and each ſide of the ſquare, Eaſt, Weſt, North and South, being twice ſo much in length, as the line coming from the City outward, (which is one thouſand cubits, ver.4.) muſt make up for each quarter two thouſand cubits, according to the fifth verſe; and if the form of the City and ſuburbs be circular, this proportion may be obſerved, with very little difference; for taking the ſame diameter,that is the line half way from Eaſt to Weſt, and from North to South, that is, from D to E, or from B to E, there is a thouſand cubits, which ſtretched out to a full diameter, that is,from D on the Eaſt ſide,to F on the Weſt,and from B on the North ſide,to H on the South,will make up two thouſand cubits apiece; and if theſe be drawn about with a circular line, that circle wil be about three times the length of the whole diameter; and the City being in the midſt of it, and the lines on each ſide drawne not from the Center of it, but from the wall or the outſide, the circle or circumference will be ſo much the greater, that it will ariſe to eight thouſand cubits; and ſo the whole quartered into four parts, Eaſt, Weſt, North and South, each part wil contain two thouſand Cubits, according to this verſe, without any contradiction; yea, with exact conformitie to the one thouſand cubits in the fourth verſe: and about this proportion in diſtance from the City walls, and in compaſs or circuit about them, will the Levites portion of ſuburbs be,whether the City be great or ſmall,round or ſquare,or of any other figure. See on Ezek.42.16.& 48.16.

V.6. ſix Cities of refuge] Before that there were Cities of refuge, it is like the Tabernacle was a place of refuge, and afterward the Temple, eſpecially the Altar,Exo.21.14. but they were to yeeld no refuge to a wilful murderer; who (if he took Sanctuary there) was by force to be plucked thence, as Joab was, 1 King.2.31. but for ſecuritie to the unwitting and unwilling man-ſlayer. See on Deut. 19. 2. &c.

man-ſlayer] There was no City of refuge for any other offender, but a man-ſlayer; whereof the reaſon may be, becauſe bloud-ſhed is purſued (eſpecially by thoſe who are of the ſame fleſh and blood with the man-ſlain) with moſt violent and bloody revenge, without taking leiſure to conſider the fault,as well as the fact,and the degree of it, whether it deſerve to be puniſhed with death or no. The man-ſlayer here allowed a place of protection is ſuch an one as ſlew another ignorantly and againſt his will, ver.11,15. of this chapter, and Joſh.20.3. to keep him from the rage of the purſuer, until his cauſe may judicially be heard; and the purſuer was he who was next of kin to the ſlain man, who, if the ſlayer were condemned to death, was to do, or ſee execution done upon him, ver. 19. But in what City ſhould he be tryed? Some think in the City whither he hath betaken himſelf for refuge; but it is more probable to be in the City where the man was killed, or in that which was next to the place of ſlaughter, whither he was to be brought with a ſufficient guard, and his cauſe heard before all the people, ver.12. and if he were found guilty of witting and wilful murder,he was to be given up into the hands of the next kindred of the ſlain man to be put to death; if he were cleared of ſo groſs a guilt, he was to be returned to the City of refuge, from whence he was brought, and there to continue until the High-prieſts death, before which time if he were taken out of his City by the avenger of blood, (the ſlain mans living kinſman) he might be ſlain. See on Joſh.20.2,6.

V.12. Until he ſtand] He ſhall not be put to death by anothers wrath, but upon a deliberate tryal before a competent Judg.

V.14.On this ſide Jordan] Among the Reubenites, Gadites,and half Tribe of Manaſſeh, Deut.4.41,43.

V.15. Sojourners] Who dwelt with them for a time, and were not of the ſame Religion with them; yet ſome conceive this priviledg was only for ſuch ſtrangers as were Proſelytes,or Converts to the Religion of the Hebrews. See on Lev.17.13.

V.16. Smite him] Wittingly and willingly.

V.17. and he dye] That is, preſently upon the blow; but if he roſe again and dyed not,he that ſmote him was not to be put to death, but to bear the charge of his cure until he were recovered; as Exod 21.19.

V.19. meeteth him] That is, when after a true tryal of his guilt he is preſented to his view, and put into his hands by the Magiſtrates of the City,as ver.30. then ſome hold he might, ſome that he muſt do execution upon him, not taking any ſatisfaction to take him off from a juſt revenge,ver.31.

V.22. Without enmity] Which may be reaſonably conjectured, if there were no quarrel, or falling out betwixt them before, this was a ground of preſumption,ſufficient to clear him from a malicious and murderous intention.

V.24. The Congregation ſhal judg] The Elders ſhall judg openly, and in the preſence of the Congregation,in ſuch ſort, as that they ſhall approve of the ſentence given in the cauſe.

V.25. Death of the High Prieſt] The High Prieſt was a type of Chriſt in making atonement for the people in his life time, but in this caſe (by his death reſtoring to liberty the exiled perſon, ſo that he might leave the City of refuge (if he had committed man-ſlaughter unawares) and be ſafe) he did prefigure the freedom of the redeemed of the Lord, whoſe death reduced them to the fruition of a free condition. See ver.28.

V.26 at any time] Except at the death of the High-Prieſt.

*V.*27. the Avenger of blood] That is the next of kin to him that was killed, who was to do execution, or to ſee it certainly done by another. See Annot.2.on ver.6.

*V.*29. Statute of judgment] A Law to judg man-killers,whether done of purpoſe,or unadviſedly. See chap.27.11.

*V.*33. Pollute the Land] The guilt of blood hath a diffuſive malignity, ſpreading it ſelf all about, if it be not ſought out, and purſued to puniſhment.

of him that ſhed it] Mercy to a murderer is cruelty to a Kingdom.

*V.*34. Wherein I dwel] God by his infinite immenſitie is every where,Pſal.139.7,8,9. yet he preferreth ſome perſons and places before others; and to whom, and where he gives evidence of his preſence in more favourable and familiar manner,there he may be ſaid to dwel eſpecially. See Iſa.57.15. Pſa.135.21. 1 King.9.3. Mat.18.20.

CHAP. XXXVI.

Ver. 1. OF the children of Gilead] Not thoſe who had already received their poſſeſſion in the land of Gilead,but thoſe who were yet unprovided of a portion, and were to receive it beyond Jordan, for theſe Gileadites had the ſame Gilead for their Progenitor.

*V.*4. Jubile] That was the yeer of remiſſion of debts, of releaſe of morgages,reſtoring of liberty to the exiled,&c. See Lev.25. from ver. 11. forward.

*V.*6. to whom they think beſt] Though they were reſtrained to their Tribe,and in their Tribe (as ſome reſolve) to their neer kindred, yet they were free for the choice of the particular perſon,as Gen. 24.57,58. not marrying within their degrees forbidden, and their obligation to marry within their Tribes, made them the more capable of inheritance, though they were of the weaker ſex.

Tribe of their father] This rule is made (as ſome take it) rather for women then for men; and of women,chiefly for ſuch women as had no brethren to inherit their Fathers portion; in which caſe as they muſt marry within their Tribe, (See 1 Chro.23.22.) *S*o he that was of the ſame Tribe, and neer of kin muſt marry ſuch an one, rather then one of another Tribe; otherwiſe there want not examples (and thoſe examples are no where condemned) of men marrying with women of another Tribe, ſometimes of another Nation: as David,of the Tribe of Judah, married Michol the daughter of *S*aul of the Tribe of Levi; and Jehojadah the Prieſt of the ſame Tribe,married Jehoſhabeath the daughter of King Jehoram of the Tribe of Judah, 2 Chr.22.11. And ſome ſay,that Elizabeth the wife of Zacharias the Prieſt, was of the Tribe of Judah, as Cozen to the virgin Mary,Luk.1.36. but it is expreſly ſaid, ſhe was of the daughters of Aaron,Luke 1.5. But indeed the Levites, not having ſuch diſtinct portions as the other Tribes, but being mingled among them, might the rather have that liberty to match with other Tribes. *S*ee on Lev.21.14. But generally it was allowed to men of the Hebrews to marry aliens from the Common-weal of Iſrael, yea, enemies taken in the wars,Deut.21.13. (ſo that they were not of the race of the accurſed Canaanites, Deut.7.3.) by vertue of that warrant Booz married Ruth a Moabiteſſe,Ruth 4.10.

*V.*10. As the Lord] In caſes of doubt,Moſes uſed to conſult with God, and to make the reſolution from him, as Lev.24.12. Numb.15.34,35. *S*ee on chap.27.1.

ANNOTA-

ANNOTATIONS
ON THE Fifth and laſt BOOK of MOSES, Called after the manner of the Hebrewes, from the firſt words,
ELLEH HADDEBARIM; That is, Theſe are the words.
But the Name moſt in uſe with us, is derived from the Greek, DEUTERONOMY.

The Argument.

T*He word* Deuteronomy, ſignifieth, the Second Law, it being a Repetition of the Law, or a ſecond Edition of it, with addition of ſome new Lawes, and a more clear and copious explication of the old; and the Law was declared again, becauſe the generation to whom it was publiſhed at Mount Sinai, was now dead, and among them Aaron the High Prieſt, for he dyed in Mount Hor, Numb.20.28. the firſt day of the fiſth month, in the fortieth year after the Children of Iſrael came out of Egypt, Numb.33.38. and in the 123^d^ year of his age. The ſame year did Moſes write this Book of Deuteronomy, (except the laſt Chapter, which ſome aſcribe to Ezra, others, more probably, to Joſhua, Moſes his ſervant firſt, and after his ſucceſſor) and the ſame year dyed he alſo, which was in the 120 year of his age, and in the year of the world, 2493. and before the year of Chriſt 1456 years. This Book (not only for the excellency of the Laws, and memorable Stories comprehended in it, but becauſe alſo it contained the laſt words of Moſes, uttered a little before his departure out of the world) was ſo much to be eſteemed, that firſt the King himſelf was to write a copy of it, and to read in it all the the dayes of his life, Chap.17.ver.18. Secondly, it was for more perpetual memory, to be written upon great ſtones upon the peoples paſſing over Jordan, chap.27.ver.3. Thirdly, it was to be ſolemnly read every ſeventh year, in the audience of all the people, Chap.31.ver.9,10,11.

CHAP. I.

Ver. 1. THeſe be the words] Which are partly a repetition of precedent paſſages, and ſo might be the concluſion of the Book of Numbers; but withal they are ſuch as make a good part of Deuteronomie, and ſo may have referrence to what followeth; where he repeateth much of that which hath been ſpoken of before, not binding himſelf to any exact order in obſervation of places.

on this ſide] In the Country of Moab, not yet having paſſed over Jordan into Canaan; and the Iſraelites or people in Canaan, were in this reſpect ſaid to be beyond Jordan, Chap.3 25. yet ordinarily, when they paſſed, and were poſſeſſed of Canaan, this part where Reuben, Gad, and the half Tribe of Manaſſeh had their portion, was ſaid to be beyond Jordan.

Jordan] The moſt famous river of Paleſtine or Canaan, ariſing out of two fountains, Jor and Dan, (which give the name unto it) at Mount Lebanon in the North end of Canaan, whence it runneth all along the Country: Or, it may be ſo called from Jarad, to deſcend, becauſe it deſcendeth from the mountain. See on Num. 24.12.

in the wilderneſs] Some take this for the Champion Country of Moab, ſome for the wilderneſs of Arabia, where the Iſraelites had remained forty years.

V.2. Eleven dayes] That was their journey from Horeb or Sinai, to the plains of Moab, which was in meaſure fifty one leagues, after four leagues a day, eleven dayes journey, going by Mount *S*eir, and Kadeſh-Barnea. See Annot. on ver.46.

Horeb] Or, Sinai (for the Mountain where the Law was firſt publiſhed with terrible ſolemnitie, about forty years before this, was called by both thoſe names.)

V 3. Eleventh month] Called in Hebrew Shebat, anſwering to part of January, and part of February: See on Gen.7.11.

V.4. At Aſtaroth in Edrei] Aſtaroth and Edrei, were two Cities of the land of Og, Joſh.13.31. within ſix miles diſtance one of another, where he might dwell by turnes; at this time keeping his Court at Aſtaroth, he went thence to Edrei, and drew his military forces thither to battel, Numb.21.33. Deut.3.1. at which battel he was ſlain; ſo that though he had his dwelling at Aſtaroth, he had his death at Edrei; wherefore the words [which dwelt at Aſtaroth,] for the clearing of the ſenſe, ſhould be ſhut up within a parentheſis. See on Joſh.12.4.

V.5. began] To make this repetitiou of the Law following.

V.7. Turn you] Take your thoughts from other things, and ſet them ſeriouſly on your progreſſe unto Canaan, and bend your courſe that way.

Mount of the Amorites] To Kadeſh-Barnea, at the border of the land of Canaan, which City is hard by thoſe hills where the Amorites dwell.

The River Euphrates] In this verſe are ſet down the bounds of the Land of Canaan, Eaſt, Weſt, North and *S*outh: but in the 34 of Num. the limits thereof are narrower; the reaſon may be, becauſe there is a diſtinction betwixt that which was hereditary to the Iſraelites, as their conſtant poſſeſſion, and that which by conqueſt was added to it, and made tributary; and if they had leſs then either, the fault was not in Gods failing of his promiſe, but the peoples breach of Covenant with him, whereby he was diſcharged from his engagement to them. See Chap.19.8.9. See on Gen.15.18.

V.9. Spake unto you] By the counſel of Jethro my father in law, Exod.18.19.

to bear you] That is, to bear the burden of government of you, and proviſion for you. See ver.12.

V.15. Known] Not only wiſe and worthy men, but ſo known and reputed by the people.

V.19. terrible wilderneſs] By reaſon of the extreme barrenneſs, having (for the moſt part) neither houſe, nor men, nor beaſts, nor birds, nor trees, nor graſs, nor wells, no rivers, nor any thing neceſſary for the ſuſtenance of man, but by miraculous ſupply; and terrible by fiery Serpents within it, and a multitude of mighty enemies bordering upon it. See on chap.8.15.

V.22. We will ſend] The motion of ſending Searchers or Surveyers of the land of Canaan, proceeded from the people, yet was it approved by Moſes, and by their joynt conſent, and approbation from God, it was put in execution, Num.14.

V.25. ſaid, It is a good Land] So ſaid Caleb and Joſhua, Num.14.7. whom (though but two) he preferreth before the other ten; the better part being rather to be beleeved then the greater part, who raiſed a bad report of the Land, and as falſe as it was bad.

V. 27. hated us] How groſly are Gods own people ſometimes miſtaken? how ungratefull is he requited, when his fatherly diſcipline of love is received as a demonſtration of hatred towards them?

*V.*28. up to heaven] So ſaid the falſe-hearted, and in this, falſe-worded ſpies, to diſcourage the people, otherwiſe ſuch exceſſes of ſpeech, intending to raiſe the mind to an extraordinary apprehenſion of extraordinary things, are figurative hyperboles, not unuſual in the Scriptures, and very frequent in humane Writers, eſpecial poetical. See on Gen.11.4

V.29. Anakims] That is, men of huge ſtature, of the poſterity of Anak the Gyant. See Chap.2.10.

V.36. ſave Caleb] For he was one of the two, who made a ſurveigh of the Land before; Joſhua was the other, but he is not mentioned with Caleb now, becauſe he was advanced to an higher condition then any of the reſt, who is therefore afterward mentioned by himſelf, verſ.38.

V.36. wholly followed] God muſt not be obeyed or ſerved by halves, but wholly and intirely; and that, as moſt acceptable to him, ſo is it moſt profitable for man.

*V.*37. for your ſakes] Your murmurings made me ſometimes too raſh in ſpeaking, Pſal.106.33. and ſometimes too ſlow in believing in the Lord, which moved him to offence againſt me, Num.20.12. See Deut. Chap.3.26. & Chap.4.21. & 32.51.

V.40. turn ye] He doth not now turn them back toward the Red Sea, but repeateth what he had formerly ſaid unto them, Num. 14. 25.

V.42. I am not among you] Signifying, that man, though he have a courage to fight, hath no power to prevail, but when God is at hand to help him; and therefore when there is juſt cauſe of warre God is to be ſought unto to go fourth with the hoſt, Pſal.60.10,11.

V.44. as Bees do] When they ſet upon drones, or Waſpes; or ſwarm about the ears of thoſe that provoke them, Pſal.118.12. ſo the Amorites inraged, in great troops purſued you, and with their warlike weapons (as the Bees with their ſtings) made at you, to wound and kill you.

V.45. would not hearken] Such was your ſtubbornneſſ: when it was well with you, and ſuch your hypocriſie when the rod of correction was upon you, that God ſhewed as little reſpect to your tears or prayers, as you did to his precepts, Zach.7.11,13.

V.46. Kadeſh] A wilderneſſe, Pſal.29.8.

according to the dayes] Repeating the words again, he admoniſheth them to double their thoughts upon their abode in that place where they were many dayes, yea many years; for though by a right progreſſe it was but eleven dayes journey, verſ.11. yet for their ſins, they were made to wander there almoſt thirty eight years, Ch. 2.14. therefore there was juſt ground to come over the words again, that they might recount the rubs they had in the way, and the reaſon of ſo long delay. See Annot on verſ.2.

CHAP. II.

Verſ.1. A*S the Lord ſpake*] Num.14.25.

mount Seir] That is, the Countrey of Idumea, which was mountainous; called Idumea, as it were Edomia, from Eſau, who was called Edom, and it was called Seir alſo, the word ſignifying hairy, as he was: See Annot. on Num.24.18.

V.3. Northward] That is, toward the land of Promiſe, which is Northward to thoſe that travel out of Egypt.

V.4. brethren] Num.20.14.

ſhall be afraid] God is able to give, and take away courage as he pleaſeth, by making theſe Edomites afraid, no doubt he made them give conſent to let the Iſraelites paſſe by the borders of their Countrey, though they denyed their paſſage through it, Num.20.21.

take ye good heed] In the precedent words it is ſaid, they of mount Seir ſhall be afraid of the Iſraelites; and here it is ſaid, the Iſraelites muſt take heed; a caveat which might ſeem more pertinent to their adverſaries, yet indeed, ſince God had caſt a fear upon them, the Iſraelites of whom they were afraid, ought in fear of God to take heed to the charge he giveth of them; and that was, that as the Edomites fear was ſecurity to the Iſralites, that they ſhould receive no hurt from the Inhabitants of mount Seir, ſo the Iſralites upon this prohibition forbearing all violent acts againſt them, they were more afraid then hurt For Gods favor to us binds us to ſhew the more obedience to him in whatſoever he comands or forbids, Chap. 4.9. & 12.19. Mal.2. 15 16.

V.5 becauſe I have given] Not onely by my general providence alotting every one his portion, which by the ſame providence I transfer from one to another at my pleaſure; but I give an eſpecial grant for ſecuring his poſſeſſion at this time againſt your invaſion, though afterwards when his poſterity have made up the meaſure of their iniquity, (as Gen.15.16.) they may be expelled out of their poſſeſſion. See 1 Chr. 18 13.

V.6. buy meat] They had Manna to eat, yet they might eat other meats, when they could get them; but of that they had a certain and conſtant proviſion, Exod.16.16.

V. 7. he knoweth] A figure called Meioſis, whereby more is meant then is expreſt; as not onely Gods knowing, but his ordering, and governing their walking through the wilderneſſe. See Pſal. 1.6.

V. 9. I will not give thee of their land] This is to be underſtood of the land whereof they were peaceably poſſeſſed of that time; See on Num. 21.26. Joſh.13.16. but their was a part of the land of Moab of which a great while ago they were diſpoſſeſſed by the Amoritis, and this land (though in the hands of other Lords) was called many times by the old name, the land of Moab: in this was mount Nebo where Moſes dyed, Chap.34.1,5.

children of Lot] The Moabites deſcended from his inceſtuous iſſue, Moab; yet God is ſo gracious, that for Lots ſake, who ſinned of ignorance, and ſerved God with uprightneſſe, rather then for their own, he giveth this order for their peaceable poſſeſſion. The godly are not forgotten by God, though many years after they be out of memory with men. See verſ.19. where there is the like charge given concerning the children of Ammon, where Lot is again mentioned as the root of that ſtock, on which God ſet ſo much favour as extends to the branches ſtretched out a-far off.

Ar] The chief City of the Moabites, Num.21.15,28.

V. 10. * Emims] That is, terrible ones: for their tall ſtature, and tyrannical oppreſſion. Some derive the word from Ema, which in Hebrew ſignifieth terrour. Others from Amma, in the ſame language ſignifying a cubit, as men of a large cubit: or by their tall ſtature conſiſting of many cubits. By the expulſion of theſe Emims out of their poſſeſſion, Moſes encourageth the people to the conqueſt of Canaan. * Gen.14 5.

V.12. as Iſrael did] That is, Eſau drave out the Horims, as the Iſraelites did thoſe people whoſe land they poſſeſſed; to wit, the land of Og and Sihon: whereof ſee Num.21.24. & ver.35. Or the words may be read, as Iſrael ſhall do: which may be the meaning of the words, as a prophetick ſpeech, ſpoken (by way of aſſurance) in the preter tenſe. See Gen.14.5. Some conceive this and certain other like paſſages to have been added here and their to the words of Moſes after the conqueſt of Canaan. See on Chap.3.14. & 34.5.

V.14. as the Lord ſware] He ſheweth hereby, that as God is true in his promiſes, ſo his threatnings are not in vain; but are ſure to take effect to the confuſion of the wicked, as his promiſes to be performed to the comfort of the godly.

V.19. children of Lot] See Annot.on ver.9.

V.20. Zamzummims] That is, boyſterous, or preſumptuous, or abominable wicked ones, though they called themſelves Rephaims, that is, Phiſicians, or preſervers: they are called Zuizims, Gen.14.5.

V. 23. * Avims] * Joſh.13.3.

Caphtorims] See on Jer.47.4.

V.24. * Arnon] * Num.21.13.

V. 25. put the dread] This declares that the hearts of men are in Gods hands, either to be made faint, or bold. See Annot. on ver.4. & Num.22.3.

V. 26. * ſent meſſengers] * Num.21.21.

V. 27. * let me paſſe] * Judg.11.19.

V. 29. children of Eſau] Called (after his other name) Edomites; why, albeit they had denyed them paſſage through their land, yet allowed them to coaſt along their borders, and furniſhed them with neceſſaries for their money. So ver.28. compared with this 29. Num.20.20, 21.

V. 30. hardened] See Annot. on Exod. 4. 21. & on Chap. 10.1.

V. 33. wee ſmote him] Chap.29.7.

V. 34. utterly deſtroyed] God had curſed Canaan, and therefore he would not that any of his wicked race would be preſerved. See Chap. 20.16. Lev.2.27,28. Job 18.16,17.

V. 35. * onely the cattell] * Chap.3.7.

V. 36. God delivered] Though they were ſo many thouſand able warriers, yet the victory is aſcribed to the Lord of Hoſts, and not aſſumed to themſelves, Pſal.44.3.

V. 37. river Jabbok] Neer which Jacob wraſtled with the Angel, Gen.32.22. it appertaineth to the poſſeſſion of the Ammonites, Judg. 11.15.

CHAP. III.

*Verſ.*1. C*Ame out*] Therefore beſides the commandement of the Lord they had juſt occaſion given on Ogs part to fight againſt him; and ſo they did, and the battel with him is ſet down, Num.21. 33. where are moſt of the ſame things that here are mentioned.

Edrei] See on Chap.1.4.

V.2. I will deliver] See Annot.on Chap.2.4.

*V.*2. Argob] This is another name of the Kingdome of Baſan, or a province in that Kingdome, 1 King.4.13.

V.5. all thoſe cities] No fewer then threeſcore, ver.4. & Joſh. 13. 30. which ſheweth that neither number nor power of men can hold out againſt God.

V. 6. utterly deſtroyed them] See on Chap. 2.34, 35. & 20. 16: Levit.27.28.

*V.*8. on this ſide Jordan] To thoſe who journied from Egypt towards Canaan; but thoſe that were in Canaan were ſaid to be beyond Jordan, ver.25. See on chap 1.1.

mount Hermon] This is conceived to be the utmoſt part of mount Gilead beyond Jordan, joyning (as ſome affirm) mount Lebanon and Gilead together: this mountain hath ſeveral names for ſeveral parts of it; yea one part of it, to wit, Hermon, hath many names, verſ.9. and it is called Sirion, and Shenir, and Chap.4.48. Sion and Hor, Num. 34.7. See Pſal.42.6. & Gen.31.21.

V.11. onely Og remained] Viz. in that Region. In the Hebrew it is, of the ſtock of Rephaim, which in the time of Abraham poſſeſſed the whole Countrey, Gen 14. for all the race of the Gyants was not every where extinct as appeareth by Goliah the Gyant of Gath, 1 Sam. 17.4. See alſo Num. 13.33. & Joſh.15.14. but in that Countrey, the remnant of the Gyants or the off-ſpring of Rephaim (who in the time of Abraham poſſeſſed that whole Land, Gen.14.5.) was with Og utterly rooted out. See on Gen.6.4.

bed ſtead of Iron] Belike wood was not ſtrong enough to bear his weight and ſtrength, in ſtretching and turning himſelf upon his bed. Some take this repoſitory not for a bed for ordinary ſleep, but for a ſepulchre, the bed of the ſleep of death.

after the cubite of a man] There were divers ſorts of cubits; ſome were meaſured from the bending of the arm to the palme where the fingers meet, and theſe are called our ſhort cubits: ſome from the bending of the arm to the end of the longeſt finger; and theſe were longer and ſhorter according to the difference of humane ſtature; and when it is ſaid, after the cubit of a man, the largeſt uſual meaſure among Artificers is meant, a cubit of a foot and nine inches long; ſo that this bed was fifteen foot that is, five yards and nine inches long, and ſeven foot broad.

† Rabbah] † 2 Sam.11.26. Jer.49.2.

V.14: unto this day] Becauſe theſe words are thought to import a longer continuance of time then the age of Moſes; ſome think they are the words of Ezra, or of ſome other Sacred Scribe, who wrote part of the 34. Chapter of this Book, from the ſixth verſe, to the end of it: but becauſe the words, ver.13. next before theſe, and verſ.15. next after, do plainly appear to be the words of Moſes, there is no reaſon to think that the of words (unto this day) have any other author but him: and though from the conqueſt of theſe places, and the name given to them to the time of Moſes his writing of this ſtory (which was at the latter end of his life) there paſſed not above three or four moneths, yet might it be ſaid (unto this day): for the words are not ſimply an affirmative, that the Towns were called ſo, as by common and ancient cuſtome, but that Jair that took them called them ſo to this day: and ſo the continuance is not to be extended beyond his time, which might be no longer then the time of Moſes; and yet it was a matter to be noted, that he could take ſuch places from Gyants, and ſtill continue them in his power and under his name: and by adding (unto this day) Moſes both gives a note of aſſurance of his ſtory, and a motive of courage to the Iſraelites by the example of Jair to do valiently, and to ſet their names on conquered Townes and Countries, as he had done.

V.15. Gilead unto Machir] Part of Gilead: for the Reubenites and Gadites therein were partners with him. See ver.12. & Annot on Num.32.40. See alſo, 1 Chr.2.22.

*V.*17. Chinnereth] See Num.34.11.

ſalt Sea] See Annot.on Num.34.3.

V.24. what God] He meaneth not that there are indeed many Gods, or any other but the true God; but he ſpeaketh with reſpect to the common and corrupt ſpeech of them, who attribute that power unto Idols that onely appertaineth to the true God, and by way of conteſtation and contempt againſt falſe and fained Gods, Pſal. 86.8. & 89.8.

V.25. I pray thee let me go over, and ſee] God had told Moſes he ſhould not go over, Num.20.12. we muſt think then that either Moſes took the ſaying of God for no abſolute commination, but ſuch a one as was made of Hezekiahs death, 2 King. 20 1. and of Ninevehs deſtruction, Jonah.3.4. Or that he ſuffered his affections to go too far, in deſiring to go further then God would have him; yet this was not of any ſuperſtition to the place, in regard of any holineſſe in the place, from its reference to the ancient Patriarchs buried there, (as ſome Popiſh gloſſes would have it) but becauſe he longed to ſee that Land ſo long ago promiſed to Gods people, as the glory of all lands, Ezek.20.6. and to ſee Gods promiſe fully performed by their actual poſſeſſion of it, whereof the Iſraelites ſo much doubted.

goodly mountain] Some think it was mount Moriah, on which the Temple was after built, but that was too far off for Moſes to ſee, being 210. furlongs diſtant from Jordan: Joſephus of the Wars of the Jews, l.5. c.4. Or one of the mountains of Bethel, which were higher then it, and nigher to Jordan: but certainly it was ſome mountain of eminent note, though not here named, unleſſe Lebanon be it, which ſome affirm, taking the word (and) to be redundant: or (as ſometimes it is taken) by way of expoſition, as, and Lebanon, for that is to ſay, Lebanon. See Annot. on ver.8.

Lebanon] A mountain ſituate in the North-part of the Land of Canaan, famous for tall and ſtrong Cedars, and other trees, and for odoriferous plants, Pſal.29.5. & 104.16. Iſa.2.13. & 14.8. Cant. 4.11.

V.26. for your ſakes] See on Chap.1 37. Num.33. & 27.13, 14. Deut.32.51.

V.27. thine eyes] As before he ſaw by the Spirit of propheſie the goodly mountain which was Sion, ſo here is eyes were lifted up above the order of nature to behold all the plentifull Land of Canaan; whereof God was much more able to give him a true, full, and clear proſpect at once, then the Devill could preſent an apparition from an high mountain of all the Kingdomes of the world, Matth.4.8.

CHAP. IV.

Verſ. 1. TO do] For this Doctrine ſtandeth not in bare knowledge, but (withal) in practice of life, verſ. & Chap.5.1. Pſal. 78.6,7.

V.2. ſhall not adde] It is not forbidden to adde a Comment or expoſition to a Text, but man muſt not adde any thing to Gods Word, either for words or meaning contrary to it; nor as Gods Word, with an intent to make that of Divine authority which is but humane, as the Papiſts do by Apocryphal writings and unwritten Traditions. See Chap. 12.32. & 18.20. Prov.13.6. Rev.22.18 9.

diminiſh] By denying any part of it to be of Divine authority, or concealing any part of it, either for words, or meaning, or by partial belief of it, or obedience to it. God is not to be believed, obeyed or ſerved in part and by halves, but as he is to be loved, wholly, Chap.6 5.

V.3. your eyes] Gods Judgments executed on ſome, ſerve for inſtruction and caution for others. See Num.25. verſ 3,4. & Luk.13.5. 1 Cor.10.6.

Baal-Peor] Baal is a common name of all Idols, ſignifiing a Lord, becauſe Idolaters carry themſelves towards them as ſervants; and Peor is the proper Idol of the Moabites and Midianites. See Num.25.3. Joſh.22.17.

V.4. † cleave to the Lord] † Chap.10.20. & 13.4.

V.6. wiſedome] Becauſe all men naturally deſire wiſdom, he propoſeth that as a motive to obedience; and becauſe they general miſtake it, he ſheweth wherein it conſiſteth, and how much it excelleth all humane wiſdome of what kind or degree ſoever, 2 Tim.3 15. Job 28.28. Pſal.111 10. Prov.1.7. and.9.10.

* in the ſight] * Mal.3.12.

V.7. * ſo nigh] So ready at hand both, to inſtruct what to do, as ver.36. and to deliver us from undoing, and to manifeſt his power apparently on our ſide, 2 Sam.17.23 * Joſh. 24.19. Pſal.46.1,2.& 86.5. & 145.18. & 148.14. Lam.3.57.

V.9. * teach them, &c.] * Gen.18.19. Exod. 10. 2. Deut. 6.7. & 11.19. Pſal.78.6.

V.10. * ſpecially the day] * Exod.19.9, 16 & 20.18. Heb.12. 18.

* make them hear] * Pſal.51.8.

V.11. burnt with fire] The Law was given with fearful miracles to declare both that God was the author thereof, and alſo that no fleſh was able to abide the rigour of the ſame, Chap.5.23. Heb.12.18.

V.12 * no ſimilitude] * verſ.15.

V.13. to perform] God joyneth this condition to his Covenant, to wit, the condition of obedience on his peoples part, as of providence, protection, and deliverance on his own part.

* wrote them] * *Exod.*24.12.

V.14. * Statutes and Judgements] The Ceremonial and Judicial Lawes. * Mal.4.4 Exod.21.1.

V.15. good heed] Signifying that diſtruction is prepared for all them that make any Image to repreſent God, verſ.9.

no manner of ſimilitude] For he is the inviſible God, and hath no viſible Image, whereby a man may make a repreſentation of him, Col.1. 15. See Eſa.40.18. & Act.17.29.

V.16. any figure] The Image of God cannot be made, nor muſt the Image or Figure of any other creature be made by way of reſemblance of him, or religious reference unto him, verſ.15 Exod.20.4,5.

V.19. driven to worſhip them] Or compelled by the prevailing of a glorious object over thy frail nature and feeble ſpirits, which can make but weak reſiſtance to ſtrong temptations, Chap.29.26.

divided] Diſtributed, or ſo imparted, that by turn they may be of uſe, and do ſervice to all the world.

V.20. iron furnace] That is, a furnace to molliſie and melt Iron in, which requireth an exceſſive heat. See 1 King.8.51. He hath delivered you out of moſt miſerable ſlavery from the iron-yoke, Deut. 28.48. which moſt wringeth the neck; from furnace of fire, which moſt tormenteth the body; wherein he alludes to the ſervile labour of the Iſraelites in making and burning of bricks; See *Exod.*5.7. Jer.11.4.

a people of inheritance] Exod.19.5. 1 Pet.2 9.

V.21. for your ſake] See on Chap.1.37. & 3.26. & 32.2.& 34.4.

V.22. I muſt dye] Moſes good affection appeareth, in that he being deprived of ſuch an excellent poſſeſſion doth not envy them that muſt enjoy it. And indeed he that is ſure of heaven, as Moſes was, need not envy any one for any earthly felicity. See 2 Pet.1.14.15.

V.23. which the Lord thy God hath forbidden thee] Or, as the Lord thy God hath charged thee, Exod 20.4,5.

V.24. † conſuming fire] He is a Sun and a ſhield, Pſal.84.11. to warm and defend thoſe that love and fear him; but a fire to burn and conſume ſuch as irreverently ruſh upon him, or rebelliouſly riſe up againſt him. † Chap 9.3. Heb 12.29.

V.25. remained long] Heb. waxed old.

corrupt your ſelves] Corruption is both the mother and the daughter of Idolatry: for when the heart is corrupted, it breedeth Idolatrous affections and fancies; and when Idols are made and uſed, they corrupt the heart and conſcience more then before.

V.26 heaven and earth to witneſs] By heaven and earth, may be meant the intelligent creatures in the one, and on the other; or, if the inſenſible creatures be meant, the meaning is, that God will bring evidence and witneſs from them to convince and condemn his people of ingratitude. See Iſa.1.2. Jer.2.12.

ſoon utterly periſh] Chap.7 10. Joſh 22.18. 2 Pet.2.3.

V.27. few in number] Heb. men of number. For the Hebrews when they uſe the word number abſolutely, mean a ſmall number or a few, becauſe the greateſt multitudes are of thoſe things which cannot be numbred; as the ſtars of heaven and duſt of the earth, thus is Abrahams progeny promiſed as a numberleſs increaſe, Gen.13.16. & 15.5.

V.28. Gods] Not in deed, but in name and opinion of brutiſh Idolaters, though ſo far ſhort of Divinity, that they have neither reaſon nor ſenſe, Chap.28.36,64. Jer.16.13.

† if from thence, &c] † Chap. 30.1,2. Nehem.1.9. Jer. 29. 12,13.

V.29. all thy heart] Not without word, ſhew, or ceremony, but with a true confeſſion of thy faults, and a ſincere deſire of his favour.

V.32. † one ſide of heaven] † Chap 30.4. Mat.24 31.

V.33 and live] See Annot on Exod.33.20.

temptations] Tryals of their obedience, Chap. 7.19. and 29.3.

V.35. That thou mighteſt know] God wrought theſe wonders, that he might be known, not only to be God, but the only God, ſince none could do ſuch works as he had done, chap.32.39. Iſai.45.5. Mark 12.29,32.

V.36. Out of heaven] Exod.19.9. & 20.18,22. Neh.9.13.

upon the earth] Mount Sinai, Exo.24.16.

V.37. brought thee out, &c] Exod,13.3.

V.38. As it is this day] They had already won ſixty Cities of Og, chap.3 4. and conquered him, and Sihon King of the Amorites, ver. 46,47. of this chapter, which conqueſts were an earneſt of further victory over their enemies.

V.40. that it may go well] God promiſeth reward not for our merits, but to encourage us to obedience, ſince our labor ſhall not be loſt, Chap. 5.16. Eph.6.3.

V.41. Severed, &c.] Numb.5.6,14. See on Joſh.20.

V.42. Flee thither] Exod. 21.12,13. Num.35.15.

V.45. Teſtimonies] The Articles and points of Covenant, whereby Gods mind is teſtified unto the people in his propoſal, and theirs in their acceptance of them. See 1 King.2.3.

V.46. Beth-Peor] That is, the houſe or Temple of the Idol Peor, the god of the Moabites and Midianites. See Num.25.3. Chap.3.29.

V 48. Mount Sion] This is not that mountain, whereon the City of David and the Temple were built, but differing from it both in writing and ſituation, that is written with Tzade this with Schin, and that was ſeated weſtward from Jordan, this Eaſt-ward. This name of Sirion, Chap.3.9. by contraction. Some conceive this Sion to be meant, Pſal.133.3. that being one of the names of Hermon.

V.49 Sea of the plain] That is, the Salt Sea, whereof ſee Annot on Num.34 3.

do them] Chap 4.1.

V.3. made not this Covenant] The word (not) is not alwayes purely negative: Sometimes it is to be taken for not only, or not principally, Gen. 32.28. Mat.9.13. And ſo it may be here expounded, the Lord made not the Covenant at Horeb only with thoſe who are now dead (at leaſt the moſt of them) but with them, and their poſterity after them, as the Promiſe, Act.2.39. Or, by Fathers, may be underſtood the Patriarchs, who were before the giving of the Law at Horeb, upward unto Adam, with whom there was not ſuch a formal, legal, and particular Covenant made, as was with the Iſraelites at Horeb, though in his ſubſtance it were the ſame; for they were obliged to believe in Chriſt, and to keep the Law to the utmoſt of their ability, ſo far as it was revealed unto them. And in many particulars, both moral, as keeping the Sabbath, avoiding Idolatry, and ceremonial, as ſacrifices, the diſtinction of clean and unclean beaſts, with others, they practiced that which afterwards came under legal Precepts, Chap.29.15. Rom.4 23,24. See Exod.33.11.

V.4. † face to face] Not in a viſible or ſenſible form or figure, Chap.4.12. but ſo plainly, that you need no more to doubt who it was that ſpoke to you, then of him that talketh with you face to face. † Exod.33.11.

V.5. I ſtood between] Gal.3.19. Exod.19.16, &c. and 20. 18.

V.8. graven image] See on Exod.20. where the Ten Commandments here repeated, are explained.

V.9. jealous God] That is, of his honour, not permitting it to any others, no more then a generous husband would permit the proſtitution of his wife to another man. See Hoſ.2. ver.19.20.

iniquity] In the children eternally, if they live and dye in the ſins of their fathers; but temporally (if they do not) for their fathers ſakes; who as they might in their poſterity have flouriſhed, ſo are they in them puniſhed.

V.10. Love me, and keep, &c.] Love of God, and obedience to God, are linked together, ſo that the argument is good from the one to the other; as John 14.15.

V.11. Nor hold him guiltleſs] But ſo guilty, as that he will ſeverely puniſh him; for the words are a figurative Liptote or Litotes, whereby more is meant then is expreſſed, 1 Sam.12.21.

V.13. ſix daies] Meaning ſince God permitteth ſix dayes to our labouring, we ought willingly to dedicate the ſeventh wholly to his ſervice. Exod.35.2.

V.14. ſtranger] An uncircumciſed perſon ſhall not be ſuffered to violate the Sabbath by any publick profanation. See Neh. 13.

V.15. Therefore the Lord] This reaſon is peculiar to the Jews, the reſt Exod.20. are general, obliging univerſally all perſons in all ages. Some think, God brought the people out of Egypt on the Sabbath day.

V.16. Honour] With love, reverence, obedience, aſſiſtance and ſuccour, if they ſhall have need.

V.17. not kill] All manner of killing is not here forbidden, but that which is done without warrantable cauſe, and lawful authority. See on Exod.20.13.

V.18. Not commit adultery] See on Exod.20 13.

V.19. Not ſteal] See Exod.20.15.

V.20. falſe witneſs] See Exod.20.16.

V.21. neither ſhalt thou deſire] See Annot.on Exod,20.17.

V.22. added no more] That is, no more moral precepts, nor any more laws to the people immediately: for the other ordinances were delivered to them by the mediation of Moſes. See ver. 30,31.

V.23. for the mountain did burn with fire] This is rendred as a reaſon, not of the darkneſs, but as a reaſon of the peoples fear; which was the more, becauſe exceeding thick darkneſs, ver.22. and bright flaming fire appeared on the mount at the ſame time; which, as it was more ſtrange, ſo was it more terrible, as the fire and hail coming together, Exod.9.24. prolonged] Chap.5.16. & 22.7. Prov.3.2. 1 Pet.3.10.

V.4. One Lord] One in the ſubſtance of the Deity (though three in the Perſons of the Trinity:) and therefore being one Lord to all, he alone is to be worſhipped by all in one way and form of worſhip: and though but one, he muſt be loved and ſerved with all the heart, ſoul and might of every man, as in the next verſe; and all that is too little for ſo great and good a God, though it be a great deal more then we can perform, chap.4.35. V.8 frontlets] Which are not (as ſome expound) to be taken literally, but parabolically, with this meaning, that we ſhould as much remember and mind the Law of God, as if it were written in frontlets on the forehead, and bracelets on the arms; yet the Jews, the Phariſees eſpecially, followed the literal ſenſe, Mat.23.5. V.18. ſight of the Lord] We muſt do, not what ſeemeth good in our own eyes, but what is good in Gods ſight, chap.12.8, 21, 25.

V.20. * When thy ſon] * Exod.12.26. & 13.14.

V.21. * mighty hand] * Exod.3.19. and 13.3.

V.23. brought us] The more we receive of Gods benefits, the more are we bound to obey him. Luk.12.48.

V.24. For our good] Our conformitie to the Law of God doth him no good, Job 35.7. Though the Law be his, the benefit of obedience is ours; and the more conſtant it is, the more beneficial, Prov. 9.12.

V.25. Our righteouſneſs] So it ſhould be, if we could exactly keep the Law, but becauſe we cannot, we muſt betake our ſelves for refuge to the righteouſneſs of faith, Rom.10.5, 6. and ſo be ſaved, not by our own juſtice, but by Gods mercy for Chriſts merits, as divers Tranſlations render it, He will be merciful unto us, Chap.24.13.

CHAP. VII.

Ver.1. SEven Nations] In the 33 of Exodus, ver.2. & Deut.20.17. ſix only are named, the Gergaſhite being omitted; and in the 15 of Gen. ver.19. &c. are named ten; the Hivites omitted, and the Kenites, Kenezites, Kadmonites, and Rephaims added: the reaſon of which difference may be, that one part of the people might have ſeveral names, and ſeveral parts of them might be comprehended under one name; or, ſometimes general names, ſometimes particular might be mentioned.

V.2. Make no Covenant] Heb. Cut no Covenant, See on Gen. 14. 13. & 15.17, 18. Jer.34.18. V.4. † turn away &c.] † 1 King.11.2. Neh.13.26.

V.5. deſtroy] God would have his ſervice pure without any pollution of ſuperſtition and Idolatry, ver 25. and chap.12.2, 3. Exo.23.24 and 34.13.

V.7. feweſt] Before God had made a miraculous multiplication of you from thoſe few which were of your poſterity of Jacob. See Chap.10.22.

V.8. loved you] You freely, finding no cauſe in you more then in others ſo to do, Chap.10.15. 1 Sam.12.22. 2 Sam.22.20. Pſal.44.3. Zeph.3.17.

V.9. † To a thouſand generations] † Chap 5.9, 10. Exod.20. 5, 6.

V.10. to his face] The words are doubled, for aſſurance that God will ſo apparantly take vengeance of his enemies, ſo as they ſhal plainly perceive (as they do a thing ſet before their face) that he doth it for their wickedneſs, as in that example of the Idolaters, and of the luſters after fleſh, Numb.11. and of Corah and his company, Chap. 16. Exod.32.

V.12. mercy] This Covenant is grounded upon his free grace: therefore in recompencing the peoples obedience, he hath reſpect to his own mercy, not to their merits, Chap.28.1. Levit.26.3.

V.13. The fruit] By multiplying thy poſterity, and withholding the miſhaps of abortion, and feeble and deformed births, Chap.28.4.

V.15. † All ſickneſs &c.] † Exod.23.25. Pſal.105.37.

V.16. No pity] We ought not to be merciful, where God commandeth ſeverity: for ſuch a mercy to others would prove a cruelty to their own ſouls that uſe it.

V.18. remember &c.] Pſal.77.11.

V.19. temptations] The tryals of their faith and obedience were very great, and ſuch as required miracles to uphold them from falling from God, and to ſcourge and recover them when they were fallen, chap. 4.34. & 29.3.

V.21. † among you] † Exod.17.7.

V.22. leſt the beaſts] So that it is for your commodity that God accompliſheth not his promiſe ſo ſoon as you wiſh.

V.23. until they be deſtroyed] That is, deſtroyed utterly.

V.24. deſtroy their name] So, as their name ſhall be buried in oblivion, or, if it be mentioned, it ſhall be but as the ſtirring of a ſepulchre, which will raiſe an offenſive fume.

V.25. An abomination] A thing that the Lord doth loath and abhor, as he doth all ſins though one ſin more then another, Idolatry eſpecially. See on chap.13.14.

V.2. To prove thee] See Annot. on Exod.16.4. ver.16. of this Chapter.

V.3. † but by every word] Not by the ordinary way of proviſion, wherein mans providence is exerciſed only, as in preparing of bread (the principal ſubſtance of his Table) but in room thereof, either Gods word or command will make a miraculous ſupply of food, as by Quails and Manna, Exod.16. and that without any means at all; his word, that is, his will, made as readily and evidently known by his powerful work, as a mans mind by his word, will ſupport a mans life: and when a man hath meat, it is the vertue of that word and power of his that nouriſheth, elſe it would be more likely to choak then to feed; yea, Gods word of command would ſoften ſtones into dough, and make poyſon to be both meat and medicine. † See Mat. 4.4. Luke 4. 4. Mark 16.18.

V.4. thy rayment] Beſides the proviſion of apparel which they had of their own, they were furniſhed with many ſutes of ſeveral ſizes for themſelves and their children by borrowing of the Egyptians, Exod.3.22 and Chap.12.35. Theſe being by a divine power preſerved from decay, ſome conceive the garments of thriving children, or young men miraculouſly grew up with their perſons: But it is more like that many of different ages and ſtatures dying, their garments were kept for, and uſed by ſuch as ſucceeded in the ſame meaſure; for we muſt not multiply miracles without neceſſity; where one is mentioned (as the preſerving of clothes without decay) there is no need nor ground for God to make, or man to imagine any more. See chap.29.5.

V.5. chaſteneth his ſon] God ſheweth his love as well by afflictions, as by apparent favours; as a man ſheweth love to his ſon, as well by providing Phyſick for him in his ſickneſſe, as food in his health, Hebr.12. 6. and his chaſtening of his children is for their correction and amendment; not as the puniſhments of the wicked, for their ruine and deſtruction, 2 Sam.7.14. V.10. Shalt bleſs] To receive Gods bleſſings, and not to be thankful, is to contemn God in them; we muſt not only conclude our refreſhings with thankſgiving, but pray for a bleſſing before the uſe of them See 1 Tim.4.5. Rom.14.6.

V.12. And are full, &c.] Chap.28.47. & 31.20. & 32.15. Prov. 30.9.

V.14. lifted up] By aſcribing Gods benefits to thine owne power or care, or skil, boaſting as if thou hadſt them of thy ſelf without receiving them from God, 1 Cor.4.7. or, as if for ſome worthineſs in thee, God had been ſo bountiful unto thee, Hoſ.13.6.

V.15. terrible wilderneſs] See on Chap.1.19. Chap.32.10. Pſal 136.16. Hoſ.13.5.

V.16. to do thee good] Jer.24.5. Heb.12.10, 11.

V.19. If thou do] The word (thou) taken diſtributively in the beginning of this verſe, amounts to a collective ſenſe, and is as much as (ye) in the end of it.

CHAP. IX.

Ver.1. THis day] Is not preciſely to be taken for one of the three hundred ſixty five dayes in the year, but for a ſhort time neer at hand, within this two months: for Moſes ſaid this the firſt day of the eleventh month, chap.1.3. and the people paſſed over Jordan the tenth day of the firſt month, Joſh.4.19.

poſſeſs Nations] So, as not only to have their land for thine habitation, but their perſons at thy diſpoſal, either for ſlaughter or ſervice, Lev.25.45, 46.

V.2. Heard ſay] By the report of the Spies, Numb. 13. ver. 28, 33.

V.3. Conſuming fire] Chap.4.24. His burning indignation will not be quenched, until thine enemies be conſumed, the heat thereof made their hearts to melt afar off, Joſh.5.1. and chap.7.5.

So ſhalt thou drive] That is, Gods Juſtice having doomed them to deſtruction, he will give you the power to do execution upon them; yet divers of them were deſtroyed by hornets, Chap.7.20. without their purſuit or ſlaughter.

V. 9. neither did eat bread] Moſes the chief Miniſter of the Law faſted fourty dayes and fourty nights, at the publication of it, Exod. 24. 10. ſo did Chriſt before the publication of the Goſpel, Mat. 4.2. and Elijah that famous Prophet betwixt them both, 1 King. 19.8.

V. 16. * I looked] * Exod. 32.9.

V. 17. and brake them] See Annot on Exod. 32.19.

V. 18. fourty dayes and fourty nights] Some hence collect that Moſes faſted fourty dayes and fourty nights, now the ſecond time by occaſion of the ſin about the golden Calf, and ſome hold a third time, ver. 25. but for twice its probable, though not certain, but for the third time it is neither certain nor probable. See Annot. on Exod. 34.28. & on ver. 25. of this Chap. Pſal. 106 ver. 23.

V. 20. to have deſtroyed him] Whereby he ſheweth what danger they are in that have Authority, and reſiſt not wickedneſſe. See 1 Sam. 3. 13.

out of the mount] That is, Horeb, or Sinai.

V. 23. then you rebelled] At the return of the Spies, Num. 13.31. & 14.1.

V. 25. As I fell down at the firſt] Theſe words import onely a repetition of a thing that was formerly done, as if it were, as I ſaid before; for he was three ſeveral times on the Mount in the ſpace of fourty dayes; once at the receiving of the Law, Exod. 24.18. after that when he interceded for the people, Exod. 32.30, 31. And thirdly, when he received the new Tables, Exod. 34.28. of which ſome conceive that Moſes ſo many times faſted fourty dayes and fourty nights; which is not likely: for they that make that allowance of time for faſting and abſence from the people, allow too little time (not full three dayes) for many buſineſſes with the people. Beſides, if from the mentions that is made thereof in ſeveral places, they will infer ſo many fourty dayes faſt, they may as well ſay Moſes faſted four times as thrice, for the like mention is made, Chap. 10.10. Thirdly, two of the places belong to the ſame action, which is for reconciliation after the ſin touching the golden Calf: which obtained by once faſting fourty dayes, what need was there to do the like again?

V. 26. deſtroy not, &c.] Exod. 32.11.

V. 27. Remember thy ſervants] By the authority of Gods promiſe, and ſincerity of thoſe to whom he promiſed, he ſtrengtheneth his hope of obtainment of mercy for the people notwithſtanding their tranſgreſſion.

V. 28. † was not able, &c.] † Exod. 32.12. Num. 14.16.

V. 29. Yet they are thy people] Notwithſtanding their groſſe Idolatry, their manifold murmurings, and other rebellions he hath not yet given them a bill of divorce, they are yet the people of his Covenant, and his viſible Church upon earth, Chap. 28.9. Pſal 95.7. & 100.3. Jer. 14.9.

CHAP. X.

Verſ. 1. H*Ew thee two*] Here precedent paſſages are repeated without any ſtrict obſervation of order.

V. 2. an Ark of wood] Of this Ark, of what wood it was, and in what manner made, ſee ver. 3. & Exod. 25.10. The order for making the Ark was given before the ſecond writing of the Law, but it was not made indeed until afterward; as appeareth by compariſon of Exod 25. 10. with Exod. 37.1. See on Exod. 34.1.

V. 3. Shittim-wood] Which yields firm and durable timber, Exod. 25.5, 10.

V. 4 * he wrote] * Exod. 34 28.

V. 6. to Moſera; there Aaron died] He died on mount Hor, which is the place adjacent, or circumjacent, where the Iſraelites encamped, it is called Moſeroth, Num. 33.31. whither the people came now the ſecond time; for wandering in the wilderneſs fourty years together, it was not ſtrange for them to come again and again to the ſame place, and ſo the place from whence they came was varied, which without this conſideration may be thought a contradiction: beſides, the places of their incampings had ſometimes divers names, as the place here called Beeroth of the children of Jaakan, is called Benejaakan. Num. 33.31. It is likewiſe to be obſerved, that for avoiding of contradiction wee muſt for, come &c. read, had come &c. for the Hebrews having but one preter Tenſe, it is uſed ſometimes for the preterperfect, ſometimes for the preterimperfect, ſometimes for the preterpluperfect Tenſe, as in the next verſe.

V. 7. Gudgodah] It is called Harhagidhad, Num. 33.32. comparing this place with the Iſraelites journeying to and fro may be conceived to be, from Haſhmonah to Moſeroth, Num. 33.30. from Moſeroth to benejaakan, ver. 31. or, (as here it is called Beeroth of the children of Jaakan; Num. 33.31. And in their return they came from Bene jaakan, to Moſeroth, and from Moſeroth to Gudgodah as it is here. Some endeavour to diſſolve the difficulty by laying blame upon the Scribe that copied out the place, as if he ſhould have left out ſomewhat which he found in the Text; ſome by a nice diſtinguiſhing of the ſame name Moſeroth and Moſera, applying the former to be the manſion of the Iſraelites here mentioned, and the latter to be mount Hor, where Aaron dyed; and ſome ſay Moſes being leſſe obſervant of matter of circumſtance (as the particular removals from place to place are) then of matter of ſubſtance for the main truth of the ſtory, omitteth divers particular manſions, and ſo bringeth in ſuch places together as in their ſituation were aſunder; but the beſt anſwer is, that ſo mutable and uncertain were the windings of the Iſraelites in the wilderneſs, as may appear by the Map of Adrichom. Delph of the deſert of Pharan, inter p. 116. & 117. Theat. ter. ſanct. that the ſame place might be terminus a quo, & ad quem, the place whence and whither again and again, according as their turnings and windings, their ſtay or diverſion varied them. And yet there might be more wandrings then he hath drawn out in his ſpotted lines.

V. 8. at that time] Which is not to be taken ſtrictly for the time of the precedent incamping, but with more latitude, for the time while Aaron was Prieſt, Num. 3.6. or, at the time mentioned, ver. 5. when Moſes brought the new Tables from the Mount.

and to bleſſe] Miniſtring in the Tabernacle, and offering of ſacrifices belonged to the Prieſts, ſo did the ſolemn bleſſing of the people; yet the other Levites were employed in ſinging praiſe to God, while the ſacrifices were offered.

V. 9. the Lord is his inheritance] That is, having God for his God in eſpecial manner; as he is Gods portion rather then any of the other Tribes, ſo is God his, and thereupon he hath his maintenance out of that which God hath ſet apart for himſelf, his own allowance out of every Tribe wherein the Levites are diſperſed, and ſo the God of Jacob turned their Fathers curſe, Gen. 49.7. into a bleſſing. Verſ. 2. W*Hich have not ſeen*] Moſes addreſſeth his ſpeech not to the younger ſort who were born ſince their fathers departed out of Egypt, but unto thoſe, who then being under twenty years old at that time, and of apprehenſion then to obſerve: (for thoſe above twenty years were cut off for their murmuring) to theſe now of the ancienter ſort who had ſeen Gods miraculous deliverance he ſpeaketh, who ought rather to be acquainted therewith, then thoſe that had onely heard of them, and not ſeen, See ver. 7.

V. 4. red Sea, &c.] Exod. 14.27.

V. 5. and what he did] As well concerning his benefits as his correction.

V. 6. Dathan and Abiram] Korah is not left out, as more innocent then the reſt, but the ſtory being fully ſet down, and the three principal conſpirators are particularly named, in other places, which refer to that ſtory, it is ſufficient to name any of the three, as Jude. 11. Korah onely is named, and yet Dathan and Abiram are neither excluded nor excuſed: and here, and Pſal. 106.17. Dathan and Abiram are named, and yet Korah is not left out as leſs guilty; onely it may be as he was firſt named in the firſt mention of their conſpiracy, becauſe he was ringleader to the reſt) but becauſe the mention of any one will bring to memory the reſt, theſe two are the rather named together, becauſe they were not onely brethren in evil, but brethren alſo in blood, whereas Korah was of another family. Some ſay Korah is omitted, becauſe not ſwallowed up by the earth, as the other, but conſumed with fire. See on Num.16. 35.

the ſon of Reuben] The deſcendents in a direct line, though remote, as grand-children, great grand-children, in the Hebrew phraſe, are all called ſons, as well as the immediate children.

V.7 but your eyes] An undoubted evidence of the truth of this holy ſtory, wherein Moſes appeales to ſo many eye-witneſſes of Gods miraculous acts yet alive.

V 8 may be ſtrong] Not to be head-ſtrong, nor ſtiff-necked againſt God, but humble hearted and obedient towards them, is the way to be arm-ſtrong againſt enemies. See Joſh.1.5,6,7.

V. 9. prolong your dayes] Though corrupt nature be an enemy to grace, yet grace is a friend to humane Nature, for it upholds it in health, and prolongeth life, whereas wickedneſſe cuts off the life by the halves, Pſal.55.23. and if the godly be taken away while they be young, it is but from the evil to come, Iſa.57.1. And if the life of the wicked be prolonged, (as Eccleſ.7.15. it is ſaid) it is not in favour, but in anger, as the Amorites were forborn that they might make up the meaſure of their iniquity, Gen.15.16. that their jugdment might be the heavier when it came. See Chap.5.16. & 6.2. Prov.9.11.& 10.27.

V. 10. with thy foot] That is, with bodily labour, which, (though it be uſually called the labour of the hands; as Pſal.128.2.) is ſometimes attributed to the feet, as Gen.30.30 (See the Annot. on the place) The meaning is, that Canaan is not like the land of Egypt, which (having but little rain, Zach.14.18. and being watered by the overflowing of Nilus) puts the people to put their feet to the ſpade to dig gutters and channels to keep water for the watering of their gardens, whereas the Land of Canaan was watered and made fruitful by rain from heaven.

V. 26. * a bleſſing, and a curſe] * Chap.30. 15.

V. 29. put the bleſſing upon, &c.] The manner of bleſſing and curſing upon Mount Gerizim, and Mount Ebal (two hills neer together in the Tribe of Ephraim) is conceived to be thus: ſix of the Tribes being placed on the one mount, and ſix on the other: in a little valley betwixt both (for there is but a little valley betwixt them) ſtood the Prieſts only, one while pronouncing bleſſings upon the obſervers of the Law, another while denouncing curſes againſt the tranſgreſſours of the Law. When a bleſſing was pronounced, the Tribes of Mount Gerizim ſounded out Amen, and when a curſe was denounced, Amen was ſounded from the Tribes on mount Ebal. See Annot. on Chap.27.12. & Joſh.8.33.

V. 30. are they not] This manner of interrogation hath the force of an aſſured affirmation, as if he had ſaid, they are, and are well known ſo to be.

V. 4. do not ſo] You ſhall not ſerve the Lord in ſuch ſort as they ſerved Idols with their ſuperſtitious and Idolatrous obſervances; eſpecially you ſhall not ſerve him in conſecrated groves; or you ſhall not do ſo by thoſe things which belong unto the Lord, as unto ſuch things as are dedicated unto Idols. And if any of the faithful ſervants of God did at any time ſacrifice in groves, they either had an eſpecial warrant, or their fact was their fault; againſt this negative rule, there can be no diſpenſation but by divine Authority.

ye ſhall eate] The Prieſts ſuch things as belonged unto them; and the people ſuch things as were allowed unto them; and they might eat of the peace-offerings; but they might not eat of the ſin-offering, nor of votive-offerings, nor of the whole burnt-offerings, as appeareth, Num. 18.9,15. Or, by their eating before the Lord, may be meant their feaſting and rejoycing, when they were thrice in a year to appear before the Lord in the place where the Tabernacle was, or the Temple ſhould be, Chap.27.7.

before the Lord] This is to be underſtood chiefly of the Prieſts, who might eat in places which had neer reference to God, with whom the people were not to be partakers. Or, if it be referred to the people, they may be ſaid to eat before the Lord, when eating they give thanks unto the Lord, Rom.14. 6. Or, becauſe they were to eat a ſecond tythe (after they had paid the firſt to the Levites) onely in that City or place, where Gods Sanctuary was ſet up. See verſ. 17,18. of this Chapter.

V. 8. after all the things that we do] For God will be ſerved after a more exact and perfect manner when ye be come into the Land of Canaan, then hitherto he hath been, or conveniently could be in the wilderneſs.

right in his own eyes] Not that they ſacrificed altogether after their phantaſies; but in many things they took too much liberty to do what they liked; uniformity in divine worſhip was not yet eſtabliſhed, things not being there as they were afterward in a ſetled and quiet poſture: or the people were not to be ſo free from oblation and practice of them in the promiſed land, as now they were in the wilderneſs, where neither Circumciſion, nor the Paſſeover, nor other ritual Ordinances were, or could conveniently be obſerved as in the Land of Canaan they might, and muſt be too: and withal it was to admoniſh them that the more Gods favour was manifeſted to them, (and it is more manifeſt in the fruition then in the promiſe of his bleſſings) the more ſhould their obedience be manifeſted to him. See 1 Chr.13.4. Judg.17.6. Prov.14.12.

V. 10. in ſafety] This is ſpoken with reference to their Anniverſary recourſe to the place of the Tabernacle or Temple thrice a year, that they might not fail of their appearance there ſo oft as was required, out of fear leſt in their abſence their enemies ſhould invade their dwellings, and take away or ſpoyl what they left at home. See on Exod.34.24.
